Dance Daze School performs

Nancy Shaver's Dance Daze School of Dance in conjunction with the Lubbock Ballet Theater will present a performance at 6:30 p.m., Friday, July 15, at the White Mountain Intermediate School gymnasium.

This performance is the culmination of a two week summer ballet workshop to showcase the talents of Madame Nathalie Krassovska, Artistic Director of Ballet La Jeunesse in Dallas Texas; Victor Morena, Artistic Director of the Lubbock Ballet Theater; and Ismail Rodriguez, Artistic Director of Cardona Company of Jazz and Modern Dance in Dallas.

Everyone is invited to attend this free performance and enjoy an evening of fine art.

Home recovery for commissioner

A chair was empty at the Lincoln County Commission table Tuesday. Commissioner Bill Schwettmann was recuperating from a prostate cancer operation and was unable to attend the meeting.

"I was scared to death, but they got it all and I feel better than I have in years," Schwettmann said Wednesday from his home in Alto.

The six hour operation July 6, "was something that had to happen," he said. "It turned out great and I will be a big advocate of the procedure in the future. It's something that can be controlled, but men should take the test every year."

Cards may be sent to Schwettmann at P.O. Box 83, Alto, NM 88312.

Feeding bears can be death sentence

Hunger and a lack of fear for humans resulted in death for a bear interrupted while searching the kitchen cupboards of a home on High Mesa in Alto.

According to a report from the Lincoln County Sheriff's Department, the bear was shot three times by the resident of the home. It fled by breaking through a screen door, but died later on the back deck of a neighbor.

Ten year reunion set for weekend

Ruidoso High School 1984 graduates will converge on their home turf this weekend to celebrate their 10 year reunion.

Fellow grads are invited to meet at 8:30 p.m. Friday at Cochera Restaurant and Lounge at 1214 Mechom Drive for a welcoming reception.

A family picnic at Two Rivers Park is set for 11 a.m. Saturday. Food and drink will be provided. Children and parents are welcome.

Fishing licenses needed

Fishing has picked up at Grindstone Lake and other state stocked areas, including the Rio Ruidoso, Grindstone Lake, Alto Lake and Bonito Lake.

Residents and tourists can pick up a fishing license for the day, week or seasonal from sport stores, Wal-Mart and Western Auto.

Paving and light rule repealed

by CHARLES STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Listening to the voice of the merchants, the Ruidoso Village Council Tuesday approved an ordinance regarding off street parking regulations that repealed an earlier ordinance passed in April.

Village manager Gary Jackson said the vote left the language of the new ordinance exactly as it was before April, which did not insist on paving downtown parking and did not require lighting in private parking lots.

Several merchants told the council they did not disagree that paving or lighting was needed, but they asked that they be able to prepare for the improvements at their own pace to avoid a serious financial burden.

Herb Brunell, owner of Brunell's clothing store, told the council that starting from raw land was very costly to develop a parking site.

"In order to get the site approved, if the lighting is an absolute requirement, it almost precludes development, because of the cost," Brunell said. He said that was the same argument he would use with respect to paving.

Brunell said he was not against lighting parking lots to the degree necessary for safety.

"I think if you are going to have lighting requirements, you should be able to identify any person in that area for safety," Brunell said. "I'm only speaking against it as an absolute requirement (by the village) for a parking lot."

Brunell said if the public is invited to step off the main street to reach off street parking, the entire public-private participation of safety through lighting has to be discussed.

Audeen Franklin, Cabbage Rose owner, said she was for a well lit town for safety and to prevent vandalism.

"The businesses downtown are finally... staying in business. They aren't going out of business in the winter time like they used to," Franklin said. "We're just now getting back on our feet. Those of us who have some land behind our stores, we're trying to build retainer walls, put in parking and gravel. It is all I can afford to do right now. In four or five years, if things are going as well as they are now, sure I want my parking lot paved and lighting."

Village manager Gary Jackson told the council that the number of lighting poles ordered for the downtown area had doubled.

Jackson said past village policy has regarded street lighting for traffic safety and not for security. He recommended a workshop to discuss the policy.

Before the vote, Mayor Jerry Shaw cautioned the council that decisions could not be based on financial burden, but rather the welfare and safety of the citizens.

"Consider that when you vote," she said.

Councilor Robert Donaldson was the only nay vote, saying that he didn't mind gravel parking lots, but he did have a problem with unlit parking areas.

Mayor Shaw introduced Lanny Maddox to the council in his new position as chief of police. Maddox, a former Ruidoso detective, replaced Dick Swonor who resigned Tuesday.

Alto's Cooney tapped for county manager

by DIANNE STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Lincoln County's new manager, Carolin Cooney of Alto, will be on the job Monday.

She was approved as the county commission's top choice Wednesday in a 3-0 vote with Commissioners L. Ray Nunley and Bill Schwettmann absent.

"I consider it a gamble, because she has no government experience," Chairman Monroy Montes told The Ruidoso News after the meeting. "But she's strong in accounting and I know figures are a big part of government."

"The county had a female manager before, so this is not new in that sense. I think we did well. Time will tell."

Cooney's salary was to start at $32,500.

"I think in 60-90 days, you'll see a different operation," Montes said. "She's not a politician or bureaucrat. She is a manager. If she can pick up the government portion, we should be sitting in good shape."

Cooney said she moved to Lincoln County at Easter and likes the quality of life and history of the area. She arrived without a job and was excited when she read the county manager's position was open.

"I've always been interested in government, particularly city and county," she said. "Although I have no direct experience, I felt my strong management and accounting background would be an asset. For me, I felt it would be a wonderful way of getting involved and would add diversity to what I have done in the past."

Before the interview, Cooney said she talked with several other county managers to get a good idea of how the system functions.

"I did a lot of leg work and research. I met and talked to a lot of people," she said.

Commissioner Schwettmann, who is recovering from an operation, was not able to attend the five interviews Tuesday or three Wednesday.

He told The Ruidoso News that he was confident the three other commissioners chose wisely, noting that Cooney lives in the same subdivision, but they haven't met.

Nunley attended most of the interviews, but had to leave early Wednesday for business reasons.

Hearing the result of the vote, he said, "That's fine. She was not my first choice, but she was my second and I will go along with that. I certainly think I can work with her and everything will be fine."

Commissioner Wilton Howell said one candidate chosen for an interview dropped out because he found another job. A second applicant from Roswell couldn't find the county courthouse in Carrizozo in time for his interview.

"The people we did interview represented a good group of candidates," he said. "I leaned toward Mrs. Cooney, because she seemed willing to seek out information about Lincoln County. She had done her homework. She showed an aggressive, positive attitude and really displayed an eagerness for the job."

Commissioner Stirling Spencer also was impressed with Cooney's energy and research.

"She had done research on Lincoln County, county government in general and contacted other counties in the state to understand her responsibilities."

According to her application, Cooney received a bachelor of science degree in business/accounting from Indiana University in 1974.

She has special training in hospital budget, cost analysis and auditing, and in management.

Her three references were non-local businessmen.

Starting with her most recent job, from June 1992 until May 1994, Cooney worked as a controller for John J. Ingram & Associates of Midland, Texas, where she was paid an annual salary of $30,000 plus bonuses.

She was employed as assistant vice president of finance with Gaecke Equipment Company in Houston, Texas, from June 1991-

June 1992 at an ending salary of $38,000.

She was controller/assistant general manager with Richmond (Printing) Company, in Seattle, Washington, leaving after six years and a salary of $38,000 to operate her own accounting and consulting business in Seattle, from 1987-1991.

During the commission's regular meeting Tuesday, commissioners accepted a recommendation from county attorney Alan Morel to approve the 22-pages of proposed rules and regulations governing the county's indigent hospital claims fund.

As Morel explained, the county has opted not to establish a separate tax-generated medical indigent fund. Instead, the commission is working with the administration of the Lincoln County Medical Center (LCMC) to use a portion of the property tax money produced by a special 4.25 mill levy dedicated to the hospital and the Carrizozo Health Clinic.

"It's an accounting situation only, not special funding," Morel said. "The hospital determines whether people meet the criteria for the county to receive money back from the federal government."

The new system feeds into a statewide approach geared supposedly to bring a three to one dollar return to Lincoln County.

Appeals of the hospital administration's decisions are sent to the indigent claims board, which is the county commission. Morel said the county also needs to designate an employee to be responsible for reviewing the claims as a check and balance before sending them to the commission for action.

"Will this add an excessive amount of paperwork (to the county's side)?" asked Montes.

"We tried to keep it as simple as possible," said LCMC administrator Valerie Miller. "But there has to be someone at the county to review them. In other counties, they do the application and paperwork. We've tried to avoid duplication by handling that."

They listened to tearful entreaties for an hour, then met behind closed doors for another hour and a half.

At 11:50 a.m. Monday, the obviously stressed members of the Ruidoso School Board emerged from their "executive session" and announced they were not prepared that day to reach a decision on the fate of teacher Jody Blanton.

Board President Ron Hemphill said they would wait to vote until the next regular meeting of the board, July 19, when superintendent Mike Gladden will be back in town.

About 30 supporters of the high school physical education teacher asked board members to set aside a decision by Gladden to remove Blanton as head volleyball coach.

They said she has posted successful seasons in her five years in that position.

Hemphill had called the special indigent claims operation also is required.

In a related matter, Miller presented a report to the commission in what she called an effort to clarify community misconceptions about a recently proposed physician recruitment and hiring proposal, accomplishments under the management of Presbyterian Health Care Systems, as well as the hospital's relationship to the county.

Miller said no rate increases have been enacted since April 1990. Rates have been lowered at times in the emergency room. Eighteen different specialties are available through the hospital, "which is pretty much unheard of in a small rural county," she said.

The hospital added 15 new services, including neurology, gastroenterology and non-invasive vascular studies.

Although the special property tax levy allowed for health care produced $784,696 in 1993, $141,937 of that total went to the Carrizozo Health Centers. Of the $642,759 balance, $210,000 is set aside for capital acquisitions, each approved by the county commission and all remaining the property of the county.

Another $390,000 goes to operation, while $197,000 is paid to the mandated State Medicaid and Sole Community Provider Funds. The remaining $193,000 is used to offset some of the $1,045,000 in free care, exclusive of contractual discounts from Medicare, Medicaid and managed care plans, provided by the hospital to Lincoln County residents, Miller said.

Under the existing arrangement, Presbyterian leases the hospital building from the county, but assumes all financial and legal risks associated with the hospital's operation.

"Neither this, nor the receipt of mill levy funds constitute LCMC as a public facility and, therefore, it is not subject to the Open Meetings Act (state law requiring public bodies to advertise meetings and conduct business in public)," Miller said. "Finally, the lease does not re-

Maddox expressed his appreciation to the board for their support and pledged to work toward improving a growing police department.

Ronnie Hemphill, a certified public accountant, presented an annual report on lodgers tax establishment audits.

A New Mexico state statute requires any municipality collecting over $50,000 dollars in occupancy tax proceeds to randomly audit one or more vendors.

The council decided that seven of the 64 vendors should be audited, and names were pulled from a hat during a previous council meeting.

Information of individual vendors is not public record.

Hemphill told the council that six of the audits were being completed. The incomplete audit resulted from a sale of the lodging establishment after the audit, with the previous owners moving from the area without an updated address.

Hemphill said that total receipts from Lodger's Tax for the year ending June 30, 1993, were $309,397.

Four lodgers audited resulted in no exceptions or significant findings.

According to Hemphill, one lodger audited revealed inadequate record keeping and under-reported taxable lodging receipts in the amount of $339.04. The underpaid Lodger's Tax revenue was $23.10. The lodger agreed to the audit findings and has paid the deficient amount.

One lodger audited resulted in the detection of under-reported revenue in the amount of $2,639. The under-paid Lodger's Tax on this revenue was $105.66 and under-paid gross receipts tax was $179.78. The lodger agrees to the findings, but has not paid the under-reported tax.

The cost of the audit service was $1,124.20.

Village manager Jackson told the council that the Grindstone project received a $100,000 boost.

He said originally the village was told that it would receive $470,000 in state severance tax money, sponsored by State Representative John Underwood (D-Ruidoso), with $100,000 sponsored by State Senator Pete Campos (D-Santa Rosa) from the Senate. However, the final appropriations funded $570,000 in severance and $100,000 in general appropriations for a total of $670,000.

The council approved the contract with Carollo Engineers for the Grindstone Water Treatment Plant.

Jackson told the council the project would be "fast tracked" to be on line next year.

In other business, the council:

—approved the final budget adoption for fiscal year 1994-1995.

—approved a dental insurance plan for over 100 employees, picking up an additional $3 per employee per month tab for a family orthodontal plan.

—approved the mayor's appointment of Robert Donaldson as liaison to the MainStreet Board.

—approved contracts for special events receiving lodgers tax money. Village attorney John Underwood reviewed and approved the contracts relative to the standards set by the State Attorney General.

Contracts approved for organizations from the fiscal 1994-1995 year were: Friends of Smokey, $1,500; and the Chamber of Commerce, $1,500.

Contracts approved for organizations requesting funds from the 1994-1995 fiscal year were: Golden Aspen Rally, Inc., $3,000; All American Festival, $5,000; and Ruidoso Valley Greeters, $2,000.

Consent agenda items approved collectively by the council included:

—approval of the Eastern New Mexico Area Agency of Aging, Inc. grant for the Meals Program at the Senior Citizens Center.

—scheduling for a public hearing on August 9, a proposed ordinance relating to the planning and zoning code for fencing.

—scheduling for a public hearing on August 9, a proposed ordinance relating to planning and zoning codes for approved structures (portable vending stands).

—an advertising and marketing plan for the chamber of commerce's 1994-1995 fiscal year.

Police search for gas station burglar

by CHARLES STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

A young male, wearing a hood, robbed the Ruidoso Shamrock Friday evening of an undisclosed amount of money.

According to police reports, a stocky man, about five feet nine inches tall and wearing gauze around his face, entered the back door of the Ruidoso Shamrock gas station. He was wearing a pale or soft gray jogging hood, sweat shirt and blue jeans.

Gas station clerk Leona Adams said the man approached her very "nervous and jumpy" and demanded that she give him the money.

"I was trying to unjam the adding machine at the time," Adams said. "I couldn't believe he was trying to rob the store. He kept saying I want the money."

Adams said in a bemused fashion she asked if he was serious and if he was robbing her.

"He said yes, I'm serious. I know you have money under the counter," she said.

Adams said she grabbed a bag of change from under the counter.

"I gave it to him and he said I know you have more and if you don't give it to me, I'll shoot you," she said.

Adams said the robber reached under the gray sweat shirt into his jeans' pocket, but she didn't see a gun.

She then told the robber the bag she gave him was all of her money. He then warned her not to call anyone and left out the same door he entered and headed east on foot.

She said the police responded to her call within a few seconds.

Detective Wolfgang Born said CrimeStoppers is offering a $500 reward for any information leading to the arrest of this man. He said CrimeStoppers can be called 24 hours a day at 257-4545. The identity of the caller remains anonymous.

quire a member of the county commission to be given a seat on a hospital's board, but LCMC has, as a courtesy, invited a member of the county commission to serve on the board as an ad hoc member with voting rights.

She contended the hospital community board is not advisory in function. Board members approve an annual budget, any incurrence of debt (none currently exists) and board membership, she said. They also vote on granting hospital privileges.

The recruitment and hiring proposal is essential for the survival of the hospital, Miller said. Consideration of the plan began more than a year ago with associated research in the interim. A financial analysis was performed from both the cost of loss of existing physicians, as well as the availability and cost of recruitment of new physicians, she said.

"The impact of this program will save the hospital significant recruitment expense utilized in replacing physicians and will help LCMC to recruit additional physicians to the area," Miller said. "Therefore, even if the hospital were to experience a loss through the employment of physicians, the overall benefit to the community by retaining needed physicians in Lincoln County far outweigh the minimal financial exposure that may be experienced."

The hospital is searching for way to ensure its survival in the uncertain world of health care reform, she added.

Montes told Miller in his opinion the commission is not attempting to set policy for the hospital, but to assure the tax millage paid by taxpayers is accounted for and spent well for capital outlay.

"I appreciate your coordination with the commission," he said.

Hospital board chairman Dub Williams credited Miller with over the last four years bringing the hospital out of a deficit picture of $500,000 in debt to Presbyterian to a financially healthy state. But he said health care reform keeps the future uncertain for hospitals and physicians across the country. The wave of the future seems to be more out-patient care.

"Going to a hospital and seeing most of the beds empty may be a mark of success in the future," he said.

Commissioner Howell, who serves on the hospital board, thanked Miller for coming to the commission meeting and opening up the physician hiring program for the public.

"It's important for the public to know what's happening with a facility owned by Lincoln County," he said. "All I ever wanted was public awareness and I'm glad she has decided to throw open the windows and let the public know what's going on at their hospital."

Howell asked Miller whether some counties under Presbyterian have hospital districts with elected members who serve on the hospital board.

"That's a different lease agreement (used in Lovington)," she said. "Then the county assumes all the risk."

Montes noted that the county recently renegotiated its contract with Presbyterian and took out some of the short-comings, but he said there may be more changes in the future.

Morning dig

Heavy equipment cranks up at dawn to prepare the foundation of Ruidoso's first planned unit development, now being sold by broker Barbara Willard of Sierra Blanca Realty. The 14-acre site will house 77 units including a master club house that will be built in the common area. The facility will be surrounded by security fencing and many units will be handicap accessible. Country Club Village will have a variety of front elevations as opposed to standard track developments, and all will house two car garages. According to Willard, seven contracts have been sold off of the plans. All work is being done by local contractors and workers.

Laundry room explosion burns boy

by DIANNE STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

An explosion in a laundry room of the foreman's house at the Bar W Ranch Monday sent 10-year old Brandon Langley to Albuquerque with burns over 35 percent of his body.

Brandon apparently was standing in front of his father, Allen Langley about 3:30 p.m. when a ball of fire exploded and blew off the door of a laundry room, according to Lincoln County deputies who responded to the call for help.

Carrizozo Fire Chief Leroy Zamora said a propane leak from a water heater may have been the cause.

"There was no structure fire," he said. But deputy Charlie LaBelle said the fire was so hot that it melted aluminum cans on the kitchen table.

The older Langley suffered first and second degree burns to 25 percent of his body, primarily his back, arm and hands, according to reports. Brandon, who was wearing shorts suffered second and third degree burns from his head to his legs.

They were taken by ambulance to the Carrizozo airport, where two fixed wing airplanes flew them to the University of New Mexico Burn and Trauma Center.

They were both listed in stable condition late Wednesday at the University Medical Center.

meeting for 9 a.m. Monday in response to a directive from a district court judge to open the issue to public input and to accept responsibility for assigning and reassigning coaching jobs. The judge said that as he read state regulations, the function does not fall within the jurisdiction of the superintendent.

Blanton, who spoke on her own behalf publicly for the first time, pointed out that she had received "very good" evaluations. If problems exist, she asked the board to give her a chance to correct them.

"I thought the evaluations were a method of gauging my performance," she said. "I never realized there was a problem. Do evaluations mean anything? I have a problem with that."

"I'm here to correct problems you perceive, to do what you want me to do, but I need to know what they (the problems) are."

She said her students are like her own children and she has dedicated many extra hours to see them succeed.

When questioned about the reassignment of Blanton last May, Gladden said it was part of a reorganization that also included the reassignment of another coach.

Contacted by The Ruidoso News at his office in Albuquerque, John Daniel, assistant director of the New Mexico Activities Association, said that while reassignments of male coaches are not unusual, it is less common to see sudden changes with women coaches.

"Coaching assignments are personnel matters and are addendums to a person's teaching contract," Daniel explained. "It's an extra duty like a lunch or sponsor assignment."

"Usually the principal will make the decision and pass his recommendation to the superintendent for board action. In communities that are very concerned about their sports, it's probably not unusual for coaches to be reassigned or removed."

But Blanton's supporters contend it's important to the volleyball program for her to stay.

Dan Bryant, with the lawfirm of Parsons, Bryant and Morel, asked board members Monday to put aside any anger they might have because Blanton went to court to stop the hiring of a replacement coach. An injunction was issued last week against interviewing applicants.

"You are elected and the only people in the system we have the ability to come to and ask for redress," he said. "We have fought to get this issue before you to decide. We think it is important to the community that each of you be heard. We are looking for your individual moral discretion on the issue."

"It's easy to let litigation (polarize) and to say they're the bad guys, because they took us to court."

"I ask you to put that aside. The court said you had to make a decision and I want you to make a decision based on your conscience."

Bryant said Blanton's supporters realize there may be some problems with her coaching program.

"Fairness says take her into a room, outline the problems and ask her to fix them," he said. Bryant pointed out that insufficient Native American participation has been removed to be a problem, but that based on his figures, volleyball falls into the middle range of all school sports.

"We have a significant group of the public in favor of this coach," he said. "We want to keep her here, to help these young girls in the front row get scholarships and go to college."

"It's important to show the public what circumstances are going to be considered by the board in making coaching assignments, Bryant said.

"You will be setting a precedent. Will it be innuendo, rumor and speculation or will you look at the fact she's doing a great job, but there are some problems and here's what needs to be done," he said.

To attract other coaches to the area, they need assurances that they will be treated fairly, he said.

"Please don't react today, because you're angry about the court case, about the meeting you have to have today or at Karen Parsons or me for taking the case through the courts," he said. "It's an important decision for the community."

Teacher Pixie Arthur said the Blanton situation has other faculty members worried.

"This scares the teaching staff, the lack of process," she said. "If it can happen to her (negative action after positive evaluations), it can happen to any of us. Think this through, before you jump off the deep end."

Arthur said the board needs to look at the source of criticism about Blanton's program.

"I told her she would collect enemies when you have rules, because everyone wants their children to play," Arthur said. "You need to look at who is against Jody and the reasons why."

Several students stood up to tell the board how Blanton had influenced their lives in a positive way, inspired them to set goals and to work for them. They said without her off-season program and summer volleyball camps, they will lose their competitive edge.

One of several parents to lend their support to Blanton was Eric Thompson, who said his daughters learned more from Jody while playing on the volleyball team one year than from their other teachers.

"They learned to follow through on what they say they're going to do, to follow the rules," he said. "Jody helped our family a lot that way. My daughter would come home and discuss what she thought was unfair and decide it was fair after all and was something she could apply throughout her life."

"I keep hearing people say you made this terrible decision and you haven't. A decision has been made, but you're here today to take action on it."

Attorney Karen Parsons, who broke into tears at one point, said she was told by a coach, who was contacted about replacing Blanton, that a change at this point would set back the volleyball program by two years.

"The best thing for these girls is Jody Blanton," she said. "If (the coach is right, removing Blanton would) really minimize the juniors-and seniors' ability to get scholarships."

She presented petitions with about 250 signatures in support of keeping Blanton as head coach.

Sue Malis said, "I don't know any other person or teacher who would go through what she's had to go through for our kids, the litigation and name calling."

"I know she loves and is good for our kids. They all have blossomed under her."

Jim Stover told board members to remember who the volleyball program and their decisions are supposed to serve.

"These are the people in the program who you are doing this for," he said, indicating the students in the audience. "She's put in more time and energy than any other coach. You don't tear down a program. You learn and build on it. You want dedicated people here who want to do their job, not just for a paycheck. It's hard to come that type and you want to keep them."

"You should think about how to do what is right. It's your opportunity now to correct this wrong. You can't be good at anything without making enemies. People are jealous and parents want to see their children play (during volleyball games)."

Russian visitors tour county and meet cowboys and Indians

by FRANKIE JARRELL
The Ruidoso News Editor

What do Russians want to see when they head out west to Lincoln County?

Cowboys and Indians, of course. A delegation of about 25 visitors from Russia saw that and much more when they made a whirlwind swing through Lincoln County.

The group arrived last Sunday morning at the Mescalero Cultural Center in Mescalero where Ellen Latham, wearing her traditional Mescalero clothing, led a tour through the museum.

Smokey Bear met the international tourists upon their arrival in his home of Capitan, where the visitors greeted the famous bear and then toured the Smokey Bear Museum.

Tour leader Nancy Radziewicz said the bus was "waylaid" in historic Lincoln for a mock holdup by armed bandits who drew their buckshot loaded guns and taught the tourists the old west style of dancing.

"They loved it," said Radziewicz, a Ruidoso business woman who operates a tour service. Her father, Tony Miahuk, who is fluent in the Russian language, also joined the tour to act as interpreter.

Cowboys stole the show during lunch on the lawn at the Old Ellis Store in Capitan. Sherry and John Goodlee entertained with trick roping, cowboy poetry and western songs.

A visit to Lincoln would be incomplete without a bit of Billy the Kid lore, so the group learned all about the county's most famous outlaw at the Heritage Museum, on a walking tour of the settlement and at the infamous courthouse.

The visitors headed to Ruidoso where they toured sculptor Dave McGary's studio and foundry.

The packed day ended in Ruidoso Downs at the Museum of the Horse, where the Russians perused the exhibits and then enjoyed a catered dinner and musical entertainment.

Radziewicz said her only regret was that the Russian visitors spent just one day in Lincoln County on this leg of their trek. But, she added, they'll be back Saturday.

The tourists will try their hands at gold panning and take in the chuckwagon dinner and show at the Flying J Ranch. They'll spend the night at the Swiss Chalet before boarding their bus and leaving Lincoln County.

Get set for 23rd annual Ruidoso Art Festival

Artists from throughout New Mexico and Texas have been selected for the 23rd annual Ruidoso Art Festival Friday, Saturday and Sunday, July 22-24, in the Ruidoso Convention Center.

The festival, which started 23 years ago as an informal gathering of artists under the trees at School House Park, has grown and expanded over the years to include some 125 exhibitors showing acrylics, oils, watercolor, photography, pottery, weaving, sculpture and other artforms.

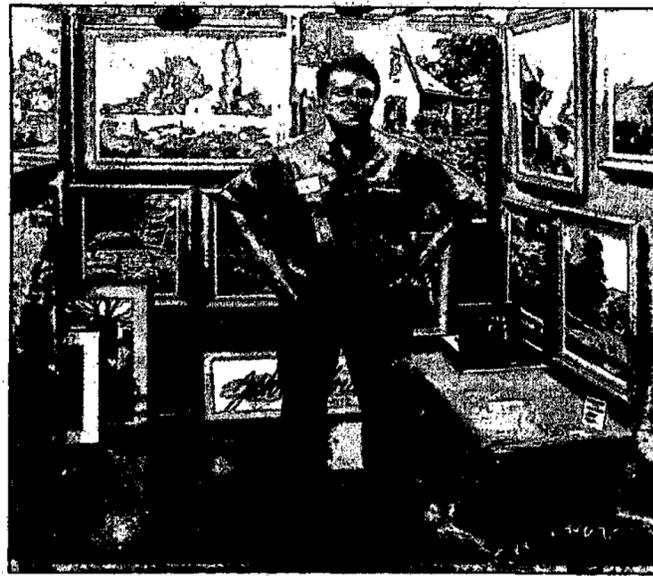

A jury reviews all entries to the show and makes its final selections with a view toward quality, and also toward a varied show that is interesting to visitors.

Besides offering a shopper's delight with jewelry, art to wear and art to display and functional art, the Ruidoso Art Festival brings together community organizations who offer a luscious selection of refreshments in the outdoor lineup of concession stands.

The Ruidoso Art Festival — always the third weekend in July — will be open from noon to 8 p.m. on Friday, from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. Saturday and 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sunday.

Admission is still $2.50 for adults and $1 for children, with a three-day pass available.

come two to three days during the festival," said Chamber of Commerce Executive Director Joan Bailey.

That suits Bailey and her board members just fine, since the art festival is the chamber's major fundraiser each year.

Over the years the festival has been staged in the parking lot at the middle school, on the old airport runway where the golf course and convention center are now and in the area behind the Sports Theater in Ruidoso Downs.

Last year, the festival moved indoors for the first time, and the artists and shoppers loved it. Bailey recalled some past years when the festival was plagued by July rains and compared that to showing, selling, shopping and browsing in the comfortable convention center — there's no comparison.

Last year, the chamber board came up with the idea of a silent auction with proceeds to fund the group's scholarship fund. Artists and festival-goers were so generous to give the art and to purchase it that the silent auction is back this year, too.

The booths and artists are judged before the show opens, with a best of show ribbon and the top 10 artists recognized.

Last year's winner, Christ Morel, will be back in this year's show with his colorful acrylics.

Morel was born and raised on the east coast and holds a bachelor's degree in fine art from Towson State University in Baltimore, Maryland. He lives in Austin, Texas, where he has pursued his career as a professional artist since 1988.

Texas sculptor Cindy Burleson, winner of the best of show in 1992, will be back this year. Her work can be seen in booth 76.

Among the other artists in this year's show are local potters Vicki Conley, booth 99; and Tim Wierwille, booth 87.

Dial 1-800-ASK-FISH to speak on fishing regs

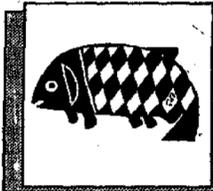

The New Mexico State Game Commission is going to revise your fishing regulations in October 1994.

Prior to this revision, the Department of Game and Fish is hoping to gain input from all concerned citizens. Anyone who feels they may be affected by fishing and the regulation that go along with this outdoor activity is encouraged to comment through July 8, 1994.

The department is going all out to try to receive public comments and is breaking new ground doing so.

One way citizens can voice their concerns and opinions about fishing regulation is to call 1-800-ASK FISH. The other way is to pick up a blue survey card at Game Department offices and license vendors. Both ways have been designed as "user friendly" for the public.

Although a relatively new service, more than 2,900 people per month have been treated up-to-date fishing reports by calling 1-800-ASK FISH. Now the public can also use the toll free number to leave up to a two-minute voice message about the upcoming fishing regulations. Dale Hall, fisheries manager for the department believes this is just

By Don Hanson
New Mexico
Game & Fish

the thing the agency needs to get more comments from the public.

"Traditionally, the department has hosted public meetings, but they tended to have low turnouts" said Hall. "Now, the department is trying two new methods to make it easier for the public to comment - the 1-800-ASK FISH number and survey cards."

The survey cards are postage paid and allow a person to write down a few comments pertinent to fishing regulation changes. The department is specifically looking for people to express what they like about the current regulations, as well as suggestions for improvement.

Both written and phone comments must be received no later than July 8. Desires from the public will be evaluated for biological soundness which will lead to recommendations that will go to the State Game Commission. The regulations adopted by the commission will then go into effect April 1, 1995.

Hopefully, by using new methods, the Department of Game and Fish can get more involvement from the people interested in fishing. In the past, most wildlife management was done without the people ever knowing why a decision was made or why an agency does business in a certain way. By making it more convenient for folks to express their opinions and concerns it is hoped that more people will be reached, especially with today's busy schedules. This way, the public can become more involved in the decision making process.

If you like the way fishing laws are in the state, take time to pick up the phone and tell the department; likewise, if you know of areas that need improvement, do the same. The department will not know what you're thinking unless you take the time to tell the agency.

Fishing Report

Fishing is fair to good in south-east area lakes and other fishing spots using salmon eggs.

At Alto Lake, a few trout are being taken on salmon eggs and pink power bait.

Some trout are being taken on salmon eggs, green power bait and homemade dough bait at Bonito Lake. Fishing is best in the late evenings off the south side of the lake. Department crews stocked more than 2,600 rainbow trout.

At Grindstone Reservoir, anglers should use salmon eggs and green power-bait for trout.

Water level is very low in the Ruidoso River. Department crews planned to stock 1,250 good-sized trout, but if the water is still low, these fish will be stocked in grindstone Reservoir.

All that glitters may not be gold: Shiny Dancer faces Gold Medal Dash

Gold Medal Dash and Shiny Dancer, both of whom had excellent 2-year-old campaigns last year at Ruidoso Downs, stand out among a field of quarter horses entered in the $8,500 allowance feature, Thursday.

The 350-yard feature is for three and four-year-olds. Thursday's eighteen-race program includes nine local races along with nine Hollywood Park simulcasts.

James and Jackie Tanton's Gold Medal Dash, the runner-up in last year's Rainbow Futurity, made her 1994 debut in the tough Rainbow Derby Trials and ran sixth behind multiple stakes winner Treacherously.

The daughter of First Down Dash has been a consistent runner her entire career and has finished out of the money only three times in eight outings with earnings of $107,000. The majority of Gold Medal Dash's earnings came for her effort behind Treacherously in the Grade I Rainbow.

The Dwayne "Sleepy" Gilbreath-trained filly will be ridden by Luke Myles for the Tanton's of Mansfield, Texas.

The Johnnie Goodman-trained filly Shiny Dancer won a division of the All American Futurity trials last year and ran seventh in the $1.9 million final, but has yet to light the board in three starts this year. The gray daughter of Oh Shiny made her most recent outing in the Rainbow Derby trials, where she ran sixth behind Ruidoso Derby winner First To Score. The field Shiny Dancer faces Thursday should be considerably easier than the company she has run against recently. The filly is owned by John Boegner of Bryan, Texas.

Coming round the track

The Smokin' Armadillos, a six-man band with a versatile repertoire, will be in concert Saturday, July 23 at Ruidoso Downs. The California-bred group, whose members' ages range from 17 to 24 years of age, write nearly all of their own material. The group has opened for legendary performer Willie Nelson, as well as Dwight Yoakum, Sawyer Brown, John Michael Montgomery, Chris LeDoux and Toby Keith. The concert will be held following the races. Admission is free before 4 p.m. and $10 per person after that time.

Friday's main event features Sky Rider and Captain Beyond

A very talented field of $10,000 claiming horses, headed by Sky Rider and Captain Beyond, the one-two finishers in a $7,500 claiming contest here July 3, tops the nine-race Friday afternoon program at Ruidoso Downs.

The compact group of eight includes four horses that have won at least once this meet. The six furlong sprint for 3-year-olds and up, offers a purse of $4,000.

Sky Rider, a 6-year-old California-bred by Pencil Point, has won two of three starts this summer for trainer Joe Johnson and should be the one to beat Friday. In his most recent outing, the gelding led from wire-to-wire to post a 3/4-length victory over Captain Beyond in the one mile route.

Prior to that performance, Sky Rider won a similar claiming contest going six furlongs on June 3 and ran third going two turns on June 18. The gelding is owned by Robert Caine of Phoenix, Arizona.

Rolling K Farms' Captain Beyond was one of the top claiming horses at Turf Paradise over the winter and seems to be returning to solid form.

The 5-year-old Nebraska-bred gelding by Glanceaway ran fifth in his Ruidoso debut in late June, then followed that effort with his place performance on July 3.

Captain Beyond has won seven of 18 starts at the six furlong distance and has finished in the money in 11 of those outings. Mike Welch trains the gelding for W.A. Kennedy of Odessa, Texas.

King Arthur's Song, Siam Ruler and Jimjen, all winners versus all-warders of Upper claiming company this summer, also command respect in Friday's showcase event.

"Hollywood Nights" continues Friday with first post time of 8 p.m. The $150,000 Hollywood Park Budweiser Breeders' Cup for 3-year-olds and up going 6 1/2 furlongs on the turf is the featured event. The entire ten-race card from Hollywood Park will be simulcast in the Ruidoso Downs Turf Club.

Admission is free. All wagers made on "Hollywood Nights" are commingled which allows local handicappers the luxury of betting directly into the Hollywood Park mutual pools. Only two "Hollywood Nights" programs remain before Hollywood's Spring/Summer meet ends on July 24.

Fire camp mimics town

by DIANNE STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

In the middle of nowhere, in early July, a mini-village sprouted on a flat of land in the foothills of the Capitan Mountain Range.

Within hours, it would become the nerve center of fire fighting efforts for a series of blazes raging through the rugged and steep terrain that marks the eastern edge of Lincoln County.

The responsibility for coordinating the efforts of 635 firefighters and a dozen different agencies in this case falls on the shoulders of incident commander Bob Butler, who has been in the business 25 years.

Butler flew into New Mexico from the Great Basin area, first to handle the fire east of White Oaks in the Patos Mountains, which consumed more than 5,000 acres before it was controlled.

When the major hot spots on that blaze had been extinguished, Butler picked up the command center and moved to the Baca Camp area where the Pancho fire has charred about 1,500 acres. About five miles off the highway through Salazar Canyon, the camp is between the historic settlement of Lincoln and the village of Capitan.

One of the first segments to arrive are the caterers, there to provide 15,000 calories a day to firefighters who put in long hours under intense heat, carrying vital equipment and trying to fight back a scorching fire while maintaining their footing on crumbling rock.

Dan Mummey from Oregon, Donna Hart from Minnesota and Elaine Woods from Idaho put together the meals, comprised of hot food from a trailer cooking unit, as well as salads and fruits assembled under a broad tent.

This is Woods' tenth year catering in fire camps. The Capitan fire is her fourth this year, "but I've moved several times on one fire," she said. "It takes about 2 1/2 hours to set up."

While the catering company is based in the state of Washington, it draws manpower from all over the country, just as fire fighting crews come from agencies as far away as Florida and Oregon.

"We have to give the firefighters a certain number of calories," said Mummey, who has been catering fires for eight years. "Of course, we can't make them eat everything, but there has to be so many ounces of meat, of vegetable, of fruit."

The catering crew turns out a minimum of 1,824 meals a day. They start feeding at 4:30 a.m. and may not finish until 10:30 p.m. Sack lunches also are packed for those headed out to the fire.

Lightning ignited a series of fires during and before the July Fourth weekend. Some could be handled locally, but others flared into hot and dangerous infernos.

A fire camp is created "when local resources are exhausted and there no longer are enough fire trucks, crews and overhead support to handle the fire," said information officer Bill Roach from the Great Basin Incident Management Team. "That's when we start bringing in crews from out of state. Originally, we were situated at the base of the Patos fire. We moved here July 7."

"We look for a relatively flat area, close enough to the fire to support the people on the ground and close enough to civilization that we can drive in for supplies."

"The camp grows as the people keep coming."

Butler said between the main camp and another group of 100 firefighters staying in three-day rotations at Pine Lodge, more than 700 firefighters were battling the Capitan fire.

The overhead team members come from the Great Basin Incident Team and comprise an inter-agency management group representing the Bureau of Land Management (BLM), the Toiyabe National Forest, the Humboldt National Forest and the Nevada Division of Forestry.

"Everybody is trained to fill a function on the team," Roach said.

Under Butler's supervision, there is a logistics chief and a finance section chief and several other secondary chiefs.

"Each section has a leader such as facility, ground support and supply, and each is divided into units," Roach said.

Twenty-four states were represented among firefighters on the major Patos and Pancho fires, as well as a series of smaller fires. The overhead team tries to manage all of the multiple incidents, Roach said. The dynamics change by the hour. Two new fires were reported around White Oaks Tuesday.

"When you're dealing with multiple incidents and multiple jurisdictions, it can be difficult," he said.

In spite of the rugged conditions, firefighters have suffered no major or life threatening injuries, said Peg Crim, one of the information officers for the U.S. Forest Service.

"We had very few injuries on the Pancho fire, most were what we call non-reportable, scratches and sprained ankles," she said. "Dehydration was more of a problem on the Patos fire where it was hotter and dryer."

"All fires are dangerous," Roach said. "None of them are easy, but the people at Capitan Peak are dealing with loose rocks. There's no footing whatsoever. It tears up boots, feet, ankles, knees and limits maneuverability if the fire turns and the firefighters try escape."

Butler said three crews of 20-persons each were active on the fire as of last Sunday. Eighteen crews are from New Mexico. About 10-20 percent of the firefighters are women. Equipment at the camp includes 30 buses (one for each crew), 10 engines and 30 others assorted pieces of equipment, plus a fleet of helicopters (two to haul water and the rest for transport for five to nine persons at a time). More than 85 private "contractors" have been involved. The contractors are local residents who run errands, transport tools and bring in supplies.

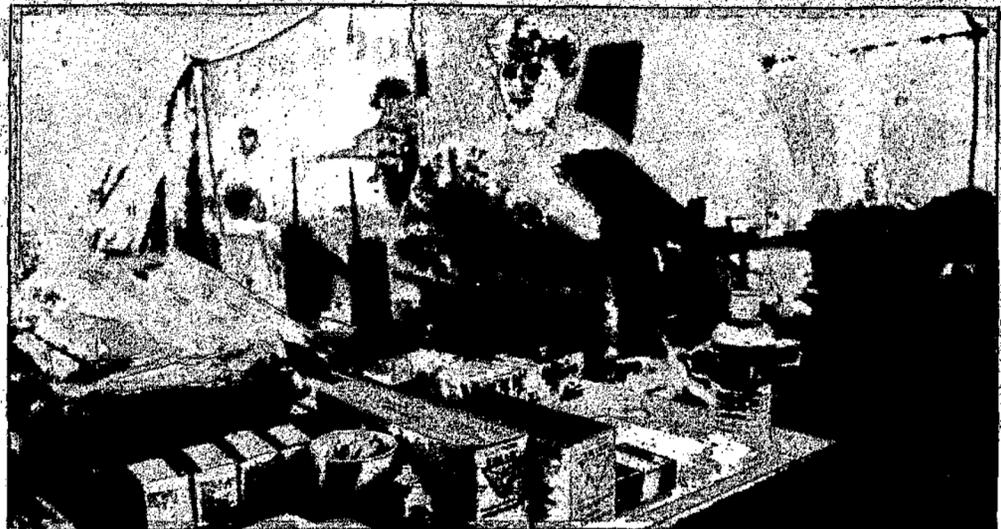

"The Pancho fire started in the Capitan Wilderness, where there are summer cabins on the east side of the mountains and private property on this side we're obligated to protect."

Many firefighters are flown into the hot spots by helicopter. When no landing areas are available, repellers are used to descend to dangerous sections. Many of the repellers come from the local Mescalero Apache Hot Shots group. Other firefighters are driven by bus to a site and hike in to establish a fire line or stay near structures to keep them from burning.

Roach explained that the live fuel (living trees, brush and grasses) around the state is extremely dry and explosive.

"You don't want anyone in the front when a fire makes a major run," Roach said. "Sudden changes in the wind caused major problems over the weekend on the Patos."

Unlike controlled burns with low heat that can clear the way for new growth, hot, intense fires can sterilize the soil and cause trouble with erosion, Crim said. The lightning fires this year have been more frequent and longer in duration. Couple with delayed seasonal rains, that spells big manpower requirements and expenses.

The camp is littered with small tents by individuals seeking a bit of privacy, but many of the firefighters sleep under large canopy-type tents. The command post occupies a small trailer, where each evening crew leaders gather to map out the next day's battle plan. Larger units are used for showers and a laundry, where clothing often is washed bunched in a net sack to keep items together and track ownership.

A telephone is available outside the commissary, which provides the essentials. A medical unit also carries supplies to stabilize serious injuries or for a nurse to hand out aspirins. The supply depot is well stocked and a bulletin board updates firefighters on what's happening on fires in other areas of the country and on sports news.

A shaded spot under a tree is reserved for crew members to sign huge cards in memory of the 14 fellow firefighters lost in the Glenwood Springs fire in Colorado.

At smaller spike camps, outposts along a fire, crews usually stay about three days before coming into the main camp. Five crews at a time with 125 firefighters will set up lines of defense.

They clean up litter around homes and post engines and hoses to pump water. A few ranches close to White Oaks were evacuated in the Patos fire, but little in the way of manmade structures has been lost.

"To sustain a fire, you need fuel, heat and air," Crim said. "The objective of those on the line is to ensure one of those elements are not available. They get rid of the fuel. How wide the line must be depends on where it is. They have to get down to the mineral with no material that can burn."

"In a low intensity fire, you might be able to scratch the line with a shovel, but in timber 80 feet high, you have to clear everything at a rate of one and a half times the height of the fuel."

"Sometimes we use existing roads, trails or rock outcrops to act as natural barriers."

More rainfall in the last few days may spell an approaching end to the fire in the Capitan. But that same rain also brings lightning and may send Butler and his bunch packing to a new camp site and a new fire.

Silver Lining

Welcome rains descend on Storm mountain

Our old friend the east wind brings July rain

On the evenings of the eighth of July, clouds began gathering west to the North and then from the South over Storm Mountain.

About early dusk, you could see lightning flashing in dark gray clouds and this was a welcome sight because it looked like rain was falling in the neighborhood of Patos Mountain, bringing help to the weary firefighters.

By nightfall, the two sets of clouds met overhead and soon they began a belated Fourth of July celebration of fireworks of the night sky, lightning of every shape or form—some high in the clouds and some closer to the ground—and thunder, rumbling in the distance and boom-bomming just overhead causing the ground to tremble underfoot.

The strange thing about this thunder and lightning pageantry was that there was no rain.

And then from the East you felt a wave of cool moisture on the breeze and you inhaled the breath of the approaching rain fragrant with the flavor of pine and piñon picked up on the way in.

The noise and flashing lights in the clouds soon gave way to the patter of rain drops, large and close together falling on the dry ground and the thirsty meadows wilted by a week of record-breaking heat waves.

For about a half hour, the rain fell bringing one-half inch of most welcome moisture. The next morning you were in a new world.

Our old friend, the East wind, upheld the tradition of rains in July.

On the afternoon of the ninth, gray and purple clouds gathered in the west and here in the Vale. You could see the lightning flashing silver, gold and light crimson.

Down the valley, the clouds came drifting over the hills sending down their streamers of rain, like purple curtains. Soon the cool rain came sparkling down causing Mother Earth to rejoice.

The heat wave fades away With the arrival of July rains, the record hot weather and the brief dry spell left the Mountain Land.

Today, just before high noon, the temperature is 90 degrees, ten or more degrees cooler than last week.

A cool breeze is singing down the valley through the river trees now out in full leaf of all shades of summer green.

The river, which was running a little low, is back to about normal for early July.

In response to the heavy rain and hail back in May, all the growing things of the Mountain Land have taken on new life.

Seeds that have remained dormant in the ground have sprung forth into growth and this has continued right through the hot spell.

Little flowers that you have not seen for years were out in bloom and tiny new trees are appearing under the apricot trees.

New wild grape vines are appearing here and there and down by the river, the wild grape vines are full of life such as I have never seen before. The vines are climbing to the top of one tree and then reaching out to the tops of another tree close by.

Life is at full tide in the mountain land

Here we are in early summer, when day by day the creatures of the wild, the birds of the air and the growing things are more and more filled with strength and vitality.

And we, in harmony with Mother Nature, feel our hearts beating high with the pride and joy of life.

Let us thank our Lord for glorious summer and all our many blessings.

CRIMESTOPPERS "CRIME OF THE WEEK"

Gratuit

The Ruidoso-Lincoln County Crime Stoppers will pay a $500 cash reward for information leading to the arrest and Magistrate Court Bindover of the person or persons responsible for the gratit in Ruidoso this past week. Crimestoppers will also pay cash rewards for the recovery of stolen property or the solving of other felony crimes.

Phone 257-4545

A cooperative effort between the Ruidoso Chamber of Commerce and the Ruidoso-Lincoln County Crimestoppers to deter gratit from being a part of our mountain scenery is currently underway. This intentional damage to property is not only considered visually unacceptable, but is also costly to the citizens of our community. It has a bearing on our insurance rates, our real estate values, and our village in general. As citizens of Lincoln County, we can deter the impact of this type criminal activity in our community by getting involved, and reporting any suspicious activity to the local law enforcement agency in your area, or by calling Crimestoppers.

The Crimestoppers phone line is manned 24 hours a day, seven days a week, and you do not have to give your name to be eligible for a cash reward. The Crimestoppers phone number is 257-4545. Anyone wishing to call collect may do so within Lincoln County.

Frig certification class mandatory

By DIANNE STALLINGS

Ruidoso News Staff Writer
Automotive and other mechanics who deal with refrigerants will have a chance this summer to take a certification course in Ruidoso, instead of having to travel to El Paso or Albuquerque.

Failure to obtain federal certification could result in fines of up to $25,000 per day per violation.

Couched in those terms, the $103 charge for the general mechanics course and $30 for the automotive seem more than reasonable.

Carl Norton will handle the classes starting at 8 a.m. August 10 in the Civic Events Center. The first class, designed for mechanics who handle air-conditioners, refrigerators, water coolers or anything else with refrigerants, should run until about 5 p.m. A class will then begin for automotive mechanics.

The requirement for certification was included in the Clean Air Act passed by Congress in 1990 aimed at protecting the ozone layer of the Earth's atmosphere from gases that destroy it. The federal Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) is the enforcement arm for the Act.

"It's a very serious law," Norton said. "Once obtained, federal certification does not have to be renewed every year unless they change the law or the certification is revoked because someone messed up.

"The no vent (of refrigerants such as Freon) portion of the law took effect July 1992 any time a class one or two refrigerant is involved from automobiles to big chillers."

Some new refrigerants, touted as ozone friendly, will be included in the law in 1995.

"No one up here is using them except (a car dealership)," Norton said. "They're not that friendly."

Automobile mechanics already are supposed to be certified, he said. The rest have until November 1994. After that date, no one except certified personnel will be able to buy refrigerant.

"The EPA already is assessing fines in the $100,000 range across the country," Norton said. "There's a $10,000 reward for people who turn in violators, if they're convicted."

The EPA contracts with schools to handle the courses, and Norton, a mechanical engineer for 30 years, teaches for that firm.

The eight-hour course includes a 60-page study guide, which participants need to order about one month ahead to allow sufficient time to study.

"We review everything in the study guide before the exam, which takes about two hours, but they need to allow a week or more for delivery of the manual and they have to study ahead, because they can't absorb all of that information in a few hours," Norton said.

The national passing rate for the test is 50 percent, but Norton said his firm's classes are averaging 98.6 percent. "So we've got a good course."

"Conducting it locally, will save them considerable driving and time."

Applications for the general mechanic's course are available at Ruidoso Village Hall and at Alamo Pipe and Supply on Sudderth Drive. For information, call 1-800-229-1284.

Persons interested in the automotive course don't have to send applications. Call 257-3044.

Editorial

Saying thanks isn't enough...

It takes many people, a lot of equipment and plenty of hard work to put out a powerful, raging wildfire. It's a tough job, and one that requires a great deal of courage and spirit. A dedicated group of firefighters is hard at work now controlling the Patos and Pancho fires.

Well-trained men and women from 24 states have gathered in our county to protect us from the destructive fire, and we are in their debt.

The hastily set up fire camp with tents, supplies and food may resemble a scouting camp, but its purpose is very serious. These cheerful campers have left their own homes and families to risk their lives to save our forests, property, wildlife and lives.

Thank you, firefighters, we really appreciate you!

Letters To The Editor

Thanks for the quick help

TO THE EDITOR:

My family and I have been coming to Ruidoso every summer for 25 years. Our three children are all married and have families of their own now. However, at least one of them still brings their family and spends time with my wife and I Ruidoso each summer.

This past week on Friday morning at 8:10 a.m., our 28 year-old son, Greg, began having a seizure. His wife and my wife and I were petrified.

I called 911 immediately to get them on the way to our Upper Canyon house. Two Ruidoso police units arrived at our house within five minutes. They were in radio contact with the EMS unit giving them vital information as to our son's condition. The EMS unit arrived and went right to work. The EMS crew and the two Ruidoso police officers worked together beautifully and saved our son's life.

The EMS crew even came by our son's room at the hospital the following day to check on him and visit with him.

Our family is sincerely grateful to the EMS crew and two Ruidoso police officers who responded to our emergency. Praise God for such fine dedicated public servants. All Ruidosians should be proud to have such fantastic individuals at their service.

Disposing of garbage is everybody's business

by DR. BERNARD REIMANN
Special to The News

For those of us it is today plain and simple: We were members of ad hoc committees (I, e.g. chaired a technical subcommittee of a Lincoln County Landfill Search Committee in 1989). The subject was to avoid the rapidly increasing fees necessary to get rid of our solid waste. Few listened, few cared, few understood. Very few! Should Lincoln County have its own landfill? I wrote letters to the editor to point out why not: It was going to be too expensive. Both, the public and, sadly to say, the elected representatives did not see that for a long time.

A breakthrough came when finally the Lincoln County Solid Waste Authority was formed. Yet, precisely at that very instance it became a political play toy. It was and is to a certain degree today directed by politicians who on one hand naturally have the interest of their communities in mind, on the other hand they have to make decisions to let the authority run. And that can be a matter of conflict of interest.

Just as a marginal fact, I should have mentioned that the emphasis on the political climate booted me out from the newly formed authority after I had spent countless hours as a volunteer scientist to get it under way. Later, I became a not-voting "ex-officio" member (I found never out from what "office"). When it became obvious that I was unable to contribute to the proceeding of the board, I withdrew — but later contributed substantially on the closure and postclosure plan of our Capitán municipal landfill and on the permitting of the remaining portion of the same property as demolition debris fill. That is water under the bridges (should there be any) of the Rio Hondo.

But I don't want to talk about myself. Just want to make sure that everyone knows that I know what I am talking about.

The subject requires raw knowledge of the pertaining laws, the imposed rules and regulations, the technology involved and of course the necessary chemistry, geology, biology, etc., etc. Because the preservation of our, yours and mine, environment and that of our kids is at stake and the very reason why the solid waste issue is such a problem and why it becomes so expensive. And why the existence of an entity which collects, transports and disposes our solid waste, i.e. the Solid Waste Authority is an absolute must.

I have never understood why the authority has been called an "Authority." Because it does not have any authority. It collects, transports and disposes solid waste. And, yes, it has to be reimbursed for its work, it sets fees, it needs money to operate and maintain equipment, it needs fuel, it has to pay its employees. But so does any cooperative. It does not have any authority. It can enforce nothing. It may try to get paid from those who are unwilling to pay the fees. But so does every shop owner when a bad check is involved. In the end, the courts will have to decide. But the authority has no authority.

Who then has the authority over illegal or incorrect dumping? The political entities, the incorporated towns and villages and the county does. There are garbage and trash ordinances in every incorporated municipality. It is here where the authority rests. It is here, whether or not their law enforcement personnel enforces the existing ordinances. The police and the sheriff. All the authority can do is to reject waste which does not fit in the existing landfills under their control. It is not the authority which has set the rules in this respect, but it just complies with the mandates imposed on the authority by the state and not the least by the federal authorities. It may be considered as being the proverbial place between the rock and the hard place.

It makes no sense to blame the folks who make the multitude of rules and regulations. Many of them are made under the pressure of temporary fads by people who let one believe they know how dangerous and important things are and call themselves "environmentalists." We learn slowly that there is no common sense in some of the regulations and even less science. One has to learn that at the moment one is born one has to die in due time and that in between, there are risks which may shorten that time. Biology does not have any "no-risk" factors. Many of them come with our genome and within the world we live.

So folks, we have to go to school again and learn what the people at our New Mexico Environment Department prescribes: You will have to know some 88 definitions of common things, some of which have up to 10 sub-definitions; e.g. such which fall under the term "special wastes"—just to give you one example. There are wastes "treated formerly characteristic hazardous wastes (TFOH)," "packing house and killing plant offal," "asbestos waste," "ash," "infectious waste," "sludge," "industrial process waste," "residue from a substance or commercial product," and "petroleum contaminated soils." Enough? There are 87 others. The document had lately 188 pages without the appendices.

What does that have to do with what we, Mr. and Mrs. Head of a Household, are supposed to contribute? That depends on what we must do and what we are willing to do. There are basically two categories of trash which are produced in our daily routine, beginning with the purchase of things, things which we are using and the things we have to get rid of. Most of them are relatively small and go into our trash cans and bags. Most of this goes into our "Municipal Landfills."

The second category includes things which are big, such as stuff from our gardens like branches, weeds and similar. They go into another type of landfill, called a "Construction and Demolition Debris Landfill" together with big boxes of wood, other wooden things, hardboard, metal parts, etc. For a pickup of such items one has to call the authority or to bring them to the Capitán landfill, oneself.

Depending upon where one lives, one has to pay something for the service, or, in other loc-tions, notably Ruidoso, it's free. Very large items have to be picked up by workers of the authority (or the contractor who exchanges them). That includes refrigerator, ranges, furnaces, warm water heaters, in short anything that is big, bulky metal. In the "good old days," such stuff was white enamel and therefore, it's called "white waste" still these days.

And then, one can do a lot of things which reduce the amount of waste that otherwise has to be buried. The term is "waste reduction." A lot can go into the blue igloos: metal cans, glass, plastics, newspaper paper. And if one has a secluded little portion in ones backyard, one can compost. It is amazing how little of the waste is left. Yet, it depends on one's own initiative, this kind of waste reduction because there is no mandate for it in the local or county-wide ordinances.

This is the way we are doing things in this respect here. The basic stuff, i.e. the "What-Goes-Where?" remains the same all over New Mexico. Because it is our law and the New Mexico Environment Department enforces it. Should one come from "abroad," e.g. from California, the rules there and the penalties are much more stringent than they are here. In other states they may be laxer. All together, they follow the rules imposed by the Environmental Protection Agency, the EPA. So, don't say you don't know. Or if you really don't, just ask your neighbor or call the authority.

Why then are the spaces surrounding our collection bins and dumpsters littered with trash? One reason is because people are careless. But that is only a minor factor. Much more often one sees a dumpster overflowing from trash bags which are certainly not generated by some household. True, during the summer months, we have a sometimes dramatic increase of the population through visitors. True, it is sometimes impossible to respond immediately to a notification that dumpsters are more than full. Often though the authority is not even notified and everybody is upset if an unsightly situation continues for several days. Besides that, however, there are always people who are willing to break the rules. There are folks looking around whether anyone is watching and if nobody does, the cuckoo's egg is placed into the wrong nest. Most of them are not you and I, because our households don't generate that much and we have trash cans, polycarts, or dumpsters nearby.

A good portion of the waste is demolition debris. And that is not generated by our visitors but rather by people who know the rules and just bend them. It has been suggested to increase the collection fees for solid waste. That would contradict the axiomatic claim that increase (growth) has the result of a corresponding increase of the revenue basis for our services. I think that is not necessary if everyone cooperates with our Solid Waste Authority.

It starts with myself and you and everybody else including our law enforcement officers and the courts. It's our money—and health, folks!

Local Doe heads national group

Jo Newton, a member of the Ruidoso Drove No. 152, was recently installed as the 74th Supreme President of the Benevolent, Patriotic Order of Does of the United States of America, in Rapid City, South Dakota, before more than a 1,000 Does and Elks. She joined the Does in 1986.

Her installing officers were Ann Patrick of Union Drove No. 148, her daughter, Belinda Puckett of Ruidoso Drove No. 152, and Charlene Ryan of Artesia Drove No. 45. Her husband, Kenneth, and their children, Kenneth, Garrett, Belinda and their families attended the ceremony.

Her daughter read a poem, which she wrote, on her theme for the year, "Forever Friends."

On behalf of the Ruidoso Drove, their president, Joanne Hall presented Newton with a life membership gold card. She was also presented with a dozen long-stemmed roses on behalf of the Ruidoso Elks Lodge No. 2086 by trustee, Odell Proctor.

According to a news release, she will represent Grand Lodge as she makes 32 official visits in the coming year to district and state meetings throughout 25 states promoting the continuance of benevolent work and instructing ritual at schools of instruction.

At the end of her year in office, she will conduct weeklong meetings at the June, 1995 Grand Lodge Convention in Harlingen, Texas.

Newton and her husband are in the auto parts business and also breed, raise and race quarter horses and thoroughbreds.

She is an artist, who is better known for her portraits of children and who says her favorite models are her grandchildren, according to the news release.

She spends part of her time as a docent at the Museum of the Horse.

Her husband, Ken, was installed as president of the National Bullshippers of America, an organization of Elks designed to raise money for the Does at their national conventions. He presented her with a briefcase on behalf of the Bullshippers and a check for $1,800 for Grand Lodge to be used for their charitable donations.

Eight members of the Ruidoso Drove and the Doves of New Mexico hosted a reception following the installation.

The B.P.O. Does was organized and incorporated with the advice and counsel of a committee of Elks in Omaha, Nebraska, in 1921. It is a national benevolent organization whose members work in harmony with the Elks and is dedicated to the principles of patriotism, charity, loyalty and love.

Their benevolence work amounted to one million and 500,000 volunteer hours last year in 156 Doves and whose membership totals over 18,000 Does.

The King of Howdy reigns at the Castle

Meet Roy Black, the King of Howdy in New Mexico.

Black is one of the versatile founding members of the Castle Mountain Music Makers at Miner's Castle Mountain Music Show.

"Not only can he walk all over the bass guitar (in musician talk, that means he's really good), but he can play a harmonica that will send chills up your spine, it is so beautiful," reads a news release provided by the Castle.

Black is also the Castle comedian, better known as "Fred, the talk-a-holic" and "there ain't nothing he's not an expert on." He has a very unique way of putting on his guitar that always gets a response from the audience.

He is bilingual, as a result of the exposure to the Mexican language while growing up in El Paso, Texas. He gives a lesson in Spanish speaking that no one can forget and also does a tremendous job on "La Bamba."

According to a press release, "if you've never seen Mexican ballet, especially his version, then you just haven't lived."

Black and his wife, Jamie, still consider El Paso home, although they spend their summers in Ruidoso. They have two children, Jessie and Jarred, and a third one on the way.

Besides working at Castle Mountain Music, Black works with his father, Jack Black, at Ruidoso Downs Race Track. He has been with the Castle since it opened in 1992. He has spent many years in the music business and before becoming a Music Maker, he and another member of the Music Makers, Kim Blakeley, were in a well-known band, Timberline, for 14 years. Timberline played throughout the New Mexico/Texas area and Black is recognized by many people because of that exposure.

"Black is unpredictable and sometimes, just for kicks, he even changes the script on the other members of the band," according to the release.

Other than making great music and hilarious comedy, he just loves to pick on Elvis. The people at Castle Mountain Music think that Black is pretty special and they think everyone else will, too.

For outstanding musical variety and outrageous comedy, an invitation is extended to see Black at Castle Mountain Music on Highway 70 West in Ruidoso.

"They treat everyone like 'ROY-alty!'"

Have a seat

Pat Healy is coordinating a program to provide chairs for the Ruidoso Little Theatre's new home. For just $6, anyone (everyone) is invited to "purchase" (pay for) a chair to furnish the theater next to the main post office. That $6 donation will not only pay for a chair, it also will give the donor a chance on a drawing for two free season passes to Ruidoso Little Theatre productions. "Play It Again, Sam" opens at 8 p.m. tonight, following the benefit party sponsored by Altrusa Club of Ruidoso at 7:30 p.m. The play continues at 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday and Thursday through Saturday for the next two weekends.

On Campus

JAMIE MULHOLLAND has been named an All-American Scholar by the United States Achievement Academy.

The USAA has established the All-American Scholar Award Program in order to offer deserved recognition to superior students who excel in the Academic disciplines.

All-American Scholars must earn a 3.3 or better grade point average, and be nominated by a school instructor, counselor, or other qualified sponsor.

These scholars are also eligible for other awards given by the USAA.

Mulholland, who attends Ruidoso High, was nominated for this National Award by RHS counselor Linda Hawthorne.

Mulholland will appear in the All-American Scholar Directory, which is published nationally.

"Recognizing and supporting our youth is more important than ever before in American history. Certainly, winners of the All-American Scholar Awards should be congratulated and appreciated for their dedication to excellence and achievement," said Dr. George Stevens, Executive Director of the United States Achievement Academy.

The Academy selects All-American Scholars upon the exclusive recommendations of teachers, coaches, counselors and other qualified sponsors. Once awarded, the students may be recognized by the USAA for other honors.

Mulholland is the daughter of Mark and Pat Mulholland.

MICHELLE HASENBULER of Ruidoso, an entering freshman accounting major, was awarded a T. Boone Pickens College of Business Scholarship and a Mesa Scholarship for Academic Excellence at West Texas A&M University, Canyon, Texas.

The general overall criteria for the scholarships was academic excellence and involvement in departmental activities.

A $10,000 endowed scholarship is being established at the Robert O. Anderson Schools of Management at The University of New Mexico in memory of former state senator Joseph Mercer.

The intent of the fund is to provide full tuition for a business student from New Mexico who plans to pursue a law degree. The scholarship will be awarded on the basis of academic performance. Mercer, an Albuquerque attorney, also had numerous business and real estate interests throughout New Mexico.

Additional contributions to the fund, which has been established by an anonymous donor, are welcome and should be sent to the Anderson Schools Foundation, in care of the Office of External Relations, Anderson Schools of Management, The University of New Mexico, Albuquerque, New Mexico 87131. Santa Rita Fiesta is set for this weekend

The annual Santa Rita Fiesta in Carrizozo will begin at 6:30 p.m., Saturday, July 16, with the Fiesta Queen crowning mass.

The Fiesta dance will take place from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. at Club Carrizo with music by "Primo."

On Sunday, July 17, there will be an 11 a.m. mass in Fred Chavez Park, across the street from the Santa Rita Catholic Church, with Bishop Ramirez officiating; followed by an enchilada dinner plus arts, food and craft booths in Santa Rita hall. A horseshoe tournament will also take place in the park.

The afternoon entertainment will feature the following: Medina Family Band, Santa Rita Spanish Dancers, Bethany Rey Sanchez, Hondo Fiesta Dancers, Krystal Roybal and Sangre de Cristo Musicians from Taos.

The day will end with Fiesta Bingo at 3 p.m. in Santa Rita hall.

Dancers prepare to perform

Twenty-three students, pre-school age through seventh grade, have spent a good part of their summer vacation practicing dance steps in preparation for the Santa Rita Fiesta in Carrizozo this month.

This year's Santa Rita Fiesta Dancers include several new members; some new dances will also be included in the show on July 17 at Fred Chavez Park in Carrizozo, as part of the annual Santa Rita Fiesta.

The youngsters have worked their practice schedule around other summer commitments, such as baseball, 4-H, gymnastics, Bible school and family vacation trips, according to a news release.

The Santa Rita Fiesta Dancers have given up morning cartoons or sleeping late in an effort to participate in 9 a.m. dance practices, continues the release.

This year's dance group is again coordinated by Polly E. Chavez with the assistance of dance instructor Lucia Vega.

The two women have many years experience working with youth of all ages, reads the release.

Chavez, who is involved in a variety of art forms, is an educational assistant at Carrizozo Municipal Schools. Vega is a former Hondo Fiesta dancer and a Carrizozo Schools business and physical education retired teacher.

Chavez and Vega started the dance group for last year's Fiesta. Last summer the group also performed at Carrizozo school events and at the church fiestas at Three Rivers and Corona.

The following dancers will perform several dances following the Fiesta Mass in Fred Chavez Park on July 17: Sofia Ramirez, Kaitlyn Vega, Jude Renney, Gregory Vega, Timmy Barala, Tasha Renney, Christopher Vega, Lucas Hernandez, Nathan Chavez, Joseph Samora, Jesse Samora, David Sidwell, Heather Renney, Sonya Vega, Stephanie Brewer, Jimmie Samora, Ashley Furness, Sarah White, Stella Brewer, Ashley Samora, Kimberly Vega, Josh Vega and Renee Raal.

and to add some color to the home. Church spokesman John Duncan said the work is a productive way for teenage members to spend part of their summer. Several other homes, which are owned by individuals who physically are unable to handle repairs, are slated for work this during the next week. The church is located on Sudderth Drive next to United New Mexico Bank.

Massage therapy feels like a luxury, but it's a healthy choice

Many people think of massage as a luxury, something extra to make themselves feel good. Massage, though, is an ancient healing art that not only feels good, but is good for you.

Massage therapy has gained popularity in Ruidoso with a proliferation of therapists including Becky Tillman, Sara Bagby, Libby Coray, Beth Miller, Jan Prince, Joe Martinez and David Duke.

Therapists study anatomy, physiology, kinesiology, nutrition and a variety of massage methods to earn their licensure. Students of massage therapy must put in hundreds of practical hours, practicing on their clients free of charge.

"You learn a million things, but you can only use some of them in an hour," said Jan Prince, who has been practicing in Ruidoso for seven years. "Techniques vary from client to client and from therapist to therapist."

Many massage methods come out of the Swedish massage tradition. Massage generally increases circulation, reduces toxins and lowers blood pressure. Neuromuscular massage treats specific problems such as an injury, muscle spasms or inhibited range of motion.

"It's all about movement," said Sara Bagby. "We think of ourselves as dense, but the body is always fluid."

Like many alternative health arts, massage enlists the emotional and mental aspects of the client to promote good health. Many clients learn to relax under their therapist's guidance.

"I use a lot of visualization," said Prince. "I tell them to imagine that the knot is butter melting under my thumb."

Massage is complementary to many other healing practices such as chiropractic or yoga. It can also be a helpful adjunct to psychotherapy, helping clients recover from trauma, repeated physical, emotional or sexual abuse, an addiction or an eating disorder.

"We are increasingly deprived of touch in our society," said Bagby, "and touch is really essential to our health."
