ENMU office hours extended for spring

Office hours for spring class registration at ENMU-Ruidoso have been expanded to 7 a.m. through 6 p.m. until January 21. The college office is open during lunch time.

Classes are filling up quickly this spring, so interested individuals should register in person at 1400 Sudderth or by phone 257-2120 for credit classes, by fax 257-2141, or by mail.

Outside of the Ruidoso area interested persons can call toll-free at 1-800-934-3668.

Financial aid and academic counseling appointments can still be made by calling the college office.

Classes will begin January 17.

Downs incumbents running unopposed

Municipal elections in Ruidoso Downs should be pretty unexciting on March 1.

Incumbents Margie Morales and Ray Hayhurst are the only two candidates who tossed their hats into the ring for the two seats on the board of trustees.

The two will draw this afternoon for their assured top spots on the ballot.

Council schedules workshop sessions

Downtown parking will be discussed at a workshop meeting at 9 a.m. Tuesday, January 11, in village hall.

Mayor Jerry Shaw said the workshop would discuss and review proposed plans for parking in the MainStreet project and the public is invited to attend.

A review of the 1993-1994 midyear budget and the adoption of Resolution 94-3 concerning amendments to the fiscal year budget will be the subject of a special council meeting beginning at 10 a.m. Wednesday, January 12, in the council chambers.

Price increased for forest service maps

Effective January 1, the price of Forest Service visitors maps for the Southwestern Region increased from $2 to $3 each.

The cost of U.S. Forest Service wilderness maps will remain at $4. The Southwestern Region includes national forests in Arizona and New Mexico and National Grasslands in Oklahoma and Texas.

The price change for maps in the Southwestern Region is part of a nationwide price increase.

19 candidates file for office

Sign up day for municipal elections brought several surprises Tuesday from hats thrown in the ring and hats that stayed out of the ring.

Mayor Jerry G. Shaw, Ruidoso's first woman mayor, will try to keep her seat, while current Councilor Frank T. Cummins is the sole opponent to try to oust the mayor.

Shaw gained her seat when she replaced former mayor Victor Alonso who quit in midyear during the fourth year of his term.

In stumping for the mayor's job, Cummins has a free ride. If he loses to Shaw, he will still retain his council seat for two more years.

If Shaw loses, she will be political history for at least two years.

Not entering the race is Councilor Barbara Duff.

In other races, four candidates signed up for the two-year council seat vacated by Shaw when she was appointed mayor.

Allen J. Full operates a marketing and management business from his home.

Robert P. Donaldson operates a ski shop, is a real estate agent and is chairman of the Ruidoso Planning and Zoning Commission.

Richard Merle Mound is a certified public accountant.

Strand M. McDougal is a ski shop and cabins operator.

Vying for three, four-year seats on the commission are incumbents Joe R. Gomez, Bill Karn Frank Potter and five other candidates.

Joe R. Gomez is sales manager for Sierra Blanca Motors and a current village councilor filling the vacated seat of Ron Andrews who quit shortly after Alonso.

Frank Potter is director of development for the Museum of the Horse and a current village councilor filling Shaw's seat which was vacated when she became mayor.

Robert P. Sterchi is an actuary and owns an employee benefit consulting business called Sterchi and Associates.

Charles Rennick is an attorney. William Lon Karn is a builder and a current village councilor.

E. Leon Eggleston works for Lincoln Cablevision and is a former Ruidoso village clerk and deputy manager.

Norman R. Smith could not be reached, but lists Sierra Blanca Motors as his contact area.

For Municipal Judge, five candidates signed Tuesday, including incumbent Judge Charles Hawthorne. Candidates for judge are:

Danny B. Garcia, a former village firefighter.

Charles Hawthorne, incumbent municipal judge, is an attorney with Hawthorne and Hawthorne.

Jerry R. Propsner is an amusement park equipment broker.

Michael S. Line is an attorney. Jerry Wright is general manager for KBUY radio.

Write-in candidates have until January 18, to declare their candidacy.

White Mountain Task Force drug agent Gonzalo Cordova watches over bundles of neatly wrapped and highly compacted bundles of marijuana brought in from Mexico.

Sheriff James McSwane led last week's drug bust that Cordova said is part of an ongoing investigation into drug trafficking especially in the Carrizozo area.

Drug force busts foursome

Lincoln County's drug enforcement agency arrested four persons in Carrizozo Monday and seized 51 pounds of marijuana with an estimated street value of $51,000.

Arrested were Charles Neiderstadt, 34, Ernestine Lopez, 20, and an unnamed juvenile all of Carrizozo; and Ray Duran, 44, of La Luz.

According to Gonzalo Cordova of the White Mountain Task Force, Lincoln County Sheriff James McSwane and deputy Angelo Vega stopped an older model Chevrolet station wagon and a compact Chevy pickup on Highway 380 west of Carrizozo sometime after 2 p.m.

Cordova said the bust is part of an ongoing investigation into narcotics trafficking and smuggling, particularly in Carrizozo.

Duran and Neiderstadt were charged with possession, intent to distribute, conspiracy, and contributing to the delinquency of a minor. Lopez was charged with conspiracy and possession under 10 ounces.

The juvenile girl was charged with possession and conspiracy.

Duran and Neiderstadt are in Lincoln County jail with bond set at $20,000. Lopez's bond was set at $8,000. The juvenile was remanded to a juvenile detention center.

Prison officials complain about the media

by DIANNE STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Impatient to offer their viewpoint to the public, officials with Camp Sierra Blanca Adult Rehabilitation Center Tuesday took to the podium at the Lincoln County Commission meeting and offered rebuttals to recent articles about the minimum security prison's operation.

The stories published in The Ruidoso News dealt with problems concerning the prison's work release program and with the lack of community awareness that criminals convicted of violent crimes now are incarcerated at the camp near Fort Stanton.

Commissioner Wilton Howell told Warden Sandra McFadin that he brought up the camp during the previous commission meeting because he had read a March 31 memorandum that stated requirements were being eased as of October 1, 1993, on the type of criminals being housed at Sierra Blanca.

"I felt people should be kept informed," he said.

McFadin said she worked in the corrections reception and classification division for years and that the type of inmate being sent to Sierra Blanca has "always been like that. Nothing has changed."

The memo to which Howell referred, was written more for the prison in Roswell, which previously had very stringent restrictions, she said.

However, the memo directed to several former directors of classifications and programs, specifically refers to Camp Sierra Blanca. It reads in part:

"Corrections Department policy regarding the institutional placement of minimum custody inmates has listed specific eligibility criteria for the placement of male inmates at each of the three minimum security facilities. Camp Sierra Blanca has been reserved primarily for older inmates who are not serving a sentence for first or second degree murder: the Roswell Correctional Center has been reserved for inmates with no history of violence; minimum custody inmates convicted of murder have only been assigned to the Los Lunas Correctional Center.

"In an effort to allow the Correc-

SANDRA MCFADIN

I stand corrected if reading it wrong, but think anyone can see that there definitely was a change starting last October. I'm not here to judge them and I don't know if it will be a devastating change, but it is a change and I was under the impression that county officials would be notified.

"I wish I had the memo at the commission meeting, because the warden seems to be working under a different impression. The memo was sent before she was assigned there."

The letter

Assistant warden Tom Sullivan told commissioners at their Tuesday session, "At the last meeting, our camp came up and we weren't here to defend, correct, tell our side of the story."

He said an article written as a followup to that discussion (December 16, 1993) contained an incorrect headline that read: "State prison officials break promises."

Several articles published in The News in recent months have contained factual errors, he contended.

Sullivan said he had sent a letter to The News, but "I haven't been able to get that letter printed."

Contacted later, The News editor Frankie Jarrell said that she received the December 22 letter from Sullivan during the Christmas holiday. Items are scheduled for the Monday and Thursday Opinion pages in advance and to date no extra room has been available.

The letter had been scheduled to run in the future, she said.

"If Mr. Sullivan was so concerned, why didn't he or someone else from the prison call to ask when or if it would be printed?" asked Jarrell. "Several letters to the editor were received before this one, and are just now getting into the paper. Had Mr. Sullivan been more patient, his entire lengthy letter would have been printed on the Opinion Page, but now that he has gone to the county commission, it's lost its relevance."

"As far as inaccuracies, our stated policy is that we will print a correction or clarification as soon as we are notified and can confirm that we've printed inaccurate information. In this case, we weren't notified of any errors in facts, and I stand by our stories."

Reading from the letter he had written, Sullivan contradicted recollections of Sheriff James McSwane and several longtime Capitan residents.

He contended that corrections officials never promised to keep inmates convicted of violent crimes out of the camp following two inmate murders and the shooting of a deputy by a former camp inmate.

"As a 16-year resident of Lincoln County, with a total of eight years of employment at (the camp), and having served two terms as Lincoln County Sheriff, I would like to set the record straight," Sullivan said.

He attended the community meeting in Capitan when State Department of Corrections officials met with local citizens.

"There was never a promise made by any official that all violent offenders would be removed from (the camp)," Sullivan said. "The agreement was that all first and second degree murderers doing lengthy sentences would be removed and no inmates would be paroled to this area that did not come from this area originally."

"The community was outraged at the death of Deputy Tommy Bedford at the hands of a former (camp) inmate who was paroled to Lincoln County (from the penitentiary in Santa Fe)."

McSwane said he stands by his memory of what Capitan residents were told by state officials at that meeting.

"I thought it was said it would be used for non-violent criminals," McSwane said Tuesday. "As I remember it, the agreement was that they would not put anyone out there convicted of a violent crime. I know that's what many people thought they were told. I honestly think the corrections department made promises they didn't keep."

I just feel people need to know who's out there. I'm not trying to downgrade Camp Sierra Blanca."

While Sullivan didn't disagree with the facts as written surrounding the three murders that occurred from 1979-81, he emphasized that only two inmates have been murdered since the camp was turned into an adult facility in 1975. He disputed that McSwane was employed at the camp when the murders occurred. He said camp records show that McSwane was not hired until March 1984, three years after the second murder.

"As I recall, McSwane was a deputy sheriff at the time Peter Padilla was killed and was instrumental in the capture of the inmates involved," Sullivan said.

McSwane clarified later that he had been employed twice at the camp, once before the Padilla murder and again in 1984. Although he said he was not at the prison at the exact time of the two inmate murders, he did work there during a period when many criminals with violent histories were incarcerated.

Other points

Warden McFadin said she had never been contacted by anyone in the press to verify information for a story.

News editor Jarrell said that in each of the articles written about the camp, the reporter called officials in the State Department of Corrections and/or at Camp Sierra Blanca. In most instances, assistant warden Tom Sullivan became the spokesperson, because McFadin was not available.

Sullivan said a Dr. Becknell was Secretary of Corrections at the time of the Capitan meeting. However, when contacted for the December 16 article about the problems of 1979-81, a public affairs spokesperson for the department told The News that Ed Marr was secretary and that he recalled no agreement with the community.

McFadin said the spokesman probably meant former camp warden Bob Marrs, her predecessor.

That same spokesman, Lou Armijo, in the story said representatives of the department met with nearby communities to explain that because of the growing number of prisoners in the state, the camp may have to expand and that a different type of prisoner would be incarcerated there.

However, McSwane, Ruidoso Police Chief Richard Swenor and village officials in Capitan said no one had ever contacted them about changes.

Sullivan said Tuesday that Swenor and McSwane already were aware that the camp housed criminal convicted of violent crimes.

When an inmate is taken to the jail for disciplinary purposes, his paperwork goes with him, including his list of convictions, to alert jailers about the person they will be housing, he said. McSwane has access to all of that paperwork.

"Perhaps Chief Swenor should check with the village department heads, because (camp) inmates are employed at the Ruidoso Water Department, Street Department and the Civic Center," Sullivan said.

However, McSwane said seeing conviction reports of a few inmates at the jail and being officially contacted by the corrections department are not the same thing.

Sullivan also contended that a recent workshop fire at Camp Sierra Blanca had been caused by spontaneous combustion, not by faulty wiring done by inmates.

An article on the fire included a statement by a former employee of the camp that there had been trouble with wiring installed by inmates.

"There is no faulty wiring and the building was wired by a licensed electrician from Capitan, not by inmates," Sullivan said. "There are disgruntled former employees...who have either resigned or been terminated, who would like nothing better than to feed false information to the media in an effort to discredit this institution and its administration."

"I think we've been unfairly treated by the media," Sullivan said.

An article written about the work release program for inmates made innuendoes concerning the camp and concerning the administration. Innuendoes such as murderers driving wreckers, that's not so; there are no murderers driving wreckers.

"We had (a) local car dealer who let an inmate make a wrecker call; the inmate had a valid class A driver's license; didn't violate any law; was investigated by the corporation commission; yet we drew a lot of negative publicity about that."

The article, published December 2, detailed the lack of laws to cover inmates driving wreckers and that supervision is not required when they are driving. The reporter noted that since murderers are among the inmates at the prison and could participate in the work release program, an unsupervised convicted murderer could legally end up behind the wheel of a wrecker.

McFadin acknowledged Wednesday that under current rules that scenario could occur.

Come on out

McFadin said she wasn't at the meeting so much to complain as to invite people to come out and see the facility first hand.

She recounted some of the positive economic impacts of the camp on the county, including housing inmates at the jail in Carrizozo, money spent by inmates at Wal-Mart and the $1.4-million budget that includes a $750,000 payroll.

Sullivan added that 20 percent of the money earned by the inmates on a work release assignment goes back to the state to help defer expenses connected to room and board. Another 15 percent goes to the victim restitution fund.

"The people who work there live in this county and spend their money here," Sullivan said.

He insisted that several men at the prison convicted of violent crimes don't represent a danger to the community at large. Their convictions stemmed from isolated incidents involving bar fights or domestic infidelity, he said.

"We can lock them in cages and then release them on the public or we can let the inmates work their way down in security classification until they are released," Sullivan said. "We do constant substance abuse screening of out inmates and any inmate who fails a drug or alcohol test is immediately removed from any community release program and usually is shipped to another institution."

"In the future, we hope the media will call us, for clarification of reports or comments on (the camp)."

McFadin said 45 of the 77 inmates at the camp are involved in the work release program.

Requests help

McFadin asked for help from the commissioners to ensure that the state parole board does not parole inmates from other areas into Lincoln County.

That board is independent and can ignore recommendations from prison or corrections department officials, she said.

"The only ones who should come here are the ones that are from here," she said. "We also need help with employers, who call the governor because they've had an inmate who is a good worker and they want him paroled back to Lincoln County. I would encourage people not to ask them to be paroled here."

Commissioner Stirling Spencer responded, "At any time you need support against paroling of violent criminals to Lincoln County, let me know."

Monroy Montes retains gavel

by DIANNE STALLINGS,
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Expressing confidence in his handling of the chairman's gavel for the past year, Lincoln County commissioners Tuesday unanimously re-elected Monroy Montes to head their board.

Montes was nominated by Commissioner J. Ray Nunley, who in turn was successfully nominated by Commissioner Wilton Howell for the position of vice chairman.

Nunley is the lone Democrat on the board.

Commissioner Stirling Spencer, who is running for the position of State Public Lands Commissioner, moved to the podium to ask the commission for passage of a joint powers agreement with members of the Coalition of Counties and an ordinance prohibiting the release of predators into the wild.

The coalition has led the fight against imposition of regulations by federal agencies that negatively affect counties without taking economic and other problems into consideration.

"It's exciting to be in on the front end," Spencer said, noting that the group is making significant inroads. "But we must be cautious."

Commissioners approved the joint powers agreement.

The commission already has gone on record as opposing the proposed release of Mexican wolves in the White Sands Missile Range by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

County attorney Alan Morel questioned whether the proposed ordinance prohibiting the release of predators as written would be enforceable, because he's not sure the county can tell the U.S. Forest Service what it can do on its land and because it may violate provisions in the Federal Endangered Species Act.

To avoid problems, Morel recommended putting in a disclaimer that says if anything in the ordinance is in violation of any federal law or the U.S. Constitution, it would be considered invalid.

"Isn't that the situation anyway?" Howell asked. "Local ordinances can't supersede federal laws."

"We feel it's enforceable, but we can't guarantee if you fine someone you won't get sued," Morel said. The ordinance provides for a $300 fine or 90 days in jail if convicted of releasing a predator.

Spencer said a similar ordinance has been passed in Catron County, Luna or Hidalgo and is under consideration in Sierra County.

The ordinance specifically targets the release of bears, dogs, wolves, foxes, jackals, cats, mountain lions and bobcats.

"Wouldn't that apply to capturing a mountain lion at Three Rivers and releasing it here?" Commissioner L. Ray Nunley asked.

"Yes it would," Morel said. Even capturing a wild animal to tag it for tracking studies would be illegal, because the animal could not be released once caught.

Rancher Bill Hays from Ramon said, "They can take them someplace else. They're catching them now and releasing them (in the northern part of the county) and causing predation problems."

Spencer said the agencies have the options of destroying the captured animals, taking them to a zoo or releasing them somewhere else.

"Don't give us your problems," he said.

"If they were caught in Lincoln County, they couldn't turn them loose here?" Nunley asked.

"That's the way it reads," Howell said.

"If it's caught in Lincoln County, why release it back into Lincoln County, if it's a problem," Hays said.

"What do we do if everyone passes a law like this?" Howell asked.

"That's their (government wildlife agencies) problem," Hays said. "They can destroy them or put them in a zoo," Spencer said.

"We know wolves are being raised in Lincoln County and I don't want them turned loose in this county," Hays said. When they are raised by man, the wolves have no fear of man. "They hang around man, because they are used to being fed."

The proposed ordinance was worded to protect the economic welfare of the livestock industry, but he suggested adding that it is needed to protect the health, safety and welfare of the community.

Commissioner Bill Schwetzmann said he was concerned because the genera Canis covers dogs.

"They already have ordinances in the villages that you can't release dogs to run loose," Spencer said. "I'm tired of seeing wild dogs running around that are not taken care of."

"But I'm not sure if they have been released or have just gotten away," Schwetzmann said. "Who will determine whether the dog is wild or domesticated?"

Spencer suggested changing the wording to say "will not release into the wild any animal not domesticated."

County manager Andy Wynham said the real need is to define the term "release," which is the willful placement of an animal to be running wild. That is a permanent condition "and we don't want any animals released into the woods that way," he said.

"People take their dogs out in the country and turn them loose and the dogs have no idea how to fend for themselves," Hays said. "They can't catch jackrabbits, so they go to the livestock. The villages already have ordinances, so why should they roam free in the rural areas of the county, because you don't live there. You don't see livestock destroyed, because someone turned their dogs loose. Usually they don't eat (the calves and sheep). Many are torn up, but still alive when we find them."

Commissioners agreed to schedule a public hearing on the ordinance with all of the suggested changes at the next regular meeting in February.

In other business, the commission:

—approved an open meetings resolution with the addition that a properly publicized meeting could be conducted over a conference telephone. Wynham said identification verification would be by voice only.

—conducted one of a series of public hearings to allow input on possible Community Development Block Grant projects.

Wynham said the multiple hearings not only allow input, but also are a factor when applications are being reviewed for awards. Most projects are $300,000 or less. Although $500,000 is the limit, the state prefers projects of that size be accomplished in phases.

—heard that negotiations continue with State Highway and Transportation Department officials about the future of State Highway 214 to Fort Stanton and Sierra Blanca Regional Airport.

"We've been asking the state to take more responsibility on Airport Road and evidently we got some attention," Montes said. "A crew has been there coal milling, overlaying and chipping. It's in better condition than in the past. I remember a petition last year by residents of the fort saying the road was unsafe."

He said the state has the same problem as the county.

"They don't want any more roads. They don't have enough money."

Some commissioners are scheduled to meet with the State Highway Commission January 18 in Santa Fe. Schwetzmann said they should prepare a professional presentation with flip charts and handouts.

"We should have the leadership from Fort Stanton and Camp Sierra Blanca there," Spencer said.

—approved an agreement with the village of Corona to administer a $100,000 grant to improve the senior citizens center. Improvements accomplished with the grant would belong to Corona. Improvements paid for with county money would belong to the county.

Spencer complimented Corona mayor Ernest Luera for his help on many projects.

—approved the transfer of franchise for cable television in the county from Rifkin Cable, a Delaware corporation, to Alert Cable TV Inc., a Georgia corporation. Local representative Leon Eggleston said the main office is in Deland, Florida. The company serves 1.6-million customers and rates will not be immediately affected.

Any change in rate must come before the commission as the franchise authority, after a recommendation by the Federal Communication Commission.

—scheduled a special meeting for commissioners Spencer, Schwetzmann and Howell to look at roads in the northern portion of the state. They will meet at 8 a.m. Sunday, January 16, at the commission office and then leave with road manager Bill Cupit.

—approved an employee holiday schedule that includes two four-day blocks over Thanksgiving and Christmas, with a total of 12 paid holidays.

"When you throw in all the weekends, they have 33 percent of the year off," Schwetzmann said, a bit awed. "But that's the way it is today."

Montes noted that county employees receive one more holiday than state employees.

He told Wynham to post the schedule somewhere so he won't forget in the future.

"I was here Christmas Eve and the courthouse was closed and I was a little angry," Montes said sheepishly. "I asked our county manager why and he said we approved it last year."

—approved the transfer of $10,000 to allow the Lincoln Fire Department to purchase a new mini-pumper. State law does not allow the department to carry a debt from one year to the next. The department will repay the county next fiscal year.

—set commission meeting dates for the first Tuesday of every month with the exception of June 10, July 12 and September 12, which were switched to the second Tuesday to avoid falling right after a Monday holiday. The meeting that normally would be on the day of the general election was rescheduled to November 10, because the board would have to meet then anyway to canvass the votes.

Howell said he still would like to see some evening meetings in Ruidoso. Wynham said the commission can change the dates later if the majority approves. He said he also would like some evening meetings to allow working people to attend, who can't usually get away.

MainStreet work falls behind schedule

by CHARLES STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

D&S Construction, running several weeks behind on the MainStreet project, will ask for a time change order at Tuesday's village council meeting.

Deputy manager Allen Briley, project manager for MainStreet and deputy manager for the village has prepared a proposed change order that would extend the D&S contract by 14 days.

Briley said D&S has submitted three separate requests for extension of time causes in delays due to weather, field changes, or increase in quantities.

"The request for four days extension due to the Thanksgiving holiday, was not allowed by me, due to the wording in the specifications regarding calendar day contracts," Briley wrote the council.

Briley said the second request came as a result of his increasing of quantities (1,700 feet of pipe) to loop the water-irrigation system.

"Since this is a line item quantify and price, the project manager can increase quantities on a line item, however the days required to do this does not require a change order for time extension and thus council action," Briley wrote.

Briley said that eight-day request to install the additional pipe was within reason and should be approved by the council.

Briley said the third request in a December 18, letter is for weather days, field changes and delays in removing a power pole.

D&S employees said two weather days occurred when it rained and hailed, causing extreme runoff into the excavation. Allen agreed.

He said field adjustments and alterations did take time for a workable alternative and should be allowed another three days to get that resolved. Briley also concurred that a one-day extension was justified due to a delay to remove a power pole.

Two boys convicted in shooting

Two Ruidoso youths were convicted in district court Wednesday of a series of charges and sentenced to two years in Springer.

According to court records, Robert Edgar Sarguy, 16, and David William Pfeiffer Jr., 15, admitted to taking 10 guns and numerous rounds of ammunition onto the school grounds, a fourth degree felony.

Each was convicted of permitting themselves to be served, after testifying that they took a bottle out of the car on the school grounds and each one of them took a swig, and each was found guilty of assault with a deadly weapon and shooting from a vehicle, according to district court records.

Just Pfeiffer was found guilty of committing an aggravated assault with a deadly weapon, two counts.

Two young men testified that the gun was pointed at them, that they ran and that they heard a pop. The defense and the state called about a dozen witnesses each. Testimony relating to previous violent episodes and conduct in the classroom were entered into court records.

Sarguy ultimately has to be returned for trial on charges of breaking into and attempting to burglarize Tee and Eld.

Pfeiffer has yet to stand trial on charges that he assaulted Ruidoso High School teacher Mike Gieb and attempted to commit computer abuse in November.

District Judge Richard Parsons stated in open court that he felt he had to send a message that this conduct will not be tolerated, not only by himself, but the judge feels very confident that other district judges share his concern.

Fair Board wants their freedom, and tax money, too, from county

by DIANNE STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

A new relationship may be forged between the Lincoln County Commission and the county fair board.

After criticism from auditors on the financial arrangement between the two entities, and following discussion concerning the future of the fairground and county fair in Capitan, both sides were ready for a change.

Board president Gordon Barham told commissioners Tuesday that the organization has reinstituted its standing with the state as a non-profit corporation.

"We would like to enter into a management agreement (with the county), which would take the burden off the commission on how the board is formed, although you still would have input on the operation."

While the group was a county board, the commissioners were responsible for appointing members. The fair group had switched from a corporation about five years ago to be included under the county's liability insurance umbrella and to eliminate anti-donation problems with county allocations to the annual fair, other events and fairground improvements.

Barham said as a private corporation, the group wants to change the way the fairground and fair building is managed. Members would like to hire a full time or part time person to handle scheduling of events and improvement projects, to be responsible for the keys and for maintenance of the building, to take the burden off of volunteers.

As a starting point for negotiations on a management agreement, the fair group would propose a $25,000 yearly installment plus the $9,000 subsidy the commission allocated last year, Barham said.

They also want to continue under the county's insurance coverage.

"We definitely need the $9,000 to survive," Barham said. Last year, the total income was $40,000, but expenses hit $41,800. Normal maintenance on the facility costs about $10,000 a year.

The board spent close to $3,000 just to improve arena lighting and power.

Chairman Monty Montes asked county attorney Alan Moral if there would be any violation of the state's anti-donation law if the county subsidized a private group.

Moral said the subsidy would be part of the management agreement, with the commission paying for services rendered.

"The management agreement would spell out what we pay in turn for what services we receive," Moral said. "Whether it's a for-profit group or not wouldn't violate the anti-donation (provision)."

The change may help the county by switching responsibility for Americans With Disabilities (ADA) compliance to the fair group from the commission.

"They would be held to a lot lower standard under the ADA than the county because of the smaller budget," Moral said. "I would like to use the lease (of the fairground by the fair group) to shift some responsibility.

"If they want to hire an employee, that's their prerogative."

Commissioner Bill Schwettmann, who is elected from the district that includes Capitan, asked whether the group had considered charging a membership fee.

"That could make you almost self-sustaining with the seed money to survive," he said.

Barham said he thought dues would help, but weren't the total answer to financial woes. He wouldn't want to tap the same people who already donate prizes, money and time to the organization.

Commissioner L. Ray Nunley pointed out that the upcoming year, with the celebration of Smokey Bear's Fifth Birthday as a symbol of fire prevention, presents a tremendous opportunity for the group to earn some money to help in the future.

But Barham said it's difficult to project revenues, because they haven't nailed down whether a big name country band will be performing. An extra night of rodeos will help. This summer, four, instead of three, are scheduled over the July Fourth weekend of the annual Smokey Bear Stampede, the usual money-maker for the group to help with the county fair a month later. The organization could earn $3,000 to $4,000 on that extra evening rodeo, he said.

"The cowboys love it, because with four afternoon rodeos in Mesalero and four evening rodeos in Capitan, there's chance to ride in eight rodeos over one weekend," Barham said.

Nunley said he was amazed that the fair group only collected $9,000 for 180 days of facility use last year.

Barham said the board was reluctant to charge non-profit groups like the girl scouts or 4-H.

"We felt that was part of our service to the community," he said. But a $5 fee now has been initiated for such meetings just to cover the utilities.

For dances, a charge of $50, plus a cleaning fee will be imposed for non-profit organizations. For-profit groups will pay $100 rental and $50 cleaning fees. Although youth groups trying to earn money haven't been charged in the past, in the future they will have to pay for use of the facility on money-making ventures.

Montes said commissioners will consider the proposal and come back with their own ideas at a noon special meeting January 12.

County manager Andy Wynham said he needs to put a management agreement into place to avoid more criticism from the auditor.

"I need an agreement six months ago to solve certain financial criticisms in the audit this year," he said. "I can't wait until the budget sessions, because I need segregation of the money."

He said an account has been opened for a $100,000 allocation from the State Legislature to be used for fairground improvements. Hubert Quintana of the Southeast New Mexico Economic Development District will be managing the project.

"I need board direction on where to start," Wynham said. "It's not 100 percent proper if the board is an arm of the county with us administering the money. It would be, if we were separate. I've heard everything they ask for to give them nothing."

Morel noted that a quiet title lawsuit to clear the county's claim to the fairground property, has been filed. To date, no one has called to say they have an interest in the land, although several checked to make sure the commission's claim didn't intrude on their adjoining property, he said.

Schwettmann said he would like an appraisal of the fairground property to let the commission know the value.

"It would be useful if we were fixing to sell it," joked Commissioner Wilton Howell, who had received static last year over a proposal to possibly move the annual fair to the Super Select Sales Barn in Glencoe.

Wynham said the cost of an appraisal would be about $1,000 to $1,500.

In another issue related to cowboy heritage, Ruidoso Village Councilor Frank Porter, president of the Annual Cowboy Symposium, asked the commission to consider the purchase of the Super Select Sales Barn in Glencoe.

Potter said if the barn is sold to someone else, the future of the symposium is uncertain. The Cowboy Hall of Fame and Western Heritage Center in Hereford, Texas, needs a larger building than its current 6,000 square feet. It's possible that popular center could relocate to Lincoln County and use the 20,000 square foot sales barn.

If the county could convince the State Legislature to purchase the property, it could be used for the symposium, the hall of fame and for other functions connected to the cowboy culture that has been instrumental in the development of Lincoln County," Montes agreed.

"I have some apprehension even discussing the Cowboy Symposium, because what immediately comes to mind is the conflict last year with the people in Capitan and the county fair," Montes said. "We're repackaging a good idea in a way not to be threatening to that community. Any time you attempt to solve economic problems, there will be some changes."

The price of the barn and property has been quoted as between $250,000 to $300,000, Potter said.

In response to questions from Ruidoso resident Bob Nys, Montes said if the county went to the legislature, commissioners would ask for enough money to buy the building, make improvements, modifications, or expansions and ensure enough extra to operate for the first year. The county would incur no indebtedness and would not impose any extra taxes in connection with the project.

Potter said the symposium, now in its fifth year, was subsidized initially by Robert O. Anderson and R.D. Hubbard, who each kicked in $30,000. Lodgers tax from several

The former Fort Wingate Army Depot is a huge (21,812 acres) hazardous materials storage facility just sitting idle in McKinley County.

This existing facility (more than 200 miles from Ruidoso) is owned by the people of the United States and sorely needed to help solve this national dilemma.

Fort Wingate MRS, Inc. is a start-up New Mexico corporation that proposes to store used fuel from the nation's civilian nuclear power plants. Our preference is to acquire or lease the former Army depot for this purpose.

Nuclear Waste Free Chapters throughout the United States are being organized to provide needed resources for environmental studies, public information campaigns, political action, licensing, etc. If the former Army depot proves to be unsuitable for high level nuclear waste storage, other sites in McKinley County will be evaluated.

Mescaleros Eye Private N-Waste Deal

The Mescaleros Apache tribe is trying to negotiate an agreement to a possible federal nuclear waste storage site. Such a first-ever private waste site could be a way of managing radioactive waste. The tribe's director of public information is trying to find a place to store radioactive waste. The tribe's director of public information is trying to find a place to store radioactive waste.

No State has produced more uranium ore than McKinley County. Uranium is tomorrow's nuclear waste. Some believe that McKinley County has an obligation to help solve the nation's high level nuclear waste disposal dilemma. After all, no region has profited more from mining this radioactive material.

Would you rather see intensely radioactive waste stored on Mescalero Apache land?

Warriors whip Wildcats for third straight win

by KENT BEATTY

The News Sports Correspondent

The Ruidoso Warrior Boys Basketball team won its third straight game of the season with a thrilling 55-52 overtime victory over the Tularosa Wildcats Tuesday night at the Warrior gym.

The win, which was sweet revenge for the Warriors after the Wildcats took the first contest of year between the two rivals, evened Ruidoso's record at 4-4. Tularosa slipped to 7-2.

Tuesday's contest was the second-consecutive overtime game for the Warriors and third-straight barnburner. Only a huge 3-pointer from senior J.R. Chino with five seconds left separated the teams. The Warriors margin of victory in the last three games has been one, two and three points respectively.

In game one with the Wildcats on December 3, Tularosa scored the first 10 points of the game before Ruidoso came back to take the lead at halftime. The Warriors led the contest until midway through the fourth quarter when foul troubles caused five players to exit the game in the final minutes.

This time around, the game was nip-and-tuck with the lead changing hands many times throughout the four quarters.

It seemed that every time one team moved ahead of the other by four or five points, the other team hit big shots to bring them back.

The close game caused the Warrior gym to rock like never before, as fans from both schools let their preference be known as to which team was best. Warrior fans got to see a show that hasn't been to town much in the past ten years or so — a win in their own gym.

Unlike the team's performance in Lovington, which was fueled by tremendous individual efforts by Raul Davis, Tuesday's victory was a total team effort — offensively and defensively. Ruidoso got 110 percent from its entire squad — including great performances from the bench.

Davis was the only Warrior to score in double figures with 11 points. Other scorers included Rex Comanche, 9; Casey Kearns, 8; Jeff Chapman, 8; Corvin Lester, 7; J.R. Chino, 6; Cory Hood, 4; and Daniel Espinosa, 2.

While Chino scored the first and last buckets of the night for the Warriors, Tularosa led the game after the first stanza, 18-16. The second quarter saw the Warriors tie the score at 26 at halftime, and then outscore Tulie in the third quarter for a 39-37 lead heading into the final quarter.

Regulation play ended with the two teams tied at 47. The Warriors scored eight points in the overtime to Tularosa's five.

It was a big win for head coach Paul Kirkwood, who emphasized the importance of beating Tularosa since practice began in November.

"I was disappointed the first time we played because we had the game won and let it get away. But we've gotten better since then and we've been lucky enough to be in some close ones and win ... so the kids had the confidence to play well in the last couple of minutes.

"Tularosa's got a very good basketball team, I expect them to go a long way in the playoffs and even at State. Tonight, our kids just gutted up and played hard ... again.

"I couldn't be prouder of the way we've been playing," said Kirkwood. One area that has shown improvement for the Warriors is free throw shooting. The locals converted 7-for-11 from the free throw line for an almost respectable 65 percent, while Tularosa converted 11 of 17 free throws for the same success rate.

For the season the Warriors are led in scoring by Davis with 16.4 points per game. Other scoring leaders include Rex Comanche, 10.5 ppg; Casey Kearns, 9.5 ppg; Jeff Chapman, 6.8 ppg; Cory Hood, 6.6 ppg; Corvin Lester, 6.2 ppg; and Daniel Espinosa, 6.1 ppg.

The boys junior varsity also turned the tables on Tularosa with an exciting 39-33 win.

Tularosa smashed the Warriors last time out with 20-point thumping of the JV, but Ruidoso got the services of Zack Turner for the first time as well as Jackie Roe.

Throw that in with Kirkwood allowing 6-4 junior Todd Young to play three quarters with the JV and the turnaround was complete.

Scoring for the junior varsity looked like this: Todd Young, 9; Zack Turner, 7; Jackie Roe, 6; Byron Soules, 6; Randy Randolph, 5; Danny Schrader, 4 and John Montero, 2.

The game was tied at 9-9 at the end of the first quarter, with Ruidoso slipping out to a 22-16 advantage at the half. The Wildcats came back to knot the score at 29 at the end of the third quarter, but the Warriors took command in the final quarter, outscoring Tulie 10-4 for the final 39-33 margin.

"We played with a lot more con-

Warrior top scorer Raul Davis, 16.5 per game, skies above Wildcat defenders in a winning effort. The Warriors, winning three in a row, faces the Portales Rams Saturday.

Rex Comanche, #22 for the Warriors, finger rolls a jump shot from the key over the waiting hands of a Tularosa Wildcat. Comanche is averaging 10.5 per game.

Capitan

Capitan Mayor Frank Warth takes a look at the competition over the shoulder of village clerk Deborah Cummins after the close of registration Tuesday for the March municipal elections.

Capitan hopefuls sign up

by DIANNE STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Nobody has a free ride in the Capitan municipal elections March 1.

Nine candidates filed to run the four non-partisan positions up for grabs.

Incumbent Mayor Frank Warth will face his old adversary on the board of trustees, Norm Renfro, who operated the Smokey Bear Motel and Restaurant for 24 years before retiring a year ago. He previously has served for about 10 years as a trustee.

The mayor is paid $200 a month. Two four-year trustee terms are up for election. Incumbent Gilbert Montoya did not file to run for his current position. Incumbent Leroy Montes, who ran two years ago for a two-year term, is going for one of the four-year terms this time around.

The three other candidates in the race for the two seats are long-time resident Byron L. Carpenter of Carpenter Electric; Johnny Lunsford, who moved to Capitan last August and owns Windwalker Construction; and Connie Hopper, a Lincoln County sheriff's deputy who is the DARE drug use prevention officer for area schools and if elected, would be the only woman on the board.

Trustees are paid $25 a meeting. Registering to run for the four-year term as municipal judge were Jack E. Johnson, a retired state police officer; John D. Whitaker, a former dispatcher for the sheriff's department; and Mary E. Lunsford, a former magistrate judge in Catron County. Incumbent judge Jimmy Stewart is not seeking re-election.

The monthly pay for municipal judge is $300.

Commissioners worry about school election

by DIANNE STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Lincoln County commissioners expressed concern Tuesday that bad weather or a long drive might deter some voters from casting their ballots in the Capitan School District's February 1 two mill capital improvement referendum.

School Superintendent Diana Sonnamaker attended the commission meeting to brief the board about why the special levy should be continued and to ask their help with the public.

She emphasized that the tax is not new and has been imposed since 1976. Voters must approve the continuation every three years.

The money cannot be used for salaries, but the estimated $197,000 the millage generates is vitally needed by the school board to effect major repairs and improvements to the school buildings or to buy equipment, she said.

"We already have a $200,000 list and realize that we will have to prioritize," Sonnamaker said. "Without this capital improvement money, districts can't afford to maintain their buildings. The state doesn't fund enough."

Several roofing projects are needed urgently, she said.

"We need your help as you're talking to people to support this tax and urge them to go out and vote for it," she said.

Commissioner Bill Schwetmann, who lives in Alto Village and is elected from the Capitan school district area, asked why only one polling place has been provided and that's in Capitan at the fair building.

"Yet, Alto (property owners) put up 90 percent of the taxes (in the Capitan district)," he pointed out. Several people have indicated that they think a polling place should be opened within a few miles of Alto instead of 16 to 17 miles away.

"Open the polling place in Bonito," Schwetmann suggested. "If it snows, it will be hard to get to the polls (in Capitan)."

County Clerk Martha Proctor said traditionally only one polling place is used for the special millage elections, because of low voter turnout.

"It would be a waste of some of the money needed for schools to open a second polling place," she told commissioners. "It's not logical."

"I thought the purpose was to make it as easy as possible for residents," Commissioner Wilton Howell said.

Proctor estimated the total cost of training extra poll workers and opening another polling place for the day at $700-$800.

"That's cheaper than the gas (it would take for Alto voters to drive to Capitan)," Commissioner L. Ray Nunley said.

Proctor noted that Corona voters routinely have to travel much farther to vote.

"We're not here to disenfranchise anyone, but with low participation and with many traveling further..." Chairman Monroy Montes began.

County manager Andy Wynham interrupted, noting that the decision on polling places is a school board matter.

"They pay the bill," he said. "If this was an increase (in taxes), I would be more concerned," Schwetmann said.

Proctor suggested a better alternative would be wider use of the absentee ballot. She pointed out that the law concerning absentee ballots changed last year. Those ballots are available to anyone registered to vote in the affected district. That information was included in the election resolution, but Proctor told Schwetmann, she would be sure more information reaches the public on the availability of absentee ballots.

Schwetmann said the option of using absentee ballots ahead of time would ensure that voters wouldn't be prevented from reaching the polls in case of bad weather. He urged Sonnamaker to mention that option whenever she speaks to groups about the election.

Sticking by her word, Proctor sent The Ruidoso News information about absentee voting Wednesday.

Any person registered to vote in the Capitan school district may come to the county clerk's office in the courthouse in Carrizozo and vote absentee in person on any regular business day from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. starting Friday, January 7 and until 5 p.m. Friday, January 28.

The courthouse will be closed January 17 for a holiday.

An application for an absentee ballot may be obtained by calling the clerk's office at 648-2394, picking up an application at the Capitan school administration building or at the Alto Country Club.

The application must be signed by the voter and mailed back to the clerk. The absentee ballot will be mailed to the voter, who should mark the ballot, then mail or bring it to the clerk's office in Carrizozo.

Ballots must be returned to the clerk by 5 p.m. February 1 either in person or by mail.

The cost to voters

No new tax is involved in the election. A vote to continue the discretionary two mill tax means that a person with a home valued at $54,000, with a taxable value of $18,000 would pay $36 a year or about $3 for each month.

One mill is equal to $1 for each $1,000 of taxable value (which is about one-third of the property value established by the County Assessor).

A continuation of the capital improvement tax levy will provide money to build, remodel or make additions or provide equipment to furnish the buildings; purchase or improve school grounds; maintain school buildings and school grounds; purchase activity vehicles to transport students to extracurricular school activities.

No money is borrowed under the special millage. No interest is involved and no debt has to be repaid. Revenue derived from the tax can be invested at the highest possible rate without restriction.

The Capitan voting district (number one) covers precincts 1, 2A, 2B, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 10 and 12C.

Polls will be open from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. on Tuesday, February 1, at the county fair building in Capitan.

Tigers named to All State

Six Capitan football players were named to the first or second Class A All-State teams and two were given honorable mention, according to the New Mexico Activities Association.

Trevor Cox, a senior, was named first offense team tight end and Troy Stone, a junior, was named first offense team lineman. Michael Fish, a junior, tied with Andy Carmichael, a Cloudcroft senior, for first team quarterback, but took first team place kicker.

On first team defense, Fish was named to the punter position. Blas Herrera of Carrizozo was selected as one of the running backs.

Ernie Trujillo, a Capitan sophomore, was named wide receiver for the offense second team. He also was selected as one of the ends for the defense second team, as were seniors Orlando Baca and Damian Roybal. Jon Vallejos of Carrizozo was picked as one of the backs for the second offense team.

Honorable mentions went to Capitan sophomore Justin Weber as an offense running back and junior J.P. Whipple as defensive lineman.

Capitan school board stays busy this week

Capitan School Board members will be busy next week.

They meet State Representative John Underwood at 5:30 p.m. Monday, January 10, in the school library.

It's their chance to tell the Ruidoso Democrat what they want from the State Legislature and what type of legislation they approve and oppose.

Board members will conduct their regular meeting at 7 p.m. Thursday, January 13, in the library.

A work session is set for 6:30 p.m. The agenda includes a review of the 1992-93 annual audit by Pamela Rice of Rice and Associates, a discussion of the budget process and 1994-95 calendar information.

Also on the agenda is the announcement of public meetings on the continuation of the two mill levy that finances special capital improvement projects and a report on the progress of the middle school construction.

The school mill election is scheduled for February 1, in Capitan. (See details of that election in related story on this page.)

municipalities provided the money for advertising. Even with stiff competition from other major events across the state, the four-day symposium drew 3,000 people who stayed in area motels, browsed shops and ate in local restaurants.

"Parking space was a little small," he said. "We could use an additional four to five acres. If it wasn't for the Bonnell family working with us, it wouldn't have been as successful."

The cost of putting on the symposium is about $110,000. They have not been charged rent for the use of the building in the past.

Potter is part of a group working up a tour for buses that would include Tinnie, Honda Valley and the Museum of the Horse. The barn on U.S. 70 in Glencoe would be a perfect location for attractions to be part of that tour, he said. It takes two years to be included on the itineraries of the National Tour Association.

Ruidoso will have stiff competition for the Hall of Fame from Fort Worth, Texas, he said. Officials in that city want to keep the exhibit in their state. But New Mexico also can offer a good setting and many candidates or previously inducted women, such as the late Fern Sawyer and Anne C. Stradling.

Potter said the focus on cowboy/cowgirl culture could go back to the Mexican cowboys. "It all fits," he said.

Nunley said he has talked to State Representative H. John Underwood (D-Ruidoso) and "he seems to think we have a good opportunity for the State Legislature to fund and participate."

"I think we need to promote tri-cultural events, Hispanic, Anglo and Native American."

Potter said the symposium already provides that emphasis down to the food served.

Montes said for Underwood to be successful with the State Legislature, the commission has to make some commitment to preserve the Cowboy Symposium in Lincoln County.

The commission is scheduled to meet with Underwood January 12. Between now and then, they can mull over options and talk to Hall of Fame representatives, Montes said.

Schwettmann asked whether the barn would present a conflict with the Ruidoso Civic Events Center. The barn would need other events to break even, he said, adding, "It still concerns me that one function will not warrant even the cost of maintenance on the building."

Potter said the two facilities serve different purposes. The events center is being developed as a convention site.

"We (the symposium) couldn't even get in the parking lot at the civic events center," he said. "We pride ourselves in Lincoln County on holding some of the best events in the state. There are a multitude of uses on U.S. 70." He cited the possibility of reviving the annual Hondo Apple Fiesta.

The executive director of the Cowgirl Hall of Fame said in an article published Monday in The Ruidoso News that she would like serious proposals by January 16 from communities interested in providing a new home for the center. She said 15 areas have expressed an interest.

"Not one single county is better than ours," Nunley said.

"But we may not be the richest," Schwettmann jabbed.

Commissioner Stirling Spencer said while he favors promoting the county, he will watch the process and any costs closely.

BLM acquires land

by DIANNE STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Portions of a second parcel along the Rio Bonito near the settlement of Lincoln have been acquired by the federal Bureau of Land Management.

The first of five privately-owned parcels was traded for public land outside of the county in December 1992.

The new action December 21-22, 1993, transferred 7.5 acres in San Juan County and 860.77 in Sierra County to the Lincoln Valley Land Company. In return, the agency received a 45.39 acre tract, including 12.6 acres of water rights.

The Rio Bonito land exchange is in the public's best interest, contended Roswell District manager Leslie Cone.

"We intend to manage the area in keeping with its historic uses while enhancing its riparian and recreation values," she said.

The Lincoln County Commission opposed the land swap, primarily because the procedure placed more private land within the county into public ownership. They also were critical of the agency's perceived lack of candor on some issues.

But after winning some concessions from the agency (BLM), commissioners withdrew a lawsuit aimed at blocking the exchanges.

Principals of the Lincoln Valley Land Company proposed the exchange with the BLM in January of 1990. When the total exchange is completed, BLM would receive 1,115 acres of land, including 330 acres of associated water rights along the Rio Bonito. In exchange, the land company would receive up to 36,000 acres of federal property in Dona Ana, Otero, Eddy, Chaves, San Juan and Valencia counties.

The federal lands previously have been identified for possible disposal in BLM land use plans

Silver Lining

'94 begins with friendly visit, good weather

A new year visit from kinfolks

About midmorning on a beautiful New Year's Day brother Mark's daughter, Carol Jane Elliot and her husband, Bill, came up to the house with their first grandchild, little Christopher Storm Miller, age one and a half.

Christopher reached out his arms to me with a happy smile realizing that we are kinfolks.

Inside the house he admired the Christmas tree and the fire in the fireplace and made friends with Corina the Storm Ranch cat. Outside he took a liking to the cows and calves and was pleased when his grandfather took him over to pet one of the cows while she was eating hay.

Christopher made the trip from Houston with his grandparents; and his mother, Kathleen Elliot Miller and her husband, Bobby Miller; and his aunt Karen Elliot. They had come up to enjoy the snowy mountainland to visit Ski Apache and do some skiing and to look at brother Mark's new adobe house.

I had met little Christopher last year when he was an infant, and now as a handsome little toddler, he seems very much at home at the Storm ranch. He is brother Mark's first great-grandchild, the pride and joy of the household. And he brought a special blessing to me with his visit on New Year's Day.

The December snow tries to hang on

The folks up north took the full blast of the Canadian cannonball a few days ago, with temperatures going down to 30 below and snow drifts closing roads.

Down here in the land of the piñon and pine we only felt the outer edge of this blizzard. All we got out of this weather record breaker was a pretty good little snow which carried some of the arctic cold.

Sunny days followed the snow of December 29 and here on January 2, after a day of bright sunshine you look out to the south and there are still patches of snow on the mountain meadows, and all along the foot of the hill there is a long band of pure white.

On the hillside under the piñon the snow stays, refusing to melt away. In other words, this was a cold snow.

The snow of any kind will stay longer on the ground during the short days from December 21 to January 15. This is because the sun travels lower to the horizon in its daily journey through the winter sky.

Therefore, we have leftover snow patiently waiting for a snowstorm to put us further along the way to a very fine winter season.

A spring and winter day

This is being sent to you just after high noon with the sun beaming down from the blue sky and a warm west wind singing down the vale.

The temperature is 62 and there are some summer birds flown in from the north — finches, doves, wild pigeons, jays, king birds and grosbeaks — all feeding with the snowbirds. They are celebrating the pleasant beginning of the new year.

Twelfth Night

This will reach you on January 6, known as Twelfth Night, the end of the Christmas season and the beginning of the season of Epiphany on the church calendar.

This is the time that the three wise men returned to their countries with the news of the birth of Christ, Our Lord.

Let us thank the Lord for the beginning of a fine new year and all our many blessings.

Today's politicians — tomorrow's leaders

To hear the talk on the street, nobody likes politics, but in Ruidoso 19 people have jumped into the political arena in their quest to serve the village as mayor, councilors and municipal judge.

The animosity the public generally feels toward politicians can be traced back to past betrayals by elected officials. From Watergate to Irangate to Ruidoso's own "gates" involving surplus property, auctions, closed meetings and such, voters have been disappointed by their leaders.

But, the very person who is hated as a politician one day is the same one who is setting policy, raising and lowering taxes, and making laws for a town, state or country the next day. So politicians should not all be tarred with the same brush — they're not just black and white.

We look closely at candidates. A person's very candidacy opens their past, present and future plans to the closest scrutiny by the public and the press. Voters need to know all the facts about candidates — facts on their education, finances, political and family connections and past service. To ensure the best candidates are elected, voters have to look beyond what they say to who they really are, where they've been and what they've accomplished.

It's the job of a community newspaper to provide as much information to voters as possible, and we take that responsibility seriously. We look beyond "sound bites" in our search for the truth, and you can count on us to keep you informed during this municipal election. We challenge voters to dig in and learn all about these candidates before going to the polls March 1.

Letters To The Editor

Moral decline is tied to a lack of discipline

TO THE EDITOR:

On the front page of your December 13 Ruidoso News I certainly agree with Mr. Mike Lovelace, from start to finish in the entire article. I especially agree with him on the paragraph related to violence in the street being directly related to a moral decline in parental supervision for the past 30 years.

I just can't understand parents bringing children into the world and allowing them to do and say anything they want to, and failing to discipline them and teach them to be responsible citizens. I guess you just have to assume they are not responsible parents and have no respect for themselves or anyone around them. He alluded to the fact the government is trying to take the guns away from the very society the criminal is re-entering, with which I certainly agree.

Along those lines the present administration commander-in-chief, has made some of the most ridiculous appointments to his cabinet I could imagine. To name a few, O'Leary who has proceeded to trash out and ruin the oil industry with her snide remarks about the oil business. Boy! she's some energy secretary.

Then comes along Elders the Surgeon General, supposed to be interested in the general good health of the national human population, and suggests we legalize drugs! I'm telling you, if they can be any more stupid in Washington, D.C., I don't know how.

That would be like everyone getting into bed with AIDS patients and performing all sex acts expecting it to stop the AIDS problem.

Thankful for reasonable lawman

TO THE EDITOR:

Belated applause to Lt. Mike Lovelace and Officer Truman McBride for their well reasoned and common sense comments in the December 13 issue of The News on the subject of gun-owner control.

We are indeed fortunate to have law enforcement personnel in our midst who have neither joined the ranks of the Politically Correct, nor been intimidated by the hysteria of the media.

Since gun-owner control is a serious constitutional issue which transcends even the daily tragedies of our violent society, one can only hope that rational discourse will be the basis of our legislative decisions.

However, if the Brady Bill and other such congressional offerings are any example, it would appear that hysteria reigns supreme to the detriment of public safety and constitutional rights.

Thank God for Lovelace and McBride who appear to both care about the safety of the people they serve, and the Constitution they have sworn to uphold.

The Reverend John W. Penn

Now you know the rest of the story

TO THE EDITOR:

I am sure many of your readers and even yourself and your staff wondered what was the motivation of my intense distrust of DOE and the nuclear industry.

The anguish I felt, not being able to disclose the bases of my distrust and dedicated opposition to nuclear programs, was very troublesome. The information I had was classified and I could not disclose.

Now the DOE is starting to declassify this information. The deliberate release of radioactive material over unknowing populations, the deliberate exposure to civilians of radiation in the form of injection, inhalation, ingestion, and direct exposure was rampant.

In my opinion, it was criminal and totally repulsive. Perhaps you can understand why I say, "to know it, is to hate it."

I am certain the more hideous civilian nuclear experiments will not be declassified. I assure you what has now been made public is only a snowflake in the nuclear experimentation glacier.

The citizens of New Mexico have already received a disproportionate amount of nuclear population tests. They need no more!

As more and more information is declassified, perhaps the rationality of my position will become clearer.

I hope you, your family and your staff have a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

All state musicians

Ruidoso High School students headed for the 50th Annual New Mexico Music Educators All-State Music Festival in-service conference are (from left) Amber Gieb, Heather Miller, Forrest Green and Chance Factor. More than 2,000 students throughout the state auditions for band, choir and orchestra to be judged the finest music students in New Mexico. "To become a finalist is quite a feat from such a small school," said RHS musical director Rob Lovett. "Competition is tough from larger schools." At the conference at UNM, musicians will rehearse two and a half days with nationally-known clinicians in preparation for a concert on Saturday.

Rescue group gears up for new year

White Mountain Search and Rescue (WMSAR) will conduct a board meeting at noon Monday, January 10, at K-Bob's, and all members are invited to attend.

According to a news release provided by the organization, the regular meeting of WMSAR will be at 7 p.m. Monday, January 17, in the public meeting room at Ruidoso High School.

New officers for 1994 are Melinda Headley, president; John Lieffinck, vice president; Marion Fleck, secretary; and Ed Fleck, treasurer.

Board members are Cleston Pritchett, Jim Edwards, Lee Van Pelt and Jack Weber.

New Mexico State Police Chief John Denko has announced the hiring of Rick Goodman as the new SAR Resource Officer. Goodman, who will begin on January 15, has been involved in search and rescue for more than 20 years.

Goodman is one of the architects of the New Mexico State SAR Plan and has been an instructor at all of the New Mexico DPS sponsored search and rescue courses for State Police Mission Initiators and Volunteer SAR Field Coordinators over the past 15 years.

He has been an instructor of the "Incident Command System" and "Managing the SAR Function" for the DPS.

Since 1985, Goodman has been president of "Wilderness Technologies, Corp. (aka Goodman and Associates) based in Albuquerque. He has been training emergency response personnel in the United States, Canada and Mexico, including the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, the US Air Force, the US Coast Guard, National Park Service, Department of Interior, Bureau of Indian Affairs, various state police and sheriff offices and volunteer search and rescue groups.

He has been an instructor for the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA), the Emergency Response Institute, the New Mexico Law Enforcement Academy, the NM DPS, and the Wyoming

Law Enforcement Academy.

He has participated in hundreds of search and rescue missions as a NMSP Search and Rescue Field Coordinator.

Goodman is a former board member and vice president of the National Association for Search and Rescue (NASAR), a past board member of the New Mexico Search and Rescue (Review Board, founder and past chairman of the New Mexico Emergency Services Council (NMESC) and he is vice chairman, Technology, International Search and Rescue Trade Association (IN-SARTA).

Goodman says that his number one priority is a long overdue MI/FC school which will be held starting February 28 and run through March 4. Second on his list will be an up-to-date SAR resource directory and a SAR telephone directory.

WMSAR should have a decision about their annual musical by the time the regular meeting rolls around.
