Mescaleros, companies sign nuclear waste storage contract

by DIANNE STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

An historic agreement to build the nation's first off-site, dry storage facility for spent nuclear fuel rods was signed Thursday by the Mescalero Apache Tribal Council and 33 utilities.

The signing came after nine intensive months of negotiations. It needs approval in a tribal election before it becomes effective.

Spent nuclear fuel rods, the leftover radioactive waste of power generated by commercial reactors across the nation, could begin arriving on the reservation next to Ruidoso as early as 2002.

The project is expected to pump $1.4 billion into the local economy over a 40-year period and as much as $20 million within the first few years, said Silas Cochise, nuclear project manager for the tribe. Some of that money will be funneled into developing a local school system, new homes and better streets, he said.

"We want to emphasize that the commitment to tribal members to vote on the project shall be kept."

— Wendell Chino tribe president

Construction, licensing and engineering of the storage facility is estimated to cost $140 million over a six-year period, according to tribe consultants.

The tribal election has not yet been scheduled, but Tribal President Wendell Chino said he expected it to be completed by mid-February. The agreement must also be approved by the individual nuclear energy partners that chose an equity position in the project. Until then, the letter of intent is non-binding, Cochise said.

Others may join the storage project later as customers, he said. Equity partners will be financial investors in the project to the initial tune of about $4 million each. The tribe is negotiating with 14 companies that intend to be equity partners, another 14 that are undecided and five that probably will be customers, said tribal consultant Duane Schmoker. Each of the companies may send fuel from more than one reactor.

In announcing the tentative agreement Thursday, Fred Peso, tribal council vice president, said no companies in New Mexico are members of the nuclear industry consortium.

Referendum conducted

Rufina Laws, an opponent of the storage project who lives on the reservation, said she expected the project to be approved in the tribal referendum. Laws and other opposition groups contend the spent fuel rods should stay at the sites where they were generated.

The tribal council will schedule the referendum on the reservation and will allow enough time to ensure that tribal members can be informed about terms of the agreement, Peso said. Both the tribal referendum and the vote by individual nuclear energy equity partners should be completed by mid-February, according to President Chino.

About 50% of the 2,500 Mescaleros living on the reservation will be eligible to vote. They must be registered tribal members, at least 18 years old and have lived on the reservation a minimum of 12 months.

"We want to emphasize that the commitment to tribal members to vote on the project shall be kept," Chino said.

The 50-acre Mescalero site with a 450-acre buffer zone on the west side of the Sacramento Mountains could become the first interim storage facility in the United States accepting fuel from multiple reactors across the nation. Seven power companies already have similar dry cask storage at their reactor sites exclusively for their own spent fuel rods, said David Sampsel, spokesman for the Minnesota Department of Public Service. The rest are using cool pool storage and are running out of space.

"This is an historic agreement," said Jim Howard, chairman and chief executive officer of Northern States Power, the Minnesota company that has taken the lead in the partnership with Mescalero. "We and our partners, the Mescalero, have put together in nine months the key contours of a significant step in our country's energy and environmental future, providing for safe storage of spent nuclear fuel."

Once the letter of intent has been approved by both sides, detailed contracts will be written covering the construction and operation of the site and the partners will seek a license from the Nuclear Regulatory Commission (NRC). At that point, the public will have input on issues of safety.

"We will operate this project in strict compliance with all NRC regulations," Chino said. "We all agree safety and environmental protection are important priorities of the project."

Some specifics

An operating corporation, composed of tribal and energy company representatives, would be responsible for the day-to-day operation of the storage facility, he said.

The tribe plans to seek licensing for up to 40,000 metric tons of the spent fuel rods, but intends to accept only about 20,000 metric tons, Schmoker said. That's less than half of the 90,000 metric tons estimated to be produced if all of the currently licensed reactors ran to the end of their approved life, he said.

Although some fuel will remain stored elsewhere, Mescalero would be the largest centralized fuel storage site, Schmoker said.

The tribe would not accept the bulk of the nation's rods, to ensure that other groups continue to have an interest in the federal government completing a permanent storage facility, he said.

Terms of agreement

Although specific terms of the proposed agreement between the Mescalero Tribal Council and 33 nuclear industry companies were not disclosed, a summary of key points includes:

— The storage facility will be temporary.

— The utilities that own an interest in the facility will be coordinated by a utility corporation. The tribe will be represented by the tribal council.

- A company called the Facility Corporation will be the entity where Mescalero and utility representatives work together to manage the facility.

— The utility customers will have contracts with the facility corporation for temporary storage, but the fuel will belong to the customers, not the tribe or the corporation.

— The tribe will lease the storage site to the facility corporation, but the corporation will not own any tribal land.

— The agreement is written to ensure tribal sovereignty is protected and that the facility is financially viable, even if some of the players change over the years.

— The agreement must be approved by a vote of tribal members. Sufficient utility participation in the project must be established and a license must be issued by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission.

— The tribe will receive lease payments from the facility corporation that will increase as the amount of used fuel stored increases. It also will receive a share of the dividends from the facility.

"I don't think we looked around and said, 'Gee, those folks in Ruidoso really would like it next to them.'"

— David Sampsel Minnesota Dept. of Public Service

The Department of Energy (DOE) is years behind schedule on a government commitment in the 1982 Nuclear Waste Policy Act to begin accepting spent nuclear fuel rods from reactors in 1998. A permanent repository slated for Yucca Mountain in Nevada has run into major delays.

Background

The Mescalero have pursued the possible siting of a temporary storage facility since August 1991, when they first were contacted by the Office of the Federal Nuclear Waste Negotiator about its voluntary storage siting program. When the U.S. Congress stopped funding for the volunteer program about a year ago, the tribal council was contacted by Nothern States about a possible private venture, Cochise said. By working with a sovereign Indian nation, the project is not subject to county or state approval.

In June 1994, Northern State and 32 other nuclear energy companies agreed to negotiate with the Mescalero and provided some additional study money.

"We had reached a point in the nuclear industry where we had to move aggressively without the (DOE) or face the shutdown of a clean, reliable energy source," Howard said. "The Mescalero had the vision to see an economic and employment opportunity for the tribal members."

Sampsel, of the Minnesota Department of Public Service, said his state has supported the project because it anticipated its power companies would run out of storage space before a permanent repository was built. State officials aren't simply planning to ship all of the rods off to another state, he said. Some additional dry cask storage has been approved for the Prairie Island reactor site.

"I don't think we looked around and said 'Gee, those folks in Ruidoso really would like it next to them,'" he said. "The fact is the Mescalero site became a site possibility because of the federal waste negotiator. There's an entity called the NOW Corp. in Wyoming that also is interested in establishing an interim repository."

Two other Native American groups still are working with the federal nuclear negotiator.

Cochise said the storage facility not only will generate jobs directly for Mescalero and surrounding communities, it also will spawn other businesses. A type of dense concrete used in the storage casks will be manufactured on site and sold elsewhere. Metal containers for waste already are being assembled and sold, he said. Unlike other tourist-related businesses run by the Mescalero, the storage project should not be subject to fluctuations.

He disagreed that the enterprise will result in a chilling effect on tourism in Lincoln County and the reservation, pointing to a strong local housing market and tourism activities near areas with other nuclear activity. However, several local government entities, including the Ruidoso village council, have passed resolutions in opposition to the storage plan.

Artist blows magic into glass

by DON HIXON
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

One of Santa's elves has opened up shop in Ruidoso Downs, and is busily producing glass Christmas ornaments and collectibles.

Alberto Ruiz is the elf's name. Although he has never actually lived at the North Pole, his eyes sparkle when he tells how he moved to Ruidoso Downs from California.

"Seventeen years ago I was a welder for a beer factory in Baja, California," Ruiz said. "I was making good money but one day I saw a glass blower working. That night I couldn't sleep and I told my family that I wanted to become an artist that worked with glass. I quit my job the next day."

Ruiz's relatives were less than excited when he told them about his plan.

"My mother and my wife told me I was crazy because I had a good job and was making good money," he said. "But I just had to do it."

Ruiz and his family moved to Los Angeles, where he began to sell his creations to Disney World and Knott's Berry Farm. But five years ago, tiring of California, they moved to Ruidoso.

Production of the glass items is a family affair at the Ruiz household. Alberto and his cousin Arnoldo Ruiz sit hunched over blow torches, melting and shaping glass rods, while Mrs. Ruiz adds paint before the pieces are placed into a special oven for firing.

Delicate hummingbirds, angels, wreaths, and candy canes spring to life as Ruiz spins them from the glass rods.

"I had a special order for a glass car once," Ruiz said. "When it was finished you could open the hood and even see the spark plugs."

Ruiz said he learned his craft by watching glass blowers around Baja, and by trial-and-error.

"I never did any other kind of art," Ruiz said. "I just decided to do glass because I like the challenge and it was my heart's desire."

Ruiz has been challenged to prove his expertise on occasion.

"Once I went to a school to do a demonstration and I had to create anything the students wanted me to," he said. "I had a time limit of five minutes to make whatever they asked and I made a football player, a rose; whatever they wanted."

Prices for the glass creations range from about two dollars for a tiny angel up to $500 for a glass sculpture of two rams fighting.

"I love to do special items," Ruiz said. "If you tell me what you want, I will make it for you."

Ruiz made a special order once for an Air Force retiree. He was flown to Denver where he was asked to design a F-15 fighter jet, all in spun glass, to scale and with all instruments.

"They asked me if I could do it in just one day," said Ruiz. "I stayed up all night working and had it ready for them the next morning. They were so excited that they paid me $700."

Ruiz sells his glass creations to several major companies in the United States and plans to open a storefront studio soon. Until that time comes, his creations are available at many shops in Ruidoso.

Fond memories of Christmas past in Lincoln County

by DIANNE STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

The warm days of winter in New Mexico this year remind Fred Pfingsten of one of his favorite holiday celebrations while growing up in Hondo Valley.

He and other long-time local residents shared some of their best Christmas memories. All of them recall a simpler, quiet time when life moved at a slower and more personal pace.

"It was a long time ago, about 1931, that we were living down below Lincoln and it'd been quite a good year," Pfingsten said. "It had been a beautiful fall and came on to Christmas. My dad was a great hand for big picnics and he thought, 'Let's just have an outdoor picnic,' since it had been so nice."

Long tables were set up in the yard. Several women cooked and about 125 people came for dinner. None of the houses in the area were big enough to have that many people inside, he said.

"The whole valley got together," Pfingsten said. "It was a warm day and everybody was wearing no jackets and coats. It kind of reminds me of the weather we've been having. A lot of the days have been picnic days."

Christmas gifts usually were selected from the special holiday edition of the Montgomery Ward catalog.

"Most of the gifts were necessities, things that we used," he said. "Ward's had a food and grocery catalog and we'd get a big order of things we liked at Christmas. My dad was German and a thing he always had was pickled herring, a little barrel full."

The family also bought 30-pound sacks of oatmeal, "to go into our winter food supply," Pfingsten said. Dried fruits, raisins and nuts were selected, and wheels of cheese - something that couldn't be found in Lincoln County - were prized.

"The money spent for the whole winter supply now would amount to about what a weekend grocery list costs today," Pfingsten said.

The biggest thrill came when the freight train carrying the order from Wards arrived in Capitan, about 20 miles away.

"We'd have to pick them up at the depot in Capitan," he said. "It was one of the biggest events of the year. We didn't go to town much. The stores didn't carry any Christmas gifts, only the necessities. We lived a lot closer to mother nature."

Apples grown in the Pfingsten's apple orchards were traded in Texas for sweet potatoes, potatoes, black strap molasses, flour and sugar. Times were hard, he said.

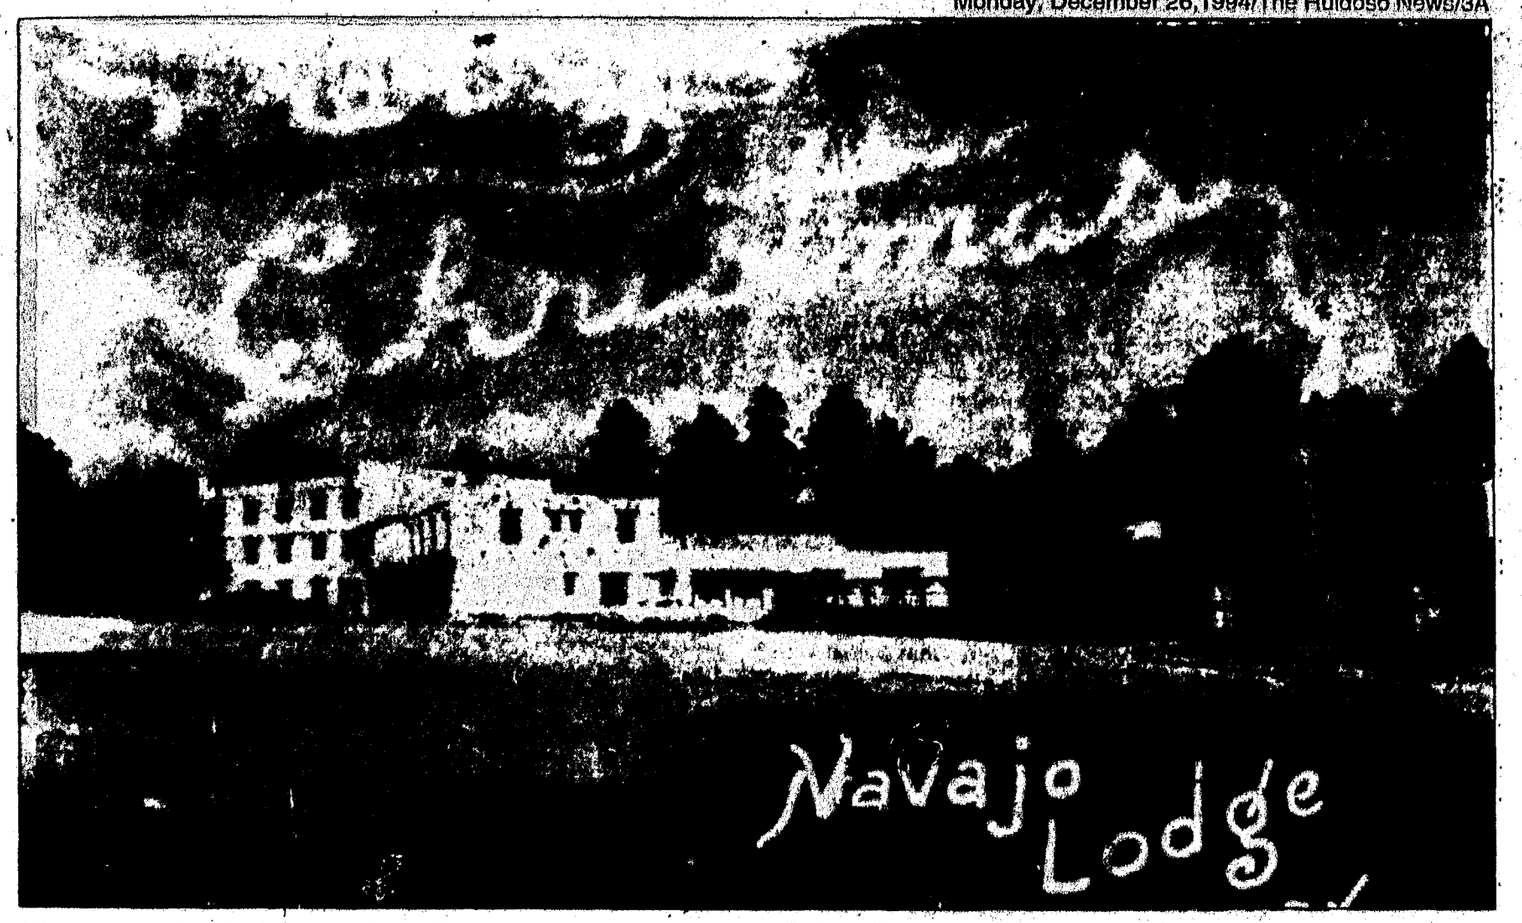
Not all Christmas celebrations allowed residents to bask in sunshine. Richard Parsons, a former attorney and now judge in the 12th Judicial District in Carrizozo, recalls a Christmas under 30 inches of snow.

"One of the first ones my family had here was unique in 1960," Parsons said. "About 32 inches of snow had fallen by the middle of October. There were no paved streets, no street lights. Out in front of Brunells (clothing store on Sudderth Drive) there was a huge tree in the street that everyone drove around.

"It was real quiet and real nice. It's a memory I think about a lot. The telephones would cut off after four minutes, if it was a local call. They had just switched from operators, except for long distance calls. The operators in Carrizozo and Roswell all went by numbers. I sent them plants and wrote, 'My friends are numbered.'"

The whole village seemed to shut down after the last race of the season at Ruidoso Downs, he said.

"The majority of businesses would close down until spring," Parsons said. "It was just a quaint little village."



This promotional photograph for Ruidoso's winter season shows the old Navajo Lodge on Sudderth Drive during a period when few buildings existed in the Uptown section of the village. The lodge has since been torn down and replaced with condominium units. (Photo contributed from Herb Brunell collection)

In the Alto community area in the 1920s and 30s, Christmas was celebrated in the schoolhouse by the entire community, Louise Coe Runnels wrote in "The Saga of Sierra Blanca." Runnels co-authored the book with Herbert Traylor of Capitan, a local historian and former teacher.

The schoolteacher was in charge of the program. The children spent hours learning recitations, plays and songs to perform for their parents and friends.

Families donated money to buy candy, nuts and fruit, which would be bundled into red and green net bags sewn by the women of the community, who also decorated a school Christmas tree. Each person attending the Christmas program would receive a bag, Runnels wrote.

The Christmas tree was illuminated by small candles in metal stands that were snapped onto the limbs of the tree.

"During the time the candles were lighted, a couple of women stood watch with wet towels," Runnels wrote.

Parents and other relatives would put presents under the tree for Santa Claus to give their children. Extra presents also were added in case a child had been overlooked or a family was strapped.

The celebration was a chance for community bonding, with the school as the focus.

On the neighboring Mescalero Apache reservation, the church was the centerpiece.

Magdalena Fatty, 75, said her most vivid memory of Christmas occurred when she was 10 years old.

"I went to church with my grandmother, the one that raised me. There were a lot of people, covered wagons, open wagons and hardly any cars," she said. "Some were on horseback or on foot. We all gathered at the Catholic church.

"We had a dinner there. Everybody ate. It was nice weather sitting outside on the ground, hardly any benches."

After dinner, Fatty said everyone's attention shifted to the front of the church.

"They were told they were giving us things," she said. "Grandmother was sitting down on the ground and I was in back of her, kneeling, kind of sitting on my legs.

"I saw a strange person running from the window. He looked scary. I didn't know what it was. He was walking back and forth. When I saw him, my eyes got big and I hid.

I guess he was handing the gifts to another person to call the names for the person to get it. It was the first time I saw Santa Claus, but nobody ever told me who he was until after the gifts."

Once the gifts had been handed out, most people went home for a family dinner, she said. The Christmas meal consisted of fry bread, a beef roast, chili, some fruit pies and probably some vegetables.

After the meal, many returned to the church area for Indian dancing until midnight.

"After (midnight), they fed them again and from there, they all went home, most of them walking, some on horses, some in wagons and a few in cars. That's the first Christmas I remember. Sometimes we do have dancing at Christmas now, but not the large gatherings and Indian dancing like then."

Last hours of toddler's life remembered

by KATHLEEN McDONALD
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Dorrie Robinson's attempts to save her baby's life failed Monday, and now she's left only with questions.

"I didn't want to lose my baby," Robinson said Thursday, her trembling voice cut short by tears. "There are so many unanswered questions in my mind, I don't understand...But I think I'm being rational in asking because too many things went wrong."

Robinson said her son, 18-month-old Matthew Mozeleski, quit breathing Monday evening and she repeatedly called E911 for help. She said her calls were never answered and a neighbor finally drove her to the Lincoln County Medical Center. The baby was declared dead by doctors at Lincoln County Medical Center at approximately 11 p.m. Monday night, police said, about a half-hour after the mother brought him into the emergency room.

Robinson said she tried to call E911 three times, but gained no response.

"It just kept ringing," she recounted. "The first time there was no answer and I thought I misdialed. The second time there was still no answer and I thought I must have dialed wrong again. The third time I didn't really wait."

Apparently a cable connection system, owned and operated by U.S. West Communications in Albuquerque, failed, rendering the call to Ruidoso police incomplete. U.S. West acknowledged the system's failure Wednesday, the same day it rectified the technical problem. The company was notified of the problem on Tuesday via GTE, this area's local phone company.

U.S. West spokesman Louis Belmont said there was a day-long lag in reporting, however, on the part of GTE. But GTE's local manager, Eddie Nichols, said the company notified U.S. West of the trunk system failure Tuesday morning, soon after receiving word of a problem from police. Ruidoso's E911 dispatch office had contacted Nichols Tuesday morning, after the sheriff's office checked Robinson's phone and found her claim of no E911 contact to be correct.

Giving up hope for an emergency medical response, Robinson made a feeble attempt at CPR (which she's only seen others do), and then screamed for her neighbor's help, she said. Her neighbor had been helping her move into her new home throughout the day, and immediately responded.

He then drove Robinson and the baby to the LCMC emergency room in about seven minutes, Robinson estimated.

"I'm not sure what time it was," she said. "I was only concerned with the minutes...I remember something — a 3, and then 10, but I'm not sure."

And then came another long moment during those critical last minutes.

"There was no one in the emergency room! I had to scream for help there, too," Robinson said. "I don't know how long it was (before someone appeared) — maybe a minute."

On Thursday morning, assistant hospital administrator Julie Sterchi asked those on staff Monday night about the incident. They said two people were on staff that night, and one was 10 feet away from Robinson when she first came through the door.

"The mother ran in with the baby in her arms and gave one of those blood-curdling screams. It was awful," Sterchi related. She said Robinson had immediate access to help, although on a less busy night she likely would have had to buzz the door as the doors are always locked after 8 p.m. due to safety reasons.

When the medical personnel took over, they tried to resuscitate the child, and managed to get his heart pumping and his lungs breathing, Robinson was later told. But the efforts weren't able to save the baby.

Matthew Mozeleski

"They said he was already brain dead," Robinson said.

"I feel they did their best, but I have questions...no 911, no one in the emergency room. I mean, seconds count and I lost my baby."

Earlier Monday, Robinson had taken her son to Ruidoso's Family Medical Association, telling the doctor about Matthew's labored breathing and apparent discomfort. Matthew just acquired the condition the afternoon before, she said.

After examining the child, the doctor said his lungs appeared clear, but he did have a mild ear infection, Robinson recalled. Doctors at the medical association declined to comment on the visit, out of respect to the patient and mother's right to confidentiality.

Robinson said she was given prescriptions for a syrup called albugerol and a medication called cesaclor — which she got filled — and was told to have the child rest and to bring him back for a check on Friday.

Robinson was told she could obtain the autopsy information from the funeral home. Officials there indicated the child had suffered from mild pneumonia, Robinson said. Body fluids and tissue would be tested for an exact cause of death, but she said the medical examiners were satisfied enough with the with the preliminary findings to release the body for burial.

But Suzanne Fetsco at the University of New Mexico Medical Investigators Office in Albuquerque said Wednesday that "at this point in time in this case there is no finding that is absolute," and the office has not stated any cause of death. Until toxicology and microscopy tests are complete, her department will not issue a death certificate. This could be anywhere from five days to four weeks, she said.

Robinson drove to California Thursday afternoon to prepare funeral arrangements for the child. Matthew's father, Mark Mozeleski, a Ruidoso resident and volunteer fireman, flew out Saturday to meet her.

They had been planning to go to Huntington Beach for the holidays, Robinson said, because her family wanted to see their baby.

"This was my miracle baby," she said. "God decided to take him back, I guess."

County salary hikes denied

by DIANNE STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Elected county officials from all over the state may be writing checks to reimburse their local treasuries in the wake of an attorney general's opinion released Friday.

In response to a request to examine the issue last April from the Lincoln County Commission, Attorney Gen. Tom Udall issued an opinion that elected officials cannot receive pay raises in mid-term.

County Clerk Martha Proctor, who lobbied for the raises, said she was surprised by what she called Udall's change of position.

"Naturally, I feel we should go along with whatever the attorney general says," she said. "I wonder why he changed his opinion. Donna Smith (executive director) from the (New Mexico) Association of Counties said if the opinion was changed, a lot of people would have to pay back a portion of their salaries."

Smith could not be reached for comment Friday and Udall's office did not answer shortly after the opinion was released.

Commissioner Wilton Howell, who voted against the raises, said he's not pleased that it took Udall more than six months to come up with an answer.

"Maybe people ought to take heed of this," he said. "We are asking Washington to pare back and not vote themselves an increase, and how can we do that when all these different counties are voting themselves increases in salaries?

"It's no more right today than six months ago when this vote was taken. My views have not changed a bit. When you're elected for four years, it's like signing a contract. I'm excited about it finally coming out. We should have followed the advice of our attorney against it."

In a 3-2 vote last April, commissioners approved 7% pay raises for elected officials to take effect Jan. 1, 1995. Commissioners are paid $10,500 and would have received an additional $735 a year.

Chairman Monroy Montes and Howell voted against the motion. Ignoring the advice of County Attorney Alan Morel, Commissioners Stirling Spencer, L. Ray Nunley and Bill Schwettmann approved the raise.

Morel pointed out that the state constitution prohibits county commissioners from receiving salary increases while they are in office. In 1990, the State Legislature complicated the issue by approving an equity statute that stated if one elected official or commissioner gets a raise, all must receive the same percentage.

Two previous attorney general opinions in 1983 and 1992 stand by the interpretation that the equity statute is unconstitutional and that the raises should only apply to those newly elected or re-elected officials, Morel said at the time.

Morel said in cases where the constitution and state law disagree, the constitution prevails.

That would mean the sheriff, the assessor and commissioners Spencer and Howell couldn't benefit from the raise, because they have two more years left in their terms. Schwettmann, Montes and Nunley were re-elected Nov. 8. Proctor, who now earns $30,500, could accept a raise to $32,635, because she also was re-elected and is starting a new four-year term. Since the raises were not effective until Jan. 1, no one in Lincoln County has to repay money.

Nunley had second thoughts on the issue and two weeks after approving the raises, he asked for then-State Representative H. John Underwood to request an attorney general's opinion.

Assistant Attorney General Elizabeth Glenn, who actually wrote the opinion, explained that in 1924, the state Supreme Court concluded that changes in county officer salaries during their terms of office were prohibited by the constitution. She said that still is the guiding law on the issue.

Ruidoso Art & Film Board revived to attract film productions

by KATHLEEN McDONALD
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

It's an eclectic group of Lincoln County residents, this board of seven, and it's prepared to enlighten residents to artistic happenings in the area.

Ruidoso's newest Art and Film Board members, appointed by Mayor Jerry Shaw in October, represent a wide array of the fine and performing arts scene.

On the roster is board chairman Jay Wright, the director of the Museum of the Horse and a county arts board member; Brian Seale, a board member of philanthropist Jackie Spencer's performing arts center (she'll be funding the construction of an arts center near Alto); Rob Rowe, an organizer of community concerts; Sandra Weber, who has long been involved in the performing arts; Danny Flores, a former band director and a symphony member in Roswell, who is currently the Ruidoso High School assistant principal; and Bruce McElya, the prize-winning landscape and wildlife photographer.

Joining the board as ex-officio members are: Richard Farnsworth, the screen actor of "Grey Fox," "The Natural," and "Havana" fame; Jackie Spencer, the said local philanthropist and art lover; and Gary Morton, a member of the state arts board.

The board, which has thus far met three times, has been charged with enhancing the art community's presence in Ruidoso, and luring other visual mediums to the mountain village.

Specifically, the board will act as a liaison between the visual communications industry and local governments, businesses and people involved in the arts.

It will also work to attract on-location productions to the Ruidoso area; serve as a clearinghouse for information; and try to increase public awareness of the fine arts and performing arts.

Still in its organizational stage, the board voted Dec. 15 to survey community members involved in the arts and media and ask how best to assist them. Then the board plans to hire a consultant to analyze the responses and suggest ways to help the board fulfill its goals.

The board also hopes to develop a coordinated calendar of art-related activities occurring throughout the community.

Shaw said she dissolved the last board in the fall of 1993 because because of its "flimsy" charge, questionable agendas and inconsistent meetings. Most members had a singular bent toward music, she added.

After some time, Shaw said various individuals came to her with suggestions geared toward re-establishing a new board.

"There's just so much (artistic) energy out there and it all started flowing toward me," she explained.

And it was Monks, she said, who came up to her and asked, "Why not have films shot here?" Major productions like "Grizzly Adams" and "Casey's Shadow" were both shot on location here, so why not attract more?

Monks drew up questionnaires that he sent out to production studios across the country, asking them what they seek in on-location productions. Apparently, Monks said, those who have responded cite many of the same attractive conditions that Ruidoso offers — natural, scenic beauty, wildlife, historic settings, Native Americans, sporting areas, sunny skies and a relatively low cost economy.

"It's all here," said Monks.

The only apparent drawback was the lack of easy access via air transport, Shaw said.

County crew gets Christmas bonus

Lincoln County's 100 employees received an early Christmas present from county commissioners this year.

On a motion by Commissioner Wilton Howell, the board earlier this month voted 3-1 to approve a $275 across-the-board merit bonus to full-time employees and $100 to permanent part-time workers. The money will come from a $28,000 savings realized by the county in workman's compensation claims this year.

Commissioner Stirling Spencer was absent. Commissioner Bill Schwettmann voted against the motion, saying he preferred a higher across-the-board figure of $335 for full-time employees.

Correction

When Jerry Apodaca was governor of New Mexico from 1975-78, he contended the state's water resources could only support 1.6 million people, according to Joe Salazar, president of the Water Defense Association. An incorrect figure was listed in a story Thursday.

Weather

The National Weather Service forecast for the south-central mountain region of New Mexico calls for mostly cloudy skies today with a 20% chance of showers and snow in the mountain elevations over 8,000 feet. The predicted high is in the mid-50s with the low tonight near 30.

The Christmas Day forecast calls for continued cloudiness with a 20% chance of showers. Snow is expected in mountain elevations over 8,000 feet. The expected high is in the low-50s.

Heavenly voices fill air at Storm Ranch

by Daniel Agnew Storm

My 85th Christmas Tree

This is being written to you an hour or so after nightfall.

The pinon Christmas tree is bright with electric lights of red, green and blue and decorations that I have saved up — some going back many years. There is one little candle holder, going back to the days when we had candles on the Christmas trees, somewhere in the house. I could not find it this year.

Corina the Storm Ranch cat is sleeping by the fireplace after looking over the latest presents under the tree.

Angel Voices

Just before dark a small bus arrived at the house gate carrying a group of young carol singers under the direction of Luz Elva Chavez, music director of the Church of Living Water at San Patricio.

The children, from age of about four to 10 or 11, sang "O Come All Ye Faithful," "Joy to the World" and "Feliz Navidad" (Merry Christmas).

The voices of the children seemed to be echoing from heaven on this night only three days from Christmas.

These little messengers of Christmas followed an ancient tradition handed down to us from time out of mind.

The singers included Luz Elva Chavez, director; Richard Urban, Ramona Urban, and Teresa Chavez, adult choir members; and the children, Israel Chavez, Daniel Chavez, Gabriel Chavez, Michael Chavez, Adrianna Chavez, Roman Chavez, Jessie Arras, Daniel Arras, April Urban, Jaime Urban and Nicholas Page.

Christmas Visits

In mid-morning of Dec. 22, Dianne Buchannan and her son, Bret, came by to wish me a Merry Christmas.

Then just before high noon, here came three Irish lads, Mel O'Reilly and his two sons Patrick Brendon and Colm Brian.

They had come from home in Albuquerque to visit their former home, Ruidoso.

Colm Brian's twin brother Mel Dylan is on his way home from college.

Mel and his sons were glad to see the flag flying from the flagpole that Mel and Ken Green installed for me a few years ago. It was a Christmas blessing to visit with these three long-time friends.

These messages will reach you on Christmas Eve, so that we may have a visit through the magic of the printed page the day before the birthday of our Blessed Infant Lord and Savior.

Let us wish a Merry Christmas to our Mescalero Apache neighbors, in memory of how the First Americans helped our Pilgrim forefathers celebrate their first Christmas in 1620.

I hope you have a blessed Christmas and Happy New Year.

Glencoe Palo-Verde, Ruidoso Downs firemen sign compact

A mutual aid compact is expected to be signed next month between the Glencoe Palo-Verde Fire Department and the Ruidoso Downs Village Fire Department. The last mutual aid compact between the two expired in 1989.

The smaller Glencoe Palo-Verde rural department is made up of volunteers, while the Ruidoso Downs department has paid firefighters. The Downs department is often called upon to aid their neighbors to the east.

Ruidoso Downs has billed Lincoln County, which supervises the various volunteer community fire departments, for $1,800 in past costs for assisting Glencoe Palo-Verde, plus $170 for a Nov. 15 mutual aid fire call.

Ruidoso Downs Mayor Joe Hayhurst said last week that kind of expense is excessive and asked the county for repayment. In a letter to the county, village officials said just one Glencoe department volunteer showed up to fight the fire in November and he didn't arrive with any equipment.

County commissioners told Hayhurst to meet with County manager Carolin Cooney and present a bill during mid-year budget review.

County solid waste group may change methods

In a brief 30-minute meeting Monday, members of the Lincoln County Solid Waste Authority agreed to consider rescinding a 1992 policy that requires stricter purchasing procedures than the state procurement code.

The authority was criticized in an audit for not following the stricter policy, but manager Joe Lewandowski pointed out the policy had never been put in written form and he was unaware of its existence when he was hired in 1993. The issue will be put on the agenda for the authority's next meeting.

Lewandowski also was told to continue negotiations to provide garbage collection and disposal service to the towns of Carrizozo and Corona. They currently are under contract to a private collection firm, but the contract terms will run out next year. The authority is a coalition of government entities with the goal of serving the county and all five of its municipalities.

Sports

Dear Santa, here's a sporting Christmas list

From the bench

Laura Clymer

In just two short months, I've already come up with a Christmas wish list to send to dear old Santa.

This is a list I wish I could give to sports figures near and far.

Keep in mind I don't have a direct line to Santa and, chances are, he won't give these gifts to those on my list. But just in case he's listening, here are some presents I'd like to see given Dec. 25:

1) Crying towels to all Dallas Cowboy football fans. Come Superbowl Sunday, they are going to need them because their beloved 'Pokes won't be playing Jan. 29.

2) Several pairs of socks to Dick Vitale — for his mouth, not his feet. It doesn't take a rocket scientist to figure out why this former college basketball coach turned television "analyst" doesn't coach anymore — how could his players survive halftime speeches replete with jargon and cliches?

I can just hear him now.

"Heeey, baby, you gotta be a Windex-man and grab da rock. Come on, baby, it's prime time." Meanwhile, the players were thinking, "How the heck do we break this press?"

3) A pair of suspenders to every player on the Ruidoso boys varsity basketball team. These guys need something to keep up their shorts. I know wearing baggy shorts is "in," but the way the Warriors sport their shorts is a bit ridiculous.

4) New warm-ups for the Ruidoso girls basketball team. Yes, the ones they currently have are no more than a year old, but they are predominantly white with horizontal stripes. Females would rather not wear either — white makes us look bigger than we are and horizontal stripes accentuate our hips. Name one female in this world who would like to accomplish both of these effects.

Ruidoso girls coach Janie Roland confirmed my suspicion the other day: a male, with every good intention, ordered the warm-ups.

5) Lots of snow for all the winter visitors and officials at Ski Apache. My hope is that plenty of the white stuff will keep dispositions happy up on the mountain. It's hard not to get downright grumpy when Mother Nature doesn't cooperate. But hey, we can't control the weather so why worry about it?

6) More equipment and money for the Ski Apache Handicapped Skiers Association (SAHSA). This wonderful program opens doors for disabled skiers. SAHSA executive director Lisa Maue, her instructors and volunteers shared the fun of skiing with more than 260 disabled individuals last year.

7) Back to college sports world. How about head examinations for Fiesta Bowl selection committee members? How could they justify inviting Notre Dame to what has become one of the top five bowl games in the country? The Fighting Irish, boasting a 6-4-1 record, take on the No. 3-ranked Colorado Buffalos who are 10-1. Maybe that's why Bill McCartney resigned from CU — what is the advantage for the Buffs to play N.D.?

8) A blank check from the New Mexico Legislature for the proposed community recreation center and related improvements. Hey, Ruidoso is the perfect recreation playground in the winter and summer. Imagine what a first-class facility with softball diamonds, soccer fields, etc. would do for the economy and our youth.

9) Lastly, I hope everyone enjoys a safe and joyful holiday season.

Nominations for top races at the Downs surpass '94 numbers

Nominations for the major 1995 quarter horse races at Ruidoso Downs are up 20-60% from 1994 levels, announced racetrack officials.

The All American Futurity, All American Derby, Ruidoso Futurity, Ruidoso Derby, Rainbow Futurity and Rainbow Derby all showed increases in nominations from the same period a year ago.

A nomination is the first of a three-part process to enter a horse into a race. After paying the nominating fee, owners then pay sustaining fees and finally the entry fee.

The racetrack's general manager Scott Wells reported nominations are up 20% for the All American Futurity and 60% for the Rainbow Futurity.

Wells attributes the increases to racing conditions and stakes money at Ruidoso Downs.

"This clearly reflects what we suspected all along, which is that people who are serious about top-quality racing conditions for their horses will race them at Ruidoso Downs," Wells said.

"Our dual-track racing surface is the only one of its kind and offers absolutely no bias from inside to outside. Our summer climate is cool and easy on horses. But most importantly, we board the richest and most prestigious stakes program in the industry," he said.

Nominations secretary Vicki McCabe said she has 612 nominations for the All American Futurity, 314 nominations for the Ruidoso Quarter Horse Futurity and 387 for the Rainbow Futurity. Futurity races are for 2-year-old colts and fillies.

These three races comprise the Triple Crown of quarter horse racing. The All American Futurity is the richest quarter horse race in the world, with a payoff of $1 million to the winner.

For the 1995 races, McCabe said owners can enter any or all of the Triple Crown races. Last year, owners had to enter for all three.

Of the nominated horses, not all will compete, McCabe said.

"Some drop out because they (the owners) don't feel like their horse is fast enough or because of injury," McCabe said.

The comeback of the breeding industry may be one reason the nominations are up, McCabe concluded.

"For awhile they kind of quit because there was no money in it," she said. "I think we'll continue to see it grow."

Watching the Wild Side

Inside the Outdoors

Ben Hanson

A common sight to even the most casual observer driving on New Mexico roadways are raptors, or birds of prey.

Even in-town viewers may see a beautiful kestrel sitting on a fence watching patiently for its dinner. Red-tailed and sharp-shinned hawks are often seen on telephone poles or prominent tree branches and American harriers glide on wind currents over the prairies. Even the rare bald eagle calls New Mexico waterways home during the winter months.

Many species of raptors make a permanent home in our state, but even more may be found migrating through during the spring and fall months.

In the Manzano Mountains, biologists counted more than 4,000 migrating raptors one fall and more than 3,000 in the spring. Birds of prey provide a source of beauty during the stark winter months and it seems impossible that someone would want to purposely destroy them, but it happens all the time.

Even though all hawks, owls, eagles, falcons and vultures are protected by state and federal laws, hundreds are killed by poachers each year in New Mexico. The extent of the problem is hard to determine, and the reasons are even tougher to understand. No one in their right mind would go out deliberately to hunt and kill a hawk for the evening dinner table. So why kill raptors?

Many raptors are killed by poultry and livestock owners that feel threatened. Other raptors are killed by vandals that just want to kill something. This occurred near Maljamar, where a nest full of half-grown Harris hawks was ripped apart by shotgun blasts, killing the chicks.

Some hunters also kill hawks because they believe they prey on game birds such as quail. Unfortunately these hunters are, in most cases, actually killing quail protectors that feed on rats and mice that raid quail nests.

Probably the most unforgivable raptor poachers are those that receive a profit from their crimes. They go out specifically hunting hawks, owls, eagles and falcons to sell feathers and talons on the black market. These poachers are a real problem in New Mexico. The illegal trade in feathers is a flourishing business in our state.

In 1981 federal agents with the Fish and Wildlife Service completed an undercover operation in New Mexico, Oklahoma and Arizona. The focus was on the illegal feather trade and the results were astounding.

Huge piles of feathers and items made from feathers, along with the head and talons of eagles, were seized. One officer involved summed it up as a truly sickening sight. But. this was only the tip of the iceberg; 500 new leads were uncovered by the raid.

Again in 1986, undercover agents went to work, this time targeting the Gallup area which appears to be a major point in the illegal feather trade. This time 50 violators were arrested. Thousands of bird carcasses and untold numbers of feathers were seized along with hundreds of thousands of dollars in articles made from bird parts. The story goes on.

In 1988 another undercover operation was completed in the San Luis Valley, this time targeting illegal sales of all types of wildlife. This time the undercover agent found that, along with elk and deer meat, hawks, owls and eagles were part of the market. Bald eagles demand about the same price as an elk, about $275.

Unfortunately, as long as there is a market for the products made from illegal game parts, there will be without a doubt someone around to supply the parts. The ultimate price is paid to poachers by our birds of prey.

How long will it last and can raptors stay ahead of the poachers?

The Ski Apache Handicapped Skiers Association is recruiting volunteers to work with area children during its school program, slated to run the week of Jan. 28 through March 1.

Children with developmental disabilities will ski on Tuesdays and the New Mexico School for the Visually Handicapped will bring their students on Wednesdays.

Volunteers can work with either or both groups. No experience is required, although volunteers should have their own equipment and, ideally, be intermediate skiers.

Training sessions will be held for volunteers on Jan. 7 and 8 or Jan. 21 and 22 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. What to expect from your student, teaching methods and personal skiing will be covered.

Volunteers interested in coaching during the Special Olympics at Angel Fire this year should make plans to come Jan. 21 for a special orientation. There is no fee for the sessions, but volunteers are asked to pre-register. For further information, please call 336-4416.

Our Christmas wish list

Here's our Christmas wish list. We don't expect to get it — but it sure is fun to let your mind ramble.

We wish for commercial flights from the Sierra Blanca airport so we don't have to drive through the God-forsaken area west of Carrizozo and Lincoln County.

We wish for enough cemetery plots in Ruidoso to accommodate everyone who desires to remain here for eternity.

We wish we could figure out what the middle class is, so we'd know who will get a federal tax break.

We wish for a tram to the Apache Ski Area.

We wish our new state representative is Santa in disguise.

We wish the Ruidoso-Capitan-Hondo Valley-Lincoln loop would be designated a scenic byway by the state and federal government, so we could have lots of government funding for highway improvements, signs and a larger visitor center.

We wish for constructive work between the Republican governor and Democratic Legislature (the same goes for the federal level).

We wish for a secure Sierra Blanca prison facility.

We wish for a downtown parking garage in Ruidoso.

We wish Ruidoso residents would pick up the trash littered all over their neighborhood instead of waiting for someone else to do it — or even better, put out their trash in a somewhat secure trash container next to the bins if they are full.

We wish for classes at the Ruidoso building just given to Eastern New Mexico University, leading to a growing college that attracts high school graduates.

We wish for understanding between the Mescalero Apache tribe and Ruidoso residents, even if they disagree.

We wish for a White Christmas.

Ruidoso's Night Before Christmas

by DON HIXON

Ruidoso News Staff Writer

'Twas the night before Christmas, and the stars were shining bright,
While far, far below,
Ruidoso slept through the night.
Mayor Shaib was snoozing,
she's nobody's fool,
dreaming of a brand new covered swimming pool.
Dub Williams was sleeping,
he has the will and the way,
dreams filled with the things
he'll do in Santa Fe.
The ad-hoc committees
were all asleep in their beds, visions of RFPs dancing in their heads.
Gary Jackson was sleeping dreaming of water, hoping Grindstone's treatment plant would do what it oughter.
And Alan Briley was snoozing, happy at last,
hoping barrels on Mainstreet
were a thing of the past.
Councilman Potter was sleeping, thoughts raced through his brain,
dreaming of vendor signs
and landing airplanes.
Mike Radzlewicz was having a nightmare,
the worst of them all dreaming extraterrestrial planners had taken over city hall.
J.D. James was happy,
dreaming sweet dreams,
of pastries and donuts
filled with sweet creams,
While boxer Jimmy Thunder, big as a longshoreman,
was dreaming of beating world champion George Foreman.
The school kids were dozing,
safe in their beds,
not thinking of curfew,
but Santa instead.
Joan Bailey was dreaming,
she runs the chamber you know,
wondering where the visitor's center would go.
Most bears were sleeping,
but a few were about,
In Ruidoso the bears prefer dumpsters to trout.
The Museum of the Horse was silent, closed for the night its exhibits delight the old and young alike.
John Underwood's dreams were busy,
in his head they spun round,
as he tried to make sure
gaming came to town.
And the racetrack was silent,
deep in its slumber,
awaiting the sound of visitors
and hoofbeats like thunder.
But the police were not sleeping
they were out in force this night to be drinking and driving is simply not right.
Then suddenly I woke,
to such a noise and a clatter,
that I jumped from my bed to see what was the matter.
And looking out my window
I saw Santa's sleigh,
and listening closely,
I could just hear him say,
"On Ruidoso, sleep well this night...
knowing, that you are seasoned just right...
and don't ever let anything dim your bright light."
And I in amazement,
could only but muse,
and say Merry Christmas Ruidoso,

Letters to the Editor

County shouldn't take on complex constitutional questions

TO THE EDITOR:

This letter was delivered to the five county commissioners and read to the public at the hearing detailed below. It is a rebuttal to the letter The Ruidoso News recently published by John Howard.

Dear Mr. Montes (Lincoln county commissioner):

On Nov. 10 I attended the public hearing on a proposed ordinance regarding the takeover and management by Lincoln County of federal lands in the county. I was the only speaker urging non-passage of this ordinance. Since I was cut off at three minutes whereas many other speakers took much more time, spoke more than once, read long letters etc., I find it necessary to state my objections herewith in letter form to all five of you commissioners.

You acknowledge in the preamble that on its admission to statehood in 1912, New Mexico forever disclaimed all right and title to unappropriated land within its boundaries in its Constitution. You go on to say, however, that the state has strong claims (including legal ones) upon such lands, and that it is a FACT that New Mexico was FORCED to renounce said land claims.

This is to me patent nonsense and would be declared so by any competent court in the land! More likely our people BEGGED the U.S. government to be admitted, because they could not rule themselves, and did not have the finances, the legal structure, and the know-how to protect and develop water, forest, agricultural, transportation and other resources in a rapidly expanding national and international environment. In other words, Billy the Kid was already out of date.

You cite the "equal footing" doctrine as having been violated in the case of New Mexico and other states. This then is clearly a constitutional question and surely must be adjudicated in a much higher court than a municipal or district court in Lincoln County.

You proceed to state categorically that ownership and management of public lands by state/county government would greatly benefit the public since revenues would accrue to these governments and lessen tax burdens. I'd go for that in a second if you could show me and all the other non-ranching, struggling businesses in the Ruidoso area your figures to prove it. That area makes up about 70% of the county population and depends almost entirely on non-agricultural revenues from the racetrack, ski area, tourism, and recreational attractions our million-plus acre, well-managed national forest provides. Also the payroll of about 300 county residents from the Forest Service, BLM, Soil Conservation and other federal and state agencies, which is in place, guaranteed and substantial, must amount to at least $7 million a year. Show me figures how you intend to match that!

Now let's talk about crime and law enforcement. My guess is that under existing local and county police and sheriff control, there have been 100, maybe 1,000 times more murders, rapes, robberies and other crimes in the past five years in these private areas than have occurred on federally protected land and forest in the last 60 years. Millions of people have come to these lands in that period, freely enjoyed them, and were far safer during their stay than the average Lincoln County resident in our nonfederal lands and communities. Even with all the federal grants and aid to beef up area enforcement, this imbalance still persists. Show me figures how local control would better fight forest fires, reduce crime, or otherwise greatly reduce our tax burden. I don't buy it, gentlemen.

Many other segments of our economy and welfare could suffer equally. I turn now to what I and many other responsible citizens here will tell you if you pass this ordinance. If you try to enforce it, within three to six months multiple lawsuits will be filed against the county by business groups, social agencies, environmental groups, or class-action individuals. Catron County faces two suits already, and the attorney general is likely to back them in their complaints.

When Commissioner Spencer told you at the last hearing that all over the state there was tremendous support for these land reforms, he must have been "preaching to the choir" as he does here in Carrizozo. As he himself said, he got his butt beat, and so did Colin McMillan and Tom Udall's opponent. All this is spite of the Republican sweep throughout the country. I further suspect that any commissioner who votes this time for this ordinance will regret it next election time when their majority constituents realize the expense, the chaos, the huge mistake of being bamboozled by a small irate minority.

Do not be fooled by the lack of opponents at these hearings. As in the fight against the MRS (nuclear waste storage), nearly all of your electorate are unaware of what is being force-fed to you commissioners by the PLUAC people. When that electorate wakes up and calls you to account, as in the Super Sales Barn pork-barrel disaster, you may well regret your action.

It is not the business of a sparsely-populated county like ours to take on the burden of a constitutional question of this magnitude. If you must pursue this issue, join with much larger populations and states that can bear the social and financial onus of this effort. Don't, please don't squander my poor taxes and be the mouse that roared.

Rotary honors school board president

Ronnie L. Hemphill, certified public accountant and Ruidoso School Board president, has been presented the Paul Harris Fellowship award by the Ruidoso-Hondo Valley Rotary Club.

The award is the Rotary's way of expressing its appreciation for a contribution to humanitarian and educational programs. It is also a tribute to a person whose life demonstrates a shared purpose with the objectives of the Rotary Foundation.

The Rotary will donate $1,000 in Hemphill's name to the foundation to be used for various benevolent purposes, including the purchase of polio vaccines for infants and school supplies for children in South America. The foundation will match the donation with another $1,000.

"Ronnie has always been an asset to the community," said Dan Austin, Rotary president. "His activities through the Rotary Club have helped many people and we are very pleased to award him with the Paul Harris Fellowship Award."

Hemphill graduated as valedictorian of his senior class in 1971. After receiving a degree in accounting from Texas Tech, he moved to Ruidoso in 1979 to work for an accounting firm. He served one year as chamber of commerce director and vice-president, and joined the Rotary in 1979. He served four terms as Rotary treasurer, one term as Rotary vice-president and one term as Rotary president. In 1991 Hemphill was elected to the Ruidoso School Board and currently serves as board president.

"I have been a member of the Ruidoso Rotary Club for the last 15 years, and now to receive the Paul Harris award is the ultimate honor," Hemphill said. "I'm very proud to be part of an elite group of Ruidoso Rotary Club members who have received this award."

Poop Scoop

by DIANNE STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

When bringing a new dog into your home, one of the first challenges may be training the animal not to choose the carpet for a bathroom.

Crate training is one method suggested for both pups, young dogs and even adults (who may need a reminder after a stay in a shelter). The High Country Basset Hound Rescue & Adoption Service Inc. offered the following advice.

The first point is not to think of the crate as punishment. The structure functions as the dog's den, room and safe house. It can be a plastic traveling case, a real crate, a wire frame (covered on the sides and back) or any manageable enclosure. But it must be large enough for the animal to stand up when full grown, turn around and lie flat on its side.

Keep in mind that dogs are den animals, genetically programmed thousands of years ago to seek safety from attack above or behind. The crate offers the same protection. It's a housetraining tool, because dogs will not soil their dens. It's a place that's comfortable for your pet when guests are in the house and for use as a retreat when the pet seeks some time alone.

The success of crate use depends on how it is introduced to a pet. Don't ever use it as punishment.

When you bring the crate home, let the dog look, sniff, investigate or ignore it. Put a washable and comfortable cotton blanket inside or a sheet or beach towel wrapped around a foam rubber pad.

Leave the door open and don't be discouraged if the dog doesn't immediately go inside. It may take one or two days. Try baiting with a treat or a favorite toy.

When the dog goes inside, don't sneak up and lock the door. Let the animal take a nap. In time, the animal will voluntarily nap in the crate. That's the time the door can be closed, at the same time the dog is being praised for being good.

At times when an owner must close a pet in the crate, be sure the animal first has enough time outside to eliminate. Then the pet can be told "crate," and it is on the way to being crate trained.

Remember though, the crate is a tool, not a way of life. Your dog's favorite place is with you. Never put a pup in the crate and leave the room for a long time. Dogs are social creatures and pack animals. They survive in the wild because of their pack. You now are the dog's pack. When you leave, it represents stress.

In summer, be sure the crate is kept out of the sun and that there is plenty of air circulation.

The crate also is a handy tool when traveling with a dog. A crated dog won't lick windows, chew upholstery, bite the deputy who pulls you over or distract you by jumping around. Windows can be rolled down safely. In case of an accident, a crated dog can't escape to be lost or killed on the highway. Anyone coming to your aid can easily remove the dog in its crate to be put somewhere safe.

If housetraining reinforcement is all your new pet needs and you enjoy a canine sleeping companion, another temporary approach is to put the dog on a leash. When you sleep, loop the leash handle over one of the bed posts, making sure enough lead is available that the dog won't choke if it jumps down occasionally.

The dog will not soil the bed and it's unlikely it will do anything around its perimeter. First thing in the morning, praise it for not messing and take it outside.

Pups about six weeks of age need to go outside about every four hours. That increases to five hours at eight weeks and eight hours by 5-6 months. They need to be supervised when they are loose in the house.

A full-blooded German shepherd, Roscoe was left in the drop-off cage at the shelter about a week ago. He's about one year old and weighs 80 pounds. He's docile and affectionate and is searching for an owner to appreciate him.

Barley is an attractive buff color cocker spaniel. He appears to be full-blooded, about two years old and was brought to the shelter as a stray. Cockers often are not recommended for families with children, but Barley is very sweet-natured.

Chiropractic office adds second person

Dr. Lawrence Shearer has joined the Capitan chiropractic office of Dr. Richard A. Farris.

Shearer has practiced in New Mexico since 1980 and said he relocated to Lincoln County to enjoy the area's lifestyle.

Farris has practiced in the area for 20 years, serving Ruidoso, Capitan, Carrizozo, Corona, Tularosa, Alamogordo and Roswell.

Both men are Palmer Chiropractic School graduates, and will offer extended office hours to provide area residents more access to chiropractic care.

Beginning Dec. 19, Shearer will be in the Capitan office on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. and Farris will see patients Tuesdays and Thursdays from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. and Saturdays from 9 a.m. to 12 noon.

College closes Ruidoso deal

Eastern New Mexico University officials accepted 2.6 acres with a 40,000 square-foot building in Ruidoso as a gift from a Littlefield, Texas supply company Tuesday.

The former True Value building in the Sierra Mall was transferred to ENMU by Dale Walthall, Chairman of the Board of B & W Supply, Inc.

The donor has stipulated that the property not be sold for a period of two years and that the university pay closing expenses, including a title policy survey and appraisal.

ENMU President Everett Frost said the university will explore several possibilities for the property. He said the interests of the university and the educational opportunities for the citizens of Ruidoso and Lincoln County will guide the future of the property.

"We will seriously look at the possible development of a university center," Frost said. "Such a center would provide for the two-year programming currently offered in Ruidoso, as well as upper division and graduate programs if appropriate funding can be provided by the state."

The ENMU-Ruidoso Instructional Center opened in 1991 and has enrollment of more than 500 students. The Center is governed by the ENMU Board of Regents and the Ruidoso School Board through a joint operating agreement. Classes are held in public school facilities in Ruidoso.

Hot-selling cookbook benefits elderly

"Cocinas de New Mexico" has been a "hot" selling cookbook for more than 25 years. The 10th edition of this collection of traditional New Mexican foods has been printed just in time for the holiday season.

Published by public Service Company of New Mexico (PNM), "Cocinas de New Mexico" has been updated to include helpful information on low-fat substitutions, microwave-cooking, high altitude baking and tips for energy-efficient cooking.

The cost of the cookbook is $11.95. Proceeds from its sale go directly to Project UNITE, a program that helps low-income and/or elderly people pay their energy bills during the cold, winter months as well as hot, summer months.

Cocinas, Spanish for "kitchens," has some of New Mexico's favorites like posole, tamales, bizcochitos and sopaipillas. These recipes were handed down from generation to generation and compiled with the help of PNM employees, their families and friends. PNM has 5,000 copies on hand and is ready to fill orders. Orders can be placed by sending a check to PNM, c/o Teri Aragon MS-0506, Alvarado Square, Albuquerque, N.M. 87158.

Roll-off service on the way

Calvin Griffin, services supervisor for the Lincoln County Solid Authority, sits on the rim of one of the authority's new garbage containers. Holding 20-40 yards of trash, they are more than 20 times larger than regular commercial dumpsters. Some of the 13 containers will be stationed around the county; others are available for rent.

Celebrating Haydn with Peter Ustinov

Venerated during his lifetime and forgotten after his death, Franz Joseph "Papa" Haydn left an indelible mark on classical music. Celebrating Haydn with Peter Ustinov is a two-hour documentary and performance special highlighting the life and music of "Papa" Haydn. From performances of the quartet form, of which Haydn is credited as founder, to the symphony form, of which he is called the "father," his music resounds with a brilliance that has become popular in the last 50 years — the first major renaissance since Haydn's death in 1809.

Celebrating Haydn with Peter Ustinov also compares Haydn with his contemporary and friend, Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart, two central figures who influenced the development of classical music.

Celebrating Haydn with Peter Ustinov airs Monday, December 26th at 8:00 p.m. with a stereo simulcast on KENW/KMTH-FM.

Buckaroo Bard

The days of ridin' the range and swappin' tales around the campfire are back in Buckaroo Bard. Actor Richard Farnsworth, who starred in "The Natural" and "Anne of Green Gables," hosts this unique look at poetry done western-style.

With the help of one of the most famous buckaroo bards, Waddie Mitchell, the program shows cowboy life as only a poet could see it.

Every year in Elko, Nevada, cowboy poets gather to keep their dying art alive. Now, filmed against the beautiful backdrop of Nevada, these poems really do come to life. In Buckaroo Bard, poetry appears in the midst of a barroom brawl with a gunslinger; sitting around a campfire after a hard day's work; and waiting at a chapel with the rest of the men in town for a wedding.

Waddie, with his famous handlebar moustache, is able to paint vivid pictures of life on the range. These "yarns" as Mitchell calls them are sometimes humorous and sometimes sad, but they are always a fascinating look at cowboy living. In fact, the verse and stories are told so well you may not notice it's poetry at all.

Buckaroo Bard will air Monday, December 5th at 7:00 p.m. on KENW-TV. It repeats Saturday, December 10th at 9:40 p.m. and Wednesday, December 28th at 1:00 p.m.

WINTER VISITORS GUIDE '94-'95

The Ruidoso News

A wonderful winter awaits at Ski Apache

Skiing is fun in Ruidoso.

This simple sentiment forms the theme of this year's Winter Guide.

All types of skiers have fun here — locals and visitors, novices and experts, parents and children, four-year-olds and 84-year-olds, abled and disabled, powderhound and racers. We figure it has something to do with the friendly locals.

Even non-skiers partake of the season's merriment as they shop and sightsee while family or friends schuss.

We dedicate this Guide to the spirit of Ski Apache's winter fun created by snow and sun, enhanced by people and enjoyed by all.

December delights

The local business crowd Meets the Mountain Thursday, Dec. 1.

Everybody's invited to dress up in their zaniest costumes and compete for prizes at the first-ever First Flake Fest costume contest in midtown Ruidoso Friday, Dec. 2.

The pace changes Saturday, Dec. 3 at the first Apache Snowflake Ball. It's an elegant evening of dining, dancing, door prizes, and fun at the Inn of the Mountain Gods. The affair benefits Ski Apache Handicapped Skiers Association. For information on all three events call Tami Montes at The Ruidoso News, 505-257-4001.

That same weekend, Ski Apache Ski School holds its annual instructor hiring clinic. The two-day, on-snow session is given at no charge, but reservations are required. Call Rick Vincent, Ski School Director, at 505-336-4356 to hold your spot.

Early season bargains

From Thanksgiving through Dec. 16, Ski Apache Ski School offers an early season bargain: weekday lesson prices good on weekends, too. Get a jump on the Christmas crowd with lessons at a good price.

I won a gold!

NASTAR racing begins Jan. 5, 1995 on Smokey Bear. NASTAR is an acronym for the NAtional STAndard Race, a system in nearly 400 ski areas in the U.S., Canada and even Europe. Here, skiers race not against each other but against the clock. If a skier's time, adjusted for age and gender, falls within certain limits, that skier wins a bronze, silver or even a gold medal.

It's fun and it takes place every Wednesday and Sunday from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Stop by the ski school desk for an entry form and ask about pre-race clinics.

February fun

Feb. 11 begins spring racing season with the traditional Lubbock Cup.

Around Valentine's Day, the Cross Your Heart Cup, the Southwest's only women's race, delights spectators and racers alike. Outrageously costumed skiers cross the finish line, vying for such dubious titles as Biggest Flirt, Best Costume, Biggest Boobs, Best Buns and other "honors."

All races take place on Smokey Bear.

March madness

Watch for the Media Race and the Ski Apache Handicapped Skiers Association Championships in early March, followed by the Hot Chocolate Cup, a fun event for four to 12-year-olds.

For information on any Ski Apache event, call the marketing department at 505-336-4356.

What's new on slopes– snowmaking and food

There's always something new at Ski Apache. This year it's expanded snowmaking and more choices in food service, plus improvements skiers don't see.

More snowmaking

Snowmaking now augments Buckhorn and the Elk Quad Chair Line, two of the most difficult trails in the new Elk Ridge complex on the lower mountain. With the addition of snowmaking to those two trails, skiers will find good snow on all levels of terrain.

Also new is the snowmaking system on Lower Moonshine, a novice area.

More food choices

Ski apache's venerable main day lodge underwent a minor facelift in its food service areas. The second floor cafeteria now boasts brand new serving lines for hot breakfasts and lunches. Downstairs the former brownbagger's snack bar is now a hot food cafeteria line.

More improvements

One improvement skiers won't see is the new 950-kilowatt reserve generator. Twice the capacity of its predecessor, this generator's sole function is to stand by in case of power failure. Texas-New Mexico Power Company supplies Ski Apache with electricity via miles of line over rough terrain. During periods of peak use that coincide with inclement weather such as the Christmas holidays, chances of power failure rise.

The new generator will enable us to continue serving the skier public with less hassle, say Ski Apache officials.

New ski school programs help all types

by J. SCOTT GOELLER
Special to The News

New and innovative ski school programs will be offered at Ski Apache during the 94-95 season.

The Advanced Skiing Seminar and Master Level Discount Classes are specifically designed for the intermediate and expert skier. The main focus of these classes will be on improving skiing skills in a fun learning environment at a great price.

Traditionally, people came to ski school only as first-time beginners. After learning the basics, they went off on their own and never thought of returning to ski school.

Why? Our best guess is, they figured they learned everything in the first class and there's nothing more to it. Unfortunately, that is far from the truth. If you are one of the many who have been skiing for a number of years and just can't seem to get any better, you may want to check out these ski school offers.

Master level discounts

Buy any class lesson at full price and receive a half-day Master level lesson for $15. Regular price for this class is $30. It's a chance for someone who has friends or family already in ski school to brush up on his own technique and have a little fun at the same time.

These classes will help you develop a more effective and stylish parallel turn, and stress efficiency of movements. In short, it can make skiing easier for you. This offer is not available Dec. 26 - Jan. 1, Jan. 14-15, Feb. 18-19, or March 12-18.

Advanced skiing seminars

These seminars offer four lessons spread over four weeks with the same instructor and the same group of people for $80. It is intended to be a skiing social as well as a learning and skill development program. Divided into interest groups including Seniors, Young Skiers, Women Only and Men's Masters, these seminars will be able to meet individual needs in the atmosphere of a fun group situation.

Seminars are held on Sundays from 10 a.m. until 12:30 p.m. First session — Jan. 8, 22, 29, Feb. 5; second session — Feb. 12, 26, March 5, 12.

These programs are taught by Professional Ski Instructors Association certified instructors — the best in the ski teaching profession.

For more information on dates, restrictions and other ski school programs, contact Ski Apache Ski School at 505-336-4356 ext. 111.

Snow info at your fingertips

How much snow fell last night? What was groomed? Do I need chains?

For answers to these important questions, call 505-257-9001, 24 hours a day. You'll hear a recorded message that is changed daily, sometimes more often if conditions warrant.

Not near a phone? Then check in at your local ski shop, read the Ruidoso News, watch CNN or the Weather Channel on TV or tune your car radio locally to KBUY-AM, KRUI-AM or W105-FM.

In addition, Ski Apache Marketing Director Patricia Morrison notifies many media and ski shops in several cities in New Mexico, Texas, Arizona and California of Ski Apache's current conditions.

Regardless of where you live, Ski Apache's slope and road condition info is only a fingertip away.

Many services 'en Espanol'

In response to the growing number of ski visitors from Mexico, Ski Apache provides many services "en Espanol."

These services include a brochure and trail map printed in Spanish, plus Spanish-speaking ticket agents, ski instructors, rental shop technicians, ski patrollers, and many others.

Snowmakers do it in the cold all night long

A warmly clothed lone man walks across a ski slope amid swirling spouts of snow. He stretches out a gloved hand to catch flakes and examines them. Machinery roars as he adjusts hoses and nozzles that spew ice crystals 15 feet into the night sky.

Finished, the man straddles a snowmobile and glides down the moonlit slope to the welcoming warmth of a base area building. Inside, he strips off his soggy parka and tosses it into a clothes dryer. Icicles drip from his mustache as he grins to his co-workers.

"Everything looks great!" he reports.

A Ski Apache snowmaker has finished another round.

Snowmaking at Ski Apache begins around Nov. 1, when nighttime temperatures become cold enough. Crews will work all night long, accumulating 2-4 feet at a time, ready for eager skiers expecting good stuff their first day.

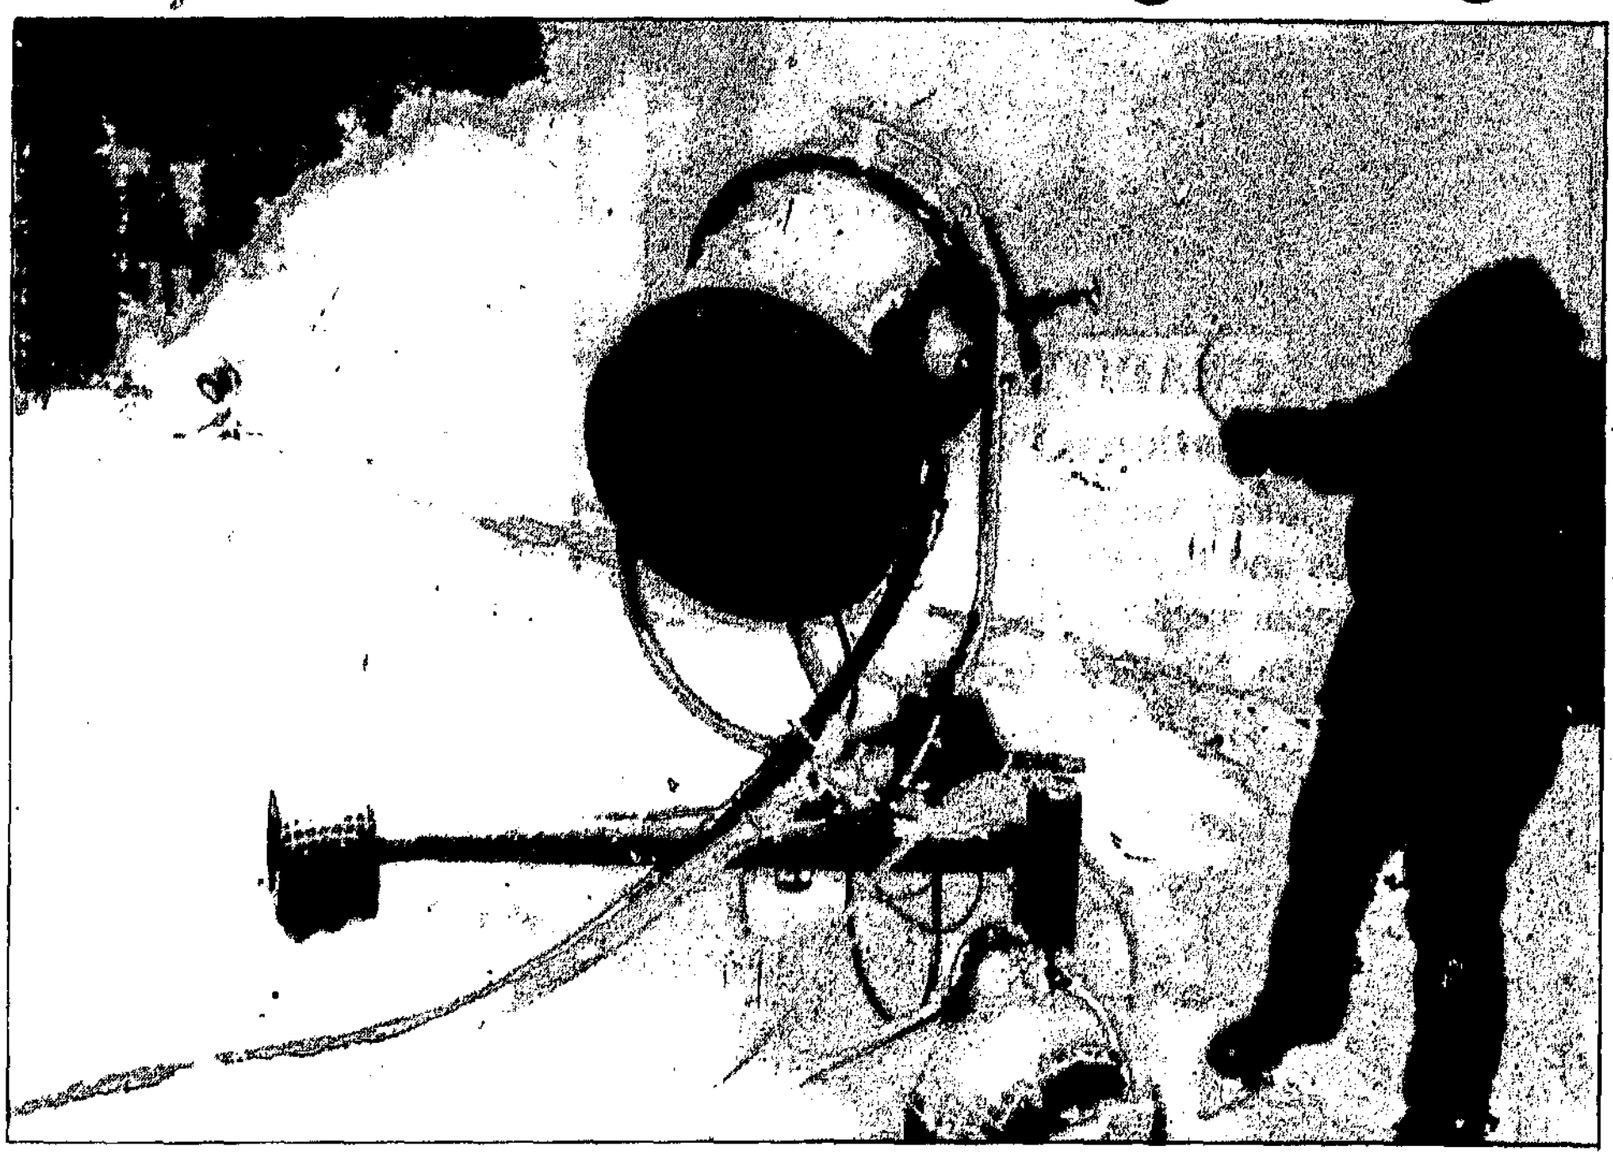
"Thanks to snowmaking on our lower mountain, we can guarantee opening on Thanksgiving Day with good to excellent conditions," says Roy Parker, Ski Apache's general manager.

In a year such as '93-'94, nightly snowmaking also guaranteed reliable conditions until Mother Nature finally took over in February. Without snowmaking at Ski Apache, there would have been no skiing at Christmas last year.

"As a result of last year, we realized how vital snowmaking is," says Parker.

This year, Ski Apache expanded snowmaking to Buckhorn and the Elk Quad Chair Line, two most difficult trails on the lower mountain.

But what is snowmaking?



David Tetrault, pro ski patroller and snowmaker, turns on the juice to a snowmaking machine.

Delicate process

"It is machine-made snow made by a natural process," explains Denny Grover, Ski Apache's mountain manager. "Just combine compressed air and water under high pressure, shoot it into the air and it freezes into crystalline structures that fall to the ground like little flakes of snow."

Made snow is a more consistent product than Mother Nature's, Grover says.

"The corners are rounded, they fit together and it packs well," Grover says.

It skis well, too. From a skier's standpoint, machine-made snow skis just like powder. Instructors say beginners learn easier on it, too.

Snow science?

Snowmakers become snow scientists, calculating the precise ratio of air and humidity. For not only must the air temperature be near or below freezing, humidity must also be low, a combination snowmakers call the "wet bulb temperature."

Water doesn't always freeze at 32 degrees Fahrenheit measured on a dry bulb thermometer, Grover explains.

"If the temperature is 32 degrees and the humidity is 80 percent, water won't freeze and we can't make snow. But if the temperature is 36 degrees and the humidity is 20 percent, then the wet bulb temperature will be around 26 to 27 degrees F., water will freeze and we can make snow. The dryer the air, the better," Grover says.

"Thanks to snowmaking on our lower mountain, we can guarantee opening on Thanksgiving Day."

So the snowmaker makes his rounds of the many machines, constantly monitoring air temperatures and relative humidity. He adjusts the air and water mixture accordingly.

"The colder it is, the more water we can add. The warmer it is, the more air we add," Grover says.

Sounds simple enough, but snowmaking's tough work.

"Also cold, wet and dark," Grover adds.

A crew of five works a 12-hour night shift. One monitors the air compressors and water pumps; the other four rotate outside among the snowmaking machines — checking, adjusting, knocking off ice around nozzles and fans, protecting hoses from freezing and monitoring the quality of the finished product.

There's only one way for a snowmaker to do quality control, Grover says: "Stand in front of the gun and get wet! That's why the men come in looking like giant mushrooms!"

Out on the hill, one of the snowmakers studied the fine flakes on his glove.

"That's how they are supposed to look," he shouted over machinery noise. "Perfect."

Another snowmaker pointed to the falling snow shooting out from a gun. "When it falls like that, in streamers, it's just right."

This time, they didn't adjust the air-water mix. But they must check frequently because temperatures and humidity can change suddenly.

Top guns

Moving about via snowmobile, snowmakers check 30 machines and guns working that shift.

Ski Apache uses two types of snowmaking devices. One is an air-water gun that is generally mounted on a pole or lift tower but can also be portable. The second is a larger machine with a ring of nozzles mounted in front of a turbine fan.

This is one of two types of snowmaking machines used at Ski Apache. Water is sprayed out of a ring of nozzles, all mounted in front of a turbine fan.

These machines and their hoses cover fully one-third of Ski Apache, including the beginner areas under Chairs 5 and 7, Capitan, Lower Deep Freeze, Easy Street, Smokey Bear, Lower Snow Park and the Elk Ridge areas of Bull Run, Buckhorn and the Chair 8 liftline.

Know before you go: tips for first-timers

You've decided. After years of listening to your friends' ski adventures, you're going skiing.

Before you head up the hill, try some advance planning.

Body beautiful and fit

As in any sport, skiing is physically challenging. So condition yourself several weeks before the trip, combining aerobics, light weights and flexibility exercises.

What you eat make a difference, too. At least two weeks before, put lots of complex carbohydrates on your plate: vegetables, whole grains, fruit, pasta, etc.

Dress for success

This means sensibly, not necessarily expensively. Remember that many light and medium weight layers will keep you warmer and drier that one heavy layer. So start on the inside with long underwear, then add a turtleneck, then sweater or sweatshirt on top of water resistant pants, either wool-blend or stretch insulated.

Cover up with a water-resistant, insulated jacket with snug-fitting collar and cuffs. Do not ski in just blue jeans and long johns. Why? Because cotton wicks moisture inwards. This means that when you fall, you become wet and cold, no matter how much water repellent you've sprayed on.

Warm socks, insulated gloves and a hat complete your outfit. You must also wear sun protection on both eyes and skin, so add goggles if it's snowing, sunglasses and sunscreen if sunny.

Remember, you don't have to buy clothes for your first time out. Many local ski shops rent clothing as well as ski equipment.

Gearing up

If your brother-in-law offers to lend you his old boots and skis, decline. His equipment may come cheap, but chances are it's outdated, unsafe and may not fit. Instead, rent top-of-the-line gear from any of Ruidoso's reputable shops or at Ski Apache. Their technicians pride themselves on well-fitting boots and skis appropriate for your height and weight as well as ability.

Added convenience: many shops rent racks to transport your gear. Some offer a complimentary rack when you rent their equipment.

More shop conveniences: many have toll-free numbers, staff who speak Spanish, open at 7 a.m. and remain open late weekends and holidays.

Getting here

Winterize your car with antifreeze good to at least minus-30 degrees. Before driving up to the mountains, pour into your gas tank a can of gas line drying agent. This eliminates water in your gasoline that might freeze.

Check all belts, hoses and windshield wipers. Purchase an inexpensive scraper and a can of windshield de-icer. Keep both handy, under the seat or in the trunk.

Tires must have a good tread and be fitted for chains. Before you leave home, practice putting on the chains in your driveway. The snowy side of a steep mountain road is not the place to put on chains for the first time.

Make extra sets of keys and give one to every person in your car. Carry those keys in an inside, zippered pocket by themselves. Many a skier has lost his keys on the snow when he pulled out a hanky and the keys came silently with it.

Our mountain air is brisk and refreshing, but it's also thin, having less oxygen than you may be accustomed to. So get plenty of rest the night before skiing, drink plenty of liquids to prevent dehydration, avoid caffeine and nicotine and save the alcohol for apres-ski celebrations.

The combination of skiing plus cold weather burns many calories, so don't skip breakfast or lunch.

If skiing with a group, plan to meet at least twice during the day. Counting noses assures that everyone is having a safe and fun time. Children especially need the security of knowing when and where to meet their parents.

Start on right foot

It's tempting to just snap on skis and glide down the mountain, but please don't try. Someone should show you how to descend safely and that someone should be a ski instructor, not a well-meaning friend.

Professional ski instructors know the right words to get you moving the right way. Ski Apache encourages all first-timers to begin with lessons by offering a first-time beginner package that includes a complimentary lift ticket.

Inquire at ski school windows or at the ski school desk before purchasing lift tickets.

Odds are you'll enjoy your first skiing experience and want to come back for more--and why not? Skiing is a sport for a family--and for a lifetime.

" If your brother-in-law offers to lend you his old boots and skis, decline."

If you prepare properly for your ski trip, you can make turns like this and avoid a trip to the orthopedic surgeon.

Skiers have responsibility, too

As you enjoy the slopes, show courtesy to others, and be aware that there are elements of risk in skiing that common sense and personal awareness can help reduce. Observe the code listed below and share with other skiers the responsibility for a great skiing experience.

1. Always stay in control, and be able to stop or avoid other people or objects.
2. People ahead of you have the right of way. It is your responsibility to avoid them.
3. Whenever starting downhill or merging into a trail, look uphill and yield to others.
5. Always use devices to help prevent runaway equipment.
6. Observe all posted signs and warning. Keep off closed trails and out of closed ares.
7. Prior to using any lift, you must have the knowledge and ability to lead, ride and unload safely.
8. You must conform to the provisions of the New Mexico Ski Safety Act.

Check in town for child care

Visiting with infants or small children who do not ski?

You'll want to make your child care arrangements in town because there are no daycare facilities on the mountain. To find daycare locally, scan the ads in this Guide or the classified ads in The Ruidoso News, or consult the Yellow Pages of the local telephone directory under "Child Care."

Where to find everything

New to Ski Apache? Here's what you need to know.

Easy to buy a lift ticket

Lift ticket windows serve skiers in several base area locations: the main window in the Clock Tower building, the Staircase Ticket Booth in the parking lot, the Satellite Booth at the base of Chair 5 and the ticket booth at the Elk Day Lodge.

Windows at the Clock Tower main building and at the Elk Day Lodge are open every day. The Staircase and Satellite windows open only on weekends and holidays.

Many booths also sell ski school tickets at different windows. Ski Apache accepts cash, travelers' checks, Visa, and MasterCard for the purchase of lift tickets.

Bilingual personnel staff some booths.

New this year: the Satellite Ticket Booth has expanded, with more windows where skiers may purchase both lift and lesson tickets. Also, season pass holders may pick up their daily ticket there.

What about lessons?

If interested in ski school, either drop by the ski school desk in the rental shop building or ask the bright blue uniformed host who greets you in the parking lot. Or inquire at the ticket windows labeled "ski school."

NASTAR

This favorite race for everyone runs every Wednesday and Sunday on Smokey Bear from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. beginning Jan. 5, 1995. Pick up entry forms at the ski school desk.

Going shopping?

Ski Apache's Sport Shop stocks a full line of ski parkas, pants, sweaters, one-piece suits and accessories in both high-end and value-priced lines.

If you forgot your sunscreen, lost your sunglasses, need a postcard or souvenir bandana, you'll find it at the shop located on the first floor of the main day lodge.

A mini-sport shop at the Elk Lodge ticket window also sells small essentials such as gloves, goggles, sunglasses, and sunscreen.

Need $$$ in a hurry?

Get a cash advance or cash withdrawal at the Sport Shop or Elk Ticket window using your Visa, MasterCard or Pulse Network card.

Sightseeing rides

Non-skiers in your group? Invite them to get a skiers'-eye view of spectacular mountaintop scenery by riding the gondola to the Gazebo. There, they may walk upstairs to the Gazebo Snack Bar where wide windows display closeups of Sierra Blanca Peak and panoramic views of the White Sands, Malpais and nearby mountain ranges.

Their round trip ticket allows a return to the base area at their leisure.

First aid

Is located to the right of the gondola building facing downhill. To access first aid on the mountain, go to the base of any lift and speak to an attendant.

Let's do it!

Ski Apache welcomes skiers and snowboarders seven days a week (including Christmas Day) from Thanksgiving Day until on or about Easter Sunday, April 16, 1995.

Lifts open at 8:45 am.

For up-to-the minute snow and road conditions 24 hours a day, call 505-257-9001 for a recorded message that is updated daily.

Your dream of better turns can be real

Planning to take a ski or snowboard lesson this year? How much you derive from that lesson depends upon many factors, and several under the control of you, the student.

Rick Vincent, Ski Apache ski school director, shares strategies you can use to help get the most from your lessons.

Fun is part of ski school

"First, come with the idea of having fun and learning safely. You're on vacation; so think of ski school as a fun-directional situation," Vincent smiles. "I wish we could think of another term besides 'ski school'."

Second, approach your lesson with an open mind. Don't come with a preconceived notion of how much you'll accomplish. Instructors can show you the correct way to make the right moves, but an individual's master of that skill takes time. "Remember, there's a lot of mileage involved," Vincent says.

Once in class, don't be afraid to ask a question. "Ideally you should understand the movement and mimic the instructor, but if you don't or can't, ask," Vincent says.

Many poor intermediate skiers believe one lesson can transform them into perfect parallelers. Vincent reminds, "Skiers need to master the basics of one level before advancing to the next. In other words, you need to run a good wedge on many terrains under difficult conditions before you can christie. Then you need to be a good christie skier before you can parallel."

He also points out the benefits of consecutive-day lessons at this level: the instructor already knows you, your abilities and goals; your group has bonded; you have more opportunities for guided practice and reinforcement of learned skills; you feel you're accomplishing more; you have more fun!

Get physical

Physical preparation is as essential as mental. Rigors of exertion in cold weather at high altitude place great demands upon one's body. So be conditioned before you ski; don't expect a weekend of skiing to whip you into shape.

And don't forget personal comfort. Obviously you can't enjoy the lesson if you're cold, overheated or have forgotten your sunglasses.

Dress in layers, anticipating changes in weather.

What's next?

At the end of class, request an evaluation of your performance. "Ask what the instructor considers a safe place to practice and reinforce what you've learned in class," Vincent advises.

Try these tips the next time you take a lesson. See if you get more out of it - and have more fun.

How to get the most from your ski lessons

To dream, perchance to ski. How to turn those dreams into reality...

Every year, thousands of skiers and snowboarders make better turns, carve smoother curves and generally have more fun.

How?

"We took lessons," they reply.

Not just for beginners

Sure, beginners take lessons, but did you know that good skiers at all levels take them, too?

Intermediates take lessons to achieve the next plateau; advanced skiers, to polish their technique. Even Olympic and professional racers hire coaches to show them how to shave off another thousandth of a second.

If your skiing falls into one of those categories, Ski Apache has classes for you. They're called Master classes and their concept is simple: a group of skiers close in age and ability work on whatever concept they wish -- elegant form, gates, bumps or, conditions permitting, powder.

Class times are structured for student convenience. You may select an all-day class or a half-day class that meets either in the morning or afternoon. This is ideal for the vacationing skier with limited time.

For example, if here for only a weekend, you can take an all-day class the first day then practice the second. If here for a three-day weekend, consider three morning half-day classes that allow you to ski with friends and practice in the afternoons.

Sounds like something you and your friends are looking for? Call the ski school desk at 505-336-4356 for details.

Don't forget the first-timer

At Ski Apache, first time beginners are VIS--Very Important Skiers. It's important to learn on-slope etiquette and develop personal safety skills as well as skills to assure the safety of others.

A professional ski instructor teaches all that, plus how to have fun. Instructors teach beginners how to ride lifts correctly, stop, turn right and left, and avoid collisions. Beginner classes stay on terrain appropriate for their level. Result: a non-stressful, fun learning experience that boosts confidence and encourages thoughts of "one more day."

All-day beginner classes start at staggered times beginning at 9:30 a.m.

Breaks for the bucks

For best results, try lessons on consecutive days. This reinforces what you've learned and provides more opportunity for guided practice. The two-day beginner package includes both lessons and lifts and is the best deal on the mountain, says Rick Vincent, ski school

Hot tots, red hots and hot shots are just a few of the children's ski programs offered

Skiing parents' dream: "Will our children love skiing as much as we do?"

Skiing parents' reality: "Mom, Dad, hurry up. Can't you go any faster?"

Is your child a never-ever skier? Or does your skiing hot shot out-ski you? Ski Apache has a kid's program for each of them.

"We emphasize safety, fun and developing ski skills," says Carla Grover, Ski Apache's Children's Ski School supervisor. "We have programs for ages 4-12, from first timer through advanced, seven days a week."

For wee skiers, Kiddie Korral

Four and five-year-olds learn in their own pre-school ski school. "This is an all-day ski lesson with both indoor and outdoor activities. It is NOT babysitting or daycare," Grover emphasizes. Kiddie Korral includes skiing instruction, lift ticket, lunch and snacks and is closely supervised. Equipment is not included but can be rented at Ski Apache or downtown if children do not bring their own. Hours are from 9 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. daily. Enrollment is limited to 18-20 wee skiers on a first-come, first-served basis. This extremely popular program does not take reservations. Call the ski school desk at 505-336-4356 for details.

I'm a big kid now

For ages 6-12, Ski Apache Ski School offers group lessons for beginners and masters at the same hours as adult lessons. This means a two-hour morning session, a break for lunch so kids can eat with parents, then an afternoon session that ends before the lifts close so children can show off to parents what they've learned. Group half-day lessons are also available, as are packages and consecutive day discounts.

Kid masters?

While most parents and their children realize the importance of beginner lessons, they often overlook the advantage of lessons for intermediates and above.

Lessons at any level sharpen skills, build confidence and eliminate bad habits that can persist into adulthood, say the experts.

At Ski Apache, kids' master classes accomplish all that while having fun.

Grover explains, "We enter the Adventure Zone." This is a realm of moguls, ungroomed terrain, glade skiing and more, all under close instructor supervision.

"This is ideal for the child who outskis his parents, but whose parents don't want to turn the child loose on the mountain alone. Kids' master classes keep the child excited about skiing while teaching good technique."

Private lessons for children

For the child who isn't familiar with a group learning experience, or for one who needs individual attention, consider private lessons, either for one hour, and hour and a half or all day. For children aged five and under, the cost of private lesson includes a lift ticket.

Ski Apache accepts two and three-year-olds in private lessons. "At that age they benefit from individual instruction," Grover says.

Hot Tot, Red Hot or Hot Shot

Another popular kids' program is this nine-week session for four to 12-year-olds who live in the area. Young skiers are ability-grouped as Red Hots, Hot Shots or Hot Tots. They remain with the same group of instructors throughout the nine weeks, culminating in the Hot Chocolate Cup, a fun day to show off new skills to proud parents.

This popular program begins in December, breaks for Christmas, then resumes in January, February and March. Cost includes instruction and a season pass for the child.

Call the ski school desk for details on all the above programs.

director. That combination saves the skier much more than if the components were purchased separately.

Although there are no Master packages, the versatility of all-day classes or half-day classes lends itself to a vacationer's schedule.

Ride the pipe, dude

Certified instructors also provide beginning and Master classes in snowboarding. Beginning snowboarders can take advantage of the same lift-lesson package beginning skiers do. And there are Master snowboard classes for bumps, powder and the like.

Such a deal

Savvy skiers know a good deal when they see one. Ski Apache Ski School offers an early season special that saves the skier bucks while starting the season right. From opening day through Dec. 16, weekday lesson prices apply on weekends.

This means while everyone else is busy with Christmas preparations, you're on uncrowded slopes, getting personalized instruction and having fun!

Ski business booms

Sunny New Mexico a ski state? Sure!

New Mexico's tourist business is booming, and that boom is spelled S-K-I-I-N-G.

Fueled by more than a million skier-days yearly (a skier-day is defined as one skier skiing one day), New Mexico's 12 alpine and nordic areas help pump big bucks into our state's economy.

How big?

According to Ski New Mexico, the trade organization that represents skiing in our state, last year's 1.18 million skier visits statewide generated $426 million.

Skiers spent those dollars not only with the ski industry but at other businesses as well: lodging establishments, restaurants, gas stations, video stores, groceries, gift shops and the like.

Then those dollars "turned over" as they were spent in businesses that did not deal directly with the skier. The Anderson School of Business has devised a formula for calculating that turnover and total economic impact.

They say an average visiting skier spends approximately $144.36 per day. That amount then "turns over" two and a half times as the gas station clerk, for example, spends his portion paying rent, his landlord then pays his utilities, a utility employee buys groceries, and so on. Thus, the skier's daily $144.36 converts to $360.89 for his total economic impact.

What does that mean for Ruidoso and surrounding communities? Ski Apache last season reported 168,363 skier visits. That number multiplied by $260.89 equals an astounding $60,760,428.07.

But last year was a poor year because it had below-average snowfall and was heavily dependent upon snowmaking.

By contrast, in a normal snowfall season such as '92-'93, Ski Apache recorded 246,700 skier-days. That figure translates to $95,527,583 for the Ruidoso and Lincoln County area.

Although these numbers are an estimate based upon statewide averages, they do illustrate that for New Mexico and Lincoln County, skiing is Big Business.

A perfect ski day greets skiers as they head up the mountain on Chair Lift 1.

Old Folks Club doens't age get in way of fun

"Two skiers about 60 years old flew down Geronimo, a more difficult slope at the top of Ski Apache. A group of young guys stared as the sexagenarians sped by.

"Wow, lookit them old farts go!" they admired in ungrammatical amazement.

And that, according, to Ward Hook, age 68, and Bill Wooley, age 69, is one version of how their informal ski group got its name.

They joke, "We call ourselves the OFCs, but if the preacher's around, it means the Old FOLKS Club!"

Another member, Leo Mitchell, age 68, prefers a gentler sobriquet, the Over-the-Hill Gang.

"No, make that the NOT-QUITE-Over-the-Hill Gang," amends the athletic retiree with a laugh.

Bill Wooley

Regardless of nomenclature, this trio, plus 66-year-old David Railsback who sat out a large part of last season with a knee injury ("I got it trying to follow Wooley!"), constitute a merry group of locals who for the last several years have skied together nearly every week at Ski Apache. Occasionally, James "Micky" McKandless of Lubbock, who has a second home in Alto, joins them.

All in their sixties and retired, these fellows are active skiers and great buddies. And they hope to expand their numbers.

"If more older skiers know about us, maybe they'll join us. Then we can take trips and have more people in different ability groups."

The former sounds like fun and the latter concerns them, for from time to time other skiers their age have skied with them, but it didn't work out.

"They couldn't keep up with us," allowed Wooley. "But, if we had more people, there'd be a greater chance everyone would have someone to ski with. That's what's fun."

Keeping up with the Gang isn't easy. These guys ski like a golf ball hit down the fairway--hard and fast. They ski all the blues but prefer groomed blacks such as Roy's and Mescalero.

"Ski Apache has the best grooming in the country," avows the well-traveled Hooks.

And they like powder, "But not too deep," warn Mitchell and Railsback.

All agree, "No bumps. Too hard on the knees."

One spring day after a 14" dump, Wooley, Hook and Mitchell were out enjoying the excellent conditions and warm sun.

During a hot chocolate break at the new Elk Day Lodge, Wooley and Hook stopped long enough for an interview and pictures. Mitchell kept skiing with his visiting grandson.

A family and a lifetime sport

Three of the Gang began their skiing careers as young men--Mitchell in 1945 in Germany, Wooley in 1961 when Ski Apache opened as Sierra Blanca Ski Area, and Hook in 1968 when he joined the National Ski Patrol. Railsback began relatively late, at age 50.

All taught their children to ski and in time, their grandchildren. Now scattered all over the world, those same kids and grandkids return for ski vacations with their grandparents, all of whom except McKandless relocated to Ruidoso after retiring from careers in Texas.

"Some of us had second homes in Ruidoso since the '60s and '70s, so we consider ourselves locals from way back," say the transplanted New Mexicans, echoing the personal histories of many Ruidosoans.

Fast friends

None knew each other before moving here. They became friends at the Cree Meadows Country Club where they're all avid golfers.

Mention golf and they react almost as enthusiastically as when discussing skiing.

"Where else but Ruidoso can you ski all morning and play 18 holes in the afternoon?" marvels Wooley.

"Or ski one weekend with some out-of-town guests and golf the next with a different bunch," Hook adds.

Bonus for skiing bucks

This energetic Gang typifies a growing group of retired active skiers able to ski mid-week instead of weekends and vacation any time instead of just children's school holidays.

Ski areas compete for this affluent segment of the skiing market by offering senior citizen deals.

For many years, Ski Apache has sold a senior season pass. Costing only $130, the pass pays for itself after four days.

"It's a real bargain, especially since we don't ski all day like we used to," one admits with a laugh.

Recent ski travels have yielded further information for skiing sexagenarians.

"At Taos, lift ticket are $12 a day, at Angel Fire they're free, and they're free at a lot of places in Colorado," they point out.

This is the gang to join

This brings the men back to their original mission to locate more skiers their age.

As they board Chair 8, they speculate on the fun a larger group could have--weekly gatherings locally, group trips around the U.S., maybe even abroad. Then they envision companionship for skiers of all abilities and social amenities for non-skiers.

If camaraderie on and off the slopes sounds like fun, connect with one of these four. You're guaranteed a good time.

Mitchell stresses the group's informality.

"We've got no organization, dues, officers or meetings. We just ski. We just have fun."

And they'll keep it up for a long time. Mitchell promises, "While life stays long and limbs stay sound, we'll do it."

Spoken like a true skier.

Snowboarders cruise into Olympics

Snowboarding an Olympic sport?

Just this year, four men and two women riders (snowboarders' term for themselves) from Colorado, Utah and California have been named to the first U.S. Snowboarding Team. They'll compete next winter in the inaugural World Cup season for snowboarding.

The International Ski Federation has authorized creation of the World Cup and is working on the first World Championship as part of its goal to make snowboarding a full-medal Olympic winter sport.

Snowboarding is now in its third year at Ski Apache, one of seven New Mexico ski areas that allow the sport.

Ski Apache Ski School provides snowboard lessons from certified instructors at both beginning and master levels.

Beginning boarders receive the same great deal beginning skiers do: a lesson and lift ticket for the price of a lift ticket alone.

Ski Apache's Snowboard Shop, as well as many shops in town, will rent or sell equipment or clothing for the novice and veteran.

Snowboarding is now in its third year at Ski Apache, one of seven New Mexico ski areas that allow the sport.

Ski Tips free of charge

PSST...HAVE I GOT A DEAL FOR YOU...Something free at Ski Apache.

Yes, it's Ski Tips and it's a free mini-lesson for Master skiers every Saturday and Sunday at 9:15 a.m., conditions permitting.

Skiers meet a certified instructor at the top of a more difficult trail near Chair 8, then take a run with him or her. The instructor will offer one tip to improve your skiing.

After the free tip, you may opt to practice that concept on your own or continue the lesson all day for a nominal charge.

What's the catch?

There isn't one.

But Ski Tips is not for beginners and novices. You must be able to handle more difficult slopes.

For Ski Tip locations, call the ski school desk at 505-336-4356 or ask any ski host Saturday or Sunday mornings.

WHO CARES?

AT COLDWELL BANKER THE CUSTOMER IS NUMBER ONE.

Why do so any real estate companies say they're number one when surveys show customers don't care? While we were pleased when Real Trends and Entrepreneur magazines named us the number one real estate brokerage and franchise, all customers want is a company they cant trust.

So it was most gratifying that, in a recent survey, more than nine out of ten of our customers were so satisfied with our service, they'd recommend Coldwell Banker to a friend. Being number one is good. But we think being the one customers trust is even better.

Preparation helps young skiers have fun

Which little skiers have the most fun on the first day?

The ones whose Mom and Dad prepared them for the big adventure.

If this is your little one's first time to ski, try these tips.

Before the big adventure

A few weeks before, begin talking about the trip itself. Show your child books or magazines with pictures of children skiing.

Then explain what ski school is and how your child will fit in. Explain, too, the hours of ski school so your child won't be anxious about not seeing you all day. Children will feel more comfortable about the adventures if they know what to expect.

If you live where it seldom snows, talk to your child in a positive way about the expected colder weather.

Let your child sleep well the night before the first ski day. If your vacation began with a grueling multi-hour drive or flight, either skip skiing the first day or enroll the child in only a half-day lesson.

The big day arrives

A nutritious breakfast is vital. Little bodies unaccustomed to cold, altitude and exertion cannot function on just a glass of milk and a granola bar. Instead serve a balanced, sensible meal. But don't force the child to overeat. This may cause an upset stomach after the drive up the mountain.

Next, dress your wee skiers for cold weather. This means water-resistant and insulated pants, jackets, gloves or mittens (not the yarn ones), hat, goggles and sunscreen. In other words, dress your child in the same high-quality gear you wear yourself.

One cannot overemphasize the importance of eye and skin protection. Your children may play outdoors at home without sunglasses and sunscreen, but don't let them do that in the mountains. The combination of high altitude and sun reflecting off snow spells sunburn to both unprotected eyes and skin.

Children's ski school programs such as Hot Tots can be beary fun. Here, Yogi Bear holds Hot Tot skier Stefan Seigmann (whose father coaches the U.S. Ski Team) with former instructor Wendy Vincent (whose father heads the ski school at Ski Apache).

Ruidoso Ski Team races with the best

West Texans back their football teams; Midwest towns, their basketball teams. Thus it follows that mountain towns foster ski teams, and Ruidoso is no exception.

For several decades, the Ruidoso Ski Team (RST) has provided youngsters an opportunity to ski and become skiing adults.

"This is a skiing town. The more people that get involved, the better it is for the town and the sport," philosophizes Hubert Seigmann, RST head coach.

"This is a skiing town. The more people get involved the better it is for the town and the sport."

The RST welcomes skiers aged eight and older to its three different ability level programs: developmental, intermediate and competitive.

As the young skier progresses through the two lower levels, he or she may advance to the competitive level as a licensed racer and travel to sanctioned events out-of-town.

Seigmann stresses that the team is cohesive and open to all. Local youngsters are not the only participants. The team counts members from as far away as southern New Mexico, Arizona, Texas and even the Republic of Mexico.

"This international aspect of the team provides a different perspective for all the kids," says Seigmann, himself an Austrian native. In training one hears Spanish and German as well as English.

The team does more than ski, too. Hiking, in-line skating, slalom races at White Sand National Monument and other dryland activities fill their off-season. This year Seigmann plans to introduce indoor hockey, perhaps with inter-city competition.

"It's great for maintaining off-season fitness and skill," Seigmann says.

As do many children's activities, RST has a fee. But costs can be affordable for energetic team members and their parents because of on-going fundraisers.

"Fundraising involves both parent and child working toward a common goal. We like that family aspect of the team," says one RST parent. "Our kids are so busy and the parents are so involved, you never hear of a ski team kid getting into trouble."

If skiing, friendship, community activity and family participation sound like fun for your child, call Hubert at 258-3187 or RST Board President Bill Kelly at 257-4839.

Shape up before you schuss down

You don't ski to get in shape; you get in shape to ski.

These are words of advice for out-of-shape skiers who believe a weekend of skiing will get them into condition.

Not so, say exercise physiologists and physical therapists. They know that intense physical exercise, such as skiing, coupled with high altitude and cold weather demand a well-conditioned, well-nourished body before you snap on those skis.

To get yourself into skiing shape, you must do three things:

First, check with your personal physician before beginning this or any exercise program.

Second, consult a professional trainer for current trends in exercise and fitness. This person can be a personal trainer at your local health club, YMCA or YWCA, your aerobics instructor or a licensed physical therapist.

Don't make the mistake of using your old high school gym routines or old football warm-ups.

Don't make the mistake of using your old high school gym routines or old football warm-ups. Things have changed greatly since the days of full knee bends and supine leg lifts. Old information can even hurt you.

Third, begin conditioning now. With your doctor and fitness consultant you'll probably create a program that includes flexibility, muscle strengthening and aerobics, all suited to your body type, physical condition and preferences. Some suggestions follow.

FLEXIBILITY

Slow stretching exercises, such as Yoga, remain ideal for warming the body and preparing the muscles for work. Combine these with breathing exercises for added benefit.

MUSCLE STRENGTHENING

Try these exercises which can be done at home or in your office. Both increase the strength in your quadriceps, the large thigh muscle so important for skiing.

1. KNEE EXTENSIONS. While sitting, slowly raise and lower each leg while straightening the knee. Add ankle weights (no more than five pounds) as the exercise becomes easier.

2. WALL SQUAT. With your back against a wall, slowly lower your body one-quarter of the way down into a semi-sitting position. Hold this position for a few seconds, then slowly rise. Add a few seconds each time you are "quarter sitting" for a total of five minutes. Never go below the quarter position. Any deeper than that will stress and possibly damage knee joints.

AEROBIC ACTIVITY

For many people, aerobics means either jogging the morning streets or bouncing with leotard-clad bodies in class.

If those activities appeal to you, then do them. But if they turn you off, find an aerobic activity you like and will make time for.

Aerobic activities include brisk walking, hiking, bike riding, stationary bikes or cross-country machines, step or low impact aerobics, even dancing. Any activity that raises your heart rate and causes you to breathe deeper is aerobic, or oxygen-burning.

Oxygen-burning activities increase you heart muscle strength and lung capacity, important for high altitude exertion.

JUST DO IT

In conclusion, you want to enjoy your ski holiday, so start out right.

Check with your doctor and fitness consultant, then get in shape — then ski.

Our pre-ski exercises will help you maneuver around trees, not wear them.

Rules of the 'Ski Run Road'

It's a fresh powder day!

Great, but were the roads plowed and do I need chains? Ski Run Road (officially FM 532) and FM 48 from Ruidoso to Capitan are the responsibility of the Capitan District of the State Highway Department. They offer these sensible driving tips.

1. Call 505-257-9001 for the latest road conditions and chair requirements. This report is out as early as 5 a.m. on snow days. Local radio stations will also broadcast this info. In addition, chain requirements are posted on signs near the U.S. Forest Service on Mechem Drive, at the intersection of 48 and 532, and below Eagle Creek turnoff on Ski Run Road.

2. Watch for snow removal equipment anytime during the day. At 4 a.m. the morning after a snowfall, crews begin working on the roads with a blade and snowblower. After clearing the road, they salt it. During the day, a crew with a salt truck and blade stays at the top of Ski Run Road in case they're needed to clear daytime snowfalls.

Therefore, drivers should always expect to meet slow-moving equipment, maybe in their lane, and should drive carefully.

3. Chains - yes or no? When the signs say chains are required, believe it. Maybe the pavement immediately in front of you is clear, but it could be snowpacked 10 miles up the road. You will avoid possible damage to your vehicle and self if you are able to negotiate snowy curves under control.

Chains are not required today? Bright sunshine in the forecast? The wise skier carries chains in the vehicle anyway. More than once, those chains have come in handy when an unforecasted storm brewed up in the middle of the afternoon and dumped six inches on the road.

4. No passing! Ski Run Road is double yellow-striped for a reason. Blind curves cover most of its 12 1/2 miles.

State police will enforce both the no passing rule and chain requirements.

5. Start up early if you're picking up skiers at the end of the day; be at the ski area and off Ski Run Road no later than 3 p.m. Ski Run Road closes to uphill traffic from 3 to 6 p.m. daily beginning approximately at milemarker 3. Signs will remind you.

Special ski devices help all enjoy sport

Hillary McKenna is a dark-haired pixie who loves to ski.

Every Thursday this 12-year-old and her special education classmates from Capitan Elementary School enjoy a day of fun with the Ski Apache Handicapped Skiers Association (SAHSA).

But for this little girl, skiing has become more than just fun. Skiing with SAHSA dramatically improved Hillary's young life, strengthening her physically and mentally.

Hillary is but one of the thousands of mentally or physically challenged individuals of all ages who've benefited from SAHSA's eight years of existence. All have achieved either physical or emotional growth through ski therapy. Hillary,

"We work with people's abilities, with what they can do, not what they can't."

Most of us ski with two legs, two arms, sight and hearing. As we struggle to remain upright, we can't imagine how someone who is blind, deaf or lacks limbs can ski. Yet many do because of SAHSA's talents.

"We use guides and adaptive equipment," explains Lisa Maue, executive director of SAHSA. Maue heads a staff of seven full and part-time instructors augmented by nearly 100 volunteers. They teach one-to-one.

Although SAHSA provides instruction, it is not traditional ski school, Maue stresses.

"Our instructors and volunteers are specially trained to work with the disabled and their equipment," Maue says.

And what equipment. Maue enthusiastically gestures to SAHSA's specialized gear mounted on the wall of their headquarters at Ski Apache. There are braces that mount on ski tips to keep them from crossing or splaying. Those with strength and motion in the lower body use a walker mounted on skis. Then there are outriggers, short forearm crutches with small skis attached on the bottom, used for balance by those who ski on one ski.

And those with little or no strength or motion in the lower body find freedom in either the mono-ski, bi-ski or sit-ski, all different but essentially similar devices for sitting while skiing.

Who uses this innovative hardware? "The blind, deaf, amputee, developmentally disabled, those with cerebral palsy, multiple sclerosis, brain or spine injuries...the list is endless," Maue answers. "We work with people's abilities, with what they can do, not what they can't."

Last season SAHSA taught 264 disabled individuals of all ages. Statistics, however, don't reveal the intense joy felt by those like Hillary discovering the fun of motion on snow. For although the disabled skier's technique may differ from that of some skiers, the never-stop grins, whoops of laughter and apres-ski camaraderie remain exactly the same.

For information on being a SAHSA student or volunteer, contact Maue at 505-336-4416.

Diana Person, former executive director of the handicap skier program and its founder, helps a young skier with cerebral palsy enjoy the slopes. He is using a walker mounted on skis to mantain his balance.

Ruidoso business people look forward to participating in the annual handicapped ski race at Ski Apache. They team up with a physically challenged individual and must use only one leg to ski on, with the help of outriggers.

One call does it all

One call now books lodging, lift tickets and transportation packages to Ski Apache.

The Inn of the Mountain Gods offers a luxury package at its four-star resort that includes lodging, lift ticket, shuttle and other amenities. Call the Inn at 1-800-545-9011.

Back by popular demand: an airfare, lodging, lift ticket and rental car package available through Afari Travel, 1-800-658-6282, or World Discovery Travel, 1-800-687-2086, both in Ruidoso.

In this package, skiers choose lodging in Ruidoso ranging from budget motel to luxury condo, then select their rental transportation from economy car to van. All air transportation is on Southwest Airlines.

Presently this package is available from Los Angeles, San Diego, Phoenix, Dallas/Fort Worth, Houston, San Antonio, Austin, Harlingen, New Orleans, Shreveport and Baton Rouge.

Skiers like hassle-free vacations. Now your Ski Apache vacation can begin with one toll-free phone call.

Pump up your energy and people-watch

Ski Apache's day lodges not only offer a relaxing break from skiing but also a great place to people-watch.

Sure, you'd like to ski all day, but eventually you must stop and eat. Ski Apache invites you to a variety of dining options, menus and styles.

At the base area

The main day lodge remains the most popular lunch spot for skiers and non-skiers. On the second floor, expanded cafeteria lines serve hot breakfasts and lunches. Diners can eat inside or relax on the sundeck outside.

Diners can eat or relax on the sundeck outside.

New this year: hot food service downstairs.

For dining with a difference, try the sunny Elk Day Lodge, accessible to skiers and non-skiers alike. Its full-service cafeteria offers a distinctive menu featuring salads, out-of-the ordinary entrees and mineral waters. Its most popular item is a skier-sized steak sandwich.

Inside seating on two floors (all non-smoking) and a 4,000-foot sundeck make the Elk Day Lodge THE place for lunch munching and skier watching.

On the mountain munching

Here in the sunny southwest you can enjoy al fresco slopeside lunches nearly all winter. At Ski Apache, two outdoor burger stands tempt passing skiers with the aroma of grilled beef. Surrender to that temptation at the Lincoln Burger Stand at the base of Lincoln Chair 2 or at the Moonshine Burger Stand just uphill of the base of Chair 1.

Novice skiers access the Moonshine Burger Stand via Chair 7.

Diehard skiers often tote their lunches in backpacks and enjoy them at mountaintop snack bars. They find drinks and pick-me-ups at the Gazebo Snack Bar, located at the top floor of the Gazebo or at the Lookout Snack Bar at the top of Chair 6.

Reminder: if you're an on-slope snacker, please stash your trash in a pocket or pack until you find a garbage can. It's really tacky — and dangerous — to toss a candy wrapper or aluminum can on the snow.
