Athletic policy report presented to school board

by DIANNE STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

After studying the responses of parents to questions about the current Ruidoso school district athletic code, a committee has come up with a slightly more lenient version.

Dub Williams, chairman of the committee, presented the proposed athletic code and results of the survey to the school board Tuesday.

The code came under scrutiny after the father of one athlete contended that it denied due process to students. He removed his son, a senior, from the school district.

The most obvious change under the proposed code is that on a first offense of using illegal drugs, alcohol or tobacco, a student will be suspended from the next athletic contest, instead of from the sport.

The athlete also will be required within 10 days to perform five hours of service in the athletic program for the coach of the team where the offense occurred.

On a second offense, the athlete would be suspended from the athletic program for the remainder of the sport. A third offense would require suspension from the athletic program for the remainder of the year.

Under the existing code, a student is suspended from a sport for a season on a first offense without appeal.

Williams said everyone seemed to have different ideas about a code,

Downs board allows 4-H animals in village

by KRISTIE SAATMANN

Two amended animal ordinances passed without a protest at the Ruidoso Downs board of trustees meeting Monday.

Students in 4-H and Future Farmers of America will be allowed to keep one livestock animal in their yard if they follow the regulations of the village on the pen size and a daily cleaning schedule.

Pam Millar, sponsor of the new 4-H club, had requested the board consider allowing the members to have animals for projects. Shawn Dennis, FFA sponsor, was also in support of the change in ordinance for students in FFA.

The previous ordinance allowed only one horse per one-eighth acre. The board had discussed changes at the last regular meeting but had a public hearing Monday to get any comments on it. No one spoke against it.

The trustees had changed the ordinance to let members have animals from April 1 to October 31, but Dennis asked if it could begin March 1 because there has been discussion of changing the date of the county fair. The kids need to have livestock a certain number of days before the fair and April 1 may not cover it, he said.

Animal control officer Tom Armstrong asked how many students or animals would be in Ruidoso Downs. Millar said it would probably be about five members at this time. She said the animal projects are good because they teach the students responsibility.

Trustees decided to allow the kids to have one animal each now until they see how well it goes. The students will be given a copy of the ordinance to know village requirements and it will also contain the pen-size requirements of FFA.

The ordinance also has provisions to make sure the project doesn't turn into a breeding operation. The animals cannot be more than one year old by the end of the project time.

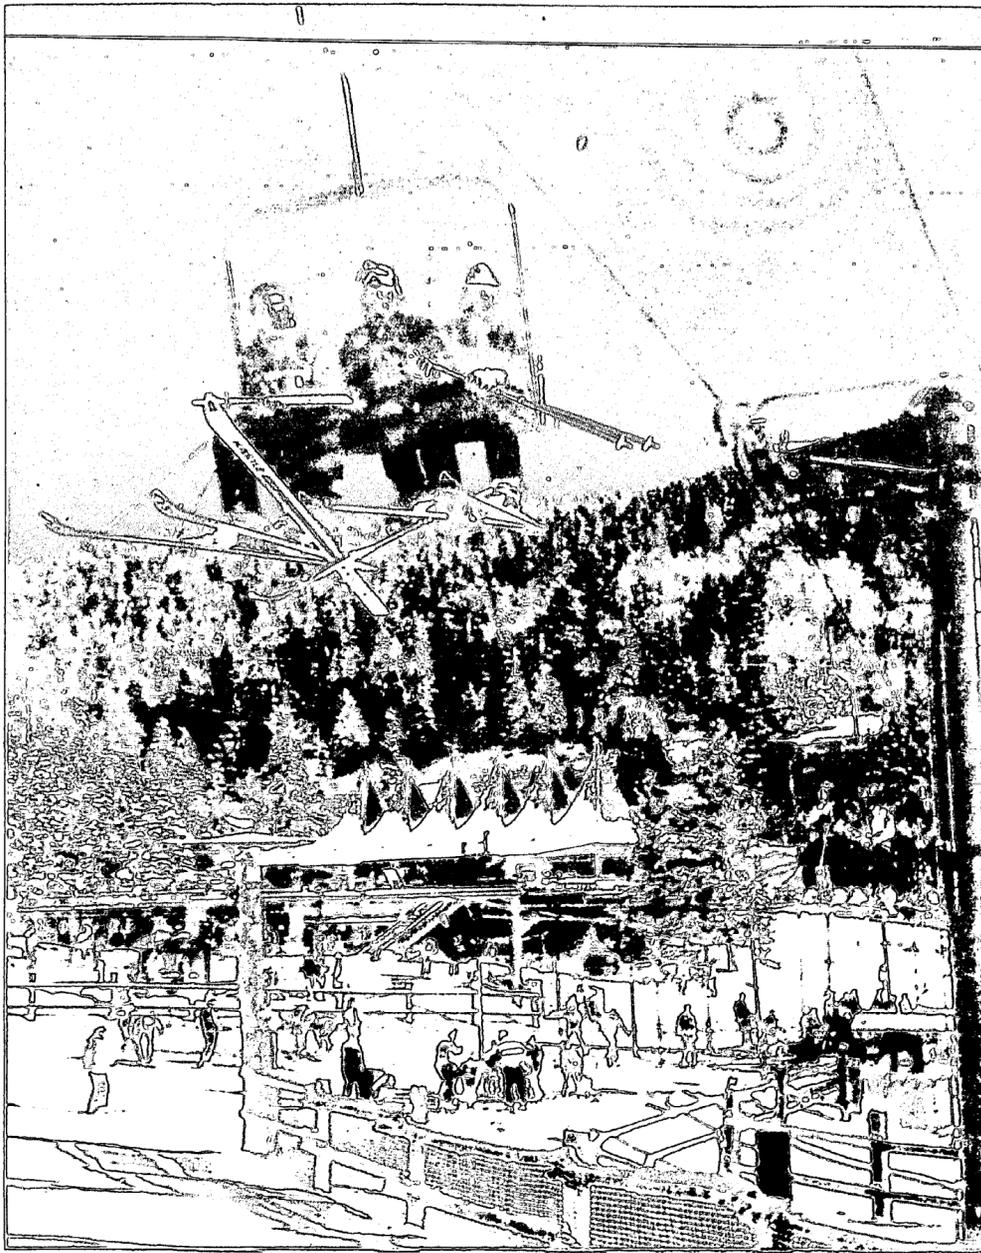

Members will need to register at the village so Armstrong can know where the pens are to check on them.

Trustee Charlotte Craig said the village needs things for youth to do and this would be a good opportunity. The group approved the amendment with the change of date to March 1.

The group also reviewed changes in the animal control ordinance at a meeting in February and had a public hearing Monday to hear any complaints. No one spoke against it and trustees made no adjustments to last month's amendments.

The ordinance includes the prices for city tags for dogs and

Council hits septic systems with fee

by CHARLES STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Sewage hit the fan for all septic tank users at Tuesday's Ruidoso Village Council meeting, as councilors appear willing to charge a $5 per month impact fee.

The monthly septic tank charge would be imposed on all septic tank owners, even though the village cannot render any service to some of those users.

Residents on septic currently paying an availability fee because a sewer line is in front of their home will be charged an additional $5.

Julie Samora, project engineer for Molzen-Corbin and Associates, explained an amended study of a wastewater facilities plan.

The study originally had costs ranging from $12 to $17 a month increases in sewage rates and a total cost of about $9-million.

In amending the study in phases, the council will concentrate on essential treatment plant modifications and improvements in an attempt to lower monthly user fees.

The village raised sewage rates about $2 last year. Village manager Ron Wicker said that raise was for operational expenses and would not affect the new round of raises.

Samora said in revising the approach to the plan, they first determined the village's greatest problems.

She said those problems were associated with the Environmental Protection Agency, the New Mexico Environment Department, plant overflows, grease flowing into the river and sludge.

The number one problem for Ruidoso is the interceptors," Samora said. "You have a tremendous amount of infiltration."

Samora said that cost was $2.4-million. Other treatment plant modifications brought the first

Smokers beware: check it out before lighting up in village buildings

by CHARLES STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Smoke, followed by a little fire, left a few cheeks burning during the Ruidoso Council meeting Tuesday.

A smoke free environment seems guaranteed for village employees, with the exception of a few areas to be designated by the village manager.

In a public hearing, the council approved Ordinance 93-4, relating to the restriction of smoking areas in village buildings.

Key sections of the ordinance read that the library, senior citizens center and the swimming pool, including the outdoor area around the pool will be off limits to smoking.

Designated smoking-permitted areas are areas of any village building designated by village manager Ron Wicker.

Civic events center director Kathleen Michelena told the council that if smoking was allowed in the center, it should be confined to the exhibit hall and the lobby area.

"I do not suggest smoking be allowed in the meeting rooms because we already have cigarette burns on the rugs. We have ashtrays outside in front of the building, and people prefer to put their cigarettes out on the wall," said Michelena. "It's a fact of life. That's the way some people are that smoke."

Michelena pointed out the problems with removing the stale smell of tobacco from meeting rooms. She said smoking has never been an issue with hooking a group.

Resident Dick Shaw, a heavy cigar smoker, spoke from the podium and told the council that no smoking should be allowed in any village owned buildings.

"There should be no smoking, period," Shaw said. "And then you will be right on line with what's happening all over the United States today."

The council approved smoking areas for the center as designated by the village manager by a five to one vote. Councilor Ron Andrews, one of only two non-smokers on the board, voted, no.

Councilor Jerry Shaw, who doesn't smoke, was still burning from a village department head meeting where she was allegedly singled out as a trouble maker by the village manager.

"Our employees were told if they talk to a councilor, they have to report it to the village manager. That upset me terribly," Shaw said. "I will continue to talk to employees. I hope to never get any of them in trouble."

Shaw said there were other things said, that she preferred not to discuss.

Wicker said he had talked to two councilors in his office about the staff meeting in which Shaw was referring.

Wicker, apparently misunderstanding Shaw's statement, denied allegations Shaw didn't make.

"I think it's important that everyone understand there was no dictate to the department heads that they could not contact or talk with council members. That's totally wrong."

Shaw never said anything about employees not being allowed to talk to councilors.

He also confirmed Shaw's statement.

"What I asked them to do, was to keep me informed of their (councilors) official business with council members ... There's contact by city employees almost on a daily basis by some members of the council, and I feel its important that I know about this."

In a related matter, Shaw said she was against the policy change by Wicker that charged for research in addition to copies made for public information.

She said the policy change should have been brought before the board for discussion and vote. She was against arbitrary charges by the village manager and said it amounted to double payment by the taxpayer.

The issue arose after The Ruidoso News wrote several articles regarding the questionable practices of village manager Ron Wicker. Some of those practices included allowing employees to trade village equipment, insisting that inventory lists not be kept and implementing gag rules for the press.

Councilor J.D. James asked the district attorney to investigate some of those practices and other allegations.

During a recent interview with Wicker, he was asked if there had been a trade of village equipment at the Sierra Blanca Regional Airport. He told The News he would check. The following day, he sent village attorney Patricia Ortiz to The News with a bill for $25 and a note saying that The News had to pay.

The village also back charged $25 to The News for an employee payroll request.

Shaw made a motion for the village to return to the previous policy of 25 cents per copy, 50 cent per researched copy. James and Councilor Barbara Duff agreed with Shaw.

Councilors Ron Andrews, Bill Karn and Frank Cummins voted in support of Wicker setting his own charges for public information.

Mayor Victor Alonso broke the tie, voting to support Wicker's policy over Shaw's recommendation.

With unfixed charges on public information, Wicker's new policy is expected to greatly reduce The News' ability to report or substantiate public information.

The News is looking into possible legal action against the village to ensure the citizen's right to know.

In other action, the council decided to halt an extensive civic events center discussion on operational policies and the facilities rental agreements because of time constraints.

Resolution 93-6 will be continued and completed at the next council meeting.

Before the resolution was discussed, Councilor Andrews declared a possible conflict of interest because of his personal use of the center for promotions and asked that he not be allowed to vote. The action was noted by the mayor and the council honored Andrews' request by asking him not to vote.

Civic Events Center director Kathleen Michelena reported eight new conferences booked since her last report to the council two weeks ago.

Crown jewel of the booking is the Seven Indian Nation Pow Wow that Michelena said would bring thousands of visitors into the community. Michelena said she is working with Mescalero officials on that booking.

Also Tuesday, the village manager announced that the village had purchased six undeveloped lots, a pocket in the Grindstone property, for $3,100. The purchase was approved from a recent closed meeting.

Athletic

ranging from having none at all to mirroring what already existed.

The district received 128 responses from parents. Another three came in late.

"The nine members went back and we came up with what we consider a code with which everyone can live, coaches, parents and students," Williams said. "It came up more than once that we don't need an athletic code, just go by the rules already in effect for the whole student body."

"But I feel being an athlete is special. They represent the school and community."

One thing is imperative, Williams said.

"If this code is not enforced consistently by all coaches, then it would be better to have no code at all."

"A couple of things we thought were very important we put in the code, because students and academics come first."

Students must meet the standards of the New Mexico Activities Association before they can participate.

"We put that in the rules, too," he said. "I don't like to paint people into a corner. The smaller number of rules, the more easily they can be followed."

The other rules listed in the code require athletes to stay clean and groomed "in a way that will not create a distraction to my teammates or opponents. During athletic contests, (hair) will be kept in a manner that will not cause a rules violation or present a safety hazard."

The rules also state the athlete will set a positive example at school, at home and in the area of competition. That section appears to extend jurisdiction of the rules beyond just the school grounds and school activities.

No more than 10 absences for an extracurricular activity would be allowed during one semester.

If the athlete "neglects" the standards outlined, including grades, the rules provide that parents, coaches and the athlete will confer.

In the survey tally turned in by Williams, a heavy majority from 97 to 118 respondents "strongly agreed" or "agreed" with most portions of the existing code.

But the margin narrowed significantly on the section dealing with first offense suspension, subsequent offenses and calling an athlete an accessory if the student has knowledge of a violation and doesn't remove himself/herself from the situation.

At that point, the numbers of those agreeing or strongly agreeing dropped to 79 and those "disagreeing" or "strongly disagreeing" went up to 40. Seven had no opinion.

About the same ratio prevailed on the section that states if a student fails to follow the instructions of a coach, he or she will be subject to the same disciplinary action as the previous drug and alcohol violations.

The school board will study the proposed policy and confer with coaches.

In other business, the school board:

—welcomed new members Jim Varnadore and James Paxton to the board, and elected Ron Hemphill as president, Mike Morris as vice president and Susan Lutterman as secretary. Varnadore and Paxton already had been sworn into office by a State Supreme Court judge last Friday.

—heard a report from eighth grade teacher Rhonda Snowden about the success of a Writing Across the Curriculum program at Ruidoso Middle School.

The program stresses that students use writing skills throughout life and therefore, should be encouraged to develop good writing skills in all subjects. Lesson plans in the form of Guido's Tip Sheet, have been prepared by teacher and novelist Steve Havill. They are distributed to all teachers.

Student winners are recognized in schoolwide competitions and a book of winners' writings is published each month, also by Havill.

Creative new approaches to gain the interest of students and teachers are being introduced, Snowden said. Last month, students were asked to write humorous epitaphs.

—heard a report from Dr. Arlene Brown and district health nurse Terrie Gillespie about the school based health center.

When it comes to health care, Gillespie pointed out that adolescents are the most underserved group with the most needs and health risks, including eating too much junk food, engaging in sexual experiences, and exposure to drug and alcohol.

Health centers within schools are the best ways to reach students, she said. Screening also detects early signs of chronic conditions.

The center currently is open from noon to 3 p.m. a week at the high school and middle school. All information is confidential. While 128 student encounters were recorded from September through January, in February alone, the number has hit 70.

"I think it means the students are getting use to the clinics because they know we'll be there," Brown said.

Gillespie said they would like to see the counseling aspect of the clinic expanded, along with more space and hours. A portable unit at the school would help preserve confidentiality, she said.

—instituted a new agenda item that provides for public comment from the floor, at the suggestion of the new members.

Everything but personnel could be discussed, Superintendent Mike Gladden said.

One parent said, "It should have been that way all along."

Lutterman said access to the floor should have been obtainable at any time by requesting a place on the agenda.

"Should is the key word," the parent said.

cats, which ranges from $3 to $10. It also includes a suggestion by trustee Judy Miller for a senior citizens discount of half the cost because many older people have only their pets for companionship.

Dogs riding or sitting in the back of pickups must be restrained, according to the ordinance.

Mayor Joe Hayhurst reminded the group that a rabies shot clinic for animals will be from 1-3 p.m. Saturday at the Ruidoso Downs Fire Station. The cost of the shot will be $5 and all other shots will be available at a reduced price. City licenses will also be sold at the clinic at half price.

Trustees approved the use of the Downs senior citizens center for the village auxiliary arts and crafts fair during Labor Day weekend. Village clerk Leann Weibrecht said the group would like to use the center and have a large tent beside it to use as well for the exhibits.

Last year about 150 artists had booths at the event, which was at the Ruidoso Downs Sports Theater parking lot. This year it will have about the same number of people, and it will be done on a first come-first served basis. The reserve police officers will also help the auxiliary with the parking, since it will be a smaller area.

Shirley Fitzner, president of the auxiliary, said the group enjoys doing a project that can help the village. Many people look forward to coming to the fair each year, she said.

Parking will be a problem this year but people should be able to park in other areas of the village and walk in, she said. She also commended the reserve police program for its willingness to help.

Fitzner also reminded the group the auxiliary would like to do an Easter egg hunt around the senior center for the children in the community. A date has not been set, but she will get more details to the trustees as they decide.

Trustees also discussed charging a $5 fee to Downs residents who have a septic tank to help earn funds to repair the waste water treatment plant because the septic waste will eventually go there. The $5 will be charged in addition to the $9 flat user rate.

Clerk Weibrecht said she has been in contact with the company that is doing the estimates on the cost of the repairs to the plant and the total cost for Ruidoso Downs will be about $56,000. They would have to begin making monthly payments on that in 1994.

She said one question she asked them, but hasn't got an answer for yet, is whether that fee could be charged to people in areas that there are no sewer lines.

Weibrecht said she can see justification for charging those people who have access to lines but use septic tanks instead, but where lines aren't available they don't really have a choice.

The total charge of $14 will be slightly higher than the charge for regular sewer users. The trustees raised the rate for sewer users to include 50 cents that can be set aside to help pay for the repairs.

Mayor Hayhurst told the group if they have any ideas on how to raise funds for the monthly payment, they should let him or Weibrecht know so they can look into it.

The board did approve a resolution to allow the joint-use board of the plant to look for financing to also help pay for repairs that have been mandated by the Environmental Protection Agency.

The trustees approved a mobile home variance for Frank Rodela's 1982 home, which barely missed the 10-year deadline of the village's ordinance. They also accepted a bid on a 1974 fire truck by Jim's Truck and Equipment from Grand Prairie, Texas. The bid was for $2,556.

The village employees will have a new dental plan, Delta Dental, which would allow them to use any dentist in the state. The current dental plan only allows them to use two area dentists and neither are accepting new clients.

It will cost the village an extra $2,064 and employees will have an extra $2.96 taken out of checks each payday. Police chief Will Hogard and maintenance supervisor Dennis Riddle said their people are willing to pay a little more to have dental insurance they can use.

Weibrecht said dental insurance is optional and qualified employees can get on at any time. She said they could also possibly get vision insurance through the company later on if the village had the money to do it.

Also on the agenda was a request by Robert Beavers, a Downs resident, to trim the trees on village land that is right beside his roping arena. Hayhurst said Beavers wants to put bleachers around it for spectators.

Riddle suggested the group consider the fact that the village property line runs through part of Beavers arena, while Beavers has a small piece of property near the village's dirt pit that it could use. He said they may want to talk to Beavers to see if he would want to trade.

It may require a survey, but it would be beneficial to the village because it is good soil, he said. Trustees decided to table the request until they can speak to Beavers.

Council

phase cost to $3-million. Samora cautioned that her figures were projections.

Asked if reduced flows into the plant would mean lower costs, Samora said reduced flows into the plant would not necessarily convert to a decrease, because of the fixed operational costs in running the plant.

Regional wastewater treatment plant costs are split between Ruidoso and Ruidoso Downs, with Ruidoso paying 88.8 percent of the cost.

Samora said fees were based on 6,000 users.

"Straight across the board, which you are not going to do, would be $4.75."

She recommended a reduction due to commodity, charging a fee per 1,000 gallons over a minimum.

Samora said the village's charge to the septic tank dumper doesn't come close to the cost of the village to treat that sewage.

She then posed the possibility of charging a monthly fee for use of the septic tank.

Councilor J.D. James said if a resident pays a $5 fee for septic tank use, the dumping fee for that load should be waived at the plant. He said he would object to paying twice for the service.

Wicker said the customer in the village would still have to pay the hauling fee. He said he didn't know how much money the dumper would credit a resident.

Alonso said some people within 100 feet of sewer lines are paying an access fee.

"What you're saying is, everybody now, within the village will be paying a septic tank fee," Alonso said.

Samora said 40 percent of the revenues could come from septic tank fees.

"You have a lot of residents not on sewer, although the sewer is readily available," Samora said.

"This is going to fix that," Alonso said.

Councilor Ron Andrews asked if residents with lines in front of their house would have to pay an availability fee plus the $5. Samora said yes.

"I would think that you would want that fee to motivate the people to hook on," Alonso said.

According to the village utility office, the village charges from $100 to $125 for a tap fee. A licensed plumber then completes the hookup for an unknown cost, depending on each job.

Samora said with a $5 per month septic tank fee and a charge for large seasonal users, the additional charge to finance the first phase could be as low as 90 cents to regular customers on village sewer lines.

Wicker was skeptical about the 90 cents projection.

"Our current rate isn't paying the operational maintenance expense on the plant now," Wicker said. "When we get into really figuring costs, I think our figures are going to be a little bit different than 90 cents."

The council then passed a resolution to authorize the pursuit of funding from the state revolving loan program for certain improvements to the regional wastewater treatment plant and collection lines for the village.

In other action, the council approved:

—a request to move an appeal of planning commission denial for rezoning from commercial to multifamily in the Camelot area to the March 30 council meeting.

—a budget adjustment request by Jim Stover to allow Emergency Medical Services to put a down payment on a new ambulance.

Stover said the adjustment was made possible because the service is many more calls ahead this year. He also said it has been three years since a rate increase, and he expects the hospital board to approve about a seven percent increase for services.

Stover said the lease purchase of the ambulance has state approval.

—an update of the pre-application for the crosswind runway as proposed in the Sierra Blanca Regional Airport capital improvement program.

According to Lloyd Wayne, airport manager, the pre-application was submitted with the original airport construction plans and was good for a period of three years.

Wayne said he contacted Representative John Underwood regarding the runway and he has a bill before the House asking for a severance tax (mining tax) appropriation which will provide the village with its share of the project.

—the village manager's recommended changes in the organizational chart of the village. Councilor Shaw voted nay.

—a request for money out of the chamber of commerce budget by director Joan Bailey for an advertising schedule. Councilor Andrews voted nay.

Consent agenda items approved were:

—authorization of reimbursement to MRS Committee for travel and telephone expenses.

—a grant agreement for airport improvements.

—request to open legal notices on request for bids.

Negotiating team splits over "protocol"

by DIANNE STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

The two Lincoln County Commissioners picked to negotiate a settlement of a federal lawsuit against the Bureau of Land Management, may not be on speaking terms by the time they arrive in Santa Fe.

In Monday's edition of The Ruidoso News, Commissioner Wilton Howell spoke about the board's decision to negotiate an end to the two-year battle over the proposed bureau (BLM) acquisition of 1,115 acres of private land along the Rio Bonito. A motion for a stay in the lawsuit that was filed late last year had been entered three days earlier.

Howell is to be one-third of the negotiating team. Newly hired county attorney Dan Bryant and Commissioner Stirling Spencer comprise the other two-thirds when they meet with the BLM March 25.

Spencer contacted The News Wednesday, upset about what he considered a breach of protocol on Howell's part.

"I take great exception with the divulgence of Mr. Howell to the newspaper on the issue of the Rio Bonito-BLM land swap," Spencer said. "It's inconsistent with my character to publicly criticize or chastise a fellow board member in a public forum, but in this case, I feel it is imperative."

"When the county is in litigation and there are designated representatives for public address, thus to focus, not to detract or impede, or more importantly expose the citizens of Lincoln County to less than an achievable position for their protection; and one for self service, has discussions while negotiations are in process, I feel a great disservice has been done to the citizens of Lincoln County."

"I don't feel Mr. Howell has ever understood the gravity of the lawsuit and depth as to its implication for the future of all, not just agricultural oriented producers of this county, in his shoot from the hip antics and sensationalism."

This whole issue in the long term affects the welfare and customs of Lincoln County residents."

Spencer said that in a closed-to-the-public session on the lawsuit, members agreed that Chairman Monroy Montes would be the spokesperson.

He said they also agreed "that until all aspects of this case or any case, especially when negotiation is taking place, that the points of negotiation not be edited until culmination, not to pre-negotiate the position of the county before sitting at the table with the opposing party, as has Mr. Howell, so that the citizenry can be assured of the strongest position. "The board of commissioners agreed (in closed session) not to go public with any terms of the negotiation until further conferences with attorney, client and the defendants took place, other than the public proclamation that took place after the last regular commission meeting in Ruidoso."

"This is all in accord with the law on lawsuits and negotiations."

Howell's remarks to The News occurred after a motion for a stay in the federal case had been filed last Friday.

"Still, he's already discussing negotiation points, what he feels some of the points will be," Spencer said. "Well, you never want the opposing party to have any idea what those points will be, specifically until you sit at the table and have your stuff together, although these points are consistent to the majority of points we've had before."

He acknowledged that the commission's position on issues connected to the swap are well-known, but the BLM doesn't know if something has changed in closed session.

"You don't want them to know," Spencer said. "Maybe, you're going to tack on an amendment, because they beat you on another issue."

"I have found it very hard to work with Mr. Howell and his sensational, self-edifying antics to this point. I guess he has a private agenda other than that of commissioning for Lincoln County. If this is his commission style, it surely is not my style, but he has his own style."

Spencer said he also is bothered by rumors that Howell has been conducting his own private negotiations with officials of the Lincoln Valley Land Company (the private land owner now dropped from the suit) and BLM officials.

"I have heard and will ask him to his face in the future, rumors that for the last four months or so, he was in negotiations as a commissioner with Lincoln Valley Land Company, particularly Mr. (Ron) Green (on) suggestions of positions of the county without joint commission discussions," Spencer said. "You just don't do these things."

Spencer, a rancher and engineer, took exception to what he considered Howell characterizing his position as exclusively pro-ranching.

"I take opposition with Mr. Howell's interpretation of my total ranchers-only interest. If he were possibly more astute, he could review the record on several issues as to my position for total representation of this county," Spencer said.

The negotiating team has no authorization to sign anything, Spencer noted.

"Is it proper for Mr. Howell at this point to say, if an agreement is reached in Santa Fe under discussion, that it will be signed?" Spencer asked rhetorically. "As I understand it, the agreement must be brought back to the full commission for ratification. I would never take that upon my shoulders without bringing it back in a timely manner to the commission. Every member has equal strength."

Contacted Wednesday, Howell said that his remark about a negotiated agreement being signed before he left Santa Fe wasn't meant to be taken literally.

"What I meant to say, my real point was, the commission felt we (Spencer and Howell) were the two naturals to be involved because if we could agree and agree with BLM, when we left, we had a good chance of selling that to the commission itself," Howell said.

"I didn't mean literally that something would be signed by just two of the commissioners."

Howell said it's no secret that he is not comfortable with the concept of closed sessions, although he realizes they are necessary at times.

"I don't believe that anything I said (in the article) compromised the county's position," he said. "I didn't see anything wrong in the statement that I was seeking an agreement. Maybe, I should have said 'we' to save people's feelings. I want to assure everybody that I have the best interest of Lincoln County at heart in any statements I make at meetings or in the newspaper."

Howell contended there was no mention of using only one spokesperson during the last closed session March 2.

"And if there had been, I wouldn't have gone along with it," he said. "I was elected as a commissioner of Lincoln County and my district and I will continue to operate that way."

He does not represent special interest groups such as the Friends of the West, he said.

"We won't know the outcome until we get through this negotiation and determine whether we can come up with something workable for all sides," Howell said. "I would not be nearly so vocal on this issue if the Friends of the West and other groups fighting the BLM so ferociously would pick up the legal fees. In my opinion, the longer we continue, the more money we will spend and some services in the county will have to suffer as a result."

"Take your pick where the cuts will come from: senior citizens, the road department, the sheriff's department. It will have to come from somewhere to not increase taxes and I sure don't want to increase taxes over this issue."

"I'd like to remind the people of the county that I'm not the person who got us into this fight and was not sitting on the commission when the decision was made to take on the BLM."

As far as negotiating independently, "I assure you, I have not been negotiating for the county or the man in the moon," he said. "I have had discussions with BLM officials and the land owner, along with the residents of the county and of the area, trying to find some mutual ground."

Spencer said he wanted to set the record straight on some other points made by Howell in the article, including:

—the BLM did not institute the memorandum of understanding agreeing to eight concessions required by the commission.

"It was directed to be instituted by the last commission," Spencer said. "But in their final version sent to the commission, it was not accepted because of the non-guarantee of the tax base transfer issue (disposal of 35,000 acres of federal land in the county back to private ownership)."

—the BLM officials acknowledged by reference in their environmental assessment portion of the record of decision that the Lincoln County land use plan was in place and a valid instrument.

"There was some discussion (by Howell in Monday's article) regarding developing a good land use plan," Spencer said. "It may not be the best. You may not have the best car, but as long as it rolls, it works. There's no reason not to fine tune it and do better, but you chisel away at your position when you say it's not a plan, it's not this, it's not that. No one knows until it goes before a judge. When they recognize it on the other side, I'd say it's a pretty good."

While Spencer said he feels it's right for the public to know "the goings-on" of the commission, he pointed out that the state statutes and past experience recognize that when a commission or governmental entity is under negotiations for the best position of their constituents, members "don't divulge that litigation until it's in a court and done by the full commission."

"What I'm trying to say is that there are many times when people on boards can walk out and say and do and god knows, what we think, but you just don't."

"People in these positions (commissioners) have to know that these are the pressures they're going to be under and they should have the background to understand that."

"No one in the world would like to see this issue over more than me, but you can't let people wear you down. You have to keep a level head."

Police chief reminds drivers to obtain current registration

NOTICE

During the past year the Ruidoso area has enjoyed an influx of new permanent residents and businesses.

Ruidoso Police Chief Richard Swenor reminds everyone that under New Mexico Registration Laws, anyone using a motor vehicle within the state for a period in excess of 180 days must obtain a New Mexico registration, license plates and driver's license.

Swenor said some exceptions apply for full-time college students and out-of-state businesses.

"Additionally, aside from residency requirements, anyone gainfully employed within the State for 90 days or more within a 60-day period shall be presumed to be a resident of this state and must obtain a New Mexico registration, license plate and driver's license," said Swenor.

All motor vehicle owners/drivers should be aware that failure to maintain current vehicle registrations, license plates, driver's licenses and insurance coverage could be of a serious nature if stopped for a traffic violation, or worse yet, involved in an accident, he continued.

"Remember, driving a motor vehicle is not a right; it is a privilege, and with privilege comes responsibility" cautioned Swenor.

"Please stay current, drive defensively and use your seat belts/restraints all of the time!"

Spanish students plan some practice south of the border

Puerta Vallarta, Mexico, is getting closer and closer for Ruidoso High School students, but they still need a little more money to make their educational trip this spring.

The Spanish Club students will be out in the community in the next few weeks to search for donations and contributions from organizations and businesses to be able to make the trip.

The group of 11 students will be going April 10-17, along with club sponsor Kevin Clawson. Many of the students are in Clawson's Spanish III course and are anxious to experience the culture of Puerta Vallarta.

The group's drawing for a Valentine's Dinner at Cattle Baron's earned it $720. Barbara Graham was the winner of the dinner.

If anyone would like to contribute to the trip, they can call Clawson at the high school at 258-4910.

Track team tackles Texas relays

The hurdles are out on the track and the high jump pit is in place for the outdoor track season at Ruidoso.

The Warrior boys and girls track teams will be competing in their first outdoor meet of the season on Friday and Saturday at Odessa in the West Texas Relays. The event is billed as the biggest meet in Texas and will feature the talent of 1,600 high school athletes.

Coach Ronny Maskew said although the meet is large there are always a few Warriors who do well at the competition. He said it is a good experience for the kids to run against some of the best athletes in Texas.

Last year Ruidoso was the only team from New Mexico to participate. This will be the first outdoor meet for the Warriors, while it will be about the fourth for many of the Texas teams.

"I think the kids will compete well at the meet. We are looking forward to seeing where we are before we start with the New Mexico meets. We need to see what still needs to be worked on," Maskew said.

The girls team has about 20 members out at this time, while the boys team will have 30 to 35 members after players from the basketball team, which just finished its season, come out after spring break.

Maskew said he has some young tracksters out that will likely come along and do well. He said he thinks the distance runners will also do well.

The girls field events, such as the discus, shot and high jump, should also do well as the season progresses. The Warriors are returning Monica Martinez who won the state championship in discus last year. Several other girls who qualified for state in events will be back again this year as well.

The boys field events still need a little work, but several shot and discus throwers are developing well.

The sprinters should progress well, too, as they get more running in. Maskew said the relay teams also could become strong later this season as they may need to adjust the runners.

The next meet for the Warrior teams will be the Rose Relays in Tularosa on Saturday, March 20. The events begin at 9 a.m. and the Warriors have put in some excellent performances at this meet before, even though it is the weekend following spring break for the school.

The Warriors will host just one track meet this season, the Ruidoso Invitational on April 17. The district competition will be May 8 at Las Cruces with Deming as the host.

Members of the girls track team prepare for the first meet of the season on Friday and Saturday at the West Texas Relays in Odessa. About 20 girls are out for the program and Coach Ronny Maskew said they will be strong in the field events.

The boys track team will be looking for another great year, after taking the district title last year. The Warriors have several young team members as well as some veterans who Coach Maskew will be looking to for some good performances.

Teams shoot for title tonight

The top teams of the Little League basketball program will be fighting for the title in their divisions tonight at the Ruidoso High School gymnasium.

In the first contest at 5 p.m. the J.F. Construction team with a 7-1 record will meet the Texas Club team, also at 7-1, for the title of the fourth and fifth grade girls division. The fourth and fifth grade boys will follow at 6 p.m. In that game United New Mexico Bank, 6-2, will battle the Hawks with a 7-1 record.

Ole Taco will take its 6-2 record up against McGee Construction who has a 7-1 record. This game for the sixth and seventh grade girls will begin at 7 p.m.

Ed Turner Agency has had a fantastic season and will have an undefeated, 8-0, record for the title match. They will be up against Rainbow Carpet with a 5-3 record.

All participants in the Little League basketball program will receive trophies at the game.

Organizers of the league invite the whole community out for a night of family fun. The concession stand will be open and during halftime of each game there will be a money shoot. Participants can earn $10 for a shot from the free throw line, $20 for a three-point shot and $100 for a half-court shot.

Lana Dolan of the Laker Girls team, sponsored by Culligan Water, pulls up to take a shot at the basket in a recent Little League game against the Dunkers, sponsored by First National Bank. The Little League championships will be today beginning at 5 p.m. and each of the team members will receive a trophy at the event. The whole community is invited to come out and watch the teams play.

State Game and Fish modifies game trapping regulations

Although wildlife enthusiasts would like to see trapping abolished outright, modifications recently adopted by the State Game and Fish Department regulations may eliminate some of the worst suffering and help protect domestic pets.

Bill Montoya, director of Game and Fish, told The Ruidoso News that steel-jaw traps with jagged teeth are no longer allowed and others have been limited in size.

Water set traps for muskrats and beavers can be no larger than 12-inches. The traps drown the victims. Land set traps for coyotes, bobcats, raccoons and foxes cannot have an open jaw set of more than 1/2 inches.

"That's so if you are walking along in cowboy boots, a trap would present no real problem," Montoya said.

Traps must be checked every 24 hours to remove the animals or their carcasses, he said.

"That's almost unenforceable like the speed limit," he said. "But one way our officers can check if they know where traps are being laid is to trap them, then come back the next day and see if they are reset. If they are, you know the trapper is checking everyday.

"They should be out there, because they lose money on a trap that's sprung. Trappers have got to clean up their own act."

Another regulation dictates the minimum distance from a trail to decrease the possibility of injuring a dog on a leash, he said.

"There's not much we can do about a free roaming dog," Montoya said. If a dog is caught in a steel jaw trap, the owner should be able to release it. That was not always the case with a larger size trap or one with teeth, he said. The department has taken a negative stance toward traps with teeth for years, he said.

Some people may be repulsed by the idea of trapping wild animals, but Montoya said he paid for his college tuition by trapping. In those days, bobcat pelts went for several hundred dollars. Today, a raccoon pelt may sell for $7.

Jan Tracy, a local wildlife conservationist, wrote to Governor Bruce King after reading a column in The Ruidoso News by Richard McCord and learning that 70 civilized countries and 82 American states require a daily check of traps.

McCord was reacting to an earlier decision of the State Game Commission to allow trappers to check their traps every two days.

Tracy received a letter back from Ray Powell, special assistant to the governor.

Powell wrote about the new trapping regulations and then mentioned a statement he recently had read:

"It is attributed to Baba Dioum, a Senegalese conservationist. It is as follows: 'In the end, we will conserve only what we love, we will love only what we understand and we will understand only what we are taught.'"

"As a botanist and veterinarian, I think that the role of an environmentally conscious constituency is critical for any legitimate progress."

New librarian is on duty at Eastern New Mexico University-Ruidoso

by DIANNE STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

His dream for retirement years centered around moving out West.

But Steve Torma arrived a little earlier than he expected. He started work February 8 as the first full-time librarian at Eastern New Mexico University-Ruidoso.

"I've lived in northeast Minnesota all of my life," Torma said during a recent interview.

"I had done a lot of research about the area, thinking ahead to my retirement in 20 years," he said. To become more knowledgeable, he subscribed to The Ruidoso News.

"The first paper I received had an ad for a college librarian. I thought, what a coincidence."

public library director in Gilbert, Minnesota, and was on his way to New Mexico.

"I like the four seasons, the climate in general. If you want snow, you can go to the mountain and if you want it warm, you can drive to the desert," Torma said.

The terrain in the Ruidoso area also appeals to him, although to indulge his interest in cross-country skiing, Torma said he probably will head to Cloudcroft.

Torma earned a bachelor of science degree in history from the University of Minnesota in Duluth, and is working toward his master's degree in information media (library science to the layman) and audio-visual instruction.

He also received a media generalist certification from St. Cloud State University School of Graduate Studies.

His other credentials include certifications from the Minnesota Department of Education as a librarian and media generalist from kindergarten through twelfth grade, and in history for seventh through twelfth grades.

From 1990-91, he worked as a reference assistant for the College of St. Scholastica in Duluth. Before that position, he was resource center director for Albrook High School in Saginaw (1986-88) and resource center director for Orr School in Orr from 1980-86.

Torma said he always has been an avid reader and his friends thought he would do well in information services. An aunt and a first cousin preceded him in the field.

Although he has only been on the job a few weeks, he has been developing goals with Ruidoso center director Dr. Jim Miller that will be accomplished in stages.

"One of the main things I have to do is develop a collection of print and non-print material, since I'm the first full-time librarian," Torma said. "A request list went out to all staff members for input. There are no guarantees, but everyone's requests will be considered."

He also has been working with the librarian at the main university campus in Portales.

Of course, the ultimate goal is to have a Ruidoso university campus with an independent library.

Currently, through a cooperative arrangement with the Ruidoso School Board, the university uses high school classrooms and library in the evenings for their courses.

Torma said the library is open from 5 p.m. to 9:30 p.m. Monday through Thursday. The public is welcome to come in and read, but only university students may check out material.

Torma said he's been pleased with the reception he's received since arriving in Ruidoso.

"The people are great," he said. "They're friendly, helpful and courteous. I called my brother and told him. He may be coming about in another 2 1/2 years."

STEVE TORMA

Hot racers compete

by YVONNE LANELLI
Special to The News

When is a race not a race? When it's the Hot Chocolate Cup, answer Shorty, Daffy and Smiley.

Sunday's Cup may have looked like a race, with young skiers speeding around balloon-fastened poles in the snow. It may have sounded like a race with some grown-up saying, "Ready, set, go!" while crowds cheered at the bottom. But if it was a race, then everybody won, because every child wore home a bright red ribbon, a fancy certificate and a big smile.

This fun event finished the popular Hot Tot, Hot Shot, Red Hot children's ski program that local parents praise.

"This is the best program combining skills and fun," said Ron Anderson. His stepson, Cody Jones, is a Hot Shot and his daughters, Sage and Leaf, are Hot graduates.

"What a good idea — skiing with someone the same size and ability," offered Dede McMasters, whose daughter, Amanda, joined the program this year.

For the past nine weeks local youngsters, ages four through 10 met with instructors Smiley, Shorty and Daffy (really Mark Lively, Sally Canning and Dave Anderson) for "safety, fun and learning," explained Carla Grover, Ski Apache's Children's Ski School supervisor and Hot program originator.

Grover's concept of teaching children to ski and love skiing is simple: If they're having fun, they're learning.

Awards at the "post-race" party proved that. Smiley commended his three Hot Tots, Stephan Seigmann (best racer's tuck), Tucker Davis

Hot Shot Tucker Davis gets his racing bib from instructor Sally Canning.

(most improved) and Peter Zagone, who didn't get to race Sunday.

Short and Daffy presented a long list of awards to their combined group of Red Hots and Hot Shots: "Best Racing Style" Aaron Goeller, "Best All-Around" Patrick Browder, "Best Leader" Skye Steed, "Hardest Worker" Amanda McMasters, "Most Determined Skier" J.B. Peebles, "Most Improved" Jeannette Zagone and Calla Wimberley, "Best in Powder" Sydney Davis, "Best Demos" Cody Jones who celebrated his birthday Sunday, "Best in Bumps" Jesse Anderson, "Best Attendance" Skye Steed, "Most Falls on a Bad Day" Cody Jones, "Best Fall in the Crud" Jesse Anderson and "Most Classic Fall with Acrobatic Style" Sydney Davis.

Classy awards for a classy bunch of kids.

For information on next year's Hot Tots, Hot Shots and Red Hots, contact Grover at Ski Apache Ski School, 336-4357.

Instead of walking down the aisle, Rikki and James road a chairlift. "Now I really have cold feet," quipped Rikki, who carried a fir bough bouquet. Best man Sean Rubichaux and maid of honor Patricia Alisau look on (picture at top) as Rikki and James pledge their troth. Minister Jimmy Sportsman (above), from the Gateway Church of Christ in Ruidoso, blesses the rings before pronouncing the couple man and wife. And then (left) James kissed his bride, whose musical garter played "Here Comes the Bride."

Couple exchanges wedding vows on mountain at Ski Apache

by YVONNE LANELLI
Special to The News

"Goin' to the Chapel and We're Gonna Get Ma-a-rried..."

So sang serenading skiers as they escorted a Texas couple to the face of Sierra Blanca Trail at the top of Ski Apache Tuesday.

There, beneath the cathedral-like peak of Sierra Blanca, Fredericka "Rikki" Renee Bess became the bride of James Michael Satterfield, both of Conroy, Texas, in a ceremony both touching and amusing, informal and traditional.

"We decided last year on a ski trip here that this was where we wanted to get married. It's so beautiful and perfect," explained the radiant bride.

"But we couldn't have done it without Ruth and Dick," she added.

Ruth Strohshine of Ski Apache and Dick Weber of Shadow Mountain Lodge made many of the arrangements for the Houston-based couple, even finding a skiing minister, Jimmy Sportsman of the Gateway Church of Christ. And in the end, the wedding was as perfect as any couple could dream.

"Gee, I really love you and we're gonna get ma-a-rried..."

As James escorted Rikki — not down the aisle but up a chairlift — Rikki joked, "We really have cold feet!"

She wore a multi-colored maroon one-piece ski suit that set off a white lace garter.

"Poke the pillow," she said with a giggle, and the musical garter played, "Here comes the Bride."

James chose an elegant black one-piece ski suit. And, yes, it was a white wedding; the mountain wore white and a wispy veil of clouds.

As Brother Sportsman concluded the ceremony with the traditional, "You may kiss the bride," friends and skiers who'd congregated at the entrance to Apache Bowl pelted the newlyweds with untraditional snowballs instead of rice.

Then, hand in hand, they skied off into the sunset, down Apache Bowl toward their future.

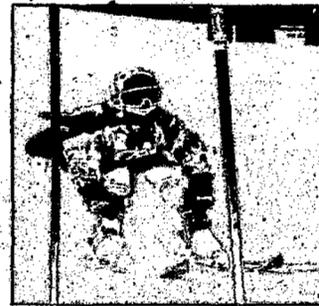

"And we're goin' to the Chapel — oops, mountain of love!"

PRACTICE MAKES PERFECT FOR SKI TEAM

Advertising professionals take part in 17th annual Media Race

More than 120 media skiers from southwest New Mexico and West Texas visited Ruidoso Saturday to compete in the 17th annual El Paso Media Race at Ski Apache.

Representatives from radio and television stations, as well as advertising agencies, participated in the race sponsored by Ski Apache and the El Paso, Texas, chapter of the Advertising Federation.

Winning the fastest team award was the crew from Las Cruces TV Cable. John Mulderick of KOIG in El Paso won the fastest individual award, while KBIM-TV of Roswell won visiting team honors.

This race began in 1976 and has run annually since 1978.

"It's our way of thanking the media for publicizing our snow reports and great conditions," said Patricia Morrison, Ski Apache's director of marketing.

"Those great conditions almost disrupted the awards presentation," said Morrison.

"Everyone was having such a great time skiing, they didn't want to quit to receive their trophies!"

It took two weeks to determine, but a leaking water pipe proved to be the culprit that caused ceiling damage at Nob Hill Elementary, Ruidoso School Superintendent Mike Gladden said a roof leak was first suspected. The kitchen ceiling will be repaired today while students are out of school.

Silver Lining

Apricot blooms lead the way into spring

First Apricot Bloom

The first apricot bloom of the year here in the vale appeared on the small apricot tree that years ago decided to grow right next to the house, at 1:30 in the afternoon on March 6.

The tree, through the years, has wrapped its limbs around the sunroom (like the "Leafy Arms" in the famous poem by Joyce Kilmer).

One limb, low down on the sunny side of the house, sends out its blooms earlier than the rest of the branches of the tree.

There is a warm current of air moving from under the house that encourages the fruit buds to come out early.

Like we say, there was one little brave crystal-white bud, while all through the tree, the other crimson round buds were hiding their time, just showing a little snow white of the petals closely wrapped in their winter covers.

By the end of the day there were seven blooms out, and two or three bees were humming their little work songs gathering their first nectar of the year, while the fragrance of the blossoms reached you through the warm sunny air — the breath of spring itself.

And now on the seventh, by noon the temperature rose to 70, the warmest day of the year, and a warm west wind came humming down the Valley.

The tree was an early springtime picture — a tree full of snow white blossoms, and cherry-red buds in every stage of coming into bloom.

The happy droning of the bees and the fragrance of the earliest fruit buds brought back memories and filled your heart with Joy.

Taking it year in and year out, these blooms are about three weeks late. This is "The Handwriting on the Wall," a sure message of late blooming for all fruit, since the apricot is the advance guard, the bell wether, the weather scout for all the fruit trees.

New Members Attend Saint Anne's Chapel

Last Sunday, Nellie Ruth Jones was delighted that the Sunday School class had three new members.

Tricia Tully-Mitchell brought her daughter, Jessica, and Bryce Perry and Gerry Mack Tully to services for the second Sunday in Lent at Saint Anne's Chapel in Glencoe.

Joe Marie and Benjamin Cos Sanchez were delighted with their new classmates at Sunday School, and we are happy to welcome Tricia and these fine children to Saint Anna's Chapel.

The Reverend Anna Gaddy based her sermon on the Gospel according to Saint John: "God so loved the world that he gave his only son that everyone who believes in Him should not perish but have everlasting life."

Nellie Ruth Jones in Prayers of the People asked blessings on the birthdays of Megan Thomas, Christina Shows, Mary Gurley Landrum, Trink Edmonds and Mark Mulholland.

March Full Moon

On the night of the seventh I thought the full moon would come over the hill early because on the sixth, the moon one day before full, came up while it was still daylight — just after the sun had gone down.

Instead, sunset faded into the gloaming, and the twilight turned to dusk, and then darkness came into the Vale bringing an early night.

Then over the top of the mountain to the east, the golden moon appeared turning the pines and cedars on the top into trees of silver. Soon the moon cleared the hill sending down rainbow shafts and moonbeams over the trees into the valley.

This was at 15 till seven, well into the night, and something away to the west caught your eye: here was the western sky all ablaze with pure orange, extending high into the sky outlining the purple mountains all along the horizon. So it was that the sunset colors waited to welcome the full March moon, and high in the western sky the evening star twinkled blue, silver and green. The sunset colors faded, and the moon and the evening star cheered the night in the mountain world.

A Breath of Spring

And now just before high noon on the eighth of March an east wind is moving gently up the valley carrying the aroma of new weeping willow, cottonwood and Chinese elm leaves — the flavor of new grass, alfalfa and sweet clover and the fragrance of apricot and early plum blossoms and the earliest spring flowers.

The temperature is 74 here in the Vale and the breeze is bringing a warmer wave from down at San Patricio, Hondo, Riverside and the Pecos Valley.

The fragrance of the apricot blooms on the little apricot tree greets you when you are within 100 yards of the house.

Let us thank God for the approach of spring and all our blessings.

Main Street consultant has some advice for local group

by KRISTIE SAATMANN
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

By asking a few soul-searching questions, Don Rypkema gave MainStreet Ruidoso a chance to take a good look at itself earlier this week.

Rypkema, a National Main Street Center technical service consultant, was in town Monday and Tuesday to help the group analyze its progress and its goals for the future. The national program associate Rojean Evans also visited Ruidoso to learn more about the community.

Rypkema first met with the board of directors of the organization in somewhat of a psychotherapy session. He said instead of him talking he wanted to just listen and learn as much as possible about the group.

In whatever context MainStreet is measured, it can be seen as a success because after its first five years its major project, the streetscape improvement plan for the midtown section of Sudderth Drive, is close to becoming a reality.

Rypkema asked the directors what will have happened to MainStreet five years from now.

MainStreet Ruidoso president Alden Deyo said the first phase of the streetscape from Fern Road to Country Club Drive is just the first part of the concept. They will be requesting money from the state legislature for the next two phases for Fern to Mechem Drive and Country Club to Carter's Lane. It could take them two to three years to begin actual construction on these phases, he said. Margaret Lahey, an incoming board member and former president of the group, said every town needs a center, not just a strip development. She said the many people ask her where's the downtown of Ruidoso?

The Midtown area should have a stronger identity and one way the group had helped with that in the past is with banners but it is waiting until the streetscape is completed to get new ones.

Rypkema asked if it is important that local residents use the downtown and received an "absolutely" from director Bonnie Mattox. Mattox said the locals are the ones her store and others depend on when the visitors aren't around. She said they are the repeat customers.

Deyo agreed that the visitor purchases fluctuate but the local customers make it easier to stay in business.

Rypkema then asked what they know about the visitors. Lahey said more and more are coming from Mexico with a lot of money, and they are bringing whole families.

Mike Radziewicz, an incoming board director, said Ruidoso has considered Dallas and Fort Worth, Texas, its market but Chihuahua City, Mexico and Tucson, Arizona are closer to Ruidoso.

Not many of the store clerks speak Spanish, but many of the visitors from Mexico speak English, they said.

They told him the marketing is done by the Ruidoso Valley Chamber of Commerce, but the Greeters also advertised in Mexico for the Christmas Jubilee. Ruidoso is also a member of Sun Country, which advertises for an entire area.

Before the economic problems in Mexico many businesses had signs in their windows to say they accepted pesos and that worked well with the area banks. Mattox said now there isn't much call for pesos because they all bring United States dollars.

Most of the people who come during the summer are here for the cool weather. Mattox said 60 percent of these visitors have no interest in skiing or racing.

"They like to shop, look around, eat and just enjoy the relaxed atmosphere," she said.

Battin said the group's market survey, which is being sent out to businesses, residents and visitors, will help determine what needs there are that aren't being met. He said he hopes MainStreet can contribute to improving that mix of businesses.

Rypkema said the survey is a great first step but they may want to expand on that to find out the information they need. Deyo said it may be some of the information is in the U.S. Census or the retail business census.

Battin said he would also like to see a general renovation of the store fronts to match the streetscape improvements.

The group also hopes to contribute to the River Walk to be developed as a path along the Rio Ruidoso.

Deyo commented that there are parallel streets to Sudderth that as the village grows could also be developed with commercial businesses. This development would widen the downtown area and could provide more of a district instead of a strip.

J.D. James, village liaison to the group, said he is one of many people who have retired to the area because of the services it offers in health-care. The younger people are looking for good schools and safety and find it here. It is also friendly.

"The streetscape improvements are the best advertising we could every have. In five years you won't even be able to recognize Ruidoso," he said.

Rypkema received no numerical answer when he asked how much of the total volume of sales comes from visitors and how much is from locals. Director Tom Rigby said if a person walks up and down the streets, he will see mostly license plates from Texas and Mexico and very few New Mexico plates during the peak periods.

Lahey said she shops in the downtown but she avoids it during the peak visitor periods. During the off season, then, it is likely more of the sales would come from locals, she said.

Rigby said he thinks the local shopping is tied to the limited parking and the crowds. He said if people go to Albuquerque they don't think of walking miles and miles in the malls, but that may be because of the diversity it offers.

Rypkema said "It struck me that as a visitor there are a lot of stores

I would go in and buy something, but as a resident I wouldn't need to go in many."

He said that is not good or bad, but if the stores want more local customers they need to let the people know they have what locals would want.

Battin asked if businesses do need to decide who their customers are.

"By trying to appeal to both are we counter-productive? If we try to cater to everyone it could become a one-size fits all," he said.

It is the unique atmosphere visitors want and the downtown stores provide that, but the other businesses, for locals, may locate elsewhere without any consequence.

Radziewicz said people don't realize there is a tremendous amount of parking off Sudderth Drive. The problem is they are not paved and they are ill-lit. He said he would like to see a parking structure developed on Rio Street that would include handicap access to Sudderth Drive.

Lahey agreed that the unpaved parking lots cause the downtown to look dirty. When it rains the dirt becomes mud in the streets and it leaves dirt on the streets when it dries.

She said she also dislikes all of the cuts and driveways in the street. It ruins the midtown, she said.

Rypkema asked if the evolution of the community is in the hands of the people is there a common vision. Directors said there is not one common vision but offered their opinions on their own visions.

They would like to see it stay fairly small and retain its quality of life.

"I would like to see Ruidoso grow but what we need to do is preserve the attitude and character of a small mountain community," Deyo said.

The direction it goes will also depend on the planning and zoning done by the village, several directors said. Homes and buildings are already built before the builders even find out they were suppose to get a permit from the village, Lahey said. Businesses also don't realize they need to get a business permit from the village.

Lahey said the vision for the community has gone a different direction during each new political term.

"I think if we want something done right, MainStreet will have to do it," she said.

Rypkema said MainStreet may want to expand its role and contribution to the broader community. It may be that by default MainStreet will need to do some of these things it wants accomplished.

"It may be that if no one prods, nothing will get done," he said.

Rigby said he looks at both words of the name, MainStreet Ruidoso, and that means they are looking at more than helping one area make money.

"The reason I am active in MainStreet is that downtown is the showcase for us. It gives people their first impression of our community," he said.

Plans unveiled to build topnotch private aircraft facility here

by CHARLES STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Promising the finest executive aircraft facility in the southwest, pilot Steven Hightower asked the Ruidoso Village Council to enter into negotiations for a 11,000 square foot land lease.

Representing Mountain Aviation, Inc., and a new company Ruidoso Connection, Inc, Hightower plans to build a lavish fixed base operation at Sierra Blanca Airport.

Mayor Victor Alonso, anxious to enter into negotiations, said lease regulations called into question recently were unnecessary "hoops" to jump through and not applicable in entering negotiations with Hightower.

Alonso was referring to the leasing of Sierra Blanca's large 6,000-foot hangar to Franklin Aviation for $500 per month, plus perks.

Councilor Ron Andrews called for a Department of Finance and Administration investigation to see if the village had negotiated a fair market value for the hangar or if any procedures were in violation of state statutes.

During the last meeting, former village attorney David Thomsen declared the lease routine and normal operations, therefore certain requirements, such as appraisals, were not necessary. Current village attorney Patricia Curt parroted Thomsen's opinion Tuesday.

Alonso said his two lawyers had ruled it was normal, and airplane manager Lloyd Wayne also agreed that negotiations with Hightower would be normal procedure.

Hightower said he was interested in building a hangar approximately 11,000 square feet in size, plus additional space for adequate parking.

In a letter to the council, he wrote that the purpose for the facility will be for commercial aircraft operations, including but not limited to, executive aircraft prop-jet charter and overnight, or long-term hangar rental for large turbine aircraft.

He wrote that plans are for the finest executive aircraft facility in the southwest with offices that include spacious conference areas, public restrooms and a large hangar area to house overnight aircraft that now park on airport ramp.

He said plans also include auto rental, aircraft maintenance and future proposals for scheduled air service to and from Sierra Blanca. His letter also indicated fuel will be sold.

Hightower indicated his business partner is C.E. Burdine from Dallas, and that he and Burdine are the only two principals in Ruidoso Connection Inc.

The State Corporation Commission that lists corporate officers said that Ruidoso Connection is not listed with the state at this time and could furnish no information.

Hightower said CPA Ronnie Hemphill is handling the books for Ruidoso Connection.

Alonso, who openly states he does not check backgrounds, said he was satisfied.

Village attorney Ortiz said she thought Hightower should draft the lease.

Hightower said any other facility for lease is normally provided by the owner and signed by the lessee.

Ortiz said she wanted the lessee to provide an warranty and they could jointly work on the lease.

Ortiz said she didn't even want to hear about the lease until the main points have been negotiated.

The village approved a motion to enter lease agreement negotiations with Hightower's company.

The council retired into closed session and came out and voted to send a letter to Bohannon-Houston Inc., accept a settlement in the Michelle Martinez case, and file foreclosure on the Lomas lien.

What's the village trying to hide?

Ask a silly question, you'll get a silly answer...

But, in the Village of Ruidoso, if you ask a tough question, you'll have to pay dearly. Elsewhere in the state, journalists now and then have to pay a small copy fee, anywhere from 10 cents to 25 cents a page, but nowhere is the press charged for routine research.

In Ruidoso, if The Ruidoso News asks a question, we're charged a "research fee." That doesn't just mean if a reporter asks for difficult to find information or documents that have been filed away. That means if a reporter asks any village employee anything, even for information that a normal business person would turn around and pull out of their file cabinet, they'll pay for "research." The standard fee is $25.

The fee was first implemented AFTER The News asked for a list of village employees, including titles and salaries. That's public information. And even though the information was requested BEFORE the fee was initiated by the manager, The News was billed for that information. The manager was then asked a straight "yes" or "no" question, not involving any copies, and the village attorney even made a trip to The News office to say we'd have to pay.

Mayor Victor Alonso gave that fee his blessing Tuesday when he broke a tie on the "gouge The News" motion. Councilors Ron Andrews, Frank Cummins and Bill Karn voted to make the media pay; with councilors Barbara Duff, J.D. James and Jerry Shaw voting against the motion.

Councilors and village administration are quick to criticize The News, screaming loudly for THE TRUTH. But this mayor and council want to make reporters jump through hoops in a search for the truth. Research has been provided free to some others who have asked, and so this is basically one more effort to censor The News. To make news gathering even more challenging, the village manager has gagged village employees from talking to the press. If the village had nothing to hide, the administration would want The News to have full and ready access to public information.

The sad thing is that information given to any news media is disseminated to the public. The News and other reporters stand in for members of the public, and so this latest attempt to silence the press is in reality a slap in the face to the citizens of this village.

As editor Jean Otto said: "The First Amendment's value is linked directly to its use. To preserve it, it must be shared. Unless it is everyone's it can be no one's."

"WHY, LOOK, SISTER HILLARY... I DO BELIEVE HE'S THIRSTING FOR CHANGE! HALLELUJAH!"

Contributed Comment

Where we stand and where we are going

Recently, to the satisfaction of many, and to the credit of the village administration, the highly publicized barn area where The Ruidoso News pointed out the questionable practice of storing equipment bought at auctions, was cleaned up and the area put in order.

In the same light the unsatisfactory condition of our local cemetery was improved and cleaned up to a point never reached in the past. A job well done.

Both of these actions are to be welcomed. Case closed — not exactly! One has to ask if these actions are taken as a matter of course or because of the investigative reporting by our local newspaper. The answer is obvious — but why so?

Those of us who have had experience associated with companies are familiar with what is known as operating procedures. These guides are a simple method which involves planning on a daily, weekly or other time-frame basis to ensure that a company's operation is performed according to the wishes of those who own and run the company. This guide is a great assistance to a manager or presiding officer in guiding him to perform duties mandated by the business and to eliminate what is known as "crisis management" which often is the result of lack of planning.

Case in point: On July 4, 1992, I wrote the following letter to Gary Jackson who was the village deputy manager at that time.

Ways and means to improve the operation of Ruidoso's cemetery

1. First and foremost — place the operation of this cemetery under ONE department. Multiple supervision, now in effect, has been ineffective.

2. Publicize the fact that cremation interment is now an option. This will eliminate, to a degree, the need for additional cemetery space.

3. Set up a budget sufficient to cover: a schedule for cemetery housekeeping to remove pine needles, debris, and grass cutting on a planned basis — not on a hit and miss schedule now being used.

4. Establish and publish a cost schedule for grave site purchases with a suggested cost — subject to price adjustments in the future — of $200 per site. Cremation spaces would be in a ratio of two for one over present interment spaces.

5. Determine the size of a single grave site with normal interment, to include the length recognizing that each grave site would accommodate two cremation sites.

6. Establish a procedure for grave site preparation. This would include the size and depth of the opening - filling of the grave opening - the disposal of excess soil, both during and after the ceremony — the use of chairs to accommodate those attending the service — the use of a canvas cover — green grass covers, etc. NOTE: While the last attempt to secure bids for interments was not successful, the use of an outside contractor worked very well. Grave site preparation and completion was done in a professional manner which has been missing when the task is done by Village employees.

It is recommended that an all-out effort be made to place interments with an outside contractor leaving the housekeeping work in the hands of the village. Failing to do this would require that the points made here for a Village operation be placed into effect with a strong follow-up to guarantee compliance.

This letter of recommendations to improve the cemetery was the result of Jackson's request after we had visited the local cemetery and had discussed some of the problems found there.

There were no procedures covering the cemetery operation at that time and there are none as of now.

Jackson resigned a short time after that date and left Ruidoso. I was not aware if my suggestion made to Jackson to improve the cemetery had been passed to Jackson's successor so I gave an additional copy to the village administration several months ago.

To date there has been no action taken. We need a plan; crisis management just doesn't work. A year from now the cemetery will have returned to a state of disrepair and, perhaps, The Ruidoso News will run another report which will follow another "annual cleanup."

Proper planning is not only an important function in running a business — it is the most important.

Some would say that newspaper reporters are rated in a popularity poll somewhere between lawyers and used car salesmen. I wonder where some of our administration officials would be rated?

Pilots shed some light on airport hangar lease issue

TO THE EDITOR:

With frequent amusement, we follow the accounts of various Ruidoso civic issues covered by The Ruidoso News, which we subscribe to here in Fort Worth.

Sometimes it's apparent the paper is doing a good job as a watchdog over the village council.

However, the recent controversy over the airport hangar lease to an aircraft maintenance man is certainly unwarranted.

Because Mr. Franklin has worked on our own airplanes on short notice when we've flown into Sierra Blanca Regional Airport, we feel compelled to put our two cents worth in on this issue. It's probably none of our business since we don't own property in Ruidoso any more, but we commend the village council (in this instance at least) for finding a mechanic anywhere willing to pay any price to lease the hangar and operate a needed service at the airport.

What you've got, basically, is an airport in the middle of nowhere. People who fly in there are coming to spend money in Ruidoso. If they have a malfunction on their airplane and no mechanic at the airport, they're virtually stranded. It's like driving a long distance in your car to reach a resort community that has no service station.

Given the lack of commercial air service, the village should do anything it can to keep Ruidoso as accessible and inviting as possible for the private airplane owners who will want to come there. Mr. Franklin's maintenance shop should not only have the lowest rent possible, it should probably be paid by the Chamber of Commerce.

Volunteers can help in keeping cemetery clean

TO THE EDITOR:

On the subject of the condition of Forest Lawn Cemetery, I would like to offer a suggestion.

I was a den mother in Texas (six years) and we had the same problem with one of our cemeteries.

We made a project of every two or three months on a nice Saturday or any day during the summer to have our meetings there. We would meet around 9 a.m. in work clothes and everyone bring a sack lunch. Den mothers furnished the drinks.

The sanitation system donated the trash bags; also we had boxes for glass, tree limbs, etc.

You would be surprised how much one den can do with incentive. Merit badges and arrow heads can be earned, also they are pleased to see what they have done.

Boy Scouts can come on alternate days after the pickup and mow, also do other heavier jobs.

Even Girls Scouts can get in on this.

Leaders get together and show the adults what our young people can do.

Woman's Club, how about maintaining the garden again? I am sure the nurseries, and even Wal-Mart, would donate some bedding plants.

Also, for those of us who have no one buried here, we could "adopt-a-plot."

If interested, call Danny Sisson at 257-7303.

J. Dot Painter
Ruidoso

EDITOR'S NOTE: Mrs. Painter offered these good suggestions even before the village responded to news accounts by cleaning the cemetery. Her suggestions should be considered, too, for ongoing cleanup throughout the village.

San Patricio artist paints from the soul

"Oh for the touch of a vanished hand and the sound of a voice that is still," Alfred Lord Tennyson

When the visitors arrived, the artist was having a conversation with a beaded, elkskin Indian dress. It had been going on for months.

Indeed, it began in Justiceberg, Texas, when San Patricio artist Linda Miller unearthed the Sioux dress in her cousin Riley's closet. It had been a gift to his daughter and was carefully preserved.

"I wish it could talk to me," the daughter had said. "It will talk to me," the artist said.

Miller took the dress home to San Patricio and her studio, Doe Canyon.

After tramping around the banks of the Hondo River, she found what her soul sought. Amid the willows and walnut trees sat a five-foot, three-inch by five-foot buried log. Miller strapped the hollow of the log into her shoulder and lugged it up to her studio, stopping a few times to gather the energy to proceed.

Miller set the log in the corner of her studio nearest the window. She lifted the heavy, elkskin dress and pressed it on the log. The dress settled itself against the log's curves.

On the wooden floor beneath the log and the dress, Miller laid stalks of sacred sage tied by sinew and blessed by H. Jayne Nauman, a friend of Miller's who is close to the Sioux and told her that when something is taken from the earth, something else must be returned.

One by one Miller added, and sometimes took away, articles that a Sioux woman would have taken with her to winter camp — a worn pair of moccasins, an acorn squash and some Sioux turnips, a pair of parfleches, a tepee bag and some sweet-smelling sage.

Then she laid down a dead raven that she had found under the log where the bird had crawled to die, and scattered some dirt from her beloved Hondo Valley.

Miller stepped back and began working.

July turned to August and August to September. October swept into November and November eased into December. January stretched into February and February crept into March. The dress talked.

"First I heard the sound of the elk," Miller said.

"It occurred to me that the elk had a heart and the woman who wore the dress had a heart, and so there was more than one spirit running through the dress. Both were strong, wise spirits; each important to his/her group.

"But they were different. The elk had physical strength, the woman a strength of character. The dress is a very heavy dress for a woman to wear. But to the elk, it would have weighed nothing."

Miller walked over to the dress and stroked it. She continued its story.

"I saw a large male elk. A proud animal. The leader of his herd. He was brought down by one bullet — at the top of the dress you can see the small, round patch of buffalo hide which covers the bullet hole. I think the elk gave up his life easily; perhaps he felt that his life wasn't coming to an end." Miller paused for a moment.

"Maybe things never die; the spirit never dies."

She slid her fingers down the dress and began running them through the short fringe which decorated the hem.

"And then I heard how the dress sounded as a woman," Miller said with a grin. "It sounded like swishing. You know, like a dancer's costume. The woman walked, and as she walked, and as she moved the fringe moved against her legs and swished."

Miller's fingers released the fringe, and her eyes looked at the painting.

"The woman who wore this dress had great stature and influence in her tribe. She was a woman of mature age who loved the earth and was a decision-maker. She was meticulous, exacting and detailed." Miller smiled slyly.

"I think she and I have a lot in common. When I finish with the painting, I want to try the dress on."

That day is coming. The painting will be unveiled Sunday, March 14, during a retrospective of Miller's art at Bank of the Southwest in Roswell.

But the work is slow and painstaking. It requires a faithfulness to detail and a dedication of purpose.

"Some Southwest painters project a transparency onto the canvas and paint the reflection," Miller explained. "I don't. That's not art."

When Miller began the painting, she mixed her palette of raw umber and raw sienna and, using a three-inch brush, covered the entire linen canvas. Then she started with the top of the dress.

"I put the paint on and then carefully scrape it all off. I drug more paint on layer by layer and scratched through it back down to the canvas until I finally achieved the texture of the elkskin — the blood vessels, the shading, the scraping of the woman's flint as she worked the hide."

Miller's talent lies in the details: in knowing when to be faithful to each strand of fringe, each perfectly counted bead, and when to paint broadly with just a suggestion of what lies there.

"People aren't stupid," she said in her direct manner.

"You don't have to show them everything. They can finish the story. That's what makes them part of the painting."

When it comes to her world, however, Miller pays attention to every detail.

"Everything I have surrounding me is important," she said. "We may consider things weeds, but then we understand."

Miller's understanding characterizes her vision as an artist. She is a painter of things; singular things, not a mass. Simple things that she invests with emotional detail. Harrowing things whose struggle she recognizes.

She chronicles life's silent toil and its resounding hurrahs — her mother's wedding dress thrown over a brown, wooden chair; a dead robin in the snow; a used anvil; a dove perched on a branch laden with apple blossoms; a two-year old colt; a bird's nest made of barbed wire and twigs.

"Hondo Light," a retrospective of Miller's paintings, pastels and drypoints will open Sunday, March 14, at Bank of the Southwest in Roswell. The public is invited to meet Miller during an open house from 2 to 4 p.m. on Sunday at the bank on 226 North Main Street.

Straightforward and forceful in personality, Linda Miller brings a delicate, old-master touch to her paintings.

Sequestered from the world that speeds by on nearby U.S. 70, Miller spends her days surrounded by her art and her pets in the San Patricio house that she designed and, in large part, constructed.

The studio, an intriguing collection of oddities and treasures arranged in perfect compositions, with an imposing cathedral-shaped window, large fireplace and natural wood floor, took three months to build. The house took five years.

A man she knew from the Ruidoso Downs racetrack asked her to keep some horses for him and ended up building her fireplace. Another man looking for apples, turned out to be a plasterer from Roswell and lent her a scaffold and recipe for the plaster material.

Some of the wood for the studio came from a church in Roswell, trees cut in Alto provided the beams, the fir was left over from construction on the Inn of the Mountain Gods and her rolled glass picture window was formed from six sections of turn-of-the-century French doors.

"There's a Chinese theory that if you are in tune with life, things will come to you that you need," Miller said.

Artist Linda Miller sees beyond the commonplace when she captures the spirit of items like the old elkskin Indian dress (above) on canvas. The ballet slippers (at right) have been signed by world famous ballet dancer Mikhail Baryshnikov.

Radar glitch taints tickets

by DIANNE STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Uncertainty about the accuracy of a radar speed detection device prompted the Capitan Board of Trustees to ask the village judge to take another look at some recent traffic cases.

"I had a couple of calls from different people, who paid their traffic tickets by mail," Trustee Alfred Leroy Montes said Monday. "Then they hear the word around that the radar gun was uncalibrated and that several tickets were dismissed. They said they got a raw deal, that they didn't know or they would have protested too. Is there anyway we can rescind those tickets and return that money to those people?"

Village attorney J. Robert Beauvais explained that the municipal judge is a separate body of the town government and it would be solely up to his discretion.

"You can ask the judge to reconsider and set aside the fines," he advised the board. If it's determined that the radar is not properly calibrated, the board has the option to dismiss tickets, he said. But once the cases have been adjudicated, they are out of the trustees' hands.

Montes offered a motion to ask the judge to set aside the fines. It passed 4-0.

Trustee L. C. Cozzens abstained from voting, noting that the issue was not on the agenda and he did not know enough about the situation.

Village clerk Debbie Cummins said once the judge heard about the radar device, he began dismissing the cases.

"Who had the responsibility? Where did we go wrong?" Montes asked.

Beauvais said the police department and the executive branch of the government are responsible for the equipment.

"That thing should have been taken care of," Montes said. "We should have taken it out of service, but we went ahead and let the officer use it and yet, when somebody got wise, I don't know who, they contested. The ones that didn't have any knowledge got stuck. What I'm trying to say that it's not really fair because you're smarter."

"They're supposed to be sent in every year and this one wasn't,"

Jack Johnson, a former law enforcement officer, said he never sent his radar unit in for calibration. He and other officers checked them each time they went out, he said.

Montes admitted that when he was an officer, his radar unit wasn't officially calibrated for the four or five years he used it.

Trustee Gilbert Montoya said the unit may be accurate, but it still was overdue and should have been sent in for official calibration.

Beauvais said the lack of official calibration could be a defense. However, when a unit is accurate, the officer could rebut that defense, if the officer is certified to use the unit.

Mayor Frank Warth said the village officer has been certified and calibrates the unit at the beginning of each shift in addition to sending it to Albuquerque periodically for official calibration.

In other business, the trustees approved a contract with the Forestry Division of the Department of Energy, Minerals and Natural Resources agreeing to respond to fire calls on land adjacent to the village.

The volunteer fire department will be reimbursed by the state for the time its vehicles and other equipment is in use.

Local forest manager Barbara Luna assured the trustees that at no time would the division expect the department to leave the village unprotected. The decision to respond ultimately lies with the fire chief, she said.

Volunteer Terry Cox and chief Pat Huay said that although the agreement qualifies the department to obtain state equipment, they would not request anything that they could not safety store and protect. With the closing of air bases around the country, a lot of surplus material should be coming up for sale, Huay said.

Dick Cox, who said he handled federal excess property for a 13-state region over a 10-year period, said fire defense is high in ranking for acquisition, especially for small towns of under 5,000 population.

But he had a word of caution.

"I encourage you to try to acquire property that you really can use," Cox said. "There is a real tendency to acquire a bunch of junk that you don't really need."

approved a personnel policy and agreed that Cozzens will work on a salary matrix. Without an established salary step schedule, the village could be vulnerable to grievances under the new collective bargaining regulations, Beauvais said.

When employees reach the top of the matrix, the only raises that could be awarded after that point would be cost-of-living.

heard suggestions from Johnson about more animal control through the sale of license tags. Since the village has no facilities for strays, some other option may need to be considered, he said.

Johnson also proposed that the village crack down on homes that are not kept up while unused. He agreed to prepare a list for the board. The trustees have the authority to go in and clean up yards and take care of safety hazards if the owners refuse. The owners then are charged for the work. If they don't pay the bill, a municipal lien can be filed against the property.

COACH PAM ALLEN

Capitan coach is tops

by DIANNE STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

When Capitan School officials talk about winning seasons, you can bet the name of coach Pam Allen comes up in the conversation.

Before coming to Capitan, Allen coached two state championship teams in girls' volleyball at Dexter High School and also ran a successful basketball and track program.

At Goddard High School in Roswell, her volleyball team won the state championship on home court and one of the long jumpers she coached was the state champ.

Track and field was her most successful coaching category at Hobbs High School, although her volleyball teams qualified to the state tournament in the four years she was there.

Allen was raised in Capitan, where her father still lives and maintains a stable of horses. She earned her master's degree at Eastern New Mexico University in Portales, with coaching as her ultimate goal.

"I think I would have liked to be a veterinarian, except at that point in my life, someone said to me that women don't do that," Allen said. "If I was starting over and someone said that to me now, I'd say 'Watch me.'"

Since coming back to Capitan six years ago, one volleyball team took the state championship and others finished second two or three times. She's also coached three state champion teams in track.

"I've been very fortunate everywhere I've been to have the opportunity to coach very good athletes and fine human beings, and consequently, recognized a lot of success as an individual," Allen said.

But nobody doubts that Allen's coaching style helps bring out the very best in her athletes.

"When I started out, I felt if you worked hard and hustled, you'd be pretty successful," Allen said. "But I have come to realize that I need to teach athletes what I want them to do. Then I've done my job. Athletes don't plan to make a mistake in practice or to perform poorly, and if they do, I've not taught them.

"On the other hand, I ask them to give everything they have, because once today is gone, it's gone and you won't get it back. They must take advantage of that time in the gym."

Allen said she came back to Capitan, because as a single parent, she was looking for a good atmosphere to raise her daughter Melissa, 18, who now lives in Dexter, and her son Trey, 13, a three-sport athlete.

Looking toward the future, Allen said she'd like to hit the 300-win mark, something she believes is possible within the next two seasons.

In her scant free time, Allen enjoys quiet pursuits. She likes to garden, cook (even co-ran a catering business in Roswell), fish and visit with friends. She also likes to work with horses.

Although the climate for women coaches still isn't one hundred percent without prejudice, Allen said it has improved drastically since her first job.

"When I started, I drove the (activity) bus, sponsored cheerleading and the junior class, and coached three sports in grades seven through twelfth without any assistants," she said. "And I did all that for a $500 supplement a year above my teaching salary. Then Title IX (banning sex discrimination) came around and I began to realize that I was doing the same work as my male peers, who had assistant coaches and I was not getting equal pay."

"But there still is an underlying feeling inside even today that because I'm a female, I have to do better, especially in a competitive situation."

Gear up for a busy July 4th

by DIANNE STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

The 1993 July Fourth weekend celebration is shaping up to be one of the biggest ever in Capitan.

According to Kathleen Hellman, coordinator for the weekend, the theme for the parade will be Beautiful Lincoln County.

All residents, groups, schools and businesses are invited to participate, Hellman said. No entry fee will be charged, but the committee is tightening up on pre-parade registration to work out the bugs in preparation for the massive 1994 celebration of Smokey Bear's Fiftieth Birthday.

Entry information and forms will be available within the next month.

The band picked as best in the parade will receive a $100 prize.

The weekend of events in Capitan will include the parade, the Thirty-eighth Annual Stampede (rodeo) at the county fairground, an art show, the new Wildfire Chili Cookoff, the Thirtieth Annual 10 K Run, a barbecue, cowboy poetry, vendors, exhibits, a photo contest and exhibition of Lincoln County sites.

Hellman said the celebration will grow even larger in 1994 when hot air balloons are added and a major country western concert is coordinated by New Mexico State University.

The month of August will continue the Smokey theme, with a trail ride to the bruin's rescue site in the Capitan Mountains, a fair and carnival with special exhibits and a ranch rodeo.

To kick off the season of events this year, a dinner is planned for May 8, Smokey Bear Day, to include an auction and entertainment. Kathleen Michelena, Ruidoso Civic Events Center director, will be master of ceremonies.

For more information and to become a part of the year of fun, contact Hellman at 354-3332.

Thank you tea honors club

An appreciation tea for members of The Woman's Club is scheduled for 4 p.m. March 18 at village hall.

The public is invited. The event is being hosted by members of the village Cemetery Board and Friends of Smokey.

Although the club has disbanded, money from the sale of the old club building was given to the cemetery board and the Friends organization.

Trustees clamp down on overdue bills

by DIANNE STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Sixteen former customers of the Capitan municipal water department may forfeit their property if they don't cough up enough money to cover delinquent bills.

The Capitan Board of Trustees gave the nod to village attorney J. Robert Beauvais Monday to proceed with foreclosure action on 16 water bill liens, if the owners fail to respond to the latest round of letters warning of impending legal recourse.

"We felt like we needed to try to collect them because the balance is so high," said village clerk Debbie Cummins. The total is $6,800. "We sent letters giving them 10 days to pay or they will be handed over to the attorney for foreclosure."

Water clerk Netta Nolen said one dated from 1986 and the rest were from 1987. Some people are deceased and others have no forwarding address, she said. The latest addressees listed by the county property assessor were used when possible.

"We've gotten quite a few back as no one at that address or someone refused to sign, Cummins said. Meanwhile, the $5 a month late fee continues to build.

Beauvais said the preferred method for municipalities is to file against a group at the same time since the liens go against the property, regardless of who owns the land. If the owners don't respond, the property by default would be sold to pay the debt. If they contest the action, a hearing would be scheduled, although there isn't much defense for not paying a bill, he said.

Municipal liens take precedent over all other claims except the Internal Revenue Service, Beauvais said.

"Unless the piece of property is worth less than the bill, you can't lose," he said. "In my experience, once a person has received notice that they might lose their property for a few hundred dollars, they pay."

Trustee Gordon Ross noted that the liens range from a low of $208 to a high of $1,370. Most are around $515.

The vote to move ahead on foreclosures passed 4-1 with Trustee Alfred Leroy Montes voting against it. He did not state a reason and could not be reached for comment later.

In other action, the trustees passed a proclamation declaring May 8 Smokey Bear Day.

approved a certification of financial hardship to secure a state highway department grant without putting up matching money. The grant would cover base course work on Long Road, East Lobo and West Lobo with the same application as will be applied on Main Road.

Donate items at post offices to support county food bank

The Lincoln County Food Bank is encouraging county residents to make donations of non-perishable foods when they visit their post office.

With the cooperation of the post offices, labeled food donation containers are now placed in the Carrizozo, Capitan, Alto, Ruidoso Downs and the main and Hollywood Station Ruidoso post offices.

"We hope by making it easier to donate food items, it'll become a habit with county residents to drop off a can or two of food on a weekly or monthly basis," said Food Bank President Bob Messick.

According to a news release, most canned or packaged foods are currently donated by church or service organizations participating in the Food Bank's food wheel program.

The food wheel divides staple items among the organization on a month-to-month giving program. Messick said both the food wheel and individual donations are needed to keep up with the demands on the Food Bank.

Other important sources for the bank are the special campaigns conducted by various organizations and youth groups.

Junior posse follows a long tradition

by DIANNE STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

When Martha Graham saw the short newspaper announcement about the formation of a Lincoln County junior posse, memories flooded back from the 1950s.

She retrieved a photograph album and there they were; her sons and several other boys dressed in uniforms as members of the Ruidoso junior deputies.

"The lady in the picture is my sister, Johnnie Delle Jones, and she's with my brother-in-law, Arba Jones," Graham said. "He was village marshal in Ruidoso in 1953. At that time, he had one assistant and Coleman Joyce was the night watchman.

"He (Jones) liked to work with youths. He had been a border patrol officer before moving here. He died in 1954. This picture is 40 years old and was taken at Carrizo Lodge."

To earn money for the purchase of uniforms for the all-male group, bake sales and dances were staged.

"It gave the children pride and something to do," Graham said. "When I read that a junior posse was going to form, it made me think of them."

Ruidoso was much more isolated in those days and community projects kept the children out of trouble. During that period, no road to Carrizozo existed through Alto. People had to travel by way of Hondo and Capitan, Graham said.

Her sons, Jimmy, who still lives in the area, and Tommy, a K-Mart manager in Washington state, both were members of the deputies group. Another member was Randall Halladay, who also has stayed in Ruidoso, she said.

"I wish I could identify more of the boys, but it's been too long."

The new junior posse is open to boys and girls under the age of 18, who are permanent residents of the county.

Good citizens

Corona Elementary School announced the good citizens for the fourth grade period.
