No kidding! # 911 is up and running

Don't try it out just to make sure Dr. Bernie Reimann is telling the truth.

You'll have to take his word that the Enhanced 911 emergency telephone number is working, unless you really need help.

Crank callers, who can be traced through the new computer system when they dial 911, will face hefty fines set in state statutes.

The system officially was up and running countywide Wednesday, said Reimann, chairman of the Lincoln County Enhanced 911 District Board.

However, all of the old emergency numbers for fire, police, sheriff and ambulance will remain in operation at least until the new telephone directory containing the updated information is released in 1994.

Currently, Ruidoso and Ruidoso Downs dispatch centers are handling the calls, but by December, the sheriff's department will come on line, Reimann said.

A $114,231 grant paid for consoles and some of the other equipment.

Reimann said unfortunately, the E911 system won't be totally effective until the entire county has been assigned street numbers as have lots and homes in Capitan.

Watch out for those Tigers!

Emergency 911 goes on line in Ruidoso

by CHARLES STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

As of midnight Tuesday, all of Lincoln County has been connected to the Emergency 911 service with automatic number and location identification.

Ruidoso police chief Dick Swenor told the village council Tuesday that the effort has taken five years and it is not yet completed.

"But as of midnight we are going public," he said.

Swenor said the Ruidoso police will be answering for all of Lincoln County for the next 90 to 120 days while waiting for Lincoln County's new public service answering center to come on line in Carrizozo.

Swenor said anyone who calls 911 will have a 10-second delay before the call is answered.

"This is to allow time for the necessary trunking through the four telephone companies to the main trunk in Albuquerque," Swenor said.

He said the assigned coordinators for the system are officers

Johnny Romero in Ruidoso and Amy Aragon of Carrizozo.

Swenor said Tasy Villegos of Carrizozo will handle the rural addressing for the county and the automatic number identification (ANI) is currently on line. When you call emergency, the police automatically knows the location of the call.

Swenor said the system is partially on line for ALI (automatic location identification.)

Street signage is a mess, according to Swenor. He said by law, street signs have to reflect light. Street signs also will have a number sequence, such as Edgewood Drive, 100 through 600.

Of the four public hearings, the council passed two and postponed two.

Ordinance 93-22, related to non-conforming use and structures.

Planner Cleatus Richards told the council that an ordinance was needed for unusual situations.

Richards said a doctor wanted an office where an antique shop is located, in a residential area. Since the antique shop's location makes it a non-conforming use, and the proposed doctor's office, also non-conforming, would not throw that use into a higher profile, Richards reasoned the transfer should be allowed. But there is no ordinance on the books to allow such action.

The council approved that ordinance and a public hearing on the transfer of ownership and location, dispenser liquor license for the Enchantment Inn.

A public hearing on the bond issue for the Otero-Lincoln County landfill was tabled at the request of attorney Bob Beauvais of the Lincoln County Solid Waste Authority.

Beauvais said the completed agreement depended on timing and the council agreed to a special meeting on the bond issue at 9 a.m. Tuesday, October 19.

The council told Richards that they were not given adequate time to study the recommended changes proposed in the sign ordinance and asked for a continuance.

Mayor Jerry Shaw said the sign ordinance public hearing would be continued during the next village council meeting on October 26.

Village finance director Lee Ann Boswell-Nichols reported on the first quarter budget review for the period ending September 30.

Nichols said the village's primary funds were right in line.

"The General Fund revenues are at 22 percent," said Nichols. "This is three percent below the quarter percent, however this is usual since the village does not receive the property tax distribution until December and May, therefore the gross receipts runs two months in arrears."

Nichols said Utility Fund revenues are at 28 percent, which is three percent higher than the quarter mark, with expenditures at 18 percent.

Airport Fund revenues are running at 39 percent for the quarter. The airports peak season is from

Shrinking schools scramble for funds

by DIANNE STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

An overly optimistic enrollment projection may result in a $295,000 shortfall in the Ruidoso school district's expected revenue from the state.

Superintendent Mike Gladden delivered the bad news to school board members Tuesday.

"We're rapidly approaching the fortieth day and we have not reached our projection (of six percent growth)," Gladden said.

The state uses the count of students taken on the fortieth day of school to determine how much money a district will receive. For the past two years, the state has used a floating per unit figure, which may increase or decrease as the year progresses. Currently, the number is set at $1,927.

While the district hasn't met the six percent projection, it has experienced growth in excess of 2.5 percent, Gladden pointed out.

A different count will be taken December 1, of special education students, he said. Although the number of students in that category also is lowered than estimated, Gladden said chances are good that it will reach projections.

Different grade levels are "weighted" with factors ranging from 1.00 to 1.44. Special students each are weighted from 1.9 to 3.5 times. For example, 177 first graders with the weight factor of 1.20 applied would equal 212.40 units for funding from the state.

District officials, using real estate sales information and discussion with Mescalero Apache Tribal officials, projected 3,990.497 funding units, but the actual number fell short by 153,485 units, equating to about $295,000.

Facing the prospect of a deep cut in the district's $8.1-million operational budget, Gladden said he met with staff Monday to discuss possible action.

Three alternatives were proposed:

- reducing the number of employees

Besides its impact on individuals, that proposal would eliminate programs and would negatively affect students.

"It would cause a lot of turmoil and a downfall of morale," he said.

-cutting salaries

"Seven to eight years ago we had a shortfall and reduced salaries by 1.5 percent," Gladden said. "We would not want to do that again, because we experienced a drop in morale and an issue like that tends to stay in the district."

Every dollar is important to the staff of the district, he said.

-conserving dollars by making some adjustments, eliminating non-essential field trips and encouraging a team attitude, then taking another look at the situation in April.

Energy conservation would be high on the list, turning off lights, lowering thermostats.

"We feel we can save between $120,000 and $150,000," Gladden said. Another $106,000 is available in the emergency fund.

Five vacancies may not be filled, which could save another $70,000.

While all three alternatives are

On the trail

Trail riders were hungry enough to eat a horse, but settled for chuckwagon biscuits during the three-day trail ride during the Cowboy Symposium. Tired riders listened to cowboy poets, including Hank Realbird, and then kicked up their heels with some campfire dancing.

A three-day trail ride was complete with campfire tales by poets like Cheryn Burns (at right), enjoyed by trail bosses Craig and Connie Whipple and riders Ann and Lawson Smith (above). The youngest rider was Hilton Bloodworth, riding Trigger (above, far right) who was one of three generations on the ride. Jim Bob Humphreys and his chuckwagon crew provided grub and then washed up.

May through September. Expenditures are at 32 percent.

Recreation Fund revenues are at 22 percent with expenditures at 19 percent.

The village is in its first full year of operations for the Civic Center Fund. First quarter revenues are at 45 percent and expenditures at 20 percent.

Nichols noted that the state increased the rate of debt service by 55 cents per thousand.

Village manager Ron Wicker praised Nichols for the village's first place budget award presented by the New Mexico Municipal League.

The council agreed to deputy manager Alan Briley's recommendation to ask the state for more time to prepare some preliminary cost estimates for their cost in the Highway 48 widening project.

Briley said the loan, nearly one million dollars, is to be paid back in 10 years. He said with that kind of burden he felt uncomfortable entering into an agreement without knowing any of the costs that will be involved.

Mayor Shaw drafted the request for time to Lester Cisneros, manager of the Railroad and Utilities Section of the New Mexico State Highway and Transportation Department.

Under regular items, the council approved resolutions to promote global harmony and to support the 1995 Governor's Rural Economic Development Forum. The second resolution also was designed to assist Civic Events Center director Kathleen Michelena in her bid for the conference in 1995 to be held in Ruidoso.

In other business, resident Joe Wheatley voiced several complaints to the council that began in 1987 to date. Those complaints included garbage and trash, potholes, widening of his street, paving his street, planning and zoning in general, village attorneys in general, the water department in general, barking dogs and at least one lawsuit that he lost.

Midway through his complaints Wheatley asked for a drink of water.

"It's in the kitchen," the mayor said.

Saturday nights.

The Enzian Schuplatlers, and Rudy's International Dance Group are authentic German groups. Saturday night the El Paso dance group, Pollonia Dancers, will perform.

Several German booths will be set up to enrich the palates of Oktoberfest patrons. A brat booth serving the famous German sausage, the Lutheran Ladies will host a booth featuring strudel and caramel apples.

Potato Soup, red cabbage, roasted corn, hot dogs, popcorn and six authentic beers and schnapps will delight the visitors to Oktoberfest.

On-again, off-again study funds on the placement of a temporary nuclear waste disposal site somewhere in the U.S. may be on again.

Senator Jeff Bingaman sponsored an amendment to the Senate's Water and Energy appropriations bill that would have cut off study funds until a process for local consensus is established. The House included similar language, and the two versions of the bill are scheduled for debate in conference committee.

Congressman John Dingell, chairman of the U.S. House of Representatives Committee on Energy and Commerce, has indicated he'll lead efforts to strip Senator Jeff Bingaman's amendment from the Water and Energy appropriations bill.

In objecting to the amendment, Dingell wrote: "This language effectively amends ... creating a new certification that requires the Nuclear Waste Negotiator to speculate about future agreements prior to grant disbursement.

"It is legislation that changes existing law in violation of Rule XXI, Clause 2(c)."

The Mescalero Apache Indian Tribe is the only group in the running for the next study grant, $2.8 million; and tribal officials have been in Washington D.C. lobbying for the right to receive that money and continue their studies.

Shrinking

unpleasant, the members of the Ruidoso Education Association already have been polled and support the third plan as the most palatable, Gladden said.

Second would be a reduction in work force, with a pay cut last on the list.

High school teacher Gerald Ames called for more accountability on the part of top management.

"We've done this once," he said. "How many more times must we do it?"

He said teachers have accepted pay cuts and made other adjustments in the past.

"It's time for the people at the top to look at what they're doing," he said. "You can't freeze the budget every year. You guys (board members) have to look at how you can ensure this never happens again."

"What do we do differently?" board president Ron Hemphill asked Ames.

Gladden said many people had input in determining the projection.

"We responded to salary and site needs, but (the budget) was based on factors such as growth that just didn't materialize," he said. The district had been notified by tribal officials to expect 100 new students from a housing area being built. The district figured conservatively on 40 students, but only 25 enrolled, he said.

He invited Ames to take a shot at predicting growth.

"Ask Donny (Weems)," Ames said. "We had a conference and I said I thought the budget was way too high."

Ames also gave some insight into problems teachers face when they return after summer to find their budgets frozen.

With a line item budget, if a cut is necessary, then each item should be cut by the same amount, he said.

He complained that in the past he has worked on a budget, was told the money was included, but has never received it.

"You're saying money allocated to you, you never saw?" asked board member Mike Morris.

Ames nodded affirmatively. "We never got it," he said. "It never came back."

He explained that some teachers order supplies in the spring before the summer break and use 100 percent of their allocation. He prefers to wait until he comes back from the summer to get a better handle on the real needs and number of students in his classes. He considers that approach less wasteful.

But what has happened on several occasions is that the budget has been frozen in late summer because of fewer students than projected or a lower per unit reimbursement from the state. That means he has no money to use, Ames said.

Board member Susan Lutterman said she didn't understand how the central office could shift money without going back to each principal to discuss the situation since the budget is a site-based approach.

Gladden and high school principal Don Weems said all valid educational supplies are provided.

"The budget was frozen last year, but I can't remember a time when I didn't approve a requisition that was really needed," Weems said.

He pointed out that the sacrifices will be spread around. He is operating without a secretary and it's difficult.

"I'm not hollering yet," Weems said.

Nob Hill Elementary principal Roger Sowder said he orders basic supplies for his school in the spring, therefore, a freeze won't impact teachers as much.

"If we're down 30 percent, then we have to cut the site base budgets by 30 percent," Gladden said. "We don't want to cut salaries, too, so we have to look at the site based budgets."

"I can get by with nothing. I have done it for years," Ames said. "I would like to have an amount equal to others. We have taken pay cuts and freezes and sucked it up for years. Let's stop over projecting and then coming up short. Then you won't have half the moral problems."

"I agree," said board member James Paxton. "But the converse of that is, if no growth is shown and there are no pay increases. Then when it (the state money) comes in higher, we'll hear that we did it on purpose."

One good solution would be for the state to stop handing down mandates on raises unless it provides all of the money, too, Gladden said. It's not just the dollar pay increases, but the benefits also continue to escalate, he said.

"We had the push for salaries last April. We pulled everything out of the budget we could to meet the six to four percent mandate," Gladden said.

"What the Ruidoso board is trying to do is to keep its staff in the top five to six districts in the state in salaries. We're fortunate in Ruidoso to benefit from federal programs and bond issues."

Hemphill defended Gladden and criticized Ames for taking pot shots.

"I think it's unfortunate someone would throw stones at the administration's effort to increase salaries," he said. "I don't understand that philosophy. The comments are a little irresponsible from my viewpoint."

A site base budget is driven by the needs of the teachers and is an innovative approach, he said.

"Had we not projected that growth, we would not have given raises and this room would be filled tonight with teachers," Hemphill said.

Ames began to debate whether the increases truly were four and six percent, because the regular pay boost for teachers moving up a step on the salary matrix was included.

"A raise is a raise," Hemphill cut him off.

"I applaud Mike that he's trying to help us out," Ames said. "But I want to ensure we don't have to do it again (cut budgets)."

Principals at the meeting said their staffs were willing to do whatever is necessary and aren't complaining.

"Let's not let any educational need of a child go unmet," Hemphill said.

Lutterman asked whether the bilingual teacher position at Nob Hill will be filled. She said it appeared to be an important post for teachers at the school and urged Gladden and other board members to really listen to the district staff.

During the Monday meeting on the budget crunch, many employees offered good suggestions, but some seemed reluctant to speak, she said.

"I don't want anybody in our district to be afraid to share and express their ideas," Lutterman said. "It's important for them to know they're not going to get into trouble if they share with us. I think that's really important."

Danny Sisson, a local businessman and parent of a child in the school system, said board members need to make sure that morale does not dip so low that children pick up on the problem during school hours.

"I think it's very important that school personnel are careful about what they say during school hours and about what's put in the newspaper," Sisson said. "My daughter is in seventh grade and reads the entire newspaper."

He urged the board to try to get parents involved, maybe even do some work for the district as volunteers.

"Let them see what's going on in the school district," Sisson said. "I don't know enough to know what's right or wrong, but I want the best education for my child that is possible through the taxes I pay."

He wants Ruidoso High School graduates to excel and not be under trained, Sisson said.

He asked Gladden what kind of impact the opening of the new elementary school at White Mountain will have on the budget.

"The new building will have to be staffed, but the impact will be minimal because we are only moving classes, but we will hire custodians," Gladden said. Meals will be prepared at the high school and brought into the new school.

It's a wait-and-see game until the State Legislature meets again after the first of the year, he said.

"I have no idea what the state will determine the funding to be, but we keep hearing that the New Mexico economy is on an upswing and there's a $300-million surplus," Gladden said. "I hope they don't repeal the gas tax, because it is generating money, lots of it, that could really help the schools. We'll know in February."

In other business, the board:

—heard that a joint sale of surplus items owned by the Village of Ruidoso and the school district is set for 10 a.m. Saturday, October 16, at the Sierra Blanca Airport.

The district's items include two vehicles, but the majority is audiovisual equipment. Everything will be sold, Gladden said.

—thanked the Altrusa Club for donating $500 to the White Mountain Elementary library, $500 to the White Mountain Intermediate library and $500 to the White Mountain bilingual program.

—accepted the resignations of

Judy Justus as a first grade teacher at Nob Hill, Martha Stokes as registrar at the high school and Cynthia Farrera as special education instructional assistant at Ruidoso Middle School.

—acted on the recommendation of Gladden to hire Louis Telles Jr., Lisa Shaw and Keith Long as custodians at Ruidoso High School; Becky Chapman, Marilyn Trotter and Lara Tarvin as instructional assistants at Nob Hill; Celeste Cox as music instructional assistant at White Mountain Elementary; Veralynn Platta and Chris Apache as Title VII instructional assistants at White Mountain and Nob Hill.

Gladden explained that these people were hired at the beginning of the year and are not being added now.

—heard a report on Headstart by Sandy Gladden, director of Region IX Cooperative Education Center, and Roger Sowder, principal of Nob Hill.

They said Ruidoso's approach of blending the program into a regular school setting is used in only 25 percent of the programs nationally, but the Clinton Administrator favors that approach.

Board members were asked to review a proposed formal program agreement between Region IX, the Ruidoso system and the regional coordinating council for Headstart. Action will be requested next month.

"It makes sense to blend programs," Gladden said. "If you can make them fit the kids, we'll be better off."

Blended program also allows sharing of resources and equipment, she said.

Headstart programs began last year in Ruidoso and Capitan and will begin in Hondo this January.

—went into executive session on personnel and to begin the superintendent's evaluation process.

State education officials will visit, review Ruidoso schools

A team of officials from the State Department of Education will be in town the last week of October to determine whether the Ruidoso school system meets all requirements for accreditation.

At 10 a.m. Monday, October 25, they will conduct an entry meeting with superintendent Mike Gladden. They'll meet with school board members and staff from 1 to 3:30 p.m. at the central office. From 3:30 to 5 p.m., staff only will confer with the team, and from 5 to 6 p.m., parent groups will offer their views.

The next two days will be spent visiting each school and going over the strengths and weaknesses.

An exit meeting, where school personnel get to hear the impressions of team members, is scheduled from 11 a.m. to noon Thursday, October 28.

A school that fails to be accredited faces the possible loss of state financial support and student credits may not be recognized by other districts. If a team detects problems, a report is issued detailing required corrections.

Taekwondo tourney planned

Taekwondo enthusiasts will gather at 9 a.m. Saturday, October 16, in the gymnasium at White Mountain Elementary School to pit skills against others in the same class.

Forms will begin at 9 a.m. and will continue until noon with sparring beginning afterwards. The matches will last most of the day.

Taekwondo is a form of karate, which means hands and feet. Although, taekwondo uses both, the majority of the time emphasis is placed on footwork.

The 150 contestants range of skills starts with beginning white belts and extends to expert black belts. Contenders are from New Mexico, Texas and Arizona.

For more information contact Joe Yates at 258-3001 (H) or 257-9057 (W). Admission will be $3 for adults, $2 ages seven to 18, (children seven and under are admitted free).

Mining area closed to public

Until a reclamation plan to ensure the safety of mineral collectors and the public is completed, portions of three sections of public land four miles south of Bingham will be closed.

The area was the site of a recent fatality involving tourists trying to collect minerals from a mine.

While the closing of sections 1, 30 and 31 is temporary, representatives of the Bureau of Land Management said all uses and access, including filing mining claims, is prohibited.

They said unfounded rumors that the Hansonburg District may be permanently closed unfortunately, have stimulated interest in filing new claims and visiting the site.

Ruidoso Downs police car crashes while officer is on a routine patrol

by RENITA FREEMAN
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

An accident without injuries involving a Ruidoso Downs Police car occurred at 1:47 p.m. Saturday, October 10, as patrol officer Minerva Davalos answered a burglary alarm at the Museum of the Horse.

Davalos, along with officer Corkey Condon responded to the alarm.

Condon's unit went to the front of the Museum of the Horse to secure the entrance. Davalos continued down the access road toward the rear of the building to secure it from the back.

As Davalos neared the entrance at the service road and the lower parking lot of the Museum, the 1991 Chevrolet Blazer left the road, traveled 13 feet and came to rest against a medium sized tree, according to the investigative report.

Tire marks measuring eight feet in length indicated the vehicle was traveling at 30 mph when it failed to negotiate the turn, stated the report.

Davalos radioed the police dispatcher and advised him of the accident then continued on foot to the rear of the building.

Condon had checked and discovered the alarm was sounded when tourists reached into a display case and touched an exhibition.

Davalos was taken to the emergency room of the Lincoln County Medical Center treated and released. The officer was placed on paid inactive duty for a few days, according to Ruidoso Downs Police Chief Will Hoggard.

She is scheduled to return to the hospital Friday for a follow up examination.

Damage to the car has been estimated between $1,200 and $1,300.

Chief Hoggard investigated the accident. In a report dated October 13, Hoggard stated, "I tested the speed of 30 mph without attempting to turn into the parking lot, this speed proved too fast for me."

The report went on to state that Hoggard concurred with New Mexico State Police Officer Mike Howard, that the vehicle was traveling too fast.

Ruidoso Downs Police policy states, "Officers shall obey posted speed limits and traffic control devices while on routine patrol and while responding to non-emergency calls.

"Emergency vehicle operations shall be conducted in strict adherence to existing statutes."

The policy goes on to list three classifications of accidents: serious, non-preventable or serious preventable.

A Fleet Safety Board is required to meet to investigate the accident. The board is made up of members whose duties require them to drive a village owned vehicle. The members must have a minimum of two years tenure and have an accident free driving record for the previous year.

A point system is used to determine penalties. An accumulation of six or more points within a 24-month period is sufficient cause for remedial training to be required. Nine or more points within a 24-month period may constitute sufficient cause to recommend termination.

A classification of points and penalties are decided upon by the Fleet Safety Board.

Non-preventable has no points; preventable has one to three points assigned and serious preventable has four to six points assigned.

Davalos currently has no points against her driving record, according to Hoggard.

The Fleet Safety Board was to meet Wednesday afternoon to review the case.

Members of the board are Sgt. David Hightower, Downs maintenance foreman Dennis Riddle, animal control officer Tom Armstrong, Corporal Dana Terlecky and Police Chief Hoggard.

Dispute leads to threats, charges

by RENITA FREEMAN
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Fourth degree aggravated assault charges were filed against Shawn Kasehagen, of 800 block of Washington Avenue in Ruidoso Downs.

In a complaint filed against Kasehagen, Ernesto Nunez told police that on the night of October 2, Kasehagen pulled a knife on him and told him, "I'm going to murder you with this knife."

The police report stated a disagreement had broken out concerning loud music. Nunez stated in the report that he was walking in front of Kasehagen's apartment when he was threatened with the knife.

The report stated the two men had a longstanding dispute between them.

If convicted of the aggravated assault charge, Kasehagen could face up to 18 months in jail and/or up to $3,000 in fines.

Kasehagen was released on his own recognizance. Bond was set for $3,000.

A flurry of burglaries and breakins have also been reported to the Ruidoso Downs Police Department.

Sarah Prothro, in 500 block of Nevada, reported three squash blossom necklaces and a liquid silver necklace worth $1,050 missing from her home.

James S. Stirman whose address is listed as Drawer 866, Highway 70, reported carpet and household items missing from a vacant house.

The residence had "jimmy" marks on the lock and the front window had been pulled away from the frame, according to the police report.

Don Breedlove of Box 9, Ruidoso Downs, reported the loss of a Remington 306 rifle with a red field scope, a lever action shot gun, a CD and tape player and a 21-inch television set.

"The investigation into the burglaries is still going on. But, I feel confident the from the evidence we have that we know the parties involved and expect to make an arrest soon," said Downs Police Chief Will Hoggard.

Local gymnasts to host meet Saturday

Warriors face number two Oñate this Friday

by KENT BEATTY

The News Sports Correspondent
The Ruidoso Warrior football team, fresh off an impressive win over Deming in its district opener, faces another top-five AAA power Friday night when the Warriors travel to Las Cruces for a meeting with number two ranked Oñate.

The game is scheduled for a 7:30 p.m. kickoff at New Mexico State University's Memorial Stadium.

So far this year, Ruidoso has played four of the state's top five football teams — Lovington, Artesia, Portales and now it's Oñate's turn at bat.

While the Knights are ranked number two in the AP poll, it's questionable whether their 6-0 record demands such attention from the state's sportswriters.

Obviously Oñate is a good football team, but the Knights' schedule is far from tough. The Oñate Knights have played cream puffs in four of their six games. Only Las Cruces Mayfield and Las Cruces High are formidable opponents for a team that has had the success that Oñate has over the past two seasons.

In addition to Cruces High and Mayfield, the Knights own wins over Gadsden, Belen, Parkland and Socorro. There aren't any wins over Portales or Lovingtons in that group.

But 6-0 is 6-0. The Knights know how to win football games and they've proved it. Oñate has the best win-loss record in the state, during the past two years — and this year's unblemished mark just adds to that statistic.

Warrior head coach Mike Gaston has great respect for the Knights.

"Offensively, they are very, very good. They have a great running back, and they have the ability to throw the ball. They're strong and quick and the block well. They are just a very good offensive football team," said Gaston.

"On defense, they are not as big and physical as they have been in the past, but they have some quickness and they move down the line very well. I'd compare them to Artesia defensively," said Gaston.

When Oñate lines up on the offensive side of the ball, once again the Warriors will be looking in the mirror as they did against Fabens, two weeks ago. The Knights run the Wing-T just like the Warriors. However, unlike Fabens, they can throw the ball with some effectiveness.

In last week's game against the Socorro Warriors, Oñate moved the ball with ease, despite only getting in the end zone twice during the game. Oñate gained over 350 yards offensively against Socorro's 65.

The killer was that the Knights were penalized for 185 yards at Socorro's 15. This can certainly happen at Socorro — we've seen it enough.

Oñate's colorful head coach Tom Essex explained when asked if he was surprised about the close game.

"We know when we go to Socorro that we're going to have some tough officiating and we had the *$#%# officiating of the world. They called Chucking (what's chucking?), they called illegal use of the hands on defense, they called my right tackle holding with his neck, said Essex.

"Ruidoso has made such great progress this year. They played a great ball game against Fabens. Even the game that they lost the worst, against Portales, was not a mis-match.

They've moved the ball against everyone they've played.

Heck, the Lovington game could have very easily been 14-14 at the half, said Essex.

Essex has done his homework in preparing for the Warriors. Oñate has seen film of the Warriors in all of their games except one (Tularosa). He was quick to point out the Warriors progress through the season.

"Hey, you guys (Ruidoso) moved the ball against Artesia in game one very well and last week against Deming you went the distance the field twice to score, there is no doubt in the improvement. Our guys are definitely not looking as this as a breather — we think Ruidoso can play," said Essex.

When asked for a comparison with last year's Oñate team Essex had a hard time.

"I really don't know. Offensively, we think we're as good as we've ever been. We also think that we're not as good defensively as we'd like to be. We haven't played anyone yet that you could classify as a formidable opponent, so I'm having trouble assessing where we really stand, said Essex.

"Ruidoso has read the damn book. They run the trap, sweep, kick, wham — the same stuff we run. They are trying to do some basic, sound things — I'm very impressed with their staff and their kids. They played everybody hard, stayed tough and just made enough mistakes to let those really teams beat them," said Essex.

In the past couple of weeks, those mistakes have been diminishing. Oh, last week we could have let one get away — but we didn't.

Ruidoso's ball-control offense has done a great job of letting its sophomore-laden defense stay off the field. But when the defense is out there they've come up with the plays.

Last week it was Jimmy Varnadore's key interception at the five yardline that turned Deming away from paydirt in the first half and Byron Soules' key sack in the fourth quarter that nailed the coffin shut on the Wildcats.

Offensively, Ruidoso runs the ball well and the passing game is clicking right along with John Echols throwing to Brandon Eamello, Soules and Ricky Devara.

This week's questions remain with injuries. The starting offensive backfield will not be starting. Both Rex Comanche and Raul Davis will see limited (if any) playing time. That leaves J.R. Chino and David LaMay at fullback, and Devara and Anthony Torres splitting time at tailback.

Those two tore-up Fabens two weeks ago.

Chino had a great game against Deming despite getting no practice time on offense. All in all, we are very deep at running back so its not as key as it could be. That is — if the subs perform like they can.

Ruidoso can win the game if they turn in another Fabens-type performance. The winning is getting easier and easier, but this week the Warriors are facing a team that know how to win, too.

Question is — who wants it the most??

Ruidoso soccer team heads into final games

With two home games left on the schedule, the Warrior soccer team is going strong.

October 12, the Warriors routed the Oñate Knights with a 1-0 final.

The contest was tough, with Ruidoso having 16 shots on goal to Oñate's 24 shots.

Warrior Lief Anderson scored with an assist by Matthew Ensor. Matt Harshey helped to bring the victory to the team by contributing 19 saves on goal.

"This was the best game we have played to date. Our defense, which we have struggled with, really solidified. It was an excellent job defensively," said head soccer coach Dean Hood.

Game strategy was to play defense while keeping the game close, thereby giving the Warriors the opportunity to win at the end, according to the coach.

The Warriors kept Oñate from scoring and with just under five minutes left in play the Warriors scored.

"It was really a good win for us. Oñate entered the game with a record of 7-3 and those losses were to 4A schools. It was a solid team to beat," Hood said.

The Warriors October 9 game against Gadsden ended with a 5-2 win over the opponents.

At first the team looked sluggish and tired, according to the coach, but then they caught fire and took off.

"We played the first five minutes like the week before, tired and sluggish. We gave up an early goal and after that we seemed to come alive," Hood said.

Lief Anderson, Cory Hood, Jimmy Stover, Dryler Hissel and Oswaldo Aleman scored goals with assists by Cory Hood, Matthew Ensor and Lief Anderson.

"We played the last 70 minutes very well, particularly the second half," Hood said.

"I'd like to compliment several players. These players primarily play defense so they don't get the opportunity to score many goals. Danny Schrader, Daniel Espinosa, Earl Holstein and Matt Norbury are mainstays of our defense and have done an excellent job," Hood said.

In the October 6, game against Belen the Warriors fell 3-1.

Lief Anderson scored the goal for the team with an assist from Cory Hood.

"We did not play with any intensity in this game. We looked sluggish and tired," Hood said.

The Warriors will lock horns with Santa Teresa Saturday, October 16, and with Oñate Tuesday, October 19.

The showing for the contest was strong for the Warriors, considering varsity was the only team to run a full team, according to Coach Ronny Maskew.

"Everyone made a great deal of improvement this week. This was one of our best showings ever. I was proud of the way all the kids performed. If we continue to improve, the district meet should be very competitive," Maskew said.

The Warriors next meet is Saturday, October 16, in Gadsden.

Turnage leads the pack in this week's pigskin poll

by RENITA FREEMAN
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

This week's winner in the football contest had the rest of the entries beat by a country mile in The Ruidoso News pigskin poll.

Correctly picking 17 out of 20 games was Jim Turnage of Ruidoso.

Out of 35 entries in this week's picks eight missed four, seven missed five, six missed six, five missed four, one missed eight, two missed nine, two missed 10, two missed 14 and one procrastinating entry turned in last week's picks.

The game missed most often in high school picks was Goddard versus Portales. El Paso Parkland and Lovington threw several pickers into a tailsipin.

College games were for the most part on the mark. Fresno State versus Colorado State was the pick missed most often.

In pro ball the New York Jets game against the L.A. Raiders was the pick missed most with the Green Bay, Denver game coming in a close second.

It is not too late to get into the football contest. Just pick the majority of the winners of the football games chosen, by hook or crook, and you can collect $25 to blow any way you want.

Just remember to get your picks in on time and don't procrastinate.

Volleyball league teaches basics to future Lady Warriors

by RENITA FREEMAN
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Year two is a success, The Little League volleyball season is just ending and the small ball players have learned a lot.

"Last year was our first year to do this. When sign up came for this year I was just hoping we would have 50 kids; but we had 130 sign up. I was really excited," Jody Blanton, Ruidoso High School head volleyball coach, said.

"Volleyball is a real fast growing sport," said Coach Blanton. "Part of our program is the fact we need to start the kids at a younger age. We felt one way to do it was with the Little League program," Blanton said.

"There has really been a lot of improvement in the younger kids. We don't just drill 100 percent on volleyball skills. We do a lot of different things. With a bunch of six and seven year olds their attention span isn't going to last with just volleyball," Blanton said.

"We do have a few kids who aren't quite six yet, their birthdays fell at the wrong time, but, most of the kids are six and up," Blanton said.

Younger children benefit the most from the eye hand coordination exercises, according to the coach.

"The younger kids just don't have a long attention span. One of the things we do is to try and keep them interested in the game. We do a lot of things, like play with balloons, the kids are learning even if they don't realize it," Blanton said.

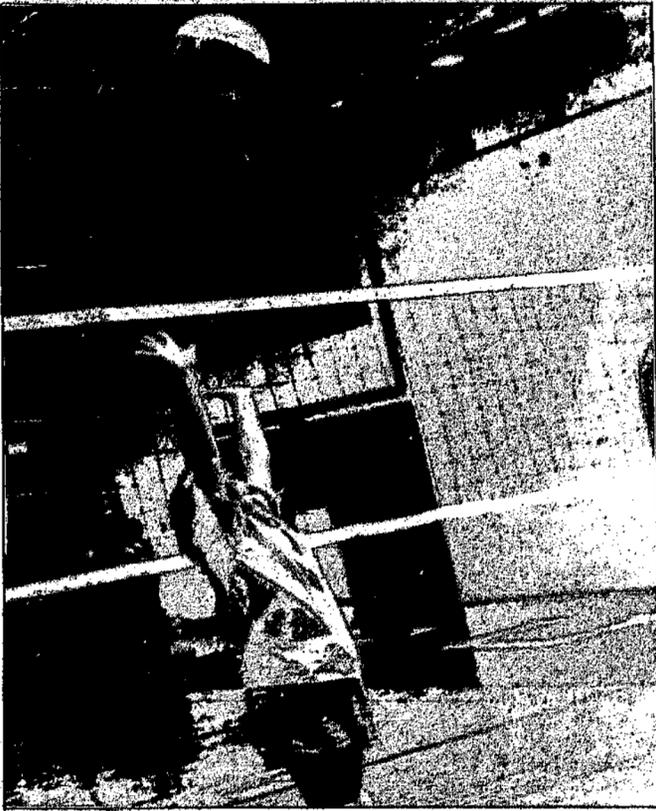

The league was just six weeks long. The first three weeks were dedicated to practice and to learning how to play the game using techniques and strategy. The last three weeks half the playing time went to practice and the last half of time teams played each other in actual games.

"Some of the kids can just get one serve over for the entire night but they still are having a great time," Blanton said.

Little League Volleyball coaches are high school girls who have volunteered their time. Each team has two coaches with Blanton overseeing the program.

"The high school girls love it. We asked the girls if they wanted to coach, it is strictly volunteer," Blanton said.

"The girls have put a lot of time

Little League volleyball players work hard but the effort is well worth it. Smiles are the main thing all the teams have in common, that and the enjoyment of learning the game of volleyball.

and thought into coaching. They spend quite a bit of time figuring out what to do in practice," Blanton said.

The high school coaches enjoy working with the younger children according to the head coach.

"I want to commend the high school girls. I've seen so much improvement in the kids," Blanton said.

Many of the children playing are repeats from last year. We have quite a few new ones also," Blanton said.

Age limits in the league range from six to 12.

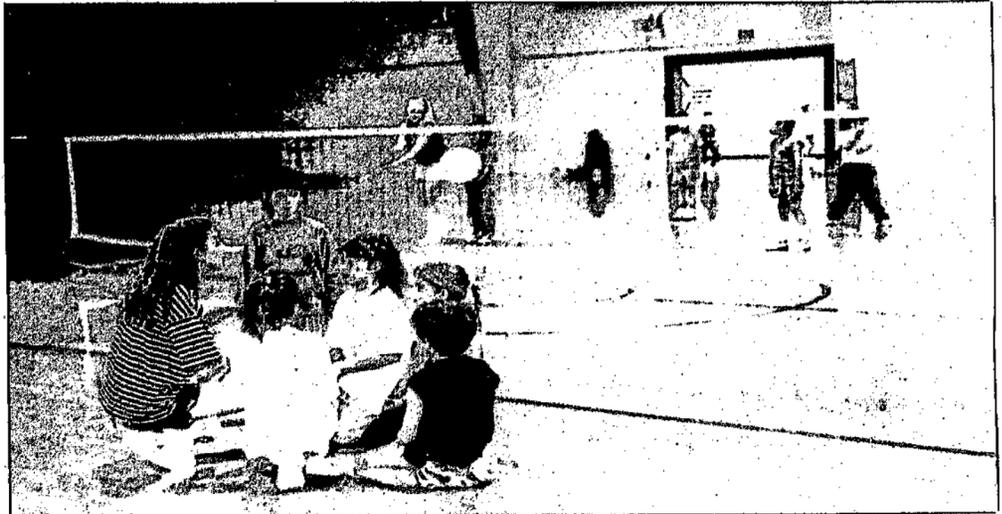

"The program is great for the kids. We do a variety of things that isn't just volleyball. We work with balloons and do different things that really helps eye to hand coordination, footwork and various things like that," Blanton said. "A lot of people aren't aware of volleyball and the way it has changed. It is a power game," Blanton said.

"We aren't trying to teach that. But, there are a lot of things that need to be taught. The high school kids are ideal to teach some of this. The kids are learning some basic fundamentals and are having a good time also," Blanton said.

"We've modified the game a lot. We let the ball bounce and we let the kids move up closer when serving. The kids have really adjusted well to that," Blanton said.

"Last year we started the program at the middle school and we had some seventh graders involved. Those kids are doing great. The league is not all of it but it helped a lot getting out there and learning some basic fundamentals," Blanton said.

The seventh grade volleyball team is undefeated in play this year.

"I'm sure you are aware that the seventh graders are going strong this year in volleyball. Many of those kids were in the program last year," Blanton said.

When asked how the young players responded to the league, the coach said they were enthusiastic about playing.

"They absolutely love it. They are so excited about playing. The group of kids we have out here now are as enthusiastic a group as I've ever seen," Blanton said.

"As far as enthusiasm goes they never lose it," Blanton said.

In Little League the players do not receive a trophy at the end of the season.

"No trophy is given. We don't want the league to be too competitive. We want the kids to come out and get some success under their belts. The coaches do things like make certificates or give the kids treats.

"We don't want the league so competitive. We want the kids to learn the fundamentals. To give trophies would defeat the purpose of the league," Blanton said.

Success is due to many different people helping to work on making the league first rate.

"Debbie Sanchez at White Mountain Intermediate has been a big help in getting information out and helping to get the kids involved. Robyn Johnson, the head volleyball coach at the middle school has been wonderful.

"Patsy Page and Yelena Temple both have been great, too. We could not have done this without all of the help," Blanton said.

Team 8 dog piles on the coaches as they wait their turn on the court. Practice is mixed with game time but the hard work is fun for the team members. Several members admit the favorite part for the team is the treats at the end of the practice.

Tigers triumph

The unbeaten Capitan Tigers pounded and battered the Reserve Mountaineers Friday, grinding them into the turf 57-12.

The Mountaineers were totally outmanned, with a night of three plays and out.

After the opening kickoff, and being tossed for two losses in three downs, the Mountaineers kicked to Capitan's 45.

Three Michel Fish passes later, Trevor Cox was standing in the end zone with the first touchdown.

The pigskin veered wide right for a miss and Capitan led 6-0.

On the Mountaineers second possession, they were held again with no first down and were forced to kick.

Damian Roybal returned for five yards.

The Tigers then marched down the middle of the field four plays before Ernie Trujillo grabbed a

Trustees split vote on cop

by DIANNE STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

A political power play on the Capitan Board of Trustees Monday left a casualty in its wake and the village without a back-up police officer.

Board members Gilbert Montoya and Leroy Montes, who said they were tired of Mayor Frank Warth steamrolling decisions past them, balked and voted against confirmation of Shawn Menges as the new village police officer.

Confirmation requires a majority of the four trustees who serve with Warth on the board. Members Gordon Ross and L.C. Cozzens favored the appointment.

Warth said he primarily left the choice up to police chief Tony Cano after interviewing several of the 17 applicants for the job.

"He has to work with the new officer," Warth said. "Shawn has road experience, is certified and is a small town boy." He previously served with the Catron County Sheriff's Department.

Warth barely spoke the words, before Montes made it clear he would vote against the appointment.

"This is the second time I've seen the man," he said. "I'm not going to put a man on the street unless I have knowledge of him myself."

Montoya said Warth violated an agreed upon procedure for the selection.

"I understood that you and the chief were going to select three people," Montoya said. "You took it upon yourself (to select)."

He turned toward Menges, who was standing at the back of the room in uniform.

"Nothing against you," Montoya said. "It was the way it was handled."

Cano told board members that he thought he had board permission to select someone with Warth.

"You were to pick three," Montoya repeated.

"It makes no difference whether it's a policeman or a garbage collector," Montes said. "I won't appoint someone I don't know. I was elected to represent the people. I can't honestly vote for him, because I don't know him."

Leaving the decision up to the chief is questionable since Cano was just hired last month, Montes said.

"Is it possible to work out a compromise for you and Leroy to interview him tonight," Ross asked.

"That's putting the cart before the horse," Montoya said, then directed his remarks to the mayor.

"It was mishandled and it was mishandled on your part."

"It might be different if this was a big city," Montes said. "But this is a small village. Nothing I've said reflects on the man."

Cano said he took Menges around to meet all of the trustees, but Montoya was not available. They did talk to Montes, however, he said.

But Montes contended he didn't have a chance to question Menges.

"If you had the decency to call me and tell me his background so I would have a chance to question him (he might have felt differently)," Montes said. Instead, he found out about the new officer at a meeting in Carrizozo.

"I said I don't know (anything about the new officer), that nobody informed me," Montes said.

Montoya asked village attorney J. Robert Beauvais whether the procedure was legal.

Beauvais responded that he understood Warth and Cano were to narrow the field to three candidates for all members to participate in the final interviews.

The mayor may temporarily appoint an officer, but he must muster a majority of three trustees to confirm, Beauvais said.

"You advised us to do it that way so what happened tonight wouldn't happen," Montoya said.

Village clerk Deborah Cummins told The Ruidoso News Tuesday that the appointment is on the agenda for a special meeting Thursday, following a closed executive session on personnel.

In another matter, Beauvais advised the trustees that they would have to decide whether to take an active step in regulating the local cable company's rates for basic service, ask the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) to take up that responsibility or be passive and allow the cable company to regulate itself.

Since the village only generates a few hundred dollars from its two percent cable franchise fee, it's not feasible to set up the administrative mechanism to regulate the cable company's rate, he said.

He recommended requesting FCC assistance based on the village's inability to support the administrative costs.

Ross offered the motion, which passed unanimously.

In other business, the board of trustees:

—voted to proceed with a procedure to establish earlier water rights in the Pecos River system, moving the current date of 1949 to 1938.

Beauvais said the State Engineer may declare that rights junior to 1947 are subject to cancellation to meet the requirements of a court order regarding the state of Texas' claim to water from the river.

A Roswell attorney already has completed the research and has notified the council that he is ready to present the evidence that the village was using water from the system for the benefit of its residents since 1938.

Cozzens' motion included that Beauvais should first determine the cost.

—awarded a contract for construction of a fire bay extension to Sombbrero Construction for $40,600.

—awarded a contract for a fence around the wetlands sewage treatment project to Academy Fence of Las Cruces for $16,752.

—proclaimed October 25-30 Drug Awareness Week in Capitan.

—passed a resolution calling for the county fair and fairground to remain in Capitan, although the issue appears already settled with the Lincoln County Commission's decision not to buy the Super Select Sales Barn in Glencoe.

—returned from executive session on litigation and directed Beauvais to proceed with (an unspecified type of) litigation against Curt Temple, the contractor who previously operated the Smokey Bear Museum. Temple lives in Ruidoso.

—approved submitting a Community Development Block Grant application for a three-phase street improvement project that was turned down last year, but is part of the village's master plan. Streets targeted are Second, Third and Fourth.

—satisfied the public hearing requirement, but postponed action until tonight (October 14) on an ordinance pledging the proceeds from environmental gross receipts (sales) tax. The proceeds will secure a bond issue for construction of a regional landfill south of Alamogordo.

Beauvais said the service fees from the landfill should pay off the 15 year bond issue without touching the tax and in as little as seven years. Participation in the regional project will ensure lower garbage dumping rates for the village and its place as a full partner along with other members of the Lincoln County Solid Waste Authority and its counterpart in Otero.

The landfill is expected to last 200 years.

Digging up dirt

Capitan School Board members (above) line up with gold-painted shovels to turn the first spade of dirt on construction of a long-awaited middle school. Voters approved the $1-million project last year. From left are student council president Tycie Traylor, Jack King, Russell Shearer, district superintendent Diana Sonnamaker, board president Tom Trost and Beverly Payne. Zachery Shearer, resting on his father's knee, stood in for absent board member Tim Worrell. Below King surprises Trost with a shower of dirt. A crowd of former and current school officials, village VIPs and parents attended the ceremony. Trost called construction of the new school "the largest step forward in the nine years I have been on the board." T.E. Arrington of Ruidoso will build the school, which is to be completed by May 1994.

Capitan's Orange Crush gears up to do battle with the Bears

Tigers

spiral from Fish for a 28-yard touchdown.

The Tigers completed a 2-point pass conversion to Cox and the Tigers were on top, 14-0.

On the next possession, Reserves broke the scoring drought with a 53-yard touchdown bomb. The extra point flew wide and Capitan stayed on top, 14-6, as the first quarter ended.

Capitan went wild in the second quarter piled on 29 points, the largest single output for a quarter this season.

The first six times the Tigers held the ball in the first half, they scored. No punts necessary, and at 43-6, the Tigers still had to play a second half.

An inside kick by the Mountaineers at the beginning of the second half failed.

With excellent field position on the 45 yard line, the Tigers pounded their way through the Mountaineer defensive line for their seventh straight touchdown.

Fish kicked the extra point and the coach Ed Whopping 50-6.

Coach Ed Whopping ran his Orange Crush team in and out of the second half.

The last Tiger touchdown was a Fish to Cox catch in the third quarter to make the score 57-6.

Davis played his reserves most of the rest of the way.

Reserves scored their last touchdown as the gun went off to end the game, 57-12.

Fish completed 8 out of 14 passes for 247 yards.

The Tigers rushed for 267 yards and were guilty of one fumble and one interception.

For the year, Fish has completed 49 of 88 passes for more than 1,300 yards.

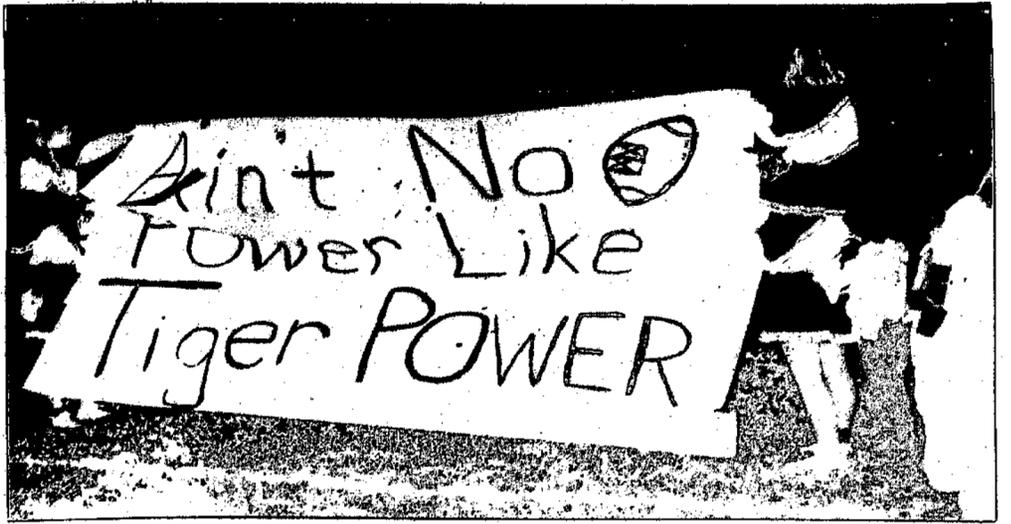

Cloudcroft Bears enter the Tiger den Friday. Coach Davis said the Bears are a very excellent ball club that is well coached. Davis said the game should be tight and a victory would give them the start they need if they expect to win the district. Davis said the success of the Tigers this year can be attributed to the hard work and dedication from his young men. He said the offensive line has been doing a "super job."

The Tigers quarterback and running backs offered a few words of their own to The Ruidoso News about their coaches and their teammates.

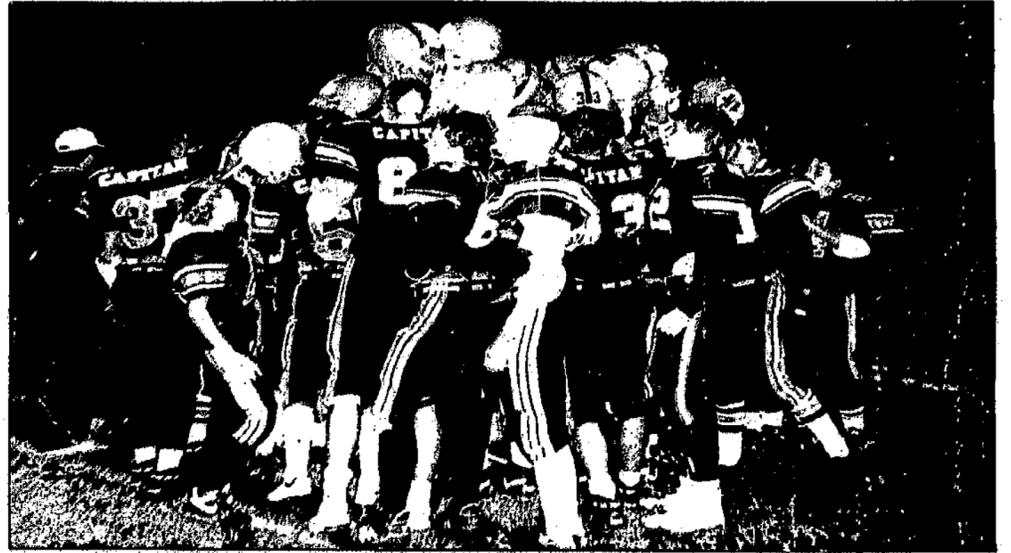

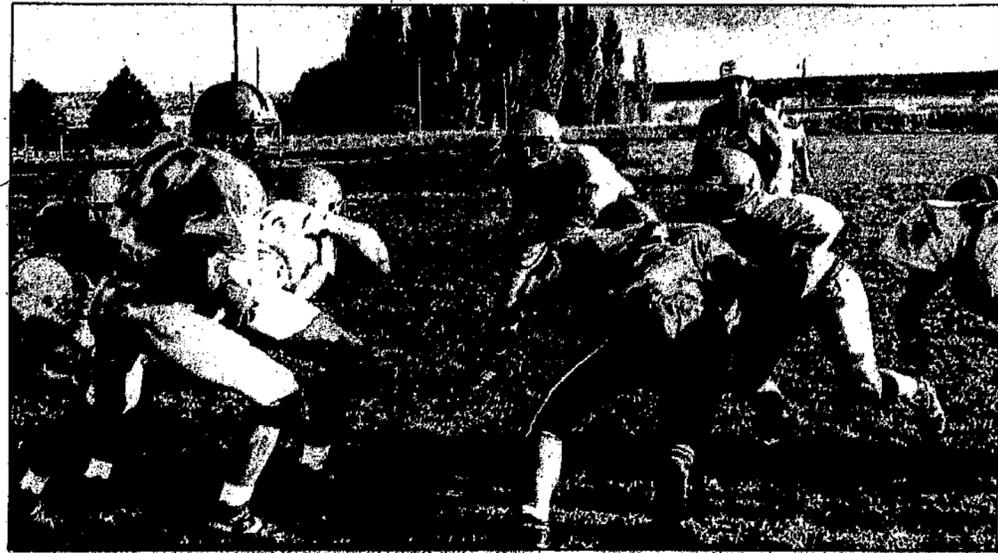

"Sometimes it seems like we get all the praise," the boys said. "But we want everyone to know it's not one or two, it's a team that makes the difference. Without our line blocking for us so that we can make the runs, and without the defense being strong and giving their all, we wouldn't be able to score."

"We just want to thank you all, because we're one for all and all for one. We also want to say a big thanks to coaches Ed Davis, Pat Ventura and Emmett Raby for doing a super job. We couldn't do it without them."

Fans and cheerleaders spread the Tiger power banner at the beginning of the Reserve game (above) last week. Later, the players take out a moment for prayer (below) between trampling the stunned Mountaineers 57-12. At bottom left, the defensive line practices its winning ways for the upcoming district game with Cloudcroft. The unbeaten Tigers are headed into the three tough district games, but are ready to go all the way. Photos courtesy of Kathy Hinkle and Crystal Dalton.

The roster of hard working players includes seniors Jeremy Goodrum, Damlan Roybal, Lando Baca, Trevor Cox and Wes Mitchell; juniors Michael Fish, Troy Stone and J.P. Whipple; sophomores Justin King, Justin Weber, Dutchover; and Josh Turnage. The proud, but exhausted, coaching staff consists of (head coach) Ed Davis, Pat Ventura, Willy Raby, Norman Cline and Chad Merchant. Support positions are Tracey Stone, student trainer; Jamin Fleharty, assistant student trainer; Jimmy Whipple, manager; and Nolan LaRue, manager.

Bonito Lake caretaker oversees improvement projects Fishing will be even more fun

by DIANNE STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

A picture perfect scene, Bonito Lake's blue waters reflect billowing clouds overhead as anglers bask in the sun and try to lure enough fish from its depths for dinner.

Keith Kessler enjoys working outside, but when he looks at the lake, he also sees erosion along its banks and under the road hugging its perimeter.

Caretaker of the lake, the city of Alamogordo's campground nearby and the water pipeline that feeds a portion of the Otero County community to the west of Lincoln County, Kessler is a busy man.

But now that a major revamping and replacement of the pipeline is finished, he has turned his attention toward improvements around the lake.

Last week, he was getting ready to install heavy wire nets filled with rock, called rip rap, to deter erosion and allow drainage. Surveying the scene with Scott Chapman, who also works for the city, he detailed some of the projects that are finished, in progress or ready to start.

A series of terraces, bolstered by treated railroad ties, were constructed in late summer by Ward Construction Company of Ruidoso through the New Mexico Soil and Water Conservation Bureau. They were sponsored locally by the Upper Hondo Soil and Water Conservation District.

As part of that project, diseased trees were removed last April.

"We get a lot of foot traffic off of the parking spurs and that causes erosion as people head down toward the lake," Kessler explained. "We intend to seed the area next spring."

The rip rap and two sets of stairs that are being built were paid for by the Southcentral Resource Conservation and Development Council (RC&D).

A handicap ramp is under construction at the third parking spur, which will be reserved only for vehicles transporting disabled persons, Kessler said. That project is a joint venture between Upper Hondo, RC&D and the city of Alamogordo.

Extra money available from the terracing project was used to add a wall on the handicap trail, he said. The path will include two switchbacks to accommodate the required grade and will lead directly to the lake.

A new central parking area will be constructed at Kraut Canyon, although the other spurs will remain for quick stops and to take photographs, Kessler said.

"The plan for this area is to protect the land and water resource, and still keep it a viable public recreation area," Kessler said.

The big challenge will be to ensure that visitors use the central parking, trails and stairs instead of trying to cut through other areas, causing more erosion.

A major point of concern for Kessler, significant erosion is occurring at the edge of the road and undermining it.

He plans on asking the different government entities that maintain or benefit from the road to cooperate and eliminate the problem before a section of the pavement collapses.

Next year, Kessler would like to see a mini Earth Day at Bonito Lake using Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts to tackle some projects.

"I'm putting together a report and when we're finished, I hope to

Cruel shooter kills fun-loving bird

by DIANNE STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Its mate flew overhead, circling the tree.

For two weeks, the cries of the osprey echoed through the valley around Bonito Lake.

What no one realized was the tree-bound bird had been shot and was dying slowly, unable to fly, unable to find food.

The death also may have doomed the osprey's companion to a lonely existence without offspring since the species mates for life.

Last Thursday, one of the workers saw the bird fall from the tree," said Keith Kessler, who manages the lake, nearby campground and water pipeline for the city of Alamogordo.

When Kessler examined the body, he saw a gaping hole on its shoulder where a bullet from a high caliber rifle had ripped through its flesh and shattered the wing bones.

"Hundreds of people come up here to watch them fish," Kessler said. "They're called fish hawks. It's a real shame someone would shoot a beautiful living thing like that."

"It's wasteful, cruel and destructive."

The insensitive target practice may cost the emotional deficient offender $10,000 and six months in prison.

Under a program called Operation Game Thief, a reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest or conviction of the shooter. Call 1-800-432-GAME or contact the Roswell office of the State Game and Fish Division at 624-6135.

Kevin Adams with the law enforcement division of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife office in Albuquerque, said osprey are protected by the Migratory Bird Treaty Act.

"These are migratory birds and they cross international boundaries," he said. "We have a treaty with Mexico."

Ben Hanson, a wildlife information specialist with the State Game and Fish division, said when the single bird returns each year to the same nest and its mate does not arrive, it's a distinct possibility it won't mate and won't pick up another mate.

"They normally nest in the northern part of the country and when it gets cold and the water freezes, they migrate down south along the water ways, the Rio Grande and Pecos River system, because they do catch and eat fish. Right now, we have no active osprey nests discovered in the state so far," he said.

Kessler said, he's going to miss the duo.

"We just loved watching them drop into the water and pull out a fish," he said. "Someone would have to be a real jerk to do this."

Keith Kessler shows the wingspan of the dead osprey, deliberately killed by someone shooting a high caliber rifle in the Bonito Lake recreation area of Lincoln County. Its mate now is condemned to a solitary life and no offspring.

The club took advantage of the good weather by planning a road trip to Cloudcroft with a cook out along the way. Some of the members are currently restoring classic automobiles.

Exhibit features children's art

Selected artwork by children from 27 countries, spanning six continents, is the focus of an exhibition organized by the National Geographic Society, Paintbrush Diplomacy and the Twenty-seventh International Geographic Congress.

Titled "Geography is Discovery: Exploring the World through Children's Art, the exhibition opens at 2 p.m. October 24, at the Museum of the Horse in Ruidoso Downs.

The local museum is one stop on a national tour that began in Explorers Hall at the National Geographic Society in Washington D.C. in July 1992 and will wind down in 1995.

The exhibition, which will remain at the Museum of the Horse through December 5, includes work by artists from the age of seven to 18. Their paintings cover eight themes: environment, endangered animals, costumes, festivals and dance, economics, flags, maps and charts, family life and architecture.

The exhibition was organized to create a greater cross-cultural communication and understanding from a child's point of view.

According to exhibition organizers, the paintings demonstrate common humanity, beauty of diversity and the conditions of daily life in different cultures.

A catalogue of the artwork will be available at the Museum Mercantile.

Artifact to be added to exhibit

The Mescalero Indian Tribe will dedicate an addition to the Cultural Center in a ceremony at 2 p.m. Friday, October 15.

A Howe military scale, manufactured in 1885, will be added to the Cultural Center's exhibits.

The military cavalry scale was manufactured in 1885, and was used on the Mescalero Indian Agency to weigh grain.

The scale was returned to the Mescalero reservation by Harold Broughton, who found it in Cimarron.

The public is invited to attend the dedication ceremony.

Ranch land gets some TLC

by DIANNE STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

To a motorist driving by on U.S. 64, the fields crowded with one-seed junipers seem more inviting than the open pastures with little or no shade.

But to soil conservationist Hollis Fuchs and the ranchers he counsels, the trees aren't trees at all. They are noxious weeds that rob the ground of water, nutrients and space that otherwise could support grasses and plants to nurture wildlife and livestock.

Some ranchers are trying to reclaim what the trees have stolen. They're fighting back one tree at a time.

Fuchs said what it takes is determination. Money also helps, since the process can be expensive.

The system works best when the ranchers are willing to listen and learn.

Two perfect examples are Wally Ferguson and his son, Matt.

"They're always asking questions and observing things on their ranches," Fuchs said as he turned his pickup truck onto a dirt road west of the highway north of Carizozo. Several more miles and the home of Matt and wife, Becca Ferguson, who teaches in Capitan, came into view.

Waiting for Fuchs with Matt was his father, Wally Ferguson, a rancher and former Capitan graduate, football player, track and field star, teacher and coach. His wife Annie, also came from a ranching background, the Gallacher family.

"Some people look at that field and think it's a woodland, but it's a weed patch," Fuchs said. "They've become weeds because we have eliminated wildfires from our ecosystem, which used to come through and clean things up."

Once established, (the one-seed junipers) are virtually impossible to control. There are several ways to deal with them, all expensive, but if you're going to maintain the rangeland, the watershed, control erosion and protect the wildlife habitat, it has to be done.

"They out-compete the grass and small shrubs, the forbs that are real critical to antelope (pronghorn)."

Fields full of one-seed junipers are not what settlers would have found 100 years ago.

"There would have been a few, but they would have been large old trees with established trunks and just a few young," Fuchs said. "Because there was so much grass production, a fire would sweep through and control new growth. The fire burned off small limbs from the base and turned them into real trees. The trees themselves don't carry fire unless its very dry and there are high winds, and then you end up with nothing left."

The tree's root system feeds in two ways. A tap root may go down as much as 70 feet, where it sucks up an average of 15 gallons of water a day, he said. Each tree also uses a shallow network of roots five to six feet deep that spreads out around the tree, using up area where grass otherwise might grow.

Without the grass and other plants, erosion results. During a tour of the Matt Ferguson ranch, ruts as deep as 10 feet from rushing water were visible in areas where the trees dominated.

Where the food grasses grow, they absorb the water, slow its advance and secure the soil.

"The soils are sandy, but very productive and respond extremely quickly to any moisture," Fuchs said. "They give a flush of vegetation, but don't hold moisture well."

"Managed correctly, they have tremendous production and wildlife potential."

Fuchs was impressed with the variety of grasses and other food plants on the Matt Ferguson ranch, where management practices have included tree removal and alternation of grazing.

"The variety means the land is in good shape," he said.

"When I bought the land, it was almost solid broom grass and snake weed," Wally Ferguson said.

"In some different proportions, the Fergusons now have the same grasses that were here 70 to 80 years ago," Fuchs said. "We're trying to bring the better grasses back."

"Grazing in itself is not bad as long as it is not continuous. The buffalo grazed the grasses down to nothing, but then left and didn't come back for a while."

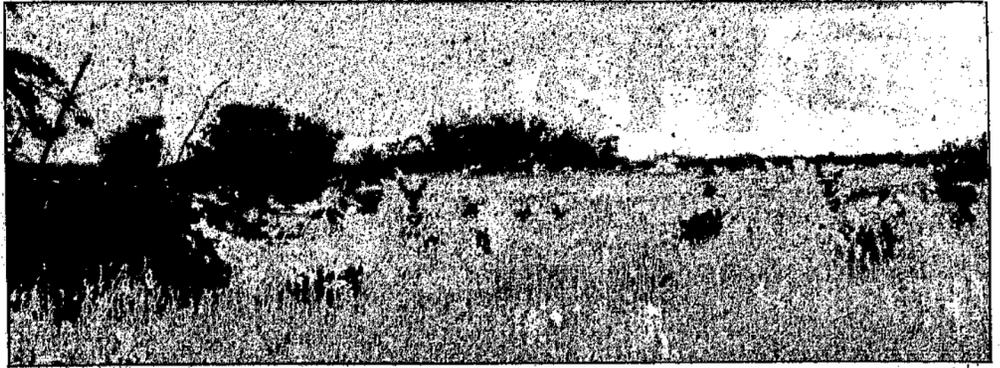

The Soil Conservation Service (under the U.S. Department of Agriculture) encourages a planned grazing system with periodic rest as part of its Resource Management Systems program, he said. The systems also cover providing water facilities, fencing and brush management.

Walking into a patch of trees on a segment of the ranch that is state public land, Fuchs pointed out that the better food grasses such as black and blue gramma are gone. The less desirable, but still useful types of grasses like hairy gramma try to hang on, but the trees are winning.

For the last six to seven years, the Fergusons have concentrated their efforts on their private land, because of the expense. Of the 1,000 acres, all but about 100 acres has been cleared.

"Now the state land is the only problem," Wally Ferguson said.

Pronghorns enjoy the lush grass growing the underground water and pushed out on Matt Ferguson's ranch north of Carizozo. At one time the land was covered with one-seed juniper, which consumed a variety of grasses returned, providing a food source for wildlife and cattle.

Hollis Fuchs (far left) and Wally Ferguson examine a plant growing near a pile of tree trunks and limbs pulled from the ground months earlier. Some of the piles will be burned because they generate intense heat and can

"It costs about $32 an acre to grub and then stack the trees. You can't treat the big trees chemically."

"Before the price of private land took a dramatic increase because of what they (the Clinton Administration) are doing with the public land, it was selling for about $50-$60 an acre. (The expense of clearing trees) was almost like buying your land all over again."

"The (untreated) state land is no good for grazing," Matt Ferguson said. "You won't even find antelope. Deer will use it only to bed down. They eat in the open fields."

"The trees were so thick on this land (the open fields) six years ago, you could ride a horse through them," his father added.

The land was homesteaded in the 1920s.

"They should never have put a plow to this country, but they tried it," Fuchs said. "Now it will take one or two generations to bring it back to a semblance of what it was."

sterilize the ground. Others will be left as homes for small animals and to block snow. At right, Fuchs identifies several different types of grasses growing on the ranch of Matt Ferguson (center).

"This (clearing one tree at a time) was only done six years ago, so it still is in the process of healing."

But the investment has paid off in production of valuable thick bunches of grasses and food plants such as annual buckwheat and side oats.

"We have only done this (clearing) on the most productive sites, because we can't afford to do it on any others," Wally Ferguson said. "This cleared land can produce about 1,200 pounds per acre per year. The area with trees, might produce 250 pounds per year."

Piles of dead trees testify to the family's effort.

"They will burn about half of the piles, because they can generate too much heat and sterilize the ground underneath," Fuchs said. "But they'll leave some, because critters can nest there in the winter and the snow will pile up, so they're not all bad."

The first tract where trees were removed was disturbed much more than later tracts.

"We thought we would have to reseed that land, but we didn't," Wally Ferguson said. "The grass came back."

"Even after we did it, I thought it looks terrible," Matt Ferguson said. "Then the other grasses came back and it took my breath away to look at it."

The deer and antelope seemed to like the change too. On the trip back through the fields, several herds could be seen in the distance.

By the time the heavy equipment operator Gary Lovelace started a new area eight months ago, he had fine tuned his technique, Matt Ferguson said.

"He barely gets any dirt or grass. He just pops the trees out."

Fuchs said ranchers can't clear the land once and think the job is done. They need to revisit the sites every 10 years, chemically killing smaller trees that try to make a come back. Chemical treatment is less expensive and easier.

The maximum period is 15 years, he said.

"If you go 20, you're in a situation where you have to start over."

Heading back toward the ranch house, Matt Ferguson, who took over the wheel for the tour of the ranch, passed a section of land that had been dragged with a chain in 1951, but was again covered with trees.

"It doesn't work unless you follow up with some other treatment," he said. And it greatly disturbs the soil in contrast to uprooting each tree individually.

"Personally, I think we will find that the best approach is to do it tree by tree," Fuchs said. "You have to take the long view."

However, controlled burns may be the answer for agencies such as the U.S. Forest Service on its own land. Personally, Fuchs gets nervous about fire. It's too unpredictable.

In another area, he pointed out the stark skeletons of large trees that had been treated chemically.

"That's the kind of thing that promotes a negative response from the public," Fuchs said.

But the public needs to face some harsh realities, just as ranchers have done over the past two decades.

The world no longer produces more food than it needs, Fuchs noted.

"We've passed that threshold. We're not in a position anymore to cut back on production except for short periods to maintain the resource."

Matt Ferguson agreed.

"Those who are trying to run us off the land don't seem to realize that we're not making millions off of beef," he said. "We're trying to strike a balance, a self-sustaining system of grass, cattle and wildlife, or we won't be able to afford to continue."

"They're producing a high quality protein product off of land that can't really produce anything of value," Fuchs said. "It's something we can still produce on western lands."

All of the effort of families like the Fergusons is "to get back to the balance we had," Fuchs said. "We're trying to work with nature, not dominate it."

Fuchs considers the Fergusons true environmentalists. They're raising grass, not cattle, he said.

"The term really applies here, because they are managing an entire eco-system, not just a small part of it," Fuchs said.

"We have to figure out what the eco-system needs. We made mistakes, but we worked toward a solution."

"When you work with someone willing to do it right, it's gratifying."

"The strength of our agency is this, being out on the land. It doesn't have to be a ranch. It can be folks on 13 or 14 acres. We're just as concerned with what's happening there."

Wally Ferguson said he would like to see more integration of the different science disciplines covered by state agencies, instead of each one working in isolation. Results may be skewed when only viewed from one perspective, he noted.

He hopes under the direction of State Public Land Commissioner Ray Powell Jr. or his successor after the next election, ranchers will receive some definitive direction about the future use of public lands.

"Under (former commissioner Jim) Baca, the concepts were contradictory," Ferguson said. "On one hand, he would encourage stewardship and say we'll be rewarded for doing good things and on the other side, the message was don't do anything."

"He thought cattle were the main problem. He didn't understand rangeland."

Fuchs added, "You could take all the cattle off (a tract of public land) and not change it, without removing the trees."

The Fergusons and Fuchs (center above) stand next to small trench created by erosion from lack of grass and plant cover around the trees. Looking out over the Ferguson ranch (at right), the line marking private land, rich with grass growth, from state-owned property is easy to see. The cost of removing each tree is too high for ranchers to continue their efforts on state land. They hope the state will take action.

Full speed ahead leads to success

The most successful people know how to focus on their goals. They set their eyes on some set achievement, then they go straight ahead.

Businesses, teams and individuals who get off center and fail to focus clearly on their goal often find themselves in trouble — going broke, losing competitions and suffering through unhappy relationships. Speaking as part of a business that has remained steadfast to its primary goal for 48 years, we are in a position to observe the ups and downs in this county.

The Ruidoso News set out some 48 years ago to publish a good community newspaper. Publishers have never wavered from that goal, and have garnered stacks of awards over the years. This newspaper has maintained its focus on informing the community, scrutinizing the use of public funds and providing businesses with a vehicle to advertise their products and services. By staying true to that goal, The Ruidoso News weathered the hard economic times in this community and continues to succeed.

One danger that throws some business operators off course is mixing their political views with their business decisions. If you're trying to sell a customer a widget, that prospective buyer doesn't care about your local or even national politics. We've seen businesses fall by the wayside when they forgot to focus on their primary goal and put their personal agendas ahead of succeeding in business.

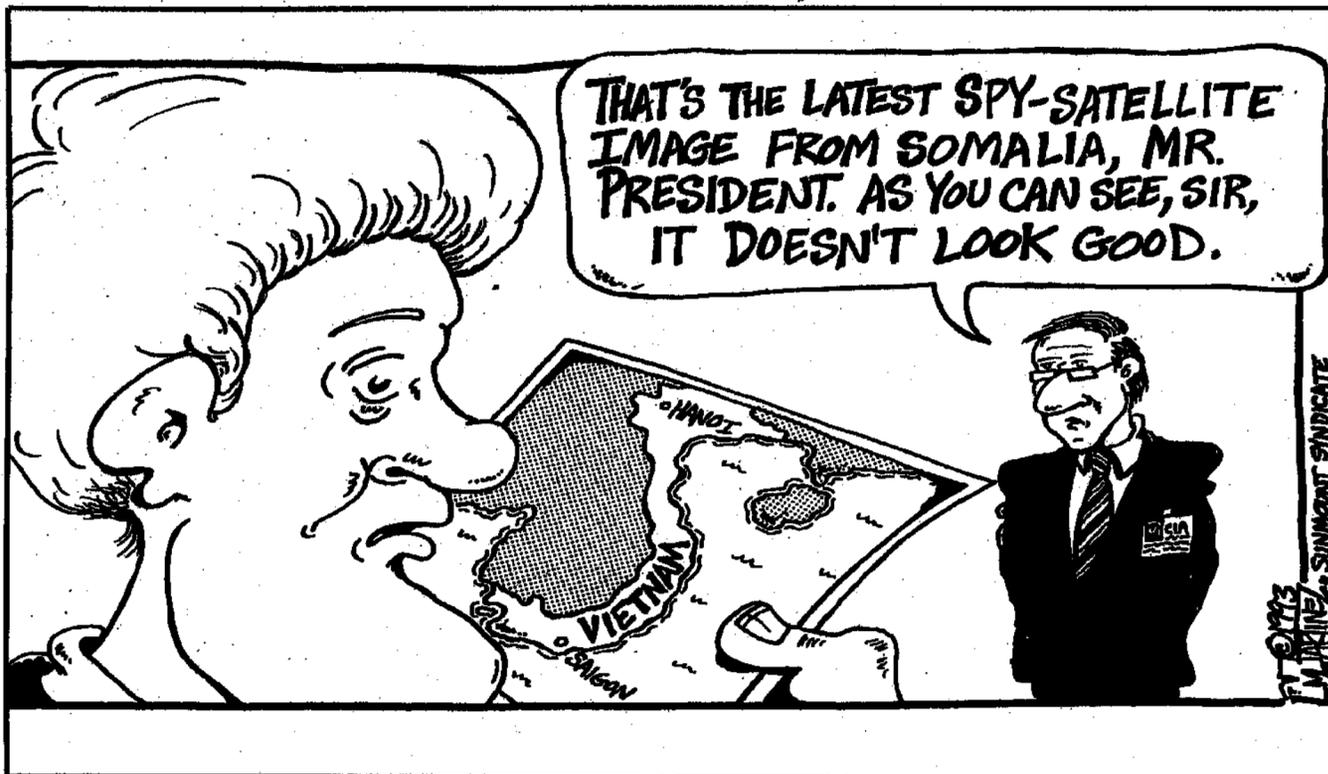

Separating political views from business decisions shouldn't keep business owners from serving their community as elected officials or as volunteers. But those heartfelt beliefs on issues can be used for political action and involvement outside of business without being thrown in the faces of customers who aren't interested in hearing an issues discourse while doing their errands.

A community, volunteer group, club or other organization will experience more success by focusing on a clear goal, instead of getting off-track and worrying about some other group's actions.

A clear focus pays off in business and in life.

"Good buddies makes good neighbors..."

People associated with Las Campanas, a resort near Santa Fe where lots can go for $650,000, would have taught Dale Carnegie a thing or two. The author of "How to Win Friends and Influence People" had nothing on these resort folks.

Or maybe they're just lucky.

Anyway, for starters, by coincidence one of the adjacent property owners, though not a resident on the property, is Bruce King.

Furthermore, King, as everybody knows, is an accommodating fellow. So last year, when golf great Jack Nicklaus — who designed the Las Campanas golf course — wanted to take his son elk hunting, King knew just where to go.

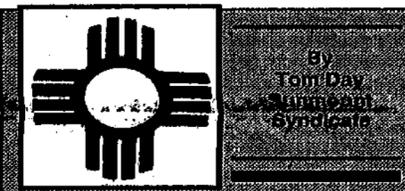

King suggested a hunting trip to the Jicarilla Apache reservation. The trip was cut short for various reasons — including a campaign appearance by then-presidential candidate Bill Clinton — but the hunters still got a taste of the wild.

Now let's be clear on one thing. You can't buy off Bruce King by surrounding him with celebrities. It he's star-struck, he doesn't show any of the signs. And you certainly can't buy him off with golf lessons — he sometimes uses a club, but it's not for golf.

You can't buy off Bruce King by surrounding him with celebrities. If he's star-struck, he doesn't show any of the signs. And you certainly can't buy him off with golf lessons — he sometimes uses a club, but it's not for golf.

You can't buy him off with a hunting trip, since the governor paid his own way.

But suppose, like Las Campanas, you were embroiled in a serious controversy over water. Suppose that six years ago, you, like Las Campanas, had signed an agreement with the Santa Fe water company allowing you to use company wells and water lines under a special arrangement.

Suppose that lawyers for the state Public Utility Commission questioned the water deal, arguing that Las Campanas should be a customer of the Santa Fe water system just like everybody else.

Finally, suppose that the controversy was due to wind up in the hands of the public utility commissioners, who are appointed by the governor.

Questions: if you were in this predicament, would you rather have Bruce King or your Aunt Nell as an adjacent landowner? Would a previous hunting trip with Cousin Fred be enough to ease your mind? Or would you wish that one of your associates had gone hunting with the governor of the state?

As King's press secretary, John McKean, points out, there is no evidence the governor has used his influence on behalf of the development. Maybe King never will. The governor is a politician who knows how to look out for himself, and he doesn't need any more controversy than he's already got.

Who knows, when push comes to shove, the Public Utility Commission might tell the Las Campanas developers that their water deal is over, and that they have to pay for water the way everybody else pays for water.

Whatever comes out of this controversy, you can be sure that Las Campanas knows how to follow the Dale Carnegie advice.

A Santa Fe city councilor, Peso Chavez, was lucky enough to land the contract to provide security for the development.

The security job is nothing to sneeze at. The residential and golf resort, on 4,800 acres about 10 miles northwest of Santa Fe, plans to sell 1,700 home sites over a period of 15 to 20 years.

You can bet that the owners of this land are used to some pretty extensive security.

A second city councilor, Phil Griego, who owns a title company, has provided title insurance for most of the lots sold so far.

No one has shown that the resort, which is in the county rather than the city, received any tit for tat. But another city councilor, Debbie Jaramillo, put her finger on the problem of the jobs for the two councilors: "Las Campanas truly believes that it has friends in high places."

You can bet that if people with a financial stake in Las Campanas wake up at night worrying about their water, or any other problems involving the government, thinking about their friends will help them get back to sleep.

Bridge players gather here

Bridge players from across the land will come to challenge each other as the Alamogordo and Ruidoso bridge clubs host a three-days tournament Friday through Sunday, October 15-17, at the Ruidoso Civic Events Center.

John and Margaret Bowden, formerly from Alamogordo, who now make Ruidoso their home, will co-chair this year's competition.

The Bowdens said they are working very hard to make this year's tournament one to remember and want to invite all bridge players to join them in Ruidoso to "show these Texans that we play a super game of bridge."

The tournament is classed as a sectional which allows for silver and black point scoring. Players can win points when they play duplicate bridge in competition. These points are registered at the headquarters of the American Contact Bridge League in Memphis, Tennessee, and are used to establish the level of competition each player will face in sectional, regional and national tournaments.

The Space City Sectional Bridge Tournament will engage play between partnerships who have about the same skill level.

Many people have volunteered to assist the Bowdens in assembling the tournament.

Lois Fox from Alamogordo and Ava McCune from Ruidoso are registering the partnerships. They will also help singles find a partner.

The ethics co-chairpersons are Billie Mitchell and Ethel Mauldin. The caddy master is Gene Templeton.

The cookies will be cared for by Ruth McGarrity and Gerri Delong.

Hospitality volunteers are Gwen Coleman and Ann Reed. Louina Smith and Mady Schreiner will take care of the door prizes.

The programs and publicity are by Miles Aakhus.

Tom Whitesides from Dallas was selected as the head tournament director, assisted by Ruby Greenhaw of Ruidoso. The director rules on any infraction of protocol, misplays or violation of courtesies. Few violations or infractions occur in a sectional tournament, but when they do, a seasoned tournament director is the final authority, according to a news release.

The public is welcome to visit the tournament and to watch the spectacle of the bridge competition, but visitors are requested to remain quiet out of respect to the players concentration.

Miss New Mexico USA finds a home in Ruidoso Civic Center

Miss New Mexico USA Pageant has a new home in the Ruidoso Civic Events Center.

After a dozen years or more in the Mesalero-Ruidoso area, the pageant has moved to Ruidoso.

Last year Miss New Mexico USA 1993, Charlotte Holland, had the honor of cutting the ribbon for the opening of the new Ruidoso Civic Events Center.

This year the pageant will be staged there.

Pageant staff and officials move into the center on Monday, November 1. Events will be planned all week, with the new Miss New Mexico USA to be crowned in ceremonies Saturday, November 6.

Organizers promise that this year's pageant will be bigger and better than ever.

"Over the years the world of pageants has changed from beauty contests to competitions of a combination of beauty, brains and self esteem," reads a news release provided by the pageant.

Delegates are judged on pose, beauty of face and figure, capability of expressing themselves clearly, intelligently and with confidence, continues the release.

Two special awards recognized during the pageant include Miss Photogenic and Miss Amity.

According to the news release, a magical year will begin for the young lady selected to wear the Miss New Mexico USA Crown.

On February 11, 1994, the newly crowned Miss New Mexico USA will compete in the National Pageant in South Padre Island, Texas.

Silver Lining

Dan's back in time for fall spectacular

This is being sent to you a little before high noon, October 12, Columbus Day.

Columbus Day gives us a special upbeat to our spirits as we take inspiration from the way Columbus was steadfast and confident as he kept up his determination to achieve his goal.

We remember how he kept the faith during the long journey over strange waters, and how he and his faithful band of sailors knelt on the shores of the new world and gave thanks to God.

Today at midday you look out at the American flag floating in the sky, a pure October blue. The oakbrush on the mountain to the south is still emerald, and the oak, walnut and pod's have turned into little half circles causing the grass stems to resemble little separate staffs.

This is a little emblem of the fall in the summer-like weather. Though the leaves have turned in the high country, hardly a sign of fall is to be seen here in the vale.

The scarlet trumpets of the Rocky Mountain gilia still shine by the wayside among the other late summer flowers such as the purple New England daisy and the purple autumn daisy.

And so summer weather visits along with the fall giving us a special season that lifts your spirits filling you with the pride of life and grateful as to God for all his blessings.

Planetary pen pals

First grade Nob Hill Elementary astronauts with their special helmets met aliens from all the planets of the solar system last week. The aliens with decorated faces and antennae also happen to attend Ruidoso Middle School. Carol Denne's sixth grade language arts students became pen pals of the younger children in the class of Kathy Rhoten earlier this year. They met at Nob Hill last week to exchange stories, plants, pictures and poems. The strangest alien of them all, Nob Hill principal Roger Sowder (in swim cap and mask) attended the gathering to munch earth cookies.

S. Kellerman exhibits work in Texas show

Trinity Arts Guild member, Shirley Kellerman, will display her art work at the North Richland Library during November.

Kellerman graduated from the University of Texas with a degree in journalism with elective courses in English and Art history.

Since that time she has studied continuously with well known artists including the late Bror Utter and Ben Konis, according to a news release.

In the summer of 1990, she entered her first competition winning three awards and selling her first painting. Since that time her paintings have been purchased by collectors from Florida to British Columbia.

Most recently her work was the subject of a one-artist show by Dallas Fine Arts of Ruidoso.

Her paintings were chosen for the permanent archives of the National Museum of Women in the Arts in Washington, D.C. She is also in Artists of New Mexico Magazine Volume IV 1993, and is a member of the United Council of Artists.

In Fort Worth, Kellerman is represented by Fort Worth Artist and Co., and in Bedford by Trinity Arts Gallery.

She is also represented by Fenton's Art Gallery of Ruidoso and Las Vegas, Nevada, and has studios in Ruidoso and Fort Worth. Shirley and her husband, Bob, have a home in Ruidoso.

The sparks are going to fly

Members of Mike Gaines' welding class watch a demonstration of state-of-the-art equipment from Miller Electric Manufacturing of Lubbock, Texas. Members of welding classes from Capitan, Carrizozo, Corona and Tularosa were invited to attend.
