Cupboard is bare at L.C. Food Bank

The Lincoln County Food Bank is looking for a few helping hands. The food pantry, which is located at the First Presbyterian Church on Nob Hill, has been hit hard lately and is in need of food, money and volunteers.

People who need temporary assistance for a variety of reasons — while they're awaiting a paycheck, out of work or in the process of getting food stamps or other reasons — can go to the food bank between noon and 4 p.m. Monday, Wednesday and Friday and obtain food.

That's where volunteers come in, with board members and people to staff the facility needed.

And, then, to keep the pantry stocked, food and money are always needed, but the need is great now.

To volunteer for the board, call Jim Morris at 257-7253; to offer to help, call coordinator Janey Lanfor at 257-5598. Donations may be dropped off at the First Presbyterian Church when the pantry is open.

Scramble set for this Sunday at the Links

The RHS Golf Team will host its second benefit scramble of the year Sunday at the Links at Sierra Blanca.

Starting time will be 12:30 p.m. The cost for the tournament is $26 per person, plus cart fees, with proceeds benefiting the high school golf team, who will use the money for travel expenses.

Interested parties should contact the Links Pro Shop at 258-5330 to sign up.

Busy government week for Capitan

Two Capitan boards will meet this week in monthly sessions.

The village Board of Trustees will convene at 7 p.m. Monday, April 11, in village hall.

The school board meeting is set for 7 p.m. Thursday, April 14, in the school library. A work session starts at 6:30 p.m.

Arts performance set for tonight

Parents and friends are invited to "Rising High with the Arts," a program presented through the Start with the Arts program at Nob Hill Elementary tonight.

Three kindergarten classes will perform at 6:30 p.m.

Late snow boosts busy ski season

by YVONNE LANELLI
Special to The News

Despite Mother Nature's frugal snow this season, Ski Apache posted a successful year, thanks to expanded snowmaking, according to ski area officials.

"We were open a full season from Thanksgiving through Easter on the lower mountain, snowmaking kept conditions good to excellent all year long," Roy Parker, Ski Apache's general manager pointed out.

As he sat in his sunny office overlooking Capitan, Easter Sunday, Ski Apache's final day, he enumerated the many pluses of the season.

"We doubled our skiable area with snowmaking this year with the addition of Elk Chair Eight and three of its trails (Elk Ridge, Bull Run and Buckhorn). The lift gave us 1,000 vertical feet in addition to what we have already."

Ski Apache began snowmaking in 1981 on its lower slopes. These included Capitan, Lower Deep Freeze, Snow Park and Smokey

Three groups line out Bonito road plan

by DIANNE STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

If Lincoln County agrees to take over maintenance responsibilities on Bonito Lake Road, county officials say the other two major users of the road should pay for its resurfacing and drainage improvements.

A three-way split would be asking the county to do more than its share, Commissioner Wilton Howell told representatives from the U.S. Forest Service and the City of Alamogordo Tuesday.

"I have a problem having to pay up front and taking over maintenance," Howell said. The public road, which is not owned by the county, is in bad shape now because it has not received proper maintenance, he contended.

Commission Chairman Monroy Montes agreed.

"Where we're at, the county is willing to take over maintenance, but it's up to Alamogordo and the forest service to pay for construction since they get the major use," he said.

The city uses Bonito Lake as a water supply reservoir and operates a popular campground served by the road. The area is surrounded by the Lincoln National Forest and the road is used to access camping areas, picnic spots and hiking trail heads. A few county residents do live along the road or gain access to their property by way of routes off of the main road.

Geri Rivers, an engineer for the Service in the Lincoln National Forest, said that after a previous meeting with commissioners, she had submitted the Bonito Lake Road for funding consideration, although the project doesn't fall within the usually parameters.

"They understand the situation that we're in and were willing to consider funding this for the $200,000 that I had requested, if we can get an agreement in writing from the three entities here that they are willing to work together to try to accomplish this project," Rivers said. Construction would be targeted for the spring of 1995.

"Right now, we don't have the funding, but the opportunity is there for an additional budget," Rivers said. "Within a month, we should be getting our initial budget. Before they can go to their bosses with other projects they would like to fund, they need this in writing and to have that done by April 7, which is Thursday."

"There still is no guarantee until the final budget is approved by Congress in January or February 1995."

The memorandum of understanding would not obligate money, she said, adding, "At least, I can't obligate the $200,000."

"Which quarter mile do they want us to do with that $200,000?" Lincoln County manager Andy Wynham asked. "That's a small amount of money for a large job."

"Originally, the $200,000 was based on the letter we received from the county," Rivers said. "The estimate from the county was $600,000, which I felt was too low, but not having a better estimate at the time, I went with the $600,000, took one third of that and said $200,000."

"Since that time, I've had Raymond (Saenz, a pre-construction engineer) and Danny (Rael, a construction engineer) go out, take a look at that stretch of road, take some measurements to give me an idea what we think it would cost."

"We came up with more like $1.3-million for that same stretch of road. So obviously, we either have a difference in what we are visualizing we need out there, or the fact that ours is based on contracting

(out the work) while yours is on the county doing it."

Saenz said his price was for six inches of base and four inches of asphalt, ditching all the way from State Highway 37 to below the dam. Several culverts would be included.

"There are a few key areas where we just didn't have room for the 20-foot (width), so we had to shift into the hill to get the 20 feet, and that would require blasting. That's quite expensive," he said.

Wynham pointed out that the county uses chip seal surface treatment (chipped rocks sealed with an emulsion oil) and if its road department will be charged with maintaining the road, the forest service shouldn't have based its estimate on asphalt.

"That was my direction to estimate a 20-foot width with six-inch base and four inches of hot mix," Rivers said. "If we have a good base, we could get by with less asphalt. I wanted to know if the $600,000 was right."

"Asphalt is a big difference in cost," Wynham said. Construction should be tailored to what the county is capable of doing and then maintaining, he said.

He asked if the traffic count on the road warranted the extra surface work.

Rivers said no traffic count has been performed, but even if there was less cost using a chip seal method of surfacing, the county would face higher maintenance costs than with asphalt.

"So a person needs to sit down and look at the life spans of both and do some economics to decide whether you want to make an initial cost and lower maintenance later on or put less money in it now for more maintenance," she said.

The agreement she had drafted spoke in general terms about the relationship of the three entities. The specifics would be added later, Rivers said.

"I see nothing in here about ongoing maintenance," Howell said.

Tank repairs costly

by CHARLES STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

One of two 5-million gallon water tanks on Alto Crest off Mechem Drive is undergoing a $100,000 emergency repair job and will be out of commission for about six weeks.

The Ruidoso Village Council approved the emergency measure in a special meeting Wednesday morning at village hall.

According to village manager Gary Jackson, a bid was awarded in February for the painting and recoating of the tank.

Jackson said the tank was drained, sediment removed, the bottom was sandblasted and a small section removed.

The floor had a variety of problems, Jackson said, including the lack of a sand bed that was to meet the bottom of the floor.

"The sand didn't meet flush with the floor," Jackson said. "In fact, there was no sand, only rock sitting about four inches from the bottom plate."

He said the floor bottom should have a smooth and oily finish. Instead electrolysis had eaten away at the steel creating rusted holes in the bottom.

Jackson said concentric circles were located all over the bottom and could represent stress points or could be more electrolysis. He said an enormous amount of sediment had to be cleaned from the floor.

He said the circles could be indicative of several other causes, such as foreign extraction steel.

He said the floor also has a bulge in the center, instead of the bowl-like shape of the original design.

Jackson said Southwest Tank and Steel Fabricators was awarded a bid to clean and repaint the interior of the tank. Work began in early March.

The steel company recommends to keep and repair the old floor, but not to use it as the main tank floor, but more as a cathodic protection (anti-electrolysis mechanism) for the new floor.

Then a new steel floor would be placed on the bottom.

"That will cost $83,446," Jackson said. "Richard (Sanchez, water department director) received another quote, but this was cheaper. We feel the price is competitive, plus Southwest is already on the job and this is an emergency."

Jackson said it will cost $7,800 to fix the old floor, but it would not last. He said village engineer Alan Briley identified problems with the old floor that included hair line cracks that will eventually create leaks and the bulging center. Once the water has leaked through, there is no way to evaporate.

"This is an emergency situation," Jackson said. "We are now beginning our dry months and the tank holds five million gallons of water."

Jackson said to move ahead immediately to finish fixing the floors, paint and allow 12 days for curing, will take about six weeks before the tank can be refilled.

Briley, in his report to the council, wrote, "I recommend the council take action in determining this is

Teens confess to 50+ car burglaries

by CHARLES STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Three Ruidoso teenagers were arrested last Friday for burglarizing 50 to 60 cars in the Ruidoso area recently.

Dewey Calvin Fox, 18, Lewis Holcomb, 18, and a juvenile from the Capitan area were all charged with five counts of vehicle burglary.

Fox and Holcomb were sent to the Lincoln County Detention Facility.

"At the time they were burglarizing cars, they were supposed to be at the high school going through a GED class," Detective Wolfgang Born said.

He said for every fourth degree felony count, there is a $5,000 bond.

Born said he spotted a car wandering aimlessly through several business parking lots before it drove away. The police decided to follow the vehicle which traveled to Carrizo Lodge off of Carrizo Canyon Road.

Born said the car began cruising the lodge's parking lot and then spotted the police.

He said the car then drove back to Ruidoso and turned at Grindstone Canyon Road. Eventually, the car parked beside the road and Born approached the driver.

He said the driver signed a consent to search form, and shortly thereafter, checks and other stolen goods were discovered.

On Friday morning, Born said the youths confessed to 15 to 20 burglaries at Cochera, five to 10 burglaries at the high school, five to 10 burglaries at the bowling alley, one burglary at the Rainbow Center where $200 cash was taken, one burglary on Metz Drive where a purse with checks was taken, one burglary at Wal-Mart where a bunch of keys were taken, five to 10 burglaries at Recreation Village near the Bull Ring, two to three burglaries at the Gavilan Trailer Park, three to four burglaries at Cherokee Mobile Village, and a few burglaries on Del Norte Street.

Born said, although the youths confessed to numerous burglaries, only five persons reported anything missing.

The youths later appeared before Magistrate Judge William Butts.

Visitors converge on recycling center

by DIANNE STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

A caravan of cars from the counties of Curry, Quay and DeBaca pulled into the recycling yard of the Lincoln County Solid Waste Authority Monday.

Out piled a passel of top elected and appointed officials, including nine county commissioners, two mayors, a utilities director and a county administrator, plus State Senator Stuart Ingle (R-Portales).

They were paying a surprise visit to the authority's recycling yard in Ruidoso Downs and the garbage transfer station outside Ruidoso. Later, they stopped at the regional landfill south of Alamogordo that the authority shares with its counterpart in Otero County.

The officials grilled Lincoln authority general manager Joe Lewandowski and recycling coordinator Kerry Krumsiek for a few hours about how the authority coalition was formed, currently operates and how it joined with Otero entities to construct the new landfill.

The visitors, part of the High Plains Council of Governments, have spent hundreds of thousands of dollars and more than two years of study, but still don't have a feasible garbage operation. The state has set a 1995 deadline to start an acceptable program.

The man appeared impressed with the efficiency of Lincoln's collection and recycling operations and the fact that the landfill, opened in January, already is generating enough revenue to carry its operation. In fact, things are going so well that the landfill also is producing most of the money needed to repay bonds sold to cover construction costs.

Police solve series of house breakins

by CHARLES STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Ruidoso detectives, investigating a series of burglaries that occurred last Friday, April 1, arrested eight youths early Wednesday in a burglary-drug raid at a home located on Lookout Drive.

Adults arrested were David Wyche, 18, Scott Wyche, 18, Shane Wyche, 21, Aaron Stallings, 18, and Abesline Chavez, 18. Juveniles arrested were Patrick McCloud, 17, Vicente Montes, 17, and Eric Peña, 16.

Ruidoso detective Wolfgang Born said the arrests were made as the result of a Crime Stoppers tip.

The arrests were connected to six burglaries, according to Born and detective Pete Esquibel. Born said the injured party for two other burglaries had not been reached at this point.

David Wyche and Peña were charged with four counts of residential burglary. Stallings was charged with three counts of residential burglary.

Chavez and Shane Wyche were charged with receiving stolen property under $100 and one count each for possession of marijuana under one ounce.

McCloud was charged with receiving stolen property over $100, but under $250. Scott Wyche was charged with receiving stolen property under $100.

Montes was charged with receiving stolen property under $250.

Born said the first appearance is set for Magistrate Court in front of Magistrate Judge William Butts at 9 a.m. today.

Ruidoso Detective Wolfgang Born inventories some of the stolen loot taken from Ruidoso homes last Friday, April 1. Eight youths were arrested in the burglaries and charges related to the use of marijuana.

Stolen property is sorted outside the Lookout Drive home where arrests were made Wednesday in connection with a number of residential burglaries.

"We'd like to see the county take over maintenance and jurisdiction for the road," Rivers said. "That was part of my justification when I requested the dollars."

Howell pushed for the service to build the road, if the county agrees to maintain it. It's been neglected by the service for years, he said.

"If we're going to take over a liability, we should have some ongoing help," Howell said.

From a previous meeting, she was under the impression that the county would share in reconstruction cost and handle maintenance, Rivers said.

"I remember standing firm that we needed help if we were taking over," Howell said. "I remember that pretty clearly."

Wynham asked Alamogordo engineer Paul Light what the city expects to spend on repairing portions (about 6,000 to 7,000 feet) of the road that will be torn up when a replacement water pipeline is installed.

Light said between $165,000 to $195,000 and indicated city officials might agree to use that money in connection to reconstruction of the road.

"Would that be above the $200,000 already committed last meeting by (Alamogordo city manager Bob Stockwell)?" Howell asked.

While Light said he couldn't make any additional commitment, he said the $200,000 was firm.

Rivers said she envisions work on 2.75 miles from below the steep hill past the dam back toward highway 37.

Lincoln County road manager Bill Cupit said his $600,000 estimate was based on no realignment or complete reconstruction, just resurfacing with the chip seal, which costs $3.25 per square yard compared to asphalt at $7.50.

"Actually, you're forgetting the worst part of the road from the section line to lake," he said.

"We'd be getting into the hillside then," Rivers said. "If we're going to do something, we might as well do a consistent width. If you widen and narrow, widen and narrow, you create a hazard."

"That's if you have the money," Wynham said. "Two hundred thousand won't cut it."

Rivers said the group could take whatever money it has and reconstruct to a decent standard as much of the road as it can and next year try to go back for some more money, "rather than build something that none of us really are going to be satisfied with."

Even though by that time the road would be under the county's jurisdiction, Rivers said she thought she could justify the additional money.

"Then it seems you could justify money for long term maintenance,"

Howell said.

"I probably could, but I don't want to," Rivers responded. "I can't guarantee any future capital expenditures, that's why I can't guarantee long term maintenance."

Howell then asked about the service's budget for special projects.

Rivers responded that she had $400,000 for road maintenance for the entire forest covering 2,000 miles of roads.

She has $75,000 for capital investment next year and the $200,000 was an addition to that amount.

"There are some forests that aren't getting any money for capital projects," she said. "That's how bad our budget has been cut back."

Forest supervisor Lee Poague said President Clinton received incorrect advice and cut money for forest roads this year because his advisers thought the roads were used to cut timber.

"They forget there are recreational uses," Poague said. "I hope the budget will come back up."

Turning to other revenue sources, Rivers said Federal Highway Administration forest highway money is a totally different pot, but nothing has been allocated to date.

She requested money from that source for the road to Timberon (in the Cloudcroft District). When pressed by Howell, she said it was about a 13-mile project funded at $13-million, or $1-million a mile.

"Thirteen million dollars on one road," Howell repeated.

Forest manager Lee Poague said Otero County had to agree to take over the road after it is built. Ninety-five percent of the Timberon Road runs through national forest lands, he said. It would help if the road to Bonito Lake passed through less private property.

"It wouldn't be very competitive nationwide (for federal money) because so much goes through private land and other entities," Poague said. He said he is talking to some owners about more land purchases in the area.

To be funded, a road must be under county or state jurisdiction, Rivers added.

Howell then asked whether Otero County will be participating in construction of Timberon Road and would it amount to one-third of the cost?

"No," Rivers responded.

"To say we are not willing (to help with construction) isn't 100 percent accurate," Wynham said. "In fairness, we see an opportunity to form a partnership that might work to relieve the forest service and to relieve Alamogordo of the responsibility once and for all."

The county could participate with labor and equipment in the construction, but Alamogordo and the forest service would have to come up with the money, he said.

"If we tried this other process (Federal Highway Administration), how long would it take, two or three years?" he asked.

In less than six months, she had an answer on Timberon, Rivers said.

That source wouldn't work if federal officials insisted on a paved road, Wynham said. Rivers said the agency will approve gravel roads, if appropriate for the situation.

"If Alamogordo is willing to spend $165,000 to repair the road (after the pipeline is installed) and both the city and the forest service have committed $200,000 for the resurfacing project, I think we should be able to come up with $500,000 between the two entities," Montes said.

Over a 10-year period, the county would spend more than that on maintenance, Howell contended.

The scope of the project could be reduced, with less attention to width and one less coat of resurfacing material, Rivers and Montes said.

Light said Alamogordo is considering lessening its investment in the area with the sale of some property below the dam.

Whatever the money situation or specifications, Rivers said without a signed agreement, the project won't move forward.

"The specs don't matter to us because you're going to maintain it," she said. "I can give you advice and we can design it. But if I design it, I can't do a lane and a half. We need a consistent width."

Wynham said Alamogordo may be able to help with the engineering.

"That door is open," Light said.

Rivers said the service will draft the environmental document, a required and often expensive survey due before all road construction.

Wynham quickly wrote out a three statement agreement that:

- the forest service shall seek and provide partial funding to reconstruct the road to a standard acceptable to the county and to grant necessary easements
- the city shall seek and provide partial funding to assist in the reconstruction of the roadway and to grant easements.
- the county shall assume maintenance and jurisdiction on the road upon completion of the reconstruction in a manner acceptable to the county and assist in the construction of the road.

"In view of that language, commission action probably isn't necessary (in Alamogordo) and Bob (Stockwell) can sign," Light said.

Montes said he will present the memorandum to the entire commission Friday. Meanwhile, Rivers said she will ask for an extension for the agreement to be submitted until Monday.

Bear. The novice trails of Chair 7 were added in 1984. Lifts served by snowmaking now include chairs two to midway, three, four, five, seven and eight.

"Before we added snowmaking to Chair eight, our skier capacity was 3,500. This year, with the addition of Chair eight, it's over 5,000."

Chair eight, the Elk Quad, is a high-speed quadruple that starts at the Elk Day Lodge and accesses eight trails, all rated either more or most difficult.

"It proved very fortuitous that we expanded snowmaking in a bad snow year. All in all, it turned out to be a much better year than it looked like it would be (when we looked at it) at the end of January, beginning of February."

On February 1, Ski apache had received no snow in 30 days.

"It look bleak," he recalled.

Snowfall increased in February and March, however, brightening skiers' outlooks.

Parker tapped keys on his computer and observed, "We had more snow this March than last. March was a very good month for us with excellent spring breaks."

"Our biggest days of the year were a Monday and Tuesday during the third week in March. We sold 5,200 lift tickets one day and 5,400 the next."

The driest winter?

Although 1993-94 can claim to be a dry year, it is not the driest on record.

"1971-72 was the driest, followed by 1980-81 and 1989-90," said Parker, consulting the computer.

For those die-hard skiers sad that the season ended, mountain manager Denny Grover offered, "As of Monday, April 4, there are only 210 days until we start making snow again!"

an emergency situation in that it is in the best interest of the public health, safety and well being that this be considered as such. After passage of the emergency situation, I recommend the council award a change order in the amount of $94,639 to Southwest Tank and Steel Fabricators, Inc.

Jackson said the cost of a new tank would be about $5-million. He said the rule of thumb for such steel tank water reservoir purchases is one dollar for every gallon of water.

The motion to approve the emergency measure passed unanimously.

Jackson said the other tanks are scheduled for repairs, one in the upcoming fiscal year and, if money could be made available, two more the following year.

He said there was money left in Sanchez's budget for some of the repairs this year.

"He is going to have to defer several items in order to come up with the money within the water budget," Jackson said.

Southern Eagle hosts powwow this weekend

Southern Eagle Contest Powwow, featuring two days of colorful dancing and contests, will be staged this weekend on the Mescalero Apache Indian Reservation in the community center on U.S. Highway 70.

Bruce Klinekole II of Mescalero will be master of ceremonies for the powwow which will open with registration and the gourd dance at 2 p.m. Friday, April 8. Friday's grand entry and contest powwow will begin at 7 p.m.

by grand entry and contest powwow at 1 p.m., supper break from 5 to 6 p.m. and the gourd dance at 6 p.m. and another grand entry and contest powwow at 7 p.m.

The powwow continues at 10 a.m. Sunday with the gourd dance, followed by the grand entry and contest powwow at 1 p.m.

Head gourd dancer for the weekend will be Charles Parton of Lawton, Oklahoma.

Blackstone Singers of Sweetgrass, Saskatchewan, Canada.

Head dances will be picked daily, and all drums are welcome to this annual big event, sponsored by the Southern Eagle Singers of Mescalero.

Among the special contest is the man's fancy dance contest in memory of Guymon Kyle Kaydah-zinnie with a $1,000 winner-take-all prize.

The men's southern straight contest with a $500 prize will be offered in memory of Eldon Wallace Enjady Sr. Buckles also will be presented to first and second place winners.

Total purse for the powwow is $10,000. An added special contest is the men's northern traditional, with a $1,000 prize, in honor of Wileto Antonio.

Other contest categories include dancing for men, women, boys and girls.

The powwow also will include arts and crafts booths, and anyone wanting to rent a booth may do so for $50.

Everyone is welcome, and the sponsors invite everyone to attend this colorful powwow.

Lincoln County candidates will get together in 'Zozo

The Lincoln County "Meet the Candidates Forum" planned for 1 p.m. Sunday, April 17, at Carrizozo Country Club will be as American as hot dogs and apple pie.

Besides speeches by candidates and free entertainment, guests will have a chance to enjoy hot dogs with all the trimmings and apple pie for just $3.

Candidates invited to participate in the forum are those running for state land commissioner, state representative for district 56 and county commission districts two, four and five.

State land commissioner candidates include the incumbent, Ray Powell Jr., a Democrat, who is facing two opponents in the Democratic primary — Sam Bergman and Ron Miles; and the unopposed Republican candidate Stirling Spencer of Lincoln County.

State Representative H. John Underwood (D-District 56) is unopposed in the Democratic primary and will face the winner of the Republican primary in November. Republican candidates are Caren Cowan Bremer and Dub Williams.

Lincoln County Commissioner L. Ray Nunley, a Democrat, is unopposed for both the primary and the general election in his bid for re-election.

Both commission district four candidates, incumbent Commissioner Bill Schwettmann (R) and candidate Preston Stone (D), are unopposed in their respective primaries and are expected to face one another in the general election in November.

Sponsors for the forum are the Lincoln County People for the West chapters, the Lincoln County Farm Bureau and Lincoln County Cowbells.

Ron Merritt, president of the Corona People for the West chapter, will be master of ceremonies for the afternoon.

Merritt encourages all residents of Lincoln County and surrounding areas to attend the public forum to find out where the candidates stand on such issues as taxes, jobs, private property rights, unfunded government mandates and gun control.

"These are just a few of the topics that will open for discussion," said Merritt in a news release. Merritt said there will be three separate panels and different questions for each panel.

Voter registration tables will be set up for those would like to register to vote.

Entertainment will begin at 1 p.m. with the forum set for 2 p.m. Refreshments will be available all afternoon.

County commissioners meet Friday to tour jail

by DIANNE STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

A special meeting of the Lincoln County Commission is scheduled for 9 a.m. Friday at the county courthouse in Carrizozo and will include a tour of the remodeled county jail.

The consent agenda, which covers a group of items that can be approved without discussion as one motion, includes a proposed county lease agreement with Presbyterian Healthcare Services Inc. The Albuquerque-based company operates the Lincoln County Medical Center under the agreement with the county, which owns the hospital.

Terms include a cancellation provision by either side with 180 days notice, that the lease will run for 10 years at $1 a year and a clause spelling out ownership of personal property and fixtures.

Although the lease requires the county to levy annually the special tax approved by voters for the operation of the hospital, a clause specifically recognizes the county's right to determine the amount of the levy to be assessed based on the needs of the hospital and the Carrizozo Health Clinic. Both facilities are partially supported with the proceeds.

A portion of the levy also can be used as the county's contribution under the Indigent Hospital and County Health Care Act and the Statewide Health Care Act.

In addition to supplying an annual audit of how the levy money was spent, the company also will supply an audit of the hospital's operation annually and a complete revenue versus expense report for the entire operation. Details specific to administrative or other charges imposed by the company also may be required by the county.

The company is responsible for any losses connected to the operation of the hospital and will receive all excess revenues of the hospital.

The hospital community board of trustees will remain in its current function as advisers to track the operation of the hospital for the county.

Other items on the regular agenda for discussion and action include a salary increase for elected officials, John Wilson talking about problems with Capitan Landfill Road, appointments to the Agriculture and Rural Affairs Advisory Committee and the Zia Senior Citizens Advisory Commission.

A professional services agreement for county attorneys Alan Morel and Dan Bryant, which includes a proposed hourly increase from $60 to $65, also has been submitted.

Three items pertaining to the county's purchase of the Super Select Sale Barn in Glencoe are proposed for action: a purchase contract, a lease agreement and an operating budget.

The commission received $250,000 from the State Legislature earlier this year for the acquisition of the barn as a rural events center. Another $40,000 was allocated for repairs and operation.

Questionable charity targets Lincoln County in fundraising campaign

An Ann Landers column last year listed several charity organizations that spend more on administrative costs and fundraising than on programming.

Among those listed was the Pacific West Cancer Fund. This organization is currently conducting its annual fund campaign in Lincoln County.

Pacific West, founded in 1987, operates the Cancer Center for Detection and Prevention in Seattle, Washington.

According to the Council of Better Business Bureaus, Pacific West has refused to disclose information about its programs, governance, fund raising and finances. Pacific West is currently under evaluation again by the CBBB, meaning the group has been asked once again for disclosure.

In its brochure "Give But Give Wisely" the CBBB states, "Inclusion or omission from the non-disclosure list should not be interpreted as either approval or disapproval."

While Pacific West has not allowed the CBBB to evaluate it, the group does publish financial information on the back of its appeals. According to this information, the organization raised $5,613,780 in the last fiscal year.

They spent 36.8 percent of that on fundraising, 6.35 percent on administration, 5.35 percent on program services and 51.5 percent on public education in conjunction with fundraising appeals. An example of such public education is a listing of household toxics on the back of the appeal letter.

The CBBB's Standards call for 1) at least half of the charity's total income to be spent on programs, 2) no more than half of the charity's total income to be spent on administrative and fund raising costs, 3) at least half of public contributions to be spent on programs, and 4) no more than 35 percent of contributions to be spent on fund raising.

records indicate that you have not sent a 1994 tax-deductible contribution to The Cancer Center."

Pacific West's appeals are somewhat questionable in light of the CBBB's advice to be wary of appeals that resemble bills. The statement is clearly labeled "second appeal," but suggests one contribution amount and a due date.

The appeal letter begins: "Our

Gaston calls it quits Ruidoso High looks for 4th head coach in 7 years

by KENT BEATTY

The News Sports Correspondent Ruidoso High School head football coach Mike Gaston submitted his resignation to Superintendent Mike Gladden Monday morning.

Gaston's departure will make way for the fourth head football coach at Ruidoso High School since Cooper Henderson left the Warrior program in the spring of 1989.

Gaston, despite just a 5-17 record with the Warriors, had apparently turned a football program around that had gone from first to worse in a four-year period, dating back to 1988, when the Warriors played in the State title game.

Ruidoso managed just one win two years ago under Gaston, but the Warriors were badly out-manned. The Warriors got four wins last year and were very competitive throughout the season with even the toughest teams.

Gaston won't be unemployed long, however, as he moves into the defensive coordinator's position at the highly-successful Texas AAAAA power San Antonio Marshall — the program that Gaston came from when he moved to Ruidoso.

In addition to an approximate $6,000 raise, Gaston will teach two PE classes and two athletic periods at Marshall.

Gaston's predecessor at Ruidoso, Mike Speck, will take over as offensive coordinator at Odessa Permian this spring.

The Warriors were a highly successful football program in the 1980s under current Artesia head coach Cooper Henderson.

Henderson took the Warriors to the State Title game three times in five years, winning the State Championship in 1986.

Henderson left in 1989, after school officials told him that the athletic period would be disbanded and his authority as athletic director would be limited.

Since moving to Artesia, Henderson has won two-straight State Championships and serves as the athletic director.

Gaston cited similar reasons for stepping down as the Warriors' head man.

"The two people that hired me, Ronny Maskeew and Mike Kakuska, promised me some kind of athletic period with all the players and coaches, and that I would have input on the hiring and firing of assistant coaches," said Gaston.

"We were going to have four assistants in conditioning class in fourth period and the freshman coaches in seventh period with those kids ... and of course that's when the principal change was going on and that never occurred," he added.

"It became apparent that our system (of no athletic period) wouldn't work when eight of the 11 teams we play have an athletic hour with all the kids and all the coaches.

"It's not an accident that you win, you win because of a program," said Gaston.

The Warriors do have a "conditioning" class during fourth period, but all of the varsity coaches and many players are not in the class, plus there are several non-athletes in the class that the coaches must watch over.

"Since December, I've been trying to get an answer on whether or not we can have a real athletic period ... how can we set it up ... and I haven't been able to get an answer.

"If you look at the record over the past seven years, I think you can see how important an athletic period really is. So, it's been two years and we still haven't got that straightened out and of course that other reason is the approval of assistant coaches.

"It's just a timing thing ... I had the opportunity to go back to a situation where they like to do things right ... plus my wife can go to nursing school there in San Antonio; it was just a great opportunity for me, since you never know what's happening here," said Gaston.

"I told our kids that I'm not leaving because of them ... that I've been real proud of the way they've worked this spring and their attitude has been a lot better ... It was a hard decision for me because of the two groups (freshmen and sophomores) that are coming up because Mickey Mouse can go out there and coach them and win eight or nine games the way the schedule is going to be next year.

"But I didn't come here to win eight games, I came to win a state championship. I just don't see that evolving as long as things are the way they are now. So instead of staying here and complaining about it and being disloyal and beating my head against the wall, I just decided to move on," said Gaston.

While the last year for Gaston has been a headache, he did have some positive things to say about his stint as the Warrior head coach.

"There are some real good people in this town that would do anything for kids and the program ... people (who) are involved, behind you and want to help, so making friends like that is a real positive.

"There is some basic ground work set ... and hopefully I had some things to do with changing some kids attitudes and work ethic and how they treat each other," said Gaston.

Applications for head coach are now being accepted and the new coach will be named before the end of the school year.

These three weightlifters from Camp Sierra Blanca will be competing this weekend in Carlsbad in the National Athletic and Strength Association championships. Lifters (from left) James Lasater, Joseph Beard and Larry Gutierrez have been raising money to pay their own way to the meet. Lasater, the 1993 state and regional power lifting champion, will be defending his title. The three weightlifters are pictured in the weight room at Camp Sierra Blanca that was created by the camp inmates, who also built much of the equipment.

On The Sideline

All right, already; enough is enough!

Well here we go again, two years and out and time to hire another football coach.

Mike Gaston, the Warriors hard-working, caring football coach is high-tailing it out of town to take a big job in Texas ... but more importantly to get out of New Mexico's coaching graveyard — Ruidoso High School.

It's not that we don't get good people here, it's just we're not very good at keeping them. A look at most of the Warriors' past head football coaches looks like a potential Coaching Hall of Fame.

Cooper Henderson — well he's been a head coach for nine years, has won the State Championship three times, and finished second three times. We ran him off.

Mike Speck — Henderson's right-hand man is now the offensive coordinator at Odessa Permian, the "Notre Dame" of high school football. We ran him off.

And now Gaston will become the defensive coordinator at San Antonio Marshall, runner-up to Permian two years ago in the Texas State Championship, and an outstanding football school. We ran him off.

Folks, you don't get jobs like that if you're an idiot, but you might be a little slow if you've got these people around and don't keep them.

The axe fell again last week at the school sending coaching pink-slips to Jody Blanton, who won the State Volleyball Championship with the Warriors in 1991, Dennis Davis, the girls basketball coach and Brian Tarvin, an assistant football and basketball coach.

Going by our past record, all of these people

The Ruidoso News
Sports Correspondent

will win a zillion championships wherever they go next.

The problem is simple.

We wanna win, but we don't wanna do what it takes to win. We've hired the right coaches in most cases; but we don't let them do all the little things it takes to get those championship rings.

For the one-million-two-hundred-and-forty-seven-thousand-two-hundred-and-sixteenth time — WE NEED AN ATHLETIC PERIOD!

Henderson left because we took it away and Gaston left because we took it away. Speck had a form of one, but he and then athletic director didn't get along, making both miserable.

We come from a country that's been to the moon, can read license plates on cars from a satellite 300 miles above the surface of the earth and can cross the ocean in two hours.

Surely we could find a way to put all the athletes in one class with four varsity coaches.

I know we could, if we just wanted to bid enough. But I'll tell you a little secret — we don't want to.

We say we want to do the things to win, but when it's time to put the cards on the table we've got a pair of two's while the Artesia's and Silver's are holding full-houses.

The deal is the administration just needs to tell these brilliant young coaches we hire "Look we don't care if you win or lose ... don't expect much from us, because we won't give you much, and we're certainly not going to back you in any controversial situations."

At least the guy would know how he would stands when he took the job.

There would be no misunderstandings, no broken promises, no shattered dreams.

The beautiful thing is that it's not too late. There have many, many cases of 40-year, four-pack-a-day smokers that have just quit. I think we can, too.

Ruidoso is a great place to live, and believe it or not, it has a great school system. The system is going to get some good applicants because people want to live here. Now, I'm sure the applicants for the football job are not going to be as good as they have been, but somewhere in there is a guy that can continue what Coach Gaston has started.

Let's find him, hire him and give him what he needs to be successful, no questions, no exceptions — and I know at least three coaches that are experts and can give the administrators and the new coach a place to start.

NEW MEXICO CHILD NEEDS A HOME

CODY AND LEONE L.

Cody and Leone are part Navajo and Shoshone, although not registered with either tribe. They have been in one foster home, with their sister, Jerie, since December 1990. Their social worker hopes to place these two together, though it may be necessary to place them separately so that Cody's extra needs can be met. They'll all need to stay in touch with each other.

Cody, 8, was born on September 28, 1984. He's a delightful little boy who loves bike riding, camping and fishing. Cody is in the second grade. He has been diagnosed with Attention Deficit Disorder which has affected his ability to learn. He still needs special education support but, since taking medication, he no longer has other children and is able to concentrate in class. He has discovered that reading is fascinating and has made great strides this year. Extensive abuse and neglect in his birth family has left emotional scars. Cody has a pattern of having more behavior problems just before he's ready to reveal a new piece of information about past abuse. Once he's able to talk about his feelings, his behavior improves. Leone, 12, born on October 23, 1980, is a very introspective young lady. She's artistic and creative and has a passion for horses. She has several close girl friends but is less trusting of adults. Leone is in a regular 5th grade classroom but is behind academically due to the lack of stability in her life. She's well-behaved and participates in school but needs reminders to turn in her work. With extra help from her teacher and some individual adjustments in her assignments, her school work is improving. Due to her abuse, Leone can be verbally and physically abusive to those she's living with. She's dealing with a lot of pain and depression as a result of her experiences. She wants most of her feelings at home and is learning to express herself verbally rather than physically. Weekly therapy and medication for depression are helping but Leone will need this kind of support for quite some time. A Native American or multi-cultural two parent family with a strong Christian faith is preferred. If Leone is the oldest child in the family, her parents will need to help her avoid "mothering" younger children.

Gorgeous knocks out Snowcat

Ruidoso's female boxer Maryann "Gorgeous" Almager won her rematch fight against Norwegian Helga "Snowcat" Risoy April 2, in Las Vegas, Nevada, at the Aladdin Casino.

"It was a hard fight," said Almager. "She'd been working really hard for this fight."

In their first encounter in February, Almager knocked out the boxing queen of Nevada in the first round. This time it took her three rounds.

"In the first 30 or 40 seconds of the first round she knocked me flat on my rear," Almager said. "I guess she thought she had it won, but I was back up immediately."

Risoy outscored Almager in the second round, then Almager changed her strategy. She said she had been focusing on knocking out her opponent. When she changed her focus and went for the body, it paid off. Coming up with a sudden right hook, Gorgeous knocked out the Snowcat 1:30 into the third round.

Almager has caught the attention of promoter Tom Ramirez, and they are finalizing a contract.

"He's given me the hopes I've been looking for," said Almager. "Everything looks really positive." Ramirez is also signing two male boxers, but he told Almager he would work on her 180 percent because female boxers are in big demand.

Female boxers are so popular that Almager is already hearing the whispers of commercial offers, one for a car and one for clothing.

Her next fight is set for May 6 against an as yet unnamed California opponent. Almager said there is a 95 percent chance it will be a title fight, and it will definitely be televised nationally.

Smokey's Capitan concert goes up in smoke; no sponsor means no money, no big-name star

Just for the Fudd of it

Jason King tacks his sketch of the cartoon character Elmer Fudd into place in the Capitan High School art class display case. Many of instructor Jerry Rice's students have won awards for their art work and gone on to study art in college.

Portraits to benefit FHA group

Buying a professional family portrait will help send members of the Capitan FHA on national competition trips. Appointments for Enchantment Photographics may be scheduled April 17, 18 and possibly 19, at Capitan High School by calling Jan LaRue at 354-2567 for work, or 354-2668 at home. The sitting fee is $5 for a 10x13-inch shot. More may be purchased. A lay-away plan is available.

Herbs topic of extension group

The Capitan AFCE (Extension) Club meeting is set for 9:30 a.m. April 14, in the senior citizens center. Hostesses are Bessie Jones and Lou Roberts. The program, "Herbs and Vitamins," will be presented by Barbara Mader. The craft project will be a picture frame or recipe holder. Supplies are $1. Bring a glue gun.

by DIANNE STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Plans are stalled for a major concert to be staged during the Smokey Bear Fiftieth Birthday celebration this summer in Capitan.

If a corporate sponsor isn't found to underwrite upfront costs, officials with the American Collegiate Talent Shows (ACTS) booking group of New Mexico State University have indicated they no longer are interested in bearing the financial risk, according to Barbara Luna, a representative of Friends of Smokey.

Friends has been coordinating the Capitan celebration surrounding the cub rescued from a fire in the nearby mountains who went on to become a symbol of fire prevention for the U.S. Forest Service.

"I've been working with Barbara Hubbard (of ACTS) trying to get a concert," Luna told members of the Capitan School Board last Thursday. The board had been asked to allow the use of the high school football field as a staging area for the concert.

Luna said Hubbard started out talking about George Strait or Clint Black, but more recently, had mentioned John Anderson as the performing artist. She contended Hubbard at one time had assured her that if no corporate sponsor could be found, ACTS would underwrite the performance.

"Then Barbara called yesterday and said she was getting cold feet because there were no corporate sponsors," Luna said. "She said it would be a $50,000 cost to her through ACTS and she wasn't willing to take the loss. It would take 3,500 people to break even."

School Board President Tom Trost pointed out that a concert with a top name artist also would attract many people staying in Ruidoso over that July Fourth holiday weekend.

As many as 10,000 fans could be squeezed into the 45,000 square foot football field, sitting on the ground and in the bleachers (which would hold about 900 people), Luna said. Hubbard was concerned about the proposed 9 p.m. starting time for the concert, although that time is not unusual, Luna said.

Because she couldn't secure any definite answers from ACTS months ago, fair board members had to move ahead and set their own schedule of events, which included rodeos and dances each evening of the weekend, Luna said. The rodeos start at 7 p.m.

"As it stands, unless I can come up with corporate sponsors in 24 hours, it's dead," Luna said. She contended she had been close to signing up Monsanto, but negotiations stopped when Clint Black no longer was in the picture and she couldn't get firm answers to the corporation's questions.

"It would have been a really neat thing for kids to have made money from the concessions, but now the possibility is only a narrow crack in the door," Luna said. "Barbara is going to sell Anderson's contract."

"I understand from Anderson's booking agent that he was excited about coming to New Mexico and going to a rodeo, because he's done some rodeo. He's going to be real disappointed."

But not disappointed enough to appear just for the gate, as she suggested to the agent, Luna said.

Hubbard's view

On Monday, Hubbard said miscommunication and lack of information caused the problem and now Capitan and ACTS are caught with no viable options.

"Barbara (Luna) came to us a year ago and wanted us to help and we said sure," Hubbard told The Ruidoso News. "Originally, we talked about George Strait, but George didn't want to work on the holiday."

Hubbard said she understood that Monsanto officials said they didn't know John Anderson, the artist eventually signed, and decided they weren't interested in sponsoring the event.

Even if another artist was available, Hubbard said starting at 9 p.m. is too late for people who have to go to work the next day. Luna pointed out that the concert was set for Saturday, giving most people two more days of holiday before reporting back to work. Yet, Hubbard said she had been told that starting earlier in the evening would conflict with the Capitan rodeo, which is scheduled for 7 p.m. to avoid conflicts with rodeos in Mescalero in the afternoon. An afternoon show also would lose a big portion of the Ruidoso audience who would attend the horse races instead, Hubbard said.

"It's a Catch 22," she said. "It's a matter of us not knowing about the rodeos ahead of time. I don't want to go against a rodeo. I really feel bad, but we're still willing to help if a sponsor steps forward and someone has an idea on ways to schedule it," she said.

"If we could come up with any other day that doesn't conflict with a rodeo. It's a big show and costs lots of money ($50,000) to underwrite. My students and I can't stand behind it."

Back at the meeting with school board members, Luna apologized for not communicating with the school board during the process.

"At a fair board meeting, I said John Anderson confirmed for the concert on July 2 on the high school football field and Beverly (Payne, a Capitan school board member) asked what I was talking about," Luna said. "I've been remiss."

At the school board meeting two weeks ago, members said they wanted to help out with the concert, but needed some answers about insurance and possible damage to the football field.

Luna said the village's insurance would not cover the concert, but that Hubbard has said ACTS would buy some liability insurance.

Friends of Smokey would donate $500 to refurbish the football field.

Luna said, even without a concert, the football field still will be needed to inflate the Smokey Bear balloon that made its debut at the Annual Albuquerque Balloon Festival last summer.

"Originally, we were going to do it across the road, but the pilot wanted short grass that's maintained, so there would be less chance of holes," she said.

The balloon would be inflated about 6:30 a.m. and volunteers to round out the 15-member crew are needed.

"They will tether it for as long as they can until the winds come up and then take it down, usually around 9 a.m.," Luna said. "It won't fly at all or give rides."

"People can see it from the street and Smokey bear can be there to hand out materials."

Payne said the board is happy to work on projects for the celebration, but "we needed specifics and had none on liability, parking and damages."

"It's public money and we needed some answers," Trost said. "I think we all want to cooperate. It's a neat thing for the town."

If Hubbard changes her mind again and the concert is back on, the board must know specifically what type of insurance and how much will be provided and by whom, said Capitan school superintendent Diana Sonnamaker.

If the field is used for anything connected to the celebration, no cars or trucks could drive on it, because of the damage to the track, Trost said, equipment would have to be hand carried.

By Tuesday, it appeared Hubbard had decided to move ahead and sell Anderson's contract to another community.

Luna also showed board members a media packet being sent to newspapers, magazines, television and radio stations. She said an article in Modern Maturity Magazine on Smokey Bear turning 50 generated more than 800 inquiries from readers.

Articles also are scheduled in the June issue of Sunset Magazine and New Mexico Magazine.

Capitan law team competes in mock trial finals

Capitan students were among 200 from 16 high schools across the state participating in the final rounds of the sixteenth annual high school mock trial competition at the Bernalillo County metropolitan courthouse in Albuquerque March 25-26.

The winner, Alamogordo, will compete against teams from across the United States, Guam and the Virgin Islands at the national finals in May in Chicago. Runners up were Albuquerque High, West Mesa High, Albuquerque Academy and Cibola High.

The state finalists, representing the best of 34 teams that competed earlier last month in regional matches in Las Cruces, Santa Fe and Albuquerque, prepared since November to present the hypothetical civil trial of a male supervisor in a law office accused of sexual harassment. He was sued, along with the firm of Cooper, Cook and Troy, by a female associates in the firm. The competition is administered and co-sponsored by the New Mexico Bar Foundation.

Michelle Geiger, associate director of the foundation, said the program "attracts students with an extraordinary wide range of abilities and interests. Not only do they learn a lot about the Constitution, the law and the judicial process, but they also have the opportunity to improve their reasoning and communication skills in exciting and confidence-building ways."

Writer pieces her quilt of words

This Saturday, April 9, the Museum of the Horse welcomes award-winning author Sharon Niederman to its monthly membership program.

Niederman will present a discussion based on her book, "A Quilt of Words" at 7 p.m. The program is free to the public.

Niederman's book, "A Quilt of Words," contains published journals, oral histories, and archival research all brought together to give us samples of New Mexico's history from the women settler's point of view.

From the opening of the Santa Fe Trail in 1846 through the century of settlement and statehood and into 1957, Niederman uses women's original voices to tell of their experiences during this tumultuous time.

Their experiences as homesteaders, traders, health-seekers, teachers, soldiers' wives, nuns, artists and ranchers are all meticulously laid down. Women of special courage and unique vision contributed their energies to building the communities of New Mexico, and "A Quilt of Words" pays tribute to these individuals.

"A Quilt of Words" won the Border Regional Library Association 1989 Southwest Book Award for literary excellence/contribution to the cultural heritage of the Southwest.

Sharon Niederman, who lives in Albuquerque, is an accomplished author whose articles have appeared in regional and national publications including the New York Times, Boston Globe, Christian Science Monitor, Denver Post, Southwest Airlines Magazine and New Mexico Magazine.

For eight years, Niederman taught English and Women's Studies at Metropolitan State College in Denver, where she was named "Outstanding Faculty Member."

From 1990-1993 she served as Arts Editor of the Santa Fe Reporter. Currently, she writes a monthly column for the New Mexico Stockman featuring a ranch woman.

Her book "Hellish Bells: Sizzling Salsas and Devilish Dips From the Kitchens of New Mexico" will be published this June by Harper Collins.

"New Mexico Poetry Renaissance: A Community on Paper" is due out in the fall of 1994, and is being published by Red Crane Books in Santa Fe.

According to a news release, the Museum of the Horse is pleased to present Sharon Niederman's "Quilt of Words" as their April membership program.

The discussion will take place in the special events room at the Museum of the Horse. Everyone is invited.

Obituaries

Bernard Little

Rosary for Bernard Little, 83, of Mescalero will be at 7 p.m. today (Thursday), April 7, at St. Joseph's Mission in Mescalero where the funeral mass will be conducted at 10 a.m. Friday, April 8.

Officiating will be the Reverend Thomas Herbst. Burial will follow at the Little Family Cemetery.

Little died Tuesday, April 5, at the Public Health Services Indian Hospital at Mescalero.

He was born August 20, 1910, in Mescalero. Family members say Little, who grew up on the Mescalero Reservation, roamed the countryside until he knew every aspect of the 475,000 acre reservation.

Little attended the Albuquerque Indian School where he played football, ran track, and met his wife-to-be, Ernestine Cata, a native of the San Juan Pueblo, who was a nursing student at the school.

He graduated in 1933, and married Ernestine Cata in 1934. The couple returned to Mescalero in 1934, where Little began a long career of service to his tribe.

He helped construct roads throughout the reservation, and later developed his own logging operation using mule power and two-man handaws.

In 1945, the Little family moved to Fort Defiance, Arizona, where Little worked for the BIA Roads Department. After three years, he brought his family back to Mescalero where he took a number of construction and logging jobs.

At the same time, Little served on various tribal committees and organizations where he began developing a political knowledge, as well as furthering his knowledge of the reservation.

Over the years, Little served on the Mescalero Apache Tribal Council; the Tribal Cattle Growers Association, where he was president for several years; and tribal judge.

Little's family remembers that it was during the period from the late 1930s through the 1960s that Little and many of his contemporaries began developing a dream for tribal self-sufficiency through the development of various business enterprises.

"Around council tables, campfires and in living rooms, these far-sighted men began concept utilizing projects that could make money and put their people to work and ensure an independent tribal community," according to family members.

"Based on these men's visions and their wealth of common sense, plans began to emerge for the development of a ski run, an inn and lake resort, a cattle operation, timber operations, a hospital and, of course, a network of roads to transverse the reservation."

Little lived to see most of the dreams take shape in the form of Ski Apache, the Inn of the Mountain Gods, the Mescalero Cattle Growers Association and an Indian Hospital.

The last project Little undertook was as construction foreman for Lake Mescalero at the Inn of the Mountain Gods. According to his family, Little was very proud of that last endeavor and always felt it was a good punctuation to the end of his working life.

However, even after this, Little went on to serve his tribe for several more years as a part-time judge.

In 1978, Little settled down to a homestead for his many grandchildren and great-grandchildren.

He died peacefully, surrounded by family and friends.

He is survived by his wife, Ernestine of Mescalero; two daughters, Sister Juanita Little of Mescalero and Annette House of Clovis; and three sons, Peter Little of Acoma, Edward Little of San Juan Pueblo and Joseph Little of Albuquerque. The couple had another son, Bernard Fred Little II, who died in infancy.

Survivors also include a sister, Sarah Peso of Mescalero, 15 grandchildren, 16 great-grandchildren and several nieces and nephews.

Designer offers local preview Sunday

Independent fashion designer, Donna Boryea, will preview her latest collection of Southwestern fashions in an informal style show at 1 p.m. Sunday, April 10, at Oz's Double Rainbow Cafe.

According to a news release, Boryea, who lives in Carlsbad, is one of New Mexico's leading designers, combining colorful fabrics and her unique fashion flair to create one-of-a-kind Southwestern fashions.

The designer recently expanded her operation, opening a permanent showroom in Dallas, Texas.

Sunday's showing will provide an informal, limited showing during a luncheon of stuffed croissants and lemon mousse with strawberry sauce. Models will move among diners and Boryea will be present to describe her creations and answer questions.

The luncheon special will be $5; and seating is limited so reservations are encouraged by calling 257-4777 between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Ruidoso gospel singer returns

Gospel singer Wade Whitlock is returning to Ruidoso for a performance at Calvary Chapel this Sunday, April 10. Wade and his wife, Paula, said they are looking forward to their last Ruidoso visit of the season. After this concert, the Whitlocks won't be back until winter.

Sunday's performance begins at 10:30 a.m. at Calvary Chapel, located at the Senior Citizens Center behind the library. Pastor Ben Slaboda will lead the service.

LOGAN HENDERSON

Mid-schooler to compete in bee

Logan Henderson, student at Ruidoso Middle School, has qualified to participate at the state level of the National Geography Bee this Friday in Albuquerque.

Henderson will be among a select group of New Mexico students in grades four through eight who won contests at the local level to make their way to this state bee.

One winner from each state and territory will advance to the national competition, which will be conducted May 24 and 25.

Herman A. Ford

Graveside services for Herman A. Ford, 83, of Ruidoso will be at 1 p.m. Saturday, April 9, at Twin Oaks Cemetery in Artesia. Officiating will be the Reverend Craig Cockrell of Community United Methodist Church in Ruidoso.

Ford died Wednesday, April 6, at Lincoln County Medical Center in Ruidoso. He was born July 23, 1910, at Steedman, Oklahoma, to Clara and Walter Ford who both preceded him in death.

He taught at the Artesia Public Schools from 1948 until 1970, when he retired and moved to Ruidoso.

Ford was a member of the VFW, retired teacher's association and Community United Methodist Church in Ruidoso. He served in the U.S. Army during World War II in the 84th Infantry.

He is survived by two sons,

Ronny Perriman of Woodbride, Virginia, and Larry Perriman of West Memphis, Arkansas; and a daughter, Denese Judd of Las Cruces. Survivors include two sisters, Jewell Ford and Oleta Bullock, both of Artesia; eight grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

His wife, Hazel Ford, died in 1972.

Rudy A. Garcia

Funeral services for Rudy A. Garcia, 53, of Fort Stanton were at 2 p.m. Wednesday, April 6, at the Fort Stanton Chapel.

The Reverend Tom Broom from

First United Methodist Church in Maria, Texas, officiated. Burial followed at Fort Stanton cemetery.

Garcia died Friday, April 1, at Lincoln County Medical Center. He was born January 23, 1941, in Albuquerque. He had lived at Fort Stanton since February 1971.

Survivors include his many friends at Fort Stanton.

Ranching groups denounce rangeland reform proposal

by DIANNE STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Officials with ranching-based organizations in New Mexico joined the state's national representatives in denouncing a proposed 200-page public rangeland reform plan.

They specifically criticized the composition of multi-user advisory committees and the emphasis by Interior Secretary Bruce Babbitt on national, instead of local approaches.

U.S. Congressman Joe Skeen (R-New Mexico) has gone a step further than just offering criticism.

Along with members of the Western Caucus, he introduced legislation late last month that would transfer a majority of Bureau of Land Management (BLM) lands to states that agree to take on the new responsibility. He contends the move would save American taxpayers millions of dollars in decreased public expenditures.

Environmental groups and those who say ranchers receive a subsidy because grazing fees are too low have pushed for public rangeland reform. They want to see an increase in fees and the land protected from overgrazing they think has wiped out the sea of grass that once covered portions of New Mexico.

Out of the total 476,500 acres of land managed by the BLM in Lincoln County, 125 different operators were using 135 allotments set aside for grazing in 1992, according to bureau records. The number of acres grazed by any one rancher in the county that year ranged from a low of 30 acres to a high of 48,000, by the X Bar Division of Bogle Farms.

Officials comment

Wesley Grau, president of the New Mexico Cattle Growers, said, "If the Secretary expects to gain ranchers' support for this proposal, he still has a long way to go."

However Grau acknowledged that while "the previous plan would have killed New Mexico ranchers, this plan is a little better."

The president of the state's largest agricultural organization, the Farm and Livestock Bureau, says Babbitt's new public lands proposal contains contradictory ideas that could prove damaging to Western ranchers.

"While the latest proposal contains some improvements from the disastrous proposal he presented last year, such as reaffirmation of states' water rights, the changes don't go far enough," said bureau president John Van Sweden. "The Farm Bureau cannot support the proposal in its present form and will seek changes during the comment period."

VanSweden pointed out that Babbitt has said one of his objectives was to establish local empowerment, local standards and guidelines to fit local conditions, yet he established national requirements for those standards.

"The secretary proposes local multiple resource councils, yet he allows non-resident environmentalists to be chosen nationally."

Since ranchers who want to sit on the advisory councils must be residents, "It only seems reasonable that the same residency standards should apply to all other council members," he said.

Grau from the cattle growers agreed.

"Allowing non-resident environmentalists on these councils is blatantly unfair and calls into question the Secretary's seriousness about encouraging what he calls local control," Grau said. "I find this provision an unnecessary concession to national environmental groups and their paid staffs. It justifiably angers local environmentalists and their ranching neighbors."

VanSweden said another offensive element of the plan includes the statement that the Interior Department may re-evaluate the new rules and higher grazing fees sometime in the future, if the program breaks down.

"That may be a little late for those who have been driven out of business," VanSweden said. "This kind of bureaucratic hypocrisy simply won't wash in our community."

Bureau leaders who reviewed the plan said the new grazing fee will impose an economic hardship on many families, especially smaller ranchers, VanSweden said.

"The plan also remains too vague in a number of critical areas such as stewardship incentives, endangered species and riparian protection impacts on individual operations," he said.

He contended that most federal public land personnel think ranchers are doing a good job caring for the land and their effort should be encouraged.

If ranchers face the potential loss of the value of their land improvements, those conservation efforts will be discouraged, VanSweden said.

"Everyone will come out ahead if you give ranchers the proper incentives, a reasonable balance between personal responsibility and regulatory oversight and a grazing fee based on the actual forage value," he said.

Balance lacking

"The Babbitt proposal falls short of striking the proper balance."

Grau said that the proposal, while focusing on local control, states that the department recognizes a need to establish clear national requirements for grazing administration and guidance for the preparation of state or regional standards and guidelines.

Those national standards include transfer of ownership of all new improvements to the federal government, Grau noted. They limit in season-long grazing, put forth new rules for facility construction around riparian wetlands and sharply enhance the policing authority of the Bureau of Land Management officials.

"Either Secretary Babbitt is for local control, truly empowering communities in the west with real management authority, or he is not," Grau said. "He can't have it both ways."

"No one has been a better steward of the land in New Mexico than ranchers. We have taken good care of the rangeland for generations and we plan to see our sons and daughters continue that record of caring. I don't understand why the Administration continues to interfere with our way of life."

U.S. Senator Pete Domenici (R-New Mexico) said he sees several positive changes in the updated proposal to reform public rangeland management, but he remained critical of the plan as a whole.

"It does make positive ground in continuing the 10-year lease, allowing a full 160-day comment period and moving closer to address ranchers' concerns about subleasing," Domenici said.

"However, I am concerned by indications in this proposal that may prove that the Secretary's claim of increased local control is really just a carefully crafted facade."

The multiple resource advisory councils seem designed for minimal rancher representation, he said. At the same time, it allows nonresidents to serve on local councils.

"This could mean someone from a Washington-based special interest group could sit on the advisory council is Roswell."

"Moreover, Washington would still set the perimeters of the new standards and regulations placed on activities on the public lands. It's local, but with strings attached."

"The proposal raises a number of questions over the intent of the reform. For example, a healthy ecological condition has not been clearly defined. I have concerns about the composition of the advisory councils, their authority, the appeals process and grazing fee rates. The new proposal again assumes that public land lease rates should be equal to private lease rates, although it's clear that private and public lands are generally not of equal quality. The fee increase proposed by the Secretary will be extremely detrimental to small family ranching operations throughout the West."

He pointed to a new study by researchers at New Mexico State University working with data from Arizona State University, that concludes when all relevant data, including the value of land, is taken into account, little cost differential exists between what the cost of leasing private or public lands.

The public lands system does not constitute a subsidy to ranchers, he contended.

"The report, based on a two-year survey of 4,673 ranchers in 14 western states, including 712 ranchers in New Mexico, stresses that direct comparisons should not be made between the former $1.86 AUM fee for grazing on public lands to the average $7.40 AUM cost to graze on private land, without including the appropriate other data."

Skeen's bold move

Speaking about his legislation to allow states to take over BLM land inside their borders, Skeen said, "New Mexico and other western states should be treated like every other state east of the 30-inch rainfall belt."

"This revolutionary idea would save the taxpayers millions of dollars by doing away with so-called subsidy for public lands ranchers and eliminating most of the BLM budget."

Under the Skeen plan, wilderness areas, wilderness study areas and areas of critical environmental concern would be exempted from this bill and remain under federal jurisdiction.

"Public lands states like New Mexico would directly benefit by putting these lands on the tax rolls so local communities can provide necessary resources for education, transportation and other economic development needs," he said.

"I have spent nearly my entire life grappling with BLM over its continuously expanding regulations and personnel, which are destroying the western way of life. Ranchers, oil and gas operators, and miners believe that they have a better chance of implementing reasonable approaches to land management at the state and local level."

The bill was co-sponsored by 26 congressmen "and is gaining support from eastern members who are primarily interested in increasing government efficiency and saving taxpayer dollars," Skeen said.

BLM's viewpoint

In a 10-page analysis of Babbitt's proposal released by the BLM, bureau officials contend it will increase local participation, allow standards and guidelines to be drafted at the state level and will offer fee reductions for good stewardship to offset the basic fee increase for public lands grazing.

"The changes also acknowledge varying conditions facing residents in different regions of the West," according to the summary released by Stephanie Hanna.

"This new proposal clearly meets the original objectives for grazing reform," Babbitt was quoted as saying in the release. "We are bringing significant reforms to the management of our public lands, but are doing so with substantially greater input from Westerners."

"There were some who said our broad principles might threaten traditional resources. In some ways, they were right. By making clarifications and by being far more specific, we make it obvious that our proposals affect only grazing policy. We've addressed many legitimate concerns raised by Westerners."

The proposal calls for fee increases phased in over three years. Fees currently set at $1.98 per animal unit month (AUM) would climb to $2.75 in 1996, $3.50 in 1996 and $3.96 in 1997. An AUM is the amount of forage required to sustain a cow and her calf or five sheep for one month.

Ranchers have been critical of the increase because they contend unlike the current fee, it is not based on a logical formula that takes into consideration things like market conditions.

Proponents point out that the new rates still would be lower than those charged by private land owners in the West and by most Western states for state-owned lands.

According to the BLM, after the full phase-in, more than 75 percent of BLM permits would have a fee increase totalling less than $1,000 a year.

Babbitt also has proposed a fee discount of 30 percent for ranchers who meet higher environmental standards. Their rate would be $2.77. Details for the requirements for the incentive have not been released.

The Secretary said he is particularly excited about focusing new attention on green strips along rivers and streams in the West.

"Riparian areas are among the most resilient ecosystems on public lands," he said. "Given a chance, they can come back to their full, healthy state."

"The simple fact is that our rangelands are in great need of improvement and many ranchers across the West have proven they are up to the task."

Babbitt outlined four national requirements that regional standards and guidelines must meet:

—grazing practices must enhance or maintain properly functioning ecosystems.

—grazing practices must enhance or maintain properly functioning riparian systems.

—grazing management practices must be implemented to protect public health and welfare, and must help maintain, restore or enhance water quality. Water quality on allotments must meet or exceed water quality standards.

—grazing practices must ensure to the extent practicable the maintenance, restoration or enhancement of habitat for threatened or endangered species and must also give consideration to those species that are candidates for listing.

State standards also must address soil stability and watershed function, the distribution of nutrients and energy, and plant community recovery mechanisms. Grazing plans should consider such issues as the timing of critical plant growth and regrowth, as well as periods of rest from livestock grazing.

No valid existing water rights would be affected, no new federal reserved water rights would be created.

"The guiding principle behind our proposal for water rights is simple," Babbitt said. "The water should stay with the land. If that water now owned by the American public is best used for livestock watering, then any future permittees should have access to it without having to pay the inflated rates that a private owner of the rights could charge."

The proposed rule would provide for federal ownership of all future permanent grazing-related improvements on public lands. Recognition would be made of the contributor's investment.

The current 10-year term for grazing permits would be retained. The policy of the bureau will be changed to recognize conservation as a legitimate use of public range forage, consistent with the long range goals of the Resource Management Plan for the area.

Standards and guidelines will be written on a state level, although they must not contradict certain federal goals.

Try a little kindness

Listen up, folks: we're getting ready for a busy summer, so it's in order to talk about respect for others and putting our best feet forward for the thousands of folks who will visit here this year. It's not too early to start.

Talk around the office this week was about a long list of recent incidents where people were so self-absorbed that they nearly injured other people.

For instance, a young couple was observed heading to check out in Wal-Mart, and they nearly ran down an older couple. The gentleman was using a walker, and his wife was shopping with him and the young and fit shoppers all but knocked him over and didn't even look back. A similar incident happened a few months ago when a couple of women barged in front of a grandmother carrying a baby in a baby carrier — they stepped in front, pushed open the door and let it slam on her fingers, crushing them against the baby seat. They didn't even turn to say they were sorry or observe the bleeding hand.

Just this morning, a driver on Sudderth slammed on her brakes and stopped in the middle of the street when a police car was approaching with lights and siren going. The driver didn't pull off to the side or make any effort to get out of the way of the emergency vehicle or other motorists.

Sunday morning a bicycle rider endangered himself and others when he rode down the center of the driving lane on Country Club, not moving to the side to make way for traffic.

Such incidents will only get worse when our summer residents and visitors arrive. How about a little respect for others, not just visitors, but friends and neighbors, as well.

Letters To The Editor

Being lost is a lot better once you're found

TO THE EDITOR:

I'm not a complete yahoo no matter what my wife might say. I'm usually thoughtful and responsible, and try to be considerate and grown up. This keeps me from being so.

However, on February 20 I wasn't very thoughtful and didn't consider well enough when I went for a short day hike in the mountains.

Me and Tucker (that's my dog) were going to explore a little in an area without marked trails. I thought enough to carry a few necessities for unforeseen circumstances, things like extra clothing and matches, and a little extra water and food.

I didn't plan well enough to head out much before noon. I told my wife that I would be back for supper, arriving home shortly after sunset. She heard that plan very well, but didn't pay any attention. (bless her heart) to the part about myself being such a self-reliant outdoorsman, that my woodsmanship would carry me safely through an extended stay in the mountains in an unlikely event, that she shouldn't worry or bother anyone until I had missed my morning pot of coffee. She kind of chuckled when I said I could take care of myself and Tucker in any eventuality such as darkness.

About four worried hours after sunset that night she fired the first flare. Her call to the Ruidoso Police brought a response that we have come to always expect. They are professionals in the finest sense of the word, they do protect and serve. They quickly determined that I a local honky-tonk since they had previously spotted my car parked at the head of an old trail, and on checking again, it was still there.

The police fired the second flare and there were people out there who responded immediately. People, we never know are always watching and listening for the call to help someone in distress in the forest.

The people of the White Mountain Rescue Team came together to give a helping hand to a man overtaken by darkness and other confusions.

I, meanwhile, not fully appreciating my distress, was confidently taking care of the situation at hand as well as I understood it. I knew I was only a few miles from my car, but thought it safest to not proceed in the dark down an icy ravine.

I decided to make camp. As daylight left the forest, I found a dry spot under some trees for bedding down, prepared a campfire location, thought about a shelter, and collected firewood while Tucker just napped. I didn't realize he was resting up for his shift.

After sometime and a lot of expended energy on my part, we settled in. I ate the extra sandwich and he ate the extra dog biscuits, as I admired my feeble efforts at making camp.

Tucker started to eye the surrounding night suspiciously. After supper, I slept fitfully, frequently waking up to tend the fire and see Tuck intent on one particular worrisome spot in the surrounding dark. He barked at the spot at one time, but mostly just watched and listened.

At about 3 a.m. we thought we heard a shout. Shortly after, I heard someone shout my name. Who could be calling my name in the forest in the middle of the night? I gave a hello back and Tucker did his best impersonation of an attack dog on duty as three people with lights stepped into the firelight. They quickly saw through the attack dog impersonation and identified Tucker as one of those fun loving friend to everyone types. They determined that I was whole and healthy and said they were part of the White Mountain Rescue Team.

Some people, notably my wife thought I might be injured, staying out so late. I told them I was grateful for the concern, would they radio back to let my wife know I was OK. I explained my situation as well as I knew it, and stated that I didn't think I needed a lot of rescuing. My plan was to wait out the hours to sunrise and walk out to my car.

Determined and patient people that these rescuers are, they examined my poor camp, considered my preparedness and the falling temperatures, then advised that most reasonable people would think they had a definite need for at least a little rescuing.

They seemed to feel that someone who would let themselves be overtaken by dark, cold and fatigue in the mountains in winter wasn't the best judge of the situation he was in. That here was a helping hand, they thought I should take it. Quickly, then seeing the light I put out the fire, gathered my stuff, then me and Tuck hiked out with Jim, Cliff and Stephanie. On reaching my car, they sent me home to my wife, with a couple of well intentioned barbs in my direction.

Wow, was that a learning experience! I have some hard earned tips on winter hiking for what they are worth. The most significant lessons I learned, though, were about myself, about people, and about community. I don't know exactly how the dictionary calls it, but community should be also listed as an action verb. It is more than communication, it is doing things to help others.

The people of White Mountain Rescue who live in Ruidoso, the Downs, and other places in the Sacramento Mountains certainly carry the spirit of community in their hearts and they exercise it with their time and efforts. They will help any innocent in difficulty in the mountains. They will even help a complete yahoo or a part-time yahoo like myself. I believe that we in the Sacramento Mountains are blessed with these and many other people like them.

I learned that we don't have to be alone out there, anywhere. If I can build and carry the spirit of community, I can be comforted knowing there are others nearby.

I went out to the mountains to observe nature, and my real lesson was about human nature. I thank and salute, especially all the volunteers who are the White Mountain Rescue Team.

Rancher reacts again to cartoon

TO THE EDITOR:

I am honored that I have been chosen as one of the very few with whom you are willing to debate. I accept your challenge and you may choose the time and place.

As you suggested, the debate will be agriculture - focusing on the use and management of public lands.

Should you follow up with a time and place, I might suggest that you spend a little time outside your office before becoming too deeply involved. Understanding the land and publishing cartoons about it are two entirely different subjects.

Caution: cats only have 9 lives

TO THE EDITOR:

This past week I had an experience that I wish no one else would ever have to have.

My pet cat fell down a chimney that had an open damper, and wasn't able to get back out. She was in this closed up summer home for about five days before someone told us about seeing a cat in a vacant house.

Needless to say, I was in a panic, and after seeing what she had done to the inside of the house, I felt like I needed to warn folks about leaving their chimney dampers open.

Please, it could be your pet next time or maybe even your house with not just a cat, but maybe a skunk or bird and a dead carcass smells had, no matter what it might be.

NEW MEXICO ENVIRONMENTAL IMPROVEMENT BOARD

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING TO CONSIDER THE AMENDMENTS TO THE SOLID WASTE MANAGEMENT REGULATIONS

The New Mexico Environmental Improvement Board will hold a public hearing on April 8, 1994 beginning at 1:30 p.m. at the New Mexico State Capital, Legislative Committee Room 303, corner of Paseo de Peralta and Old Santa Fe Trail, Santa Fe, New Mexico, to consider proposed revisions to the following sections of the Air Quality Control Regulations: AQCR 702 Part II, H. - Permits, "Permit Decisions and Appeals", AQCR 750 - New Source Performance Standards, and AQCR 751 - National Emission Standards for Hazardous Air Pollutants.

The proponent of the regulatory change is the Environment Department. The proposed amendments will allow the state to comply with the delegation agreement of the United States Environmental Protection Agency for the administration of these federal programs in New Mexico. The proposed regulations may be reviewed during regular business hours at the office of the Environmental Improvement Board, Harold Runnels Building Rm. S4310, 1190 St. Francis Drive, Santa Fe, New Mexico and copies may be obtained by contacting Phyllis Ludl, Environmental Engineer, Air Quality Bureau, P.O. Box 26110, Santa Fe, New Mexico, telephone number 827-0048.

The hearing will be held in accordance with the Environmental Improvement Act, Section 74-12-6 NMSA 1978 and the Board's Rules of Procedure for Regulation Hearings.

All interested persons will be given a reasonable opportunity at the hearing to submit relevant evidence, data, views, and arguments, orally or in writing, to introduce exhibits and to examine witnesses. Persons desiring to present technical testimony shall submit to the Board a written statement of intent to do so. Any person who will paraphrase, summarize or read from a prepared statement must submit the written testimony together with the statement of intent. The notice of intent shall include:

- name and qualification of each technical witness; the name of the person proffering the witness; whether the person proffering the witness is a proponent, opponent, or interested party; describe the nature, subject and anticipated length of the testimony; identify the specific aspects and proposed action along with alternative language proposal where appropriate; list and describe technical exhibits to be offered in connection with the witness' testimony.

Notice of intent with the written statements, or written statement to be incorporated into the public record must be received in the Office of the Board not later than 5:00 p.m. March 25, 1994 and shall be entitled: "Statement for the public record regarding proposed amendments to AQCR 702, ILH, 750, AQCR 751: April 8, 1994."

If you are an individual with a disability and you require assistance or an auxiliary aid, e.g., sign language interpreter, to participate in any aspect of this process, please contact Cliff Hawley by March 31, 1994. Mr. Hawley's telephone number is (505) 827-2844. He is Chief of the Program Support Bureau, New Mexico Environment Department, P.O. Box 26110, 1190 St. Francis Drive, Santa Fe, New Mexico 87502. (TDD or TDY users please access his number via the New Mexico Relay Network. Albuquerque TDD users: (505) 275-7333. Outside of Albuquerque: 1-800-659-1779).

Copies of the agenda and the proposed regulations will be provided in alternative forms, e.g., audiotape, if requested by April 1, 1994.

Note: The Board may convene a meeting after the hearing to consider action on the proposal.

ss/Frank McClure Chairman #9165 1t(4)7
