Locals take their requests to state

Lincoln County residents and elected officials have been burning up the road between here and Santa Fe as they take their requests to the Roundhouse.

Last week Lincoln County Commission Chairman Monroy Montes and Commissioner Wilton Howell testified in support of money to pave the Fort Stanton Road.

County manager Andy Wynham traveled to Santa Fe with the two commissioners.

Commissioner L. Ray Nunley and Ruidoso Village Councilor Jerry Shaw were in Santa Fe to attend R.D. and Joan Dale Hubbard's annual party for the legislature.

Commissioner Nunley was also at the Roundhouse to advocate for money to pave sidewalks in Lincoln.

Rosalie and Ralph Dunlap of Lincoln also will be lobbying for the badly-needed walks.

Councilor Shaw is still in Santa Fe attending the New Mexico Municipal League's board meeting.

Ruidoso Downs mayor and the entire board left this morning to visit the Legislature. They'll attend municipal day activities Friday.

They're asking for more than $400,000 to build a new village hall.

News investigation prompts a review of leases

by CHARLES STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

An investigation of village purchasing and leasing practices was called for Tuesday by Ruidoso councilors Ron Andrews and J.D. James.

Andrews made the motion to have the Department of Finance and Administration (DFA) look into an airport lease agreement, golf course lease and water rights because of an article written by The Ruidoso News.

James added that he, as an individual councilor, has called the district attorney and asked him to investigate all information, including purchasing practices, detailed in stories published by The News.

During the council meeting, Andrews discussed a newspaper article detailing a lease agreement between the village and Franklin Aviation.

State law requires leases for real property valued above $25,000 be by ordinance, which would have included a public hearing. This lease was approved through a routine vote on a motion without the legal notice, public hearing and possibility for a negative referendum as allowed by state law.

Andrews said the council voted to approve the lease based on information provided by the airport manager and legal counsel.

"Based on that information, I believe the council made the best faith effort to get as much return off of that facility as possible," Andrews said.

He also noted that when the village tried to run a mechanic's service, it operated at a loss.

The $200,000 hangar, electricity, water, fire insurance and other amenities have been leased to Franklin for a second straight year for $500 per month.

Franklin, in a letter to airport manager Lloyd Wayne, asked to keep the rent at $500 instead of going to $700 as agreed upon for the second year, because of certain capital expenses.

Experts contacted by The Ruidoso News have said a fair return of rent for taxpayers would be more in the neighborhood of $2,000.

Former village attorney David Thomsen, who drafted the original agreement, submitted a requested report to village manager Ron Wicker, the mayor and council regarding airport leases.

In that report, Thomsen contends that the $200,000 main hangar is part of the normally leased regular operations of the airport, and therefore didn't have to be leased by ordinance.

It will be up to the DFA to determine if Thomsen's contention is valid.

Thomsen stopped short of saying the hangar rental rate was adequate, by writing that the rental is not so low as to violate the anti-donation law.

Andrews said that legal advice and the administration of the village is left to the professionals.

"That's why we hire attorneys. That's why we hire village managers. That's why we have airport managers," Andrews said. "Again, they are not infallible, and I can assure the taxpayers that if we leased to Mr. Franklin too cheaply, it was not on purpose.

"If we erred, we erred," Andrews said. "And if the previous administration erred, I'm sure we will find that out, too."

Andrews was referring to an ordinance and lease agreement on the old airport property, which is now a municipal golf course operated by AllHub, a partnership between R.D. Hubbard and Ed Allred, Ruidoso Downs race track owners.

Andrews was a member of the Citizens in Action group that petitioned for a negative referendum after the village passed Ordinance 89-3, allowing the golf course to be built.

Andrews also was a member of Mayor Lloyd Davis' ad hoc committee, charged with reviewing the lease for the old airport land.

Former village manager Frank Potter said that a Member Appraisal Institute (MAI) appraisal was required on the old airport land and the agreement was also approved by the DFA.

According to news articles at that time, village attorney John Underwood said the final lease agreement is flexible, but the ordinance and the terms set forth in the statutes could not be varied.

During Tuesday's council meeting, Alonso appeared to justify the actions of the village manager, the airport manager, the lawyers and council.

"I can understand how it would have been normal to continue to rent space and possibly overlook the requirement to go out and give, through a formal RFP (request for proposal), everybody in the world who may have an interest an opportunity," Alonso said.

He said he conducted an informal search and could find no interest (for a mechanics business to come to Sierra Blanca) for the airport.

"It's possible that we didn't give everybody that's interested a chance to bid on it," said Alonso. "But I don't share the concern that we did something totally off the wall. In a historical context, what we did makes a lot of sense."

Alonso passed no judgment as to the legality of the lease arrangement.

Alonso said he didn't hire Lloyd Wayne, that he only appoints key people. He said former village manager Charles Norwood hired Wayne. The mayor said he never interviewed him. He did not say if he recommended or knew Wayne previous to the hiring.

In other council news, Allan Whitesel from the State Highway Department gave a report on the reconstruction of Highway 48, Mechem Drive.

"As you recall in November we were asked to go back and check our data to see if our traffic information was accurate," Whitesel said.

Mayor miffed when called angry

by CHARLES STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

During Tuesday's council meeting, Mayor Victor Alonso took exception to a particular section of an article in Monday's edition of The Ruidoso News that gave historical reference to a petition drive in 1989.

He said the article characterized him as "angry," which he said was not true. And he said the article made light of a significant bill he advocated that was passed by the State Legislature.

"I occasionally get angry," said Alonso. "But I think those people that watch me, those people who know how I operate, can testify that I'm somewhat patient and do not often become angry."

"As a chairperson for three years, and as a councilor before, I think I've been angry one time," Alonso said.

During a council break, reporter Charles Stallings told Alonso that his characterization of "angry" was meant to be viewed as "impassioned." The reporter told Alonso he regretted any other impression, and that space constraints of that particular story had caused an edited history of Alonso's significant contribution that would have clarified "angry" as "impassioned."

Alonso spoke on the significance of his bill:

"The New Mexico Legislature, at my request with John Underwood (D-Ruidoso), commonly called 'The Alonso Legislation', having to do that once people put their name on a petition, the clerk certifies that petition and they can't take their names off."

"I was concerned about that, and apparently there were enough people in the state legislature who agreed that the legislation passed. This is not one angry person's mind pushing an irrelevant issue."

"The point being that in this community, people who sign the petition are guaranteed those First Amendment rights under the U.S. Constitution for redress, which is the same amendment that the newspaper invokes for freedom of speech. They're both in the same amendment, the First Amendment."

"That was, in my opinion, and apparently shared by a majority of the legislature. It was a shared opinion."

"So we changed the law so people would not be coerced or people could not be threatened. You sign a petition, nobody is going to ask you to reconsider to take it off, ever."

"The actions are based in concern and the same logic that the newspaper advocates."

The 1989 petition drive came up in connection with the lease of the municipal golf course.

Cemetery cleanup

Ruidoso's Park Department and Camp Sierra Blanca inmates collected over a hundred bags of pine needles and other debris from the Forest Lawn cemetery in a massive cleanup started Monday. Solid waste authority director Gene Green said the dumpster will be moved away from the entrance and to the side of the cemetery. The maintenance shed doors also have been repaired. The village council said they will budget for new equipment.

Downs police recruit reserves

Volunteers can sometimes be the best way to accomplish a goal, and the Ruidoso Downs Police Department will use that concept to keep the village safe.

Police chief Will Hoggard said the idea for a reserve officers program for the village has been in the works for several years, but with the approval of the village trustees Monday it became a reality. The reserve officers would be trained personnel acting under the authority of the chief in assisting regular officers in normal duty and in disaster or emergency situations.

Hoggard said they are looking for six to 12 good people, men or women, to serve in that capacity for the village. Applicants' backgrounds will be checked carefully, and they will be working with a regular officer at most times.

One example of how the reserves could be used is from last year when the Ruidoso Downs Auxiliary asked for assistance from the department at its arts festival. The reserve officers could have done this and offered a service the community wanted, Hoggard said.

The reserves would also receive basic training, and if they wanted to use their own time and money could get advanced training, he said.

"It would provide a big help on busy weekends when there aren't enough of us (regular police officers) to go around," Hoggard said.

He said several people have already expressed interest in the program and many of them have been retired military or police officers.

"The wisdom and experience they could bring would be a great benefit to this village and department," he said.

A reserve coordinator, a full-time police officer, would serve as the go-between for the department and the reserves. Hoggard said this would just be part of the person's duties, but at the beginning it could mean a small amount of overtime but he would do that work.

One cost would be workers' compensation so the reserve officers would be covered while performing their duties. Hoggard said that would be about $100 a year for the program.

The only other cost would be for badges and patches for the officers to wear, he said. The officers are responsible for a uniform and all other equipment.

Hoggard also requested that part-time communications detention officer Gary Blosser be named the reserve captain to head the reserve force and work with the reserve coordinator. Blosser is retired from the military. He said Blosser has the time and energy to do this project well.

Trustee Charlotte Craig said she couldn't see how they could go wrong with this program. Mayor Joe Hayhurst said it would be a big plus for Ruidoso Downs. The rest of the trustees agreed by voting to get the program started.

4-H & FFA kids can keep small animals in the Downs

by KRISTIE SAATMANN
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

If your pig is for a 4-H project, you may be able to keep it within the village limits of Ruidoso Downs for the duration of the project.

Pam Millar, sponsor of a new 4-H club formed in the village, asked trustees Monday night to consider adjusting its current livestock ordinance to allow 4-H and Future Farmers of America students to have animals, such as lambs, swine and market steers during the project time.

Lincoln County Agriculture Extension Agent Barry Herd and FFA sponsor Shawn Dennis were also at the meeting in support of the change.

The total number of 4-H and FFA members wanting to keep animals within the village limits would be about five to 10, Herd said.

These members are learning management and responsibility for their animals when they sign up, he said.

Mayor Joe Hayhurst asked what period of time the members would need to complete their projects.

Most of the members just take their animals to the county fair in the fall but others also want to take them on to the state fair or the Eastern New Mexico fair, which are later in October, Herd said.

Dennis said the beginning time is also different, depending on the project. Some of his students will start investing in beef animals in late March when the Texas breeders are selling their livestock, he said.

Both groups agreed April through October would be enough time for the members to complete their projects.

Hayhurst reminded the group that the members would still have to comply with other parts of the ordinance, which requires them to clean the area weekly and spray for flies. Herd said he and the leaders will supervise the members to make sure they are doing what they should to keep it clean.

To be able to track which animals are designated for such projects, members would need to come into village hall and certify that they are going to be doing it, Hayhurst said.

He said animal control officer, Tom Armstrong, has spoken to him in favor of a change in the ordinance, and he would be supervising the animals as well to make sure the owners follow the village rules.

Trustees voted to have the ordinance published with the proposed change. They scheduled a public hearing during the board's next meeting on March 8. Final approval will be determined after the hearing.

The current ordinance on livestock allows one horse per one-eighth acre, but specifies that the area must be kept clean.

The group also gave village clerk Leann Weibrecht approval to publish an amended animal control ordinance for dogs and cats. The ordinance will change the price for licenses for unaltered cats to $5, neutered or spayed cats to $3, unaltered dogs to $10 and neutered or spayed dogs to $5. The fees had ranged from $2 to $5.

Trustee Judy Miller suggested they have a senior citizens rate because many of the elderly people in the community are on fixed incomes. Pets are sometimes the only companions these people have, she said.

The group decided to set the senior citizen rate at half the new rate.

Trustee Charlotte Craig said the ordinance contradicted itself at one point because it described immediate control of a dog as when a person is present with the animal, but then it requires the animal to be on a leash, cord or chain to be considered not running at large. She asked that it be changed so they both mean that the animal will be restrained.

The village is currently building an animal shelter to be able to house its own dogs and cats after trustees decided in January not to renew a contract with the Lincoln County Humane Society because of a price increase. They expect to complete the shelter by the first of March.

Trustees also approved a joint powers agreement between the village and the state forestry division for wildfire suppression. Charles Wicklund, area representative of the division, explained the agreement before the group made the vote.

Wicklund said the division will reimburse the village for its assistance with fires out of its own jurisdiction but within the county or area. He said they will pay for mileage, oil, gas and also for the use of some special equipment the village may have.

This would include any wildfire on Bureau of Land Management, federal and state lands and private lands, but not structure or automobile fires.

Wicklund said a section in the agreement also states that the village may decline to assist with the fire if doing so would put the village in danger. He said if they only had a limited amount of equipment available at that time they could say no to a request by the division.

Through the agreement the village would also be reimbursed for fires within its district if they last more than four hours, Wicklund said.

He pointed out that with this agreement the firefighters are not employees of the state, but are still considered part of the village's responsibility. A reimbursement check would be sent directly to the village, which would then pay the fire department.

The state forestry division also helps the village fire department get equipment it may need, and it would provide 40 hours of training for the volunteer firemen, Wicklund said.

All four trustees and the mayor will be going to the New Mexico Municipal League Legislature Day today in Santa Fe. They will attend several sessions in the morning and visit with legislators about issues in the afternoon.

Mayor Hayhurst and trustee Ray Hayhurst made a presentation to the House of Representatives Taxation and Revenue Committee for funds for the construction of a new village hall. The mayor said they asked for $400,500 for the total project but would be pleased to get enough for the basic structure.

He said the committee asked questions about what happened to the previous village hall, its current budget and bonding capacity. The presentation seemed to go well, he said.

All requests are tabled following presentations and will be decided at the end of the session when legislators determine the amount of requests and funds available.

"We are really enthused about it, but we'll just have to wait it out to see if we get any," the mayor said. The board has an appointment to meet with Representative H. John Underwood today and will try to see Senator Pete Campos and other legislators about the project.

Sandee Dutchover, director of the senior center and a board member for Ruidoso Meal Care, said the program serves 50 meals each day on Monday, Wednesday and Friday. The meals, which are prepared at La Prosperita, can be delivered.

Participants can dine at the center or they can pick the food up and take it home.

ing that data, is that there may be some flexibility in where the five lanes would need to end."

Whitesel said the best interests of the community still call for the five lanes to end at the civic events center entrance.

Whitesel said an area could narrow from five lanes to three lanes just south of the community cemetery.

However, Whitesel said that the transition from five lanes to three to five just before the entrance of the civic center was not in the best interest of the community.

Craig Rawlings, on the mayor's highway advisory committee, said he was not in agreement with the state's data. He said road counters were placed in the civic center drive that artificially inflated the figures.

Rawlings said he was concerned about preserving the trees along the cemetery.

Councilor Frank Cummins said that after talking to state agency representatives, he thought enough flexibility was put into the plan to be able to save the trees, if possible. He then made the successful motion to approve the state's A-1 plan that would allow five lanes to the civic events center.

Also Tuesday, Councilor J.D. James read a statement from Councilor Jerry Shaw who was in Santa Fe to attend various functions including Municipal League board meetings.

Shaw's text, read into record by James, was as follows:

"I noticed that our organizational chart has been changed and you are advertising for a purchasing agent. That position will now be under the finance department, whereas before, the two separate departments answered to the manager.

"I would assume this also changes the job description. Our personnel ordinance, found in chapter three in the code manual, states that the governing body must vote to change the organizational chart. A policy change should always come before the governing body, and especially one that violates our own village ordinance.

"I recommend that we maintain our current chart or call a special meeting to amend the personnel part."

No action was taken on Shaw's request.

Bob Walters of the council's Monitored Retrieval Storage (MRS) advisory board gave a lengthy explanation as to why the nuclear spent fuel rods specifications were erroneous.

Walters said he had heard of recent conversions to MRS philosophy resultant of the recent trip provided by the nuclear energy group.

The mayor said that he was frustrated.

Although The News has made no change in editorial policy in reference to the MRS facility, Alonso planted a seed of doubt in the councilors' minds that the newspaper could not hold an opposing view without some sort of retribution.

"The last thing I would want to do is have the newspaper start bashing you (Bob Walters), Connie and Bill, because you're on the committee and you've been keeping us informed, and we've asked you to keep us informed, and we're on record as saying we're opposed," Alonso said.

"Now the newspapers are going to start, uh, maybe they're not. But the history of Indian sovereignty and the history of America is an interesting one. The words genocide have been used."

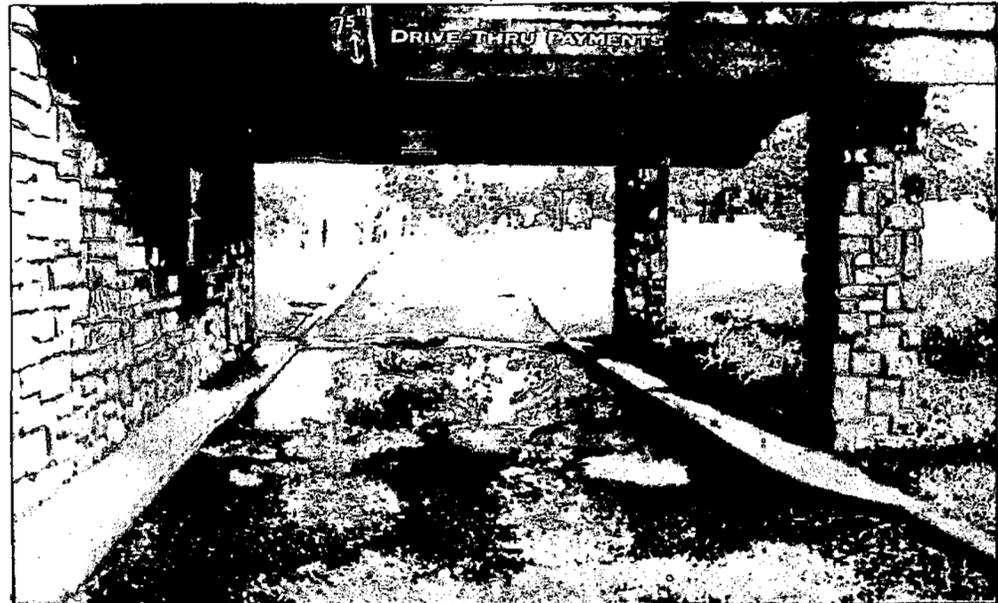

Andrews noted that nothing much has changed since the initial revelations of the MRS and that residents are not so much indifferent, as the fact that nothing new has happened.

The council approved several MainStreet Ruidoso Redevelopment plans in preparation for a spring start.

Bids were approved for kitchen fixtures and equipment for the civic events center.

A total of $36,800 was approved. National Restaurant Supply from Albuquerque was awarded $10,200, Gernsbachers Inc. from Fort Worth was awarded $20,500 and Murray's Janitorial from Ruidoso was awarded $6,100.

Tennis court resurfacing was approved by an El Paso firm for about $9,000.

Students, animals share love and learning

by DIANNE STALLINGS

Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Gretchen Becker had seen the relationship work before and knew just how valuable pet friendship can be in encouraging people to open up their hearts and take a new interest in life.

"My sister-in-law used to do something similar in El Paso with a Pets Helping People program," Becker said. "She would take cats, dogs, hamsters, rabbits and other animals to care facilities for the elderly."

When Becker taught in Carrizozo, she brought animals to visit her students. Now she's bringing the students to the animals.

This time, she's working with the special education class at Ruidoso Middle School. They're a great bunch of students who approach the assignment of walking the abandoned dogs at the shelter with energy and enthusiasm. They stop in and see the cats, too.

"I think pets do things for people that other people can't," Becker said. "They calm them and offer unconditional love and affection. There's a special connection."

"When they try to train a dog, that responsibility is good for them, the caring for something else."

Shelter manager Randy Basch had appeared as a guest speaker at the school for Becker's class. He demonstrated what can be accomplished through proper training of a dog.

That appearance prompted a rush of questions from the students and subsequently, the weekly visits of the class to the shelter.

Basch, a believer in using education as a means to change antiquated attitudes about animal behavior and care, said he's pleased to see the students' reactions to the dogs and cats.

He'd like to meet with other classes and said that adults, too, are welcomed to visit the shelter on Gavilan Canyon Road and walk the dogs or commune with the cats.

"Only through interaction with the public can the society bring home its message of humane treatment of animals, Basch said. That message includes responsible care for pets and their sterilization to reduce the number of unwanted animals born each year that end up in shelters or are destroyed.

LaMothe, who has studied film in Poland where she produced her first film, is gathering support for her next effort.

LaMothe, the daughter of Birgit Lamothe of Capitan, says Greer Garson has developed a sound stage in the state, opening up a new opportunity for artists who want to work in this state.

She said in the past, filmmakers were able to film a few outside loca-

To help raise funds to develop a feature film, LaMothe has invited friends to a concert and party at 5:30 p.m. Sunday, February 28, at Presented at the party, direct from Washington D.C., will be music and political humor by Jay Keating of The Keating Five.

Silver Colts stampede Lady Warriors

Silver City's Fighting Colts trampled the Lady Warrior basketball team's hopes of continuing on in the district tournament Wednesday night when the Colts reined in a 27-57 victory.

Ruidoso never quite got into its rhythm against the taller, quicker girls of Silver. By halftime the team was down by 18, 10-23, and Silver answered any basket the girls made. Top scorer Sarah Dix picked up two fouls early and sat out much of the second quarter before coming back in the second half.

Silver players picked up quite a few fouls in a physical game but had plenty of good players off the bench. When Lady Warriors went to the free throw line they weren't too successful at hitting them, while the Colts couldn't seem to miss.

As time began running out in the fourth quarter, the team began to make mistakes it could ill afford, too, such as throwing away the ball. On the few shots the Lady Warriors did get, Silver blocked several.

Dix topped the scoring, along with Michelle Morris, with nine points each. All of Morris' points except two came on free throws. Cicelee Makowski added six on three-pointers, while Kim Floyd had five. Kristie Ryan and Mandy Parker each chipped in one.

The Lady Warriors earned their bid for this second step in the district tournament by defeating the Oñate Knights here on Monday.

Both of the teams got off to a slow start that night, but the Lady Warriors pulled away at the beginning of the fourth quarter. The final score for the game was 38-25.

Silver City won its berth by beating Bayard Cobres 65-32 earlier this week.

The Silver Colts will now move on to play the Socorro Warriors Friday, with the winner playing Deming Saturday. Socorro is ranked second in the state in class AAA, while Deming is ranked sixth in the state poll.

The Colts had defeated the young Lady Warriors twice before in regular season.

The Lady Warriors finished their regular season with six wins and 15 losses. Four seniors played their last game on Wednesday. Kim Floyd, Robyn Hursh, Michelle Morris and Cicelee Makowski will all be graduating this spring and were presented with roses at the last regular season game on Saturday.

The team still has plenty of young talent left on the varsity and coming up through the ranks of the junior varsity and C-team. Coach Dennis Davis said he has been pleased about the improvement each of the teams have made and he is optimistic about next season.

Sarah Dix (in white uniform) prepares to go up for a basket after driving the baseline against a Socorro Warrior in a game earlier this season. Dix, along with Cicelee Makowski, has been one of the leading scorers for the Warriors. Both have been averaging a little more than 10 points per contest.

Michelle Morris gladly receives a hug from her sister Danielle Morris before the beginning of the last regular season basketball game Saturday when underclassmen recognized the graduating seniors, including Michelle, Robyn Hursh, Kim Floyd (both pictured) and Cicelee Makowski.

Warriors end season with Cobre, Silver

Although the Warrior boys basketball team has had a rocky season, it may have gained one thing it lacked at the beginning of this year — experience.

The team started two freshmen most of the season and had only one player, junior Jeff Chapman, who had experience playing varsity. The Warriors top scorer sophomore, Raul Davis, had never played a high school basketball game before, but kept excitement high with impressive three-point shots and drives to the baskets.

The continuous energy and enthusiasm players showed, even when they were down and out, may also be a bright spot to build on for next season's team.

Coach Norman Wright said when the Warriors began the season they knew they would be the underdogs, and many of their goals would be long-term.

The team also lacked height compared to its opponents. The tallest Warriors this year were Chapman and junior Casey Kearns at 6'1".

The team has two games remaining in the season on Friday and Saturday.

The Warriors will tackle the Cobre Indians beginning at 4 p.m. Friday and then meet Silver City on Saturday. During halftime of the Saturday game the cheerleaders will auction off cakes to raise money for the group.

In the first meeting with Cobre the boys lost the contest 41-86. Silver City also stampeded the Warriors 47-72.

The varsity team has earned just one win, which it earned in the Bruce King tournament in Moriarty in December. It had several close games against top AAA teams including Artesia, Moriarty and Portales, before being blown off the court by its district opponents, three of which are ranked in the class AAA poll.

Cheerleaders sell cakes to earn money

Cakes for all tastes will be auctioned off at halftime of the final boys varsity basketball game on Saturday at Ruidoso High School gymnasium.

The auction will raise funds for the RHS cheerleaders to attend the state cheerleading competition this spring. High school principal Don Weems is set to be the auctioneer for the sale.

The Warriors start with a C-team game at 4 p.m. and will then be followed by the junior varsity. The varsity game will begin at about 7 p.m.

Inside The Outdoors

Poachers prey on raptors for profit

A common sight to even the most casual observer driving on New Mexico roadways are raptors, or birds of prey. Even in town, viewers may see a beautiful kestrel sitting on a fence watching patiently for its dinner.

Red-tailed and sharp-shinned hawks are often seen on telephone poles or prominent tree branches and American hawks glide on wind currents over the prairies. Even the rare bald eagle calls New Mexico waterways home during the winter months.

Many species of raptors make a permanent home in our state, but even more may be found migrating through during the spring and fall months. In the Manzano Mountains, biologists counted more than 4,000 migrating raptors one fall and more than 3,000 in the spring. Birds of prey provide a source of beauty during the stark winter months and it seems impossible that someone would want to purposely destroy them, but it happens all the time.

Even though all hawks, owls, eagles, falcons and vultures are protected by state and federal laws, hundreds are killed by poachers each year in New Mexico. The extent of the problem is hard to determine, and the reasons are even tougher to understand. No one in their right mind would go out deliberately to hunt and kill a hawk for the evening dinner table. So why kill raptors?

Many raptors are killed by poultry and livestock owners that feel threatened. Other raptors are killed by vandals who just want to kill something. This occurred near Maljamar where a nest full of half grown Harris hawks was ripped apart by shotgun blasts killing the chicks.

Some hunters also kill hawks because they believe they prey on game birds, such as quail. Unfortunately, these hunters are, in most cases, actually killing quail protectors that feed on rats and mice which raid quail nests.

Probably the most unforgivable raptor poachers are those who receive a profit from their crimes. They go out specifically hunting hawks, owls, eagles and falcons to sell feathers and talons on the black market.

These poachers are a real problem here in New Mexico. The illegal trade in feathers is a flourishing business in our state.

In 1981, federal agents with the Fish and Wildlife Service completed an undercover operation in New Mexico, Oklahoma and Arizona. The focus was on the illegal feather trade and the results were astounding. Huge piles of feathers and items made from feathers, along with the heads and talons of eagles, were seized. One officer involved summed it up as a truly sickening sight.

But, this was only the tip of the iceberg. 500 new leads were uncovered by the raid.

Again in 1986, undercover agents went to work, this time targeting the Gallup area which appears to be a major point in the illegal feather trade. This time 50 violators were arrested, thousands of bird carcasses and untold numbers of feathers were seized, along with hundreds of thousands of dollars in articles made from bird parts.

The story goes on.

In 1988, another undercover operation was completed in the San Luis Valley, this time targeting illegal sales of all types of wildlife. This time the undercover agent found that, along with elk and deer meat, hawks, owls and eagles were part of the market. Bald eagles demanded about the same price as an elk, about $275 each.

Unfortunately, as long as there is a market for the products made from illegal game parts, there will undoubtedly be someone around to supply the parts. The ultimate payoff to all these poachers is made by our beautiful birds of prey. How long will it last and can raptors stay ahead of the poachers?

SKI PAGES

There's plenty to do at Ski Apache!

by YVONNE LANELLI
Special to The News
Part one in a series

Contrary to local myth, Ruidoso does offer its school age children something to do, attest many active youngsters and their parents.

"Join the Ruidoso Ski Team," invites Vicki Conley, one such active parent.

Conley's two daughters, Shannon, 12, and Rebecca, 10, enjoy that active group as have many local children over past decades.

The team provides both athletic and social opportunities, just like a school basketball team or a youth soccer league. Plus, it teaches discipline, how to get along with others and responsibility, believes Conley.

She enthusiastically cites examples of friendships fostered and lessons learned by team members.

"Since practice days often mean time off from school, a kid learns 'grades first or no ski team.' And since most races are out of town, kids who must travel without parents quickly learn how to manage themselves and their equipment."

In the world of junior racing, emphasis doesn't lie only with winning or losing, as it does in other sports. Rather, the goals is to accumulate points at licensed races within the young racer's region.

The Ruidoso Ski Team affiliates with the Rocky Mountain Division of the United States Ski Association. Under this system, race hopefuls from three states test skills at qualifying and fun races throughout the season in Arizona, Colorado and New Mexico.

Locally, Ruidoso Ski Team sponsors a regional fun race every year, and this year, for the first time, will host a Southwest Championship Race on Saturday, March 13.

"The winning team will take home a traveling trophy designed and carved by Hubert Seigmann, one of our coaches," explained Conley.

"Last year, the Taos team won it and this year we want it back!"

Holding that race locally represents a coup for the ski team, giving the members a chance to show off their home turf and to advance fundraising efforts through sales and sponsorships.

For, like all youth groups, nothing comes free and fundraising goes on continuously.

"We sponsor food booths at craft shows and other local events; sell everything from spaghetti dinners, fire logs, gift wraps, tickets for

All smiles, hard work and loads of fun are just a part of the boys and girls participating in the Ruidoso Ski Team.

The team participated in a slalom in Flagstaff on February 20, and a giant slalom on February 21.

drawing and bumper stickers; and, yes, even accept donations," says Conley.

Team fundraising serves two purposes: it involves parent and child in activities that foster mutual respect — key ingredients in successful child rearing — plus it encourages child involvement in earning money to participate in a chosen activity.

Being on a ski team isn't cheap.

count on local dues, regional fees and travel costs to out-of-town events.

"But a motivated kid who hustles can participate without it costing his parents all of that," says Conley, who describes her family as typical, two-working-parent, middle class.

Because her own daughters and their teammates derive so much from the team, Conley believes as many children and their parents as possible should be aware of it.

"Here we are, living next to this beautiful mountain, and most kids only ski it four or five times a year on school ski days. If they join the team, they could be skiing two to five days a week all season long, improving their skills in a sport that will last their lifetime, making friends and having fun," she adds.

"What could be better than that?"

If Ruidoso Ski Team sounds like "something to do" for your child, contact any team parent or attend tryout day at 10 a.m. Sunday, April 4, at Ski Apache.

Next week: Local team opportunities for different skier levels and how the system works nationally.

Ski Apache's braille trail map opens new horizons for skiers with visual handicaps

by YVONNE LANELLI
Special to The News

It's the first one at Ski Apache. It may be the only one in the United States. And it's so obvious everyone wonders why it wasn't done before.

It is a Braille trail map of Ski Apache, designed for the many skiers with visual handicaps who are students of Ski Apache Handicapped Skiers Association (SAHSA).

"We serve several skiers, ages seven to 18, from the New Mexico School for the Visually Handicapped," said Diana Person, executive director of the handicapped skiers program. She said the program serves many more skiers who live in New Mexico, Texas, Arizona and all over Mexico.

"Until now, these skiers had no trail map usable to them," said Person.

"The map was inspired by the visually handicapped kids themselves who couldn't believe we didn't have one already," said Penny Mayo, the map's creator.

For three years, Mayo has served as a SAHSA guide for skiers who are blind. Her awareness of the special needs of skiers with disabilities led to the beautiful hand-made poster-size area map now mounted on the entrance of SAHSA headquarters at Ski Apache.

Larry and Lorene Caywood of Larry's Frame and Art in Capitah donated the map's large three-foot wooden frame.

Now, when skiers who are blind and visually disabled congregate, there's as much discussion of what they'll ski today as there is when sighted skiers hang out.

"Like other skiers they now ask to ski different trails they feel on the map," says Mayo.

"Meadows, that's my favorite," offers Jamie Martinez, 15, who skis with guide Dennis Johnston. A student at Alamogordo's NMSVH, Jamie proofread the map before it went into production.

How does it work?

"Simple," replies Mayo. "It's all a raised code. For example, all lifts are large dots." She traces the gondola line from the base area to the Gazebo.

"Novice and easiest trails which are green to a sighted skier are solid lines on my map. More difficult blue runs like Meadows are long dashes and most difficult blacks like Terrible are short dashes."

Next to the run itself is a Braille number. To find out the trail's name, the student fingers that number then locates it on a key at the bottom of the map.

Area facilities such as ticket sales, rental shop or restaurant appear as raised letters, identical to the letters printed on the map for the sighted skiers.

The all-important area boundary is a bold, easily-discernible zig-zag line.

"Having this map doesn't mean the blind students ski by themselves," Person interjects. "They still need guides who ski with them at all times."

Mayo also included elevation levels so students could have a sense of altitude.

"I haven't got the texture for trees yet," says Mayo, a perfectionist. "Skiers have to know where trees are!"

Mayo didn't stop with just lifts, trails and boundaries. At the bottom of the poster is a Braille-imprinted Skier Safety Code.

"Like other skiers, blind skiers, blind skiers have to know the code, too."

Fringe Benefits

Each NMSVH student who skis regularly with SAHSA boasts a Mayo-made poster-size area map hanging in his or her room.

"With maps in our students' rooms, other students who were afraid to ski are now reading the maps and wanting to be included in our ski program," says Mayo.

Giving the young NMSVH students their own maps provided another unexpected benefit.

"The students are now eager to learn Braille! Some had been reluctant to learn before; now they go to their Braille teacher all the time," says Person with a smile.

The one and only?

As logical and beautifully simple as the Braille map is, and despite the fact that skiers with visual handicaps have been taught in the United States for more than 20 years, this map is apparently the only one of its kind in the country.

Hal O'Leary, who directs the Winter Park, Colorado, handicapped ski program and who travels around the country to visit other areas' programs, says our map is the only one, says Person. "Who knows? It may be the only one in the world!"

Mayo remains generous with her talents.

"If other areas want a Braille map for their blind skiers, I'll do it for them," says Mayo.

One morning recently, SAHSA was a noisy hubbub of NMSVH kids sorting out equipment and guides making plans. Several guides explained where students would be skiing that day by "sketching" on the students' open palms. The smiling students were as eager to hit the slopes as any teenager.

"It's a joy to see these children learn to ski and to be given the opportunity to ski," says Mayo. "Then they go back to lives knowing if they can accomplish this they can accomplish anything."

For information on this, or any other SAHSA program, contact them at 336-4416.

Classic ski race raises funds for animal shelter

Wind and snow didn't stop the Connoisseur Classic IV ski racers from having a great time on the slopes but it did delay them a day.

The race was postponed until Sunday after the weather brought it to a halt on Saturday. In the first running of the race seven three-person teams competed for the $960 prize package.

The winning team of the event was a group from Ski Apache, Larry Schneider, Scar Ward and Denny Grover. The group had a combined time of 1:17.49 on the NASTAR course. Schneider's quickest time of two runs was 24.63, while Ward had a 26.33. Grover's individual time was 26.99.

Race organizer Lisa Storey said the race went well and those involved in it will be meeting soon to discuss how it can be improved and made bigger for next year.

"We want this to be a big local event," she said.

The big winner of the day was the Lincoln County Humane Society which will receive $108 from the proceeds of the event.

What's happening at Ski Apache...

Readers muster for book battle

Ruidoso Middle School students are practicing to do battle, and the weapon of choice will be books.

Students are reading and practicing for the annual Battle of the Books planned for 8 a.m. to noon on Saturday, February 27, in the middle school library.

"It will be an honor to compete in the Battle of the Books," said mid-school librarian Ellie Keeton. "And it will require a lot of reading," she added.

Keeton said readers have been meeting for practice sessions during the noon hour each day in preparation for the drills this Saturday. Teams will be chosen the day of the competition, she said.

Everyone is invited to stop by the mid-school Saturday and watch the lively literary competition.

The winning team in the local competition will represent Ruidoso at the state competition in Santa Fe on March 6.

Course prepares parents to deal with crisis

Parenting for crisis prevention is the theme for a free parenting course from 7 to 9 p.m. five consecutive Tuesday evenings in the community room at Ruidoso High School.

The first in the Ruidoso Municipal Schools' annual spring parenting course will be on Tuesday, March 2.

Birgit LaMothe, Ph.D., who leads these courses, said she chose this title because, as research and common observation clearly show, problems in children, youth and family are increasing in frequency and intensity.

"Behaviors that were almost unheard of 10 years ago are common today," says Dr. LaMothe in a news release.

"The influence of media and the prevalence of attitudes ranging from apathy and lack of cooperation to lack of respect for fellow man combine to stimulate a negative attitude in much of our youth.

"The bottom line is that good parenting is the best crisis prevention.

"It is in the home that the child first forms and tests his/her values. Good example and goal oriented training can form a firm foundation that will stand a child in good stead through the trials and tribulations of our stormy world."

LaMothe said each session will introduce basic principles and practices of effective parenting designed to help parents shape a disciplined and nurturing environment.

The sessions will provide an open forum for discussion of individual incidents.

Five sessions are scheduled for 7 to 9 p.m. Tuesday nights starting March 2, and running through April 6, with one week off for spring break.

The meetings take place in the community room at Ruidoso High School.

The course is free and no reservations are needed. For more information, call 257-6149 or 354-2761.

Local bridge players raise funds for charity

Ruidoso bridge players will join thousands of others throughout North America on Thursday, March 25, in a competition to benefit the National Multiple Sclerosis Society.

The Ruidoso Duplicate Club, sanctioned by the American Contract Bridge League (ACBL), is sponsoring a section of the spring charity game at 7 p.m. at the Ruidoso Senior Citizens Center.

"This competition is truly unique because every player in every game in every city will play the exact same hands under near identical conditions," reads a news release provided by the local club.

Players in the spring North American Championships in Kansas City, Missouri, will be playing the same hands at the same time.

"Only one winner will emerge — the pair with the best percentage score on the computer-dealt hands," continues the release.

Ruby Greenhaw, charity chairman for the Ruidoso Duplicate Club, invites the public to attend.

Master points will be awarded to all those who finish well in each and every game.

Give your children the right line on power line safety. You can help keep them safe by teaching them that it's dangerous to touch power lines with kite strings, tree limbs, ladders ... or anything. Financial woes add up for county solid waste authority

by DIANNE STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Some rough months may lie ahead for the Lincoln County Solid Waste Authority as it enters the financial stage of developing a regional landfill with Otero County's parallel organization.

Authority attorney J. Robert Beauvais warned members Tuesday to be sure Lincoln doesn't end up paying for Otero's debts in any bond issue it floats for the landfill.

Officials with the Otero County Solid Waste Authority are going to want to include in a bond issue enough to pay off their debt at Dog Canyon (Otero's current landfill that must close next year), pay for a garbage transfer station and for a fleet of transfer trucks, Beauvais said.

Both authorities are coalitions of the individual counties and their municipalities.

"I agree with Bob," said vice chairman Ron Wicker, Ruidoso village manager. "I think the two boards need to be the policy setting group for the agency. If we're going to be responsible for 60 percent (of the landfill and the associated debt) and they go for a lot of things to help them instead of us directly, we'll be paying for a lot of equipment and capital expenses we don't want."

"That's always bothered me," said chairman Frank Warth, mayor of Capitan. "We can't be responsible for their whistles and bells."

"I think the executive committee needs to make it clear to Alamogordo (the city of Alamogordo is the lead agency in securing a permit for the landfill) that financing decisions are a matter of policy and not an operational decision. Everything needs to come back to the (solid waste) boards," Beauvais said.

Authority member Stirling Spencer, a Lincoln County Commissioner, added, "Any time we don't sit at the table when there are decisions to be made, they're going to outrun us and we're taking 50 percent of the risk."

"They're going to (benefit) off the backs of Lincoln County people. It's a mind set. They sit down there and think Lincoln County, pooh. They have no base."

"They're so fast. It takes six sets of eyes to know what's going on."

Beauvais agreed. "We have to be vigilant and protect our interests," he said.

Warth said that a financial plan is being put together by the authority's bond advisers. Meanwhile, he contacted the New Mexico Finance Authority, but representative Bob Goodman said it would be at least one year before the agency could help the authority.

"Is Alamogordo going to take the lead in arranging financing as well as handling the physical aspects such as the permit?" Beauvais asked Warth. "We need to know clearly how we are proceeding on the financing side."

The Lincoln authority should start working on the bond issue in early March to tie in with the projected time frame of the landfill, Beauvais said. "If we're more than 30 days out of synch, we'll have a cash flow problem."

Spencer said Otero could float two bond issues, one for the extras they want and one for the joint landfill venture.

"We want to make sure our collateral isn't paying off their past sins," he said.

"We're 50 percent," Wicker said. "If we don't want it done, it doesn't get done."

Spencer, who recently was reappointed to the authority board after an absence of several months, asked how deeply obligated the authority is financially so far.

Wicker explained that Lincoln must pay Camp, Dresser & McKee Engineering for half of the $140,000 cost to complete the application process for the regional landfill. The county received $43,000 from the Southeastern New Mexico Economic Development District when it pulled out of a regional landfill effort with that group and cast its lot with Otero. That money will cover part of the expense.

Beauvais said the contract with the engineering firm breaks the process down into seven phases. One through three are to obtain the permit, phases four through seven cover the design and construction of the landfill.

Environmental gross receipt taxes from the county and each of its municipalities will be part of the revenue pledge for repayment of the bonds, Beauvais said.

Although several Lincoln members were concerned that not locking the engineering firm in on a flat price for the package might result in financial quicksand, Warth said it appears the price on the second phase will be "reasonable."

The county inserted a clause for cancellation of the relationship as a back up, if the dollar figures go too high, he said. The authority's maximum financial exposure should be $50,000.

"There's no way we could do it without outside financing," Beauvais said. "We have no internal resources to do that."

BILLING WOES

When the first billing for unincorporated portions of the county were mailed, they were about two months later than originally projected by authority manager Gene Green.

The first bill covers a four-month period from December through March. From now on, the bills will cover a three-month period, Green told authority members.

From that first wave of billing, $19,104 was collected compared to the initial projection of $15,750.

The second group of bills from the first billing period went out in early February.

Al Junge, a former authority member, cautioned that the group should get control of delinquent payments right away or by March they could hurt the cash flow.

Green said he has received many "hate letters" and telephone calls "of all kinds" about the quarterly billing. Previously, garbage collection in dumpsters was provided by the commission out of general tax revenues. Now each property owner pays $5.25 a month.

"They're a little more reasonable than the first calls with all the profanity," he said. "The biggest single complaint is from people with several cabins who think it's not fair to pay the same as full-time residents."

"That's the same thing I hear at our office, especially when the people are only here a few weeks a year," county manager Andy Wynnham said.

"I think you should tell them to pay and then if (a different system is worked out), we'll credit them," said member Bill Schwetmann, a county commissioner. "It bothers me that we're not going to get the projected revenue."

Wicker said stand-by charges usually are imposed by utilities for seasonal residents. Ruidoso Councilor Ron Andrews said people pay a base water bill whether or not they turn on a faucet. The other option is to charge a reconnection fee every time someone comes in from out of town for a few weeks or the summer.

Andrews, who is treasurer noted that the authority's bank account dropped by $7,376, because nothing was coming in from the county collection system the first month due to a delay in billing.

"You would have seen an $8,000 improvement in the situation," he said.

He also noted that the authority overall is at the 60 percent point of its budget. The good news is that it is at 52 percent of its budget for expenses and at 53 percent for revenues (due to the late billing).

"I think we're close," he said. But he cited a few areas of special concern including having expended 190 percent of what was budgeted for equipment rental; 182 percent for office supplies and an overage in the use of the telephone. He told Green that those areas must be brought under tighter control.

In other business, the authority: —noted that it had asked last month for a profit and loss statement on the recycling operation, but that director Kerry Krumtsiek had not had a chance to compile the information. Treasurer Ron Andrews said he will work with Krumtsiek to put together a report for next month, also showing transportation and disposal costs avoided by recycling.

"We know that recycling is not ever going to be profitable, but we need to know the actual cost to know what it's worth to recycle," Andrew said.

He has heard Warth contend recycling is a goal, not a mandate, Andrews said. He'd like that in writing from the state.

Edwards said the goal is mandated by law and therefore, it is a requirement.

—noted that Roswell renewed the authority's contract for another year to dump its garbage in that city's landfill. The authority hopes to have a regional landfill opened by January 1994.

Capitan elementary school mediators gather with instructors Becca Ferguson (back) and Idy Schweitzer (at right). The students are being trained to mediate disagreements between their peers in kindergarten through sixth grade. About four students per class are trained as conflict managers. During recess, they wear orange vests and carry clipboards with mediation report forms. The group meets each month at noon to discuss techniques.

Mediators handle peer pouting problems

by DIANNE STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Learning how to resolve conflicts can evolve into a valuable ability, in a person's private and public life.

A group of elementary-age students will have a chance to find that out as they participate in a Student Mediation project.

Under the guidance of teachers Becca Ferguson and Idy Schweitzer, the students are being trained to resolve peer conflicts.

First Ferguson was trained to be a mediation coordinator. She arranged for state developer Sara Keeney of Albuquerque to conduct in-service training for other teachers.

The students use curriculum material presented by teachers in the classroom. Other students and the teachers then select about four mediators per class for additional training by Ferguson, Keeney and Schweitzer.

The training utilizes the book called "Training Elementary School Conflict Managers," published by Community Boards of San Francisco, California.

The program also aims to improve the environment of the school by helping students and staff to address and solve the underlying conflicts that often cause rule infractions and violence.

Fifteen years of dissatisfaction with the adversarial process in resolving certain types of disputes led to the new program. It especially was crucial when the dispute occurs between parties who have an on-going relationship.

Mediators are trained to help the children involved in a dispute express their feelings and points of view; to identify their needs, to clarify issues, to understand the other party's view, to explore solutions and to reach a mutually satisfying solution.

The use of mediation can reduce the number of disputes that become violent or hurtful and reduce the amount of staff time spent on discipline.

The program does not eliminate adult supervision on the playground or in the classroom. During recess breaks, mediators walk the playgrounds wearing orange vests and carrying clipboards holding mediation report forms.

The basic approach taken by a mediator is to:

—secure agreement from both sides that they will not interrupt, they will not call names, they will tell the truth and will try to solve the problem. The mediator in turn, listens to each tell their story, asks how they feel, and repeats what they've been told.

—then ask each for ideas on a solution, what both can do to prevent the incident from happening again.

—help students get a solution they both think is good. After the agreement, the mediator congratulates both.

Monthly meetings are conducted at noon on the first Wednesday of each month.

Alpha Delta Kappa inducts new members

Two new members were inducted into the Eta Chapter of the Alpha Delta Kappa Foundation of Women at its meeting in January.

Mecca Aldridge, a sixth grade teacher in Capitan, and Linda Lott, a first grade teacher at Nob Hill in Ruidoso, were installed by president Mary Shanks and members Nellie Ruth Jones, Dottie MacVeigh and Ruby Johnson.

The foundation also awards a $500 scholarship from each chapter to a young woman attending college who plans to major in education. This year, the award recipient is Jennifer Eldridge of Capitan, who is in her second semester at Eastern New Mexico University in Portales.

Members of the foundation at its November meeting voted to contribute $25,000 to each of the international altruistic projects, St. Jude Children's Research Hospital in Memphis, Tennessee, and the Pediatric AIDS Foundation in Santa Monica, California.

Each of those organizations already had received $25,000 in the 1991-92 fiscal year.

In other business, the teachers are planning to attend the Southern District of New Mexico Conference April 1 in Hobbs, followed by the International Convention in Toronto, Canada this summer.

The Eta chapter has scheduled its next meeting for March 6. Idy Schweitzer will present a program about the Capitan Mediation School Program.

Trustees to review ordinances

Public hearings are scheduled on the village of Capitan's personnel policy ordinance and its collective bargaining ordinance at 6:30 p.m. Friday, February 28 in village hall.

A special meeting of the Capitan Board of Trustees will begin at 7 p.m. dealing with the on-going Community Development Block Grant fire hydrant project being handled by Benson Engineering and a resolution for a new grant application for street repair.

Mature drivers course offered

A 55 Alive/Mature Driving classroom driver retraining program designed to help older persons improve their driving skills will run March 11-12 at the Capitan Senior Citizens Center.

Sponsored by the American Association of Retired Persons and the center, the classes will run from 9 a.m. to 11:30 a.m. and from 1 p.m. to 3:30 p.m.

This is the first driver retraining course geared to the specific needs of older motorists. The material covers the effects of aging and medications on driving, basic driving rules, license renewal, local traffic hazards, adverse road conditions, energy saving and accident prevention measures. Although research shows older drivers are involved in more accidents than their middle-aged counterparts based on actual miles driven, it also indicates that they can improve their driving ability through additional training.

Participants must register by March 4 at the center. The class is limited to 16 people. Association membership is not required, but both classes must be attended to be certified and qualify for a 10 percent discount on automobile insurance for three years.

Wayne and Mollie Mason will be the instructors. The cost is $8 per person.

Chili Cookoff getting hotter

The Wildfire Chili Cookoff keeps getting wilder and wilder. Set for July 3 and sanctioned by the International Chili Society (ICS), the cookoff in Capitan will carry cash prizes from $100 to $300 and a Hotshot Challenge for all fire departments.

The entry fee is $25 for ICS members and $50 for non-members, with the fee including a ICS membership.

While not slumping at the chili, visitors can watch or participate in a 10 K run, a parade and a rodeo, or they can bite down on some barbecue.

For more information about the event or to enter, contact Kathleen Hellman, chairman, at 505-354-3332.

Tigers on top of district

The victorious Capitan Tigers brought home the 5A district championship trophy in basketball last week as they stomped Hagerman 59-32.

The teams were tied after the first quarter 9-9, but Capitan pulled ahead before half-time with a 15 point lead. Hagerman held the Tigers to that lead in the third quarter, but fell under foot in the final quarter with the Tigers scoring 19 points to their opponents' 6 points.

No surprise, Tammy Payne was lead scorer with 18 points, followed by Tydie Traylor with 16. The win gives Capitan a season 18-5 record, but a smooth 6-0 in district play.

Shanks named top employee

Howard Shanks, alumnus of Abilene Christian University (ACU), has been named the outstanding employee of 1992 by the New Mexico Soil Conservation Service.

The award is given once a year to the most outstanding of the 1,000 employees for the service. Now in his twenty-second year with the service, Shanks is being recognized for his contribution to conservation and development in the region of New Mexico.

Birthday month ends on brother Joe's day

Birthday of Our Brother Joe

This is being sent to you just before high noon on February 22, Washington's birthday, a beautiful sunshine and shadow day, with the spirit of happiness casting a blessing throughout the Mountain Land.

With the birthday month now drawing to a close, fond memories of our brother Joe are in my heart and I look forward to his birthday February 28.

Joseph Duffield Storm was born on this day 1913 in Denver, Colorado, to Lynn Whippo Storm and the former Bertha Catherine Kennedy. He was named after Colonel Duffield who served in Washington's army during the Revolutionary War.

With the family he traveled twice to Alaska, to Mexico, to El Paso and then here to Glendale. Here in Lincoln County he spent some of the happiest days of his life, riding his horse "Buttermilk," visiting his many friends.

When the family moved to Austin, Texas, for the winters, Joe with his brothers John, Dan and Lynn, attended the University of Texas. Here he ran the mile on the track and was co-captain his last year.

In 1936, Joe was editor of the Daily Texan, the school newspaper. Walter Cronkite worked with him on the paper, and there is a photo here in the house of Joe and Walter in the Texan office.

Later Joe was editor of the Sweetwater Reporter and the San Angelo Standard Times. Still later he worked for the United States Agricultural Department during the administration of Franklin D. Roosevelt. Before he entered the Army in World War II, he had his own small newspaper in Washington D. C. entitled "Spade."

Joe since early childhood was of a devout and spiritual nature. During his boyhood he was an acolyte in the Episcopal Church and later a Lay Leader.

He was born under the star of happiness.

He was blessed with a gift of making others happy, the source of true happiness. He was devoted to his brothers and his mother and father. He once sent a telegram to our mother of Valentine's Day saying: "Thanks for the privilege of being your son."

At Christmas time he was busy wrapping presents for all the family and the neighbors. And as a child he made homemade Christmas cards and Valentines out of crayon and water colors.

War and things military were as far from Joe's nature as night is from day. It was his destiny to fall in battle in Germany in World War II, February 25, 1945. He was an infantry scout in the Timberwolf Division. His name is inscribed at Texas Memorial Stadium.

Today on the approach of his birthday, here in the mountain land where he spent so many happy days, the spirit of our brother, Joe, is fondly close to me as he visits me from Heaven.

History writer gathers doc's memoirs for book

by DIANNE STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Members of the Lincoln County Historical Society have wanted to relate portions of the county's colorful history in print for a long time.

Money to cover the expense was the problem.

A private grant cleared that obstacle and the group set to work on editing and publishing the memoirs of Dr. James W. Laws, who ran a tuberculosis sanatorium in Lincoln around 1912.

Ann Buffington, who handled the job of editing, said the memoirs surfaced when Laws son, who spent his early years in Lincoln before leaving in 1918, came back to visit.

"He brought the part of the memoirs that pertained to Lincoln and let us have a copy," Buffington said. "Cleis and Jeremy Jordan (who run Casa de Patron bed and breakfast) let me see this copy. I read it and thought it really was wonderful."

Parts of the memoir were excerpted by Buffington and published in the society's newsletter. Through that exposure, a private grant materialized to publish the booklet, "Memoirs of a Country Doctor."

The Process

"I edited, Walter Henn designed the layout and Bob Blakestad put it on computer," Buffington said. "The others who helped included Nora Henn, Alice Blakestad and Bob Hart."

"It was something that the historical society had wanted to do for a long time, but we didn't have the money to publish."

"This booklet now has spurred another private grant that will be used to publish the findings of a research historian about Fort Stanton. With this seed money, we hope to finance one project each year."

The great part of dealing with Laws memoirs is that he was a good story teller and provided vivid descriptions, Buffington said.

"What's important about this is that the Ellis Store was a T.B. sanatorium and he was there during a dramatic era. It fits in with the story of health seekers who came to New Mexico as soon as the frontier was safe. The documentation on this movement is meager, yet it was a booming business."

"Laws can give us a glimpse of life in a tuberculosis sanatorium. He had T.B., too, and his wife, Grace Austin from Angus, came because she had asthma."

The Laws memoirs were published just before Christmas and the next publication on Fort Stanton should be out within two months.

"It's all happened in a six month period," she said. "We have a publications committee now to review manuscripts."

One of the stories related by Laws dealt with a train accident that occurred during the eight months he served as surgeon for the coal mines.

"One dark and rainy night there was a wreck of freight cars between Coalora (a now defunct town created by Phelps Dodge for miners to serve the coal fields) and Carrizozo,

I was called upon to ride a hand car manned by a section crew over a crazy switchback of many trestles in the dark to render medical relief.

"I was up all night and was brought back the following morning bedraggled from the rain and mud, with nerves worn to a frazzle, completely exhausted. I could do little for the injured other than give a shot of morphine to relieve the suffering."

Another section focuses on the couple's decision to start the ranch sanatorium and the problems they had to overcome.

Written Picture

Laws description of the area paints a charming picture of a Bonito Valley being thickly populated with green alfalfa fields, small orchards, small homes of Mexican families "with glimpses of Capitan Mountains with their eternal blueness" set off by occasional herds of goats.

Laws wrote that court sessions in Lincoln accounted for the lively days of the month when lawyers would come from Santa Fe, Las Cruces, Alamogordo and other towns. Boarding places overflowed.

Between those days, the town ran at a much slower pace.

Laws related many episodes with patients, one in which two boys were poisoned from "wild parsnips" which turned out to be the lethal water hemlock that Socrates was forced to eat. The boys recovered.

As he was wrapping up an operation under makeshift conditions in a rustic paper-lined cabin home in Nogal, a fire broke out from the effect of a tin reflector light against the paper walls.

And then there was Bert Bonnell of Glencoe, who apologized to Laws for calling him out to unlock a knee joint. He said he made the call only after all personal efforts to correct the condition failed.

He explained, "I had the boys fasten a block and tackle to my foot and I held on to an apple tree until I fainted, so we had to send for you."

Buffington hopes she'll be busy for a long time editing other history-related manuscripts. She moved to Lincoln in 1978 from San Francisco and fell in love with the area.

"I could see what was happening to San Francisco then," she said. With a friend, she restored a house in Capitan and then one in Lincoln before running a shop for a while in the latter settlement.

Her work with the Lincoln County Heritage Trust keeps her interest in history alive. She also is part of a core group within the historical society trying to promote the creation of museums in each of the county's communities.

The next meeting for the Ruidoso area is scheduled for 7 p.m. March 11 in the Public Library.

"Memoirs of a Country Doctor," is on sale at the Lincoln County Heritage Trust in Lincoln or can be ordered for $4.50, plus $1.25 for handling from The Lincoln County Historical Society, Box 91, Lincoln, NM 88336.

How do you say "Big Mac?"

"Spanglish" and its impact on New Mexico's culture will be explained in humorous detail at 7 p.m. Saturday, February 27, at the Museum of the Horse in Ruidoso Downs.

"Como se dice 'Big Mac' en Espanol?" is the title of a program to be presented by noted bilingual author Jim Sagel.

Admission is free and everyone in the community is invited to attend.

"This unique program is part of an on-going educational and entertaining program provided to our members and the community," said Museum of the Horse development director Frank Potter in a news release.

In New Mexico and throughout the Southwest, many Hispanics and others who live in the two "worlds" of their traditional cultures and mainstream society use two language systems to express themselves, continued the release.

Those who move between those two worlds on a daily basis have actually formed a third language system which bridges Spanish and English: "Spanglish."

An often fun and funky interwoven linguistic mesh, Spanglish not only switches between languages, but actually creates a new vocabulary and syntax that amalgamates the dual cultures of the speakers.

In this lecture, author Jim Sagel introduces the listener to the nature and meaning of Spanglish.

According to the news release, he provides a historical backdrop to the development of "code-switching" and investigates the cultural forces that have shaped bilingualism.

Sagel also provides numerous examples of Spanglish through his own written works and the literary works of other Southwestern authors.

Jim Sagel is a bilingual writer who has published 11 books of poetry, fiction and non-fiction. His first books, published in the late seventies and early eighties, were collections of poetry.

In 1981, his collection of short stories written in Spanish, Tunomas Honey, won the prestigious Premio Casa de las Americas in Havana, Cuba. The international Spanish-language literary competition is widely regarded as the Latin American equivalent of the Pulitzer Prize.

Two years later, a bilingual edition of the book was published by bilingual Press (Tempe, Arizona). In 1988, the same press published a second collection of Sagel's bilingual stories, Sabelotodo Entiendelonada.

Sagel continues to write books and has recently explored the world of the playwright.

In 1992, his first play, Dona Refugio y su comadre, was a second place winner of the international competition for drama written in Spanish at the University of Veracruz in Veracruz, Mexico.

Currently, Sagel is director of the Humanities Division at the University of New Mexico at Los Alamos. He is also an adjunct lecturer for the UNM Graduate Center and a bilingual language consultant for the Mountain States Multifunctional Resource Center at Arizona State University.

He has lived in Espanola since 1970 with his wife, Teresa Archuleta-Sagel, a weaver of Rio Grande textiles.

The community is welcome to come and explore the world of "Spanglish."

MainStreet members make long-range plans

MainStreet Ruidoso is branching out into new territory with upcoming projects, but before it goes too far the group's director wants to make a long-range plan.

Don Miller reported to the board on Thursday on his activities and asked the group to form a committee to develop a management plan to be able to make annual work plans for the future.

"I would like us all to be on the same wave length so we can get where we want to be," he said.

Board director Bonnie Mattox agreed with Miller that the group is going in the right direction because it can't just do the streetscape improvements and stop there. Directors Tom Battin and Tom Rigby said they liked the idea of looking at what the group can do to go forward.

President Alden Deyo said he wasn't sure what it would exactly take to do this and he suggested waiting to turn it over to the new board that will be coming on in March, after the annual meeting. The board will have at least two new directors at that time.

Battin said the group should go ahead and get started on it and then if new board directors would like to participate they could.

Miller said they would need to find out what the village's goals are and what its role is in the region. It would also determine what MainStreet's role is in Ruidoso.

A marketing survey being sent out to businesses, residents and visitors will help in developing these plans. Miller said the majority of the work plan will be in economic restructuring.

Deyo said they can't forget about the other points of the MainStreet plan, including design and promotion. Miller said that it is not the intention to neglect any of the points but to get the big picture and then break it down to the individual points for completion. The four points of the MainStreet concept are organization, promotion, design and economic restructuring.

Margaret Lahey, former president of the organization who was a guest at the meeting, suggested a task force be formed to determine exactly what a committee would need to do. The task force could get all the basic information together so the committees could get off to a running start.

Miller suggested that he work with Lahey, new director Stan Cape and Battin to begin on the project. Rigby made a motion to have that group investigate and identify areas for the planning committee to develop long range goals, which the board directors then approved.

Deyo said he was concerned about two projects MainStreet has already established, the services directory and the community update, which is co-sponsored by The Ruidoso News.

Miller said he met with Jerry Mattox, who is helping with the directory, and they discussed waiting to produce it until the shared or co-op parking lots have been determined in the Midtown area. He said that should be done fairly soon by the village parking advisory board so they could still print the directory before summer.

Deyo said the state matching funds of $500 must be used by the end of March or they will not receive them. Project consultant Mary Maul clarified that the funds must be encumbered by the end of March and the money must be spent by the end of June.

Bonnie Mattox said the artwork and layout can be done in two to three days as soon as some of the areas are designated. The whole layout can be taken to the printers in a matter of a couple days, she said.

The directories are available at the downtown businesses, the Ruidoso Valley Chamber of Commerce and the Civic Events Center office. Deyo said they are very helpful to be able to point shops out on the map.

As far as the annual community update that had been postponed from November, Miller said he will be meeting with committee chairperson Don Dutton and The Ruidoso News general manager Frankie Jarrell. They will first need to see when Mesalero Tribal president Wendell Chico can come to be the main speaker and after a date is set they will contact the other individuals they would like to attend.

Tickets for the event are already printed and will just need to be redated, Miller said. He said it will likely be in April following the legislative session.

In other business, Maul asked for the board's support in helping get the national MainStreet town hall meeting in 1995 in Santa Fe.

She and the state MainStreet officials are working on a proposal to get the event and are asking for the support of all the communities in the state. The state must commit $15,000 to get the project, but individual communities are not being asked to contribute at this time.

The town hall meeting will be two days of conference and one day for visitors to tour the state. The group voted to support the idea.

Don Rypkema, technical service consultant with the National MainStreet Center, will make a presentation at 1:30 p.m. on March 9, at the Ruidoso village hall. He has written real estate guidelines for the national organization and established The Real Estate Services Group in 1975 in Rapid City, South Dakota, which he has relocated to Washington D.C.

Rypkema's specific fields of consultation include feasibility analyses for real estate acquisition and development, demographic and market evaluation, training in real estate and market analyses, economic revitalization of downtown neighborhoods and commercial centers and the rehabilitation of historic structures.

Miller said Rypkema is a rather dynamic person so it should be a great meeting to attend. He will assess and photograph the community the day before the meeting to be able to discuss what will work for Ruidoso.

Rojean Evans, also of the National MainStreet Center, will also be here for the presentation.

Unions OK'd

Ruidoso Village Council on Tuesday unanimously OK'd a collective ordinance.

Former village attorney David Thomsen presented a report that explained a collective bargaining ordinance. The format for a collective ordinance was drafted by New Mexico Municipal League and is being passed around the state.

Most municipalities are complying rather than let the state mandate such an ordinance.

The purpose of the labor-management ordinance is to guarantee employees the right to organize and bargain collectively with their employers, to promote harmonious and cooperative relationships between employers and employees; and to protect the rights of employers.

It also acknowledges the rights of the citizens to orderly and uninterrupted delivery of municipal services.

The ordinance says that should it be determined that bargaining unit employees participated in or encouraged a public employee strike or slow-down, the exclusive representative for that bargaining unit shall be automatically decertified.

Foster homes needed

More than 2,000 New Mexico children spend time in temporary foster homes each month, and there are never enough licensed homes to care for these children.

Children are removed from their birth homes, usually because of abuse and neglect, and need temporary foster homes to care for them until they can safely return home or until other plans are made, according to a news release provided by The Rocky Mountain Adoption Exchange.

Ruidoso residents will have a chance to learn more about this program during an informational meeting at 6:30 p.m. today (Thursday), February 25, at the Social Services Division office, 419 Mechem Drive. The meeting is open to everyone, but anyone who might want to serve as a foster parent is especially encouraged to attend.

More than half of the children needing foster homes in the state are Hispanic, and many are Native American or Black, continues the news release. Whenever possible, the children are placed in homes of racially similar backgrounds.

"Because of the small number of foster families available, that is not always possible," according to Marlis Hadley, New Mexico office director for Rocky Mountain Adoption Exchange. All of these children are in the custody of the State of New Mexico.

"Kids respond much better in families," says Hadley. Whenever there are no homes available, a child may be placed in a group home until a foster home vacancy can be found.

"There is a great need for more foster homes in New Mexico to care for these children," says Hadley.

Hadley says lack of information is one of many reasons there are not more foster homes available. She said people are not aware of the need, or they believe the process to become a licensed foster parent is difficult.

"Requirements for foster families have changed in the last few years," says Hadley. Single adults as well as two-parent families can become foster parents. Applicants must be at least 21 years old; however, there is no upper age limit. There is no minimum income level. Many foster parents live in apartments or mobile homes, as well as in their own single family residences.

"The main qualification is the desire to love and properly care for these children," says Hadley. Other requirements include 21 hours of training, medical and fingerprint checks and personal interviews.

The New Mexico Department of Children Youth and Families provides all medical or counseling needs for the children. The department also provides a small monthly stipend for each child which is to be used for food, clothing and other expenses.

Retail wheeling is a dangerous experiment

Things aren't always what they seem, and a good example of that is a bill being debated in Santa Fe that its sponsors say will lower utility rates for consumers. Opponents say it would raise rates for most customers.

Retail wheeling is basically an experiment that would allow large utilities generating extra power to do business in areas being served by other electric companies. Retail wheeling would allow these companies to pay a "wheeling" fee for the right to use another company's electric transmission lines.

The trouble with the bill is that these enterprising companies would have no obligation to serve all customers, like the current utilities are required to do. For instance Texas-New Mexico Power Company and Otero County Electric Co-op, the two electric utilities in Lincoln County, are highly regulated by the public service commission, and one of their requirements is to make power available to all users within the service area — from the big industrial users to the small users, like a single person living in a remote cabin.

The problem for small electric customers, like typical homes, is that with retail wheeling these outside companies could come into a service area and pick and choose their customers. Chances are the utility customers given the opportunity to negotiate for lower rates would be industrial and commercial users, not single family homes. And, when the big customers are removed from the local utility company's revenue base, who would take up the slack? These companies have invested heavily to provide power to all the customers, and if the highest-paying customers are taken out of the picture, then the "leftover" electric consumers could look forward to paying higher rates.

New Mexico, with retail wheeling, would be vulnerable to huge companies from other states skimming off big customers by offering individual special deals. Small utility companies could even be forced out of business, and small electric users could suffer with higher electric rates. But it wouldn't stop there. If these outside companies are ever called on to provide more power in their home service areas, they'd no longer have excess power to sell. The local utilities, if they had survived the initial losses, would then be required to accept their old customers back.

Retail wheeling is a bad deal for New Mexico, and legislators should look beyond the empty promise of lower rates and into the future cost to consumers.

Smoke and mirrors and a lot of soot...

To those who read both The Ruidoso News and the Carrizozo newspaper, Lincoln County News, recent reports of the village's financial health must be very confusing.

If the village administration is attempting to cloud the issue for the need of additional income, it should receive an A-plus for its efforts.

The Ruidoso News recently reported the administration admitting to a surplus of $847,000 from which $452,000 would be spent to buy an unspecified number of acres of the Gridstone property. Objections to this action were covered in an article in The News on January 18, 1993.

To buy a large land area, most of which contains a falling residential area, in order to secure a small area to accommodate water and recreation improvements, is, simply put, a bad decision on the part of the Ruidoso Village Council. Having made the decision in a closed session only emphasizes suspicious actions taken in secret by the council and not in a public discussion.

One member of the council objected to the land purchase decision. His objections should have been noted by the news reporting, but were not. (Perhaps, because the objections apparently were aired only in the closed meeting.)

Now — about the Carrizozo paper's article of January 28, 1993: "Ruidoso sewer and water utilities losing money."

After completing an annual audit of the village's finances and operating procedures, the auditor made this statement: "The village ended the 1991-92 fiscal year with a surplus of $82,000 in the general fund. The bad news was that the village utility fund for sewer and water was continually losing money and was predicted to have a deficit operation in the near future."

Without so much as a wink of the eye, the village manager recommended that the council consider another sewer rate increase. No mention was made of the $2 sewer rate increase made less than 60 days ago. The $2 rate increase was estimated to bring in an additional $100,000 or more.

It was reported that the village manager had stated that over the years considerable funds had been transferred from the water to the sewer operation. This appeared to be a surprise to the council as deficits in the sewer account versus profit in the water account have not been a published fact in the past. Just how much of the water funds were used in the sewer operation?

The Ruidoso News' reporting of a surplus of $870,000 followed by the 'Zozo publication's reporting a surplus of $82,000 in the water/sewer account must have been confusing to the readers of both newspapers. Both were correct in the reporting. The failure was that the administration did not think the matter through to a conclusion the taxpayers would understand.

There is an underlying problem here with regard to when, how and to what extent rates for village services would be increased or adjusted.

Requesting a rate increase in sewer rates based on an audit without any thought given to the fact that there could be cost saving in the sewer operation itself is not an acceptable reason to increase rates. It is much easier to simply raise a rate rather than take the time to analyze the operation for cost savings.

Businesses as a matter of routine conduct what is known as engineered time and motion studies. These studies will disclose how to improve an operation, if the correct personnel is in place, how to speed production, and finally, how to reduce overall production costs.

I have no recollection of such a study every being made by our village administration.

Promises made at election to look into the cost of the village's operations are quickly forgotten after the votes are counted.

Such a study would put to rest the old question, "Why are three men leaning on shovels while one man digs the hole?"

Is the village operation overstaffed? understaffed? or right on target? Why not find the answer to this question?

Misinformation flies on the wings of falcons, while truths trudge along in wooden shoes.

Cemetery problems could be easily solved

In the last edition of The Ruidoso News, there was an article on cemetery maintenance. I'd like to expand on that article.

During a recent council meeting, a remark was made that outside contractors for cemetery interment had not been successful. Baloney!

Those who have used the service in prior years disagree completely.

This department, as in other village departments, needs an approved written operating procedure.

I've submitted on July 4, 1992 as follows:

—first and foremost, place the operation of this cemetery under one department. Multiple supervision, now in effect, has been ineffective.

—publicize the fact that cremation interment is now an option. This will eliminate, to a degree, the need for additional cemetery space.

—set up a budget sufficient to cover a schedule for cemetery housekeeping to remove pine needles, debris, and grass cutting on a planned basis, not on a hit and miss schedule now being used.

—determine the size of a single grave site with normal interment, to include the length recognizing that each grave site would accommodate two cremation sites.

—establish a procedure for grave site preparation. This would include the size and depth of the opening; the filling of the grave opening; the disposal of excess soil both during and after the ceremony; the use of chairs to accommodate attending the service; and the use of canvas cover and green grass covers.

Note: While the last attempt to secure bids for interments was not successful, the use of an outside contractor worked very well. Grave site preparation and completion was done in a professional manner which has been missing when the task is done by city employees.

It is recommended that an all-out effort be made to place interments with an outside contractor leaving the housekeeping work in the hands of the city.

Failing to do this would require that the points made here for a city operation be placed into effect with a strong follow-up to guarantee compliance.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Al Junge provided these two columns over the past few weeks, and because of the timeliness of these issues, we're publishing them both in today's edition.

2. Thank You

I wish to express my many thanks to Ski Apache for conducting another fine Ruidoso school ski program. The instructors present each Tuesday were delightful considerate and courteous with the beginning skiers. What an investment to the future! A child's first quality experience (and affordable for parents at introductory rates) will certainly peak continuing interest in skiing — and snowboarding.

I also thank the Ski Shuttle for safely transporting between one to two hundred children each week who attended the ski program. As the unpredictable weather began the Tuesday adventures, the buses reliably cared for our best passengers. No matter the conditions, the children were taken to the mountain and returned safely.

Additionally, many thanks go out to the participating ski rental shops who realize the great investment to our youth with discounted ski rentals, great service (and handling dozens of over excited kids at once have much to be congratulated for!) Personal thanks go out to Wild West where every courtesy was extended.

Great job y'all! Let's do it again next year.

Just Imagine the past 200 years

WITHOUT

FREEDOM OF THE PRESS

The words in the First Amendment read.
"Congress shall make no law...abridging the freedom of...the press."

The principle was clear 200 years ago when the words were first written, along with other freedoms that make up the Bill of Rights.

Since then, very few documents have been more analyzed, scrutinized, challenged and second-guessed

But the words still carry their own weight, and the principles behind them still make this country great.

ALTO VILLAGE

Alto Village — "a World of Difference"

Alto Village, which was planned and developed as one man's dream, is a dream come true for the many people who live there.

In 1965, M.H. "Don" Blaugrund's family sold the American Furniture in El Paso, Texas, and gave him $1 million to start a business of his own.

"He had a dream, and that dream was to develop a resort community similar to developments he had seen in California," said Colleen Wilson, who manages of Alto Water Company.

Wilson and her husband, Gene, have been involved with the development since the very beginning. She has plenty of memories, and someday she plans to write a book.

Don Blaugrund came to Alto Village in June 1965. He hired Gene Wilson as his construction superintendent and the two men worked side by side for the next 20 years.

Blaugrund, who died of cancer in August 1990, set out to create his "world of difference" in the midst of virgin land, a cattle ranch and an apple orchard.

He purchased the first tract of land from Union Industrial, a company that had bought the land from George Creel. That group's attempts, beginning in 1964, to develop a resort community fell flat.

The Wilson's had spent the summer here with that first developer, and when he ran out of money they went back to their "real jobs" in Carlsbad.

Colleen said she and Gene, who have five children, had reservations about moving their family and starting all over, and they didn't look back when they went back to Carlsbad.

But Alto was in their future, and when Blaugrund began his development he wanted them working with him.

"Then Don came down there — he swept us off our feet," said Colleen.

That was in June of 1965.

That year Blaugrund subdivided the land, began building roads and selling lots. He bought more land from the Peebles family and from Bob Scribner.

He donated land for the Alto Post office and moved in an old building and had it redecorated as a lounge — the InnCredible. With his partners, Marie and Bernard of Rooney of Ruidoso, he added on and began serving food.

Betty Thomas came on board and the InnCredible made a name for itself for its great steaks. The restaurant is now owned by Jennie Dorgan, and it's still known for its great food.

Alto Village's sales office was placed right across the road from the InnCredible, in the A-Frame that is now home to Alto Ski Shop, but Colleen said it became clear very quickly that the sales office needed to be right in the midst of the development.

Since 1967, the sales office and water company have been in the corporate headquarters on High Mesa in Alto.

"Don was really a stickler on restrictions," said Colleen. He modeled his dream development after subdivisions he had seen in California and Pine Top, Arizona.

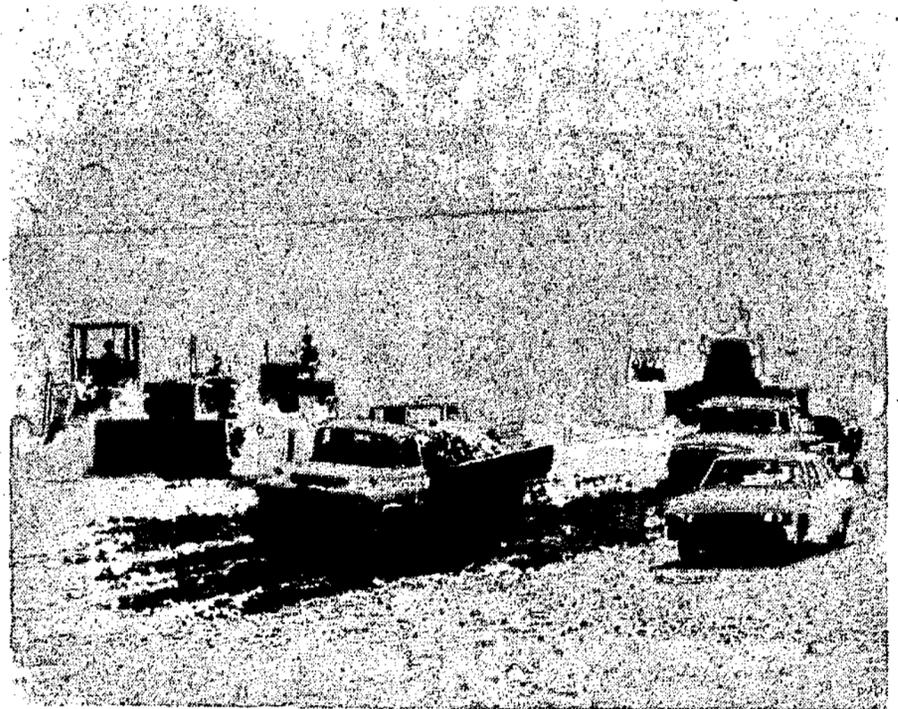

"He was always scouting around for better ways to do things."

The street signs are modeled after signs he liked in San Francisco. He picked the best of other areas and brought those ideas home to Alto.

But the restrictions, still enforced today by the Architectural Standards Committee, are one key that has kept Alto true to its developer's plans.

Blaugrund and the Wilsons "were" the Architectural Standards Committee for many years, but it's now chosen and operated through Alto Lakes Golf and Country Club.

The club, too, is a showplace in its beautiful building in the middle of the golf course.

Alto Village was carved out of pristine ranch and orchard land into a development that respects and protects the lovely natural environment. Photos courtesy of Colleen Wilson.

Blaugrund gave the clubhouse and golf course to the members in 1981, and it's operated by an-elected board.

You have to own property in Alto to be a member of the country club, and the ownership factor combined with the fact that the building and golf course were handed over free and clear add up to a viable, healthy club.

The water company, too, was sold to the country club after Blaugrund's death.

Blaugrund, in the midst of designing, developing, building and selling a town, took time to build himself a 7,000-square-foot home with a tower that is a landmark in Alto these days.

Colleen said it took a year to build the big showplace, and a great deal more time was spent in decorating it to Blaugrund's exacting standards.

Anne Heckman, wife of Fred Heckman who helped develop the Inn of the Mountain Gods and Sierra Blanca Regional Airport, worked with Blaugrund on that big project.

It was in 1967 that construction began on the first nine holes of the golf course.

Milt Coggins designed the first nine holes, and local contractors Floyd Haake and Bill McCarty did the construction.

Blaugrund hired Robert Trent Jones to design the second nine, but the two men had a disagreement before it was completed, and he hired golf pro Gary Player's firm, Davis, Kirby and Player, to do the designs.

He called on his right-hand man,

Gene Wilson, to build the second nine.

Today, the members of Alto Golf and Country Club own an 18-hole championship golf course, along with all the amenities, that was deeded to them free and clear of all debt in January 1981.

The corporation had a large sales program every summer to attract buyers to the area. They gave away free gas, television sets, dishes VCRs, free meals at a local restaurant and free lodging at a local motel.

"The sales programs were very successful," said Colleen.

Today, there are 675 homes in Alto, and 1,580 vacant lots that are owned.

Throughout the sixties and seventies, around the golf course, a beautiful subdivision was growing up with good streets and strictly enforced restrictions as to the size and makeup of the homes. That strict adherence to design standards has paid off by maintaining the natural beauty in the shadow of Sierra Blanca peak.

"We treat our Big Country with the respect it deserves," wrote Blaugrund in an early sales brochure. "You find only spacious homesites in settings of serenity ... where you breathe deep and walk tall."

"Professional master-planning from the inception ensures an orderly progression of development in keeping with natural terrain.

"Paving, utilities, all amenities are here ... engineered to contribute to the good life without disturbing the beauty of our Different World."

The InnCredible was the early gathering place for visitors and residents of Alto Village.

Alto offers scenic, challenging golf course

Alto Village is a 3,000 acre private residential community and country club developed by Don Blaugrund beginning in 1965.

Blaugrund, who died in 1990, lived to see his dream come true, and even deeded the clubhouse and golf course over to the membership in 1981.

The golf course at Alto Lakes is like two entirely different courses.

The majority of the holes on the front nine are situated on the flat mesa and there is very little rise or fall to the fairways.

Two holes on the front, the par-three fifth hole and the par four sixth hole, give you a small taste of what awaits you on the back nine.

As you make the turn onto the back nine, the golf course takes on a different characteristic. Many of the holes on the back side either play uphill or downhill, and several holes have fairways where the golfer may have the ball either above or below his feet on the second shot.

The most striking feature of the back nine is the numerous railroad ties used in the fairway around the greens by Pete Dye, who did the routing for the back side.

The front side plays to a par of 35, while the back plays to a par of 36. For the women, the front plays to a par of 35, but the back plays to a par of 37.

Chuck Dunn is the PGA golf professional at Alto Lakes Golf and Country Club. He originally hails from Alamogordo, where he played on the same high school golf team with current PGA professional golfer Brad Bryant.

A graduate of the University of New Mexico, Dunn was away from golf for several years before entering the profession which would allow him to be active in what he calls the greatest game in America: Golf.

The fact that separate designers and contractors designed and built the 18-hole course, is the reason behind the differences in the front and back nine.

Milton Coggins was retained to design the front nine in 1967. Coggins, an architect of some note, has designed golf courses in Arizona, including Pinetop and Pinetop Lakes Country Club.

Local contractors Floyd Haake and Bill McCarty did the construction on the front nine.

Blaugrund retained the golf course architectural firm of Robert Trent Jones in 1969 to design the back side. At that time, Pete Dye was employed by Robert Trent Jones and the routing plan and railroad tie bulkheads on the back side are evidence of his architectural style.

Ron Kirby was another young architect then employed by Robert Trent Jones. Kirby was also involved in the design, and the firm of Davis, Kirby and Player was responsible for the finishing the course.

Gene Wilson, an alto resident employed by Blaugrund, was responsible for the actual golf course construction.

Wilson, incidentally, built all the roads in Alto Village and still manages the water company, with his wife, Colleen.

Here's a mini-layout of what some golfers call the most challenging course in Lincoln County:

- Hole 1: 378-yards, Par 4
- Hole 2: 478 yards, Par 5
- Hole 3: 135 yards, Par 3
- Hole 4: 483 yards, Par 5
- Hole 5: 164 yards, Par 3
- Hole 6: 430 yards, Par 4
- Hole 7: 164 yards, Par 3
- Hole 8: 399 yards, Par 4
- Hole 9: 419 yards, Par 4
- Hole 10: 407 yards, Par 4
- Hole 11: 214 yards, Par 3
- Hole 12: 452 yards, Par 4
- Hole 13: 372 yards, Par 4
- Hole 14: 553 yards, Par 5
- Hole 15: 356 yards, Par 4
- Hole 16: 428 yards, Par 4
- Hole 17: 172 yards, Par 3
- Hole 18: 431 yards, Par 4

Living the good life in Alto Village...

Alto Village, just five miles from the Village of Ruidoso, offers daily living in an uncompromising world of difference.

It's the "world of difference" that developer Don Blaugrund envisioned that Alto residents enjoy today.

"There's a feeling of community," says Susan Miller, who has lived in Alto Village for 18 years. She raised her family there, and is liberal in her praise of the "good life" in the beautiful village.

Alto Lakes Golf and Country Club is the centerpiece for community events and activities.

The 18-hole championship golf course, beautiful clubhouse and restaurant and the swimming pool offer plenty of recreation for Alto residents.

Alto is a diverse community today, with a good mix of retirees and families who are still pursuing their careers.

Colleen Wilson, one of Alto's first residents, who moved there in 1965, agrees with Miller about that feeling of community. While Wilson worked with Alto developer Don Blaugrund, she raised her five children in Alto.

She says it was a great place for a family, and it still is today.

"You just feel safe here," says Wilson, and Miller shared much the same sentiments.

"It's a really wonderful place to live," stressed Wilson. Even though there still aren't a lot of small children living in Alto, the young population swells with families visiting grandparents each summer.

Neighbors know each other, wave and stop in for a visit or a cup of coffee.

When you stop in the clubhouse for a drink or dinner, you'll be meeting your friends and neighbors.

Because the development was planned with an eye toward protecting the pristine natural environment, Alto residents are likely to step out on their porch to see a small herd of deer grazing peacefully in their yard.

Alto Homeowners Association, whose president is Lee McKenna, acts as a buffer between the country club's board of directors and the membership. At monthly meetings, which include speakers on various issues and subjects, members can bring up concerns about anything affecting the village.

The meetings offer fellowship, fun and information.

The clubhouse also is the site for bridge games and tournaments and the headquarters for golf tournaments.

Alto residents have access to good water and sewer service through Alto Water Company.

"We do a lot of TLC," said Wilson, who manages the water company which is directed by a board. "If we read a meter and it seems high; we check, turn off the water and call the home owner. If there's a water break, they can take care of it."

"We take good care of our people out here."

Electric service is through Otero County Co-op, telephone service provided by GTE and cable television through Lincoln Cablevision. Zia Natural gas is now available in some areas of Alto, and will someday be offered throughout the subdivision.

Those services are delivered mainly through underground cables.

Wilson said a lot of places have butane tanks, but they're well-screened in compliance with restrictive covenants.

Alto is in the Capitan School District, and that's where residents pay school taxes. But the youngsters who live in the village have a choice between Capitan and Ruidoso schools.

Alto residents pay county taxes, but no municipal taxes. The gross receipts tax rate is 5.125 percent.

All property owners pay an invitation fee and monthly dues to the country club.

"Here's the unspoiled world only a few hours from the city."

Drive through Alto Village and experience it for yourself.
