Ruidoso voters elect first woman mayor

by CHARLES STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Ruidoso voters, by a comfortable 743 to 612 margin Tuesday, elected Jerry Shaw as the first woman mayor of the village.

Voters appeared appreciative that all five village precincts gathered at one location, the convention civic events center. New voter booths coughed out results in record time, shortly after the polls closed at 7 p.m.

Mayor Shaw officially will be sworn in next Monday night at 7 p.m. along with council seat winners Joe Gomez, Frank Potter, Leon Eggleston and Robert Donaldson.

Attorney Mike Line will be sworn in as the new municipal judge, replacing Chuck Hawthorne.

The new councilors will join J.D. James and Frank Cummins to complete the council. Both James and Cummins have two more years to serve on their terms.

Shaw, who also was the village's first woman councilor, was appointed mayor last July 9 after Victor Alonso quit the post in May.

In order to accept the mayor's position for the final seven months of Alonso's term, Shaw had to give up her elected four-year term as councilor.

As an elected councilor with a four-year term, Cummins chose to run against Shaw for mayor without jeopardizing his council seat. Had he won, Cummins could have then appointed a replacement for his vacated seat.

Shaw's gamble to fill Alonso's seat paid off. She told The Ruidoso News Tuesday that she would not have been elected Monday without first having the opportunity to first voters she could handle the mayor's job.

Ironically, her opponent, Councilor Frank Cummins, seconded the motion for her appointment to replace Alonso.

Cummins said he chose to run against Shaw because he thought he could do a better job, it appeared she would be unopposed and that the mayor should be an elected official.

Councilor Joe Gomez led all vote getters election day with 922 votes, followed closely by Councilor Frank Potter with 846 votes. Both were appointed at the same time Shaw first became mayor.

Gomez and Potter will be joined on the council by Leon Eggleston and Robert Donaldson.

Eggleston captured the third four-year seat with a respectable 615 to 498 voter edge over his nearest opponent, attorney Charles Rennick.

Eggleston is a former Ruidoso

Mayor Jerry Shaw is all smiles after winning her bid to be elected to her appointed position.

village clerk who acted as interim village manager when Potter was fired the day after former mayor Victor Alonso was elected in 1990.

Eggleston resigned after his efforts to keep the village manager's position failed.

Donaldson, current chairman of the planning and zoning commission, easily outdistanced his three opponents for the single two-year council seat with a 640 to 363 edge over his nearest rival Strand "Mac" McDougal.

In the race for municipal judge, attorney Michael Line won by a surprising margin, 626 to 345, over incumbent Judge Charles Hawthorne.

Several older residents interviewed after the results were posted said they did not vote for Hawthorne because of his second chance philosophy with juveniles getting speeding tickets.

Hawthorne said he gave community service to first time juvenile offenders in lieu of fines so that their parents would not have to suffer higher insurance rates.

The adults interviewed said they had no children and were concerned that juvenile delinquency was treated too softly in today's society.

Also in the judge's race, Danny Garcia outdrew Jerry Wright, K-BUY radio manager, 187 to 174. And judicial candidate Jerry Propsner, an amusement park equipment broker, gathered 13 votes.

Village clerk Tammie Maddox said 1,366 voters or 48 percent of the town's 2,896 voters entered the booths. She considered the turnout as average.

Most voters seemed satisfied with the recent direction the village council has taken and the campaign was without a driving emotional issue.

A last minute letter and radio blitz by a small fringe group may have served to aid the very candidates they were against.

Letter writers John C. Schuller, Dowd Jameson and Walt Durr, with input from former councilor Barbara Duff, named their slate of candidates that included Frank Cummins for mayor. They also named Joe Gomez, Bill Karn, Allen Full and Charles Rennick to support for village council.

The body of the letter contained detrimental remarks about Shaw and Potter.

Gomez strongly denounced the letter and in a following radio spot by that same group, they urged voters not to vote for Gomez.

Gomez and Potter were the two top vote getters in the election. The fringe group's candidate Karn received the least votes (249) of any council candidate seeking a 4-year term.

Full, the group's two-year candidate, barely managed to outdistance Richard Mound, a certified public accountant. Mound, early in the race, attempted to withdraw, and notified everyone not to vote for him.

Ironically, Cummins and Rennick may have suffered the most by the letter, although they had nothing to do with its contents.

If the strategy backfired, 66 voters changing their minds could have put both Cummins and Rennick in office.

Karn's rock bottom showing was somewhat of a surprise. Apparently his fight against the Monitored Retrieval Storage (MRS) facility was not a big factor. However, his absenteeism record on the council and non-support for the R.D. Hubbard hotel plans probably hurt his chances for re-election.

If the letter cost Cummins votes, the fact that he was a man did not.

For the most part, Cummins ran on a "me to" platform.

He applauded Shaw's leadership for the past seven months, telling voters at political forums that he wouldn't do much differently, only better.

Shaw spoke first at most forums, outlining the village's accomplishments during the past seven months.

Cummins, also enjoying the past seven months as councilor, would usually follow with a statement agreeing with Shaw.

He was never seriously challenged on how he would do things differently.

Long time resident Norman Smith gained a respectable 349 votes in a low profile campaign. Smith's plank banked on his past experience as a decision maker in private enterprise.

Little known Robert Sterchi was an impressive speaker at the forums, but managed to get only 259 votes. Like Karn, Sterchi strongly stressed he was anti-MRS and received little for his efforts. He also strongly supported a hotel in the community.

Voters from precincts seven and nine used two booths in one room at the center. Precincts six, eight and 10 used two booths from an adjoining room.

Shaw narrowly beat Cummins in precincts seven and nine, 264 to 262. Those precincts include motel row in Upper Canyon, Holiday Acres, Ponderosa Heights, Town and Country, Forest Heights, Wingfield area, Black Forest and the housing area behind the post office.

Shaw's strengths came from precincts six and eight. Those areas include Indian Hills, Cree Meadows, White Mountain, White Mountain Meadows, Innsbrook, Eagle Creek and Middle School.

Absentee voters chose Shaw by a margin of 49-22.

14% of voters in Downs cast ballots in uncontested race

by PAM CROMWELL
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

In the Ruidoso Downs Board of Trustees election, Ray D. Hayhurst and Margie R. Morales renewed four-year terms. Both incumbents had previously been appointed to the board and ran unopposed for election.

The canvass of returns was prepared by Village Clerk Leann Weibrecht and Magistrate Judge Gerald Dean Jr.

With two absentee ballots cast for each candidate, Hayhurst received a total of 56 votes, Morales 59.

Despite the lack of opposition to the incumbents, 62 voters went to the polls, 14 percent of the 459 registered voters in the Downs.

"This is next to nothing compared with the usual 300 we see, because they were unopposed, said Weibrecht."

Hayhurst and Morales are the first trustees to benefit from the recent pay raise approved by the board last month. They will each receive an additional $50 per meeting, raising their pay to $100 for every meeting they attend.

Renfro unseats Warth in Village of Capitan

by DIANNE STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Finesse not success seemed to be more important to Capitan voters, who cast their ballots Tuesday and elected a new mayor.

They brought back former trustee and mayor Norman Renfro in a two-to-one win over incumbent Frank Warth, with 280 to 140 votes.

They also picked two new faces for the board of trustees and said adios to incumbent Alfred LeRoy Montes, who often was Warth's major opponent on issues.

Lincoln County deputy sheriff Connie Hopper was the heavy voter favorite with 213. Electrician Byron Carpenter wasn't far behind with 192 votes. They will each serve four-year terms.

But nobody went home embarrassed. All four candidates for the two seats on the board turned in solid vote totals. Montes posted 188 and Johnny Lunsford, a newcomer to Capitan, walked away with a respectable 170-vote showing.

Retired state police officer Jack Johnson will be the new municipal judge with 179 votes. John Whitaker, who has been substitute judge for the past year, gathered 136 votes. Mary Lunsford, a former magistrate judge, who is married to Johnny Lunsford, also turned in a good show of support with 105 votes.

The contested mayor's race generated substantial interest in the village with 66 percent of the 646 registered voters showing up at the fairground polling place or sending in absentee ballots.

Warth had fallen out of favor with a group of voters involved with the annual fair and related events at the fairground. He had been criticized for unilateral actions, but also had been praised for pulling in more than $1-million in state and federal money to help with village projects.

Renfro has pledged to allow residents more of a voice in their local government. His style is more laid back and appealing for those who felt shut out by the current administration.

The incumbent mayor of Carrizozo fared much better than Warth.

Cecelia Kuhnelt was re-elected for another four years by 203 votes to Harold Garcia's 154 votes. The restaurant owner and former trustee has long been critical of Kuhnelt, but voters didn't agree as 64 percent of the 537 registered turned out to express their opinion Tuesday and return her for another term.

Elected to the two four-year seats on the Carrizozo board of trustees were Ruth Armstrong with 190 votes and James "Willie" Silva with 142 votes.

Incumbent Patsy Vallejos lost her bid for re-election by a slim two-vote margin, with a close 140 votes. Angelo Vega pulled 107 votes, as did Rick W. Emmons. Cheryl A. Sparks received 26 votes.

Incumbent S.M. Ortiz will sit on the municipal bench for another four years. He won re-election with 151 votes compared to Johnny L. Johnson's 119 votes, R.O. "Chuck" Rominger's 62 votes and Gilbert Archuleta's 28 votes.

No positions were contested in Corona. Ernest Lueras will continue as mayor. Walter J. Garfield will serve in position one on the board of trustees and Lee Roy Mulkey in position two.

Voters had just one location for all five precincts in Ruidoso this election. Workers in precincts 7 and 9 included (seated, from left) Betty Bennett and Michelle Taylor, who is talking with voter Ronnie Wright (standing).

Flue bug

A Ruidoso fireman poises with an axe to rip through the tin roof of a home on Carter Lane. Firemen determined the cause was a faulty chimney that was not properly installed and that the chimney needed cleaning. The problem was resolved when the firemen pulled the chimney jack, a metal part that prevents rain, from the flue, and removed the stove from the house. Three units responded to the fire and about 10 firemen. Damage to the house was considered minimal.

Honeymooners wanted

by PAMELA CROMWELL
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Joan Bailey, director of the Ruidoso Valley Chamber of Commerce, gave a quarterly report to the Ruidoso Downs Board of Trustees Monday.

She said the chamber is pursuing a promotional package to invite people to marry and honeymoon in the Ruidoso area.

"We're going to publish the nuts and bolts of how to get married in Lincoln County," said Bailey. "We'll have everything from blood tests to the license and good places for the ceremony."

Ruidoso Downs Judge Harold Mansell said he married a couple from Tularosa just last week, and he had to tell them how to get the license. After blood tests are done, a marriage license can be obtained from any county seat, such as Carrizozo.

Mansell said he marries a lot of people from West Texas.

I had one couple who actually got married in El Paso, then came up here because they wanted to exchange their vows again in Ruidoso.

Mansell said people who have vacated here all their lives often want to have their weddings here.

Bailey also reported that despite the notorious lack of snow, activity at the visitor's center is up 15 percent, mailings are up 25 percent and the chamber is averaging more than 200 relocation packets a month.

In the continued effort to promote Ruidoso and Ruidoso Downs, as well as the rest of Lincoln County, as a travel destination, Bailey said the county will use extra lodgers tax money to put up billboards along the interstate.

In other business, the Downs board adopted a resolution making the Village of Ruidoso Downs the fiscal agent of the regional wastewater treatment plant joint use board.

The Downs will secure a much needed loan of about $795,000 from the New Mexico Environment Department for repairs to the sewage plant. Mayor Hayhurst said the holding tank was especially in need of modifications. The loan will be repaid through the proportionate shares of Ruidoso and Ruidoso Downs.

Commission splits on purchase of sale barn

by DIANNE STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

In years to come, Lincoln County residents can look back and pass judgment on the wisdom of the five county commissioners who voted Tuesday on the purchase of the Super Select Sales Barn in Glencoe.

They split into two camps on the idea of developing a rural events center at the barn, using state money to purchase it and another $40,000 from the state toward remodeling and operation.

Commissioners Wilton Howell, L. Ray Nunley and Chairman Montroy Montes voted to move ahead with the $250,000 purchase contingent on several conditions to be met within 90 days.

Commissioners Bill Schwettmann and Stirling Spencer voted against the acquisition.

"The money is not in hand and the governor could veto the bill (from the State Legislature), but I don't foresee that, although I'm not a fortune teller," Montes said.

"We're making an offer to the owners contingent on the money being available and the county finding public or private resources to guarantee the successful operation."

As he opened the issue to commission discussion, Montes cut off comments from the public.

"Since this has been a very public issue and discussed a great deal for months, I'm limiting comments from the table only," he said.

Spencer was the first to the podium.

"I'm not in favor of the purchase with the pending obligations toward services in this county," he said, adding that he's been told that while operated by a private group, the barn did not break even financially.

"I have asked for the books to be brought before me, but they haven't been," he said.

"Those are not just magic dollars from Santa Fe. They're ours, mine and yours."

Spencer said he was concerned the barn would be in competition with private groups, the civic events center in Ruidoso and the county fairground in Capitan.

"I've asked repeatedly for an operation budget and have not been given one, therefore I have no idea of the cost of operating the center," he said. If a private group couldn't operate it successfully, "It stares me that once government gets hold of it, it will be even worse."

He noted that State Representative H. John Underwood, a Ruidoso Democrat, said the county could go back next year and ask the legislature for more money toward the project.

"There could be a different administration there," Spencer said. "This is not an entitlement."

The annual county Cowboy Symposium could be staged somewhere else, as could horse shows and the other events he has heard mentioned, he said.

"When we have to scrutinize the senior citizens centers fund for every $5 and are asking department heads to scrimp, I'm asking you to vote nay."

Howell then offered a motion to purchase the barn contingent on receiving the money from the state and "under the other terms discussed in executive session."

The motion was seconded by Nunley.

"We don't have the (sales agreement) document before us and it scares me to vote without that," Spencer said.

Montes said the document is being FAXed, "and we have the right to get in and out without encumbering the county's money."

Next up was Schwettmann, who is elected from the district that includes Capitan.

"My position is obvious on this matter ever since it started," he said. "I was party to the resolution (to the legislature asking for money), but we didn't follow the terms of that resolution when the packet was prepared."

"Lincoln County does not have enough money to purchase and operate the (barn) without assistance. We wanted (the state) to do all of that. No where in the resolution was the request for operational assistance the first year only."

He listed the money requested as $300,000 to purchase, $40,000 for improvements, $60,000 for parking and grounds work, $35,000 for capital expenses, $40,000 for promotion and $140,750 for first year operation for a total of $611,750.

What was received fell more than $300,000 short. The county coming up with more than $111,000 in in-kind services or matching money was never mentioned during the official discussion, Schwettmann said.

"I think we have not followed our own resolution and I wonder why not," he said. "And why the hurry when we don't even know the wording in the sales agreement? Why the urgency to obligate the county and the taxpayers? If there is only one function a year, we can't operate it. Why is it so urgent when we have no educated guess on what it will cost to operate? The money (from the legislature) may not be available until October or November. Why the fast track?"

Howell contended the operation money appropriated by the legislature would be enough to run the center for years, even if there was only one function. The cost of utilities runs $9,700 for a year, he said.

"When I was elected, I was elected from one district, but I try to represent the whole county, not just one area," he said.

"I'm not here to say it will ever make money, but it will bring a lot of dollars into Lincoln County through entertainment and tourism."

Howell said Eastern New Mexico University-Ruidoso officials have expressed an interest in using the barn for classrooms as a branch of the university.

"We shouldn't be short-sighted," Nunley said, noting that the property was appraised at $470,000.

"We should look ahead in this, what it can bring in tomorrow, next week and next year."

The manager of the civic events center doesn't see the barn as a threat and he doesn't know of any private group with a similar facility, Nunley said.

Using hindsight, it's easy now to see that Ruidoso would have been better off if it had purchased the ski area years ago, instead of letting the Mescalero Apache Tribe sign the deal, Montes said. In hindsight, commissioners who approved building a substation in Ruidoso acted wisely. Although it initially was designated for county department extensions, it has evolved into a health department and sheriff's suboffice.

He sees the barn going through a similar evolution.

"It's not going to be in conflict with the fairground," Montes said. "We have ensured the fairground's future. We've done our homework."

Spencer said hindsight also has shown that putting in a new airport proved to be a burden on taxpayers and that many of the promised benefits never occurred.

"It may be OK in 10 or 15 years," he said.

Howell said the airport was moved to another location to improve safety.

"Talking to pilots, it's no better than the other," Spencer said.

"We have never asked the taxpayers of Lincoln County to operate this (rural events center)," Montes said.

When asked for a list of the principal owners of the sales barn, county attorney Alan Morel said that he is waiting for a resolution from the group, which will list all of the stockholders and directors.

"They all have to sign to authorize the sale," he said. "We have 90 days to get all these things started or completed."

In other action, the commission approved applying for a Community Development Block Grant to build a senior citizens center in San Patricio. The county currently runs a center in a church building. An exact amount of money was not determined.

Schwettmann announced that two architects submitted proposals to improvements to the fairground and will be evaluated and ranked before a selection committee begins negotiations on a fee. The firms are Wayne Andrews and Architects West, both from Albuquerque.

Commissioners also added a $95 a day per diem category for special areas outside the state where costs run significantly higher such as Washington, D.C. and New York City. The addition had been discussed last year, but inadvertently was left off the new per diem policy approved at that time.

Deputies discover 22 pounds of cocaine on a routine traffic stop near Carrizozo

by DIANNE STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

A traffic stop resulted in more than a speeding ticket for two travelers Wednesday when deputies discovered 22 pounds of cocaine, the largest amount seized in Lincoln County.

Sheriff James McSwane said that about 5:50 p.m., deputies Angelo Vega and Larry Cearley pulled over an older model car about two miles north of Carrizozo on U.S. 54.

"They found a solid block of cocaine with an estimated street value of $440,000 inside a canvas bag in the truck of the vehicle," McSwane said.

Charged with conspiracy to traffic cocaine and possession with intent to distribute cocaine are Juan C. Diaz, 27, of Chino, California, and Benjamin Rivera, 27, of Silver City, New Mexico.

Magistrate Judge Gerald Dean put bond at $500,000 each and they'll be arraigned this morning (Thursday), McSwane said.

The White Mountain Task Force was summoned and will be involved in furthering the investigation.

"The suspected destination was Albuquerque. If it was, we also believe that some of that cocaine could have returned back to Lincoln County," he said.

"We have information that a lot of the local cocaine comes from Albuquerque after it has been cut and distributed from there.

"I'm proud of my officers. It's a heck of an achievement."

Gonzalo Cordova of the White Mountain Task Force said the seizure is the largest of cocaine and in street value ever documented in the county. Last summer, 150 pounds of marijuana were recovered in the forest near Ngal. 50 pounds were confiscated in January.

MainStreet Ruidoso grows out of national trend toward revitalizing downtowns

by CHARLES STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Part 3 in a series on MainStreet Ruidoso

The idea for the concept of MainStreet nationwide began in the 1970s when people started building malls and other centers outside of the downtown area.

To fight back, owners in the downtown areas built false facades. They closed the area for pedestrians, but instead of being beneficial, it hurt business even more.

In 1977, the National Historic Trust completed a study on how to revitalize these downtown areas and when some of the communities tried the new ideas they were successful.

More than 650 communities nationwide in 32 states are now involved in the Main Street project, and raising money has become a full-time job for many participating in those programs.

During the Christmas season of 1991, Ruidoso's MainStreet officials said they needed more money, just to operate.

A letter was proposed for the village council to earmark, for MainStreet administration, some of the sales tax that it would receive from the street overlay project on Sudderth Drive to be completed the following May.

Project manager Mary Maul said the amount would be about $16,500.

As 1991 ended, the 1992 Legislature convened and was very generous to MainStreet. State Representative H. John Underwood (D) managed to acquire $300,000 for Sudderth Drive improvements.

Underwood credited Maul for her work in obtaining the funds. He said she had made a lot of friends in Santa Fe, including the governor, and that her footwork made it easy for him and others to do their job.

The state Main Street organization also received $50,000 from the legislature to be used for contractual services for the individual communities, such as presentations on visual merchandising, marketing or architectural remodeling.

On March 30, 1992, MainStreet president Mike Line presented Underwood with a certificate of appreciation. Line also recognized Senator Pete Campos, New Mexico Main Street director Julie Johnson and Ruidoso Mayor Victor Alonso.

New directors were welcomed at the meeting. They were Madeline Shackelford of Mitchell's, Auden Franklin of Cabbage Rose and Tom Battin of Ruidoso State Bank.

On June 22, 1992, The Ruidoso News headlined the $1.3 million allocated for sidewalks and the streetscape plan.

In addition to the $300,000 from the legislature, the group also received federal funds through the Intermodal Surface Transportation Efficiency Act signed by President George Bush.

At a June 18 meeting in Las Vegas, New Mexico, the state highway department approved its budget for the upcoming year with $425,000 set aside for the MainStreet Ruidoso project.

"The department knows Ruidoso needs the sidewalk improvements and the handicap accessibility," Maul said.

She said engineers Bohannan-Huston would complete construction plans by the end of June to be submitted for approval by the state highway department. She said approval could take from six to eight weeks. The plans also have to be approved by the Department of Finance and Administration.

The funds were to become available October 1, and the project to be put out for bid in November with construction beginning in the spring of 1993.

Maul and MainStreet directors said they did not want construction during busy times for downtown businesses and work should be accomplished in the off-season.

On Thursday, June 22, the MainStreet Ruidoso Board voted to reinstate the program of block captains to help spread information to businesses.

MainStreet president Alden Deyo said a block captain could be especially helpful when they began training someone to take the position of project manager after Mary Maul left.

Director Jacqueline Bentley cautioned against creating a time burden for captains. Director Auden Franklin said keeping businesses informed would make them feel more a part of the community.

On July 20, 1992, it was announced that the final plans for the MainStreet streetscape improvements were submitted to the state highway department by Bohannan-Huston.

Ruidoso residents were invited to look at the plans in village hall.

Maul told the council that MainStreet directors had looked for the best location for downtown restrooms in the past and found two possible sites, but they weren't part of the streetscape improvement. She said restrooms would run almost $60,000, and are something the village would have to support financially, with help from MainStreet on the plans.

Although the streetscape project topped the list of priorities in mid-1992, the group also had other projects on the agenda.

Directors reviewed a program of work that included two annual promotions, the popular Halloween party and the Community Update luncheon co-sponsored by The Ruidoso News.

The ongoing membership drive was of concern to president Alden Deyo.

The River Trail system was another project mentioned.

Maul said the village had started the process of getting easements along the trail. She said Councilor Bill Kain had sent letters to property owners.

Maul said one property owner said "no," another asked for concessions in return. She said if owners refused, the trail could either cross the river or a condemnation of the property could be performed.

Ruidoso Springs and Riverside subdivisions were involved, with about 80 property owners on the trails list at that time.

The trails committee, as early as February 1991, emphasized that the river walk would be a simple walking trail with some landscaping and that it would enhance property values. Located in a flood plain area, no commercial development was envisioned along the trail.

The trail was to cross the river one or more times via foot bridges because of terrain problems or easement problems and $15,000 was approved by the village council for a river property study and a preliminary feasibility study for the area from Fern Street to Country Club Drive.

In July 1992, MainStreet director Don Dutton told the board he had been approached by some business people who would like to foot the bill implementing the river trail program, but the investors would need a commitment by the village to follow through on the project.

Maul suggested applying for grants through the Soil and Land Conservation Service that would pay for about 80 percent.

Commission bans smoking

by DIANNE STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Crush out those cigarettes before entering any Lincoln County buildings or face a possible $25 fine after April 1.

County Commissioners Tuesday approved an ordinance declaring all buildings smoke free, except for one enclosed office per elected official or tenant.

The policy received support from District Judge Richard A. Parsons and other elected officials, except for Sheriff James McSwane, who offered partial support.

"State law calls for adoption of a policy I found out, but the terms are up to us," said county manager Andy Wynham. "Some commissioners thought it was too strict and others not strict enough."

Commissioner Bill Schwettmann questioned the impact on the jail.

Although he no longer supervises the jail, McSwane said, based on his experience it's a great idea.

"Personally, I think inmates should be required to comply with any county rules," McSwane said. "I think (that compliance) could become a problem and the sheriff's department will be happy to respond to those. There's a potential for a lot of frustration when you force a group to stop smoking."

"I'm tired of appealing people in jail when we restrict those in the general public," said Commissioner Stirling Spencer.

"To smoke, they need matches or other devices and fire also can be used as weapons and matchbooks. Even if it was allowed in the outdoor areas, it would mean they had to have matches and we have had mattress fires in the past."

Wynham said smoking also becomes a hygiene problem.

Turning to his own department, McSwane favored more leeway for his dispatchers and deputies.

He asked that the communication center, as well as the deputies room, be declared a smoking area. They both are completely closed off.

"Four out of six communication officers smoke," he said. The policy could be a problem with dispatchers having to leave the center to take their breaks outside if they want to smoke. Most are confined to the dispatch areas for eight hour blocks of time.

"It's a form of relaxation in a high stress job," McSwane said. "If any other non-smokers enter the center, smoking ceases."

Commissioner L. Ray Nunley said most corporations have smoke free buildings, including Wal-Mart. He doubted whether any county employees would quit their jobs in protest.

He also cited potential damage to the electronic consoles from cigarette tar.

Smoking should not be allowed in the center "not only from a health standpoint, but for the equipment we just purchased," Nunley said.

He noted that Wynham also has been directed to create a smoking lounge for all employees.

Schwettmann proposed an amendment to the resolution that would allow more than one office per department to be designated.

"I think we regulate too many people's rights in this world," he said.

The amendment died for lack of a second and the original motion carried 4-1 with Schwettmann casting the lone nay vote.

Commissioners played a trick on Dr. Bernhard Reimann by asking him to come to the commission meeting and report on the E911 emergency telephone system installation that he supervised for the county as volunteer chairman.

"We needed to get you here to present a plaque, the first of the tile plaques we had produced in Albuquerque," Commission Chairman Monroy Montes said to Reimann.

"I'm grateful for your trust in me and that I was able to do it," Reimann told commissioners. He previously has been recognized by the Capitan Board of Trustees for heading several successful community projects for that village.

Commissioners approved a capital outlay contract with the state for improvements to the Coronas Senior Citizens Center after Nunley received answers to several questions.

He was told that the village would pay water and trash collection charges and the county would pick up the rest of the utilities.

Wynham said he was not worried about a state provision attached to the grant restricting the use of the center to senior citizens and placing compliance with the Americans with Disabilities Act onto the county.

Dr. Bernhard Reimann of Capitan received thanks from Lincoln County Commissioner Monroy Montes for his many volunteer hours as chairman of the E911 committee.

"All of our centers operate under the same premise," Wynham said. "We rent them in the evening for money that is used to benefit the senior citizens, like a fund raiser, because the centers would not be used (by seniors) at those times."

In other business, commissioners:

—issued a resolution thanking volunteers from various services in the county including medical and fire.

—approved a resolution recognizing the efforts of rural volunteer firefighting departments, other agencies and individuals who fought a blaze near the Hondo School February 18.

—noted that if the Eagle Creek Intercommunity Water Association wants the private road to the lake area maintained by the county the group needs to submit an application to that effect.

Association officials had proposed selling 1/10th of an acre of land in exchange for about $35 worth of blading work on the road each year for 10 years.

Wynham explained that the parcel actually lies under Lake Shore Drive, which is part of Sierra Blanca subdivision. But he noted that Lake Shore Drive already is owned by the county through prescriptive right of way because it has been maintained for more than 10 years. "If they deed the road to us, we could maintain it because of the public interest," Nunley said.

"It does serve a lot of public to reach the lake," county road manager Bill Cupit agreed.

"I'll bet the traffic count would be higher on that road than many others we maintain," Nunley said.

"It'd be in the top 10 percent," Cupit said.

It was then that Spencer pointed out the association had not followed the proper procedure.

"They should request maintenance and that the road comes onto the county's roll," he said.

Ruidoso Downs is selected for curbside recycling experiment

by PAMELA CROMWELL
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Residents of Ruidoso Downs will no longer have to haul their plastics, tin, newspapers, aluminum and cardboard to collection sites for recycling when a new program is initiated soon.

At a meeting of the Board of Trustees Monday, Joe Lewandowski, general manager of the Lincoln County Solid Waste Authority (LCSWA), announced that a curbside recycling program is going to be piloted in the Downs.

"We're looking for stuff to put in the new bales," said Lewandowski. "We can handle a lot more material than we're getting now."

LCSWA plans to start the program the first week in April.

"This is a voluntary thing," said Lewandowski. "It's not mandatory."

Recyclers will receive free blue collection bags from LCSWA, and their recycling will be picked up free of charge the same day as their trash.

Kerry Krumtsiek, recycling coordinator, said the bags will be purchased with a $66,600 grant from the state Department of Energy, Minerals and Natural Resources.

Krumtsiek said recyclers will still have to take glass to a collection site because there are inherent problems with collecting glass at curbside. He added, though, that curbside recycling will be a convenience for many people, especially those who take large loads to the igloos.

"We need people who want this service to call and sign up, so we'll know who gets the bags and so we can keep track of percentages," said Lewandowski.

He said LCSWA will probably promote the program door to door, giving out bags. He said that, because the blue bags are highly visible, after three or four people in the neighborhood start using the service, others will follow suit.

Mayor Joe Hayhurst and the board of trustees were duly impressed with LCSWA's plans, noting that the Downs will now have a "big city" recycling program.

"When you can get to curbside, you know you have an optimum program," Krumtsiek said. He said that while Ruidoso Downs is recycling efforts, the program there can't compare with LCSWA's.

In November, LCSWA won the Keep New Mexico Beautiful Award.

"Santa Fe won the top award in the state," said Lewandowski. "We're going for that one this year."

Ruidoso Downs residents who want to take advantage of LCSWA's free curbside recycling pick-up should call 378-4697 to sign up. LCSWA's Earth Dude (that's the planet in a cowboy hat) says, "Do it! Even if you don't have a curb."

Basketball teams end season

by KENT BEATTY

The News Sports Correspondent

The Ruidoso High School basketball teams ended their seasons over the past few days with similar records as in the past years, but great hope for the future as excellent athletes are making appearances in the non-varsity grades.

The 'Lady Warriors' season ended last Wednesday in the District 3-AAA tournament with a loss at Silver City. While its not unusual for Ruidoso to lose a game to Silver, a school that has more than twice as many students as Ruidoso, the girls headed into the game with confidence.

Just a week earlier, the Lady Warriors whipped the Lady Colts in an overtime thriller that had the Warrior gym rocking.

That win was just half of the reason that the girls made that five hour bus trip with a chance to win though. The team advanced in the tournament by knocking off Las Cruces Oñate, with a student population about three times the size of Ruidoso's.

While the Silver loss was a heart-breaker and despite a 7-16 record, the fact is the girls were very competitive in every game. That "chance to win" made the season a lot shorter.

Head coach Dennis Davis was pleased with the girls' performance this season.

"I was very proud of the way that the girls played this year. They fought hard and never gave up. We had some very good basketball players and the other teams knew it," said Davis.

"It's not very often that you get a group like Sarah, Brandy, Kristie and Danielle together, so we were very fortunate," said Davis.

Davis is certainly right. Seniors Sarah Dix, Brandy Pfeiffer, Kristie Ryan and Danielle Morris gave their heart and soul to the blue and gold and will certainly be missed next year.

Dix and Pfeiffer dominated the game inside for the Lady Warriors and Kristie Ryan's play at high-post was excellent.

Losing those players will be tough for the Lady Warriors, and how the team gets through that loss will be the key to next year's season.

The boys season was very similar.

The Warriors ended the season with a 30-point loss at Deming, a team that Ruidoso had just beaten at home. It was a tough loss because the Warriors were with out their best player, Raul Davis who missed the game for disciplinary reasons.

But even then, the remaining five varsity players made the trip believing they would win the game. That hasn't happened around here in a while.

Poor shooting and Deming's thirty-some-odd second-half free throw attempts to the Warriors' eight, made it a tough night — still the kids left Deming for the last time feeling proud of what the team accomplished this year.

The Warriors were 6-17 for the season which doesn't sound like much, but its six times as many wins as last year's Warrior squad.

But more importantly, Ruidoso was competitive. The sight of the blue and gold didn't mean cake-walk for opposing players. Their weren't any of the those 120-40 smashings that we've seen in the past.

Oh sure, Ruidoso lost big-time to Silver a couple of times, but Silver is a big-time team. They should romp through the State Tournament. They're big, fast, and well-coached. Only Silver's tradition of under-achieving at the State level stands in their way — but they have the best team.

Ruidoso plays in a very tough basketball district. And year-to-year, there is always one team that stays home in the playoffs that would smash teams that are in from other districts.

It's just like Artesia's district in football. A couple of years ago, either Artesia, Lovington or Goddard didn't advance in the playoffs. Imagine that, any of those teams — and throw in Portales — would kill the teams from the other districts, and yet only two the four make the playoffs.

In Ruidoso's district's case, the basketball season usually sees Silver, Socorro and Oñate fight it out for a playoff spot.

For the past couple of years, its been Socorro and Oñate that advance but year the Colts are too deep — too good — to fail.

Ruidoso finished fifth this season with a 2-8 record, their best in five years.

When the Warriors beat Deming last month, it was the school's first district win in boys basketball since Ruidoso High School student athletes, heading to Australia this summer as part of Robin Line and David Eisenbrown are an exchange program.

Local athletes head down under

Plans are under way to share America's "Land of Enchantment" with Australia's "Sunshine State."

High school senior football players and cheerleaders from across New Mexico have been selected to participate in the 1994 Down Under Gridiron Exchange, a series of American football exhibition games to be played in the state of Queensland in Australia this summer.

Two Ruidoso High School seniors have been invited to participate in the 1994 Down Under Gridiron Exchange.

Football player David Eisenbrown will play for the New Mexico All-Stars, and cheerleader Robin Line has been selected to be a member of the New Mexico All-Stars cheerleading squad.

Two squads of the New Mexico All-Stars will compete against teams from Arizona and the Australian Gridiron Club.

The games are tentatively scheduled for June 17 and June 19 in Brisbane and Gold Coast in northeastern Australia. Players and cheerleaders currently are selling T-shirts and raffle tickets to finance their trip.

The invitations to participate in the 1994 Down Under Gridiron Exchange, were issued by Coaches Care New Mexico, a non-profit corporation established to promote the state of New Mexico and to provide a social and cultural exchange for

New Mexico youth.

Last year, the New Mexico All-Stars competed against the Arizona All-Stars in Cairns, Australia.

"We found that this project was an exciting educational opportunity for the young men who participated last year," said Don Rezac, director of Coaches Care New Mexico. "We wanted to expand it this year to include more youth so we can adhere to our mission of promoting the state, its youth, cultures, and athletics internationally."

Coaches Care is working with the Center for Hospitality and Tourism Studies at New Mexico State University to further New Mexico promotional opportunities in Australia.

Golf parents meet tonight

The Ruidoso Warriors golf team has a parent meeting scheduled for 7 p.m. tonight (Thursday) at Cree Meadows Country Club in the North 40.

Parents will have a chance to meet the coaching staff and discuss the practice and tournament schedule. Team rules also will be discussed.

The Warriors began practice with a full complement of players Tuesday with the end of the basketball season.

The boys team, the defending State Champions, has about 30 players out and the Lady Warriors have about 15 participants, which are mostly newcomers.

The season runs through the district tournament, which is slated for May 4 in Las Cruces.

1991.

The squad made it two-in-a-row with a win against Coble four nights later.

Those two wins brought smiles to the Warriors two departing seniors, J.R. Chino and Jeff Chapman.

Both players were winless in district play throughout their careers and both were big parts of that elusive first win.

Chino hit huge three-point baskets in the second half and Chapman scored the team's last three field goals in a stellar 18-point performance.

That game more than any other will probably be the one that Chino and Chapman tell their grandkids about — and by then, both will have probably scored 40 points in the game and shot the game-winner at the buzzer.

While the Warriors will be without Chapman and Chino and next year, the team definitely have a strong nucleus to build around.

Full-time varsity returners include Raul Davis, Cory Hood, Rex Comanche and Daniel Espinosa. Those four should occupy starting positions, but that fifth spot should bring on a whole of a battle.

Todd Young and Zack Turner are badly needed inside for post play and rebounding, but we need a point guard too. Danny Schrader maybe. But then where will Byron Soules and Jackie Roe play? They are probably the best athletes in their class.

That all boils down to head coach Paul Kirkwood having to make decisions that no Warrior basketball coach has had to make in a long time — what am I going to do with all this talent?

That question isn't one of great concern for Kirkwood.

"Give us a couple of weeks off and we'll be ready for next year," said Kirkwood.

"The kids were already talking about it on the way home from Deming, so we should have good numbers and win a few more games."

"I just want to thank Jeff and J.R. for hanging tough and staying out. I know early in the season was tough for both of those guys and I really appreciate their toughness and their commitment. They were great role models for the younger kids. I just wish we could have won a couple of more games for them," said Kirkwood.

Surprisingly, the junior varsity and C-Team season were a disappointment for the Warriors. Neither team won many games.

The JV team of course would have been much, much better with Cory Hood and Rex Comanche who are sophomores, but on the varsity.

The JV did however have a good group of athletes and when they are all on the same team next year with Hood and Comanche, we should see some pleasant results.

The C-Team is the real question though. This is a team that dominated on the football team, despite a lack of size.

Their quickness, especially at the skill positions, made them exceptional on the gridiron.

But that quickness was no match for the sometimes awesome size of their opponents on the hardwood. While gutsy, the team was notoriously slow starting and always seemed to make a run the fourth quarter.

A couple of 6-3 transfers would certainly help.

The resurgence of talent and the departure of Oñate and Deming from the district certainly makes the 1994-95 season look more inviting than ever.

Forestry camp deadline nears

Applications are due by Friday, April 15, for this year's New Mexico Forestry Camp, June 6 through 10, at the Chaparral Girl Scout Camp in the Jemez Mountains near Cuba.

Any New Mexican between the ages of 12 and 19 may apply to the camp sponsored by the Cuba Soil and Water Conservation District and others. Campers are chosen to represent a cross-section of New Mexicans.

The Forestry Camp is designed to help young people learn about our forested environments. Students work with foresters, wildlife biologists, archaeologists and other natural resource specialists to gain hands on understanding of the uses of our forests.

This will be the fifth summer for Forestry Camp. The brochure/application forms have been sent to all mid-schools and high schools in the state.

For more information, contact Peggy Ohler at the Cuba Soil and Water Conservation District, P.O. Box 250, Cuba NM 87013; 289-3950 or Jean Szymanski at the Forest Service Public Affairs Office, 517 Gold Avenue SW, Albuquerque, NM 87102; 842-3293.

Hondo senior chosen for exhibitions in Australia

Fermin Herrera, a senior at Hondo Valley High School, has been invited to travel to Australia this summer as part of the New Mexico All-Stars basketball team.

Herrera has made all-district and all-state in his basketball career.

He also was named Outstanding Eagle, the highest award an athlete can receive at Hondo Valley school.

The International Sports Exchange invited Herrera to Sydney, Australia for four exhibition games, July 11 through 20.

The trip will cost the Hondo student $1,295.

Anyone interested in contributing to Herrera's travel fund, may call Kathy Herrera at 653-4411.

Last year Herrera played in the L.A. Gear Pump Shoot-out.

Bowlers vie for top spots

In Tuesday night mixed league bowling, the Inn at Pine Springs closes out February the way they started, in first place.

The team lost its footing in the second week of the month, falling to third, and has slowly clawed its way back to the top.

The Inn, now with a 20-8 record, pushes the Scorebusters and Achy Breaky Hearts back into their first-week standings, second and third respectively. The Scorebusters are at 19-9, the Hearts at 18-10.

After three weeks in fifth place, Smokey Bear Motel and Restaurant finally got ahead of the Underdogs, taking the fourth place seat and leaving the Underdogs in fifth. Smokey is also at 18-10, only 54 pins below the Hearts. The Underdogs stand at 15-13.

Slots six through 10 are lined up as Cut Above/Obsessions, Lincoln County Medical Center, United New Mexico Bank, Double Deuce and Rick's Auto Tech.

Parks board invites visitors

Thrills, spills and lots of laughter add up to annual Cross Your Heart cup at Ski Apache

by YVONNE LANELLI
Special to The News

The Rocketeer sizzled, Leopard Lady growled, Beach Bimbo wiggled, Lacy flirted, Shaky shivered, Thomasina sauntered, Bubbetta VanDer Juggs sidled, Lumberjack Lizzie swung, Florence Featherface teased—another typical Cross Your Heart Cup February 23 at Ski Apache.

The Cross Your Heart Cup is hardly politically correct as contestants stuff bras, bat eyelashes, wiggle bottoms and bribe judges to win Best Buns, Biggest Boobs, Best Flirt and other alleged "honors."

This year's Cup proved different, however, as the politically incorrect event took on a social conscience. As race organizer Carla Grover explained at the awards party that evening at Casa Blanca, "Proceeds from this year's Cup go to the Battered Women's Shelter of the Family Crisis Center of Lincoln County."

This action becomes possible with the assistance of a new major sponsor, Budweiser. Drew Sims of Herring Distributing Company, the Anheuser Busch wholesaler from Roswell, explained his company's involvement with the Cup.

"We're looking for an opportunity to do something for the community on a grassroots level. We're proud to benefit the Family Crisis Center."

Costumed Cuppers weren't thinking about charity, however, as they skied the mountain race morning.

Let the fun begin!

Wolf whistles, double takes and cries of "Baby, oh, baby," greeted the arrival of each outrageously costumed entrant.

Sequins, feathered masks, balloon-stuffed chest, ingenious props, brief bikinis, filmy lingerie, colorful wigs and imaginative costumes filled Ski Apache's lower slopes with the Cross Your Heart spirit.

And the winners are...

Nearly everybody. Part of the Cup's appeal is that anyone can win regardless of skiing ability. A clever costume or a spectacular crash on the course merits an award as does the fastest racer.

Who was...

Ivy Heyman, whose yellow-suited, red-helmeted form streaked the Smokey Bear NASTAR course in 32.84 seconds.

Winning ages 16-20 was Ericka Martinez with Jennifer Mayo second (no time given).

Ages 21-29: Stephanie Chastain in 34.14 seconds and Tara Hunt second (no time given).

Ages 30-39: Ivy Heymann first in 32.84 seconds, Lynn Hudson second in 36.35 and Pam Topper third in 38.09.

Ages 40-49 drew the largest number of competitors. Maintaining her perfect record of first place was Carla Grover in 35.25 seconds. Jane Callahan placed second in 37.55 and Jane Terrel third in 38.95.

Foxy Fifties encompassed ages 50 and up. The foxiest proved to be smooth skiing Hilde French, followed by Ann Garbowska second, and Vicki Pate third. (No times given.)

Budweiser awarded caps, suspenders or T-shirts to winners in categories aged 21 and over.

Costumed cuties get theirs

In the fun categories. As perennial emcee Larry "Mr. Smooth" Schneider announced each winner, she drew for a prize from local supporters, The Attic, Alto, Wild West, Act and Ski Apache Ski Shops; Casa Blanca and the Inn of the Mountain Gods restaurants, Ruidoso Downs Race Track and Jane Terrel from the Fort Stanton vocational agriculture program.

Winning "Young Buns" the diminutive Jennifer Mayo, costumed as a waitress. Her costume came complete with order pad, apron and silver tray upon which delicately balanced a bud vase and rose, long-stemmed glass and several tucupakes.

"Bribes for the judges," she explained with a wink.

This year's "Golden Thigh" belongs to long-legged Lalena Valiant whose lacy white teddy over slinky black body suited displayed those golden gambs to perfection.

The coveted "Biggest Boobs" ballooned on the chest of Yvonne "Lumberjack Lizzie" Lanelli. Her anatomically correct balloon bosom, crossed with red suspenders, burst from a red plaid lumberjack shirt. Yellow work pants and a red hard hat completed the look.

Swinging a genuine axe and log instead of ski poles, Lizzie boasted, "I can cut down any man's tree!"

Honorable mention went to Lynn "Sexy Sequin" Hudson. Row after colorful row of bright sequins outlined her sunlight-catching décolletage. A blinking red headlight caught the judges' roving eyes.

"Biggest Flirt"—Stephanie "Fortune Fairy" Chastain. Her gold lame jacket opened to reveal cleverly written fortunes taped in strategic locations on her body.

Honorable mention—Lumberjack Lizzie and Lacy Laleña.

opportunity for judges Terry Tankersley, Gary Reynolds and Rick Zarnadt to scrutinize. "Careful, I might explode," teased the sexy Rocketeer.

"By Best Form in the Gates" we don't necessarily mean how she skis," said Mr. Smooth. "How she looks means just as much." Winning Best Form: the skimpily-clad Tim "Shaky" Hanagan, a Tootsie entrant. Shaky wore a form-fitting, well filled-out pink leotard over black fishnet stockings. A matching pink ribbon tied up "her" naturally blond curls, completing the body-hugging, albeit brief, ensemble.

Despite Wednesday's bright sunshine, racers still shivered in the shady start area. In true Cross Your Heart spirit, Florence Featherface lent Shaky her fur coat for "her" second run.

Speaking of Tootsies

Men may race in this all-women's event but only if dressed in drag. Judging this category proves a challenge.

"After all, you've got men judging men," said Mr. Smooth. "How easy can this be?"

Winning this ever-popular category, Tommy "Thomasina" Valiant in an all-black ensemble accented with black and white bikini bra and panties, gold chains and a curly black wig. Thomasina's perfect makeup and long lashes drew envious stares from females and lustful ogling from males.

"Her" runner-up: Raymond "Mescalero Mama" Sago. "She" appeared in a flirtatious number, a short blue skirt that flounced beneath a blue ruffled midriff. A curly blue wig that topped off the outfit led many to wonder what the cleaning staff was using for a mop.

One more award

"We changed Best Costume this year to Best Costume Stuck in a Chairlift," quipped Mr. Smooth. For as Penny "Ms Peanut" Mayo rode Chair 2 to the race course, her over-7-foot high top hat stuck in the overhead bar. Try as she might, she couldn't wiggle out at midway and had to ride all the way to the top to be extricated.

Honorable Mentions; the hatchet

They looked mah-velous, darling: Annemarie "Leopard Lady" Evans, Mary "Hot Mama" Evans, Pam "Florence Featherface" Topper, Jane "Rasta Mama" Callahan, Ericka "Wildcat" Martinez, Vicki "Sexy Zebra" Pate, Ann "Beach Bimbo" Garbowska, Carla "Panama Red" Grover, Clare "Ms. Darth Vader" Chastain, Pat "Patty Melt" Garbutt, and a bevy of other bedizened beauties.

Action Sport's Dave "Capitan Video" Anderson recorded the event for posterity—oops, posterity.

All entrants received Budweiser pins and a souvenir headband from Pro Ski Sports, each uniquely hand-painted by Pam Topper, Jane Terrel and Izumi Isherwood.

Ruidoso High's top students honored for academic achievements

The best of the best were honored Tuesday night at Ruidoso High School's Twelfth Annual Academic Awards Banquet. Parents, teachers and the school's top students filled the cafeteria, where a candlelight dinner was prepared and served by the Teapae Lounge.

Dub Williams, the ceremony's founder, gave the welcoming and closing remarks. Many award presenters had words of inspiration and praise for the high school students.

"Education is not something one gets," said English teacher Galen Farrington. "It is something one achieves."

The National Honor Society inducted 19 new members, students who had maintained a grade point average (GPA) of 3.5 or higher and who had demonstrated outstanding qualities in scholarship, character, leadership and service.

A total of 48 students received awards for achieving a grade point average between 3.5 and 3.7.

The freshman class honored 17 students; the sophomore class, 14; the junior class, seven; and the senior class, 10.

Twenty-six students made the principal's list (nine freshmen, six sophomores, seven juniors, 10 seniors) by making a GPA of 3.8 or above.

Junior class presenter Valerie Maldonado also made a surprise presentation to her father, Guillermo, in honor of his birthday.

All of these students participate in a number of extra-curricular activities and/or hold leadership positions. Principal Donnie Weems notes that keeping grades high while being involved in school activities is a tremendous accomplishment.

"I don't know how they do it," he said.

Senior Rosa Montelongo was presented with the Distinguished Warrior Award for her superior academic achievement and outstanding performance in extra-curricular activities.

Awarded for grade point averages of 3.5 to 3.7 were seniors Stephanie Haas, Nikki Hoffer, Gunner Johnson, Jennifer Miller, Rosa Montelongo, Mandy Parker, Brandy Pfeiffer, Tawnya Rawlings, Kristie Ryan and Jimmy Varnadore.

Juniors in that category were Jenny Ames, Jessica Arceola, Leah Brown, Forrest Green, Mandy Sodd, Cliff Wood and Lara Wozny.

Sophomores with GPAs of 3.5 to 3.7 included Amalia Baeza, Donna Cannella, Emily Carter, Rex Comanche, Heather DeBuck, Matthew Ensor, Shannon Gray, Cory Hood, Vicky Kresge, Melissa Miller, Aaron Osurez, Heather Stover, Jen Thomsen and Jason Wilson.

Freshmen recognized in that category were Pacasha Baldrige, Jennifer Bush, Alexander Eckert, Shari French, Dryler Hisel, Caleb Hull, Reynaldo Lopez, Erica Malis, Marissa Martinez, Matthew Mulholland, Ricky Overdorf, Jason Rascorn, Lindie Reynolds, Billy Rogge, Jimmy Stover, Kelly Stroud and

Rosa Montelongo received the Distinguished Warrior Award for her superior academic achievement and outstanding performance in extra-curricular activities. School board president Ronnie Hemphill and principal Donnie Weems (not shown) presented the award.

Robert Williams.

Those who made the Principal's List with a grade point average above 3.8 included seniors Jill Bailey, Jeanell Cox, Melissa Curran, Michelle Hasenbuhler, Montana Hisel, Jeremy Pinto, Crystal Taylor and Rachel Wong.

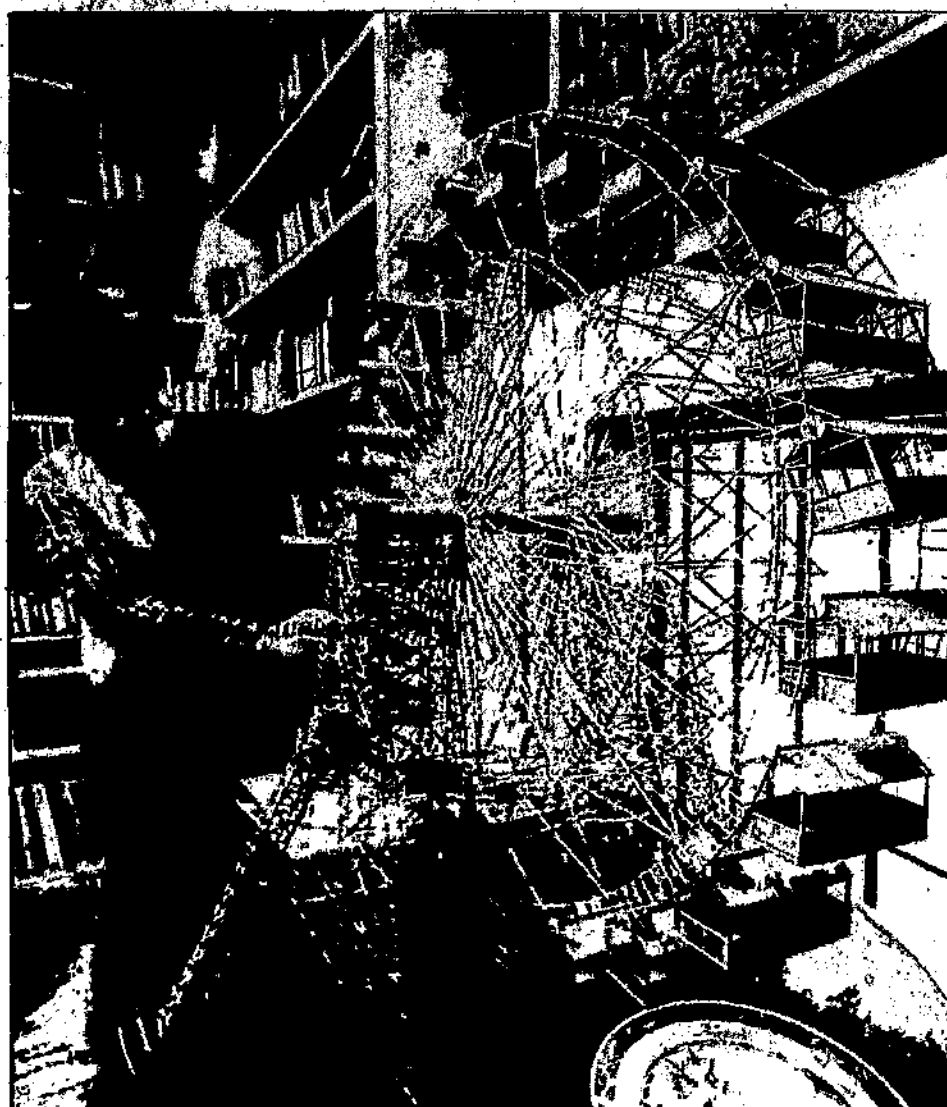

Juniors on the Principal's List include Brad Fox, Valerie Maldonado and Nuria Lanx-Cardenosa; with sophomores Kara Castañon, Lena Centeno, Nicole Coca, Kendra Eggleston, Timothy Skinner and Tony Trujillo.

Top freshmen include Amy Andrews, Steven Currin, Kristy Donaldson, Dawn Hightower, Stephen Houghton, Somer Paxton, Sneha Sharma, Heidi Streck and Shirryn Williams.

Ruidoso High School National Honor Society added 19 students to its membership Tuesday night at the academic awards banquet.

Gallery owner John Meigs, named one of the top 100 collectors in the country by Art and Antiques magazine in its March edition, examines a ferris wheel crafted out of toothpicks by an inmate of the state penitentiary in Maine. He discovered the replica of the 1893 Chicago ferris wheel in an attic. It's one of more than 100,000 items being sold in his estate sale, which ends Sunday, March 6, at the San Patricio Fort Meigs Gallery. His collection includes original paintings, signed graphics, drawings, old engraving and antique furniture, all reduced 20 to 50 percent.

RHS drama class performs comedy and tragedy

The masks of comedy and tragedy have come to life in tandem with the production of two high school plays this week, "Of Widows and Vegetables" and "King Oedipus."

With two casts and a heavy of stage hands, there are 41 students involved in these plays, all of whom traveled to Portales to perform in front of 550 teenagers at Eastern New Mexico University's Drama Festival, sponsored by the ENMU department of theater and dance.

Although the festival is not billed as a competition, the 23 participating schools may receive ratings ranging from Honorable Mention to Superior.

According to Ruidoso High School drama director Linda Currin, the play "Of Widows and Vegetables" received an Honorable Mention.

Junior Dylan Carusona won a Superior Acting award for his portrayal of Oedipus in the play

"King Oedipus," and senior Montana Hisel won an Excellent Acting award for her role as Harlequin in "Of Widows and Vegetables."

Currin said she normally does not send two plays to the festival, but her students requested it because this is Currin's final year as the high school drama instructor. She is returning to her career as a speech therapist.

Currin also said that the festival put a special emphasis on Greek plays this year and she was expecting a separate judging category for Greek plays. This did not materialize, however, apparently because ENMU's expert on the genre was absent due to a death in her family.

"Our judge for 'Oedipus' kept asking me why we did this or that, and I said it was because that's how Greek drama was done," she said.

"He said he didn't know much about Greek theater because he was a music major."

The judges for "Oedipus" criticized such classical conventions as excessive lateral use of the stage and letting the chorus remain on stage when they were not part of the action. To their credit, the judges did like the set, music and costumes. No Greek plays received a Superior rating.

Despite disappointments with the lack of recognition for "King Oedipus," Currin said her students were outstanding.

"King Oedipus" is a very difficult play and we had mostly sophomores and some freshmen and juniors taking it on," she said. "The kids did a great job."

Currin said "King Oedipus," written by Sophocles in the fifth century, is generally considered the foremost example of tragic irony. It is the story of the king of Thebes who is fated to murder his father and marry his mother. Oedipus' undoing comes from his own determination to solve the riddle of what curses his city.

On a lighter note, "Of Widows and Vegetables" is a spoof on Commedia dell'Arte, a professional Italian acting troupe of the Renaissance. This troupe carried no scripts, but had stock characters who delivered improvisations of whatever genre the town requested.

Tonight is the closing of Ruidoso High School's double feature. Each play runs about 50 minutes, and they are performed consecutively with a 15-minute intermission. Not only are these the final productions for Linda Currin, they are the last plays the seniors will perform.

Ticket prices are $5 for adults and $4 for students. Students with blue cards get in for $3.50, silver cards $3, and gold cards $2.50. For more details, call Linda Currin at 258-4910 after 12:45.

EDCLC conducts annual meeting, elects officers

Cheryl Pink, manager of Economic Development for Southwestern Public Service Company, made it clear to Lincoln County's economic development leaders that no matter how much the area has going for it in terms of beauty and resources, the future relies solely on the talents, energy and vision of people.

Pink was the guest speaker at the Annual Certificate Holders Meeting of the Economic Development Corporation of Lincoln County Thursday night at Cree Meadows Country Club.

As an extreme example of the power of determination, Pink told a story of a Texas ranching community that was statistically dead when the mayor sought her advice. She told him to take stock of what the community had to offer and do something with that. He called her back several weeks later and said, "Coyotes. We've got coyotes."

Despite his dismal situation, this mayor eventually managed to identify and attract industries that created a few jobs and saved his community from completely drying up and blowing away.

While Lincoln County has much more to sell than coyote fur, Pink stressed that the process of economic development is a slow and fickle thing.

For one thing, she said it's not a simple matter to get multiple special interest groups to reach consensus on economic development strategies and target markets.

In the 1980s, she said, towns had "godfathers" who could take a strong leadership position in building the town's future. These days economic power is fragmented into coalitions.

Pink also observed that tax payers and politicians don't like to wait for results.

"We're a microwave generation," she said. "But it takes an average of two years just for a prospective business to finalize the decision to relocate, then three to five years for the organization to get established. That's a long stretch for people who want their popcorn in 60 seconds."

Pink said that typically taxpayers get impatient after about one year and want to abandon the whole concept of economic development, or they decide the person in charge of economic development isn't doing his job.

"I am very impressed with Ruidoso," Pink said. She added that EDCLC's director Karen Kopp has brought leadership to the Business Quarter and that she makes a good presentation at trade shows.

Parents air gripes

by DIANNE STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

More of a feel-good sharing of gripes and concerns than offering any substantial solutions, a meeting Monday on discipline in the Capitan school system drew about 100 parents, students and school officials.

But when it was all over two hours later, high school principal Darrel Stierwalt walked away with a list of 36 parents and five students willing to put their time and efforts right behind their mouths.

Those who signed up have a chance to become part of devising real solutions by serving on committees and helping out at the high school. They heard the message repeated during the evening; the need for parent involvement, parent backing and parental emphasis on respect for others.

Stierwalt also was told ingredients missing from the current approach are consistency and respect.

"I take my hat off, because I was taught to respect ladies by my parents," Floyd Goodloe said. "What I'm hearing here is that (parents) would like to see a discipline policy with teeth and you and teachers uphold it. If you want to gain respect, you have to have something set up where (students) know you mean business and will stand by (the regulations). So they know what to expect."

"Now they think nothing really will happen. You can't do anything with these kids until they know where you're coming from."

Patsy Montoya cited the example of her daughter, who was given three days of detention. The first day, she was required to stay under supervision and perform certain duties, the second she was allowed to attend a sport event and the third day, she was allowed to do whatever she wanted.

Stierwalt later threw the consistency and respect complaint back into laps of the parents.

Noting that the board recently passed a no smoking campus policy, yet "when you go to a game, you see parents smoking by the fence. The kids see it and they see the parents ignoring the no smoking rule."

Sometimes school discipline rules aren't enforced, he admitted.

"I don't want to nail your child to the wall every time he steps out of line," Stierwalt said. "It would make my job easier if we could."

Why not make application of the rules cut and dried, a woman asked.

"It might not be best for the student," Stierwalt said. Eventually he can see which ones he has to "come down on," he said. But he added, all suggestions are appreciated.

"These are things we can bring to the discipline committee and then they can recommend action to the board," Stierwalt said. "We need your help as parents getting things back in control. I'm not telling you the school is out of control, especially within the last month. Teachers are back monitoring the hallways and restrooms. There's more visibility. The tardies have dropped almost to zero. We've done some things ourselves, but we feel there's more to be done.

"We need input from you and to listen what you have to say," Stierwalt told the crowd.

"We want to carry out the kind of discipline you want your children to have."

It's been three years since the system's discipline policy has been revised, he said. The world has changed during that period, even in the tightly-knit community of Capitan.

"The goal of the board and administration is to provide a safe orderly environment where learning can take place," he said. "Any time a teacher has to come off task to discipline a student, we have a problem."

"Whose problem is it, parents, teachers, students? One person in class can cause such a disruption that a teacher can't teach the other 30."

Fighting on campus and off is an offense now occurring that is new to the Capitan school district, Stierwalt said.

"Fighting off campus has been a problem the last couple of days," he said. "They're going across the street ... and settling their differences behind the fire station."

The students have learned that fighting on campus could result in suspension, but school officials have no direct authority off campus.

Parent Maggie Doyle said she contacted the police recently when her son allegedly was assaulted by some boys off campus.

Mrs. Doyle's son told the audience he was beaten up Thursday.

"If their parents are like my mother, she'll go and press charges (with the sheriff's department)," he said. "I feel if all after the school officials have tried to stop it and done all they can, then it's up to the parents to press charges."

Stierwalt said if fighting occurs on campus, both students can be charged with aggravated battery.

"So the district can use the legal system, too," he said.

Mrs. Doyle said she thinks the discipline policy has been selectively applied, giving breaks to the students who are harassing her son. She noted that the parent of one of the boys refused to attend a conference on the problem.

"If we could get all of them to sit down at one table, they'd see that I'm not so different and maybe, we could work together," she said.

One man asked whether closing the high school campus was being considered.

"Yes sir," Stierwalt said.

Capitan High School principal Darrel Stierwalt (left) briefs parents about the administration's discipline goals and asks for their help in coming up with solutions to new behavior problems plaguing the school district. About 100 parents, teachers and students attended the special meeting Monday. At right, parent Gene Wilson airs his complaints about past discipline problems and urges the superintendent and principal to mete out punishment and remove that authority from teachers. Seated at right is district superintendent Diana Sonnamaker.

Seventh and eighth graders already may not leave campus without written permission.

"That's what the committee recommended, but if we can't get it under control, we will have to consider closing the campus, but I don't like the idea of a guard checking the kids in and out."

"Going off campus to fight each day certainly is not a way to earn the privilege of an open campus."

Several methods of controlling students entering and exiting the campus were discussed, including issuing photo identification cards marked with information on the students' grade levels and designating those allowed to leave.

For non-serious offenses, Stierwalt said he starts off with a teacher-student lecture, the second time around involving the principal and the third time around involving the parents.

"Within the last two years, we came up with after school detention for 30 minutes, which can be for as many days as necessary to get that student's attention," Stierwalt said.

Each teacher now is responsible for handling his/her own detention periods.

Started within the last three weeks since the last school board meeting, in-school suspension (ISS) is another alternative.

"We're fortunate to have a superintendent who realizes the need and has put money in to start this, and out budget is tight," Stierwalt said. It provides a unique opportunity to keep students in-school, yet isolate them from the social atmosphere of the school. They stay in isolation doing homework, eating, even for breaks.

"They don't want to go back to ISS, because of the isolation," Stierwalt said. "We've hired a substitute who makes sure they do their homework and stay on task."

Suspension from school is a last resort.

"Across the county, schools are having problems with suspensions, because it means we're not doing our job if we resort to that," Stierwalt said. "It's hard to educate if kids are out of school. They don't want to be there and we're giving them a reward for misbehaving."

Students suspended from school are delivered a double whammy, because they cannot make up the work missed and receive zeros. They avoid those consequences with in-school suspensions and detention.

Gene Wilson, who acknowledged that his grandson has been disciplined on many occasions, said he disagrees with the teachers being able to hand out punishments, because sometimes they are biased against a student.

When a student perceives that bias, it only aggravates the situation, he contended.

"I don't want a teacher to tell me he's out of here if he doesn't straighten up, I want to hear that from the principal or the superintendent."

He urged more communication among parents, students, teachers and the administration.

Robyn Armenta said she sometimes gets the impression teachers just don't want to listen.

"I've been down here twice on things connected to my son and the teachers act like I'm taking up their time," she said. "They start shuffling papers. That's not right."

"I've experienced the same thing," Wilson agreed. "The teachers did not have time to come and talk to me after I drove all the way over."

Mrs. Doyle, who said she has lived in Capitan since 1981, said teachers have a responsibility to the other students in class and she's tired of disruptive children making it difficult for the rest.

Parent Ervin Aldaz also stuck up for the students who don't get into trouble.

"They feel harassed by restrictive policies developed to take care of (disruptive students)," he said.

LeeAnn Longbotham complimented Stierwalt on his handling of a situation with her child.

She said parents should be called by teachers when their children are doing well, not just when something is going wrong.

Other parents agreed, including librarian Becky Borowski, who suggested naming a student of the week and other rewards to encourage good performance and behavior.

Stierwalt said less than five percent of parents respond to discipline reports on their children.

Several parents replied that the reports arrive too late, long after the punishment has occurred.

School buses aren't immune to the problem, said transportation contractor Frank Silva.

"We can't tolerate much for safety reasons," Silva said. "I would just ask the parents to help us with that. Obviously, we don't do everything right either. Our jobs are to get the kids safely to school."

"I've spent a lot of time calling parents and the rules also are handed out at beginning of the year."

Bus driver Cindy Fogelson said it would help if she knew what kids with problems will be riding her bus "instead of having to discover that for ourselves."

To date, the dress code hasn't been a big issue, but that may change with the fascination of students with gang-related clothing, Stierwalt said.

Darlene Bobb said dressing with respect for themselves would encourage students also to respect others.

Mozie Sparks, manager of the Double S video store, "It's the parents that are the problem for most part. The ones that are the real problems are not here. When my kids are in trouble, I want to know about it and I don't want them to get any special treatment."

Stierwalt said counselor Birgit LaMothe will be offering local classes on parenting next spring and many parents may find some help there.

Gerald Montes urged school officials not to allow students to transfer into the district, who have been suspended at another school.

"We don't have to take them," he said.

The district does have to accept them, if they live within their boundaries, even if they have chosen to attend other schools in the past. The district extends all the way to White Mountain Road at the outskirts of Ruidoso.

Stierwalt said he calls on students transferring to find out if they have past discipline problems and, at the direction of superintendent Diana Sonnamaker.

The meeting ended on a humorous note when Renee Cupit said she has a special gripe related to trying to set curfews for her oldest child.

"She's always telling me that everybody else's parents allow them to stay out later," Cupit said. "Well, if you're the parents of everybody else, I've had it with you."

State Legislature funds Fort Stanton changes

by DIANNE STALLINGS

Ruidoso Staff Writer

The Santa Fe green back gods smiled last month and showered Fort Stanton Hospital and Training Center with the dollars it needed to retrofit and survive.

Just three years ago, the hospital faced extinction. Now administrator Ervin Aldaz is directing the remodeling of cottages to handle long-term nursing care patients.

The developmentally disabled (DD) clients, who have been the focus of care at the center for more than a decade, are being placed in community settings in compliance with a court order.

"At this point, we've taken a (DD) population of 155 at our maximum and reduced it to 108," Aldaz said Tuesday. "Out of those, we're expected to place 13 more by July 1. The remainder will be in new settings by July 1, 1995 and then we will be out of the DD business."

Meanwhile, remodeling of Eddy Cottage is under way, adding individual bathrooms, a nurse call system and privacy curtains.

Because those changes will take up more space, the number of patients housed in the building will go down from 25 to 18, Aldaz said.

"We'll be ready to start admitting patients May 1," he said.

Exactly what type of patients will be filling all the new beds still is undecided.

"I'll be sitting down March 8 with my new boss from long-term care (division of the Department of Health) to firm up details," Aldaz said. "We'll start with 15 referrals needing general nursing to get the doors open and then go to the specialties to meet the needs of the state and she knows those pressures."

Remodeling along similar lines also is occurring in Hidalgo Cottage, where the patient population will drop from 18 to 18 beds. It may be used short term for the remaining DD clients.

The State Legislature handed the fort most of its capital improvement requests and a $1-million supplemental budget to help as it loses DD patient revenues and before it is fully geared up to collect reimbursements on long term care patients, Aldaz said.

With the help of State Representatives H. John Underwood (D-Ruidoso) and Richard T. Knowles (R-Roswell), State Senator Pete Campos (D-Santa Rose) and Governor Bruce King, $213,600 was allocated for the remodeling of the Sierra Cottage, a two story building.

"That will start this summer as long as we have space to move individuals around," Aldaz said. "The two 30-bed units will drop to 25 each as additional individual bathrooms are added."

The governor put us in his priority package and our representatives gave us a lot of support."

Remodeling of Sacorro Cottage was approved for $268,000.

"So all of the units have money," he said. "That was the final one to be converted, plus they gave us $193,000 for repair and renovation of a recreational facility, to make improvements for ADA (Americans and Disabilities) compliance. We're doing that on all cottages, adding lots of new doors and handicap accommodations."

"The legislature recognized that the supplemental budget was needed to finish out the year and gave the money to keep staffing levels up."

By keeping the staff at existing or slightly higher levels, a cushion is created for Aldaz to start training individuals in long term care.

Fourteen individuals will be going into nursing training for long term care. When they return, another group will be rotated out for training. In the future, Aldaz said he sees the possibility of the fort becoming a training facility and service provider for the Southeast region.

Meanwhile, services for DD residents still at the fort and required in a court order, must be provided and incident management maintained to keep people safe, Aldaz said.

When the court first ordered the removal of DD patients from the fort, one of the major concerns was the lack of group homes or other facilities to take them.

In solving that problem, Aldaz said he had to give a great deal of credit to out-of-state organizations that have come into New Mexico to provide some group homes and semi-independent living situations.

"They (clients) match up with a housemate and hire the staff to come in and give them the support services so that new group homes weren't needed," Aldaz said.

With the fort's new role also may come a new name, according to the administrator.

"We're looking at the possibility of a name change, maybe Fort Stanton Living Center."

Tigers tame Bobcats

Superb defense bolstered the Capitan Tigers in their 63 to 26 drubbing of the Hagerman Bobcats last Friday in Capitan.

"Any time a high school team can hold their opponent under 40 points for a game, they have played excellent defense," said Tiger coach Ron Becker.

The win advanced the Tigers to the District 5A Championship game hosted in Loving on February 26.

Hagerman actually led the Tigers after the first quarter 9 to 6. The Tigers regrouped for the second quarter and with a hot shooting hand, took a 20-16 lead into the locker room.

Becker then instructed the Tigers to break the Bobcats in the second half with a knockout full court press followed by a tight zone to force outside shooting.

Hagerman could only manage 10 points for the entire second half, while Capitan pierced the nets for 33 points.

The Tigers were less fortunate after their trip to Loving.

The Falcon-Tiger game was a barn burner with the scores flip flopping between teams.

The Tigers, after a few shots missed off the glass and a turnover, found themselves 10 points down with four minutes left in the fourth quarter.

Michael Fish led the Tigers in an incredible comeback, scoring 13 points in the final frame.

With less than 10 ticks left on the clock, the Falcons were protecting a two-point lead.

Jamil Mahboub's dump pass to Trevor Cox on the low post forced a power lay up and Cox delivered as time expired, sending the game into overtime.

The energy for the comeback appeared to take some of the steam out of the Tigers, and the Falcons were able to penetrate Capitan's powerful defense scoring eight points in the extra frame to the Tigers one, leaving Loving champions of District 5A.

Capitan is scheduled to play the Carrizozo Grizzlies on March 4 in the State Region D tournament.

The Tiger boys ended the regular season and district play with a 16-8 winning record.

Becker said that this Tiger team is the only team since 1984 to advance to the Sweet 16 with a winning record.

"This is definitely the best team Capitan has seen in a decade," Becker said.

Trevor Cox, Jamil Mahboub and Michael Fish were named to the District All Star Team for their excellent play during the season.

Capitan sports writers Phillip Koreny and Travis Jaquess contributed to this report.

Storm brothers present "Picture Tales from Mexico"

Dan Storm and his brother, artist Mark Storm, are offering a limited number of their book, "Picture Tales from Mexico," for sale.

"Every tale in this book is a genuine Mexican folk tale," says Storm in the foreword to the book.

But, since folk tales are passed down orally from one generation to another, these stories, as told by Storm, take on the lyrical quality of all his work.

"I have heard these tales during the years of my association with Spanish-speaking people both in Mexico and the southwestern part of the United States," says Storm.

"In each story I have tried to catch the spirit of the tale as it was told to me," he adds.

Mark Storm captures that spirit, too, in his 38 black and white drawings throughout the paperback book.

The Storm brothers, who lived in Mexico for awhile as children before the family settled in the Hondo Valley, combined their writing and artistic talents in a charming book filled with children's tales that are loved by adults, too.

"Picture Tales from Mexico" is available at The Ruidoso News, the Aspen Tree and the Old Mill. Cost of the book is $12.95 each.

Dan Storm, the poet laureate of Lincoln County, holds up copies of his book, "Picture Tales from Mexico." Storm penned the folk tales he learned from his Spanish-speaking friends and his brother, Mark Storm, did the illustrations, including the one at left of Rabbit and Coyote. Copies of the book are available at The Ruidoso News.

Silver Lining

Early signs tell tales of spring's arrival

Small signs of spring

On the evening of the twenty-fourth, the full moon appeared over Sunrise Mountain so pale it was almost white, just after the sun had gone down over the western hill, turning all the sky a light hazy gold. So here we had moonlight in broad daylight.

As the gloaming, turned to twilight and then the dusk, the moon turned pale silver, light gold and full gold.

In the darkness of night the moon was surrounded by a ring of pearl and rainbow colors.

Then on the night of the twenty-sixth the moon came up after dark, a shining golden medallion casting a cheerful glow over all the mountain land, surrounded by a circle of pure green.

Early the morning of the twenty-seventh the moon was just going down in the west, just as the sun was lightly up the horizon of sunrise; and casting the top of the western hill in a glow of pink light.

It had not frozen last night and the morning air was mild and fragrant.

You had the feeling that "something was in the air."

And sure enough this day was a turning point in the year. Later in the day the temperature went up to seventy-two.

The weeping willows have turned golden; the Chinese elms have put out their little spangles that appear just before the leaves.

And the cottonwoods and giant willows are beginning to bud.

That "something in the air" was a little message that spring is on the way. There is an old saying that weather changes follow the full moon.

The birthday month says adios and farewell

And now here it is early morning on February 28, the last day of the birthday month.

True to the predictions of the full moon, the sun came up over Sunrise Mountain shining down upon the vale, all fragrant from a light rain which had fallen during the night.

Now the light clouds are floating through the morning sky giving us a day of sunshine, light rain and cloud color pageants — just the perfect way for the celebration of the birthday of our brother, Joe, and for saying "adios" and farewell to a wonderful birthday month.

Club hosts oratorical contest

The Optimist Club of Ruidoso will host an Oratorical Contest for area teens at 6:30 p.m. Tuesday, March 8, at Cree Meadows Country Club in the North Forty.

The contest begins at 7 p.m. Everyone is invited and welcome to attend.

Fourteen area school students, ages 12 to 16, will compete using the theme, "Optimism: the Right Stuff."

Three judges will score the contestants. Winners, a girl and a boy, will then go on to compete in the Optimist Club's New Mexico-West Texas District zone and district competitions.

According to a news release provided by the Optimist Club, the experience that the children will gain during this will stay with them through their entire life.

"They are going to learn two important things," reads the release. "First, they will get in front of people to speak publicly. This experience is like learning to ride a bicycle; once learned it is never forgotten."

"Second, the audience will be primarily an older generation, not just their peers. They will communicate with the audience and discover that older people do listen."

Dinner will be available and semi-formal wear is suggested. For reservations and more information, call Gail Dix at Cree Meadows Country Club, 257-9186.

State gets money for minerals

The state of New Mexico collected $141,850,756 as its 1993 share of revenues associated with mineral leases on federal public lands, ranking it second in the nation in money received.

According to an announcement from the Department of the Interior's Minerals Management Service (MMS), the money represents the state's share of bonuses, rents and royalties.

Wyoming collected the highest check, $197,132,818 out of the total $510.6-million paid to the 37 states participating in the department's Royalty Management Program.

Arizona brought in $94,069, California about $25.4-million, Colorado about $24.3-million and Utah, $31.3-million.

The service is responsible for collecting, accounting for, auditing and disbursing revenues associated with mineral leases on federal and Indian lands.

"A state is entitled to a share of the mineral revenues collected from federal lands located within that state's boundaries," explained MMS director Tom Fry.

Disbursements are sent out on a monthly basis as revenues are collected.

Artist Peter Rogers pursues his lifelong quest

Somehow talk of a quest, visions and revelation through images seems appropriate coming from the self-effacing Englishman dressed in a comfortable brown sweater.

Peter Rogers' dedication and intensity reminds visitors to his studio in the Hurd-Wyeth family complex at San Patricio of the days of nobility of heart and the search for the Holy Grail.

Rogers has spent most of his painting career following his private quest. One of his series on that journey in oils will be the centerpiece of his exhibition, which will run March 5-27 at the Hurd-La Rinconada Gallery off U.S. 70 in Hondo Valley.

"Because Rogers' concern is the communication of insight about enduring human values, his paintings are refreshingly accessible," writes Jose Arguelles, Ph.D. in the introduction to Rogers' book, A Painter's Quest, Art as a Way of Revelation.

"At the same time, however, they are haunting and often ominously powerful."

He likens Rogers' work to that of 19th century English visionary painter William Blake, noting that both produce works as "a reaction against the warped materialism of the age."

Other words that surface in describing Rogers' work include "innocence" and "harmony."

Fortunately, even without guidance from Rogers on the symbolism behind his figures, the casual viewer is able to enjoy his paintings for their color, form and composition.

Born in London in 1933, Rogers said there were no artists in his family, although his maternal grandfather, Harry Marillier, was the leading authority in Europe on tapestries, supervising restorations of tapestries in Buckingham Palace.

"For some inexplicable reason, I always knew I would be a painter," Rogers said. "One of my first memories, I was being wheeled by my nanny in (a stroller) and we were crossing a bridge over Regents Canal in Regents Park and I saw a woman sitting at a portable easel painting the canal. Almost the very first thing I can ever remember thinking was one day I will be a famous painter like Shakespeare."

The name may have been wrong, but the intent was clear.

Educated at Sherborne, Rogers said, "The only way I distinguished myself at all was in the art school. I had a very good teacher and she certainly encouraged me the most in art. I liked working in pen and ink in great detail."

One of his early works, the Gothic-looking, but startlingly precise, "Man Crossing Bridge," was produced at age 16 and was loaded with his private symbolism of the path between the security of where the man has been and the dangerous unknown of where he is headed.

At that point, Rogers said he also was beginning to paint in oils.

His career path was interrupted with two years of national service in the Army and then he faced a decision for his future.

"My parents sort of mildly resisted the idea (of becoming an artist)," Rogers said. "They wanted me to stay in the Army and be a professional soldier. Before that they had wanted me to take up architecture, a respectable job with some sort of an assured income.

"They finally said if I got a scholarship, I could go to art school and I did, to St. Martin's School of Art in London. It was a four year course, but after two years, by that time I had fallen in love with a ballet dancer and wanted to get married and I knew I had to start making a living."

He left school in 1956 at the age of 23, married and moved with his first wife to Monte Carlo, where she was a contract dancer with a company.

"In 1956, I had just left art school and I saw the first photographs that had been publicized of the Shroud of Turin, which absolutely knocked me for a loop," Rogers said. "The first thing I did when we settled into our apartment was to embark on this enormous crucifixion, which was a strange thing to do in that setting. I got a couple of the male dancers to model for me. These poor men suspending themselves from beams."

"I had a sort of a plan, which was extremely naive, that this painting would be a masterpiece and I would have it in the Royal Academy and it would make me my name."

He finished the 10-foot painting in 1957, crated and shipped it to London to meet a May deadline for submission to the Academy, then he followed to construct the frame.

"I hung around in London waiting to hear whether it was accepted or rejected," Rogers said. "I mean everything depended on this because both my parents and my in-laws thought it was most stupid and impractical. Who'd ever want a painting of the crucifixion. This was thoroughly irresponsible and so forth. But if it was accepted by the Academy, I would vindicated."

"Well, it wasn't accepted and I went back to Monte Carlo with my tail between my legs."

Before he left, Rogers had arranged with a vicar to hang the huge painting in the church he attended.

"I had been back in Monte Carlo a couple of weeks or so and a letter arrived and it was from the President of the Royal Society of British Artists, who unknown to me, was a member of the congregation," Rogers said. "And he said could he have it for his summer exhibition. Furthermore, he wanted to propose my name for membership in the society, not as an associate member, but as a full member.

"I was thunderstruck. My name would be Peter Roger, RBS. So my plan worked in a very unexpected way and my impracticality had paid off. When I returned to London, I had some sort of status."

In 1960, the large painting became part of his first one-man show in the old Saxon crypt of a well-known local church.

"No gallery had been interested," Rogers said. "I had made the rounds and been rebuffed right and left. I hadn't really found my direction in painting and wouldn't until 1971."

"There was no real publicity, I just put a sign on the sidewalk and people would wander in on their lunch hour. That show was another miracle. The very last day of the show, this smartly dressed young man came in and looked around and finally introduced himself and said, 'I'm one of the directors of The Tooth and Sons, which in those days, was literally one of the top galleries, so grand that I hadn't even thought of showing my work there. And he asked if I would be interested in Tooth's handling my work, which they did and with extraordinary success, I might say.'"

Because it took a team of men to hang the heavy crucifixion, Rogers decided to store it between the always closed shutters and the stained glass windows of his studio. All of the light flooded down through a glass ceiling.

"So you couldn't see (the painting) from the outside or inside and there it remained for many years, long after we left there. I didn't tell anyone it was there," Rogers said.

After his divorce, "I went to Spain, I met Carol there and followed her to America in 1963, and married a year later. I hadn't been here many years when I got a telegram one morning from a sculptor friend of mine saying this patron of his offered 500 pounds for my crucifixion. My first wife had told my friend where the painting was and he had taken this patron around to that studio."

"No one had ever opened the shutters and there was the crucifixion, which was finally sold and what he's done with it I really don't know."

Tooth's exhibited Rogers' work in mixed exhibitions with well-known painters of that decade.

"I didn't have a one man show until 1966, which did OK," Rogers said. "I sold 21 pictures."

But due to the expense of shipping the work and the bad rate of exchange, that was the last of his shows in Europe.

Rogers said he began to "find" his painting style in 1970, several years after moving to New Mexico, although it began with that first crucifixion.

"For instance, the three giants (in one of his more recent quest series) originally were three Roman soldiers casting lots for the robe by Christ, but they've become something very different," he said.

In later pieces they represent the Three Lords of Materialism; mind, speech and form.

Pictured as a trio in earlier quest paintings, often in the negative sense, they now have been joined in many paintings by three women, representing the Three Muses of Greek myth; meditation, memory and song.

The comet, or fireball, which frequently appears in his paintings, is Rogers' symbol for God. A sense of separation from that God equates to evil in his work.

Rogers said his imagery has proven crucial to his work from the beginning.

"It began evolving right after I left art school," he said. "Although I didn't know what I was doing and didn't understand the images until much later."

But while he continued painting from the images inside, Rogers also busied himself with commissions for portraits and landscapes.

"This was a juggling act that continues to this day," he said.

"When I first came to the United States, I spent most of my time doing landscape and portrait commissions. Atlantic Richfield (R.O. Anderson) sent me to Alaska twice to do 50 paintings and drawings in the oil fields." He produced murals of the history of Texas that hang in the State Archives Building in Austin.

"I can do that sort of stuff," Rogers said. "I did quite a lot of on the spot drawings in Alaska in sub-zero temperatures. I tell you, I paid my dues."

"I've actually had two careers running side by side. One to make a living until more and more I have been able to make a living from the other. In the last few years, I've done very little commission work."

The technical perfection and commanding composition of his oil field work transcends mere industrial art and can stand as a worthwhile creative body of work.

Almost chameleon-like, Rogers can adapt his style to the demand of the moment and also has created more traditional Western scenes. He has moved from monochromatic to deeper and multiple color, from intense detail to dreamy simplicity.

Rogers said he fit right into San Patricio and his wife's way of life in New Mexico.

"My father in law (artist Peter Hurd) was immensely helpful (in getting his career moving in the United States) and Robert Anderson gave me my first commission, a series of landscape drawings of his ranch."

But The Quest has always been present.

"This main theme has always carried through, even when I was spending a lot of time on commission work," Rogers said. "They've evolved over the years and I hope they continue to evolve."

Rogers said besides Blake, his work has been influenced by the early Italians, such as Piero Della Francesca.

When he faces a canvas, "the subject usually comes out of the paint," Rogers said. "My images have never been thought up. They come in all sorts of funny ways, but usually out of the paint. I'll start with abstract messes. If I'm sort of in the seeing mode, which isn't always the case, I find an image and then it's a case of doing as little as possible to pull the image out. The abstract mess always is much more beautiful than anything I could have done deliberately."

"So there's nothing clever about it. 'The Bathers' I like particularly because it was all there and I stopped work on it in the nick of time."

Rogers said he paints in solitude, "except when I've done my commission work like drawing 23 Indian trading posts on the Navajo and Hopi reservations. I'd always have about 30 people crowding around, always an audience, but you get used to it."

Of his Quest images, he said, "I just try to do it better and when a new image pops up, it pops up. If I can find ways to make it pack more of a punch or make it more subtle, just so it's better. A lot of these images, I've done over and over and over again."

He previously has exhibited most of his work in Santa Fe (where he lived from 1975-83 and their son Peter now has a gallery), but he also has shown several times in Dallas and San Francisco.

"Writing the book has helped enormously in getting my work known across the country," Rogers said. His Painter's Quest book was published in 1987 and is about to go into its third edition.

"I've had an awful lot of feedback from that book and it should get another lease on life, because it's been sold to another publisher who will be in a much better position to market it."

Rogers said he maintains a steady work schedule at his studio, only interrupted when he's writing, "which I find incredibly difficult, but almost obsessive."

Besides the book, he has produced catalogs for his exhibitions and for lectures, "trying to answer all the questions before they're asked."

Rogers' work currently is exhibited at ACA Gallery in New York, "a first rate gallery and comparable to Tooth's," he said.

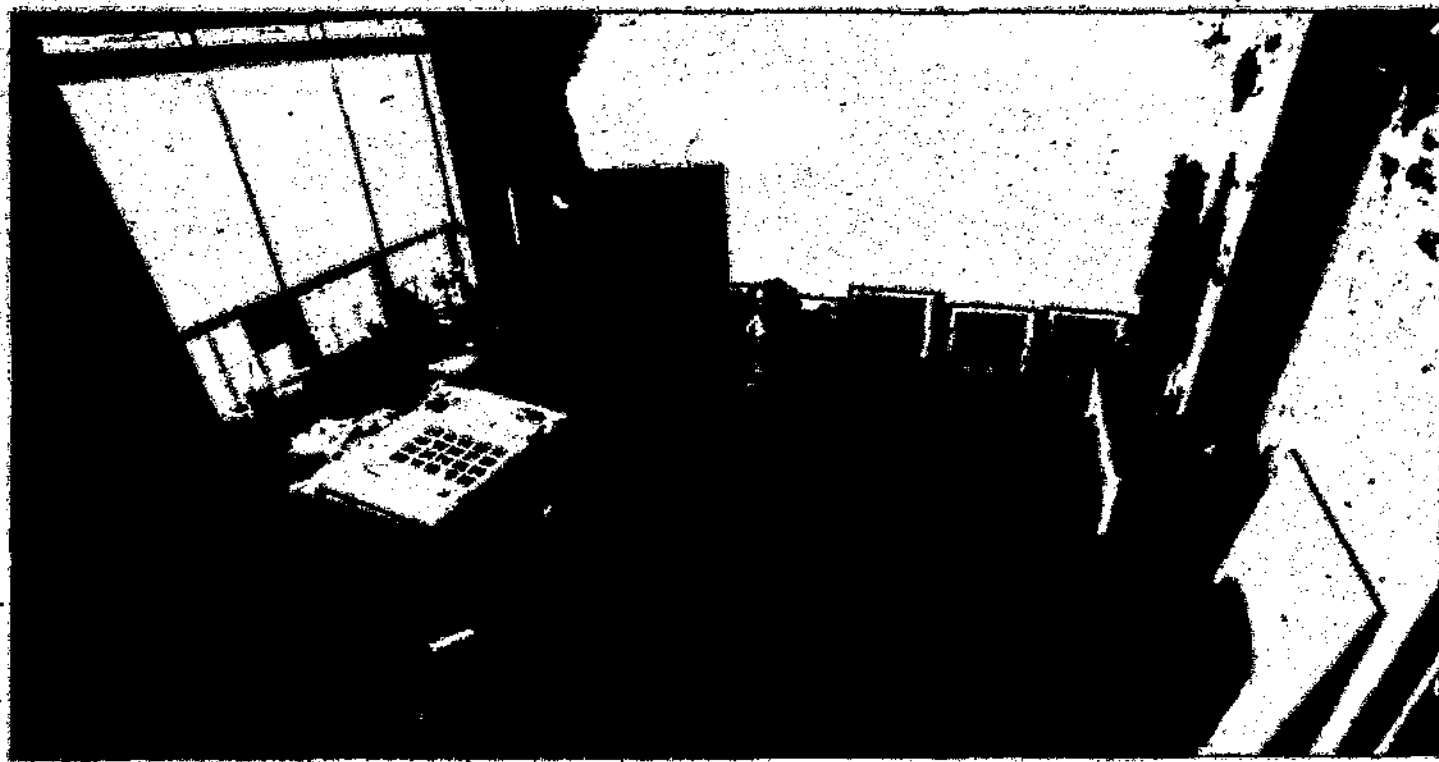

Occasionally, a painting has been hung in Peter's Santa Fe gallery with work by other members of the famous Hurd-Wyeth family.

"But mine doesn't fit in well with the rest of the family," he said. He and his artist wife, Carol, have a son, David, a painter in Chicago; and a daughter, Gabriela, who has not pursued art.

Rogers' exhibit, "Images from the Quest," will be shown at the Hurd-La Rinconada Gallery in San Patricio starting Saturday, March 5, as part of the gallery's first annual Rogers exhibit.

Space will dictate the number of pieces, but the centerpiece will be 11 paintings that are part of a set of 20 telling the story of the Quest for Enlightenment. The other paintings in the series are hung in the ACA Gallery.

Rogers will give a gallery lecture and slide show at 2 p.m. Sunday. The exhibition will continue through March 27.

The view from the balcony of Rogers' studio at San Patricio (at right) shows the light and space, which helps him create the gentle colors that distinguish many of his works. Rogers sits at his draft table (above) in front of one of his favorites, "The Bathers," finished in 1991.

Piercing eyes of American Horse search the visitor entering the gallery. American Horse, at 600 pounds with base, is no one to be pushed around easily.

American Horse stands guard at Museum

Visitors to the Museum of the American Horse will now be met by American Horse, a monumental sized bronze crafted by local artist Dave McGary, internationally known for converting his knowledge of Native Americans into bigger than life size bronze sculptures. Born Mamshes, meaning Cannot Walk, American Horse took the name and title of his uncle killed in a battle at Slim Butte, South Dakota, in 1876. While American Horse was not particularly distinguished in battle, he was marvelously witty and clever and thus earned the position of chief. McGary was intrigued with American Horse because he advocated negotiations when the traditional celebrated traits of bravery began to lose their effectiveness. During the fateful Ghost Dance Movement of 1890-91, American Horse remained true to his character. He carefully investigated the movement and decided it was not good. He took his people to the Pine Ridge reservation where they escaped bloody massacre at Wounded Knee. Two months later, he headed a Sioux delegation to Washington, lobbying for better treatment of his people. American Horse died at Pine Ridge, South Dakota, on December 16, 1908, a well-known respected counselor of the people.

Leaders look to the future

The voters have spoken and villages throughout Lincoln County can turn their attention from elections to the future. Almost half of Ruidoso's eligible voters went to the polls Tuesday to cast their ballots in favor of a progressive slate of officials.

Ruidoso voters turned thumbs down on efforts by a few to sidetrack the village with a return to the old negative non-growth attitudes that took control of village hall four years ago. Last ditch negative campaigning by a fringe group with ties to that old administration failed to win votes for the group's choices and may even have lost them votes.

Campaigning on a "back-to-basics" platform with an emphasis on infrastructure, cleanliness, open government and progress, Mayor Jerry Shaw was elected to a full four years in the office to which she was appointed. We applaud Mayor Shaw for running an effective campaign that informed voters of her past record and lined out her hopes and dreams for the future. Voters didn't leave their choice for mayor on her own, though; for they chose a progressive slate of councilors who campaigned on the future, not the past — congratulations to Joe Gomez, Frank Potter, Leon Eggleston and Robert Donaldson.

Voters in Ruidoso saw their past and future as they drove to the new Ruidoso Convention and Civic Events Center to vote. Four years ago that center was only a dream developed during Mayor Lloyd Davis's administration, but on Tuesday voters drove past the beautiful Links at Sierra Blanca Golf Course to vote in the beautiful center on land that would still be a weedy unused air strip if it were not for progressive elected officials like Mayor Davis and his administration.

The dream is not finished yet, and we predict that under Mayor Shaw's leadership the value and beauty of the new golf course and civic center, as well as this entire village, will soon be enhanced by a resort hotel on that property.

Now, we're back to the future!

Letters To The Editor

Handicapped parking regs should be enforced

TO THE EDITOR:

I am writing to put my support behind Larry Vern Brady and his letter about the abuse of handicapped parking spaces which was published in The Ruidoso News February 17.

I must disagree with him on one point only — the people who use these spaces when they are not entitled to, are not stupid and they probably can read. The problem as I see it is that they are self-centered and lazy.

With a large majority of the American public being overweight, physically unfit and dropping like flies from coronary artery disease, it certainly wouldn't hurt us to get the extra exercise involved in parking at the farthest spaces away from the store and walking.

I think it is rude and despicable for a non-handicapped person to use these designated spaces.

Therefore, I will join Mr. Brady in taking down license numbers and reporting these people to the police whenever I see it occur.

Now, I have another issue that I would like to address. It seems to me that the recently passed village ordinance requiring mandatory spaying/neutering of pets is not being very aggressively enforced.

Perhaps, you would consider doing an article on this subject for those of us who are interested in knowing just what is being done to enforce this ordinance.

For instance, when someone advertises puppies/kittens to be sold or given away in this paper; does the animal control officer seek these people out and verify that they have a valid, current breeders permit? Twice last summer, I called the police to report people in both the Wal-Mart and Furr's parking lots trying to sell or give away puppies and I wonder ... were those people given a citation and/or fined as they should have been?

It didn't do any of us any good to work to get the ordinance passed if it is not going to be actively enforced and it certainly isn't helping our friends in the animal kingdom.

So, how about it? Has even one citation been given or one fine imposed. I'd like to know.

We should provide kids a place to skateboard

TO THE EDITOR:

I was too busy to write last week, but I do have an issue that I truly believe needs to be discussed.

Our young people need the community's help and attention. I don't know if our more mature citizens have noticed, but the young people here have nothing to do but hang out at "Free Parking," the corner Allsup's or Sonic. Most of them don't have the extra money to go to Funtraxers or Y-Knot Park. How many times can you ride a go-cart or play miniature golf?

I remember when I was young. We hiked, fished, rode our bikes and skateboarded on the city sidewalks. My children hike, fish and try to skateboard, but the city won't let them on the sidewalks.

A great majority of Ruidoso's young people are what they refer to as "skaters." They are not gang members or bad kids, but our local police seem to think they are. They are young people trying to grow up in a difficult world and a changed society. I have three sons and a daughter, ages 13 to 20. I have raised them to be law abiding and honest to themselves and their community.

I have also encouraged loyalty to family and friends.

My children are not any different than yours. They make mistakes and choose the wrong friends, just like many of our local police did when they were growing up.

The fact is, though, they are just trying to grow up as best they can.

An incident occurred the other night with several of the skaters and the police. The skaters, including my 17-year-old son, were skating in the construction area of the new sidewalks in Midtown. Several of the police arrived and, because of one particular young man's lack of parental upbringing and personal attitude toward the police, all of the young people were harassed.

Now, I did not check this out, I do have a tendency to believe my children but the police were involved. After hearing from the police and talking to the rest of the kids involved I have decided the skaters are being more truthful.

I have rambled long enough. My point is that because the kids are being harassed by our local police they are going to Alamogordo to skateboard where they won't be harassed.

We are driving our young people away! This is the worst thing any community could do.

They need our support, they need our understanding, most of all, the need a place they can exercise and do what they enjoy doing.

The big argument I will get is the city cannot afford the insurance. I say, "what a crock!" The city can draft a waiver and post signs stating non-responsibility for accidents.

If we don't stop pushing our children away, we will be a community without the young and without their future.

Larry Vern Brady

EDITOR'S NOTE: A good place for young people to get together for exercise is in the school sports programs for football, basketball, volleyball, cross country, track, wrestling, golf, tennis, soccer, and in little league-type or private programs that include skiing, baseball, gymnastics, karate, basketball, soccer, volleyball and dance. Parks and rec offers various programs, as well as "open gym." Kids who don't mind supervised recreation have plenty of choices.

Thanks for the memories; Olympics were best ever

TO THE EDITOR:

Last night a window to what civilized man could be, was closed. The winter Olympics flame went out.

The wonderful culture and people of Norway drop from our daily screen. I will miss these nightly contacts with a spiritually elevating people, culture and country.

The athletes reached to a higher level of physical and cultural refinement. It was a wonderful experience for all who watched. A fond memory permanently etched.

After the closing ceremonies from Norway, the nightly news came on. I quickly returned to the reality of where I was. Unfortunately, there will be no more broadcasts from Lillehammer before you retire for the night.

This was the best Olympics ever, what an enriching memory, thank you Norway.

and basketball. He has worked hard to earn good grades in his 8th grade classes but would rather be doing things outdoors. He is often helpful with chores, particularly those he can do outside of the house.

Maria, 16, born on January 27, 1977, is cooperative young lady who is always willing to help her foster mother around the house. She has done well in school this year, but, like most teenagers, prefers to spend time with her friends. She would like to be able to become more involved in school activities and go to dances.

What is most remarkable about these three is the love and caring they show for each other. They've been in the same foster home for more than a year so there will be some feelings of loss when they leave this family. Although their past includes abusive experiences, they don't seem to be in need of therapy at this time. Financial assistance may be available to help cover the cost of therapy if needed in the future.

The family that can meet Jessica, Manuel and Maria's needs will be rewarded with three very smart and caring children. A single or two parent Hispanic family is needed. They should be able to understand the children's past experiences and have the ability to deal with adolescent behavior. The children prefer to remain in New Mexico.

Hurd-La Rinconada presents first Peter Rogers exhibit

On Campus

The Hurd-La Rinconada Gallery announces the opening of its first Peter Rogers exhibit, "Images from the Quest," at 2 p.m. Sunday, March 6, at the gallery next to the polo field in San Patricio.

Rogers, who was born in London, England, August 24, 1933, will give a gallery talk at 2 p.m. Sunday, March 6.

Rogers is the first painter in his family, but not the first with close ties to the art world. His maternal grandfather, Harry Marillier, was closely associated with the Pre-Raphaelites and was the leading authority of his day on tapestry.

Rogers was educated at Sherborne, and after doing his national service in the Welsh Guards as a second lieutenant in the Queen's Royal Regiment, he studied at St. Martin's School of Art in London.

In 1957, Rogers was elected a member of the Royal Society of British Artists, and in 1980, Arthur Tooth and Sons became his exclusive dealer in London.

In 1982, Rogers went to live in Spain, and while there, met Carol Hurd, daughter of the painters, Peter Hurd and Henriette Wyeth Hurd.

Having moved to the United States in 1963, he and Carol Hurd were married and took up residence on the Hurd's ranch at San Patricio.

Since then, Rogers' painting has alternated between a variety of commissioned work and the development of the Quest theme, the latter having been his predominant and abiding interest.

After a sojourn in Santa Fe from 1976 to 1983, the Rogers returned to San Patricio, where they continue to live and work.

Peter and Carol Rogers have three children, Peter, Gabriela and David.

ERIC E. COLLINS, and ROBERT S. TURNER, have been included in the 1994 edition of Who's Who Among American Colleges and Universities.

Collins is the son of Timothy Collins and Geri Collins and a graduate of Ruidoso High School. Turner is a graduate of Capitan High School.

Ranchers lack confidence in public land policy decisions

by DIANNE STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Broken promises leave local ranchers with little faith that they will have any say in future decisions about the management of publicly-owned range lands in New Mexico.

Last week, newspapers carried the story that U.S. Secretary of the Interior Bruce Babbitt will increase grazing fees by 112 percent over the next three years.

Bud Eppers, president of New Mexico's Public Lands Council based in Roswell, said that after two visits by Babbitt to New Mexico during the past year, the Secretary told ranchers and green community representative that he would return to the state prior to announcing any draft regulation.

"He has not held to those promises either time," Eppers said. Babbitt was slated to return to Socorro Friday, but the announcement on fee increases already hit the newspapers the previous week.

Stockman will not boycott the meeting, as green representatives have threatened, according to Mike Casabonne of the New Mexico Wool Growers. But they have asked the Secretary to include ethnic and cultural diversity in any groups that he meets with in the future.

Local rancher and Lincoln County Commissioner Stirling Spencer said he is bothered by the proposed new fee, because no formula is involved as it is in the current method of determining the charge for use of grazing on public land.

"It's not that I'm against change or better ideas. It's that (the proposed new fee is) based on nothing but blue sky numbers," said Spencer, who also is a Republican candidate for New Mexico State Public Lands Commissioner. "The problem is I don't think (Babbitt) knows what to do."

The existing fee system, which is based on a formula, is the only one that can be quantified with history, he said.

U.S. Senator Pete Domenici, R-New Mexico, also expressed his disappointment in Babbitt's decision and approach to selling the new program.

He cited a report in The Washington Post that the media strategy for the policies will be released in chapters.

"And for each chapter, they'll find some western politician to say nice things so it doesn't seem like the entire West is in revolt. Chapter One, the local empowerment chapter, came this week. Three more will follow."

In his news release, Domenici noted that the story also stated for those "practicing good land management," the fee will be $2.77.

"I am dismayed by (Babbitt's) media-driven approach to an issue that has enormous consequences for the economics and the people of the western states," the senator said.

"By announcing such a huge, quickly-imposed and unacceptably high grazing fee, the Secretary is proving that his series of 'meetings' across the West were little more than public relations ploys designed to give him cover as he takes action."

Babbitt's scheduled meeting in Socorro, which supposedly was to listen to New Mexicans, seems to be a sham, because "it appears his plan is already done," Domenici said.

"All indications are that the Secretary will seek to impose the same solution that was defeated by the Congress last year."

"If Secretary Babbitt believes he can resolve this issue by focusing on a media strategy instead of a constructive approach that brings people together on grazing issues, then the Secretary and the White House are misreading the people of America's West."

"A 112 percent hike in fees, which will apply to ranchers large and small, will not help the environment and it will hurt the economies of the West. It is also very unclear about how the Secretary will define 'good management practices' and to what type of land such a standard will apply. I eagerly await additional information on that issue."

"After hearing the apparently conciliatory words expressed by (Babbitt) recently, I find (the) announcement extremely troubling and unacceptable."

The federal Bureau of Land Management (BLM) issued a news release detailing how new advisory boards for the use of publicly-owned lands will be appointed and operated under Babbitt's "empowerment" proposal.

According to the BLM information, citizen input on decisions affecting public range lands should increase under the new board system. However, the interests represented under the proposed Multiple Resource Advisory Committees will broaden compared to the previous Grazing Advisory Boards, which were dominated by ranchers.

The ranchers will share slots at the 15-member district committee tables with representatives from other users of public range lands.

One-third of the members will be from commodity industries that are active in the district, such as grazing, mining and timber. One third will be representatives of environmental and conservation groups and another one-third will be selected from other public land users, state and local officials and members of the general public.

The committee proposal will be included in draft regulations Babbitt is expected to release in early March.

The proposal emerged after Babbitt spent several months crisscrossing the West in a series of meetings on range issues.

"The best decisions are those made locally by all interested parties sitting around a table hammering out mutually acceptable solutions," Colorado Governor Roy Romer was quoted as saying in the release. "That's the approach we took here in Colorado, and it's the approach suggested by Secretary Babbitt."

"For people who at first seemed to be on opposite sides of the spectrum, to sit down together, listen to each other and forge true consensus, showed me that environmentalists and ranchers actually are closer on these issues than many would believe," said U.S. Senator Ben Nighthorse Campbell (D-Colorado), who sat in on some of the Colorado working group sessions.

"I'm gratified that Secretary Babbitt intends to include their recommendations in the grazing rule that he's proposing. He's shown me that the Administration has heard our message; it makes sense to listen to the people of the West when you're making decisions about the West."

"Over and over, I've heard one thing from Westerners," Babbitt said in the release. "Those closest to the land, those who live on the land, are in the best position to care for it. I agree, and that's why we're making changes in the proposal released last August."

The new proposal, which hit public light February 14, will duplicate almost word-for-word the suggestions offered by a group of Colorado ranchers and environmentalists.

The Colorado Rangeland Reform Working Group convened by Romer conducted eight meetings with Babbitt totaling more than 40 hours.

According to information from the BLM, the group consisted of ranchers, environmentalists and representatives of state and local governments. They developed a series of consensus recommendations, consensus meaning unanimous support for a proposal.

Romer, who chaired the meetings, said, "We were able to reach this point, because we took the time to build up the trust that is lacking in so many places in the West."

"The process that has unfolded in the past few months is not one of compromise," Babbitt said. "It's been one of consensus building. We stated our principles and goals, and then began working with the Colorado group on how to reach those goals. The destination hasn't changed, but we have taken a different path."

Babbitt contended that the Colorado group's recommendations are sensitive to the needs of other states.

"Their recommendations focused more on process than policy," he said. "They've come up with a process that will help local communities across the West have a greater say in how federal lands in their area are managed."

"Throughout the West, it's now possible to have all stakeholders at the table so that rangeland management discussions will address the concerns of hunters, fishermen, hikers and others. This proposal guarantees that."

Reeves Brown, executive director of the Colorado Cattlemen's Association, is the man who called Romer and prompted the initiation of the working group.

"This proposal recognizes that local ownership, not 'top-down' regulation is the key to sustainable resource management," Brown said. "There are certain decisions that can't be made in Washington. The best solutions come about when we get all stakeholders together on-the-ground and develop management plans that recognize individual values and satisfy common goals."

Grazing Advisory Boards established in 1984 and restricted to ranchers only, would be abolished under the new proposal. Critics argue that those boards did not give adequate consideration to uses of the rangeland besides grazing, such as hunting, fishing, birding or hiking.

The new Multiple Resource Advisory Councils in each district will advise the BLM district manager. If council members become concerned that their advice is not being followed, they will be able to petition the Secretary of the Interior, who must respond to their concerns.

"This proposal works because it's designed to build local consensus," said Ken Spann, chairman of the Public Lands Committee of the National Cattlemen's Association and a member of the Colorado working group.

"It requires broad based membership, and it gives the council real power to affect the management of lands in their own community."

Babbitt's original proposal would have done nothing to reform the BLM's culture or the ranching industry," Spann said. "You can't do those things from the outside. It must come from within. Now we can start on both of these tasks."

Members of the new councils would be required to attend group courses in rangeland ecosystem management.

County Commissioner Spencer said he doesn't fully understand how the boards will function and he doubts whether the multiple use boards will prove any better than the grazing boards.

"I think they may muddy the picture of multiple use, because of their size," Spencer said. "People who don't have a full understanding of the resource of the land should take advice from someone who knows what they're talking about."

He referred to the proposal "as a smoke screen (Babbitt) is trying to enact, because this way he covers himself."

Gary Sprung, an environmentalist who heads the High Country Citizens Alliance, was quoted in the BLM release as saying the new approach will ensure that other factors beside forage value drive range management, "such as the impact on wild flora and fauna."

Governors will recommend appointments for the council in each of their states, but the final decision will be up to the Interior Secretary.

The Multiple Resource Advisory Councils will help with the drafting of Range Management Plans and will be responsible for advising those drafting the standards and guidelines for rangeland management. Specific details on requirements of those standards and guidelines will be announced at a later date, according to BLM officials.

Some districts may choose to create more than one advisory council. The councils may initiate or citizens may request the formation of local Resource Teams.

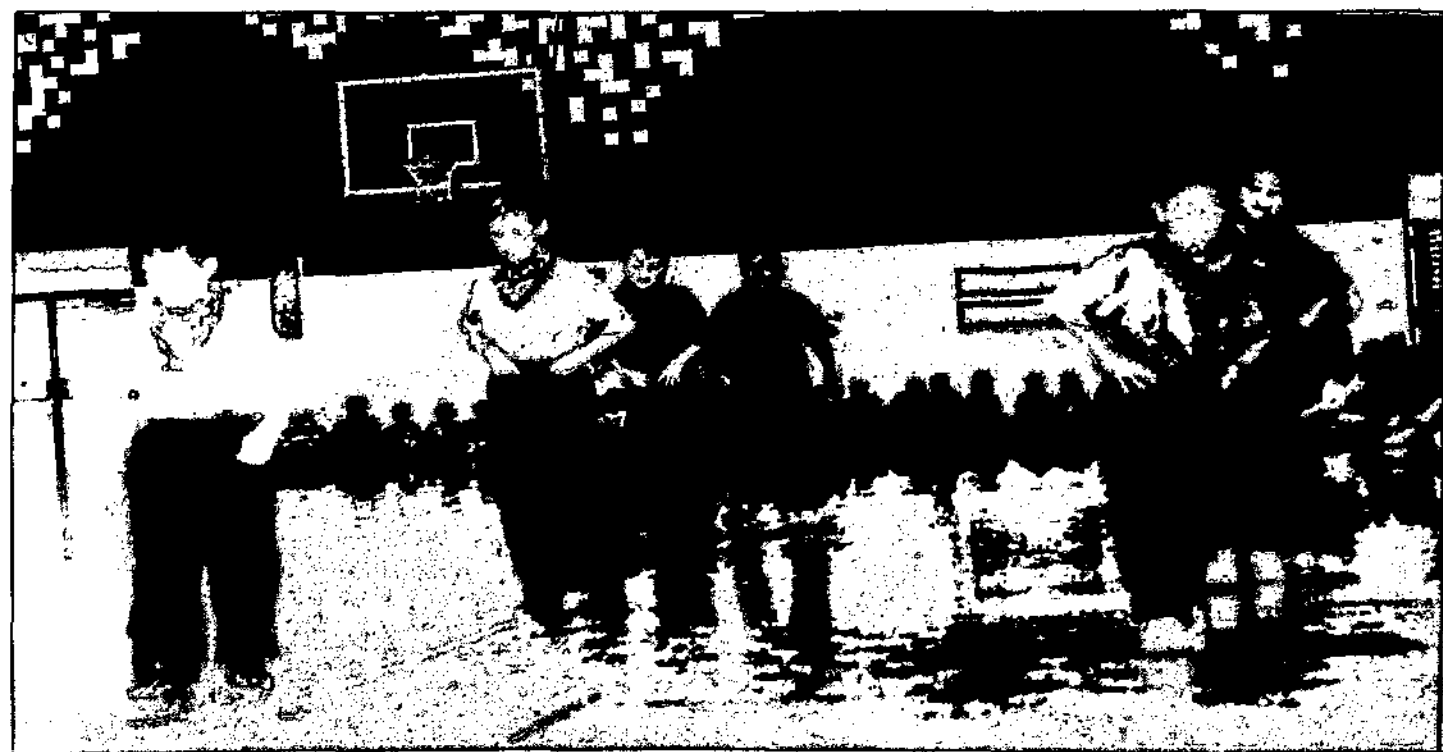

The Teams would make on-the-ground land management recommendations to the council and would have the authority to spend a portion of the range improvement money returned to the state by the federal government. Council members also would provide advice to the BLM District manager on how other portions of the fees should be spent.

Members of the Resource Teams would be appointed by the councils with two from the ranching community, one an environmentalist, one representing wildlife or recreational interests and one a community representative. One team member also would have to be a member of the creating council. All members of the Teams also would have to take a group course in rangeland ecosystem management.

Citizens still would have the ability to challenge management or planning decisions through the existing administration and appeals process.

Under the plan, if a Team disagrees with management decisions by a BLM land manager, they could petition the local Multiple Resource Advisory Council for an opinion and request the council to create a technical review team on work on a specific resource issue.

The entire proposal by Babbitt will be published in the Federal Register as part of the department's rule relating to rangeland reform. The public will have a chance to comment. The department also is preparing an Environmental Impact Statement (EIS) in compliance with the National Environmental Policy Act. The draft will be available for public review and comment.

BEEF IS BACK!

After a major decline in beef consumption, from an average of 74.6 pounds a year in 1982 to approximately 62.8 pounds in 1992, Americans are beginning to enjoy beef again without the guilt.

Today's beef is 27 percent leaner than beef produced 25 years ago, according to the Beef Industry Council, and a rich source of protein, B vitamins, iron and zinc.

Easy Beef Kabobs

- 2 tbsp. vegetable oil
- 1 tbsp. fresh lemon juice
- 1 tbsp. water
- 2 tsp. Dijon-style mustard
- 1 tsp. honey
- 1/2 tsp. dried oregano leaves
- 1/4 tsp. pepper
- 1 lb. boneless beef sirloin steak, cut into 1" chunks
- 1 medium green, red or yellow bell pepper, cut into 1" pieces
- 8 mushrooms
- 1 large onion, cut into 1/8ths
- 8 cherry tomatoes

In a large bowl, whisk together oil, lemon juice, water, mustard, honey, oregano and pepper. Add beef, bell pepper and mushrooms; stir gently to coat. Alternately thread pieces of beef, bell pepper, mushrooms, onions and tomatoes onto 4-to-6 12" skewers.

Place kabobs onto rack in broiler pan, so surface of meat is 3" to 4" from heat. Broil 9 to 12 minutes for rare to medium, turning occasionally. Serves 4 to 6.

Recipe courtesy of National Livestock and Meat Board.

Beef Stroganoff

1/4 cup butter or margarine
6 oz. can sliced mushrooms, drained
2 lbs. beef tenderloin or sirloin, cut into 3" x 1/4" strips
2 (10.5 oz. each) cans condensed beef broth, divided
1/3 cup instant, minced onion
1/4 cup catsup
1 clove garlic, minced
1/3 cup flour
2 cups sour cream
Salt, to taste
8 to 10 oz. medium egg noodles, cooked

In a large skillet, melt butter or margarine. Sauté mushrooms about 5 minutes; remove mushrooms from pan and set aside.

In the same skillet, brown meat. Stir in broth (reserving 2/3 cup for later use), onion, catsup and garlic. Cover and simmer 15 minutes.

Blend reserved broth with flour until smooth; stir into meat. Add mushrooms; heat to boiling, stirring constantly. Boil and stir one minute. Stir in sour cream and heat through; season to taste. Serve over cooked noodles. Serves 6.

Orange Pepper Steaks

4 beef tenderloin steaks, cut 1" thick
2 tsp. coarse ground, black pepper
1/2 cup orange marmalade
4 tsp. cider vinegar
1/2 tsp. ground ginger

Press pepper evenly into both sides of beef steaks. Place steaks onto rack in broiler pan, 2" to 3" from heat. Combine marmalade, vinegar and ginger. Brush top of steaks with half of marmalade mixture. Broil steaks 10 to 15 minutes for rare (140°) to medium (160°), turning once and brushing with remaining marmalade mixture. Serves 4.

A CHICKEN IN EVERY POT!

Chicken, turkey, cornish hen and most poultry are good choices for delicious, nutritious meals.

Chicken is economical and a good source of protein, B2, B6, B12, riboflavin and niacin.

Chicken is also rich in zinc and magnesium.

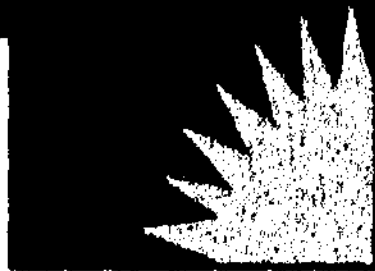

Remove the skin and trim the fat off the chicken parts to reduce the calories by 25-30%.

Poppy Seed Chicken

3 chicken breasts, cooked and cut up
1 can cream of mushroom soup
8 oz. sour cream
1 jar mushrooms
4 to 6 tbsp. butter or margarine
1 "row" Ritz crackers, crushed
(about 34 crackers)
1 to 2 tbsp. poppy seeds

Spread chicken onto bottom of a casserole dish. Mix together soup and sour cream; add mushrooms. Pour sauce over chicken.

In a small saucepan, melt butter. Add poppy seeds and crackers. Spread mixture over top of casserole. Bake 20 to 30 minutes at 350°, or until bubbly. Serves 4.

Tarragon Chicken

2 oz. grated Mozzarella cheese
1/2 cup finely chopped celery
1 tsp. dried tarragon
1/2 tsp. dried parsley
2 boneless, skinless chicken breasts, halved, pounded 1/8" to 1/4" thick
1-1/2 tsp. vegetable oil
1/4 cup chicken broth

Tarragon Sauce

In a small bowl, toss Mozzarella, celery, tarragon and parsley. Spoon half of cheese mixture onto each chicken breast. Reserve remaining mixture.

Roll up chicken breasts and secure with wooden toothpicks. Place oil into a 1-quart casserole dish; gently roll breasts in oil to coat. Add chicken broth. Cover with plastic wrap and vent. Microwave on HIGH, 7 to 10 minutes, or until done. Remove chicken; set aside and keep warm (reserve broth).

Tarragon Sauce

1 tbsp. margarine
1 tbsp. flour
1/4 cup reserved broth
Reserved cheese mixture
1/4 cup skim milk
1/2 cup sliced mushrooms

Melt margarine in microwave on HIGH 45 seconds, or until melted; blend in flour. Add reserved broth, reserved cheese mixture, milk and mushrooms. Microwave on HIGH 5 minutes. Stir and pour over chicken: Serves 4.

CHOICE CHICKEN

Choose chicken with moist, tender skin and a fresh smell. Skin color (white or yellow) is a result of the chicken feed, but has little impact on the taste of the chicken.

Turkey Enchiladas

1 cup chopped onion
1 lb. ground turkey
1 (30 oz.) can refried beans
1 (4 oz.) can diced, green chilies
1/2 tsp. chopped garlic
1/2 tsp. cumin

2 (10 oz. each) cans enchilada sauce
12 flour or corn tortillas, cut into 1" strips

4 oz. grated, low-fat Cheddar cheese
In a greased, large skillet, cook onion and turkey until done. Add beans, chilies, garlic, cumin and chili powder. Grease a 9" x 13" baking dish. Pour in 1/2 can of enchilada sauce. Layer remaining ingredients: 1/3 tortilla strips, 1/2 bean mixture, 1/3 tortilla strips, 1 can sauce, bean mixture, tortillas, sauce. Bake at 400°, 20 minutes. Top with cheese and return to oven for 10 to 15 minutes. Serves 12.

2 tsp. chili powder
Avocado slices

PORK PRIMER

Fresh pork is much leaner than in years past. Since 1983, on the average pork is 31% lower in total fat, 14% lower in calories and 10% lower in cholesterol. Pork is also a good source of protein and other nutrients, like thiamin, iron and zinc.

Cajun Pork Stir Fry

- 1 lb. pork strips
- 4 tbsp. Cajun seasoning
- 1 tsp. vegetable oil
- 1 red bell pepper
- 1 tart green apple, cored and diced
- 1/4 cup pecan pieces

Season pork strips with 2 tablespoons of Cajun seasoning. Toss pepper, apple and pecans with the remaining seasoning; set aside and reserve.

Heat oil in a large skillet over medium-high heat. Stir-fry pork strips, without crowding. Remove and keep warm. Add the pepper-apple mixture; cook and stir 2 minutes.

Return pork to skillet and stir to mix well. Serves 4.

Cajun Seasoning

- 3 tbsp. paprika
- 2 tbsp. onion powder
- 2 tbsp. garlic powder
- 2 tbsp. black pepper
- 2 tbsp. cayenne
- 2 tbsp. thyme
- 2 tbsp. oregano
- 1 tbsp. salt

Combine all ingredients.

Creamy Garlic Bacon Pita

6 slices bacon, halved
1 tbsp. slivered almonds, toasted
2 cloves garlic
2 oz. light cream cheese
2 tbsp. plain yogurt
1/4 tsp. Worcestershire sauce
1 pita bread, split to form 2 circles
6 large strawberries, sliced
Boston or leaf lettuce

Arrange bacon on microwave-safe rack; cover with paper towel. Microwave on HIGH 5 to 6 minutes or until crisp; rotate rack 1/4 turn halfway through cooking time; drain. Roll up half of bacon slices to make 6 bacon curls. Crumble remaining bacon slices; reserve. Meanwhile, place almonds and garlic in food processor or blender container; cover and process until finely chopped. Add cheese, yogurt and Worcestershire sauce; cover and process until fairly smooth. Stir in reserved, crumbled bacon. Spread each pita circle with bacon mixture. Arrange strawberries around outer edge; place lettuce in center. Top lettuce with 3 bacon curls. Cut into quarters to serve. Serves 8.

Recipe courtesy of National Livestock and Meat Board.

Fantastic Pork Fajitas

2 tsp. vegetable oil
1 lb. pork strips
1/2 medium onion, peeled and sliced
1 green pepper, seeded and sliced
4 flour tortillas, warmed
Salsa, if desired

Heat a large, nonstick skillet over medium-high heat. Add oil; heat until hot. Toss pork strips, onion and pepper slices into skillet and stir-fry quickly, 4 to 5 minutes. Roll up portions of the meat mixture in flour tortillas and serve with salsa, if desired. Makes 4 fajitas.

Recipe courtesy of National Pork Producers Council.

Pork Tenderloin Diane

1 lb. pork tenderloin medallions, cut 1" thick
2 tsp. lemon pepper
2 tsp. butter
1 tbsp. Worcestershire sauce
1 tsp. Dijon-style mustard

Sprinkle surfaces of tenderloin medallions with lemon pepper.

Heat butter over medium-high heat in a large skillet; do not let brown. Add medallions and sauté until nicely browned on each side, about 3 to 4 minutes per side. Remove medallions to a serving platter and keep warm. Add remaining ingredients to skillet. Cook and stir until blended and heated through. Pour over medallions. Serves 4.

Recipe courtesy of National Pork Producers Council.

Ginger Plum Pork Cutlets

1 tsp. vegetable oil
4 pork cutlets, 1/4" to 1/2" thick
1 (8 oz.) jar plum preserves
2 tsp. ground, dry ginger or 1 tbsp. freshly grated ginger
3 tbsp. cider vinegar

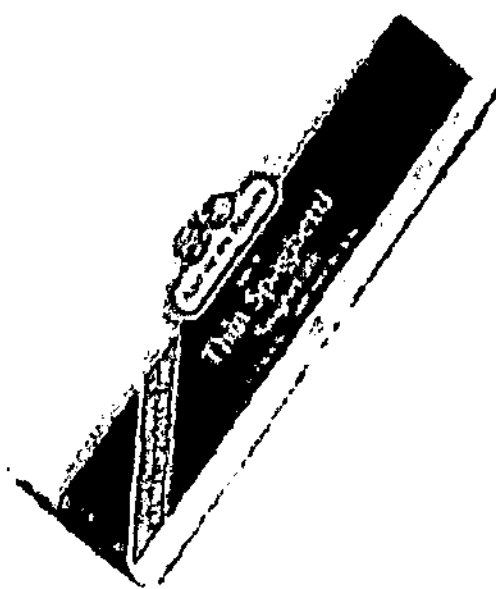

Heat oil in a large, heavy skillet over medium-high heat. Brown cutlets on one side. Stir together remaining ingredients. Turn cutlets and add sauce to skillet. Cover and simmer 8 to 10 minutes. Serves 4.

Recipe courtesy of National Pork Producers Council.

WELL ENOUGH

Contrary to popular belief, it is not necessary to overcook your pork. Trichinosis, which was previously a major concern, has virtually been eliminated by modern methods of pork production.

Cooking pork to an internal temperature of 160°-170° is sufficient to eliminate any risk of contamination.

SHELLFISH SURPRISE!

Despite the reputation of shellfish as a high-cholesterol food, some types of shellfish are slightly lower in cholesterol than chicken and beef. Some of the lower-cholesterol shellfish choices include: crab, scallops, mussels, clams and lobster.

Fiesta Shrimp & Fettuccine

9 oz. spinach fettuccine
3 tbsp. butter, divided
1 tbsp. chopped, fresh basil
Salt and pepper, to taste
1 tbsp. olive oil
2 cloves garlic, minced
1 lb. medium shrimp, peeled and deveined
1 bunch green onion, chopped
1 red bell pepper, diced
Juice of 1 lime

Cook pasta and drain. Toss with one tablespoon butter. Add basil, salt and pepper, to taste. Set aside and keep warm in serving dish.

In a large skillet, heat 2 tablespoons butter and olive oil. Add garlic and sauté one minute. Add shrimp and sauté until pink. Add onions and bell pepper; cook until crisp-tender, or until heated through. Season with salt and pepper, if desired. Spoon shrimp over pasta. Squeeze lime juice over top and serve. Serves 2.

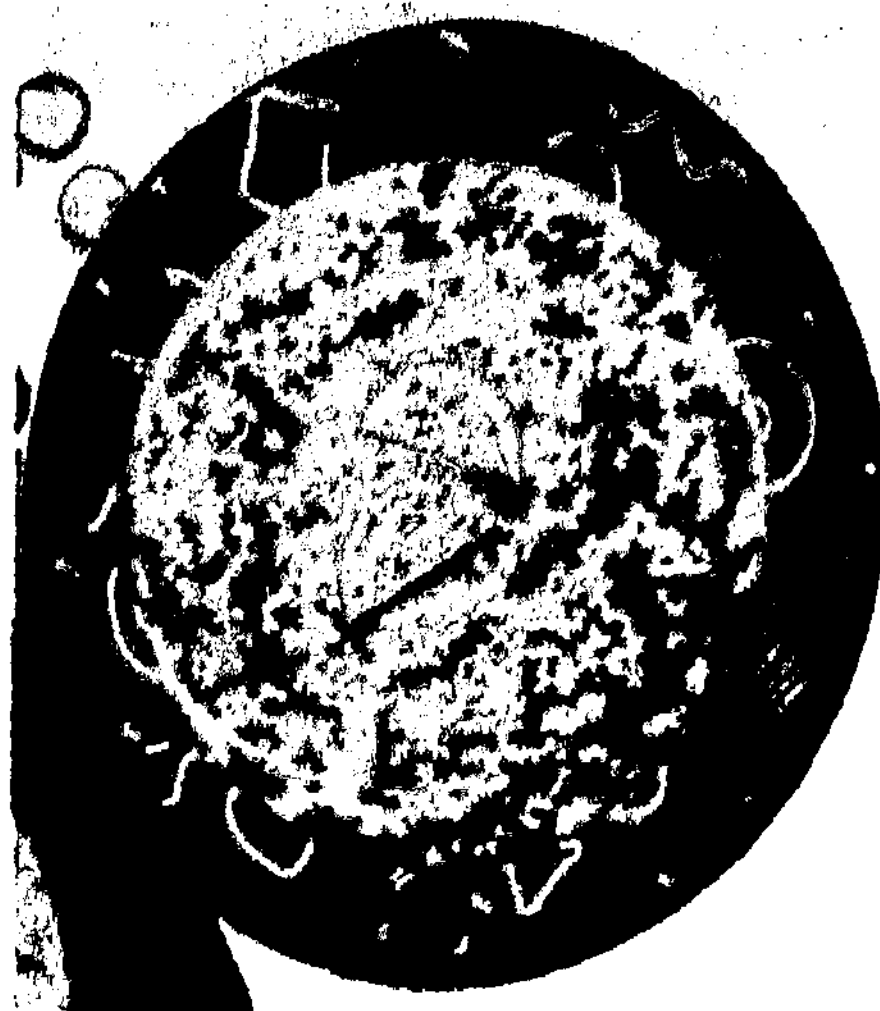

Marinated Swordfish Kabobs

6 to 8 bay leaves
 1/2 cup olive oil
 1/4 cup finely chopped onion
 1/4 cup snipped parsley
 2 tbsp. lime juice
 2 tbsp. water
 3 cloves garlic, minced
 1 tsp. dried thyme, crushed
 Tabasco sauce, to taste
 Black pepper, to taste
 1-1/2 lb. swordfish steak, cut into 1" pieces
 9 green onions, cut into 3" pieces
 1 red bell pepper, cut into 1" pieces

Soak bay leaves in water. Combine olive oil, onion, parsley, lime juice, water, garlic, thyme, Tabasco and pepper. Pour over fish and marinate in refrigerator for 10 to 15 minutes.

Drain fish and thread onto skewers, (place the soaked bay leaves directly against fish). Alternate with remaining vegetables.

Place kabobs onto a greased pan. Broil, about 3" from heat source, 3 minutes. Check kabobs, turning every 3 minutes until done, about 12 minutes total. Kabobs can also be grilled on barbeque. Serves 6.

 2 tbsp. chopped pimiento
 2 tsp. snipped chives
 2 tsp. Dijon-style mustard
 1 tsp. lemon juice

 Paprika, for garnish

In a medium saucepan, melt margarine. Add flour, stirring constantly over low heat, until browned. Add milk and mix well. Add spinach, tuna, chopped egg, pimiento, chives, mustard and lemon juice. Simmer over low heat to blend flavors, about 10 minutes. Garnish with egg slices and paprika, if desired. Serves 4.
