Valentine's Day music at Tinnie's

Music for lovers this Valentine's Day comes with a couple of old friends performing at Tinnies Silver Dollar restaurant in Hondo Valley.

Bobby Villegas and Gilbert Licon have been singing in southeastern New Mexico and west Texas for more than 30 years.

They will be performing both contemporary and Mexican romantic music at Tinnies from 5 to 10 p.m. Sunday.

Pianist Bob Clark performs Saturday night from 6 to 10 p.m.

Price increased for forest service maps

Effective January 1, the price of Forest Service visitors maps for the Southwestern Region increased from $2 to $3 each.

The cost of U.S. Forest Service wilderness maps will remain at $4. The Southwestern Region includes national forests in Arizona and New Mexico and National Grasslands in Oklahoma and Texas.

The price change for maps in the Southwestern Region is part of a nationwide price increase to recover more of the costs associated with production of the maps. The new prices apply to maps bought by mail or in person from forest service offices.

Give pets the great gift of good health

Valentine's Day will be celebrated at Mountain View Animal Clinic with free examinations for pets as part of "Have a Heart Day."

As a public service, pet owners whose animals have not been seen by a veterinarian recently, are invited to bring their animals for a free exam to the office at 665 Suderth Drive on Monday, February 14," said Dr. Earl Leslie. "Results of the exam will be discussed with the pet's owner with no obligation for further services."

Call ahead for appointments to be scheduled from 1 to 5 p.m., but all pets will be seen on the special day at the clinic, situated across from the chamber building.

Rape suspect arrested

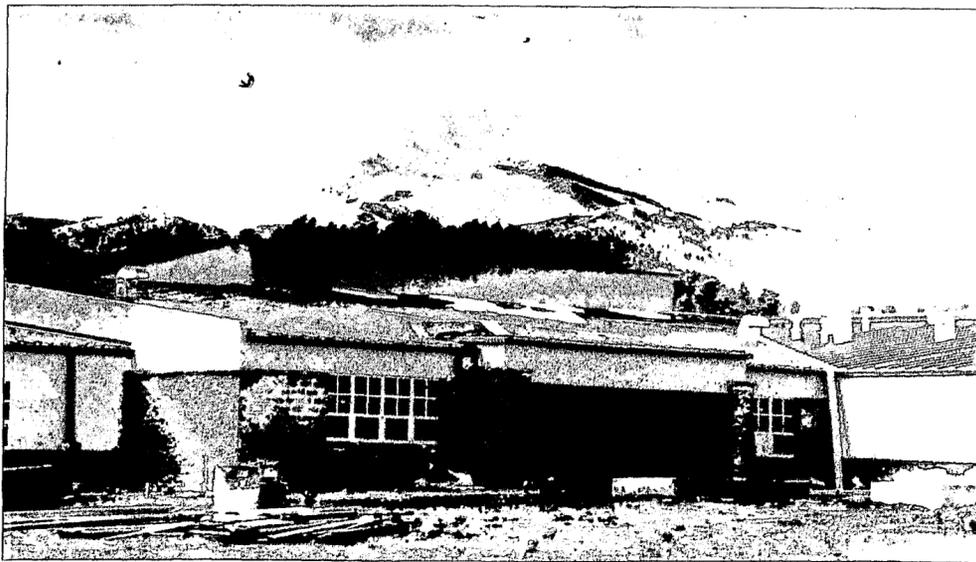

Bruce Edward Burks, 34, and unemployed Ruidoso resident, was arrested last Thursday for the rape of a 25-year-old local woman who was partying with her friend at Burks home.

Ruidoso detective Pete Esquibel said the woman called police dispatchers at 5:10 a.m., the morning of February 3.

On arrival, police found the woman crying, bleeding from the mouth and with bruises on her throat.

According to her sworn statement she had gone to Burks home with her boyfriend and when her boyfriend had to leave, she subsequently was attacked and raped by Burks.

Police assisting probation/parole officers Henry Davis and Shawn Day took Burks into custody for a probation violation and a subsequent investigation led to additional charges of criminal sexual penetration and a warrant out of Magistrate Judge Gerald Dean's court.

School with a view

Out of numerous names suggestions for Ruidoso's new primary school submitted by 400 participants, the School Board followed the recommendation of a selection committee and approved Sierra Vista Primary Tuesday. The name was proposed by Matthew Edwards, an 11-year-old student at White Mountain Intermediate. Part of the White Mountain Road school complex, the new facility will house first and second graders, leaving pre-school and kindergarten at Nob Hill Elementary.

Merchant gripes aired at village council

by CHARLES STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

MainStreet merchants, village officials and the sidewalk project superintendent played "Who's on first?" during Monday's village council meeting.

Finger pointing centered around poor planning, a lack of communication and a perceived disastrous beginning to the downtown sidewalk replacement program.

D & S Construction superintendent Bob Taggart told the council, he had problems with:

- the architect
- the architect's plans
- his workers
- the merchants
- the materials used
- the village council
- the weatherman
- his boss complaining about losing money

-the lack of time to finish the project.

Merchants in phase two of the project complained about:

- the architect's plans
- plans for their property.
- the former MainStreet director
- current communication

- the bad season
- parking
- a fear that downtown businesses will move to a major shopping mall.

Mayor Jerry Shaw said that the council has conducted seven previous meetings regarding parking and other downtown problems.

Shaw said that coffees designed to update merchants were not working and that communication still was a problem.

She told MainStreet director Don Miller to inform merchants that regular updated presentations by Briley would be scheduled for the coffees and that Miller, deputy village manager Alan Briley and, if possible, Taggart should be available to answer questions.

Ground breaking for the project took place on November 15. Briley said the project would be in many phases and take about 180 days. The unfinished first phase is nearing the halfway mark, 90 days.

Even so, last week New Mexico State Department of Transportation officials in Santa Fe told the mayor the MainStreet project's problems were routine.

Downtown property owner Marian Threet briefed the council with her history of the project. She said that when former MainStreet director Mary Maul said, "she could get federal funding to repair the sidewalks, add restrooms and beautify downtown, we thought it was great."

"When we asked how much parking would be lost, we were told no more than 20 to 30 percent. We saw the plans and they looked great. Then at the meeting on January 27, we saw the new and improved plans, and I must tell you, we were horrified. Not only are we losing 70 percent of our parking, no provisions have been made to replace that."

Maul and architects with Bohanna-Houston were not at the meeting to respond to criticism. Later efforts by The Ruidoso News to reach both for comment were unsuccessful.

Threet threatened the council with a law suit if damages occurred to her building as a result of sidewalk repair.

She said the Covered Wagon building is over 60 years old and is built on a foundation of tree stumps and rocks. "The least little bit of shifting by moving the sidewalks could cause great, great damage, not only to the building, but to our merchandise," Threet said. "I'd rather sell that to the tourists than to the city."

Councilors and village officials seemed concerned not only about the merchandise, but if the fragile condition of the old downtown buildings posed a community threat.

Threet said Taggart and Councilor Bill Karn visited her to see the situation firsthand. She said Taggart stressed it was a very dangerous situation.

Taggart told her she had the best sidewalks in the village, no cracks, no problems, she said.

Threet then asked for several other changes on the project where she thought the specifications didn't make sense.

Jay Ross, Threet's son-in-law who purchased the Covered Wagon last year, said the village should aspire to up-scale business districts. He cited Scottsdale, Arizona.

Gladden's contract renewed

by DIANNE STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Dozens of parents packed the Ruidoso School Board room Tuesday to voice their concerns about the course of local education.

Noting that the board was scheduled to vote on the contract of district superintendent Mike Gladden, a few urged careful consideration.

After listening to their remarks and conducting a two-hour, closed to the public executive session, the board renewed Gladden's contract for one year, gave him a $4,200 raise from $57,794 to $62,000, plus a vehicle for his use.

Parents comments

"Before the superintendents' contract is voted on, consider some things carefully," said Danny Sisson, a local businessman and frequent visitor at board meetings. "I personally believe one year at a time is enough."

Board members should discuss accountability with all members of the staff, he said, "starting with the superintendent's contract. Look at all parts."

"When things are good at the top, things will be good for principals, teachers and our kids."

Sisson said he is concerned about the quality of education and would like to see parents, board members and the administration staff approach problems in a positive manner.

While Sisson said he supports the dress code, another parent told board members that different or wild clothing often is a cry for attention and doesn't mean a child is "bad."

"Consider that and help them," she pleaded.

Ralph Johnson said he was at the meeting representing a group of concerned parents.

"We haven't organized to target any individuals or campuses," he said.

But they have banded together out of a growing concern about the quality of education in the district, the state and the nation, he said.

They formed to identify problems and discuss possible solutions, whether they deal with curriculum or administrative leadership, Johnson said. He added that when

Camp Sierra Blanca guards cuff nine trouble-makers

by DIANNE STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

A tactical team descended on Camp Sierra Blanca minimum security prison late Monday, but Warden Sandra McFadin said the incident was more of a response exercise than a reaction to any problems in the camp.

However, nine inmates were removed and transported to another higher security level facility, she said.

Rumors were flying through the community Tuesday, with reports ranging from a prison riot at the adult rehabilitation camp near Fort Stanton Hospital to gang wars.

"I've been getting phone calls all morning," McFadin told The Ruidoso News. "People have been making a lot more out of it than there is. There was not an incident. It was a routine thing that happens on occasion."

The warden said prison officials found "a very minor type weapon" that someone in the prison manufactured.

"They play that way," she said.

The weapon consisted of a piece of wire and two sticks fashioned like a garrote used to choke.

"It was real flimsy, but it meant they were toying with something," McFadin said. "It was easily broken, wouldn't be able to choke people with that."

"I have to report things like that (and we decided) why don't we go ahead and use this as an exercise for the tact team (to see) how quick can they respond, how quick can they be here. But they do that all over the state. It happened to Roswell (prison) last year, a routine shakedown that happens periodically. That's just what it was, much like a fire drill."

The 25 members of the tactical team came from Southern New Mexico Correctional Facility in Las Cruces and the Central New Mexico Correctional Facility in Los Lunas.

McFadin said some of the nine inmates were removed because of their behavior during the shake down.

"They didn't like it. They had to show how tough they were...and it's not tolerated during a shakedown," she said. "Then there were others, I had previously (identified). We had information that they were creating problems. Nothing that we can see. In other words, no one was beating up anybody or anything like that."

"It was just kind of a shake down, basically to make sure we didn't have any other kinds of weapons lying around in the housing unit and we didn't. (The garrote) was all that we found and that was previous. The tech team didn't find anything."

Graffiti minimal

McFadin said reports about gang activity and graffiti have been exaggerated.

"They wasn't an organized anything, just some trouble makers, like you have at schools," she said. A transport team usually goes on shake downs, she said, "because nine times out of 10, when they have a shake down, someone's going to resist, resent it."

"There was one thing gang related, but just one thing, one graffiti, one word," she said. "It didn't identify a gang. It was just written in that style."

"It's not so that we have gang activity. There may have been one forming or trying to be."

"I try to pay attention to what's going on in the (prison) population. Because we're a minimum security facility, we have to be a little more conscientious. If I pick up on some uncomfortable feeling, something unusual, a lot of things put together, I thought it may be time to do a shake down and make sure there are no more weapons."

"Maybe it's good for the community to know that we do this type of thing. It did relieve a lot of tension. It wasn't intense tension that I know of, but after all this is a prison. We have to have shakedowns and they have to be a surprise. I come from a higher security prison and this is nothing new to me."

McFadin said she was pleased by the response from local law enforcement agencies, some unsolicited.

"We normally always contact the sheriff's department," McFadin said. "Someone else contacted the state police and Capitan police department and they just showed up. I appreciate the support and it was a good exercise for everyone. It shows that I don't even have to ask them and they respond."

Contacted later, Sheriff James McSwane said he was part of a seven-officer team sent from his department, including Under Sheriff Bob Miller. He said the activity was well-organized and he appreciated the warden taking precautions to eliminate potential problems.

"It went like clockwork," McFadin said. "The whole thing lasted maximum an hour. It was over with in 30 minutes. Getting the people ready for transfer took more time."

EDCLC screens candidates for annual board election

The Economic Development Corporation of Lincoln County will conduct its annual certificate holders meeting at 6 p.m. Thursday, February 24, at the Cree Meadows Country Club.

Cheryl Pink, the economic development manager of Southwestern Public Service, will be the guest speaker.

After president Scott Shafer gives his State of the Corporation speech, the nominating committee will introduce five candidates interested in filling the shoes of Sharon Wicker, David McIntosh and Scott Shafer.

McIntosh, owner of Sunrise Publications, is hoping to renew his term on the corporation (EDCLC) board.

Wicker, who has moved to Texas, and Shafer are not seeking re-election. Shafer has been on the board since its beginning in 1988. "I'm retaining my certificate," he said, "but it's not my committee and I don't want to dominate it in any way."

The other four candidates are Carl Bartley, Mike Daulton, Peggy McClellan and Jim Niebaum.

Bartley, manager of United New Mexico Bank in Ruidoso, is a rancher and banker with a degree in business management from New Mexico State University. Daulton, manager of Ruidoso Wal-Mart, has 15 years of experience setting up new Wal-Mart stores. He said Wal-Mart's Made in the USA program uses a few strategies that the EDC might consider.

"They work with private industries that are going out of business and they find a way to keep the plant open or start a new one," he said. "The objective is to save or create jobs. Maybe EDC could find a few industries that need our help."

Peggy McClellan, who works for Flying J Ranch, has lived in Ruidoso for 48 years and has owned a number of businesses throughout the years. She is a charter member of the EDCLC.

Jim Niebaum owns Carrizozo Orchard, and he has been self employed in the production and marketing of apples, cider and other fruits and vegetables since 1952. Niebaum said he would like to attract the Delta Clipper Rocket, if the federal funding wasn't so uncertain.

"Carrizozo has a good industrial park," he said. "I'll be keeping my eyes open and brain working to see what small industries could take advantage of our facilities here."

Gladden

they propose solutions, they will expect results.

He contended the group is not radical and wants to see a return to the basics of education, as well as love, understanding and support for all children.

"You'll be hearing from us," he said.

Parent Ed LeBlanc said he has children in second and third grades. They began attending local school in kindergarten and he has been very pleased with teachers to date.

"But they are getting ready to go into grades where I hear nothing but horror stories," he said. "That's why I decided to get involved, instead of pointing fingers."

"The school board's responsibility is to bring everyone together, enumerate the problems no matter how bad it gets for some individuals, whether it starts at the top, something must happen."

"Stop putting out small fires. Let's get back to what we want the Ruidoso school system to be. Whoever falls out along the wayside, so be it."

Deadly potential

Ruidoso Middle School principal Paula Papponi and her strong handling of the dress code at her school was praised by parent Donna Brant.

"I think it's great, anything we can do (to prevent proliferation) of gang related (activities) is great," she said.

But as she described an incident with her daughter and a friend being intimidated by boys who pointed a gun at them from a car, Mrs. Brant's voice quivered.

"My daughter had a gun pointed at her," she said fighting for control. "I feel the need to support our principal at the middle school and the dress code."

Mrs. Brant later told The Ruidoso News that while walking to the Tazee Freeze from the middle school last month, her daughter and a friend were stopped by five boys in a car.

Her daughter walked ahead, but her friend stayed to answer a question. She bolted from the side of the car when one of the boys allegedly pointed a gun with two barrels at her, Mrs. Brant said.

The girls' parents didn't find out about the incident until that evening. According to Ruidoso Police Department records, the boys have been charged with aggravated assault and are scheduled to go to district court in front of Judge Richard A. Parsons.

They contend the weapon was a pellet gun.

Others speak

Science teacher Joe Avalos said he backed the dress code 100 percent, but he noted that rules must be dynamic and able to change to meet objectives as the culture changes.

"We must take away the identifiers that allow (gang members) to recruit (sheep-like students) who follow blindly," he said. "As we see a changing population and kids influenced more and more by MTV, if it comes to removing blue nail polish, so be it."

The rules must be consistent, without allowing students multiple violations. The students must know that there are consequences for breaking the rules whether they are the children of a teacher or a friend, he said.

A substitute teacher told board members that the morale of instructors and students is low.

"A lot of good teachers want to leave," he said. "I suggest you not pass rules if you can't enforce them, because it makes us (teachers and administration) look weaker."

Tim Hoyt, who has spoken at previous meetings and served on a discipline committee, asked board members to reconsider support for a portable to be used at the high school as a student health center under a special state-funded program.

Noting that the proposal was discussed at last month's board meeting, Hoyt said the temporary building is to be used as "a doctor's office for pregnant girls and for classroom space to teach parenting."

"I think that's ridiculous," he told board members. "We're moving away from teaching the kids. We're paying them for misbehaving. Having a school nurse to take care of communicable diseases, I can go along with, but for someone's choice of behavior, I don't think we should be paying for out of wedlock (births)."

"I know it sounds callous, but all I want for them is the same as for my kids, to be self-sufficient."

"I'd like you to change direction, if you're considering (the portable)."

A woman who said she had moved to Ruidoso in November after visiting the area for years, asked the board to proceed carefully, if they are considering a change to outcome based education.

She said the approach, which is being pushed in New Mexico, is anything but education and is more based on attitudes and "conforming to the political correctness of the day" than on academic achievement.

The woman said she moved from San Marcos, Texas, where outcome based education is blamed by some parents for a decline in results on mandatory achievement tests two years after the system was initiated.

On a more positive note, high school teacher Carol Hubbard invited parents to visit her classroom to see for themselves what's happening. She warned that they may have to sit on the floor, because all of her 32 desks are filled.

"Stop listening to the rumors," she said. "My door is open for anyone to see for themselves."

A school bus driver for the middle school echoed that invitation, saying that she started driving a bus to ensure the safety of her own child.

Lunch time is when the students are at their worst, but a good time to see what's happening, she said, adding that dressing correctly is a matter of respect.

"The dress code has become an issue," she said. "But those with baggy pants and big shirts are not causing the problems. It's the kids that dress like hoodlums that are acting like hoodlums and causing the problems."

Although an announcement asking parents to attend the meeting had been circulated by three parents who indicated they thought administration had gone overboard on the approved dress code, they did not speak at the session.

Board members Susan Luterterman and Mike Morris encouraged the parents to turn out for all board meetings. Chairman Ron Hemphill read off a list of committees and boards on which parents could serve and contribute their points of view.

Frank Cannella, principal of White Mountain Elementary, said he was proud to see such interest and free expression of opinions.

"This is democracy in action," he said. Cannella invited everyone in the audience to attend his school's next parent council meeting at 6 p.m. February 24, noting that usually only a handful of parents attend the sessions.

"We're always looking for ways to improve our schools and we get a lot of good ideas from parents," Cannella said.

In a related issued, the school board was briefed by Gladden on a new violence prevention program in which Ruidoso will be included as one of five districts working with the University of New Mexico.

A three credit hour class will be offered this summer on violence in schools, curriculum development and conflict resolution, he said.

"We're doing everything we can to retain control of our campuses," Gladden said. The program will continue through the end of next year, but enough tools will be available to enact some measures next year, he said.

Hemphill commended the staff for consistently seeking programs that will benefit the district.

Also dealing with problem students, Gladden said an adolescent treatment day center is being considered.

The idea emerged from meetings of the YES (Youth Empowerment for Success) group about nine months ago.

"We heard about alternative programs for assistance to students," Gladden said. Although the group didn't think the district was ready for a full fledged alternative school, they believed some other avenue was needed to provide services. Members began looking for programs.

"There is a definite need for a halfway point to Springer (youth detention center)," Gladden said. "Otherwise, when they come back, they're educated in the negative and it's hard for us to have success with them."

Working with State Senator Pete Campos (D-Santa Rosa), money has been included in a House of Representatives bill to secure a building to handle 15 students who have exhibited violent behavior, are suffering from addiction or as an interim for those returning from Springer.

The building would not be part of any of the existing campuses, he said.

"Included in House Bill 2 is $198,000 for the start up costs," Gladden said. More money would be sought through the New Mexico Department of Children, Youth and Families. An additional $150,000 also is in the same bill for programs designed for at-risk students.

"We'll know in 1 1/2 weeks if it comes true," he said.

Hemphill added, "Fifteen students may not sound like so many, but you'd be surprised at the amount of effort required (to handle them in a regular school setting). It would be a blessing to the overall district."

where he said they have fountains flowing in the street and restrooms with water fountains on every block.

"Everyday we have people begging to use our restrooms," he said. "We need help."

Karn said the village has a good contractor showing how to save money. He said a crew was coming in the next day to do some advance work on the next phase.

Briley said he did not know of any crew coming.

Mayor Shaw asked Karn why the village's project director, Briley, wasn't informed about the arrival of Taggart's crew.

"We have a project director that is an engineer. He should be the one making these decisions," Shaw said.

Councilor J.D. James told Karn that Briley's lack of awareness showed a failure in communication between the contractor and the project manager.

"This is not kosher," James said. Taggart said Karn has been gracious in coming down and looking at some of the problems he is having with designs, with merchants and with his own crews. He said he wanted to see cut the next phase to save time.

Taggart said he meant to contact Briley and had a letter in his hand for Briley and village manager Gary Jackson, but he couldn't get it to them, because he was preparing for the council meeting.

He told the mayor he had excellent communication with Briley and they have fought through many problems on the project that "y'all and the people are not aware of."

He mentioned providing ramps for merchants that weren't required, referring to a few crude plywood platforms built for customers to access the shops.

He said he has bent over backward to help people and received nothing but grief for his efforts.

"We have made mistakes, but we have paid for our mistakes. I lost plenty of curb out there because it was not laid properly," Taggart said. "Our crew did not know how to lay the curb properly. We were instructed by Briley to tear it out. We threw away over 200 feet of curb at my expense, and put it back at my expense."

"We pay for our mistakes, and we are asking for the village and merchants and everybody else to pay for their own mistakes."

"If this architect didn't design this project properly, then I'm going to ask for an immediate suspension of time for any little delay that I have. I don't want to do that. I got a boss that sittin' over there looking at accounting figures and he's losing money because we're not handling this project properly."

He said he makes changes daily without delays by working through an inspector and Briley.

"Everybody said there is no communication. I'm sorry, but you're very wrong," Taggart said.

Buddy Carter, who owns a ski shop, said he has welcomed use of his parking lot in the summer when he is closed.

He complained that other downtown businesses were allowed to build without sufficient parking, when he had to prove he had space to add an addition.

"Let's be reasonable," he said. "Let's try to create parking."

In order to allow new businesses in the downtown area, the village's planning and zoning commission has been liberal in granting variances when the proper amount of parking space is not available.

"When Mary Maul started this project, she wanted to create a community driveway with me and the person next door," Carter said. "I said, 'no, leave my drive way alone.' "Well, they drew it that way, but when she sent the final plans into the state, she drew over it and put that community driveway there where that mailbox is. She said you can park up against your building."

"This is one of the biggest things wrong. Mary Maul and a few people designed it and now we're all having to pay the price for it. I need trees in front of my building like I need a hole in the head. Now we're going to put some Mickey Mouse trees out there with no leaves. You put Christmas tree lights in them, they're still nothin'. People come to this country to look at the beautiful green pine trees."

He said when towns try this kind of project, businesses leave and go to shopping centers. He cited Las Cruces as an example.

Eddie Fowler, owner of the Win, Place and Show bar, told the council that merchants were assured the project's first phase would be completed before the second phase was constructed.

"I think you people on the commission have an obligation to make sure it is done that way," Fowler said.

He has talked to MainStreet director Don Miller, Briley and Taggart and he found out things from Taggart that he didn't find out from Briley or Miller, Fowler said, such as that his driveway was going to be widened.

"We're widening one of my driveways that has been there since 1956 running smoothly," Fowler said. "Plus out of six parking spaces along Suddarth, I'm losing four."

Fowler said control of the project was lost years ago when the architect drew up the plan.

"I think the council lost control on this MainStreet thing years ago," he said. "Everybody has a new face on the council now, but they lost control on this thing. Mary Maul said everything is going to be taken care of, everything is OK, and it wasn't being done."

Fowler criticized the State MainStreet parking expert for saying Ruidoso does not have a parking problem.

"That is the most ridiculous statement I have ever seen in my life," Fowler said.

The state parking expert, who visited Ruidoso last month, also said the downtown merchants had more of a space management problem that could be worked out, if they could learn to communicate among themselves.

Fowler told Taggart that the merchants had a bad winter because of the weather, but that he had decent weather to work.

Taggart complained that he was going to pour concrete last Saturday, but the weathermen were wrong in their predictions.

Councilor James asked if he was in communication with the architect. Taggart said he was not satisfied with the answers the architect had given him.

Taggart said he does not have enough time as written in the contract to do the job, but he would try to make up the time with small adjustments.

After giving everyone an opportunity to speak, Shaw outlined action steps to be taken.

"We can't take three hours every council meeting going over and over the same thing. We should handle the problems as we go," she said.

Turning to MainStreet director Miller, Shaw said, "I want you to put out a flyer to every business so they can't say they don't know about the weekly coffees, so you can communicate weekly."

The mayor asked Taggart to attend, if possible.

"Questions should be answered on a weekly basis with updates," the mayor said.

Ross said the coffees weren't working.

"I could have coffee at my office," Ross said, noting that nothing was discussed at the meetings, no presentations were given.

"I go shake hands with everybody and then I leave," he said.

Village manager Gary Jackson said a more structured format is needed at the weekly meetings.

"Don (Miller), I'm going to lay that on your shoulders. From now on, I want these MainStreet coffees to be informational type coffees where you get answers," Jackson said. "Alan will be there, Don will be there. I want the people there involved and the merchants to be able to keep track and keep apprised on what's happening."

Shaw said Briley will give updated presentations at the coffees. Miller acknowledged that information was the original intent of the coffees, but he said it soon fell apart, because merchants didn't attend.

In a related issue, Briley said that the village has applied this week for cooperative funds from the state highway department to upgrade all the satellite streets in the downtown area that are in disrepair.

A public hearing regarding the loan agreement with the New Mexico Health and Environment Department for wastewater improvement was postponed until February 23, after State Representative John Underwood (D) meets with the legislative committees.

Attorney Mike Line stood in for village attorney Underwood while he is in Santa Fe.

The council heard a presentation by Craig Rawlings regarding bicycle paths along the highway that would lead to other bike trails in the forests.

Rawlings told the council he was working through Lincoln County Commissioner Wilton Howell to bring the program before the commission at their next meeting.

In other business, the council acted to:

- schedule a public hearing on a request for a zone map amendment for March 8. Applicants Jenna and Gary Sims cited difficulty with mortgage finance for their residence under current commercial zoning as reason for the property zoning request.

- approved the final plan for Cree Meadows Country Club with five minor provisions.

- set a March 8 public hearing date for a code amendment concerning the Parks and Recreation Commission make-up. The ordinance provisions currently require two persons to be on the commission that are 55 years or older. The amendment is to eliminate that requirement.

- approved a bid award on interior coating for a 5-million gallon steel reservoir.

- passed a resolution against House Bill 487 that would revise Gross Receipt Tax based on a municipality's population, rather than earnings.

- The bill would have helped Roswell by about $3-million and hurt Ruidoso by about $800,000. State Representative Don Olsen of Roswell sponsored the bill.

- approved an out of state travel request for Police Chief Richard Swenor to attend a law enforcement seminar.

Commissioner wades into trash budget

by DIANNE STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

By the time the informal meeting broke up last Friday, it appeared Lincoln County Commissioner Wilton Howell was satisfied with the answers he received about the $1,236,052 budget of the county garbage coalition.

Howell and Joe Lewandowski, general manager of the Lincoln County Solid Waste Authority, have butted heads a few times in the last three months over budget items.

This time around, the commissioner, with the concurrence of his fellow commission members, brought county manager Andy Wynham with him.

They soon realized that the very qualities and experience that helped Lewandowski pull the authority out of an organizational mess since he was hired last June also may have been what caused some of the miscommunication.

He was used to a different type of budget format, but will be looking at something more in line with the county or village of Ruidoso's budget sheets. They both reflect percentage of money spent to date compared to the percentage of the year passed.

"It took me nearly two years before I really grasped the difference," Wynham said. "So I understand what Joe is going through."

Lewandowski also worked with a board of private business people, who were actively and consistently involved in the process. The 10 authority board members represent the county and its five municipalities. Most serve as one of many duties connected to their elected offices.

It didn't take long for Wynham to crystallize some of the items that were eluding Howell.

He found about $81,499 in expenses unpaid by the former manager, yet unbudgeted in the current budget. They are one-time expenses and should go into an accounts payable line item in the budget under each segment of operation: landfill, hauling (and transfer station) and recycling.

"That way, you avoid inflating each line item, because then that can be a basis for asking for more next year," Wynham said.

The $81,499 represents expenses that were impossible for (Lewandowski) to cover in the budget.

But thousands of dollars more were normal month to month carry-over bills that occurred at the end of the year.

"You have to get used to that," Wynham told Lewandowski. About the same amount overlapping this year will be overlapped into next year, equalizing the impact.

In private enterprise, bills that were expected to come in after the end of the budget year, but covering expenses in the current budget period, were paid ahead, Lewandowski said.

One of the major areas Howell questioned was salaries. He thought cutbacks in the number of employees would offset the $18,000 needed to cover a five percent increase approved in mid-October.

Lewandowski said he replayed the tapes of that October board meeting.

"I answered a specific question," he told Howell. "I said the people removed would more than cover the raise allotted, but not that they would cover mistakes in the budget before or carryover expenses."

Last June, while trying to come up with a 1993-94 budget, the board made things fit the reality available instead of looking realistically at what was needed to run the operation, Howell and Lewandowski acknowledged.

Part of the confusion was that board members thought the operations manager, who was paid $30,000, was on staff longer in the 1993-94 fiscal year than the half month in July before he was terminated by Lewandowski.

Four contract employees were eliminated, but more permanent people were added. In all, the difference ended up only as a one person reduction from 26 to 25 employees.

To determine annualized figures, Wynham pulled out the totals for the July 1993, the first month of the new fiscal year for September before five percent raises were approved by the board; and in December after the raises.

While on paper, the figure in the prior operation year for salaries was listed as $347,604, the actual figure spent for July added up to $376,433.

In September, right before the raises, it took $373,672 to cover the payroll. With restructuring and raises, that total went up to $390,234 in December.

The figure needed this year is $384,550.

Under operations, the three officials couldn't figure out where the former manager had classified some of the fuel and oil costs that must have been required to operate the trucks and other machinery. The figure listed under the 1992-93 budget wasn't enough to operate eight trucks more than two days a month.

But Howell and Wynham seemed satisfied that Lewandowski's estimated $46,500 is realistic and that the authority manager has taken adequate measures to control usage and eliminate possible abuses.

The county manager was concerned about some of the county customers who have ignored quarterly bills for garbage collection since it became mandatory.

Lewandowski said 43 are ready to be filed in court for collection. The $43,900 in money due includes the latest quarterly billing of January through March.

Wynham said he is uncomfortable with the authority having only $125,425 for a cash carryover at the end of the budget year.

"It seems like a dangerously tight cash situation," he told Lewandowski and Howell.

Lewandowski said the amount satisfies state requirements, but that he agrees it's too low.

Wynham said the 1994-95 budget, if kept at the same level and no longer plagued with the $81,499 in unexpected expenses from the previous manager, should see that cash carryover increased to possibly $200,000, while still allowing for three percent inflation.

OPPORTUNITY. EDUCATION. SAFETY.

Dear Fellow New Mexican:

These three words - opportunity, education, and safety - signify the great challenges we New Mexicans face today. Challenges that we must meet with fresh ideas and new energy.

These are not new challenges. Since I've been in the Senate, I've fought an uphill fight to reverse our nation's spiral toward lower-paying jobs and lower-skilled students and workers. I've worked tirelessly to put the defense and technology resources of our state to work to create good, high-wage jobs in a post Cold War world. We created new defense conversion programs, technology partnerships with industry, and national education goals which affect communities from Carlsbad to Farmington.

But this has just been a start. The larger challenges still confront us, and now is the time to take them head on. I have three goals for a new term:

- ➔ To create high-wage job opportunities, we must successfully diversify the world-class research, technology, and defense facilities already located here in New Mexico.
- ➔ To help our students and workers hold these high-skill jobs, we must provide quality education and job training which continues throughout their working years.
- ➔ To restore personal safety in the home, the school, the work-place, and our communities, we must develop new, courageous approaches to fighting crime and violence at all levels of government and society.

Our challenge in these changing times is to create a New Mexico with higher-paying jobs, better schools, and safer streets. Early in January, I announced my intention to seek re-election as your United States Senator. In the next nine months, I will continue to travel the state. And as always, I will want to hear your ideas about how we can help each other meet this challenge. I want to continue to talk with you, plan with you, and work with you to create a New Mexico that is high-wage, high-skill, and low-fear. I appreciate your concerns, your interest, and your support.

Sincerely,

Jeff Bingham

Local gymnasts rack up awards

by PAMELA CROMWELL
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Ruidoso Mountaintop Gymnastics was overrun Saturday by 32 girls between the ages of seven and fourteen, all tumbling, dancing, balancing, swinging, vaulting, and cheering.

It was the Southern New Mexico Gymnastics Invitational, drawing teams of gymnasts from Las Cruces, El Paso, Deming, and Alamogordo. This is the first meet of the spring season for Mountaintop. Last fall the gymnasts went to six meets.

In Level 5 competition, Regina Scott took fourth place for her performance on bars and floor. Regina's excellent all-around score of 31.8 qualifies her for Level 6.

Julie Miller placed ninth in beam and fifth in floor. According to Coach Burton Howell, this was Julie's first time to compete. "She did very well," he said. "She qualified for Level 5 sectionals."

Jayla Miller placed ninth in floor and scored a 29.5 overall, and Rebecca Conley placed ninth in bars, scoring 29.55 overall.

Ruidoso's two Level 6 gymnasts racked up awards in all events. Krissi Shaver placed third in bars and vault, second on the beam, and first for floor.

Suzanne Flannery took third in beam and floor events, and first for bars and vault. Overall, Shaver placed second and Flannery placed third.

Level 7 teammates Rebecca Echols and Kristi Doyle took second and third places respectively in all-around scores. Echols placed second in bars and vault, and Doyle placed second in beam and floor.

Jenny Ames competed in Level 8 Optionals, taking second in floor and third in vault. She placed fourth overall with a score of 30.4.

According to Coach Howell, this is the first time in two years that Jenny has competed. "I saw a lot of good things," said Howell.

Howell is expecting good things from the girls in future meets. At all levels his team tends to average almost thirty points. At Level 5, Regina Scott is the strongest and most seasoned competitor.

In two weeks, the Mountaintop Gymnastics team will compete in the Valentine's Invitational at Duke City Gymnastics in Albuquerque.

The following weekend, February 25 and 26, they head for the Oriental Express Invitational in Las Cruces.

In March, four gymnasts will strut their stuff at Level 5 Sectionals. "It's the equivalent of a state championship," said Howell. The qualifiers, Julie Miller, Jayla Miller, Rebecca Conley, and Regina Scott go to Santa Fe March 25.

Howell said the girls put in an average of seven hours a week, practicing at the gym three days a week.

Mountaintop Gymnastics got a new building in Ruidoso. Downs in June. They train 100 to 110 students ranging in age from preschoolers to high schoolers.

For children under the age of five, gymnastics tuition is $15 a month for once a week, $25 for twice a week. Ages six and up meet twice a week for $35 a month.

"With the little ones we work on basic things to improve motor skills," said Howell. "They walk on the beam, swing on ropes, tumble."

Both boys and girls are encouraged to train in gymnastics. Howell would like to put together a boys' gymnastics team.

Suzanne Flannery, a home school student and daughter of Kathy Flannery performs in the floor exercise at the recent Ruidoso Gymnastics Southern Invitational Meet at the Ruidoso Gymnastics of Lincoln County facility located in Aqua Fria Estates. Krissi Shaver, right, shows her form on the balance beam. Shaver is the daughter of Dan and Nancy Shaver of Ruidoso. Jayla Miller starts her forward roll on the balance beam. Miller is the daughter of Judy and Ed Miller of Ruidoso Downs. The association schedules classes for all age levels. For information call the gym at 378-4688.

Matmen head for district tourney

The Ruidoso Warrior Wrestling team heads into this weekend's District Tournament with perhaps their best team in years.

The tournament is scheduled for 9 a.m. Saturday at Onate High School in Las Cruces.

In last week's District Quad, the Warriors wrestled well against Cobre and Silver City to determine the seedings for this week's District Championship.

The Warriors defeated always-tough Cobre 42-32 and lost to a very tough Silver squad 61-19.

Silver is loaded, particularly in the higher weights, where the Warriors are weakest. The Colts have a State Champion in a 162-pound Randy Griswald and their Cook brothers are also worth mentioning at the 171 and 189 weight classes.

The Warriors' brightest hope individually is 103-pound junior Julian Flores. The wiry lightweight wrestled poorly against Silver's competitor, but nonetheless came back to take the match and the top seed in the district tournament.

Julian's brother, Johnny Flores has also wrestled well this year, at times brilliantly. At 119 pounds, Johnny also won his match against Silver at the Quad.

Gunner Johnson (125 pounds) started slowly, falling behind 5-0 before coming back to close the gap to 5-3. Johnson still lost the match, despite wrestling well in the second and third periods.

Beau Jarvis also provided a victory for his team against Silver, at 130 pounds. Jarvis pinned his Silver opponent after a tough battle.

Shaun Cobb, Bill Cash, Billy Austin and Sergio Guerrero all came out on the short end of the stick, despite good efforts.

And Matt Bates, perhaps the Warriors' scrappiest competitor, drew defending State Champion Griswald and lost, despite another good effort.

The Warriors defeated Cobre for the first time in five years as Julian Flores, Gunner Johnson, Beau Jarvis, Billy Austin, Matt Bates, Sergio Guerrero, and Eustace Gallerito won their matches.

The Warriors forfeited matches at the 112, 171, and 189-weight classes.

As far as the District tournament goes, the Warriors appear to have good chances for individual champions in Julian Flores, and Beau Jarvis.

Other medaling possibilities include Johnny Flores, Bates, Guerrero, Austin and Gallerito.

Jose Prieto at 112 pounds and Scooter Bussell could also help the Warriors cause, should they finish as good as third.

Wes Smith turns from riding to sculpting

Part 17 in a Series
by Dianne Stallings

Since he was nine years old, sculptor Wes Smith had earned his money exercising and breaking horses.

"I was born 100 years too late," Smith said. "Everything I was interested in had nothing to do with school. I wasn't a good student, I always doodled as a little kid, daydreaming about the horses I ought to be riding."

He spent 13 years in rodeo, working cattle and riding broncs across Wyoming and Montana.

When he was 27, he tried for the first time to translate his extensive knowledge of a cowboy's life into something that might help preserve the ranching heritage.

"My mother bought me a ticket for an art show in El Paso," Smith said. "The three dimensional wild-life sculptures fascinated me. I thought to myself that I could do that. Fortunately, the artist, Gerald Balciar, took the time to answer my questions. Now I like to help people who are interested in learning to sculpt."

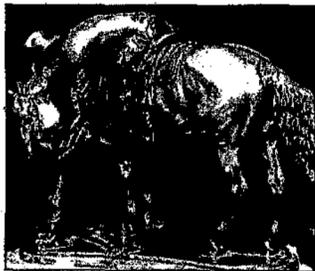

"A friend gave me some wax. I grabbed it and took it home with the only direction to put it in hot water before I started to work on it. I put it into water that was too hot. I boiled it and it melted."

Smith knew the subject matter he planned to tackle. "I have a camera in my mind of the things I have seen in Wyoming, Montana and the Southwest. I draw from true life experience, but like a stop frame, just one instant in time. I just had to learn the mechanisms, what holds the clay up when you're working on it."

"I did my first piece holding the wax under lukewarm tap water until it softened and then I moved it around like crazy."

A longhorn steer lying down in a pasture emerged from the lump of wax.

"He was lying down because I couldn't figure how to stand it up," Smith admitted. "I was low on patience and low on money, so I couldn't quit breaking horses to go to an art school. It was five years later before I started sculpting in earnest."

When he finally got up enough nerve to take his first piece to a local foundry, he nearly choked on the price quoted for pouring it in bronze. Years later, he realized it was a private foundry and they probably were trying to say no without saying no.

The wax steer sat on a shelf for five or six years before a friend convinced Smith he should try again and take it to the House Bronze in Lubbock, Texas, which now pours all of his pieces.

Career on the move

After a slow start, Smith has charged ahead with his new career, gathering a loyal following of collectors and still managing to saddle up a horse from time to time.

Speaking from his studio in Loma Grande, Smith said he's been lucky to meet some people who appreciate his work and have paved the way for him to continue during tight financial times.

His wife, the former Cindy Goodloe, handles the marketing of his work.

"Cindy and I broke horses together," Smith said. "When we married (on horseback appropriately), I got a partner who makes life easier. She promotes and does the marketing on it and does it quite well."

"At first, I worked from 9 p.m. to midnight sculpting, because I was single and raising three kids. When I put them to bed at night, I'd start. When I got them off to school in the morning, I'd break horses."

His first big career break materialized when he sold one of his sculptures to a doctor at the Cowboy Symposium in Lubbock, Texas.

"There are a lot of good artists, it's who gets the breaks," Smith said. "I think my background helps. I'm a cowboy. I have seen so many (sculptures) with incorrect gear. I think real cowboys really appreciate the authenticity."

He and Cindy entered the celebrity team roping and cutting competition at the symposium. Smith won the team competition and Cindy the cutting.

"We made the newspapers. They called me the cowboy artist and that started it," Smith said.

At his next show, the Joe Phippen Memorial Art Show in Prescott, Arizona, Smith won the Gold Medal sculpture award. The judge was Ray Swanson and his family was starting a gallery in Scottsdale.

Smith soon saw his pieces shown at the top notch gallery, including his fourth sculpture, "First Touch," which depicts a cowboy leaning from his horse to let a colt smell his hand.

Peter and Juliania Holt of Blanco, Texas, became more than collectors when they started buying Smith's work, they became friends.

"They supported me from the beginning, at a time when I really needed it," Smith said. They met not over a discussion of his art, but on a camping and horseback riding trip arranged by a third party.

"We became friends and showed them my art (three pieces at that point)," Smith said. "They bought two pieces and would send money in advance. They buy one of everything I do, no matter what."

"That took the pressure off me, so I didn't have to ride horses nine hours a day and I could pay my bills ahead of time."

Another major collector adopted Smith during a show in Prescott, Arizona. Tom and Melba Clinton of Rockford, Illinois, were walking through the show when Clinton spotted Smith's work.

"He poked his head around the corner and said, 'I'll buy that. How much?'" Smith said.

WES SMITH IN STUDIO

FIRST PIECE

"Cindy and he write back and forth. He'd never seen a real log cabin and flew out to see us."

"They've helped us get going."

"Tom told him, keep the cowboy alive through your art and that's just what Wes wanted to do," Mrs. Smith said. "He loved what we've done, how we live, like building our own house. We've made so many good friends."

"I really never thought I'd sell a piece of art," Smith said. "If I sold one, that was just a plus. Now I'm so tickled when someone likes one, whether they buy it or not. The money's great, but the reward comes when someone looks at it and understands."

The process

"I don't sketch before I start," Smith said. "It's in my mind. I spend a lot of time thinking about it. As I work, it changes. I never end with what I started."

Each part of the sculpture is a complete unit, which allows Smith to move the rider around almost as if he is working with a sketch, except in clay.

"I work from the bottom up," Smith said. "I don't just stick the rider on top and only do what shows. I build the saddle to scale to fit the horse, so the human figures sit right on the saddle."

"I do the figure standing up and then bend it around until it has a natural look sitting on the horse. Some of the stuff won't show, but I enjoy the realism. To me, my art is a history lesson."

"I've been told to loosen up and not put in every little detail, but then how is a person from the city to know. If everybody does it red, then they all would be red."

Smith often uses himself as his model, placing five or six mirrors around the room as he sits in a saddle.

His sculptures tell familiar stories.

"The piece (possibly to be named 'The Boss's Daughter') is of a lady in a side saddle with a cowboy on horseback next to her," Smith said. "You'll know the story when I'm finished."

Another favorite of Smith's fans is "Footsteps," showing a cowboy lifting his son, who has a wooden stick horse, up onto his real horse.

"I'd love to do an action sculpture, but I keep ending up doing these 'feelings' pieces. I don't do safe art, what somebody else wants," Smith said. "I start out with an action piece in my mind, roping or such, but then something genuine and touching pops into my mind and draws me over there."

"It takes me one month to six weeks to do a project, especially since I am self taught and had to figure it all out. I struggle until I got the best I could," Smith said. "Another six weeks are required to get it in metal, so it's about two and a half to three months from start to finish."

It's not the animals or people who give him the hardest time, it's the folds on clothing, Smith said.

Hard work

"There's nobody who tried harder at anything than I do," Smith said. During his rodeo career, he earned the titles of AJRA (American Junior Rodeo Association) World Champion Bull Rider and Reserve All Around Cowboy. "A poor country boy has to try harder."

His parents are very proud of his success, Smith said.

"I know it's a cliché, but my father put a lot of trying in me. He made me excel in everything I did."

Mrs. Smith said her husband's main markets continue to be through shows such as the Western Heritage Classic in Abilene, Texas. "He was the highest seller there two years ago," she said. Governor Bruce King bought one of his works shown in the Governor's Classic Art Show in Albuquerque last year. He also has shown in the Western Regional Art Show in Cheyenne, Wyoming, and the Nita Stewart Haley Library Show in Midland, Texas, and took the Gold Metal Art Award in Oregon for "Too Tired to Ride."

One of his larger cowboys is part of the permanent collection at the Anne C. Stradling Museum of the Horse in Ruidoso Downs.

"I'd like to study under someone I admire, but I can't find the time," Smith said. "Not with four kids (at home) and 20 horses, so I have to keep doing what I'm doing and keep hoping they're right."

An admiring Mrs. Smith added, "Once Wes does something and figures it out, he never has trouble with it again, like the muscles of a horse. That impresses me, because most artists have to do it over and over. He knows horses so well, the conformation."

"That's why those who know the Western life really appreciate his work. They give him a lot of encouragement."

Smith said his biggest thrills occur when old cowboys come in and look at one of his works in progress.

They all have stories that are relevant, like Fred "Peg" Pfingsten. His wife, Leota's saddle, is displayed in the studio. He also gave Smith the name for one of his sculptures, when he came into the studio, took off his hat, wiped his brow and said "hot and dry." The name stuck and the piece later appeared on the cover of the New Mexico Stockman's magazine.

The late Fern Sawyer, who was inducted into the Cowgirl Hall of Fame in Hereford, Texas, also was a frequent visitor.

"The old pioneers have been a big inspiration," Smith said.

Smith finds Lincoln County

Smith moved to Lincoln County about nine years ago from Anthony, Texas.

"I grew up in the mountains as a kid and they never left me," Smith said. "I woke up one morning and said I've had enough. I came up one weekend, found this place, bought the land and built the barn."

The only other structure, now his studio, had been hauled in from the old Bonito settlement. The cabin had been used as a post office before that town was covered by the waters of Bonito Lake.

"I saved up and redid this, because it's a good atmosphere," Smith said. "I've filled it with old saddles, one owned by Roy LaMay, who quit riding it in the 1920s, even my own childhood saddle, and one belonging to Judge Hawkins, who was head honcho for the railroad that piped water out of Bonito Lake."

Many of his sculptures are sold directly out of Smith's studio and the couple's spacious new home with gorgeous hardwood floors and vaulted ceilings.

"We're selective on galleries," Mrs. Smith said. Her husband's work is exhibited at the Pierce Fine Art Gallery in Scottsdale and during the All American Art Show at the Museum of the Horse, he sold four pieces the first night. Smith also still enters about eight shows a year, the maximum he can handle and still run a ranching business and be there for his children: Christopher, 18 (in college on a rodeo scholarship); Celina, 17; Monty, 15; Taylor, 11; Douglas, 10; and Shayla, 9.

"I'm out of new pieces right now, so I'm cooped up here (in the studio) six to eight hours a day," Smith said. "If I start to burn out, I catch a horse and air out my brain."

With two shows coming up this month, he has a deadline to meet. Smith's work will be part of the Western Regional Art Show in Cheyenne, Wyoming, and the Nita Stewart Haley Library Show in Lubbock.

But he's not complaining. "It's a pretty wonderful life when you can do the things you love."

Silver Lining

Honest Abe, A Symbol of American Tradition

Lincoln's birthday

Abraham Lincoln, our 16th President, was born in a log cabin in Kentucky, February 12, 1809. It has been said that more words of praise have been written about Abraham Lincoln than any other mortal man. Yet praise was the least of his wishes. He became a living symbol of the American dream by rising from poverty and hardship to become one of the most beloved men of all time. A giant on the scene of world history. At 6 feet 4, he was our second tallest President; George Washington being the tallest at 6 feet 5. His physical strength was legendary. He required only three blows with the ax to split a log 2 feet thick to make four fence rails. To match his enormous physical strength he was endowed with intelligence, honesty, compassion and a deeply spiritual nature.

From earliest childhood, Lincoln surely somehow deep in his soul must have known of his historic destiny. He had a great desire for learning and taught himself to read and figure. Books on the Kentucky frontier were rare and Lincoln would walk miles to borrow a book and soon had read all the books in the library. The books which influenced his early life were the Bible, Pilgrim's Progress, Robinson Crusoe, Aesop Fables, the Psalms of Robert Burns, Mason Weems, Life of Washington and the autobiography of Benjamin Franklin. His favorite was the Bible.

Honest Abe

His honesty was widely known and admired throughout his frontier neighborhood and earned him the name, Honest Abe. Among the many stories told about him is how he walked miles in a blizzard to pay back a few pennies he had mistakenly overcharged a lady while he was working in a store. One of the guiding lights of his nature was compassion. One time he was riding the rough countryside and saw a young bird that had fallen out of its nest. He dismounted and put the bird back in its nest, even though in his Sunday clothes.

Gettysburg Address

Lincoln's Gettysburg address is universally acclaimed as one of the outstanding messages of all times. The Encyclopedia Britannica in its article on Lincoln devotes a full page to the address in large print. It is engraved in stone at the Lincoln Memorial in Washington.

Lincoln County heritage from Honest Abe

The territory of New Mexico came very close to being named Lincoln and the original Lincoln County was the largest in the country. The size of the state of Indiana comprising seven present day counties.

As you look out at the American flag floating in the breeze with the mountains beyond your heart rejoices in knowing that we live in this present spot of the original Lincoln County.

Let us send up a prayer of thanks to Honest

Abe.

Happy birthday to Buddy Guthrie

Elton Edward Guthrie, affectionately known as Buddy was born in Lincoln February 9, 1931 to Elton Guthrie and the former Pearl Purcell. He attended grade school in Lincoln and then went to Capitan High School where he played football and basketball. He graduated in late April of 1947 and the first of May he went to work for the Otero County Electric Co-op in Capitan.

That means that on the first of May of this year, Buddy will have completed forty-five years with the organization. "I have enjoyed every minute of it," said Buddy, "both the job and the people. The people are what make the job enjoyable." He has been area superintendent since 1974 and has no plans of retirement today.

A happy turning point in Buddy's life came April 26, 1951 when he was married to the former Claire Knail, a school mate of his Capitan high school days. They have three children, Edward, Nelda Francis and Ruth Fonce and ten grandchildren.

On the stormy nights when the power goes out Buddy is out in the blizzard with his men whom he calls "my boys." When the power comes back on we send up a prayer of thanks to Buddy and his faithful workers. One time after Buddy had come in out of the snowy night I asked him how he felt. He said, "I feel fine. This goes with the job. You have to take the rough weather with the fair weather."

Buddy's wife Claire struck the right chord when she said this job is Buddy's life.

We are thankful for Buddy's many years of faithful service to us and we wish him many happy returns of the day and all God's blessings.

Obituaries

Mary Jane Shirley

A memorial service for Mary Jane Shirley, 57, of Alamogordo, was conducted at 7 p.m. Tuesday, February 8 at the Loyal Order of Moose Lodge #2016 in Alamogordo.

Shirley died Friday, February 4 at Gerald Champion Memorial Hospital. She was born July 11, 1936 in Weatherby, Texas, the daughter of Carl and Burley Clanton Cass. She grew up and attended school in Silver City and then moved to Wilcox, Arizona where she has spent most of her life. While living in Wilcox, she was a co-owner of a saddle shop with her husband. She moved to Alamogordo 10 years ago from Wilcox. She was a member of the Ladies Auxiliaries of the Fraternal Order of Eagles, the Loyal Order of Moose and the V.F.W.

She married Wilburn Thomas in 1966; he died in 1979. She later married Virgil Shirley in 1990 and he preceded her in death in 1992.

Survivors include two sons: Randy Price of Westcliffe, Colorado and Charles Price of Margate, Florida; one daughter: Geneva Hirsch of Ruidoso; two step-daughters: Carol Gage of Cloudcroft; and Karen Kendrick of Long Beach, California. Three sisters, two brothers and nine grandchildren.

Arrangements are under the direction of Sears Alamogordo Funeral Home.

Lorraine Wormley

Graveside services for Lorraine "Jiggs" Wormley, 78 of Ruidoso Downs, were at 2 p.m. Tuesday (February 8) at Ft. Bliss National Cemetery in El Paso. Chaplain Captain Pablo Gonzales of Ft. Bliss officiated.

Wormley died Sunday, February 6 at her home in Ruidoso Downs. She was born January 30, 1916 in Nashville, Tennessee and grew up in State Center, Iowa. She worked in Civil Service as a secretary in the Adjutant General's office and in Congressional Liaison at Ft. Bliss. She and her husband, Raymond of 48 years, lived in El Paso for 43 years, where she was President of the Women's Auxiliary of U.T.E.P. from 1982 to 1983, president of the Austin High School PTA in 1973 and an active member of the Ft. Bliss Center Chapel choir for more than 25 years. They also maintained a summer residence in Ruidoso Downs for 40 years until they moved here a few months ago. She was an active member of the Ruidoso Downs Auxiliary and the Lincoln County Medical Center Auxiliary Pink Ladies.

Survivors include her husband, Raymond of Ruidoso Downs; two daughters: Claudia Wormley Wilson of Ft. Worth, Texas and Mary Elizabeth Wormley of Los Angeles, California. Two grandsons: Colin Wilson of Ft. Worth and Dalton Frederick of Los Angeles and a sister: Katherine Milburn of Powell, Wyoming.

Spectacular scenery, clean air and lots of space draw horses and their riders to the Fort Stanton Trails System acreage on U.S. 380 southeast of Capitan.

Supervised by the federal Bureau of Land Management, the trails system is situated in an upland pinyon-juniper forest mixed with grassy meadows.

Eighteen miles of official trails and 30 more miles of unofficial routes designated for future development snake through small canyons and edge ridges between the Sacramento and Capitan mountain ranges.

The bureau trails join the U.S. Forest Service trails along the southern boundary, allowing an opportunity for extended trail rides toward Lincoln, Glencoe or Ruidoso.

Trail riders also may enjoy primitive camping along the way or at the undeveloped Fort Stanton Cave Campground, which offers one table, a restroom, a large parking and tent camp area, and four ground fire rings. Designated primitive campsites, as well as historic and scenic overlooks are planned.

Several years ago, regional equestrian groups asked the bureau to consider establishing trails at Fort Stanton. The first effort resulted in the Big Tank-East Well Canyon Trail and the Capitan Trail within the Fort Stanton Special Management Area, which is highly accessible by the east-west running U.S. 380. The trail head, known as the Horse Trails Parking Lot, is right off the road. It includes ample parking for vehicles and trailers, hitching posts for horses, a kiosk with a map of the trail system and watering points along the trails.

Water holes

Although no water is available at the parking lot, it can be found three-fourths of a mile southeast near the Rio Bonito creek.

In the Bonito Valley west of Fort Stanton camping is possible at the undeveloped Rio Bonito Campground with five sites, picnic tables, trash cans and restrooms. The small creek that passes through the campground carries spring waters and snow melt from Sierra Blanca. Petroglyphs are visible on rocks around the campground, left from the days of the pueblo culture that settled in the area around 1300 A.D. The 1.4 mile long Rio Bonito Petroglyph Trail leads to one such site.

The Big Tank/East Well Trail passes by Fort Stanton Cave, the third longest in New Mexico. First explored by soldiers in 1855, it is gated to protect formations and bat colonies. Small groups can arrange visits by obtaining a free permit from the Roswell bureau office.

Meet the candidates Tuesday

Capitan residents will have a chance to meet candidates for municipal offices at 7 p.m. February 15 in the Chamber of Commerce building at 103 West Second Street.

The event is being sponsored by the chamber. Residents who want to vote by absentee for the March 1 election should stop at village hall and pick up an absentee ballot by 5 p.m. February 24.

New chamber time approved

A new meeting time will go into effect in March for members of the Chamber of Commerce.

The sessions will begin at 12:30 p.m. on the first Monday of every month in the chamber building at 103 Second Street.

Government meetings set

The Capitan Board of Trustees is scheduled to meet at 7 p.m. Monday, February 14, in village hall.

Other than a request for city water, other items on the agenda are routine, and include an update on the street project.

The Capitan School Board will get together for a 6:30 p.m. work session tonight (Thursday) in the school library. The regular meeting will begin at 7 p.m. and will include an update on the State Legislative session, 1994-95 calendar information, 1992-93 audit responses, middle school construction progress and upcoming meetings.

Traylor plays V-ball with Central Arizona College

Capitan Senior Tyicie Traylor, one of the Lady Tiger's consistent high scorers in basketball, signed a letter of intent Wednesday morning to play volleyball at Central Arizona College.

She will receive a full scholarship covering tuition, room and board at Central, which is in Coolidge, Arizona.

"She's real excited about this," her mother Frances Traylor said after the signing. "She had gone for tryouts at several different colleges, including Eastern. When she came back from Central, she said she liked the coach and campus. She said she'd like to play volleyball there."

Not only is Traylor a terror on the court, she's also a whiz in the classroom, boosting a 3.98 grade point average, the highest in her graduating class of 36. She's received a Presidential Scholar award, a New Mexico State University Scholar Award and a University of New Mexico Scholar Award.

Traylor has served in the student senate for four years and currently is president. She also has been active in the drug free peer counseling and drug awareness programs.

She's a three sport athlete, having played volleyball, basketball and track for the last four years.

Traylor has been named to the All District Volleyball team for the past three years, the All District Basketball team for two years (the season still is in progress for this year) and picked up the 1992-93 District Champion title for discus.

This outstanding scholar athlete is the daughter of Hub and Frances Traylor of Capitan.

Lady Tigers out duel Loving 43-38 and Lake Arthur 43-28

Tyler Traylor struck again this past week, helping to guide the Lady Tigers to two victories against strong competitors.

They faced Loving at home January 28 in a tight 43-38 win.

The first quarter offense glittered as Traylor claimed the jump ball and headed down the court.

But the Falcons didn't flinch, posting nine points to Capitan's 10 in the first and coming back strong in the second to keep Capitan scoreless, while charging ahead by six points.

Turnovers helped Loving, keeping Capitan's defense running up and down the court.

Loving maintained its lead in the third quarter by a slim two points, but Capitan pulled ahead in the fourth.

With one second left, a double foul was called. Loving shot and missed both.

Then it was Capitan's turn and Traylor was at the line. As her teammates watched, Traylor sunk both her shots to cement the win.

Coach Norman Cline said the Tigers didn't play well in the first half, but revitalized both their offense and defense in the second half of the game.

A week later, the Lady Tigers hit the road for their match against Lake Arthur.

A strong defense kept Lake Arthur down to six points in the first quarter while Capitan's defense scored 14 in six field goals and two foul shots.

In the second quarter, the Panthers pulled the score up to 24-15, but couldn't quite catch the Tigers, who pulled even further ahead in the third quarter with six field goals by Traylor, one by Sheryl Dockery and a free-throw by Stacy Gowen.

The Panthers tried but sputtered in the fourth, and the Tigers pulled ahead for a 59-41 win. Cline said the Tigers played good defense, rebounded well and ran the fast break with confidence.

The Tigers didn't fare as well against Hot Springs Saturday in a home game that broke their streak, but doesn't count in district play.

The Tiger defense was fired in the first quarter, keeping Hot Springs down to just three points and posting a 14-9 lead by half time.

Cline gave his girls a pep talk, while Hot Springs' coach Olney did the same for that team. The steam was building under the Springs, as they pulled ahead in the third by six points. They stayed ahead, scoring 17 more in the fourth quarter, continuing to play good defense that kept the Tigers down to eight point. Hot Springs dribbled away with the win, 43-28.

Cline said the Lady Tigers played a good first half with terrific defense moves, a well-executed offense and solid rebounds, but they lost their edge in the second half.

The Capitan Tiger Junior Varsity boys played point for point against the Tularosa Wildcats in the first quarter of their game last week, ending that period 9-10 in Tularosa's favor. They lost ground in the second as Tularosa stormed ahead 20-15.

During the third quarter, Tularosa's number 13, Sanchez, showed his stuff, scoring six points each of the remaining two quarters and ending the game with a total of 20 points.

Although the door still was open for the Tigers in the fourth quarter, two quick turnovers sealed their doom and the final score of 50-33.

Capitan sports reporters Amanda Bird, Klay Jones and Andrew Longbotham contributed to this story.

Capitan's Warth submits wish list

by DIANNE STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

A quick trip to Santa Fe gave Capitan Mayor Frank Warth and village Trustee Gordon Ross a chance to put in the town's bid for $226,000 in street improvements.

Through the help of State Representative H. John Underwood (D-Ruidoso), they were scheduled high on the agenda that was stocked with similar spokesmen for other villages.

They laid out the village's need before members of the House subcommittee on capital outlay headed by State Representative Ben Lujan (D-Santa Fe). The committee will be responsible for recommending how to spend more than $300-million in surplus revenue generated in part by the state's severance tax against oil, natural gas and mined minerals.

Playing beat the clock with other elected officials waiting in the wings, Warth and Ross explained that the requested amount would cover about seven miles of roads in the village's suburbs.

"We also are applying for another federal Community Development Block grant totalling $1.2-million for road improvements in the core area," Warth said. "Only that couldn't all be spent at once. It would have to be done in three-year intervals. We have an engineering estimate already and I'm working with the Southeastern New Mexico Economic Development District."

While in the state capitol, Warth and Ross also stopped to see State Senator Pete Campos (D-Santa Rosa).

"He's a big supporter of rural economic development," Warth said. Campos will introduce a bill on the Senate side of the State Legislature while Underwood handles the House side.

"I think John did a fantastic job getting us on the program early," Warth said of Underwood. "I think we were third or fourth on the agenda."

"This is my third time testifying in front of Lujan, so we have recognition there. We got around and saw a few other legislators, too. The only problem is that Santa Fe is a real mess during the legislative session. You can't park and you can't eat."

SCORE — Ruidoso's secret weapon

Who can save a small business from closing its doors when the tax man has his hand out or when sales are down? Naturally only the owner can take action, but he or she can rely on the Service Corps of Retired Executives (SCORE) for sound advice and advocacy.

SCORE is a non-profit organization sponsored by the U.S. Small Business Administration. SCORE counselors are retired men and women who have had successful business careers as company executives or owners of their own businesses. They are the keepers of information and advice on every conceivable business problem, and they never charge for their services.

According to an article in the Portales News Tribune, SCORE is 174,000 volunteers strong and has been funded by Congress since 1963.

SCORE has excellent ties to design and test labs in Sandia and Los Alamos. According to Ralph Andrea, who works for the head office in Roswell, SCORE will help inventors check on previous patents, get the invention produced and marketed, all for free. "The state of New Mexico wants to encourage growth," he said.

According to Andrea, "SCORE counselors draw upon their collective experience and wisdom to guide clients out of difficult and unprofitable situations. There are many resources available to SCORE, both government and private, that can help a business prosper."

Andrea said the hardest thing to do is help someone who's put off asking for help. "Quite often, by the time someone comes to me and we go over his problem, he says, 'Oh, where were you three months ago?'"

Andrea said SCORE is there for anyone with a question, no matter how small. SCORE gives advice on drawing up business plans, identifying markets, restructuring and expansion, and taxes. Andrea and other SCORE volunteers also give workshops. Andrea's latest feature is customer satisfaction.

Andrea said that by keeping small businesses afloat, SCORE is probably the most cost effective organization the government funds. "We save them millions of dollars each year," he said.

Small business owners and anyone thinking of becoming a small business owner may consult with SCORE's business sages right here in Ruidoso at the Ruidoso State Bank. Individual appointments can be arranged through Margaret Jackson at 257-4043. All counseling is confidential, free, and can continue until your problem is resolved.

Blood Drive

Phlebotomist Michael Aguirre of El Paso's United Blood Services preps the arm of donor Bobbie Fincannon. Although the UBS team was delayed three hours due to van trouble outside of Alamogordo, LCMC

Auxilian Margaret Bertramson said the drive netted 39 donors. "Some of the people we turned away before 2 p.m. came back two or three times," she said. "We're very pleased with the turn-out."

Power company reduces electric rates

The staff of the New Mexico Public Utility Commission last week reached an agreement with Texas-New Mexico Power Company to reduce its electric rates for regular customers by almost 13 percent overall.

The utility (TNP), which serves the Silver City area, Ruidoso and Alamogordo, filed the agreement with the commission following several months of negotiations. The stipulation will now be reviewed by Hearing Examiner Mike Barlow, who will make a recommendation to the full commission.

The agreement calls for an overall reduction in revenues of almost $7.8 million out of total revenues of $60 million for the utility. The typical residential customer's bill should drop from $64.85 to $47.98 a month for 500 KWH's.

Much of the cost reduction is due to savings the company has experienced in the cost of power TNP purchases from other generating utilities.

Several parties have been negotiating with the utility since it filed its rate case in August 1993. Also signing the stipulation was the State Attorney General's office, Phelps Dodge Corporation and Cyprus Pinos Altos Corporation, which operate several mines in TNP's service territory.

The utility serves about 39,785 customers in southwestern New Mexico, of which 34,688 are residential customers.

The agreement still must be approved by the full commission.

Commissioners cover 400 country miles

by DIANNE STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

The trip took more than half a day, covered 400 miles and gave Lincoln County Commissioners a new respect for the job previously handled by an appointed road review committee.

It was the first experience for commissioners since they decided to take over road reviews.

Commissioner Bill Schwetmann went on the trip with Commissioners Stirling Spencer and Wilton Howell as part of an advertised special meeting. Along to make it all official, was County Clerk Martha Proctor and road manager Bill Cupit.

"We drove 400 miles and spent eight hours," Schwetmann said. "We listened to the cowboys. We didn't take any votes, then broke up and went our separate ways. But I thought we had a general consensus to close (seven roads) and open an 800-foot road to Ron Perry's."

Based on that, he talked to Lee Sultemier on the telephone and indicated roads B010 and B014 in the northern section of the county would not be closed at this time and it wasn't necessary for anyone to attend the meeting.

But on January 26, he wrote Sultemier a letter telling the rancher that Howell might not agree and that she should plan to attend the commission meeting to present her side of the issue.

"Other than Spencer and me, we have to convince one of the other three to vote with us to keep these roads open, at least until the next review sometime next year," Schwetmann wrote.

"There are 4,800 square miles in the county and we're at the end of it," Sultemier told the board Tuesday. "Most of the time, we stay quiet, but these roads are the only access to our property since the Richard Latham Ranch was divided in probate."

"We're in the process of having electricity put there at the well."

She read the names of five or six utilities and other companies or ranchers, including the Bureau of Land Management, that use the roads and would prefer the county continue to maintain them.

"The more roads that are closed up there, the harder it is to get around," she said. "The key to fire control is getting there quickly."

"It's pretty vital to our business to keep them open. If you don't maintain them and a family with children moves in, what will it cost the county to make them usable again?"

They use the roads on a daily basis for their feed, cattle and wool businesses and to check water storage, she said.

Howell said he understood there are other access points to the ranch.

Sultemier said other access exist, "but it's a long way around. There's more than 380 miles of roads closed in that area of the county already."

"What I'm adverse to is what it would cost to bring the roads up to snuff?" Howell said.

"We're not asking to upgrade, just keep them open and maintain them once or twice a year," she said.

"So we're not talking about replacing 10 cattle guards," Howell asked.

"Unless they fall in," Sultemier said.

"Or if it's part of the five year master plan," Spencer said.

Howell questioned Cupit about his original recommendation on closing the roads.

Reading from that recommendation, Cupit said the list of roads he suggested for closing presented an undue burden on the taxpayers.

"I have a lot of confidence in Bill (Cupit), that's why I was leaning the way I did," Howell said. "What would it cost to bring the roads up to county specs?"

Cupit estimated $6,000 a mile and $2,780 for each cattle guard for a total of $116,000 on BO10.

Commissioner L. Ray Nunley offered a motion to leave the roads open, but at a minimal amount of maintenance.

"That's the way they're classified already, as a low priority road," Cupit said.

"I don't want any scheduled work negated by your motion," Spencer said.

"Then I'll change my motion to simply allowing the roads to stay open," Nunley said.

Sultemier pointed out when Cupit submitted his original recommendation, he was unaware that the Latham Ranch had been split into two ranches.

"The previous owner wasn't high on county maintenance," she said. "But we do want our roads maintained."

Howell said he'd vote for keeping the roads open, if no major expenditures, such as cattle guards, were involved. His amendment to that effect passed 4-1, with Spencer voting nay.

"I don't care to manage the road department," Spencer said.

Nunley's motion to leave the roads open then passed unanimously.

The commissioners voted to close (no longer maintain) BO22, BO23, BO40, BO44, BO45, and BO46, and to open (begin maintaining) about a quarter of a mile of Ron Perry's Road at the end of Fort Stanton Ranchettes subdivision (outside of Capitan).

In other road business, commissioners approved Cupit's proposals for the year's work on school bus routes, county arterial and cooperative projects, which all involve some level of state financial participation.

Cupit noted that when he was hired, the county was responsible for 15 bridges, many in dilapidated condition. This year, the count is down to eight and by next year, it will be six. By the end of this year, he also will have replaced about half of the 348 cattle guards in the county.

In other action, commissioners agreed to exchange the existing entrance into the O Bar O Ranch, which is used by many different individuals, companies and groups to access state leased and Bureau of Land Management property, for another route not prone to flooding.

"We'd be taking care of a maintenance nightmare," Howell said.

"It needs a bridge," Cupit said of the existing entrance. "Huge rocks come through and the concrete breaks out sooner or later."

John J. Johns, who owns the ranch, said the area is subject to flash floods three feet deep each spring. The water comes down in a wall "and every year, we have a near tragedy," he said.

Cupit said he has to go in once a day to keep the entrance open during the flooding period.

County manager Andy Wynham said the county either needs an easement with a legal description or for Johns to grant the county a deed with an easement.

Book boosters

First grade students at Nob Hill Elementary who have read 100 books collected T-shirts and certificates for their accomplishments as part of the Book-It program sponsored by Pizza Hut. Buckle up, New Mexico!

Take a tip from the New Mexico State Police and 52 other state law enforcement agencies and "Buckle those safety belts, New Mexico."

Operation Buckle Down, a program which combines public education with stepped-up enforcement of adult and child occupant restraint laws, is under way with a goal of hitting 85 percent compliance in New Mexico by 1995.

"We are at the 77 percent level now, and although it doesn't seem like we have far to go, we're not going to kid ourselves," said State Police Captain Relyea, commander of District 8.

CRIMESTOPPERS "CRIME OF THE WEEK"
Graffiti
The Ruidoso-Lincoln County Crime Stoppers will pay a $500 cash reward for information leading to the arrest and Magistrate Court Bindover of the person or persons responsible for the graffiti in Ruidoso this past week. Crimestoppers will also pay cash rewards for the recovery of stolen property or the solving of other felony crimes.
Phone 257-4545

A cooperative effort between the Ruidoso Chamber of Commerce and the Ruidoso Lincoln County Crimestoppers to deter graffiti from being a part of our mountain scenery is currently underway. This intentional damage to property is not only considered visually unacceptable, but is also costly to the citizens of our community. It has a bearing on our insurance rates, our real estate values, and our village in general. As citizens of Lincoln County, we can deter the impact of this type criminal activity in our community by getting involved, and reporting any suspicious activity to the local law enforcement agency in your area, or by calling Crimestoppers.
The Crimestoppers phone line is manned twenty-four a day, seven days a week, and you do not have to give your name to be eligible for a cash reward. The Crimestoppers phone number is 257-4545. Anyone wishing to call collect, may do so within Lincoln County.

Editorial

Our ignorance is killing us

After complaining of chest pains while raking leaves or shoveling snow, your husband falls to the ground. Would you know what to do? Your two-year-old is choking on a piece of candy cane that she found on the floor. Would you know what to do? Your car hits a patch of ice, skids off the road and your wife sitting next to you is bleeding profusely. Would you know what to do?

If your answer to any of these questions is "no," then you need to think about the potential consequences of ignorance.

There's a crisis in America. Due to heart attacks and accidents, each year hundreds of thousands of our loved ones die before our very eyes. And the truth is: they didn't have to die. But two factors were powerful forces. One, as the first link in the emergency medical system, we waited too long to call 911. Two, while waiting for the ambulance, we didn't provide care because we didn't know how.

At a time when we are reassessing health care, let's look at one of its critical elements — our role in responding to emergencies. It's easy to point a finger at overburdened emergency personnel. But research suggests that bystander delay in calling 911 is the usual culprit in a delayed EMS response.

The American Red Cross, the nation's health and safety educator, believes we need to change some of our deadly habits in dealing with emergencies. Red Cross is currently waging a "Til Help Arrives" campaign to get people to take three simple steps: CHECK, CALL, CARE.

Check the victim for life-threatening signs, and check the scene to make sure it is safe; call 911 or the emergency number in your community; care for the victim by applying first aid and CPR.

Would acting fast and providing care really make a difference? Absolutely! When heart emergencies occur at home, the median time it takes to seek medical care is 12 hours. If heart attack victims could get medical care within two hours of suffering symptoms, we could save a quarter of a million lives yearly, according to a study that appeared in the Journal of the American Medical Association in 1992.

Through CHECK, CALL, CARE, we can save hundreds of thousands of precious lives annually. And save billions of dollars, too, because productive lives lost or impacted by rehabilitation are a drain on our economy. To learn first aid and CPR, call Ruidoso Emergency Medical Services at 257-7381.

Letters To The Editor

You don't have to fight city hall

TO THE EDITOR:
My husband and I moved to Ruidoso last July. The home we had purchased three years ago needed to be enlarged to give us enough room for this home to be a permanent residence.

As we started the procedure and plans I kept hearing horror stories of getting permits and variances from the Village of Ruidoso Planning and Zoning committee. Needless to say I was very nervous when going before the board with our request. A person could not have been treated any nicer than I was. Cleatus Richards and the board members reviewed the request, saw the need for this addition, checked to make sure all papers were correct, and issued the permit. Lerry Hill, the building inspector, came to check on this project many times, always with a smile on his face and very polite, even when he saw a problem that needed to be corrected. I write this letter so others who may need to get permits and variances will know that they will come in contact with some fine people at the Village of Ruidoso office. They will help and encourage you in any way they can.

Sharing the trails is fun for everyone

TO THE EDITOR:
Last year, for almost six months, I walked the three-mile Links trail almost every day. My little fat poodle went with me. We both lost weight and felt better when it was time to come back to the warm country. One of the great joys of the daily walk was meeting the kids on their bicycles. They were always courteous and friendly. And they warmed this old man's heart.

I'll be back on the trail in a few months, and I would like to see the kids again. Don't let the city take them off the trail. They are one of the good things about Ruidoso.

French named AIA chapter president

The American Institute of Architects (A.I.A.) Southern New Mexico Chapter have recently elected Stanley J. (Jim) French to serve as President for 1994.

French came to Ruidoso in 1975 and opened his office to provide architectural services for the southwest and is licensed to practice in New Mexico, Texas, Arizona and California.

Before coming to Ruidoso, French served for over 20 years as vice-president of architecture for a large firm based in southern California. His practice there was extensive and included the San Diego

School District, the 11th Naval District, San Diego Port Authority, Poway Municipal Water District, County and City of San Diego and the award winning community plan for the village of San Marcos. Many fine homes for his residential clients are located throughout southern California.

Ruidoso found French when his California firm was employed to design the Cienegita dam and hotel project, now known as the Inn of the Mountain Gods. Near the completion of the inn, French decided to leave the California firm and open his own office in Ruidoso. He has been involved in many local community activities such as serving on the Board of Directors for the Chamber of Commerce and on the Village Planning and Zoning Commission.

His New Mexico Projects include work in Farmington, Albuquerque, Hobbs and Las Cruces, as well as homes in Ruidoso, Alto, Midland, Texas and Flagstaff, Arizona.

Local works include the Ruidoso City Hall, Cree Meadows Club House, Schools in Hondo and Capitan and the Sierra Professional Center where French maintains his office.

Woody engagement announced

Ms. Nancy Woody of Ruidoso and Mr. David Woody of Lubbock, Texas are pleased to announce the engagement of their daughter, Kathryn Louise Woody, to Jackie Chad Driskill.

A 7 p.m. wedding is planned for Saturday, June 25, 1994 at First United Methodist Church in Lubbock, Texas. The reception will be at 7:30 p.m. at the Baker Building in Lubbock.

Kathryn attended Ruidoso High School in 1986-87. She is a senior in nursing school in Lubbock and works at Methodist Hospital.

Driskill is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Driskill of Lubbock, Texas. He is the director of Gas Marketing of AA Productions and a senior at Texas Tech in Finance.

WOODY AND DRISKILL

Concert featured at First Baptist Church

The Continentals 1994 World Tour, featuring a concert of contemporary Christian music will be coming to the First Baptist Church, 420 Mechem at 7 p.m. Monday, February 14.

The Continentals, featuring over 35 cast members, including vocalists, instrumentalists, dramatists and technicians, will present the award winning musical "Dreamer."

The musical written by Cam Florida, is premiering an all-new cast recording and is produced with full costumes, singing and pageantry. It is for an audience of all ages. It has been recently re-orchestrated, newly revised and recorded for the 1994 touring season.

All of the young people who are part of the Continentals are carefully selected from among thousands who audition annually from around the world. The program is then fine-tuned during an intensive rehearsal camp in Denver, Colorado, before each group leaves for an approximate three month tour throughout the United States and many foreign countries.

In the last 27 years, more than 14,000 young people have been a part of the Continentals, traveling millions of miles to every continent in the world, except Antarctica, and more than 70 countries. In 1985, the organization led a successful campaign, in conjunction with World Vision, to raise nearly two million dollars to fight world hunger.

F.F.A. hands out top awards at Ruidoso High

The Ruidoso High School F.F.A. recently had their annual awards banquet. Awards were given for the past judging seasons. They also thanked Mr. Gaines and wished him well in his new job. Guest speakers were Dr. Leon Wagley from New Mexico State University and Jesus Trujillo, the State F.F.A. Vice-President.

The following persons were awarded awards for proficiency in their areas: Dominique Ruediversified livestock production and fruit and vegetable production; John Crawford for beef production; Corrina Reed for swine production; Teri Hall and Reynaldo Lopez for speciality animal production; Jeremy Turner for turf and land management; Mike Gallerito for forest management; Joe Brooks for wildlife management; Heath Battles for horse proficiency; Steve Inner for agriculture mechanics; Jolene McGee for public speaking and Betty Hobbs for achievement in volunteer work.

Reynaldo Lopez from Agriculture I and Teri Hall from Agriculture II received leadership awards. Scholarship awards were given to Stephen Houghton, ninth grade; Corrina Reed, tenth grade; Matt Escalanti, eleventh grade and Teri Hall, twelfth grade.

1992 Judging awards were given to John Crawford for meats and agriculture mechanics; Chris Caruona for wildlife; Shane Melton for land. 1993 judging awards went to Corrina Reed for horses; Jeremy Turner for agriculture mechanics. Teri Hall, Colehinda Stokes and Matt Harshey received awards for marketing. Jolene McGee for wildlife; Colehinda Stokes for farm management, Joe Brooks for land and Heath Battles for meats. Star awards went to Dominique Rue from Agriculture I and Teri Hall from Agriculture II. Betty Hobbs received a Certificate of Award. Mr. Elder received the Blue and Gold Award. Mr. Weems, Mrs. Hobbs and Mrs. Zinn were all recognized as honorary chapter members.

Jesse Arreola named new pastor of Christian Center

Christian Fellowship Ministries announces that Jesse Arreola is taking over the pastoral duties of the Potters House Christian Center in the Gateway Center.

Arreola, who is originally from Los Angeles, California, lives in Alamogordo.

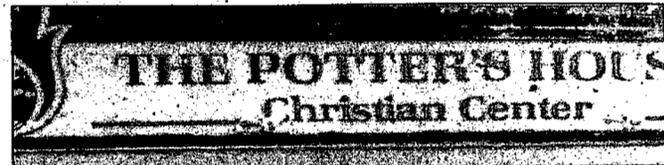

He and his wife moved to Ruidoso in March 1988, and he has worked as a meatcutter at both Bennett's and Furr's. He has been employed for Furr's for six years this May.

Arreola moved to Alamogordo to be trained for the ministry.

According to a news release, it was at the Potters House Christian Center of Alamogordo where Arreola met the living God and was saved.

"God began to move mightily in Jesse's life, setting him free ... and restoring his ... life," continues the news release that explains how his life has changed radically.

Arreola and his family will be leading services at 2 p.m. Sundays at the Potters House Christian Center of Ruidoso. Everyone is invited to join them in worship at this full gospel New Testament church.

Jesse Arreola and his family arrive at his new post as pastor of the Potter's House Christian Center in Ruidoso's Gateway Center. Arreola previously lived in Los Angeles, California, and trained for the ministry in Alamogordo. He has worked with Furr's for the past six years.

McArthur Honored

Pam McArthur, Eastern New Mexico Medical Center's January Employee of the Month, is the Coordinator of the Employee Assistance Program.

McArthur, who lives in Lincoln County, was selected employee of the month for her positive and courteous attitude.

According to a news release, she is always willing to participate or lend a hand, regardless of the task.

McArthur has been associated with Eastern New Mexico Medical Center since November 1989. She holds a bachelor of science degree in psychology, a master of arts degree in counseling psychology, and also is a Certified Drug Abuse Counselor.

McArthur is serving as vice president of the Roswell Chapter of Altrusa International and is a member of the P.E.O. Chapter B of Roswell. She is a member of the National Association of Alcoholism and Drug Abuse Counselors and the American Association of University Women, and is a postulant for priesthood for the Episcopal Church of Lincoln County.

Prior to joining the ENMMC staff, she was a counselor for the Behavioral Health Unit at St. Mary's Hospital.

She and her husband, Herman "Mac" McArthur have a home in Lincoln. He is a deputy sheriff in Lincoln County and they have two grown children and two grandchildren.

Pizza party

Some of the Ruidoso Mid-schoolers who made the principal's list enjoy pizza from Pizzeria Hut for all their efforts for the nine-week grading period. The Academic Booster Club rewards students every nine weeks.

Wade Whitlock Sings Gospel at Capitan

At 11 a.m. Sunday, February 13, gospel vocalist Wade Whitlock will perform at Foursquare Church in Capitan, New Mexico. According to a press release, Wade ministers with an exciting variety of both current and traditional Christian music.

Several people testify to his abilities. New Mexico District Superintendent of the Assemblies of God, Kenneth George said, "I am happy to recommend this fine young man for ministry."

"His music was performed professional and under the anointing of the Holy Spirit," said Al Lane, Ruidoso Word Ministries.

Bill Yates of Trinity Mountain Fellowship of Ruidoso said, "I would like to express our warm and heartfelt thanks. Wade's concert in word and song at our Fellowship was a blessing."

A native of Ruidoso, Wade is the son of Wayne and Jeanne Whitlock. He is based in Carlsbad, New Mexico, for the winter and has been giving concerts throughout New Mexico and West Texas. He has performed twice in Ruidoso, and ac-ording to the release, he will return at the end of the month.
