Pick up times for aspens set

Quaking aspens ordered as part of the Second Annual Paint the Town Gold project must be picked up Friday or Saturday at Conley's Nursery on U.S. 70 east of Ruidoso Downs.

This year's trees were larger and nearly 500 were sold for $5 each as part of a community promotion by the Ruidoso News, Conley's Nursery and United New Mexico Bank to turn Ruidoso gold in the fall.

Pick up times are limited to 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Friday, and 9 a.m. to noon Saturday. For more information or to verify that your name is on the list, contact Crystal Dalton at 257-4001.

Lack of quorum stalls EDCLC

What would have been the last general meeting of the Economic Development Corporation of Lincoln County couldn't be conducted Tuesday, because of a lack of quorum.

Executive director Karen Kopp said the meeting has been narrowed to executive committee members only and is scheduled for noon Thursday at the organization's office.

Kopp said she doesn't anticipate any problems in securing a majority vote on a resolution conveying furniture, fixtures and equipment to the county senior citizens program to benefit each district. Cash left in the group's account will be shifted to the Small Business Development Center, based in Roswell, to ensure that agent Gene Simmons can continue his service to the Lincoln County area.

Detour Friday

The D & S Construction crane scheduled to be in the area Thursday will arrive Friday instead.

Three lanes of traffic on Sud-derth Drive will be blocked for about three hours in the morning.

Motorists may avoid the road block by turning down Country Club Drive and cutting across Rio Street to Eagle Drive.

School Board meets tonight in Capitan

An update on the high school discipline policy and student absentee policy are on the agenda of the Capitan School Board tonight.

The meeting will begin at 7 p.m. in the school library. A work session at 6:30 p.m. will include a preliminary walk through the new middle school, which is nearing completion.

Parents Concerned About Outcome Based Education are scheduled to appear and board members will review the middle school student handbook.

MainStreet sees red in 1993

MainStreet Ruidoso Inc. dipped into the red by $2,681 for its year end fund balance, according to an audit report ending March 31.

The Ruidoso News obtained a report, issued by Hemphill and Austin, P.C. to MainStreet that listed revenues for MainStreet at $51,830, while expenses climbed higher by $3,006 to $54,836.

MainStreet began the year with a fund balance of $325. The deficit was later reconciled.

Revenues for the year included $42,314 from the Village of Ruidoso contract; memberships, $7,463; and other revenues, $2,053.

Personnel costs of $32,475 (one paid employee) topped all expenses. Office operations totaled $8,867; contract services, $12,697; and travel and entertainment, $797.

MainStreet installed an accounting system during the year that would enable management to record and monitor accounts receivable. The receivables consist of dues assessed during the current year to members of the organization.

Accounts receivable outstanding as of March 31, 1994, and recorded as revenue in the current year were $1,725.

Related party transactions included two items.

On June 1, 1993, the organization entered into a written agreement to lease office space from Director Clarissa Ann Bolton. Total lease payments were $4,250.

The report noted that MainStreet board had "retained" the law firm of Dutton, Stevensons & Harkanson Ltd. to provide various legal services relating to an option agreement to purchase a tract of land known as the Wilson property. The land is located off Eagle Drive on the Rio Ruidoso and was to be used in connection with a proposed River Walk.

Former MainStreet president Tom Battin told The Ruidoso

Council pushes to annex tax free pockets

by CHARLES STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Claiming some property owners within the village are enjoying a free tax ride, Ruidoso Mayor Jerry Shaw Tuesday urged the council to move speedily toward annexing those properties.

Shaw said some properties were receiving village services, but not adding to the tax base to support those services.

Carrizo Road and the Stroud Building were two areas the council proposed as immediate candidates for annexation.

Village planner Cleatus Richards recommended a Boundary Commission be formed for the annexations.

Richards said it would be more cost effective for the village to pay for a group of properties to be annexed at one time.

Shaw told the council that for some reason, attempts at annexation weren't working and that she wanted to see more movement in that direction. She asked Richards why the Stroud Building was so difficult to annex.

"It's the basic documentation on community services and abilities that we need to get together," Richards said.

Councilor Leon Eggleston asked Richards if the village provides all services to the Stroud Building and if that building is getting the benefits of being within the city without paying taxes.

Richards said it did. He also mentioned basic services are being provided for Carrizo Canyon Road such as water, sewer, road maintenance, police and fire protection.

Richards said there are other areas considered for annexation where services are not provided.

Mayor Shaw said she was not in favor of waiting for all properties to be submitted before annexing those properties now provided all village services without paying taxes.

Councilor Robert Donaldson divided properties to be annexed into three categories.

"We have the properties that are easy to annex, that the mayor is talking about, and I do think those should be grouped together and moved on quickly (to annex)," Donaldson said.

"Then we have those properties that are not so easy. Within that group there may be properties that we don't want to annex," he said. "There are some subdivisions in this town that the cost to bring them into this community far exceeds anything that we would get back (in taxes). I don't see any reason to subsidize those subdivisions that were poorly planned."

Thirdly, I think we have to look to the future of Ruidoso; where are growth is, where the tax base is moving and plan for the future."

Donaldson suggested establishing a commission to help the village staff annex current properties, but assess other areas for future annexation.

Councilor Eggleston reminded Shaw that in 1984, a similar commission was formed to annex the Heaps of junk may not sound like a serious law enforcement problem, but Lincoln County commissioners say it's a countywide disgrace that damages the area's image and it deserves attention.

They directed county attorney Alan Morel last Friday to draft a resolution calling for tougher enforcement of littering and illegal dumping laws by village police departments and the county sheriff's department.

"Let's ask Alan to draft one (a resolution) calling for coordination among villages and the sheriff's office," said Chairman Monroy Montes.

Downs denies Circle K change of liquor license request

by FRANKIE JARRELL
The Ruidoso News Editor

Seven may be a lucky number, but it wasn't that helpful when Circle K tried to move the seventh liquor license in Ruidoso Downs from Prime Time to its convenience store on Highway 70.

After listening to more than a dozen people during a public hearing Monday, the Downs board denied a request from Circle K to move a liquor license so the store can add a liquor department.

In a two-to-one vote, trustees said no to the attorney and regional manager who were on hand to ask for their approval. Trustees Judy Miller and Ray Hayhurst cited the detrimental affects on the health, welfare, public safety and morals of Ruidoso Downs in blocking the move. Trustee Charlotte Craig voted to allow the move, and Trustee Margie Morales was absent.

Ruidoso Downs attorney Robert Beauvais, at the request of Mayor Joe Hayhurst, presided over the hearing, setting up ground rules that were agreed upon by the three attorneys present to speak both for and against moving the liquor license.

Prime Time has been out of business off and on for the past several years and the owner of its liquor license, Jim Wimberley, wants to sell it. Wimberley was represented at the meeting by attorney John Underwood who explained that, according to New Mexico law, a liquor license is property that can be sold.

State law allows for the moving of a liquor license within a municipality, but doesn't allow a new one to be moved in.

The Village of Ruidoso Downs, with a population of fewer than 1,000, has seven liquor licenses, and a room full of its citizens told the board that seven liquor establishments may be one too many for such a small village.

But attorney Linda L. Aikin of Santa Fe, representing Circle K, told the board that moving a license from a bar environment to the pro-

Council votes against motorized boats on Grindstone

by CHARLES STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

An attempt to allow electric trolling motors on Grindstone Lake Reservoir failed Tuesday as the Ruidoso Village Council voted not to change the lake's recreational ordinance.

The ordinance does not permit any motorized boats on the small lake, which is soon to become a major source of the village's drinking water.

Councilor J.D. James expressed his concern that any new boating enhancements could lead to uses that might pollute the lake.

Councilor Leon Eggleston was the only dissenting vote.

The council denied an appeal by William Blaney to allow a 10-foot utility easement in lieu of an existing 30-foot easement through his property. Blaney expressed fears that the village, at a later date, may tear up his driveway.

The village plans to use the easement for its Grindstone property and water distribution for the Grindstone treatment plant.

Village planning and zoning chairman Mike Radziewicz told the council that every property owner in Ruidoso has a driveway that crosses into the village right of way.

"At some time, the power company or the water and sewer department can dig up any of our driveways. It's a village power and we need this," said Radziewicz.

He said the concern by the water department was for future lines now being planned for the Grindstone treatment project.

Planner Richards said part of the village's purchase of the Grindstone land from the Federal Deposit Insurance Company was the use of the 30-foot easement for utility purposes.

Richards said that the village does not know at this time the status of the future distribution lines for Grindstone. He said the village should keep full easement potential to accommodate any expansion.

The council ruled that the planning and zoning did not err in denying the reduction of the easement as a condition of approving the replat.

Blaney won a hearing on another appeal for a replat for a property known as Blaney Land Company Tract.

The planning commission had approved a replat to subdivide that property with the condition that there be no further subdividing and water and sewer services be extended, as prescribed by ordinance.

Blaney considered the extension an unnecessary hardship.

The question of whether it was reasonable to require Blaney to extend the services, which would require a costly lift station, appeared enough cause for the village to allow a public hearing on the appeal June 28. Councilor Eggleston was the only dissenting vote.

Planner Richards raised the question of the propriety of allowing a subdivision without access on a public dedicated street constructed to village standards.

The commission two years ago granted the approval for the Blaney tract behind the Forest Lawn Cemetery to be divided into two parcels, accessed by a private driveway.

That driveway, according to Richards, is a narrow one-lane private drive with excessive high grades. He said the higher the population density in that subdivision, the more dangerous the situation becomes.

In another matter, village manager Jackson read portions of the attorney general's opinion, dated April 22, that outlined reimbursement of advertising expenses for approved special events using lodgers' tax money.

Jackson said lodgers' tax money, as other public money, must be made in compliance with the state's anti-donation clause; the private person or organization must provide consideration; and that grants, without a contract for services, are not permissible.

Jackson told the council that the new Convention Visitor Bureau arrangement being sought would eliminate a lot of the problems associated with lodgers' tax being dispersed for special events.

He said the next Lodgers Tax Advisory Board meeting is June 21 and at that time, applications will be examined for proper compliance with the new ruling.

Village clerk Tammie Maddox told the council that $30,000 in Lodgers' tax money is usually set aside for special events.

In other business, the council: —approved a new restaurant beer and wine license for Ciao Bella, Inc.

The restaurant is located in the building formerly known as Arturos, near the corner of Mechem and Sudderth Drive.

—approved a chamber of commerce request for contract extension for one year.

—rejected bids for computers for the police and finance department. The council received information that a component of the computers under consideration for purchase would soon be obsolete. They will rebid the items.

—approved a $33,000 contract with Jack Johnson Excavation from Alamogordo for wastewater system improvements, infiltration and repairs.

—approved a bid for aggregate that contained specifications that would allow better adherence with the village's hot mix plant.

Under consent agenda regular items, the council approved:

—an amendment to the joint powers agreement between the village and the department of public safety for the receptionist position at the police courts complex.

—a contract renewal for janitorial services with Jim Hodson.

—Sierra Blanca Regional improvements authorizing Leeds Hill Herkenhoff to proceed with the project.

—Resolution 94-15, the final amendment to the 1993-1994 fiscal year budget.

lead," said Commissioner Bill Schwettmann.

"It's no big trick to find violators," Commissioner L. Ray Nunley said. "I saw four driving down the highway last Sunday. If the sheriff issues the citations, we'll take them to court. I think that will get their attention."

"We need to get the attention of the villages too," Howell said.

He noted that Sergeant Lanny Maddox of the Ruidoso Police Department gave a good presentation to the authority board about a joint effort through Crime Stoppers, offering rewards of $50 to $100 for tips leading to convictions. Unfortunately, the message apparently never was passed through the police department, Howell said. When he referred a person, who had written down a license number and was willing to cooperate under the Crime Stoppers program, to the police he was told by someone in the department that an officer would have to witness the illegal act. However, that's not the situation and Maddox has since assured him the reward system is in place. A license plate number or photograph will help in prosecution.

"No one saw the fellow doing the graffiti (that appeared on several buildings in Ruidoso), but they arrested him," Nunley pointed out.

"We need to prosecute to the limit of the law or not do it at all," Howell said. "A high fine and making the violator clean up some of the messes left by others may drive the message home."

"I had people threaten to sue because of the messy dumpster sites close to their homes."

He suggested changing the ordinance to give the authority enforcement powers.

"We can move the dumpsters away from the worst areas and see what happens," Schwettmann said.

"We already have given the manager the OK to abandon those more isolated and abused dumpster sites and move them to a more visible area," Howell said. "We informally did that at the last authority meeting."

"This is an enforcement issue," Montes said. "If we don't enforce our laws, we have nothing."

"I agree," Howell said. "We don't need another ordinance, just to enforce the one we have."

"I can excuse the bears for the messes they make. They aren't trying to drag in a couch or mattress."

On Sunday, Howell told The Ruidoso News that a sheriff's deputy investigated several sites for clues about the identity of the illegal dumpers and found several solid leads. He added, "We're looking forward to making some charges stick."

"We have a committee in place (appointed by the Lincoln County Solid Waste Authority on which Schwettmann serves and Commissioner Wilton Howell is chairman) that is to come up with ideas, whether they will do anything...."

Howell said he had received a call from a resident complaining about couches, a computer printer, a mattress and other large items dumped around several recycling bins at Cedar Creek.

"I told her not to call the solid waste authority, call the sheriff's department," he said. "If it's in the dumpster, we'll haul it off. But if it's lumber, carpet and couches, our ordinance calls for up to $1,000 fine."

"I'd like the sheriff's office to spend more time enforcing the ordinance. It's costing the people of this county a lot of money, $50,000 to $100,000 a year to pick up this mess."

Since the ordinances are passed by the county and by the different villages, only their employees can be designated to enforce them. That rules out authority general manager Joe Lewandowski, Howell said.

"The record is closed," he said.

Miller made the moving to deny, Hayhurst seconded and the request was denied in a voice vote of two to one.

In other regular business Monday, the board:

—OK'd mobile home variances for Ramon Nava and Prospero Gonzales.

—Heard an update on chamber activities from director Joan Bailey and got a special invitation, and tickets, to Fiesta de Ruidoso, which is taking place in Ruidoso Downs this weekend.

—Approved a budget resolution to balance accounts.

—Voted to accept the Blue Cross-Blue Shield proposal for insurance for village employees. Municipal clerk Lesann Weibrecht said she and a committee rated the three bids before recommending Blue Cross-Blue Shield.

The village pays 60 percent and employees pay 40 percent.

—Reviewed issues relating to the Laceywell property, with attorney Beauvais saying that he wants to be sure the entire board is kept up-to-date on this issue involving an easement.

Attorney Richard Hawthorne is representing the Laceywells, and his letter to the village attorney was provided to board members.

"Mr. Laceywell, as a resident of Ruidoso Downs, feels that the entire governing body should be included in the decision making process. However, given the Mayor's stated position, and the fact that his brother and Ms. Craig will vote with him, we do not wish to waste our time and the board's time in addressing the board," wrote Hawthorne in his letter.

At it again, illegal dumpers piled couches, mattresses, a computer printer and other items in front of bins at Cedar Creek. The site was cleaned a few days earlier and the regular dumpsters still had plenty of room for garbage. The illegal trash blocks access to the recycling bins. Lincoln County commissioners are fuming.

Super cleanup called super costly

Earlier estimates of costs connected to the Superfund clean up of the old Cimarron Mill in Carrizozo are dwarfed by the actual figure of $2.7-million recently released by the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA).

Ralph Forsythe and others concerned about what they consider the unjustified high cost of cleaning up cyanide contamination at the mill, have been trying to obtain an accurate accounting for years.

Last month, Lynn Brandvold, senior chemist with the New Mexico Bureau of Mines & Minerals, told a group of geologists in Ruidoso that she doubted whether the site needed to be cleaned up to the magnitude undertaken by the EPA. She pointed out several alternatives along the way that were passed up by the government.

She pointed out that the project still isn't complete and the area will have to be monitored for 10 years.

An itemized cost summary report dated December 21, 1993, sent to Forsythe by the office of U.S. Senator Pete Domenici (R-New Mexico), gives a brief glimpse into how the government spent nearly $3-million on the mill site.

Regional payroll costs are listed at $131,844; indirect EPA costs at $342,834; a Camp, Dresser & McKee alternative remedial contract at $1,073,352; and field investigation at $69,667.

A total of $134,574 was included for the financial cost summary, and the New Mexico Environment Department received $30,4967. Technical assistance included two items, $49,690 and $12,621, both to Ecology and Environment Inc.

Miscellaneous expenses, not broken down or explained, are tagged at $797,719.

Smaller expense items were listed as: $445 for headquarter payroll costs, regional travel costs at $16,003, headquarter travel costs at $388, two additional remedial contracts at $10,479 and $18,730; $25,390 to Riedel Environmental Services Inc. for emergency removal cleanup; $13,038 for Environmental Services Assistance Teams; $52.76 to the U.S. Department of Justice; $22.44 and $10.80 to Airborne Express/Federal Express; and two more technical enforcement support contracts at $18,996 to Camp, Dresser & McKee and $13,577 to Metcalf & Eddy.

The costs from when the mill first was cited in October 1980 through November 1993 totalled $2,759,936.

Forsythe finally secured the report by going through Domenici's office.

Liquor

tected and regulated world of convenience store liquor sales would be a benefit to the village rather than a detriment.

She, along with Circle K regional operations manager Carl Bottenus of Albuquerque, described the organization's strong ties and commitment to New Mexico. Bottenus, who has been working with the state on ways to cut down on alcohol abuse in this state, told of plans to keep hard liquor behind the counter, group beer and wine in an area distant from the front door, but in view of the clerk, and to ID every liquor customer.

As far as safety, Bottenus said Circle K stores are connected to an interactive video security system. He also described plans to improve the Ruidoso Downs Circle K's parking lot lighting.

But the citizens who gathered to oppose allowing liquor sales at the convenience store near the Ruidoso Downs Post Office were adamant, and they took turns telling the board why.

Norman Wheeler, co-owner with his wife, Gayle Wheeler, of Ruidoso Downs Liquor Store, presented into evidence a petition opposing liquor sales at Circle K, saying it was signed by 600 people.

Wheeler said he and his wife had been in business in Ruidoso Downs for 27 years.

Wheeler said he doubts the wisdom of selling liquor and gas at the same location, and later in the meeting Aikin and Underwood both mentioned that that might be stopped after next year's legislative session.

Wheeler also worried that the liquor store might pose a problem with traffic at the Downs post office.

"Several older people pick up their mail three or four times a day," said Wheeler. "Someone's going to get killed going in or out of Circle K. One of them 18-wheelers is going to run flat over someone."

Before the lineup of speakers, including attorney Dave Thomsen representing the Wheelers, the concerns listed included underage drinking, shoplifting, traffic, damage to long-time village businesses, bootleggers, loitering and gangs.

Marie Vaughn, owner of Hollywood Inn, said she has been in business for 18 years and never had a citation against her license. She recalled when the state allowed only one liquor license per 1,000 population, wondering why a little village like Ruidoso Downs could legally have seven.

Jane Spall said DWIs are on the increase and showed a graph provided by the Downs police.

Mayor Hayhurst clarified the talk of seven liquor license, noting that the racetrack and the Sports Theater use one license, and they only use one at a time.

"If you own a license within a community, you have a right to sell that license," said attorney Underwood, noting that the board had only three reasons to consider — zoning, citations against the license and the health and welfare issues.

Beauvais closed the hearing after asking if anyone else had anything to add, and then told the board they had 30 days in which to make a decision, but the only things they could consider would be the testimony already given.

Tribe-utilities near agreement

Representatives of the Mescalero Apache Tribe and of the 32 utilities that hope to store highly radioactive nuclear waste on the tribe's reservation met this week to hammer out details of a legal agreement.

After government sources dried up, Mescalero officials turned to the private sector for funding to study and possibly create a temporary storage facility for waste generated by nuclear power plants.

An Associated Press story Wednesday quoted Scott Northard, project manager for Northern States Power Co., as saying that work is progressing well on the agreement.

"We've put together detailed business plans," he said.

A planning group of four committees is examining aspects of the project, tentatively planned for the Three Rivers section of the reservation at the foot of Sierra Blanca in the Tularosa Basin of Otero County.

The representatives will continue to meet over the summer on the legal organization, licensing and regulatory requirements, waste transportation and facility design.

Once agreement is reached and if the project is approved by the Tribe, the principals will move to create an entity to manage the project, Northard said.

Securing the necessary federal regulatory approval is expected to take up to seven years, especially because elected state and congressional officials oppose the project.

Donnybrook ends in double fines

Ruidoso residents engaged in a fight at a Rotary enchilada dinner last April at the high school were found guilty in municipal court.

Lawrence Michael "Mike" Jones, 33, was found guilty of assault, disorderly conduct and battery by Municipal Judge Mike Line. He was ordered to pay $533 in fines and court costs.

Joseph Duquette, 39, was found guilty of assault and ordered to pay $111 in fines and court costs.

The altercation allegedly began when Duquette said he was kicked in the heels while standing in line waiting for his enchilada dinner.

Reportedly, Jones hit Duquette in the mouth three times after Duquette called Jones a "nigger."

Duquette refused to fight inside the high school, and police reports indicate he told Jones to take the fight outside.

According to the law, the use of fighting words which by their very utterance are likely to cause an average person to fight is considered an assault.

Dad's Day concert set at Tinnie's

The Fifth Annual free Father's Day Concert is set for Sunday on the veranda at Tinnie Silver Dollar Restaurant.

The performance will begin at 2:30 p.m. June 19, at the restaurant about 25 miles east of Ruidoso. The event is a part of the summer free concert series sponsored by the restaurant and is also done in conjunction with the Chamber of Commerce's Fiesta de Ruidoso.

The theme for the free concert and dance will be "Fiesta." Latin jazz and salsa music will be provided by "Spice of Life." Spice recently opened the city of El Paso summer concert under the stars series before an audience of 10,000. Members will include musical director Michael Francis on piano. Juan Lechuga, bass and lead vocalist, Albert Aragothes, vocals and bongo drums, Luis Maisenet, conga, Willie Hernandez, timbales and lead vocalist, Dave Reyes, trombone and lead vocalist, Jimmy Olivas, tenor saxophone, Marty Olivas, trumpet and Dora Reyes, lead vocalist.

In the past, Tinnie's Father's Day concerts have set restaurant attendance records. Restaurant general manager Maxine Francis says there is plenty of parking, but advises guests to arrive early to be assured seating for the event. She reminds patrons that there will be playground spaces for the children.

The concert/dance begins at 2:30 and lasts until 6:30 and is held on the covered veranda where the possibility of summer rain does not pose a threat.

The Silver Dollar restaurant will be serving a special Father's Day lunch menu from 11:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. with dinner served from 5 p.m. to 10 p.m. inside the restaurant. Reservations are recommended and may be made by calling 653-4425.

Refreshments and appetizers will be available on the veranda during the concert. Several drawings for prizes are scheduled during the afternoon. They include a dinner for two at the Silver Dollar and a Father's Day gift basket from Rio Bonito Basket Company.

KSFX, Coors Extra Cold and Tinnie Silver Dollar, along with Champion Outdoor Sports, are teaming up to bring Roswell, Tinnie and Ruidoso one of the years most electrifying major impact promotions.

A drawing will be held for a chance to win a Harley Davidson motorcycle in Albuquerque on September 11. Participants each will receive one of 274 keys to be given away. Only one will fit the Harley Davidson.

Sierra Blanca D.A.R. Extends Honors at Cookout
The Sierra Blanca chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution held a cookout on June 12 at the home of Mrs. Marie Line in Ruidoso.

Mrs. Dorothy Bailey, regent of the local chapter, read tributes to Nell Trout and Dan Storm.

Gloria Fogerson presented memorial plaques to Nell and Dan. Nell's plaque reads "Excellence in Community Service Nell F. Trout. She is an inspiration to all of us. Her dedication to community is demonstrated daily by her untiring contributions to the local quality of life."

Nell is one of the organizers of the hospital thrift shop. She has completed 18,500 hours of volunteer service to the hospital auxiliary and is president of the United Methodist Women of the Community Methodist Church.

The plaque presented to me reads: "Flag Day, June 14, 1994, Daniel Agnew Storm who

The kind spirit shown by these ladies will remain with me always and I will treasure this memorial plaque forever.

Gift of the Flag Pole

Today, a half hour before high noon on the eve of Flag Day, I look out at the flag floating in the breeze.

And I remember how Ken Green, former

Wright put together a flag pole. Then Rick Tate brought it down and Ken Green, Mel O'Reilly and sons Mel Dylan, Colm Bryan and Patrick Brendan put it up.

Ever since then when I raise the flag in the morning, I hope those driving by from coast to coast will see it and be thankful.

So you can see what a responsive chord the D.A.R. ladies have struck in my heart.

It was an honor to be present at the tribute paid that great Christian lady, Nell Trout, and to be a guest of those excellent ladies, the members of the Sierra Blanca Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Those Present

Those present were Dorothy Bailey, June Rawley and husband Walter, Florence Durand and husband Eugene, Marcile Stewart and daughter Sally Kitts, Gloria Fogerson, Marie Line, Kathy Travis and husband Dave, Murtie Yoder, Nell Trout and husband Paul, Leota Pflugsten and husband Peg and Evelyn Jenkins.

Families enjoy an afternoon on the veranda of Tinnie Silver Dollar Restaurant with a live band, at left, and delicious food.

White Sands trip

White Sands National Monument presents three special evening programs next week, each focusing on an astronomical theme.

Tuesday, June 21, is the summer solstice and a slide program entitled "Astronomy of the Ancient Americans"

Wednesday and Thursday, June 22 and 23, are Full Moon nights. Wednesday's evening program is entitled "More than Just a Pretty Phase: A Look at the Moon and its Significance in our Lives."

Evening programs begin at 8:45 each night and will be preceded at 7 p.m. by a ranger-guided Sunset Stroll Nature Walk. The Sunset Stroll will focus on the plants and animals that live within the dune field and will provide an opportunity for photographing the dunes at sunset.

Visitors will be able to enter the park until 10 p.m. on the two Full Moon nights and must exit the park by 11 p.m. For more information, please call 479-6124.

Hatchery celebrates fish week

Mescalero National Fish Hatchery staff invited the youngest anglers out for some free "fishing" in the fish-filled pond during National Fishing Week.

Youngsters from 10 months old up to six, aided by parents and friends, dropped their lines in the water and pulled out their limit of skillet-sized trout.

This, the third annual free fishing day at the hatchery, was a huge success, according to Robert Burns, assistant manager of the facility.

The fish that were provided free to the young fishing enthusiasts were full-grown for the Mescalero plant which places a half million rainbow trout a year in lakes, mostly in New Mexico.

Burns and his staff, besides handing out the miniature fishing gear, providing bait and helping their guests fish, also cooked up hot dogs and served cold drinks provided by Furr's.

Ruidoso cyclist wins national title

Opening day of the U.S. National Cycling Championships Sunday in Seattle was golden for Ruidoso rider Clay Moseley, 22, of Team Shaklee, as he won the men's 40 kilometer individual time trial for his first national title.

Moseley's winning time was 52 minutes, 3 seconds, edging out Shaklee teammate Kent Bostick of Albuquerque, cycling's "ageless wonder." Bostick, 40, is a ten time national champion. He finished in 52 minutes, 22 seconds.

The day turned into a Shaklee sweep as world champion Rebecca Twigg won the women's time trial title in 57 minutes, 17 seconds, while her home town Seattle fans cheered her on. It was the 14th national title of Twigg's career.

Beating the legendary Bostick gave Moseley's first title an ironic twist. "It was a case of the student beating the teacher," said Moseley. "Kent's taught me a lot about technique, training and nutrition, and he helped bring me on to Team Shaklee this year, so I owe a lot to him."

The 40 kilometer course, run on a highway express lane, gave some riders trouble with its rolling hills, but Moseley said he found it a smooth ride. Colby Pearce of Boulder, Colorado finished third in the men's race. Eve Stephenson of Boulder and Karen Kurreck of Cupertino, California followed Twigg in the women's event.

During their "race against the clock," the Shaklee riders drank Performance sports drink and ate Carbo-Crunch bars for endurance. Shaklee, a San Francisco-based vitamin and nutritional supplement manufacturer, has sponsored a men's cycling team since 1988, and a women's team since 1991.

Happiness is looking at your first fish like Joshua Jarrell, top, sitting on grandpa Bud's lap. Jaime Arenas of Alamogordo assists. Or waiting for that fish like Gregory Burns, right, or Vanessa Burns. Or holding that fish like Danny McNeal.

Fishing report

In the southeast area of the state, anglers seem to be having better luck using green power bait.

At Alto Lake, some trout are being taken on green power bait.

Fishing is best in the early mornings or late evenings at Bonito Lake. Anglers are using a combination of green power bait, worms and salmon eggs. Department crews have stocked 3,378 good-sized rainbow trout at the lake and another 200 at Fort Stanton.

At Grindstone, crew planted more than 2,200 pan-sized rainbow trout. The fishing is good using green power bait and salmon eggs.

Anglers should try using salmon eggs and worms for trout.

National motorcycle convention meets here

For the past 24 years, Ruidoso has rolled out the red carpet for touring motorcyclists. And that tradition will continue in 1994, as the American Motorcyclist Association's Western National Road Riding Convention comes to the Ruidoso Civic Events Center September 21-25.

According to a news release, thousands of motorcyclists are expected to attend the event, which is sponsored by the Golden Aspen Rally Association and is part of the AMA/Dunlop Elite Touring Series of road-riding events for 1994.

Featured will be numerous activities for riders and their families, including self-guided motorcycle tours of scenic and historic sites near Ruidoso, the Ski Apache Resort, Lincoln National Forest, White Sands National Monument, Carlsbad Caverns and the towns of Alamogordo, Las Cruces and Roswell.

In town, riders will enjoy western hospitality with a chuckwagon dinner theater, non-denominational church services, a night-time motorcycle light show and parade through downtown Ruidoso, live music, exhibitions, Native American demonstrations, a trade show and awards ceremonies.

For more information, contact Ron Andrews of the rally association at 257-4031.

Feds fuss over millions lost in gold-mineral royalties

by DIANNE STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Government officials have known for decades that an 1872 mining law blocks American taxpayers from collecting royalties on gold and other minerals mined on public land that has been claimed by private companies.

At least four such mines operate in Lincoln County, according to Al Pack of the realty section of the State Division of Land and Minerals.

The situation with the mines law blew up last month when Interior Secretary Bruce Babbitt found himself hog-tied by its provisions. He was forced by the court to turn over title to lands containing more than $10-billion in gold to a domestic subsidiary of a foreign corporation.

According to Stephanie Hanna of the Bureau of Land Management's office in Washington D.C., although the gold is on federal lands and owned by the American people, "Taxpayers will receive no royalties for the minerals. The U.S. treasury will receive less than $10,000 in fees from Canadian-based Barrick Goldstrike Mines, Inc."

And it's all legal. Some government officials don't think the law is all that bad. They say the state and federal governments benefit in many ways from land claimed for mining.

Procedure

Barrick applied for the patents in the spring of 1992. The Bush Administration accelerated consideration of the application under a pilot program to expedite the patenting process. Secretary Bruce Babbitt ended this program upon taking office. Later, in 1993, Barrick sued the Interior Department, claiming Babbitt was dragging his heels in signing the patent. A federal judge directed Babbitt to transfer the land by June 20 of this year, unless there was cause for denial.

"This is the biggest ripoff since the Yankees stole Babe Ruth from the Red Sox for pocket change," said Babbitt after signing the mineral patent. "And it's the biggest gold heist since the days of Bruce Cassidy."

"But these folks (obtained) it fair and square."

Not the way it seems

Robert Eveleth of the New Mexico Bureau of Mines said the news release from Babbitt is "political rhetoric from the BLM (Bureau of Land Management)." It represents the viewpoint of environmentalists, including the secretary, he said.

"By the time the land is patented, a company like Barrick has invested several tens of millions dollars finding and testing the source," he said. After that, money generated by the mining operation creates a payroll that is taxed by the federal and state governments, generates taxable corporate income, profit to stockholders that can be taxed, is funneled into local services and purchases of equipment.

"The government realizes $500-million without risking a cent," Eveleth said. "And that without considering the multiplier effect on the local economy, which usually is cited at seven times the original figure."

"I really get on my high horse when they give out less than half truths. The average person on the street just doesn't realize the whole picture. If fact, the government receives a tremendous benefit. I'm trying to develop numbers now, because I'm constantly told that tourism is non-polluting industry, which is untrue. The gross receipt (sales) tax generated by tourism is a drop in the bucket to what the state collects from the extraction industry."

Not enough payment

Leon Panetta, director of the Office of Management and Budget, said, "Sometimes issues are fairly simple. At the time of extraordinary fiscal constraints on government, a long outdated law is forcing Secretary Babbitt to sign over to a foreign based company, the rights to $10-billion worth of taxpayer-owned gold for less money than they charge National Basketball Association (NBA) players for fighting during a game."

"This has turned from a needed incentive into a multi-billion dollar ripoff and it has to stop."

The law that allows such abuses is called the Mining Law of 1872. Under its provisions, Babbitt was forced to turn over for $5 or less per acre, title to public land containing valuable hardrock mineral deposits. The fixed price was set in 1872 and has never changed.

"The land passes from public to private ownership in a two-stage process of patent certification," the Secretary explained. "Federal mining laws classify nonfuel minerals as locatable, leasable or salable. Only locatable mineral deposits may be staked and claimed under the Mining Law of 1872 as amended. This includes such hardrock minerals as gold, silver, copper, platinum and uranium."

Babbitt emphasized that Barrick is playing by the rules. "Unfortunately, those rules say they don't need to pay their fair share," Babbitt said.

The company is following the law signed by President Ulysses S. Grant.

Barrick's seven patents, totalling about 1,800 acres near the northeastern Nevada town of Elko, are estimated to produce 30 million ounces of gold.

Correction under way

Congress is trying to correct the situation, Babbitt said.

"Reform bills have passed both houses, and we expect a conference committee to begin discussions soon," he said.

Two previous attempts for reform were stopped with the threat of veto by the two former Administrations, he said.

"Today, Congress can act, knowing this Administration is steadfast in its commitment to true reform of our mining laws," Babbitt said.

"There will be some who continue to push for delay, but I say 122 years is long enough. It's time for a change."

Both Houses of Congress have called for royalties on gold mined on federal lands.

The House bill sets a 9 percent "net smelter return," which is based on the gross value of the mineral concentrate produced from the lease, as opposed to the value of the final refined product.

A bill passed by the Senate calls for a 2 percent profits royalty.

While the 1872 Mining Law doesn't permit royalties to be assessed on the profits of hardrock mineral operations, royalties are paid by many other industries.

For example:

—a 12.5 percent royalty is paid on oil and natural gas developed on federal lands.

—a 12.5 percent royalty is charged for surface mined coal on public lands. An 8 percent royalty is charged for coal mined underground.

—many states also currently charge royalties for gold mining on state lands. Royalty rates on state owned land in New Mexico run from 2-5 percent, Colorado 4-10 percent, Arizona 2-8 percent and Utah, 2-10 percent.

—Montana charges a royalty equivalent to 5 percent of the market value of the gold.

—California charges 10 percent of the gross selling price of the gold, less certain allowable charges for transportation and processing.

"Mining companies pay royalties to everyone else," Babbitt said. "They pay royalties to the states, territories, private land owners and to other mining companies; everybody but Uncle Sam."

Because the mining industry plays an essential role in the Western economy, he's taken a reasonable approach, especially when compared to the royalties proposed by the House and Senate-passed bills with those paid by oil, gas and coal industries, Babbitt said.

"Putting Uncle Sam on equal footing with everyone else will not threaten the industry or the region's economy," Babbitt said. "It will mean mining on federal lands will no longer be a giveaway and will instead be based on the same economics that drive mining on private lands."

Babbitt outlined the criteria that would constitute genuine reform. They include that:

—taxpayers must receive a fair return for the use of their resources

—strong, but fair, provisions must be included to ensure protection of the environment from mining activities

—a program financed by revenue from the industry must be provided to clean up abandoned hardrock mines

—claimants must pay an annual claim maintenance fee to curb speculation

—the patenting giveaways must end

—a suitability process, allowing for certain types of potential mine locations to be deemed unsuitable, must be provided that would ensure both preservation of sensitive resources and certainty for an industry that requires large up-front investments.

Local mines

Based on information from "Mines, Mills and Quarries in New Mexico" compiled by Kay S. Hatton of the Mining and Minerals Division of New Mexico Energy, Minerals and Natural Resources Department in Santa Fe, four mines operate in Lincoln County.

Helping Hatton prepare the study also was the New Mexico Bureau of Mines and Mineral Resources of the State Institute of Mining and Technology in Socorro.

The Helen Rae Mine, a gold and silver mine in Nogal, is owned by the American Lode Corp. Listed as under development and as a private mineral estate, the local operator is Marlow Sharpe.

"I endorse Bob's statements one hundred percent," Sharpe said of Eveleth viewpoint. "I'm in no way in the position of a Barrack, but the thing I argue with is the $10-billion figure. This is a totally misleading dollar figure to try to overwhelm the public."

"It's hard to compare it with something, but the $10-billion is gross value. Compare it to the net value, deducting the costs and you get a totally different figure."

"I'm almost 70 years of age. The Helen Rae has never operated while I've owned it. Since 1954, I've spent a lot of money trying to develop it, to drain the water that stopped it being mined in 1920s."

"I have reason to believe valuable minerals are left. It was never mined out. It closed at the death of the owner/operator in 1922 and then water came in from a neighboring mine and it has never successfully produced since."

Sharpe said the land was patented during a time when it was easy.

"No way could we have held the estate together without a patent," Sharpe said. "It is a protective process. People don't realize the comparison between mining and an inventor. A person spends the greater part of his lifetime developing an invention, invests his money and the government grants him a patent to protect that investment. To me, the money that mining puts in, with no assurance of any return, is why the government gives the miner protection to recover that investment."

With an inventor, the government gets money back with the creation of a new company and millions spent putting the product into production, he said. If the product is successful, millions of dollars will be paid back in property, payroll and income taxes.

"A mining company does exactly the same thing in developing a mine," Sharpe said.

"In the west, there is little to develop other than natural resources. I feel it's vital to keep the land open for development of those resources. My big regret is that our fortunes are tied to the people who do not have a vital interest in the West, controlled by the population and power structure of the East."

"Those people don't realize that at one time, all that beautiful farmland and even parts of cities were in the public domain and then the land was moved to private ownership. Now they want to maintain the public land here for their own playground."

Gold is not a frivolous product, as some people contend, he said. It is used for technology, as well as jewelry. It is the basis of world exchange and still the only item of exchange that retains its value.

"I retired 10 years ago to work on this mine on what I thought was a reasonable level of living and right now I'm fighting to sustain. Unlike printed money, gold is irreplaceable and you can't print more," Sharpe said.

"Secretary Babbitt surely is not representing the Western viewpoint and what's good for New Mexico, Colorado and Arizona. We don't have enough water to develop many industries."

Other mines in Lincoln County include:

—the Ortega Mine, a surface gallium mine in Bragg Canyon, is situated near White Oaks with headquarters in San Antonio. It also is listed as under development with a 10 ton per day capacity and a federal mineral estate.

—Monjeau Mining and Materials Inc. in Ruidoso is listed as the operator of Silver Contact No. 8 Mine, a gold and silver operation in the Angus area north of Ruidoso.

The status is listed as intermittent, mineral estate and surface land as federally-owned. Hugh Johnson of Ruidoso is listed as contact.

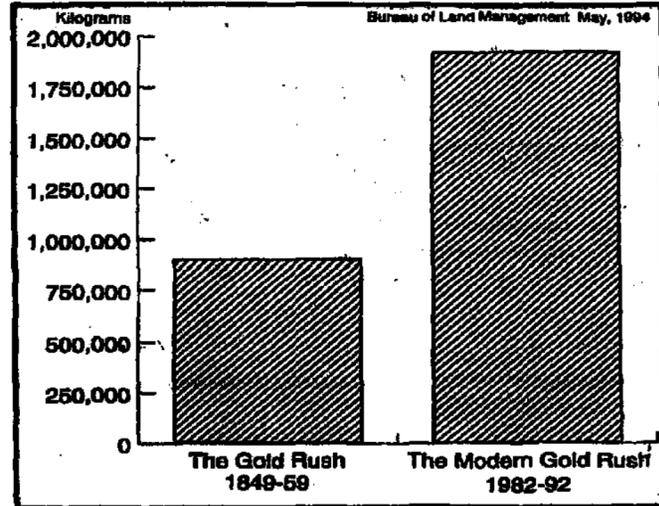

—the Warner Gulch Mine and Mill is listed as a placer gold operation in the Jicarillo Mountains owned by American Eagle Mining in Englewood, New Mexico, Darrel Mercer as agent.

A surface mining operation, the status is listed as active 11 miles southeast of Ancho on Forest Road 72.

The mineral estate is owned by Jessie Voss of Oklahoma City. The land is part of the U.S. Forest Service.

—Carl Dodson of United Mineral in Socorro is listed as the operator on the Lincoln Gold and Tungsten placer mine in Baxter Gulch. The mine is listed as under development.

—an intermittent iron mine listed as Smokey Mine, situated on forest service land near Capitan.

A graph from the Bureau of Land Management indicates how current U.S. Gold production from 1982-92 compares with the earlier gold rush of 1849-59.

First To Score, Treacherously highlight Rainbow Derby trials

Ruidoso Derby winner First To Score and multiple grade I winner Treacherously top a classy bunch of 49 3-year-olds set to go to post in five trials for the Grade I $25,000-added Rainbow Derby, Friday at Ruidoso Downs.

The 440-yard trials will be run as the first five races on the ten-race program.

The John Bassett-trained colt First To Score led from start-to-finish to defeat an excellent field of sophomores in the Grade I $55,561 Ruidoso Derby, May 30. The son of First Down Dash drew into the second trial which also includes Honkin Harry, the fastest qualifier to the Ruidoso Derby who ran fifth in the 400-yard final.

The third trial division attracted Treacherously and Pritzi Dash, the third place finisher in the Ruidoso Derby. Treacherously, last year's champion 2-year-old gelding, has had trouble repeating his sparkling record here last year when he won the first two jewels in the quarter horse triple crown.

The son of Runaway Winner has been the beaten favorite in both of his starts this year including a lackluster sixth in the Ruidoso Derby.

Treacherously was also defeated in the trials by Honkin Harry, but did post the second fastest qualifying time. Pritzi Dash was nosed out of the place position in the Ruidoso Derby by Coup De Main after winning his trial division on May 14.

The toughest trial heat should be the fourth, which drew Coup De Main, Special Phoebe and Ducky Fred, all solid stakes competitors. Coup De Main rallied late to finish only a half-length behind First To Score in the Ruidoso Derby and should be the probable favorite in the ten-horse field.

Special Phoebe ran a strong fourth in the Derby and is usually a threat to win every race she runs. Ducky Fred had a troubled trip in the Ruidoso Derby Trials and finished a disappointing fifth, but should be in top shape on Friday.

"Hollywood Nights" will be featured Friday night in the Ruidoso Downs Turf Club. The ten-race program from Hollywood Park commences at 8 p.m. and admission is free. Common-pool wagering will be offered on every race.

Off to the Winners Circle

Jockey Gilbert Villegas relaxes aboard Power Stretch on the way to the winners circle after capturing the Mescalero Apache Handicap June 11 in at three-length victory. Trained by Doyal Roberts and owned by Fletcher Hall Jr., Power Stretch took the early lead in the six furlong spring and never looked back to post the wire-to-wire win. The five-year-old New Mexico-bred son of Full Choke stopped the timer in 1:11.1 over a sloppy track. The winner's share of the purse was $1,170 for owner Hall of Capitan. Racing continues Friday at Ruidoso Downs.

Fillies fill field Saturday

Twelve of the top 3-year-old fillies on the grounds take center stage in the $10,000-added Aspen Cup Handicap, Saturday at Ruidoso Downs.

The full field of sprinters includes consistent stakes performers Kasi's Cash Queen and Countess Blue who share the honor of carrying top weight of 119 lbs. in the six furlong contest.

Saturday's 22-race card includes the ten-race program from Hollywood Park. The Hollywood feature is the Grade II $100,000-added Princess Stakes for 3-year-old fillies going 1 1/16th-miles.

The Brian Mayberry-trained miss Sardula heads a probable field of eleven in the Princess.

Kasi's Cash Queen, who resides in the Jon Arnett-barn made her last appearance in the $40,000 Azalea Stakes at Sam Houston Race Park on June 5.

The Our Michael filly closed late to finish a respectable fourth in the field of seven. Prior to that outing, Kasi's Cash Queen ran second in the Las Senoritas Handicap in Albuquerque. The filly was a solid runner-up behind A.J. Echo in the Kachina Stakes here last summer and looks like the one to beat in the Aspen Cup.

The speedy filly Countess Blue also commands respect in the Saturday feature after three solid stakes outings this spring. The Dallas Barton pupil placed in the Las Cruces Handicap at Sunland and also finished third in the Albuquerque Oaks in April. Her last performance was a fifth place finish in the Las Senoritas behind A.J. Echo and Kasi's Cash Queen in May.

The daughter of Blue Chocolate has blazing speed out of the gate and has won two of four starts going six furlongs.

The Doyal Roberts-charge Leisure Kite and the Joe Merrick-trained duo of Adelita Rose and Ruff Lode also must be given consideration in the Aspen Cup. Leisure Kite ran third against the boys in the Chamisa Breeders' Cup in Albuquerque and also won the Sunland Fall Futurity as a 2-year-old.

Adelita Rose comes into Saturday's race with a three-race win streak and Ruff Lode crushed a quality maiden field by 9 1/2-lengths in her Ruidoso debut.

Free jockey trading cards and autograph session

Ruidoso Downs will celebrate Father's Day with a jockey trading card giveaway and autograph signing session Sunday, June 19.

The first 1,500 fans through the turnstiles will receive a free pack of Jockey Star Trading cards and an 8X10 color photo of the local jockey colony. The photos can be used for autographs of the jockeys who will be seated at tables in the lower level of the grandstand near the customer service booth from 11 a.m. to 12:30 p.m.

In addition to the giveaway, a special print by renowned equine artist Fred Stone will be on sale for $35 in the Finish Line Mercantile.

Ford Ranger giveaway

The second of three 1994 Ford Ranger Sport Pickup's will be given away at Ruidoso Downs, June 26.

Entry blanks are available at more than 80 locations throughout Ruidoso, including at The Ruidoso News.

To enter the contest, fans must return their entry blanks to entry boxes at the racetrack.

Fans must be 18 years of age or older and have to be present to win the pickup.

Western ranchers continue fight over government grazing fees

by DIANNE STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Emotions are running high among Western ranchers in the continuing confrontation over grazing fees on public lands and related reform issues.

Rex Wilson reported to Lincoln County Commissioners Friday about recent meetings he has attended as a representative of the county.

"If there is no more response (by the government) to the comment period this time than last fall, people are ready to fight," Wilson said. "The government is going to have to take the land. The words blood and bloodshed were used quite often."

Native American tribes and many other groups are joining with ranchers to protest the heavy hand of government, he said.

In Arizona, the Constitutional Defense Council has been formed and received $1-million to fight federal government dominance, especially by the Bureau of Land Management under the Department of the Interior, he said.

"I know we have an interim land use plan in place, but we need a permanent one to protect ourselves," Wilson said. "We've got to be well informed to know what we can do ourselves. I hope the commissioners take the lead."

In connection with the public land use debate, Commissioner Stirling Spencer, a rancher running for the position of State Public Lands Commissioner, won unanimous support for a resolution asking the federal and state governments to prove they own the land they manage.

"It's not confrontational," Spencer said. "This is just to see if we're on a level playing field. We want to address basic issues not addressed by the federal government. I don't want to put us in a legal position of getting sued."

The resolution asks the federal and state governments to produce whatever documents of title they possess.

"If they can't show them, maybe it's something we want to look at," Spencer said. "It's not as harsh as (resolutions some other counties have approved). They (those counties) haven't had a response. It looks like (the government) may not have title."

The resolutions will be sent to the Department of Interior, the Department of Agriculture, the State Legislature and to the governor.

In another matter, the figures from the county's primary elections were declared official last Friday after adding one ballot cast in precinct three.

County Clerk Martha Proctor explained that a woman said she had requested, but never received, an absentee ballot. She was allowed to vote as absentee. The ballot was held until it could be checked against registration records.

"After that I destroyed the envelope so that the voter's identity would not be revealed," Proctor said.

The woman's votes were applied to the appropriate races. They didn't affect any outcomes.

She said the official numbers show that 48.3 percent of the registered Democrats and 46.7 percent of the Republicans turned out for the primaries.

The only significant problem at election time was transportation of the voting machines, Proctor said. She used the sheriff's horse trailer to move 25 machines for the June 7 election. She needs her own vehicle, Commissioner L. Ray Nunley said.

"It was my fault at budget time, because the old machines I just left in place (and she didn't think to request transportation)," Proctor said.

Commissioner Bill Schwettmann suggested instead of buying a vehicle, just renting a U-Haul for each election.

Nunley reminded commissioners that at least one election of some type is scheduled each year.

Chairman Monroy Montes asked Proctor to come back with a recommendation.

Commissioners also heard from emergency services director Maggi Bohks that about 20 landowners and irrigation ditch representatives attended a meeting at the rural events center last week to meet with state and local government officials regarding flood and hail damage from a storm that swamped Hondo Valley.

They were briefed on what they have to do to receive reimbursements for disaster expenses, including obtaining an Internal Revenue Service identification number and completing forms regarding damages. They were reminded that they can make temporary repairs to prevent further damage, but they should keep a record of all their expenses. They can receive up to 90 percent of their loss, but only on public property.

Private property will not be considered. Owners must rely on insurance and other agencies, such as Small Business Administration and Farmers Home Administration.

Montes said for some people in the valley, it was the first time they realized that EMS exists for other purposes than running ambulances.

"My role is really to prevent things like this, but it's hard to prevent an act of God," Bohks said. "After that, I'm to assist landowners."

In other action, the commission: —approved acceptance of a $115,000 grant for the White Mountain Drug Task Force from the New Mexico Department of Public Safety.

—learned that $81,000 from the State Legislature does not go to the county. It is to be divided among the villages of Capitan, Carrizozo and Ruidoso for street improvements, with the settlement of Lincoln also receiving a portion.

—tabled a decision on group insurance for county employees, because commissioners needed more time to analyze the proposal. Nunley said he is concerned about minimizing up front costs for employees.

—awarded an auction contract to Charles F. Dickerson Inc. of Fairacres, New Mexico. The company charges 5 percent commission on gross sales, plus 5 percent of the gross sales for advertising and expenses.

The competing company, Ben Jenkins Auctioneers of Carlsbad, charged a 7 percent commission on gross sales, plus up to $1,000 in advertising expense.

Montes said he is trying to line up other villages or government entities to expand the sale.

—pending successful fee negotiations, selected Architects West of Albuquerque to put together the design for remodeling of the Corona Senior Citizens Center.

The other two firms submitting were Environetics Incorporated of Santa Fe and Stanley J. French of Ruidoso.

The remodeling includes compliance with the Americans with Disabilities Act. (ADA).

Michael L. McCam, who is coordinating the project through the Southeastern New Mexico Economic Development District, said an architect is needed because walls will have to be moved to enhance space.

Nunley said he'd like to keep business at home, but accepted the choice of the committee that rated the applicants.

Schwettmann agreed that he likes to patronize local firms, but he noted if negotiations with the Albuquerque company fail to result in an acceptable fee, talks will begin with the next company in line.

"There's no use having a committee if you ignore their recommendations," he said.

—heard from Howard Shanks that the South Central Mountain Resource Development and Conservation district obtained a $13,000 grant for the village of Corona. Of that amount $11,000 remains and the government prefers it be spent on something concrete —were told by Shanks that the same group obtained a $10,000 grant for fairground improvements in Capitan. They received permission from the commission to use the money to purchase two acres of additional parking land to the east of the fairground.

Shanks said originally members thought the money would be used for restrooms, but when they were dropped from the plans, parking seemed to be another good use.

He said the association could handle the required fencing of the lot. A survey already has been completed.

"It's a real bargain at that price," Shanks said.

Commissioner Wilton Howell offered a motion to accept grant, which passed unanimously.

County attorney Alan Morel said the county now has clear title to fairground land, since a quiet title suit was successful.

Shanks said had hoped to have the project finished by July fourth, but that won't be possible.

"Maybe for next year," he said; although this summer is the big Smokey Bear Fiftieth Birthday celebration.

—told county road manager Bill Cupit to proceed immediately with bids on a water tank for the back of a truck used for the chip seal process. He is to leave open the delivery date.

"They can bid to deliver this thing in 20 years, if they want," Spencer said, adding that the delivery date can be part of deciding which bid is best.

"Let's not initiate an emergency and then call it something else," Montes said, referring to an emergency meeting called a few weeks ago to take action on the water tank. "Let's not stop the process. We can reject all the bids and go to a sole source, if necessary."

Parents characterize OBE as Big Brother approach

by DIANNE STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Fear that their schools are targeted for takeover by the federal government in concert with major industries has spurred the formation of parent groups across the country.

No where is the anti-government attitude stronger than in the West, where small ranching communities are taking the lead in resisting the movement they see as fostering an end to individualism.

In Lincoln County, the parents have attached a name to their fear. It's called outcome based education.

Five of the more outspoken Capitan opponents of some of the elements of President Bill Clinton's Goals 2000 education reform program and the related Outcome Based Education (OBE) organized a town meeting on the issue last week.

About 30 people showed up Thursday at the county fair building to hear what Floyd Goodloe, Cheryl Palko, Sherry Underwood, Angie Coke and Allison Thorne wanted to tell them. The bottom line message: get involved in your children's school system and stay vigilant for federal ulterior motives.

"To get out information is why we're here tonight," Goodloe said. "We're letting the government, principally the federal government, come in and tell us how to run our schools."

"We can no longer wait for school officials to tell us what's going on. We need to be involved with the decisions made and the curriculum implemented. We want to help our schools maintain good standards and set goals."

"The federal government is using the money it provides to shove philosophies and approaches down our throats."

Goodloe stressed that "the parents are not at odds with teachers, they want to support teachers."

"The three essential elements for a good education are students, teachers and parents," he said. "Parents and teachers are the most involved in preparing students for their step into real life. To do that, we must communicate, stay informed and be willing to be part of the process."

Defining outcome based education is not easy. It depends on who's doing the defining.

Family Watch out of Albuquerque calls OBE "the latest reform being advocated by educators to correct the deteriorating educational performance in the U.S." and links it to Clinton's "Goals 2000: Educate America Act," which will provide $400-million in federal matching grants for school reform.

The group says OBE is disguised under different titles such as Performance-Based Education, Re-Learning, Lifelong Learning, Education Reform, Education Restructuring, Education for the 21st Century, Mastery Learning, CommonCore Learning and Coalition of Essential Schools.

In New Mexico it's called the Standards for Excellence Student Outcomes, adopted by the State Board of Education in November 1992, which "are comprised of both literacies and attitudes/attributes," according to information from Family Watch.

Group spokesmen state that OBE essentially is the same as Professor Benjamin Bloom's Mastery Learning promoted more than 20 years ago and "quietly discarded as a failure."

"Mastery Learning is a method of manipulating students through behavior modification, based on B.F. Skinner's methods of repetitive reinforcement," they state.

Family Watch members see two of the major dangers as being that the outcomes pushed will reflect the "politically correct" views of the day and that the system is simply another way for the government to track students and compile information about their families and attitudes.

—Albert Zamora, associate superintendent for learning services with the State Department of Education, said, "In the Standards for Excellence, the State Board directs schools to set high expectations for students according to the 'student outcomes' set forth in the standards."

"In contrast to outcome accreditation, outcomes based education is an educational philosophy based on the assumption that all children can learn and succeed. It's approach...is to define clearly what students are to learn, provide them whatever time is needed for learning, then give them the opportunity to demonstrate what they have learned."

"Some critics of OBE are concerned that this approach imposes outcomes, particularly in the area of values, that may be inconsistent with the values of the family or community. Others question whether the outcomes are too vague or are not challenging for students."

"While these criticisms are certainly worthy of debate...at the school, district and state level, it is not the directive nor the intent...to require any specific model, philosophy or strategy of education for local school districts."

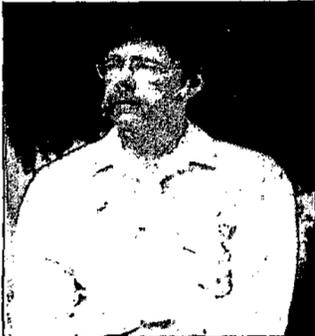

"Some schools and districts may find an OBE approach to be useful in reaching their locally established goals. However, OBE is an approach which school districts many adopt, partially adopt or not adopt in order to attain 'Standards for Excellence.'"

Zamora said the outcome based accreditation process proposed for school districts is based on several key changes.

The changes include a shift from an emphasis on measuring the "ingredients" of schools to measuring the results of student performance; shifting more responsibility for education to the local district and school to establish better balance between state and local accountability for student success; and reinforcing the need for community involvement in the education process.

Zamora stressed that the process encourages more family involvement in coordination with teachers and students.

FLOYD GOODLOE

—Teacher Peg Luksik of the Pennsylvania Parents Association, speaking against OBE in that state, said, "The movement is away from what we have and to OBE, which says the student must demonstrate something to be promoted. Now they receive grades depending on the measurable skills they can demonstrate. Under OBE, everyone gets an A or B however long it takes them, three days or three years."

"The shift is from the schools will teach to the child will demonstrate."

That situation could result in a classroom full of children functioning at different levels of demonstration. Remediation could go on for years and become too costly, she said.

But what bother opponents the most is what the child is suppose to demonstrate. They contend the government is trying to instill certain attitudes instead of conveying facts, skills and history. And the attitudes tend to be toward compliance, collectivism and conformity, not creativity and individuality.

"It is specific behaviors the child must demonstrate to meet goals, such as adaptability to change, ethical judgment and self-esteem," Luksik said. "They're called exit outcomes. They have set a standard of mastery. How much self-esteem is enough. They test to see and then they mediate through some curriculum to some way change the child's behavior to meet their standards."

"For citizenship...it's not factual knowledge," she said. "The government wants to know what the student thinks and believes, how he learns and what is the best way to change him. Your child will conform or won't move forward."

Luksik contended that big industries are driving the changes to produce a generation of good workers, also referred to as "human resource material" or "human capital."

She said related testing of attitudes and "psychological fitness" has been going on for years without the knowledge of parents. She cited several examples of parents who have challenged the tests after obtaining a copy of the questions.

Many state data banks contain information on students that include their physical health, access to their medical files, mental, psychological and fitness tests and the family's socio-economic situation, as well as details on teachers and textbook, Luksik said.

"They can show a link between a certain teacher, a textbook, the child's background and attitudes," she said.

"Even if the value taught is one we can agree on, should the state be able to set the standard test for it and dictate at what point a child passes?" she asked.

The goal, she insisted, is state and federal control.

Although they talk about local control and variables from district to district, "there's really only one plan, one set of outcomes, one set of goals," Luksik said. "You can write your own plans as long as it looks like this."

She added, "It's the role of the family, not the school, to mold a child's value system."

And that was one of the major points promoted by the Capitan parents.

Sherry Underwood, who home teaches her children, said that she has become involved because as a federal mandate eventually OBE will affect private schools and home schoolers.

"And I have concern for every child in the nation," she said.

"There are things happening that are not in the American tradition. I feel it is my battle too."

House Bill 6 contained many of the new educational provisions for Goals 2000. Although throughout the framework the term "voluntary," was used, U.S. Senator Peter Domenici (R-New Mexico) pointed out to his colleagues "that tradition has shown what begins as voluntary doesn't stay that way very long."

Underwood said she especially is worried about the power of an 18-member National Education Goals Panel, a board on which no educators will serve.

"Personally, I don't agree (with the concept of) a national school board," she said.

While school boards can resist direct federal intervention, to ease budget shortfalls, most districts eventually will become involved in some sort of federally-funded program, opening themselves up to federal dictates.

"It all boils down to money," she said. "Take it and you take OBE and federal goals."

Capitan school officials have been open and cooperative with parents who have asked to be involved, Underwood said.

Palko said she's concerned that tampering with experimental curriculums may force good teachers to quit the district.

Capitan teacher Ed Davis responded that while the phrase "thematic curriculum" being used to describe the approach at the district's new middle school may sound different, the emphasis still is tied to grades and achievement.

"It has nothing to do with OBE," Davis said. "We're not changing textbooks. The goals are tied to science, math, reading, English and grades will be given."

"The only thing we're trying to accomplish was actually started last February, is for teachers to work together in trying to educate our kids."

"Maybe, I don't know correct English and how to put together a research paper, so when students are doing papers in science, the English teacher will help."

"We need to know what thematic units mean," Goodloe said.

"Just that all teachers are encompassing a theme into their subjects," Davis said. "One week it may be spelling, the next punctuation."

"As long as they stay under the umbrella of what parents want it to be," Goodloe said. "I don't believe in a teacher talking about accepting alternate lifestyles in school. Leave that to the home."

Davis agreed that the search by school administrators for more money to ease the crunch does open up an avenue for more federal control.

(Superintendent) Diana Sonnamaker will look at ways to generate more money for the district and that could find us involved in some federal projects," he said. "The government is sitting there saying, 'We've got the money. How bad do you want it.'"

Former Capitan school board president Preston Stone, who is running for the county commission, told the parents that they voted on school board members to set policy. School administrators handle the daily operation of the district based on those policies and the teachers handle the classrooms.

"This school is blessed with more intelligent and sincere teachers than anywhere else in New Mexico," Stone said.

He cautioned the parents that they were walking a thin line.

"Be involved but don't come in with 200 people pointing fingers and demanding," Stone said of plans for the group to be on the agenda of the school board meeting at 7 p.m. tonight in the school library.

A FUN BLEND OF OLD AND NEW

Guevara promoted to assistant Lincoln County manager

by DIANNE STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

A new permanent title and more pay were approved Friday for Martha Guevara, who has taken over while Lincoln County operates without a county manager.

"To prevent any criticism, I would like to make it official that Martha be designated acting county manager until a new one is on board," said Commissioner L. Ray Nunley. "She not only has assumed the duties over the last 30 days, but will be responsible for bringing the new manager up to speed after the person is hired. I feel she needs to be compensated."

He proposed raising her status on the pay matrix two steps from 23F to 25F, which he said would amount to $100 a month more for a total increase of $1,341. But Monday, Guevara said she was scheduled in July to be a 22F for a salary of $28,306. The increase approved by the commission will amount to three steps from a 22F to a 25F, and will result in a $2,071 a year pay increase for a total salary of $30,377.

"I talked to Mr. Nunley after the meeting to give him the correct figures and he said 25F is where he intended me to be," Guevara told The Ruidoso News Monday.

When Nunley first proposed the increase, Commissioner Wilton Howell suggested that instead of "messing with the matrix," the commission should pay her retroactively the same salary being earned by county manager Andy Wynham at the time he quit and until a new manager is hired.

County attorney Alan Morel said retroactive pay would not be allowed.

"How about from today forward?" asked Chairman Monroy Montes.

Commissioner Stirling Spencer, who sits next to Guevara at the commission table, suggested a more moderate approach.

"I may be slapped by the woman sitting next to me, and no doubt she does a good job, but I feel the pay scale for a permanent county manager is a little robust in this case," he said. "In the past, we handled this as a bonus."

Commissioner Bill Schwettmann said it doesn't seem fair to pay Guevara the county manager's salary and then take it away from her.

"I think she deserves a merit step raise, something that she can count on from now on," he said. "I go along with Commissioner Nunley's step raise."

"A permanent raise?" Montes asked.

"Yes," Nunley said. "I've watched her work over the years and I think she does a lot more for the county than we realize."

Schwettmann suggested an amendment changing her title to assistant county manager instead of administrative assistant.

"It would make it a lot easier every time we get rid of a manager," Montes said.

Spencer voted alone against the amendment for the raise and assistant county manager title, but it passed 4-1. He went with the majority for the motion to temporarily name Guevara acting county manager.

Commissioners agreed that by their special meeting June 20, they will be ready to narrow the list of candidates for possible interviews.

Once the applicants have agreed to interviews, their names will become public.

"At least two people in the process specifically have asked that we not release their names, because they are currently employed," Montes said. "If they become finalists for interviews, we will tell them that the names must go public and it's up to them whether they want to continue the process."

Morel explained that although it is not a state law to withhold the names, the procedure is based on case law in a suit filed against the University of New Mexico by the Foundation for Open Government.

Schwettmann told The Ruidoso News Sunday that he hopes to have narrowed his preferences to six to eight applicants by the commission's meeting June 20.

In a closed session, the commissioners will try to match their lists to create mutually acceptable short list for interviews.

"I'm in the process now, and it's quite a process with that many applicants," he said.

The interviews also will be conducted out of the public eye in a closed session.

Howell took the opportunity of the manager discussion to job at Spencer, who has been campaigning for the office of State Public Lands Commissioner and had complained of being left out of deliberations on the hiring of the rural events center manager.

Spencer had told The News that he hoped someone let him know when the county manager was going to be hired so that he could be part of the process.

Noting that remark and Spencer's campaign travels, Howell held up a bumper sticker with the words, "Stirling, Phone Home."

Morel also reviewed aspects of the commission's contract to purchase the Super Select Sales Barn (now the county rural events center).

Several contingencies had been attached to the agreement. Commissioners agreed in a 4-1 vote that two had been met: an appraisal had been performed showing the value of the facility on U.S. 70 in Glencoe to be worth more than the $250,000 purchase price and permission from the State Engineer to use up to one million gallons of water from a domestic well already in place.

Commissioner Stirling Spencer voted against the motion.

Montes said that amount allocated should be adequate. Morel said if more water is needed, the county will have to buy more water rights.

Still to be satisfied are conditions that require approval by the Department of Finance and Administration of the sale contract and receipt of original site and building plans from the previous owners.

In his estimate while reviewing the condition of the building, architect Wayne Andrews set the value with the land at more than $700,000.

He is not a licensed appraiser, but why spend more money on another opinion, Nunley asked.

Montes said the rural events center manager should have a fee structure worked out within the next 30 days. A recent wedding staged at the center was arranged before the property changed hands and the person was charged $300. "We also are looking at different rates for non-profit groups, private groups and community groups that are generating a profit. For instance, the Cowboy Symposium itself doesn't make a profit, but other activities at the symposium generate money. The rates will not be as high as the Ruidoso civic events center, but comparable."

Parker picked for Capitan impound officer

by DIANNE STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

If the face looks familiar, it should.

Johnny Parker, former animal impounding and police officer with the Ruidoso Police Department, started Monday in the same capacity with the Capitan department.

He offered some suggestions at the Board of Trustees meeting Monday about handling the situation in the village with abandoned animals and pets running loose. During his time in Ruidoso, Parker, who has his certification, worked closely with the Lincoln County Humane Society animal shelter.

The trustees have indicated they would like to draft a contract with the shelter to handle animals picked up in Capitan or those required to be kept in quarantine.

Alternatives include building a holding pen in Capitan to keep animals for a few days in case owners try to find them. If they are not claimed within three days, adoptable, healthy dogs and cats could be taken to the shelter in Ruidoso, but the others would be destroyed.

Village clerk Deborah Cummins told trustees that other items they may want to include in the village animal control ordinance were mandatory spay and neuter for dogs and cats over six months of age, breeders licenses and higher priced village annual licenses for owners who wanted their animals to remain fertile.

Many communities are requiring pets to be neutered in an attempt to decrease the rising cost associated with impounding animals. Governing boards are tired of their taxpayers footing the bill for negligent pet owners who allow their animals to run loose and reproduce.

In other business, the trustees: —approved a $3 charge for filing court documents in line with a state mandate effective July 1. The money is to be used toward court record automation and will go into a state pool.

—announced that two pounds of wildflower seeds have been received as a grant from the Keep New Mexico Beautiful program.

—agreed that proposed changes in the village water ordinance will be routed through the planning and zoning board before final action by the trustees.

News that he was unaware of any written agreement with the law firm.

At the time, Don Dutton was a member of the MainStreet board of directors and was a partner in the law firm. Dutton subsequently was named president of MainStreet.

Total fees charged for services rendered by the firm was $737, according to the audit. This amount is currently past due on the books of the law firm and is recorded as an accounts payable on the books of MainStreet.

Related to the Wilson transaction, the audit notes that on September 9, 1994, MainStreet entered into an option agreement to purchase a tract of land in the downtown area of Ruidoso. The option price was $250,000 and expired on December 31, 1993.

The agreement was amended upon expiration and extended to May 31, 1994. Total option fees paid by the organization were $2,000. The option was not exercised by MainStreet on May 31.

RUIDOSO, NEW MEXICO

B SECTION

Editorial

A few fathers give a lot of fathers a bad name

I remember my father working. My family moved into a new home just a few months before the October 1929 stock market crash that led to the Depression. My father, chief accountant for a small business, watched his pay get cut in half once, then halved again.

He worked six days a week at his regular job and moonlighted in the evening, bartering his CPA skills for food and clothing with a delicatessen and a dry good store.

My mother often said, "We were short of cash but we always had food and clothes."

I rarely saw my father during the week but Sunday was family day, reserved for church, picnics, ball games.

It was a tough time for families but especially for fathers, who, for good or ill or both, had a strictly defined role as "family provider."

Like the definition of fatherhood, the definition of family has evolved, loosened and expanded. This is not a bad thing but some, only for ill, have used the relative wealth of choices to opt out of their responsibility.

Most of the time, even if the father doesn't live at home, he is still a part of his children's lives. It's not easy but he spends time with them and he helps support them, emotionally and financially. But tens of thousands of New Mexico children have been abandoned by their fathers.

More than 10,000 families a year ask for help collecting child support from the Child Support Enforcement Division of the New Mexico Human Services Department. Some of these claims are unfounded and some are complicated by circumstances, but no father can justify ignoring or actively evading responsibility for his own children.

While that minority of irresponsible fathers may whine about how the courts treat men or sneer about paternity, their neglect exacts an unfathomable toll on their children.

The emotional damage is hard to measure, but the financial cost is all too obvious. Nationally, one-third of all single-parent households are living in poverty. The price? Distressing living conditions in undesirable neighborhoods, poor access to education and health care, family violence and teen pregnancy.

The taxpayer pays a price as well. In New Mexico, virtually every one of the some 32,000 single-parent households receiving Aid to Families with Dependent Children-welfare is owed child support.

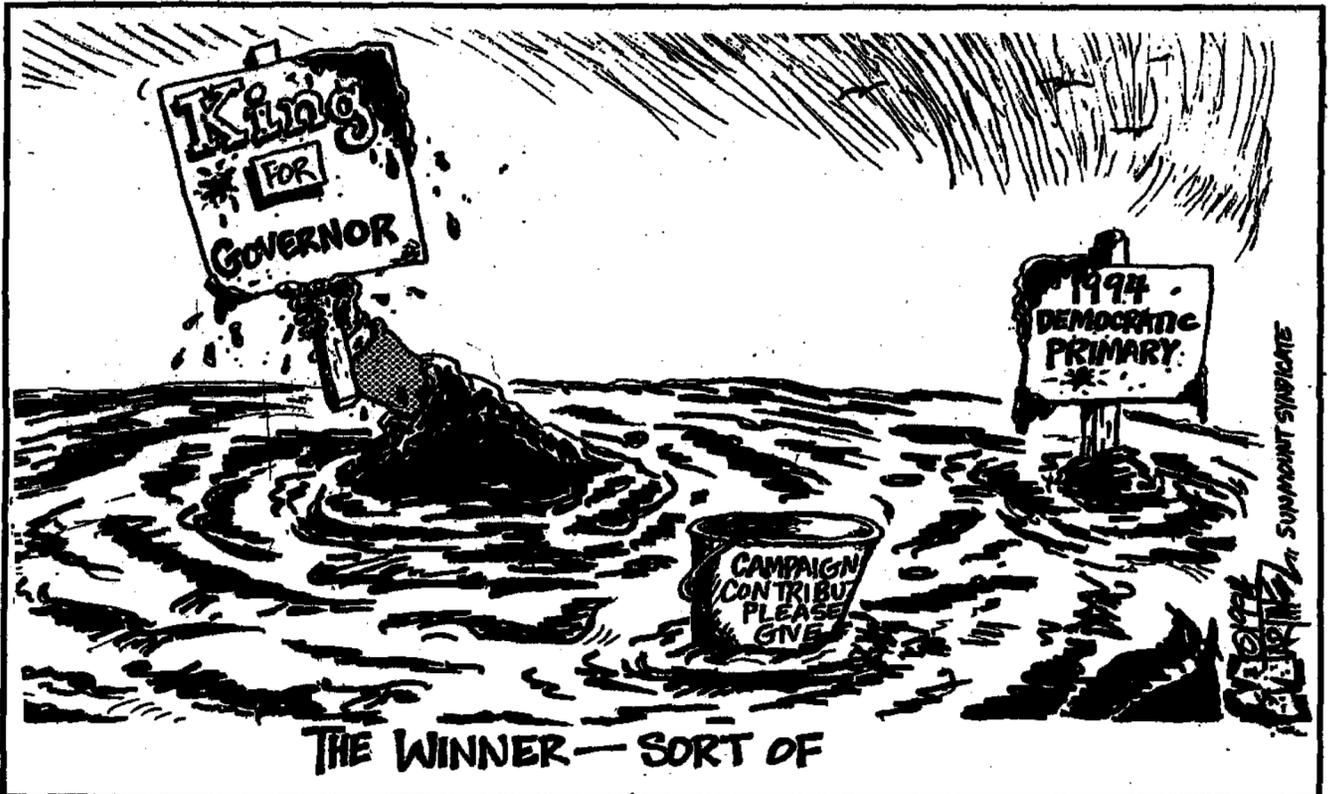

We estimate the failure of some fathers to pay child support costs New Mexico taxpayers more than $200 million a year in Food Stamps and AFDC benefits alone. The indirect costs are equally staggering when the consequences of a childhood spent in poverty and neglect are realized, sometimes in a state prison cell.

One time when I was young, I was caught stealing a small amount of money. My father's response devastated me.

"I never thought," he said; "a son of mine would do a thing like that." The issue was clear to him.

Father's Day marks the end of New Mexico Child Support Awareness Days for 1994. The slogan for this year's awareness campaign is "Child Support. They need it. You owe it. Just pay it." It's a straightforward message for a sociological issue that is relatively straightforward. I think it's one my father would appreciate.

EDITOR'S NOTE: This Father's Day guest editorial was contributed by Richard Heim, New Mexico Human Services Secretary.

Are we overemphasizing the need for speed?

Our society is an increasingly fast paced system. We fax facts, use voice mail, send our packages express, microwave our food, and expect everything from photographs to pizza to be delivered in less than an hour.

From carphones to computers we recognize the cost, monetarily, of modern conveniences and technology. We can calculate the interest on our credit card bills and most of us can even see that we pay with our good health when we eat too much fast food, but have we learned to evaluate the cost that the need for speed takes on our daily lives?

How do we decide which of these advances will be a help, and which will only be an added source of stress in our lives?

Some companies have even placed speed over the personal safety of those in the community they seek to serve. These companies provide incentives to their employees that have turned them into a menace on our streets.

Domino's Pizza recently rescinded its guaranteed delivery time after one of its employees, racing against the clock, drove recklessly enough to take the life of another. I can't count how many times, on our own winding roads, I've encountered a U.P.S. truck, barreling down the middle of the street, in an effort to complete their rounds early. Some of these drivers cannot even be bothered to get out of the truck and make the delivery. They honk first to see if they can get a response.

Recently, I heard one of these trucks coming our way. My small children were in the yard playing so I looked out the window to see what could be rounding the corner at such a rapid speed and to ensure that everyone was safely in the yard. The truck sped past, but at the crest of the hill it stopped and began backing down. My first thought was that he had a package for us and had driven by so quickly that he missed the house.

Instead, when he came to the door, he announced "I hit your dog and I think she is dead." We ran out in a panic as I told him he was going much too fast, "like a bat out of hell" was the analogy, and that I wanted his name and his license number. Our daughter ran to call the vet, and as I stood there in the road, with our dog dying at my feet, the driver pressed a piece of paper into my hand, jumped into his truck, and with no apology, drove off saying he would call the police. If he called the police they never came.

(The News confirmed that the driver did notify them of the incident).

After standing guard over this large dog for some time, and making our own calls, we finally got Animal Control and a wonderful woman officer came to help us out.

ZuZu was a big, beautiful Golden Retriever. She was a companion to all of our children, but she belonged to our 15-year-old daughter, Melissa. Melissa was there when ZuZu was born and they went through a lot of the tough things a teenager has to face, together. Melissa was already trying to figure out how she could take her dog to college with her. ZuZu was always a part of her future plans. We are all sad about our loss, but Melissa is heartbroken.

We know that legally the dog should have been on a chain. We let her loose to play and we take responsibility for that. This is not the first time she has chased a car in an effort to guard the children and defend her "turf." Once the gas man had to come to a complete stop while we drug her out of his way, so we know that we might have been more watchful. It all happened so fast!

We did report the incident and were told that the driver would be disciplined, but there would be no compensation. It is sad to say that U.P.S. in Ruidoso knows this because this same thing has happened more than once or twice before.

I can't help but wonder, if it had been one of my children standing in the road, could he have stopped? I really do not think so. I also can't help but think that I would rather get my packages a little later in the day, and have that driver work a few more hours, than to know that a family had lost a companion and a friend.

Since writing this:

1. We called police dispatch and the driver did report the incident.
2. Although our neighborhood is posted at 15 miles per hour, our neighbors want to get a petition going for "Children at Play" signs to be posted.
3. Everyone has expressed concern for the way the U.P.S. drivers are driving on our streets. There is grass roots support to get them to slow down in our town.
4. Melissa received flowers from Mountain View Animal Clinic where she works part time and sympathy from the Humane Society where she volunteers, (Melissa has always thought about becoming a vet).

Optimists teach safety, give away bikes

Forty young aspiring bicyclists participated in the Second Annual Bike Safety Rodeo sponsored by the Optimist Club of Ruidoso in cooperation with the Parks and Recreation Department.

Two new bicycles, one of which was donated by Wal-Mart, and six reconditioned bicycles were awarded as prizes.

Bicycles were given safety inspections before participants rode the course laid out on the parking lot of White Mountain Elementary. Participants were rated on their ability to ride within white lines, follow traffic signs, give signals and stop. All aspects of bicycle safety were stressed.

Jessica Bevers won the new girl's bike and Eric Hoyt won the boy's bike. Winners of the reconditioned bicycles were Ben Lundquist, Daniel Lundquist, T. J. Turner, Willie Lundquist, Jose Flores and J.T. Bevers.

RODNEY ROSE AND LORRI KREHBID

Couple is engaged

Rodney Rose and Lorri Krehbid announce their engagement and plans to be married on Saturday, June 18, in Albuquerque.

Rose, the son of Georgia Mitchell and Ed Rose, is a lifelong resident of Ruidoso.

The bride-to-be is originally from Clayton, and is currently living and working in Albuquerque.

The couple will call Albuquerque their home for the near future, although both would like to eventually relocate to Ruidoso.

Optimist president Emmett Hatch tries out the bicycle won by Eric Hoyt, while Jessica Bevers, the winner of the girl's bicycle, poses with her new mode of transportation.

Ruidoso Optimist club member John Obermiller puts the finishing touches on one of the reconditioned bicycles given away to bike safety rodeo participants.

RHS grad motivates audiences at NMSU

Phil Wright of Ruidoso is a member of the six-student team of The Speakers' Bureau from the College of Agriculture and Home Economics at NMSU.

Wright, a graduate of Ruidoso High School, is the son of Jerry and Deanna Wright.

The students are available to provide high-quality informational and motivational presentations relating to "opportunities for youth" at banquets, high school assemblies, commencement exercises, vocational agricultural classes and similar groups.

Wright is always energized by a microphone and an audience.

Currently a graduate student in the agricultural and extension education department, Wright has worked as a New Mexico radio personality, talk show host, station programmer, and sports play-by-play announcer.

He served as an ambassador for the College of Agriculture and Home Economics from 1990 to 1993. He completed his undergraduate work in agricultural economics and agricultural business in May 1993. While at NMSU, he also helped produce agricultural radio programs and promotional materials for the agricultural communications department.

He has been an active member of Alpha Gamma Rho, a social-professional agricultural fraternity.

Phil's favorite speech topics include "Opportunities: Where are They?," "Stoking the Fire on the Great American Melting Pot," and "Giving One Percent and 99 More to Get the Job Done."

Optimist Vera Wood, at right, helped run the bikers through their paces during the annual safety event in the parking lot of White Mountain Elementary. Above, new owners of bikes reconditioned by Optimists for the annual

2. Thank You

On behalf of the Project Graduation Committee 1994 - We want to thank the business owners, civic organization, and many other community residents who so generously supported Project Graduation. With our each one of you this event would not continue to grow - this year we had 53 Seniors attend. Once again thank you for your support of our youth in our community.

HORSEMAN GALA MUCH APRECIATED

Hats off to the Ruidoso Greeters and Cheryl Henson/Marie La Veaux restaurant for hosting the recent Horseman gala. Lots of hard work was obviously put into this well attended and planned out project. To all the fine restaurants who provided some great food for the occasion; It was excellent. It is an encouraging thought to think of the community and area businesses being involved with our summer horsemen.
