Don't turn treats into tricks on pets

Halloween candy may be a treat for little human goblins, but some types can be toxic to cats and dogs.

Keep Halloween candy out of the reach of curious pets. Chocolate especially poses a threat and, in sufficient quantities, can be lethal.

It's a good idea to keep pets inside the house in a secure area away from the door on the trick or treat night, eliminating the risk of a child being bitten or scratched.

Some pets also could be prey to pranksters or worse. Keep them inside and safe.

Downs police chief gets his day in court

The trial of Ruidoso Downs police chief Will Hoggard on a misdemeanor charge of failure to respond to a subpoena is set for November 12.

The charge was the only action resulting from a case presented to a Lincoln County grand jury last June.

The jury met over allegations that Hoggard and State Representative H. John Underwood (D-Ruidoso) improperly used their influence to keep an officer away from an administrative hearing over the driving license of an Underwood client.

Reports from the treasurer and the executive director are also on the agenda.

TOURISM SECRETARY J. MICHAEL CERLETTI

Tourism fuels state's economy

by RENITA FREEMAN

Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Tourism, New Mexico's most powerful economic tool, is a $2.5 billion industry.

More than 48,000 New Mexicans are employed in the tourism industry, according to the Secretary of

New Mexico Department of Tourism (DOT), J. Michael Cerletti.

Cerletti spoke during the opening session of the 1993 Governor's Conference on Tourism with headquarters in the Ruidoso Convention and Civic Events Center.

Goals and objectives for the DOT were to attract visitors from out-of-state and to encourage longer stays and to define the State of New Mexico not only as a place that offers a variety of experiences, but also as a place that offers value to the tourist.

"New people coming into our state are really looking for value," said Cerletti. "If folks aren't going to get that, then they won't come back," he added.

Streetscape construction to begin in November

by FRANKIE JARRELL

The Ruidoso News Editor

The Ruidoso Village Council heard good news on streets and water during a regular meeting Tuesday.

Deputy manager Alan Briley announced that all documents are in place for the streetscape construction project to begin, and attorney John Underwood announced that The Links at Sierra Blanca is ready to pay for the water it has been using over and above its yearly allocation.

MainStreet Streetscape

"We've finally got all our approvals," said Briley, explaining that with letters and funding in place, the MainStreet paving and sidewalk construction can begin.

Briley said the pre-pre-construction meeting will be at 2 p.m. Friday, November 5, with the pre-construction contract the next week when the village will issue the notice to proceed.

Briley said the contractor should break ground the second week in November.

AllHub pays water bill

Underwood said village water department director Richard Sanchez told him that AllHub, which operates The Links on municipal land it leases from the village, has run over its allowable 200 acre-feet per year of water.

Under the agreement between the village and AllHub, the golf course was authorized to use certain effluent water credits that the village wasn't using. That 200 acre-feet per year is untreated water that the golf course pumps out without its running through the village system.

Upon learning that the golf course was over its allotment, Underwood wrote a letter to AllHub attorney Don Dutton and suggested the village and The Links need to develop a water management plan.

Underwood said Eagle Creek sells untreated water to Alto Golf and Country Club for 60 cents per 1,000 gallons, and the council adopted that amount for its proposal to AllHub.

Dutton was agreeable, and said he'll be delivering a check to the village within the next week or two. He said (R.D.) Hubbard and (Ed) Burger (of AllHub) readily agreed that this was a deficiency in the lease.

"We'll pay; we would have sooner had we known," said Dutton.

He agreed that the intent of the original lease was for the golf course to use the effluent, but he and AllHub operators had never been told that the golf course was going over that 200 acre-feet a year.

Republicans have a grand old time raising funds

by DIANNE STALLINGS

Ruidoso News Staff Writer

More use of natural resources and less dependency on taxes was the message of State Senator Billy J. McKibben Tuesday as he entertained an audience of fellow Republicans in Ruidoso.

McKibben, a Republican from Hobbs who is running for governor, was the featured speaker for "An Evening with Lincoln County Republicans," a fund raiser put together by the Federated Republican Women of Lincoln County and the local Republican Party.

Before starting his good-natured jabs at state government, McKibben, an energetic crowd-pleaser, went over his own background and how he entered politics.

Born in Eunice, his family moved with the fortunes of the oil fields. He started school in Lovington, was discharged from the Air Force in 1968, and after two failed attempts at public office, finally succeeded in being elected to his local school board, where he stayed for six years.

From there, he won a seat in the Senate from Lea County and has continued to serve for 13 years.

McKibben said it's time for New Mexico to use its natural resources to build a more vital industrial community.

"The state of New Mexico has been blessed with more natural resources than virtually any other location on the face of the earth," he said. "We have everything imaginable here in the way of minerals, fresh air and running water, and kind and gentle people of a multi-culture. (We're) an example to the rest of the country how a multi-cultural state can get along together."

McKibben blamed the Democratic stronghold in New Mexico for keeping it the 47th state in per capita income.

"If it wasn't for Tennessee, Mississippi and Arkansas, we would be the poorest of the poor with all of those resources we have," he said.

"We have gold and silver and potash, coal, copper and molybdenum, and oil and gas, and gypsum and uranium. You name it and we have it, but we haven't developed that. We have sat and literally become a stepchild of the federal government."

"For every dollar we send in, we get a dollar and a half back. And for that, as a state, we are willing to give up our states rights, and all kinds of other things and live with the mandates and the dictates of the federal government. I find that portance, Cerletti said.

Senator Billy J. McKibben emphasizes his point during an after dinner discussion with Tootie Fouratt. McKibben entertained his audience of Republicans with a fast-paced and often humorous speech on his political platform and the failings of government.

"On the national scene the trend is toward shorter trips. Three- and four-day trips are becoming more popular, and the age group doing this is the 50 to 55 age group," Cerletti said.

"Last year 34 percent of the people who had inquiries into our state ended up coming. This is an average of 3.2 people who spend an average of $94 per day. This year we hope to raise the inquiries by 10 percent over last year," Cerletti said.

The advertising campaign for 1992 was effective, according to Cerletti.

Basically, why change it if it works? The conversion rate, the percentage of people who actually come to New Mexico after inquiring, is high at 34 percent. Virginia has the best conversion rate at 41 percent. So, our conversion rate is good," Cerletti said.

Significant emphasis is placed on an advertising and promotional program that shows the beauty, charm and cultures of the state Cerletti said.

After discussing various reasons and strategies being used to boost the travel industry, Cerletti talked about overcoming the problems that New Mexico has faced.

"This was a difficult year in many respects because of the hantavirus. Even with this, inquiries are up 14 percent over this time last year," Cerletti said.

Promoting a positive image for New Mexico is part of the marketing plan for 1993.

"One thing we did this last year, we went to Germany. We decided to really make it unique. We not only talked about New Mexico but we took our own chef and our own food," Cerletti said.

The response was warm, according to the DOT spokesman.

Target audiences are frequent travelers, active and adventure travelers, senior travelers, tour operators and travel agents and people who live in the state, but don't realize what it has to offer, according to Cerletti.

Cerletti smiled and looked out over the audience at the end of his time at the mike. His parting remarks brought smiles to the faces turned toward the podium.

"All and all, it could be worse," he said. "I could be head of tourism in Florida."

The Ruidoso Convention and Civic Events Center is filled to capacity this week with a tourism conference with nearly 300 people registered. A trade show is set up in the center's big exhibit hall and meals, catered by K-Bob's, are being served in the carpeted breakout room next door. Governor King will speak at a luncheon today.

Dutton spoke with pride of the renewed spirit of cooperation and communication between the village and AllHub, and renewed the operators' commitment to work with the village.

"For the benefit of the naysayers, our sprinkler system is on a clock," said Dutton. "Efficiency experts recommend watering at night... we try to water at night."

At times when water is running during the day or during rain, it's likely because nutrients have been placed on the course and have to be watered.

"I really appreciate the spirit of cooperation we've gotten from Alan Briley, Richard Sanchez and John Underwood," said Dutton.

Councilor Bill Karn noted that AllHub agreed to stop watering if there is ever a water emergency.

Connie Kumler misunderstood the directive agreed on last month regarding the basically defunct MRS committee, and was present to give an update Tuesday.

No nuke reports

Mayor Jerry Shaw announced that she had reminded Kumler that the council won't be scheduling monthly reports until the committee is expanded into a regional group. Meanwhile, Shaw told Kumler she can submit written reports and will be given time to speak during the next council meeting.

The council, asked for concurrence by Shaw, agreed.

Kumler and Councilor Karn are the only members left on the committee initiated under former Mayor Victor Alonso to keep an eye on the progress of the Mescalero Apache Indian Tribes in its efforts to host a temporary nuclear waste storage site known as an MRS.

Former chairman Bob Walters has resigned from the committee, which had been allocated several thousand dollars in village funds to use for travel and telephone calls to research and oppose the MRS.

Shaw has said the question of whether or not the Mescaleros host an MRS will be settled at the national level and she believes the burden of study and opposition should be shared by other groups in this region.

Etc.

In other regular business Tuesday, the council:

—Heard that Economic Development Corporation director Karen Kopp had to cancel her scheduled report to the council.

—Heard from Ruidoso Police Chief Richard Swenor that the Ruidoso/Lincoln County Crimestoppers organization won three top awards at the international convention. The local group brought home trophies for the most crimes solved, the most improved program and the highest dollar value of property recovered.

—Adopted a resolution proclaiming Red Ribbon Week, an annual observance to promote drug free living. Swenor, president of the local drug free committee, accepted the resolution and agreed to provide the mayor and council with red ribbons to wear.

Swenor invited the council and community to hear motivational speaker Don Bartlett at 8:30 a.m. Friday at Ruidoso Middle School or at 10:15 a.m. Friday at Ruidoso High School.

—Adopted a resolution proclaiming German-American Educational Cultural Exchange Day. A teacher from Germany who is in Ruidoso on an exchange accepted the proclamation and told the council he is enjoying his stay here. He said, while the schools are very different here than in Germany, they have many of the same problems.

—Approved a request by librarian Nancy Eckert to change library hours. The library has been open until 7 p.m. Monday through Thursday, and will now close at 6 p.m. those days. Eckert, who recently was named librarian upon the retirement of long-time village employee Mary Lou Gooch, said the library is used very little or not at all during those hours, and staff can better serve the public by being on duty during busier times.

The new hours, effective November 1, will be from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Thursday, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Friday and from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturday.

—Declared an emergency regarding a leaky roof over the dispatch area at the Ruidoso Police Department. Briley said the roof needs to be repaired before winter and before the police install new 911 cabinets. Now the roof can be repaired quickly using police operations funds.

—Approved Mayor Shaw's appointment of Brenda Buckner to the Planning and Zoning Commission.

—Approved Shaw's appointment of Alan Briley to take former manager Ron Wicker's place on the Lincoln County Solid Waste Authority.

—Heard Karn recommend that a proclamation be drafted in honor of Fern Sawyer. He said that he was out of town on family health and business matters when Sawyer died. "She was a Democrat; I'm a Republican; but she was a cowgirl."

—The entire council was present for the meeting, but Councilor Barbara Duff left at the first break to attend an Evening with Lincoln County Republicans at Cree Meadows.

Mayor welcomes the Guv and guests to his tourism conference

Mayor Jerry Shaw opened the Governor's Conference on Tourism with a welcoming speech. The following is an excerpt from that speech:

"You are in the heart of Billy the Kid Country.

"It wasn't too many years ago that this was an old airport that the new Civic Events Center is sitting on.

"After the completion of the new Sierra Blanca Regional Airport, north of town and after the planning board was formed, we decided that since tourism is our major industry, a golf course, hotel and convention center would be the best use of this land.

"I predict by this time next year, our package will be complete, the hotel will be under construction.

"Not too many years ago, we were a two season resort, we had horse racing in the summer and snow skiing in the winter. I can remember snow dancing on Sudderth Drive between seasons. There wasn't any traffic.

"This past weekend Sudderth Drive was busy, no parking anywhere. I was in line at a supermarket and the man in front of me asked the check out girl what was going on that the village was so busy. She looked at me and I said, nothing, there is no planned event in town this week.

"I think we're fastly becoming a year round resort. We don't have to have anything going on for people to come to Ruidoso.

"Why has this come about? Within the last few years we have spent over $100,000 in the Mexican trade.

"We have had better county wide cooperation than ever. The Apache Trails organization, covers a two county region.

"We have more lodgers tax to spend, and we're spending it more wisely.

"We also have been very fortunate that R.D. Hubbard (racing and art magnate) came to our village. The Hubbard organization spent $300,000 in advertising and promotion of Ruidoso Downs Race Track, $100,000 on the Museum of the Horse, $50,000 on The Links golf course, $20,000 on the Cowboy Symposium and $50,000 on the Santa Fe Water Color Society show.

"On top of this, Mr. Hubbard holds a golf tournament every year that brings people here from all over the world. Mr. Hubbard has been a great asset to our community.

"We have three major ingredients that makes people want to visit us: scenic beauty, a strong sense of historical significance and evidence of Indian culture. People who come here, enjoy that.

MAYOR JERRY SHAW

"We are about to break ground on a $1.3 million streetscape project. In the next five years $3 to 5 million will be spent on highway and airport improvement.

"We're looking at an airline. Real estate is up, almost back to the 1980-81 levels. People from California our purchasing real estate and they are paying cash.

"There's a lot said about the north and the south of the state. We used to say we weren't known down here. But, people in the northern part of the state in Albuquerque are having to store their furniture because they can't buy a house and in Santa Fe, they can't afford a house. Some of those people are coming south.

"We're on the upswing, you might not have heard a lot from us in Santa Fe, but look for us, we're back."

Downs board OKs sign permit for new business

by RENITA FREEMAN

Ruidoso News Staff Writer

The Ruidoso Downs Board of Trustees met Monday, October 25, at the Volunteer Fire Station.

Business discussed during the session included the approval of a sign permit for Village Glass Works, Inc., located at 280 Highway 70 East.

Ruidoso Downs Police Chief Will Hoggard requested a promotion for Linda Scroggs to Communication Detention Office supervisor. The request was granted.

A revision of the personnel manual also was approved by the council. The revision stated that step raises will not be an automatic part of a certification procedure.

The council also approved Resolution 93-11 which supports October 27, as national "Unfunded Mandate Day."

Other business included approval of minutes of the October 8, special meeting and the October 8, regular meeting. Accounts payable for October and the financial statement for September were also approved by the council.

Present were Mayor Joe Hayhurst, trustees Judy Miller, Margie Morales, Charlotte Craig and Ray Hayhurst.

"Unfortunately, for the 13 years I sat in the Senate, I have seen 30 good, conscientious, conservative Republican Senators come and go. And that doesn't count a one that is there now.

"We have a difficult time maintaining those people. They get there. They're full of enthusiasm and optimism. They see the system and how difficult it is to make changes in that system, and often time they throw up their hands and say enough is enough.

"The good news this year is that the general fund will have $300-million surplus that we never anticipated in recurring funds and in addition to that $150-million in non recurring, and the bonding capacity for severance tax funds to build school houses for over $100-million, and then our general obligation bonds fund will be in excess of $70 million.

"The legislature will literally go into a feeding frenzy. Every imaginable request will be put in.

"What are the first things we should consider? The first thing that jumps off of the page at you under those circumstances is that we are overtaxing the public.

"It was never intended the public was to be drained and squeezed until there was nothing left in the free enterprise system, while the government sits there bloated beyond belief.

"I don't find much stomach up there with a Democratic controlled legislature, house, senate and executive for any kind of a reasonable tax cut."

He said for the second time since he has been in the legislature, the state has a money surplus.

"And it is a mystery to lots of people where it's coming from," he said.

"I submit that possibly it's the influx, the massive number of people from California that are fleeing that excess in existence out there. The economy is so bad, the business is so bad, taxes are so high, those people are coming in record numbers and as they come across the United States, fleeing California, an awful lot are staying in New Mexico."

McKibben said Lincoln County maintains a special place in Republican history in New Mexico by becoming the first county in the state to turn Republican.

But the party has a long way to go to bring New Mexico into step with other states when it comes to health care, education and progressive approaches to problems facing youths, he said.

"We lead the nation in teenage pregnancy. We kill two or three (teens) a night in Albuquerque. We have gang problems we haven't even catalogued yet. And the governor sits there and says he thinks everything is pretty good," McKibben said.

"That's not acceptable to most people in this state. When you're fearful to send your children to school, because there's guns there, dope there. And we're turning out more functional illiterates.

"It's not because the teachers aren't conscientious, and it's not because we haven't supplied the schools with the necessary tools. It's because the will is not there and the government, the state school board and others have meddled and stuck their hands down into the school system, till teachers can't teach.

"I talked to them and they are frustrated beyond belief.

"Education doesn't take place at the school superintendent's office; and it certainly doesn't take place in the legislature. It takes place when the teacher closes the door on the classroom. No one should be able to come in there and take the class out, or parts of it, without that teacher's permission.

"We spend 70 percent of the state's entire budget on education, and we're not quite making it."

Violence in schools is a growing problem facing the nation and New Mexico, he said.

"It's a frightening prospect that your child may be shot, not at the pool hall, or a local dance club, but shot in the school house," he said. "It's unthinkable."

McKibben said in the forties the three biggest problems in school, according to a survey of teachers, were chewing gum in class, talking in class and running in the halls. That same survey in 1992 revealed the three big problems had changed to dope, guns and pregnancy.

"In that same 1940 period, 92 percent of the families had two adults," he said. "The recent survey showed barely 50 percent of the families have two adults."

McKibben said part of the problem is a media that made fun of former vice president Dan Quayle because he wanted to return to family values.

Lincoln County Commissioner Stirling Spencer listens intently to a speech during the Republican dinner. At his side are his fiancée, Billie Jean Redemeyer, and county manager Andy Wynham.

School officials wait for report card

by DIANNE STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

School officials in Ruidoso will hear the verdict today from state education representatives, who have spent the past week in classrooms and offices evaluating the district's operation.

The process is part of a three-year cycle of examination to determine whether the district meets requirements for accreditation. Under education regulations, one third of the schools in New Mexico must be assessed each year through on site visits.

Without being accredited, a school could lose its state financial support and class credits earned by students would not be accepted by other schools.

Superintendent Mike Gladden, his principals and School Board members James Paxton, Jim Varnadore, Mike Morris and president Ron Hemphill had their chance Monday during an entry meeting with the state team to boast about programs, staff and facilities as part of a self-study.

"The strength of the district lies in the high caliber and quality of the individuals on the staff and on the board," Gladden told the visitors.

He had assembled a long list of boasts that included community support through the passage by voters two years ago of a $5.5-million bond issue to build a new elementary school, complete other schools and renovate some existing buildings, as well as the maintenance yard.

One of the construction benefits was the creation of a new and larger board room, where the meeting with state educators took place.

A central receiving area also has been created for better accountability and efficiency, he said.

Gladden noted the Youth Empowered for Success (YES) non-profit organization, a collaboration of civic groups and individuals; the annual meeting with members of the Mescalero Apache Tribe and a subsequent open house at the Tribal Center for Ruidoso school officials to meet parents and others; a Headstart program begun last year; the third year of the Carl Perkins vocational-agricultural grant, establishing a full time program at both the high school and middle school; and the fact that Ruidoso is home to the largest Future Farmers of America chapter in New Mexico.

Gladden pointed to the involvement on many levels of the coordination council, which provides input on his recommendations to the school board.

Teachers also have been given an incentive by the school board for better attendance, he said. If they accumulate 60 days or more of leave (sick leave no longer exists), they will receive a $200 bonus.

Gladden also noted the district faces a tight financial year because the projected growth of enrollment was overestimated by nearly four percent.

The district's percentage of growth has dropped by 4.6 percent since the 1991-92 school year when it hit 7.2 percent. Last year the number of students grew by 4.5 percent and this year to date by only 2.6 percent.

The team will focus on information from the self-study, school-related compliance issues and classroom observations and discussions.

As team coordinator Bill Trant explained, Ruidoso's school administration has chosen a new approach to accreditation offered by the state this year. That approach centers more on what is being accomplished by students and how well the district meets the needs of its students, instead of strictly compliance with state statutes. It is tied more to what the local community wants accomplished, he said.

The entire team is involved in evaluating as many programs as possible at the same time for a more holistic view, Trant said.

Team members are coordinator Trant, special education; Nancy Alonso, Indian education; Bill Blair, basic instructional programs and support services; Victoria Duran, management; Syd Gould, special education; Chris Trujillo, Chapter I and Roscoe Vaughn, vocational education.

Police confiscated money in various denominations, foreign currency and 44 baggies which were rolled and filled with a quarter ounce of marijuana each. Crimestoppers tip leads to drug raid

by RENITA FREEMAN
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

A Crimestoppers tip late Tuesday resulted in a raid on a Ruidoso Downs residence where police confiscated 44 quarter-ounce bags of marijuana and close to $300 in cash.

Police obtained and served a search warrant for a residence at 321 South Parnell in Ruidoso Downs, where they confiscated the drugs, cash, assorted currency from around the world and drug paraphernalia.

Kevin Jefferson, 24, has been charged with a second degree felony count, possession with the intent to distribute a controlled substance, according to police reports.

Police said Jefferson, who was not at the residence at the time of the raid, has agreed to turn himself in to the Ruidoso Downs Police.

The maximum penalty for a second degree felony is $10,000 and/or nine years in prison.

The street value of the drugs is more than $2,000, according to Ruidoso Downs Police Chief Will Hoggard.

"On the street the marijuana would sell for about $50 per bag," Hoggard said.

The Crimestoppers tip was reported to Detective Sergeant Lanny Maddox, who is with the Ruidoso Criminal Investigation Division. Maddox coordinated the effort between the Ruidoso police force and the Ruidoso Downs police.

The raid was conducted by Hoggard, Ruidoso Downs Officer Chris Condon, Ruidoso Police Corporal J.P. Esquibel and Detective Corporal Wolfgang Born. Maddox coordinated the search.

"We work closely with the Ruidoso police," said Hoggard. "When the tip came in Maddox asked if we would like them to assist. We do lots of things together," he added.

The investigation is continuing and more charges are expected to be filed in the case, according to Hoggard.

Police demonstrate how a miniature scale is used to weigh baggies filled with marijuana.

Members of the State Education Department accreditation team joined Ruidoso school district officials for a briefing before visiting school sites this week.

Warriors still try for winning season

by KENT BEATTY

The News Sports Correspondent
The Ruidoso Warrior football team must look past last week's disappointing loss to Silver and take aim at another lofty goal — a winning season.

The Warriors hit the road Friday for a meeting with another rapidly improving football team — Socorro.

Also known as the Warriors, Socorro has already surpassed the winning mark for 1993 sporting five wins against three losses. In district, Socorro has beaten Cobre and Deming and lost to Oñate.

As far as Ruidoso is concerned, the game with Socorro is pivotal for the locals. A win gives Ruidoso a chance to go 6-5 for the season, something that hasn't happened since 1989, the last time we won the district.

Ruidoso faces Cobre at home on closing week end, a team that has managed just one win this season.

Socorro is very similar to Ruidoso many respects. For the first time in several weeks, the Warriors will line up against a team that is not noticeably bigger and faster than themselves. The last time Ruidoso played such a team was in pre-district against Tularosa.

Like the Warriors, Socorro likes to throw the football a good bit. They will line up in "trips" (three receivers on one side) and throw down the field or shorter patterns, depending on the defense.

Socorro and Ruidoso have had two common opponents this season, Oñate and Deming. Both teams lost to Oñate and beat Deming. If ever there was a match on paper, this is it.

Coach Mike Gaston is impressed with this week's opponents.

"Socorro is an improved football team that doesn't look that good on film, but they win, and that's what is most impressive about them. We're expecting a very tough battle with them when we go up there," said Gaston.

"Defensively, they are very sound ... they play very aggressive and scrappy, so our offense will have to play very well to beat them.

"Offensively, they make a lot of big plays, they like to throw the ball down the field ... their receivers will go up and catch it and then they will come back and run the ball at us. Both sides of the ball will be a very physical battle," said Gaston.

For the first time in a month, Ruidoso will have its starting offensive backfield back in the game. It looks like Raul Davis will be back at halfback and Rex Comanche returns as the starter at fullback.

Comanche saw action last week and looked good after the coaching staff didn't think he would play. But the desire to play overcame the pain and he was back in the game in the second quarter.

While the Warriors gained a little on offense with the return of Comanche and Davis, they lost on defense as starting "monster" Johnny Flores injured himself in a street football game. Ricky Devara will fill that position against Socorro.

Also on the defensive side of the ball, J.R. Chino will fill in for Jesse Fromknecht at nose guard.

The biggest hurdle that the Warriors face is not particularly Socorro, its themselves. Last week's loss to Silver virtually eliminated them from the playoff race, emotionally ending the season for them.

However, as insignificant as it sounds, a winning season would be an amazing accomplishment for a team that won just one game last year. Its very important for the team to end the season on a winning note to start up next year.

One thing that the Warriors have learned this year is how to win football games. In essence, they have beaten every team that they were better than — and lost to every team that was better than them.

Their next lesson is how to win the big games, and this week offers them a chance to learn.

A loss to Socorro would be a step backwards.

Essentially, the teams are even. The test will be if the Warriors can get back the emotion it takes to win the game.

If the fans and coaches are the only people that think a winning season is important, it's going to be a long night — and a long week of practice next week.

If the Warriors win against Socorro and then again next week against Cobre, it will be a long off-season, because the kids won't be able to wait to start winning again next year.

Lady Warrior volleyball teams fell to the Oñate Knights in a October 16 match.

Varsity lost the first two games with a 15-9, 15-6. Game three proved to be a battle for the Lady Warriors but the team could not hold on to the lead. The game ended with 15-17 score. Game five was awarded to the Knights with the final score of 7-15.

Outstanding servers listed were Kristie Ryan, Mandy Parker, Heather Stover and Jessica Dixon.

Outstanding hitters listed were Brandy Pfeiffer, Amber Livingston, Parker and Ryan.

Outstanding defensive players listed were Stover and Danielle Morris.

"We seem to have lost the momentum after the second game," head volleyball coach Jody Blanton said.

Junior varsity fought hard but could not overcome the Oñate team. The Lady Warriors lost both matches with a 14-16 and 7-15 final score.

Outstanding servers listed for the games were Jessica Dixon, Monique Ramos and Lindsay Willard. Outstanding hitters were Kendra Eggleston, Marissa Martinez, Amber Livingston and Ramos.

Defensive players listed as outstanding for the games were Martinez, Dixon and Ramos.

"The girls played well, but, again our serving was off. We have continued to work on serves during practice," Blanton said.

Lady Warrior freshmen did not fare well in either of their matches. The final scores were 9-15 and 7-15.

Outstanding servers listed were Mariann Cruz, Kristy Donaldson and Shyrann Williams. Outstanding hitters were Heidi Streck, Donaldson and Cruz.

Outstanding defensive players listed were Cruz, Donaldson and Streck.

"The girls had to make a few adjustments and did well considering there were many rotational changes," Blanton said.

On The Sideline

Winning in athletics starts in the classroom

Last week the high school kids received their report cards and the Warrior Football team gained six kids that were academically ineligible during the last nine weeks period and lost one. That's pretty fair.

Just three years ago, Ruidoso was en route to yet another District Championship in football but inadvertently played a kid who lost his eligibility at the nine weeks and had to forfeit a game that they won 53-13. That forfeit cost the Warriors a trip to the playoffs.

Because of that lesson, Warrior coaches do a much better job of watching the kids and their grades.

That's good. Silver is now undergoing a little investigation from the NMAA concerning the eligibility of a couple of its players. It's not a grades probe, it seems that a couple of kids can't decide if they live in Bayard (Cobre's school district) or Silver's.

If the NMAA rules against Silver, the Colts would have to forfeit every game the kids in question played in.

Sometimes in their enthusiasm to win, schools, coaches and most of all parents "bend" the rules a little.

Since it's report card time, maybe now would be a good time to pound the pulpit a little concerning athletes and their grades.

Kids go to school first and foremost to learn basic skills of communication and mathematics. Throw in a little of where we've been as a society and where we're going and you've pretty much got the school curriculum.

Athletics is an extra-curricular activity. It is not a right, it is a reward. Kids who cannot make a passing grade in school should not be allowed to miss school for extra-curricular activities.

I guess that makes me a proponent of Texas' "No-Pass No-Play" rule. I guess that I'm closer to that than I am to the system we use in New Mexico currently — the old 2.0 (C) grade point average and you're in.

If I were the king of athletics in the state, I would not allow any participant to miss any class that he or she is failing — in addition to the 2.0 ("C") average.

That means if we have a basketball game in Silver City and the bus leaves at 11 a.m. and I am slunking my 1 p.m. class, I'm missin' the Silver game — no questions, no exceptions.

If we're playing in home or somewhere close, so I don't have to miss that class — I can play. This seems pretty easy to me.

It offers the incentive to kids to work hard in all of their classes. It also means that the "A" I got as a library aid doesn't offset the "F" I got in Miss McAdams English class.

Unbelievable, that's the way it works now — honest.

I know the importance of athletics to kids. I see Raul Davis and a lot of other athletes in the coaches offices at lunch studying their butts off to make the grades to play.

When you see that dedication, it's pretty hard not to be impressed.

Raul is a perfect example of athletics in action at school. He doesn't give a damn about history, or math, or English. But he loves basketball, and to get to play he's got to pass those classes.

His enthusiasm has been absolutely contagious among other academic border-line kids. Kids that I know wouldn't be playing basketball or football or wrestling or whatever.

Raul is an example to those youngsters. A role model. A great kid who, at least temporarily, knows what he wants and where he wants to be.

And if some of that readin', writin', and 'rithmetic he's had to endure over the past year-and-a-half rubs off, high school athletics will have another remarkable success story.

Third time's the charm for champion football picker Jim Turner

by RENITA FREEMAN

Ruidoso News Staff Writer

All right, sports fans, there is some good news and there is some bad news.

The good news first. This week there were 37 entries in the football contest, up five from last week.

The bad news is, only one entry won.

Jim Turner from Alamogordo is this week's winner. This is the third time Turner has won the football contest.

Three people were tied with correctly picking 16 out of 20 games. Once again the tie breaker was the deciding factor.

Turner's point spread of 13 was the closest to the 17 point spread the Warriors had against Silver City. Second place went to Daniel Sanchez of Ruidoso with a point spread of seven and third place was awarded to Alice Payne of Ruidoso with a point spread of five.

The breakdown of the contest was: three missed four, 10 missed five, seven missed six, seven missed seven, two missed eight, three missed nine, one missed 11 and one missed 12.

Once again, one entry was for the week before.

Several games this week proved to stump the majority of the players. In high school the contest missed most often was Belen versus Grants. Capitan and Loving along with Texico and Cloudcroft were the next most often missed.

Worthy of mentioning in the college games was the Baylor and TCU game. Only one person out of the 37 correctly picked the winner of this game. TCU must have been a real sleeper to catch so many unaware.

In pro ball the game missed most often was the Pittsburgh, Cleveland game. Everyone seemed to zero in on the Cincinnati versus Houston and Green Bay versus Tampa Bay. Very few missed these two football games.

There is some good news and there is some bad news. The bad news first, this week's contest is over and done with.

The good news is the contest starts over again this week. So, get those picks in and maybe next week you can use the $25 extra in your pocket to remodel your home or take a dream vacation.

Be sure to get the picks in on the right week. It really can make a big difference in the results.

Freshman gridders flatten Alamo on the home field

The freshman Warrior football team flattened the Alamogordo Tigers in the October 21 game in Horton Stadium.

Before the final whistle blew the Warriors had turned the Tigers into kittens with a final score of 39 to 6.

Billy Rogge set the pace of the scoring game when he started racking up the points for the Warriors with a first quarter TD.

Bryan Moore rushed for a total of 121 yards and two touchdowns. Moore was credited with passing 48 yards on a third quarter fake punt for another TD.

Arthur Rojas kept the pace going by rushing for 85 yards and two touchdowns, one of which was the third quarter pass on the fake punt of Moore's.

Raymone Allen finished out the pouncing with an eight-yard pass reception to score.

The next freshmen game is scheduled for 4 p.m. Thursday, October 28, in Horton Stadium. The Warriors will take on Lovington's freshman team.

Inside The Outdoors

Anglers plant large mouth for fishing, research

Most fishermen head to the lake to see how many fish they can take out of the water, but recently some anglers have been doing the opposite. Members of bass clubs in Roswell and Artesia were at Brantley Lake to put fish into the water.

Stocking trucks from the Department of Game and Fish arrived early on Saturday morning a few weeks ago loaded down with almost 15,000 large mouth bass. This was the culmination of a long trip from a federal hatchery in Tishmingo, Oklahoma.

The four-to-seven-inch long bass were netted out of the hatchery trucks and loaded into plastic bags. They were given a blast of extra oxygen to enhance their chances of survival and placed on boats of the bass club members.

Bass anglers transported the fish to a variety of locations around the lake. The bags of fish were suspended in the water for about five minutes to adjust water temperature and then the large mouth bass were released in their new home.

Stocking more fish in a lake is great for anglers, but this is also a part of the long-term project by fisheries biologists with the Department of Game and Fish.

It began in Oklahoma where the 15,000 bass were marked. Tiny magnetic tags the thickness of a human hair were tagged in the left cheek which will allow biologists to identify them in the future. Fish raised in the Oklahoma hatchery are a subspecies dubbed "northern" large mouth bass.

Biologists then went to a second federal hatchery in Uvalde, Texas. Here the "Florida" strain of large mouth bass are raised. These fish were tagged in the right cheek, differentiating them from the northern subspecies. In all, 30,000 bass were marked at the Texas hatchery. These fish will be released later in the month at Brantley Lake.

Just prior to release, samples of bass to be stocked were weighed and measured. This way, in the future as the fish are captured, growth rates can be determined. The goal of the project is to find out which of the subspecies is best suited to Brantley Lake and our New Mexico waters.

Biologists will be checking to see which strain of large mouth bass adapts best to the conditions found at Brantley Lake.

Does one species grow faster than the other? This is important especially considering the water demands placed on Brantley Lake which sometimes results in tremendous fluctuations of water levels.

It is also important to match the fish with the growing season and spawning conditions encountered at Brantley Lake.

Anglers appreciate more fish being put into the water and hopefully through this project they will have better quality bass. Everyone likes to catch big fish and if biologists can better match fish to the lake's conditions it will hopefully improve the quality of fishing at Brantley.

Anglers do, however, need to give these fish a chance to grow and adapt to the lake. There is a minimum size restriction at Brantley Lake and anglers are required to return all black bass under 12 inches to the water. The combination of better fish and regulating the size taken may result in a better quality fishing experience at Brantley Lake.

Councilor Karn's colleagues refuse to close meeting

by FRANKIE JARRELL
Ruidoso News Editor

Councilor Bill Karn's back, and he's apparently ready to take on the village that elected him as councilor.

Karn, who has missed many meetings of the Ruidoso Village Council while spending time in California, called for a closed session on threatened or pending litigation at the end of Tuesday's regular meeting.

His fellow councilors refused his request.

"I think my civil rights were violated," said Councilor Karn in a telephone interview after the meeting.

Although Karn wouldn't confirm his intentions, he did say that after calling for the closed meeting as a village councilor, he planned to speak to Mayor Jerry Shaw and the council as a private citizen.

Asked if he intended to sue his village, Karn wouldn't give a "yes" or "no" answer, but he did say he had discussed the need for the closed session with village attorney H. John Underwood.

In an unusual twist, though, Karn wouldn't tell Mayor Shaw the subject of the executive session he called.

After Karn made his motion, it was seconded by Councilor Frank Cummins and councilors Joe Gomez, Frank Potter and J.D. James voted "no." Councilor Barbara Duff had been present for the first half of the meeting, but had to leave before the end because of a previous engagement.

"They voted not even to talk," said Karn, questioning when the council had ever refused anyone the right to go behind closed doors and discuss threatened litigation.

Just last week, a request by Mayor Shaw to go into closed session to discuss an individual being considered for village manager died for lack of a second. In that case, the council discussed an individual in public instead of in private as is customary when talking about village employees and prospective employees by name.

In past cases involving threatened or pending litigation, the village attorney often has had communications with another attorney, and often the mayor and council seem to have a good idea about the subject to be debated in private.

Underwood didn't speak out when Karn's request was denied, and the meeting was adjourned.

Karn asked for a copy of the minutes, and was told they'll be in his agenda packet before the next regular meeting. He left the building without comment.

"I think my civil rights have been violated.... I was refused the right to talk to the council." Councilor Bill Karn

But, on the telephone after the meeting, Karn was shocked and dismayed that he didn't have a chance to meet privately with the council. He said he wanted to save taxpayers' money.

Mayor Jerry Shaw and the councilors who voted against the executive session may have been thinking the same thing, because attorney Underwood would have been included in that meeting and when he's meeting with the council he's "on the clock."

Karn wouldn't disclose who his attorney is for whatever action he wanted to discuss with the council, but indicated he has more than one legal counsel.

"I've filed lawsuits in Texas, New Mexico and California," said Karn. "I have never lost a lawsuit," he added.

"I don't file frivolous lawsuits," said Karn, who has been in California reportedly to testify in a lawsuit. Asked about that case, he replied: "I'm a party to it and we've already won."

"He was convicted. I don't file a lawsuit unless I can win."

Ruidoso Blue

Karn had California on his mind, even though he was back home in Ruidoso.

Early in the meeting, he compared Ruidoso's new dark blue police uniforms with the LAPD, and then, during discussions of the village sign ordinance, Karn described signs in Universal City, California.

Ruidoso Police Chief Richard Swenor, after accepting an award for the Crimestoppers and a resolution proclaiming Red Ribbon Week, modeled his spiffy new uniform.

"Looks like LAPD," said Karn.

Swenor said officers will be "transitioning" into the new uniforms, which meet OSHA standards, during the next five days. The old khaki-colored uniforms will be retired and used for paint clothes.

Banner day

Robert Donaldson, chairman of the Ruidoso Planning and Zoning Commission, tried to explain proposed "cleanup" amendments to the sign ordinance in a continuation of a public hearing on signs.

Karn, who seemed to dominate Tuesday's meeting, making motions and offering lengthy comments on every subject, had a lot to say about the village sign ordinance in general. He wondered if the council was playing politics by enforcing its ban on banners that has been village law since 1990.

Karn said he didn't want to be argumentative, but for the sake of argument, noted that some people thought the sign ordinance enforcement was politically aimed at one person.

"You can always put a wooden frame around it (a banner), and we've beat your ordinance," said Karn.

But Donaldson, who was trying to offer the proposed definition of a banner, disagreed. He said a framed banner is still a banner, and as such has been disallowed since 1990.

"Banners already are illegal in the ordinance — they have been before and they are now," said Donaldson.

In discussions over banners and where they can and can't hang, Donaldson stressed the difference between a community event and a business, saying that he even bought three banners during the moratorium on the ban.

But, since he operates a business, he wasn't distressed when the banners had to go. Councilor Potter attempted to get Donaldson to agree that the difference goes a step further, with the council not in a position to capriciously and arbitrarily allow or disallow banners here, there and everywhere.

Potter said the provision for banners at four specified locations is for non-profit groups — not for profit-making groups that happen to make donations to charity. He said the ordinance is very clear, keeping the council out of the business of ruling on a case-by-case basis.

Donaldson disagreed, saying the council has the authority to supersede that rule and designated which community events could be advertised with banners in one or all of the four locations, or really anywhere else at the discretion of councilors.

We're not confused...

Donaldson said the chili cookoff was a perfect example, when organizer Paul Crown wanted to hang a banner somewhere offsite of his event. Donaldson said the council had the choice of allowing a waiver to its own policy and giving approval for a chili cookoff banner to hang.

"It's your policy ... not in the ordinance," said Donaldson.

Karn said he should have known that, indicating that he and the council were confused when they turned down Crown's request for an off-premise banner.

"I think the council understood that," said Mayor Shaw. "If we start making exceptions, it gets out of hand and we're right back where we started."

In what was a continuation of a public hearing on sign rules and regs, Donaldson explained proposals that were drafted to clarify the ordinance and make enforcement more clearcut.

However, councilors continued to get bogged down in questions over areas in the ordinance that were not included in the changes.

For an hour the council and Donaldson debated the changes that were finally approved.

Councilor James reminded Donaldson and the council that the village sign committee already had found the sign ordinance to be adequate, saying the village needs better enforcement.

Councilor Cummins wondered why the ordinance was being amended since it had been declared to be a good ordinance and the amendments offered included no actual changes.

Donaldson wasn't giving up. He continued to try to explain the proposed changes which included the banner definition, clarification of where the sign permit should be maintained, wording to reinforce the ban on banners as permanent signs, wording to allow owners to use the inside of their store windows at their own discretion and authorization for village employees to remove signs placed in the public right of way.

A look back

Karn lined out a long and complicated scenario of how village staff could determine where public rights of way begin and end.

"Ruidoso has been here for a long time," said Karn. "We aren't Aspen or Vail ... we're on our way, but we're not there yet."

"Let me tell you a story," said Karn, taking the council back 45 years to when his father bought a house in Ruidoso Springs.

"It's very difficult to get a certified survey because the spring used to move. He described how surveyors can't agree on property lines, predicting trouble if the village opts to remove signs from what it believes is public right of way.

"When y'all identify a sign that's in the public right of way, are y'all going to be required to get a certified survey?" asked Karn.

"That's not what we're talking about," said Councilor J.D. James, in an effort to return to the business at hand.

"We may not be ... but they may be tomorrow in district court," replied Karn, who reminded the mayor that he was ready for a smoke break.

"Well, let them talk about it in district court," said James, who had his own point to make regarding the sign ordinance. James wants new business owners to have a grace period when they can use an "open" banner.

He said a new owner might want to let people know the business is open and should be able to use an open banner for a couple of weeks.

Donaldson, who spent a good part of an hour trying in vain to return discussions to the amendments, told James that such a banner is not legal now, hasn't been legal since 1990, and won't be legal after the amendments are adopted.

Donaldson stressed to the council that it's up to them what happens with the sign ordinance, noting that if James wants the change he is proposing then it needs to be drafted and set for public hearing as a further amendment to the sign ordinance.

"Ordinances are living documents," said Donaldson, and Karn added, "I still go back..."

"Bill, don't go back 45 years," cut in James.

"It was a lot simpler then," said Karn. "When my granddad had cattle stolen, he just strapped on his 38..."

"I don't think we can solve Bill's problem tonight on this," said Mayor Shaw, asking for a vote on the amendments, which were approved by the council with one dissenting vote — Karn's.

County treasurer mails out 25,236 tax bills

by DIANNE STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

This is the busiest time of the year for Lincoln County Treasurer Janice Ware and her staff.

Wednesday, they started mailing 25,236 tax bills to county property owners in an attempt to collect $9,208,447 in taxes for 1993.

"By law, bills are required to be mailed out by November 1," Ware said. "But we may be able to beat the deadline and have them mailed out by the end of the week."

The money should start rolling in right way since the due date for the first half is November 10 and taxes will be delinquent by December 11. The second half is due by April 10 and will be considered delinquent by May 11.

Postmarks are honored by the office, Ware said.

"We are using the same form we've used for the last couple of years, with a few exceptions," Ware told The Ruidoso News. "Two labels, one for each half payment, are provided for the taxpayer to apply to his own envelopes when sending remittances to our office. The numbers will coincide with the numbers on the back of the tax bill, which will give the taxpayer an explanation of each numbered item on the actual bill. And it's all in layman's language, no more quoted statutes that are difficult to understand."

Ware is putting together a quarterly newsletter, which will be available at locations throughout the county or by calling the office at 648-2397 to have one mailed.

"Items in this issue are a brief profile of each staff member, information about Payments in Lieu of Taxes and the mobile home sale recently conducted for non-payment of delinquent taxes, the first of its kind in the county," Ware said. "It includes pie charts and graphs showing how your tax dollars are distributed and how the taxable values have fluctuated since 1984."

"We are interested in researching the matters that concern the taxpayer, so we welcome any suggestions on items that may be of interest to them."

The bar chart shows a big jump in net taxable value in the county from 1985 when values were under $150-million to 1986 when they hit more than $250-million. Another significant increase occurred in 1988, followed by a drop in 1990 and then another upward turn in 1992 to $270-million.

The pie chart shows that school districts take the biggest chunk of taxes paid by county residents at 27.4 percent, followed by the county at 27 percent, the villages at 26.2 percent, the hospital at 9.8 percent and the state at 5.3 percent, leaving just over 4 percent for all other entities.

Have hangar-need mechanic: village seeks bids on lease

Stunt pilot Jim Franklin is giving up his hangar/maintenance service lease at Ruidoso's Sierra Blanca Airport, and the council voted Tuesday to seek proposals for a new lessee.

Franklin, who negotiated a deal with the village to provide mechanic services after the village's long-time aviation mechanic resigned, won't be asking to renew his lease, according to village attorney H. John Underwood.

Underwood said lessee Franklin had notified him that he didn't intend to "re-up" his lease. He said Franklin's mechanic has resigned.

"I guess we need to go out for bids," said Underwood. Even though this lease is not up until December 1, it's not clear how long Franklin's operation will continue at the airport without his mechanic.

"I'm not sure how long the lessee is capable of operating under this lease," said Underwood.

The council, on Underwood's recommendation, authorized airport manager Lloyd Wayne to develop a request for proposals for a new lessee to operate an airplane repair service in a hangar at the municipal airport.

Councilors instructed Wayne to develop the document, which would then need to be approved. He wasn't authorized to seek bids.

Wayne said Franklin's mechanic is repairing a "Polish jet," and will then move to Colorado. He said Franklin had tried hard to make this lease agreement work.

Approved a stop order for the 85-day runway project that is under way at the Sierra Blanca Airport. Engineer Earl Cook was on hand to describe the three elements of the project. They are (1) friction course on runway, (2) T-hangar development, (3) new taxiway signs to comply with FAA standards.

Village attorney John Underwood assured the council that questions over the legality of the present lease, which was negotiated without calling for bids, are unfounded.

He said it was a policy decision, and any such lease involving the normal day-to-day operations of a village can be entered into without going out for bids regardless of the price.

"Formerly we ran this business on our own, then we leased it out. Why would that be normal operations?" asked Mayor Jerry Shaw.

Cook said the project started late because the federal government was late in getting the grant to the village. Now, because of cold weather, the project can't be completed on time.

By issuing the stop order, the calendar on the 85 days will stop now and restart when the weather is warm next spring. Then the contractor will have the remaining days left to finish the project before the village begins to assess liquidated damages of up to $1,000 a day.

Underwood replied that running a mechanics' operation at an airport is routine, and stressed that it is a policy rather than a legal issue.

"When we reconvene in April, I'm giving them two weeks," said Briley.

Lincoln County posts New Mexico's highest property tax rate

by DIANNE STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Lincoln County claimed the dubious honor this year of posting the highest property tax rate in the state.

County Treasurer Janice Ware provided to The Ruidoso News a compilation of tax rates for all 33 counties in New Mexico. Sitting on top of the pack, because of the 44 mill tax rate for the Village of Ruidoso, is Lincoln County.

The county's high rate was considerably above the next two counties in line, Cibola at 40.748 mills and Bernalillo at 40.739 mills. Even the county's lowest tax rate was in the top fourth in the state, ranking eighth at 20.925 mills.

The three counties with the lowest rates of the low were Taos at 7.225 mills, Roosevelt at 8.279 mills and Chaves at 8.296 mills.

One mill is equal to $1 for each $1,000 of taxable property value after exemptions. New Mexico taxes are based on one-third of the value of a piece of property.

Lincoln County's net taxable value fell right in the middle of the pack at $273.5-million. The three most affluent counties are Bernalillo at $5.1-billion, Santa Fe at $1.95-billion and San Juan at $1.78-billion.

At the bottom of the list are Harding with a net taxable value of $21.8-million, Mora at $25-million and DeBaca at $25.67-million.

The good news for Lincoln County is that it carries no debt service, although some of its municipalities and school districts are repaying bond issues.

Ware said while attending the treasurer's affiliate meeting in August, she was astounded to hear that several counties are going broke.

"Four that I know of and are rather close to home are Valencia, Sierra, Torrance and Socorro," she said. "They already had layoffs and have cut their county employees back to a bare minimum."

In other areas of the state, property owners are protesting giant jumps in their taxes, because of skyrocketing property values.

Residents in Santa Fe are mounting an effort to fight the huge jumps each year.

Birthday celebrators picnic under the trees

Early Birthday Celebration

This is being sent to you in early afternoon of October 25, and will reach you on October 28, the day after my birthday.

On the 23rd two families came from Roswell and we had an early birthday celebration. These folks were Wayne and Judy Kasuboski and their daughter Anisa, and Richard and Marilyn Lysak and their daughter April with chairs and tables placed in the shade of a piñon tree we had a picnic lunch and they sang happy birthday to me before we enjoyed a birthday cake brought by the Kasuboski family, who also brought me a western shirt. The Lysaks brought me a set of dishes and cups.

Then yesterday here came C.R. Hicks from his home in Ruidoso with a sack of doughnuts and a large bag of candy.

We had a visit before the fireplace. Paul Jones came up about midday to see if I was all right.

Today the new American flag is floating in a western breeze under a sky of white wind-blown clouds.

Memories of Halloween

With Jack Frost decorating the mountain world with his bright colors, your memory dips back through the years.

In Juneau, Alaska we went from house to house with our homemade jack-o-lanterns, made from a coffee can with a candle inside. In each home we were received with laughter and cheers by neighbor children in their masks and costumes. We played games like "diving" for apples in a tub of water and pinning the tail on the donkey.

In each home we ate blueberry pie, pumpkin pie and homemade ice cream. After making the rounds we were loaded down with gifts of all kinds of candies and cookies.

Let us have a safe and happy Halloween and I thank you for making my birthday one of the greatest in my life.

Downs adds building inspector

Tom Armstrong has been certified as the building inspector for Ruidoso Downs.

Armstrong received his state certification in June of this year. The certification process took place in Santa Fe.

"It is something that the village has been working on for a long time. It just takes a while to get it all done," Armstrong said.

Building permits may be obtained at the Ruidoso Downs Village Hall located at 1575 W. Wood Lane.

"If someone needs a permit they can come to city hall and fill out an application form. They will receive instructions on what needs to be completed and the time frame inspections need to be done," Armstrong said.

The process is short according to Armstrong.

"The permits are good for a year. It will only take a couple of days for the permits to be approved. On inspections we need 24 hours of notice," Armstrong said.

Trustees blame each other for mixup

by DIANNE STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Two members of the Capitan Board of Trustees tried to deflect criticism Monday about their handling of a proposed hiring of a new police officer.

They pointed the finger of blame at Mayor Frank Warth, contending they would not have rejected Shawn Menges earlier this month if they had been included in the selection process.

But Zelma Cadell wouldn't let trustees Leroy Montes and Gilbert Montoya off the hook.

She reproached the two men for "humiliating" Menges and putting a mark on his record. The two men owe Menges an apology, she said.

"I didn't know there was a mark," Montoya said.

"I'll write a letter that it had no bearing on his performance," Warth said. "He was not dismissed. He just didn't get the appointment. It was a matter of the majority of the trustees not voting for him. There are no legal ramifications."

Montes insisted that if anyone owed Menges an apology, it was Warth, because he moved ahead as if the man had the appointment secured.

"I really don't think I or any of council owes him an apology," Montes said. "If anyone does, it's the mayor, because that should have been cleared through us. The mayor should have known how we were going to vote before (proceeding). I said that night in the meeting, and I will say again, I will not vote for anybody to work for Capitan that I do not know a little bit about."

Police chief Tony Cano previously said he took Menges to meet each trustee and the only person not at home was Montoya.

Trustee Gordon Ross noted that Menges had been invited for an interview with the full board Monday, but didn't come.

"You expect him to come (after what happened)," Cadell asked incredulously. "I think he was very humiliated."

Montoya said he had nothing against Menges.

"I have nothing against the gentleman," he said. "It was mishandled on the mayor's part. If he would have included us on the interview, I'm sure (Menges) would be with us today."

Whether they had been consulted had no bearing on Menges' qualifications, Cadell said.

The town has been without two police officers for a long time, she said.

Montes contended he has been at odds with Warth for years on issues. He disagreed with the mayor over what salary to pay a former officer who had completed academy training for certification.

While Warth balked at giving the man a raise, he was willing to start Menges, "a man we know nothing about," at a higher level, Montes contended.

His reference apparently was to a former officer, who was not certified when hired. The salary for uncertified officers is $900 a month, but the village started the employee at $1,200. When he finished his academy training, a point at which an officer usually would receive a raise, Warth noted that he already was being paid $300 over the usual starting salary.

"If the citizens of Capitan come to me and tell me I made a mistake, I would resign tomorrow," Montes said. "But I don't know if the mayor would do that."

"I'm here," Cadell said.

Warth told The Ruidoso News Tuesday that past appointments of officers chosen by committee haven't worked out well and he had hoped by allowing new police chief Tony Cano to select an officer, the track record might improve.

Interviewed for the position of police officer Monday were Ronald Nedler and Kenneth Johnson, both from Alamogordo. They completed police academy at Western New Mexico University, but have not been police officers.

The other two applicants were Israel Barrera of Lordsburg, who has been a corrections officer with the sheriff's department there and Carlos Brito from Alamogordo, who worked with Cano on the campus police at Western.

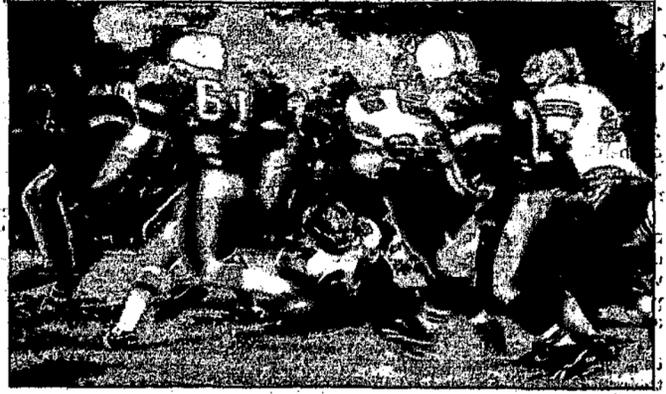

Cano said he hopes to have a recommendation for the mayor and trustees by Friday.

In other business, the trustees approved a resolution calling on the state and federal government to stop issuing unfunded mandates.

"This is a real problem, fellows. The state and federal government hand down these mandates and actions for local village to do, particularly in environmental areas, without the necessary funding to execute the mandate," Warth said.

Board members welcomed back village clerk Deborah Cummins, who received her second year certification after attending the clerk's institute in Santa Fe for one week.

They accepted the high bid of $4,001 from Ned Peiters of Neds Plumbing in Carrizozo for a small building no longer used by the village.

A Tiger football player feels the crush of the Loving Falcons as he's nailed to the turf during the game last Friday in Capitan's second defeat of a spectacular season.

Loving crushes Capitan's dream of district playoffs

Dashing the district playoff hopes of Capitan, the Loving Falcons last Friday tumbled the Tigers 47-12.

"I think Friday night six of their touchdowns were scored when we gave them the ball in our territory," said coach Ed Davis. "Turnovers were the key. It was just a night we were mentally not there."

"But the score doesn't really indicate the thrust of the game. We gained 323 yards to their 361. Sure, we're disappointed, because it cost us a chance to get into the playoffs, but these boys should be commended on the season they've turned in. They have grown leaps and bounds. It's miraculous.

"This Friday we go out against the Carrizozo Grizzlies, our arch rival. We'd like to be able to go over and do what we're capable of doing. We just have to get mentally tough and not be intimidated."

Registration will begin at 8:30 a.m. at the senior citizens center in Capitan. The general meeting will start at 10 a.m.

Stephens said the local Legion organization and its auxiliary are active in the community, staging birthday parties for veterans at the care center and sponsoring students to girls and boys state.

Pot-bellied pigs victimized by many disappointed pet owners

by DIANNE STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

They look so cute in the advertisements. Little Vietnamese pot-bellied pigs became the rage about 10 years ago, but more recently, they have become victims. Like most fads, would-be entrepreneurs and opportunists jumped in and over-bred the species, trying to capitalize on prices that at one point spiraled as high as $15,000 an animal.

Coupled with zoning restrictions that forced some families to give up their pets, and the realities of living with a pig, even a well-behaved one, many of the intelligent breed found themselves abandoned.

They've been packed off to meat plants, simply turned out on the streets and brought to shelters, only to be killed by lethal injection.

Two of the rotund squealers currently reside at the Lincoln County Humane Society shelter. Their previous owners cared enough to provide food and some financial support to ensure them a good chance for adoption.

Ethel and Lucy are about two years old. Lucy is spayed. The owners have a ranch, but are closing it down and had to get rid of the two girls," said shelter secretary Kathy Tetreault.

The adoption fee for Lucy is $57.50, but because Ethel is not spayed and the cost of that procedure will be much higher than for a dog, the adoption fee (which includes the price of spaying) for her will be $125. Their shots are supposed to be current and the owners have provided the name of the veterinarian who has been treating the two pot-bellied pigs.

"Dogs don't bother them, even when they're barking," Tetreault said. "They just mind their own business and they're not aggressive at all."

The pigs are full grown and weigh about 80 pounds. They will require some immediate trimming.

For those pigs not fortunate enough to find homes, a few people have responded to their plight.

In Charles Town, West Virginia, Jim Brewer and Dale Riffle have established a sanctuary farm for abandoned Vietnamese pot-bellied pigs.

As they became aware of the growing problem, they gave up a spectacular house near Annapolis to provide a proper environment for their pig, Rufus, and other homeless pot-bellied pigs.

The two men had acquired Rufus when they heard the members of a fraternity had tired of caring for him and the pig needed a home before a less desirable alternative plan was executed.

Since then, they have become so fond of their charges, the two men have become vegetarians, giving up all meats including Riffle's favorite, pork.

Situated 70 miles northwest of Washington D.C. near Charles Town, West Virginia, the Riffle and Brewer five-acre farm fits into the rest of rural community.

It has become a sanctuary for about 65 homeless pot-bellied pigs, who are treated to daily massages, doses of classical music and refreshing swims in a private pool. Plans call for an exercise track in the future.

"At first, there were articles about the farm in the registries for pot-bellied pigs," said Riffle during a telephone interview from West Virginia.

"We thought it was the best place to start, but the story wasn't well received, because those are the people who still are breeding them."

Riffle and Brewer would like to see breeding severely curtailed or stopped.

"There are entirely too many pigs and not enough homes," Riffle said. "When they first were introduced, they were selling for $10,000 to $15,000 and waiting lists of 1 1/2 years. Today, they're going to the slaughter house left and right."

A photograph taken by the Los Angeles Times and used in a Washington Post article picked up by the Albuquerque Journal shows Brewer scratching the stomach of an adorable piglet called Sam the raisin man.

"But they said he was named that because he liked raisins," Riffle said. "What really happened was that this five-week-old was dumped on the side of a road and made his way to the driveway of a couple who live in the same community.

"He was so dehydrated from wandering in the woods that he looked like a shriveled raisin. The man who drove him to our house was named Sam."

Other pigs have been shipped by air or driven by their owners from as far away as San Francisco, Vermont, Louisiana and Florida.

Articles about the sanctuary have appeared in The Wall Street Journal, People Magazine and Time.

"We got almost no response from some of the articles, perhaps because of the pig's image problem," Riffle said. "However, one woman did fly in from Mississippi to see (the farm)."

The two men still commute to their jobs in Washington D.C. each weekday, tending to their small charges before they leave and when they return.

A weekly visit by a veterinarian keeps their shots current and ensures that every new arrival is sterilized and cannot reproduce.

The men said the bottom line is that, like many other pets, the pigs need an outdoor area. Cramped up in an apartment or house all day, their natural instinct to root will lead to torn up linoleum or other household damage.

"In our local area, we find homes for some of the pigs, but we're very particular where they go," Riffle said. "We've adopted out about 10."

But when three go out, nine more come into the farm. This weekend, they're coming from Atlanta, Boston, Philadelphia, New York City, San Francisco and Vermont.

"We screen out (potential adoption) calls that sound like impulse or joke gifts, or those who might possibly eat them," Riffle said of the adoption process. "We ask about zoning laws. We won't adopt to anyone who thinks they are a house pet, or lives in an apartment or townhouse."

"Probably the biggest misconception is that people think they won't get heavier than about 30 pounds and can live in an apartment," he said. "Owners tell us all the time that a breeder or seller has told them they are full grown and won't get larger than 30 pounds."

"Our average weight here is about 150 pounds and 16 to 18 inches tall."

Aggressive behavior is another problem that starts to show when a pig is about 1 1/2 years old, he said.

"Eight out of 10 calls we receive deal with aggression," Riffle said. "I think it's unfair that breeders tell people they can be house pets. I've never known a breeder to have one inside."

"Pigs are territorial and as they mature, the house becomes their territory and a certain pecking order is established in the herd. They will fight when a new pig is introduced. Those humans in the house already have a niche, but the pigs tend to charge visitors, snap at and bite people. The visitor is a new pig in the herd."

Riffle and Brewer avoid that type of behavior by starting new herds of five pigs in a new environment all at one time.

"When it's a new territory for all five, they work it out slowly," Riffle said. "When new pigs come in, we build a new area and move all of them into it."

"We've had pigs so nasty they will bite the wire on their cages until their gums bleed, but after they are paired up with a new pig in a that new environment, in a few days, they're positively sweet natured."

Pigs are ranked fourth on the intelligence list for animals and can be enjoyed under the proper circumstances, Riffle said.

The two men have established connections across the country for safe houses, places pigs can be taken and held until a new home can be found. Many animal shelters, even some operated by humane groups, will not accept them, Riffle said.

The Brewer-Riffle farm operation was incorporated last October as a non-profit organization. Several programs are available through which people can help their plump charges. For more information, call 304-725-PIGS (7447).

Convention center director describes village advertising/marketing plans

by FRANKIE JARRELL
The Ruidoso News Editor

Kathleen Michelena, director of the Ruidoso Convention and Civic Events Center, detailed her marketing and advertising plan for the Ruidoso Village Council Tuesday.

Michelena distributed a detailed written report of where she has spent $83,754.56 of her $103,614 advertising budget.

And, Michelena reported that the advertising is working, with the number of "group" rooms up more than 200 percent of what it was last year.

"That shows that what we are doing is right," said Michelena, noting that she is following the council's directive to focus on conventions and conferences.

Michelena said center customers are pleased with the facility. She had words of praise for her staff, saying how well they work with meeting planners.

"My staff is absolutely outstanding," said Michelena. "They extend themselves."

This week the center is headquarters for the Governor's Conference on Tourism, which may be the biggest so far in the new building with 270 registered conferees.

"Tomorrow we'll be changing 19 rooms," said Michelena.

She and her staff got plenty of practice in changing out rooms a couple of weekends ago when the center was shared by Oktoberfest, a regional duplicate bridge tournament and a meeting of Seventh Day Adventists.

Convention business is picking up, and the center will be headquarters to the Realtors Association of New Mexico in 1995. Mayor Jerry Shaw complimented Michelena on the presentation she made to invite that group to town.

Michelena said she's pleased to make proposals or provide resources for others to put together plans. She said she's working on a convention planner and building a library of resources on the center.

Councilor J.D. James repeated his request, made at several recent meetings, to call the center a convention center so that its purpose will be clear. He said the word "convention" had to be incorporated into the name when the state gave the village the money to build the center, and he questioned when the commonly used name, "Ruidoso Civic Events Center," came to be the accepted name.

Mayor Shaw said maybe the village should change the name of the center, and Councilor Joe Gomez recommended the facility be identified from now on as the Ruidoso Convention and Civic Events Center. The council agreed.

The sign on the building says Civic Events Center, but at some point a new marquee-type sign will be constructed on Mechem at the entrance to the center complex.

Councilor Frank Potter had some comments and recommendations on cooperative advertising efforts. With all the money being spent on advertising and promotion by various groups, he predicts a trend toward pooling resources and working together.

"We need to get creative to get the most for the money," said Potter.

Also during Tuesday's discussions on tourism, Mayor Shaw announced that the new "Ruidoso pins" have been ordered, and will be silver and turquoise rather than gold and red like the last batch.

Over the years the pin design has remained basically the same — a Zia symbol with the name Ruidoso — but different orders have come back with slightly different looks.

BLM proposes another land swap

by DIANNE STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Officials from the Bureau of Land Management (BLM) will be back in Lincoln County Friday to talk about an additional land swap along the Rio Bonito.

They will meet with county commissioners during a rescheduled regular meeting starting at 9 a.m. Friday in the courthouse in Carriazo. The session will replace the November 2 meeting.

A previous exchange of four privately owned parcels near the historic settlement of Lincoln for land owned by the BLM elsewhere in the state was opposed strongly by the majority of the commission for two years.

But when their efforts to block the trade or wring more concessions seemed to falter, they finally backed away as the majority on the board saw the county losing footing on the issue.

Supporters of the proposal said they saw the swap of the land into government hands as a way to protect the property and the historic area.

Opponents objected to the loss of more private land from the tax base and the impact on adjoining land owners. They expressed doubts about the ability of BLM to properly care for the land.

In other business, Johnny Johnson from the county dispatch center has asked to speak to the commission; and Karen Kopp, director of the Lincoln County Economic Development Corporation, is scheduled to give a quarterly report.

Resolutions are to be passed asking the state for improvements on State Road 214 to Fort Stanton Hospital and Training Center, opposing the increase in grazing fees on federal lands and calling for an increase in payments paid by the federal government in lieu of taxes on its property in Lincoln County.

Commissioner Wilton Howell is on the agenda to discuss a cut in local taxes in view of the county's surplus.

Have A Safe & Happy Halloween

Try to Trick-or-Treat when it's light outside.

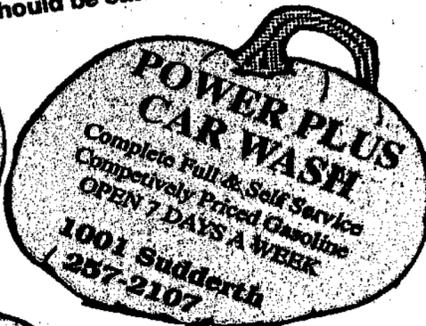

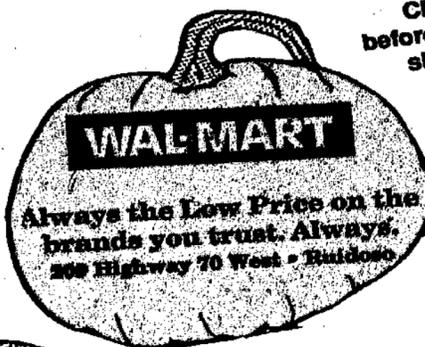

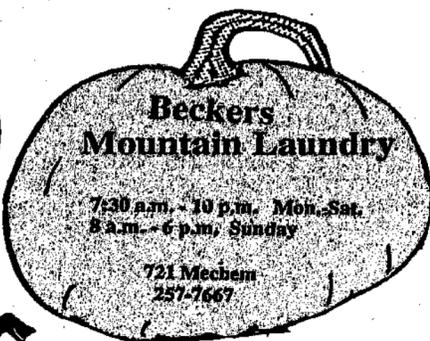

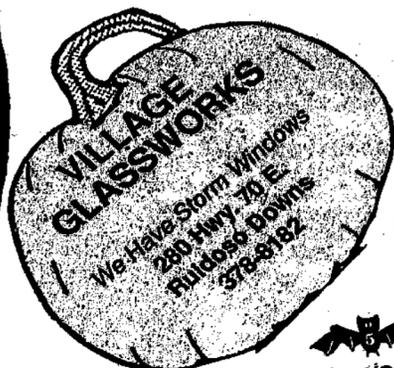

Practice these safety tips...

Carry a flashlight when walking.

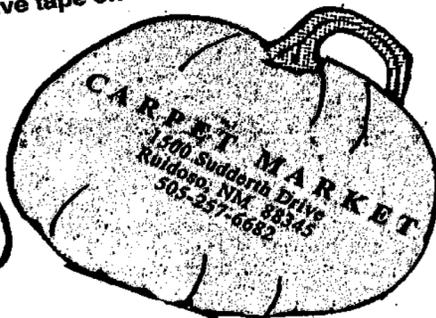

Discard commercially produced treats if the wrapper is loose or the seal has been broken.

Children should have a meal or snack before they go out. Emphasize that NO treats should be eaten before they get home.

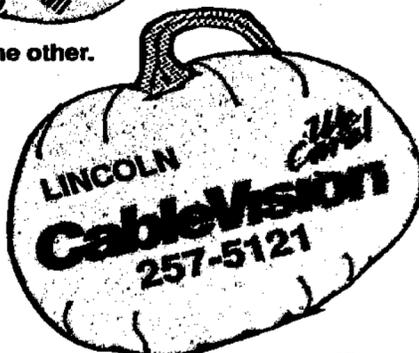

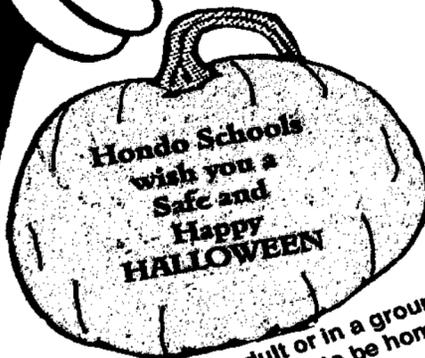

Use reflective tape on children's costumes.

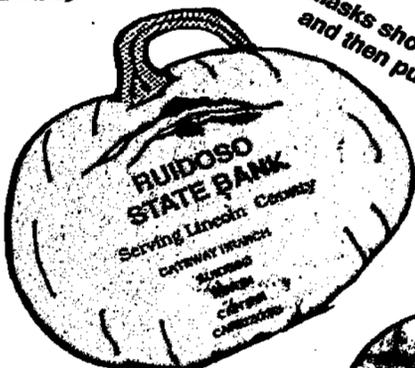

TRICK OR TREAT MAINSTREET FROM 3 TO 6 PM SATURDAY

Trick-or-Treat one side of the street and then the other. Never criss-cross the street.

Trick-or-Treat with an adult or in a group. Set up a route and what time to be home.

Make-up is easier than a mask. Masks should be worn on top of the heads when walking and then pulled down when children reach the door.

TAKE YOUR CANDY TO LCMC TO BE X-RAYED BETWEEN 5:30 & 8 PM SUNDAY.

Let's all be aware of children on Halloween night. We want them to have a safe, happy and great Halloween.

Seeing red about substance abuse

Wearing a red ribbon isn't enough — Americans need to see so angry they'll begin to see red over the substance abuse that is chipping away at the very heart of this nation. Perhaps that anger and passion will lead to fruitful action.

This week is National Red Ribbon Week, an observance and campaign that originated in response to the murder of federal agent Enrique Camarena by drug traffickers in 1985. Since 1988, communities in New Mexico have created opportunities for awareness and focused on alcohol and other drug abuse prevention strategies. The goals of the Red Ribbon Campaign in New Mexico are worthy: to encourage active participation of the family; to increase awareness concerning alcohol and other drug problems; to build year-round, community-based substance abuse prevention events, activities and programs.

But, how are those lofty goals being translated into community-changing action? Not very well.

The same regional paper where an advertisement announced the governor's Red Ribbon Campaign for October 23-31, just a day earlier carried a story that precious substance abuse costs could crater President Bill Clinton's health care reforms. According to that AP story, substance abuse in the United States kills 520,000 people a year. A study sponsored by the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation estimated the total economic cost of smoking, drinking and drugs as a staggering $238 billion in 1990.

The report, conducted by researchers at Brandeis University, says of those half-million-plus deaths, many would be eliminated by changing people's habits. Researchers concluded that cigarettes were to blame for 419,000 of those premature deaths. The report said in part that as many as two-thirds of homicides and serious assaults involve alcohol; over all use of alcohol, illicit drugs and cigarettes has declined, but heavy use has not subsided; by eighth grade, 70 percent of youths have tried alcohol, 44 percent have smoked cigarettes, 10 percent have tried marijuana and two percent cocaine; between 25 and 40 percent of all general hospital patients are there for alcoholism-related complications.

And so, in the midst of this Red Ribbon Campaign week, instead of joining the guy in patting ourselves on the back with a fancy luncheon, we should be declaring a national emergency. The war on drugs is a yearlong, lifelong fight that must be waged at home and in the schools with educational programs that begin with Headstart and kindergarten. Law enforcement is the final line of defense in the war on drugs, backing up families and educators. Families must be drawn into the educational process all year long for some definite action — not once a year for lip service.

Red Ribbon Campaign focuses on youth, but parents, educators and law officers can help by kicking their own substance abuse habits if they have them. Smokers, drinkers and drug abusers who need help, should contact their family doctor or the Counseling Center to learn where help can be found. Such action will benefit the individual, their family and friends and this nation's economy.

If you pin on a red ribbon this week, or if you see someone proudly wearing one, ask yourself and that other red ribbon wearer to go a step further and take action against substance abuse.

Wearing a red ribbon just isn't enough.

On The Record

Now we know! Racism is the media's fault

New Mexico First could have titled the 12th New Mexico Town Meeting "Much Ado About Nothing," according to reports from members and delegates who got together in Las Cruces to talk about "multi-culturalism."

Among worries at this get-together of some 130 or so Anglo, Black, Hispanic and Native American* delegates, was "where are the Asians?"

Delegates — apparently handpicked to include just the right mix of cultures — learned that the one Asian invited to the conference had to cancel and that left this very important assemblage short one culture.

Bummer.

But, on the other hand, we all know we have some, so New Mexico Firsters decided that this state can no longer claim to be tri-cultural. Since NMF delegates seem to think our state is on the verge of war among the various cultures, maybe we should change our pledge to the flag, you know the one that says:

"I salute the flag of the State of New Mexico, the Zia symbol of perfect friendship among united cultures."

We only thought we were friends! But, now we know we're not, and we know why.

These important people at NMF wasted little time in figuring out who to blame for this state's cultural problems. They pointed fingers at the news media, educators and journalists for failing to advocate cultural diversity and sensitivity.

Yep, if you live in a town without the perfect socio-economic and cultural mix, then it's probably the fault of your local newspaper or television station. Don't forget to blame the media and schools for this state's lack of culture, too.

(Just an aside on this cultural vacuum: Often, I see people behave rudely, pick their teeth in public, blow their nose at the table in restaurants, and such, and now, thanks to NMF, I know that this uncultured behavior is the media's fault.)

But, back to New Mexico First: guess who pushed to get this sentence in the report? "On numerous occasions, the news media have given disproportionate attention to the alleged shortcomings of non-Anglo political figures, leaving the unfavorable impression that members of these cultures are not fit for public service."

Seems that the top guy in the state legislature (a group that is at least half non-Anglo) Ray Sanchez (D-Belen) isn't pleased with "the media." Sanchez, a guy I used to consider a friend, took pot shots at my profession throughout the meeting. He was joined in his campaign by another state politico — Eric Serna.

They weren't alone, and the final report said that news executives "must be held accountable for serving the cultural needs of their audiences, not only the economic wants of their sponsors and advertisers."

The very important people at New Mexico First suggested communicating with the news media through organized boycotts of advertisers. Gee, thanks Ray and Eric. I guess we're not buddies anymore.

Don't worry, though. When these very important (or is that self-important?) people got through hammering the state's communications industry, they turned their attention to the schools.

While not as evil as the news media, the schools are really bad when it comes to different cultures.

NMF delegates said the state's school system "tends to play a negative role with respect to how certain cultural groups are viewed."

While beating up on teachers — the villains in all this abuse of different cultures — the delegates threw educators a bone by saying they should be paid adequately. No kidding?

And, of course, everything comes back to money. New Mexico First wants the state to come up with the money for the preparation by knowledgeable individuals of textbooks accurately explaining the histories and traditions of New Mexico's different cultures with an unbiased recognition of the unique contributions they have made to the state's development.

What does that mean? Well, it probably means that the same people who get on the state gravy train for feasibility studies and consulting contracts might have a new trough from which to suck public funds.

And, speaking of public funds, guess who was paying the tab for a bunch of these people to beat up on us?

If you guessed "us taxpayers," you're right. You don't win a prize because it was a pretty easy question. Seems like we taxpayers pay for most everything these days.

Five Lincoln County residents (I'm shocked, horrified and embarrassed to report that they were all non-Hispanic Anglos) were in on the NMF gripe session, and public money paid for at least four of them — about $2,400!

It was money well spent, though, if our county and village officials got a little culture over in Las Cruces. Maybe they'll share.

*I've listed these in alphabetical order in an unusual attempt by a member of the media to be fair.

If only NMF could have done its part and recruited some Asian delegates, rest assured, Asian would have been listed between Anglo and Black.

Local fiddler wins state championship

Marilyn Trotter of Ruidoso competed in the New Mexico Old Time Fiddlers' Association State Championship Contest in Truth or Consequences on October 15, 16, and 17 and walked away with cash and trophies.

Trotter is the new State Champion and is eligible to compete at the National Fiddler Contest next June in Idaho.

Trotter competed in her age division and in the Junior Champion Division (30 and under).

The junior champion played the senior champion to determine the state champion. She took home a large trophy for that achievement.

Trotter also won first place in her age division (21 to 45) and first place in the junior champion division (30 and under).

Other winners from Ruidoso were Danielle Hall, age 12, who won a fifth place in the 12 and under division and took home cash and a trophy; while Wesley Hall, 6, took home cash for his sixth place win.

The championship has been staged annually on the third weekend in October for the past 20 years. This year the contest was at the T or C civic center where there were 35 winning contestants with 1,518 people attending the event.

The association's annual International Fiesta Contest, the first weekend in May, is open to any Old Time Fiddle player from anywhere in the world.

ENMU-R grant to benefit minorities

Eastern New Mexico State University's Ruidoso Instructional Center will receive at least $11,000 next month from the New Mexico Alliance for Minority Participation (AMP).

The grant is earmarked to set up programs encouraging minority college students to study math, science and engineering.

New Mexico State University, which manages the $10-million program funded by the National Science Foundation (NSF), will review grant requests from 24 participating New Mexico post-secondary institutions.

NMSU civil engineering professor Ricardo Jacquez is director of the statewide program spearheaded by NMSU with participation from Los Alamos and Sandia national laboratories.

The grants give them a lot of freedom to be creative and focus on ways to recruit minorities, said Jacquez.

The Ruidoso Instructional Center had 76 minority students for 27 percent of its total enrollment in fall 1991.

The AMP program is designed in response to a critical issue facing the United States: the supply of students receiving college degrees in science-based fields is not keeping pace with the demand as the nation becomes increasingly technology oriented.

In the program's first year, NMSU has $670,000 in federal grants to award to college statewide.

Colleges receive a minimum annual award of $11,000, which can jump to $40,000, depending on proposals that are due to NMSU November 22.

The grants pay for scholarships, educational video courses, science tutoring programs and/or equipment for laboratories.

The five-year program targets New Mexico students of African-American, American Indian and Hispanic heritage. The program's goal is to increase the number of minority students receiving bachelor's degrees in natural sciences and engineering from the current annual rate of 327 per year to 700 per year by 1998 and to 18,900 annually by the year 2003.

NSF established the program to link institutions graduating high numbers of minority students with other post-secondary institutions.

2. Thank You

THE RUIDOSO NOON Lions wish to thank all of the merchants and business people of our village for all of their ongoing support of our many charitable activities. We could not accomplish even a small fraction of the things that we do without having them solidly behind us. They are the nicest and friendliest folks that you will find anywhere, always with a smile and cordial greeting when you drop in on business, to shop, or just for a visit. Ruidoso has a lot of positive things going for it, and a major one is the many congenial and caring people in the village's commercial establishments. They all deserve our patronage and support every day of the year. L.S. Mitchell, Ruidoso Valley Noon Lions Club

WHAT WILL THE COLOR LOOK LIKE ON THE WALL?

A wall color's appearance is affected by what offsets it: drapes, carpet, woodwork, etc. The type and amount of lighting also has a strong effect on color. In general, you can expect a color to appear a shade darker on the wall than on the chip, something to keep in mind if you're choosing pale pastel colors.

To keep paint from collecting in an open can rim and slopping over the side, punch holes in the groove with a hammer and a small nail. Paint will drain back into the can and not over the edge.

HOW MUCH PAINT DO I NEED?

To estimate the number of gallons of paint you need, figure the square footage of the area you plan to paint and divide by the manufacturer's estimated coverage per gallon. Paint feeders and sprayers will require more.

Exterior painting is fair-weather work. The day must be dry, particularly if you are using alkyd paint, which won't adhere to moist surfaces. Latex paint can be applied to slightly damp surfaces, but not to wet ones or cold ones. The temperature must be between 50° F and 90° F for either type of paint to go on properly.
