Tribe nuclear vote may be Jan. 31

Registered members of the Mescalero Apache Tribe may vote as early as Jan. 31 on a proposal to store spent nuclear fuel rods on their reservation in neighboring Otero County.

Silas Cochise, director of the storage project, said Friday that the tribal council is considering the January date, but a final determination will not be reached until the council meets again. No date has been set for that meeting, he said.

Tribe Vice President Fred Peso said, "We'll keep you informed as to what's happening. We'll give you information as we get it."

Teen accused of burning classmate

A 16-year-old Ruidoso High School student allegedly attempted to set a classmate on fire after a pep rally, police report.

The victim's hair was singed by flames that ruined his $150 jacket, police said. No medical attention was required.

Police said the male victim had just left the rally when the suspect placed burning tissue paper on the back of his NFL-team jacket. The tissue apparently ignited his coat, but the flames were patted out by fellow classmates before causing bodily harm.

Witnesses identified the suspect to police, who took the boy into custody the same morning. The boy admitted the deed, saying he had responded to a dare and didn't mean to do it, police said.

The boy is being accused of battery and criminal damage to property. He was released to the custody of his parents.

Driver ruptures Capitan gas line

An explosive situation was avoided late Saturday after a pickup ruptured a Capitan gas line.

Fire and police officials kept on-lookers away until Zia Natural Gas employees turned off the gas. About 270 pounds of pressure was in the line.

The pickup driver, Luis Davila, 27, of Ruidoso, was charged with driving while intoxicated.

Weather

The National Weather Service forecast for the south-central mountain region of New Mexico calls for partly cloudy skies today with scattered rain showers, then becoming partly sunny this afternoon. Winds are from the west/southwest from 20-30 mph with gusts up to 45 mph. A wind advisory is in effect for today. The predicted high is in the mid-50s with the low tonight in the low-20s.

The forecast for Tuesday calls for decreasing winds and colder temperatures with a 20% chance of snow and a predicted high in the mid-40s.

Officials scramble to find new use for Fort Stanton

by DIANNE STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Soon after Gov. Gary Johnson said last week he would close Fort Stanton Hospital, county and fort officials hit the telephones to come up with a plan to save the hospital and some of its 210 employees.

Dub Williams, who will take office as Lincoln County's new state representative Tuesday, said he has set up an appointment with the governor at 2 p.m. Jan. 26 in Santa Fe to discuss Fort Stanton.

"As soon as I heard about it, I went to the governor's office," Williams said Sunday. "He wasn't in. I talked to (administration assistant) Lou Gallagos and he knew the situation. I told him we need to try to find an option for those folks who will be out of a job."

"It's my suggestion that Fort Stanton people sit down and brainstorm and come up with options and that they send some spokesmen."

Williams doesn't encourage a large group storming the governor's office.

"I don't really believe that would away anything," he said. "It would be better to send good spokesmen to express their ideas."

Williams has talked to Fort Stanton Administrator Ervin Aldaz and several employees about options.

"It will have a domino effect when those people lose their jobs," Williams said. "It's such a fine facility with a cafeteria and gymnasium. Little would have to be done to the physical plant."

County Commissioners have called a special meeting at 8:30 a.m. Tuesday at Fort Stanton. They hope to huddle with employees, new Health Department Secretary Alex Valdez and others to come up with other options. They also plan to discuss the specifics of the phase-out of the hospital in its current capacity.

capacity.

"I will be there to represent the (fort) staff and some of their concerns and needs," said Aldaz, who said he was caught completely off guard by Johnson's announcement.

"I had no inkling of anything," he said Friday. "All I know is we were phasing out development disabled (DD) clients and starting our long-term care. We are, as of yesterday, still decorating and remodeling cottages."

"I was ready to transition into long-term care until I was notified different, and I was notified (Thursday). I went up and met with the secretary to answer some questions and give some direction."

Valdez didn't have all of the answers last week, Aldaz said.

"I think they really will be answered Tuesday morning by the secretary," Aldaz predicted.

On Thursday, speaking through his press secretary, Johnson said he based his decision on a 1990 court order that directed all DD clients of the fort to be removed and placed in community programs. Since the state in his view is no longer interested in creating a long-term nursing care facility at the fort, there's no reason to continue to carry more than 200 employees with a patient count of 26.

A court order freezing admissions of the new patients until all DD clients are removed prevented Aldaz from building a patient count, and from bringing in Medicaid reimbursement. He had asked the state for $2 million to finish out the current fiscal year and for $7.5 million as a budget for next year.

In his proposed budget, Johnson allocated $500,000 to be used to phase out the fort's operation.

Fort workers cite feelings of betrayal

"Betrayed" is the word that comes up most often, especially from those who have worked for more than two decades at Fort Stanton Hospital and face the possible loss of their jobs, homes and state retirement benefits.

"There's kind of a mass resume writing and application filling out that really started (Friday) after (Hospital Administrator Ervin Aldaz) talked to the staff," said Tom Trost, director of social services at the fort.

If the $500,000 annual budget laid out by Gov. Gary Johnson stands, the hospital in Lincoln County that has cared for the sick or developmentally disabled (DD) for nine decades will be closed.

And although state officials say they will help retrain and relocate the fort's 210 employees, the impact on the small county of 14,000 may be devastating on an economic and personal basis. Many families have been employed by the state for generations.

Trost is looking at a double whammy.

As president of the Capitan School Board and a 16-year employee of the fort, he will feel the impact on his own family as well as the school district that could lose up to 73 of its 562 students.

"Everyone at the fort is trying to keep their sense of humor," Trost said during an interview Friday. "I just hate to see what this is going to do to the school and the whole area. I'm getting off the board, but it's going to affect my kid's and everybody else's education. Programs will have to be cut if we lose kids and the budget shrinks. I'd hate to think 10 years on school board fighting for certain things is just going down the tubes."

It's not just the loss of a job that worries long-time employees. Uncertainty about retirement benefits also is a concern, he said.

State legislators unclear about future of gambling

by PETER EICHSTAEDT
The News Correspondent

State legislators last week provided little indication whether casino gambling might be approved for New Mexico resorts or racetracks.

House Speaker Ray Sanchez, D-Albuquerque, said testimony during hearings in Santa Fe by a dozen Ruidoso residents and national experts show action needs to be taken to revive the ailing horse racing industry.

"It's extremely important that we do something," Sanchez said at the end of the three days of hearings before the state Subcommittee on Gaming and the Lottery.

"We legislators are limited in what we can do," he said, because of competing interests for state monies and tax breaks.

"The public asks us to justify our votes," Sanchez said, explaining special benefits and privileges for certain industries or communities is not acceptable to many New Mexicans.

As a result, Sanchez challenged Ruidoso residents to help convince the rest of the state that gambling at racetracks and resorts is necessary.

"You have a responsibility to your industry to explain what it is going to do when it is done," he said. "And you need to be able to explain what we have done."

Sanchez's comments came at the end of lengthy testimony in which appeals were made to the Legislature for approval of gaming operations at racetracks and resorts.

Governor supports racetracks

Gov. Gary Johnson told legislators last week he favors allowing gambling machines only for racetracks and non-profit fraternal organizations.

Dub Williams, who will be sworn into office as Lincoln County's new Republican state representative Tuesday, heard Johnson give legislators a preview of his views following a seminar in Santa Fe on gambling late last week.

The state Supreme Court Wednesday declared the November

"Ruidoso would like to be considered for gaming," Ruidoso Mayor Jerry Shaw said.

Despite the ruling by the state Supreme Court that a constitutional amendment on a lottery and video gaming was illegal, "We still want it," Shaw said of Ruidoso residents.

Because the Mescalero Apache have casino-style gambling on their neighboring reservation, "We want it also and we also want it at the track," she said.

Plus, Ruidoso would like to have video gaming approved for selected large hotels in the community, Shaw said.

Despite the emotional appeals, several legislators questioned the need for the state Legislature to provide special tax breaks and privileges to horse racing and resorts.

Rep. Luciano "Lucky" Varela, D-Santa Fe, said horse racing was "a marginal industry," and perhaps should be allowed to die.

Rep. Edward Sandoval, D-Albuquerque, said blaming the troubles of horse racing on gambling was not a solution.

"We've got to do something other than blame gambling for the problems of horse racing," Sandoval said.

Ruidoso lobbyist John Underwood countered that if Ruidoso Downs, which lost $16 million last

Ruidosoans voice concerns

A number of Ruidoso residents traveled to Santa Fe last week to appeal to the state Legislature for gambling in the area's race tracks and hotels.

Here are some of the comments:

Wilton Howell, county commissioner: "You'd be amazed at the number of homeless people we would have without the horse racing industry."

Phil Mote, chairman of the Ruidoso State Bank and former racetrack official: "I don't know what the town would be like without the racetrack."

Tony Wilcox, motel owner:

"There's a lottery in the state, but it is bleeding the state (because state residents are buying out-of-state lottery tickets). Let's wake up and get a level playing field for New Mexico."

Joan Bailey, Ruidoso Chamber of Commerce: "Racing is in a state of transition. The key ingredient to make it stable would be gaming. I plead with you to give us the opportunity to let it survive."

Lowell Newmeyer, horse breeder and seller: "Without racetracks, the horse sales will be gone and the breeding industry will be gone."

Johnson told legislators the racing industry needs video gambling to survive, Williams reported Sunday, and some of the money generated by the machines should be designated for racing purses.

"The governor is aware that if the racing industry goes under, the ripple effect will be felt everywhere with the people who raise horses and those who produce the feed and down the line," Williams said.

"He indicated that on Tuesday he will recommend gambling only debated during the legislative session between the executive and legislative branches," Valdez said Friday. "In the final analysis, the Legislature will send to the governor a house appropriation bill and the governor will act or not act on that bill. That's when a decision will be made."

"That's not to say the governor isn't (committed) to his position. No one would take a position like this when it affects people's lives as it does, and not spend a lot of time reflecting and hoping it's the right decision."

As part of his decision-making process, the governor reviewed a report submitted by a transition team assigned to the health department, said Valdez, who was involved in the team.

The group reviewed the situation at Fort Stanton and various options as part of its report to the governor, he said.

"This department operates on a $300 million budget with 4,000 employees and 60 different programs."

Fort Stanton was just one subject covered in a 45-minute period," he said.

"These issues aren't new issues," Valdez said, referring to options for the fort. "They have been analyzed by this department and other departments for two years now."

As for timing of layoffs, Valdez said it will take at least 60 days for the legislative session to run its course.

"It is our responsibility as an agency to ensure we plan for the possibility of closure," he said. "We need to develop and get to the state personnel office a layoff plan. I envision a personnel plan which is phased in, because we have to continue to phase out the DD clients before June."

"We were going to be in a layoff mode regardless whether the decision was for closure or some other decision (because of the lack of patients)."

The order of layoffs will not necessarily be based on seniority, he said.

"There still has to be a full range of service to those DD clients whether there are 19 or one," Valdez said.

Advocates' reaction

Jim Jackson, executive director of Protection and Advocacy Systems Inc., said his group is pleased with the fort's projected closing.

The agency represented several patients in their attempts to close institutions and place DD clients in settings that more closely resemble "normal" living situations.

"With respect to its closure as a DD facility, we do welcome that news since it completes a process begun 10 years ago when the state first announced it intended to close it as a DD facility," Jackson said. "So in some ways it shouldn't come as news, although it has been a long time coming."

"I think the decision reflects a change in the DD service system compared to 30 years ago in 1966 when it started. It signals the end of an era and the state's commitment to provide the needed level of individual support and services so they (DD) can live and work in their own communities."

The initial court order didn't require the hospital's closure, Jackson said. Instead, it said DD patients who would benefit from relocation must be removed. When that number appeared substantial, the state decided to close the facility and that decision was ratified by court order, "but only as a DD facility," Jackson said. "I don't believe any other use was addressed."

Although there is a demand for nursing homes, most are in communities so families can live nearby and visit, he said.

"Even for seniors, there is a movement for home-based care and community facilities," Jackson said. "It certainly has some unfortunate ramifications for Lincoln County, but it reflects changes in the way service systems are being structured these days. Institutional care, especially in a facility like Fort Stanton, which is in a pretty rural and isolated section of the state, made sense years ago when there wasn't much out there. But these days, it's a different era."

year, was allowed to go under, then the community would likely fold as well.

"Ruidoso exists because of the tourism from the gambling industry that has existed here from the 1940s," he said. "It's a real loss and we've got to do something."

Supporters of the horse racing industry argued that additional gaming at racetracks would keep alive an industry that pumps $367 million into the state's economy from direct and indirect spending.

Racing was said to be the 4th largest retail industry in New Mexico, providing 9,300 jobs, with 4,800 of the jobs being directly related to racing and another 4,500 in support industries such as agriculture and horse breeding.

Currently five tracks operate in the state, attracting an attendance of 1.4 million people. The industry generates $20 million in licenses and fees.

Jim Hayes, a nationally-recognized economist, reported that a state lottery would cause about an 18% drop in racetrack pari-mutuel revenues.

He also said if video and other games of chance are approved in the state, it will cause a further drop-off of 35%-40% in money spent at tracks.

for racetracks and for non-profit fraternal groups and service clubs, who return what they generate to their communities one way or the other.

"Right now it sounds like the governor isn't leaning toward resort communities, perhaps because some, like Angel Fire, don't want it.

"As this evolves, the legislature will have some input," Williams added. "By the time it gets through, it may not look like this at all."

up on my wall with the date of July 12, 2003, my retirement date," Trost said. "Probably five years ago when a lot was happening and I was very angry, I added the asterisk to stand for 'if not before.'"

"(State retirement benefits have) kind of kept me going. When you get all the stress and get fed up with it, you think, 'I've got such an investment here.'"

"Unless something comes up, I feel kind of betrayed that I'm not going to have that."

Johnson has said his decision to close the hospital is based on a court ruling that the fort is no longer needed as a treatment and training center for DD clients.

He's not interested in a plan to handle long-term nursing care patients there, an option pursued earlier when it appeared the fort would close.

Alex Valdez, newly appointed secretary of the Health Department, said Friday he doesn't have a date fixed for the start of layoffs.

"It's not my intent to just shut down the hospital," he said. "It's my intent and the governor's to put together a cabinet council to include myself, the department of labor and some of the other state agencies so that we can provide a full range of services to the employees of Fort Stanton, including retraining and helping them look for jobs."

Valdez would like qualified Fort Stanton employees to be given first right of refusal for any jobs that open up within the health department and its operations.

"Now granted, I know there are employees who can easier than others pack up their bags and go to Las Cruces or Albuquerque, and find a good job. Their services are in demand. There are other people who have been there five and six generations and that is their roots. I know how difficult it is going to be."

His staff also will be exploring another use for the fort, Valdez said. "I'm not saying we're going to find it, but we're looking at the private sector as a possibility."

Valdez doesn't know exactly how accrued state retirement benefits would be handled under different options.

Trost said if the state isn't operating the fort, the employees probably won't see their full retirement.

"I think I can draw it out and invest or leave it in and once I reach a certain age, collect a lower percentage of retirement," he said.

Employees of the fort have been living under nearly constant stress since the 1980s when the effort to close the fort began to intensify, he said.

"Since I've been here, I don't know how many times they said they were going to close it," Trost said. "It's just been a constant thing."

"The stress level of it, gee whiz, you say, 'I don't know if I can take another one.' In 1980, I think it was, we were down to less than 100 residents. That's when we thought it was going to happen. But it didn't and they told us to go back to capacity and it didn't take us long."

"We've always handled the difficult clients."

Trost and his wife Ruby have three children, two already grown and one seven-year-old son in 2nd grade.

"We've sat down and talked about it," Trost said. "My wife is an eternal optimist. I'm just lucky to have her. She says things happen for the best and we've just got to find out what that is."

But Trost is worried about having to live away from home and not seeing his son grow day by day.

"We have a home here, a big investment," he said. "My son's biggest fear was that he would have to leave school. We told him no, that doesn't affect him, but we already talked to him that things he's used to having, he might not have."

Soon after Trost was hired as a social worker in 1978, he found himself the only social worker with 180 residents.

"But you had a lot more time then to deal with the residents more one-on-one, because there was less paperwork," Trost said. "Gradually, the paperwork began to increase and it got to be a paper war."

He now supervises three social workers.

Over the years, he's formed lasting friendships with the families of many of the clients.

"They come to really trust and rely on you," he said. "Some still are having problems with the community placements, although I think most are pretty successful. Just moving them isn't going to cure them."

One of the biggest frustrations since the court order in 1990 has been dealing with the lawyers and experts sent to the fort, Trost said.

"When you did exactly what they asked, it still was never enough," he said. "The staff, especially the direct care staff, busted butt to do a good job, but they never were satisfied."

Local school board candidate registers campaign complaint

by DON HIXON

Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Ruidoso school board candidate Susan P. Randle has filed a formal written complaint with the superintendent of schools involving campaigning on school campuses.

Randle filed the complaint Thursday after being told by school principals she would not be allowed to visit the schools, per instructions from central office. She also contacted Roger D. Montgomery, executive director of the National Education Association.

Randle said in her letter that other candidates have already been campaigning on school sites and she wants to be treated equally.

"I had appointments set up with three schools," Randle said. "They each called me back and said that central office had told them that Section 7.7 of the school policy manual prohibited the visits."

School Superintendent Mike Gladden said section 7.7 applies only to public school employees, not people running for school board positions. State law prohibits district school employees from running for the school board, Gladden said.

A paragraph in the personnel section of the school district policy manual says "Campaigning in person, circulating political literature for or against any candidate or cause, or the posting of such literature, is prohibited in the schools or on the school premises, with the exception of information and literature pertaining to school district, city, county, or higher education levies and bond issues."

Montgomery said he is looking into the matter.

"If they have allowed some (candidates) to do so (campaign on campus), they should allow access for all," he said.

Gladden said the incident was a misunderstanding.

"We had a person at central office who misinterpreted the section about campaigning," Gladden said. He declined to name the person.

"I happened to be attending a meeting out of the office or this would never have happened," he said. "We have always had equal access for school board candidates, and they are free to go into the schools."

Candidates are welcome to go into the teacher's lounges and visit with teachers at the schools as long as they are careful not to disrupt the educational process Gladden said.

"It's best to visit before or after school or during lunch," he said.

Gladden also said that the schools would not allow what he called formal campaigning, where teachers were called together to hear a campaign speech or receive literature.

Gladden said he contacted Randle late Thursday afternoon to explain the misunderstanding.

"We had a miscommunication and I think everything has been ironed out," Gladden said.

New Ruidoso police investigator chosen

by KATHLEEN McDONALD

Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Police detective Wolfgang Born, a five-year veteran of the Ruidoso Police Department, has just been named the squad's chief investigator.

The promotion places him in charge of the department's two other detectives. He is also responsible for the reports of the 15 patrol officers.

Born follows Lanny Maddox, who was promoted to the post of police chief in July. Born was appointed after taking written and oral exams reviewed by Maddox and five village citizens. Maddox says Born has a record of good judgment and skillful response to emergencies.

Born has an easy manner more in keeping with a guidance counselor than that of a detective-sergeant. He readily takes note of the good fortune life has lent him.

"I always wanted to police in a small town, a place like this, where real policing can still take place," he says.

Many years before his seven with the El Paso Police Department, the 38-year-old husband and father of two was raised in Germany by his maternal grandparents. He first encountered the American lifestyle when 12 years old.

It was then, in 1968, that he immigrated to join his mother, who had remarried a Texan and settled in El Paso.

"Talk about being homesick! Germany to El Paso — yick. But I wasn't given a choice," he explained.

Apparently, his mother and grandparents arranged for his move to the states, despite the fact that he'd only met his mother twice before.

She had left him to the care of her parents when he was an infant, in the northern Rhine Valley town of Oberhaesun, prior to taking residence in a different city with Born's brother.

"It was just a matter of life, different circumstances," Born says, immediately dismissing any pretense of hardship.

His father, who he has never known, left for East Germany soon after he was born, and became trapped there behind the east side of the Berlin Wall, he explained.

Wolfgang Born

Born didn't speak a plug of English when first arriving in Texas, and recalls the difficulty of language immersion through the public school system. By 1970, he acquired U.S. citizenship through his mother.

Today he speaks perfect English with a Texan twang, and salts his sentences with expressions like "Y'all," and "I ain't no milk boy, neither!"

Born returned to Germany for high school, and upon graduation opted to return to the states. Thereafter, he "bounced around a little," holding down jobs to secure his basic needs and studying criminology at Arkansas' Henderson State, the University of Texas at El Paso, that city's community college and Long Beach State in California.

He never did obtain a B.S., and although he has completed more than half the necessary credits, school is a distant thought.

"I have different priorities now," he explains, and points to one of his favorite truisms, a simple sentence displayed in his office among a dozen-plus police certificates and awards.

"Cherish home and family — a special treasure." His wife Diane, who he met in Massachusetts, and children Nicholas and Garret, come before all else, he says. This allows him to be on the job yet less susceptible to the infamous stresses associated with police work.

"For me, that says it all," Born concludes.

Mariachi popularity is music to his ears

by DON HIXON

Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Mariachi musicians are crossing national and cultural musical barriers with the unique blend of rhythms, as the music increases in international popularity.

One of the biggest fans of this upbeat music is Tomas Vigil, a native New Mexican who moved to Ruidoso last year. He has been playing the folk guitar since the age of 12.

Vigil will bring his love of the music to others through a new class called, of course, 'Mariachi! The class is being offered through the Community Education series of Eastern New Mexico University-Ruidoso. It begins Jan. 31.

Vigil has taught mariachi for two years at the University of New Mexico and has participated in the increasingly well-known Mariachi Spectacular in Albuquerque.

Vigil's other love is classical music, a love he developed in high school. He studied under the famous Cuban classical guitarist Hector Garcia while a music education student at the University of New Mexico. He has also participated in various master classes, including one at Lerida, Spain commemorating the 25th anniversary of the International Classical Guitar Course.

Vigil has performed in concert both in Spain and New Mexico, and now plays a variety of music at the In-Expresso-ble Cafe in Ruidoso Friday evenings.

Mariachi music originated in Mexico, but it is a blend of Spanish and Indian melodies, Vigil says, spiced with some African musical influences.

"During the French occupation of Mexico in the 1860's, this form of music was very popular during weddings and people thought that the name mariachi came from the word marriage," said Vigil. "Actually, the word originated with the Coccola Indians in Jalisco, Mexico."

Smaller mariachi groups roam among the audience, but larger groups, composed of 12 or more musicians and rivaling traditional orchestras, perform on stage.

Vigil, who has extensive knowledge of the origins of mariachi, says there is a reason behind the roaming mariachi groups.

"In the early 1900s there were many mariachi competitions in the plazas of Mexico," Vigil relates. "During the competitions, people and judges would walk around different stages. Eventually it evolved to where the musicians were roaming among the people instead."

Instruments used by mariachis include a Guitarron (large guitar), vihuela (very small guitar), guitarra de golpe (flamenco guitar), arpa (harp), violins (usually four or more), a trumpet, drums, violas, cellos and cornets.

"The mariachi class is for everyone," Vigil said. "Beginners, intermediate and advanced students should all find it interesting."

Students must provide their own instruments, Vigil said.

"The goal of the course is to eventually see the formation of a Ruidoso mariachi," he said.

Mariachi will be taught from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. on Tuesdays at the Ruidoso High School Fine Arts classroom. The class runs Jan. 31 to Mar. 28. The fee is $50.

Vigil may be contacted by calling 257-3482.

The Dreamer

A Truly Happy New Year in the Mountain Land

This morning the sun came up over Sunrise Mountain through a veil of clouds, turning them pearl, opal and rainbow colors.

A warm west wind singing down the valley drifted the clouds away and the golden sun shone down through a sky of January purple-blue.

The colors of the American flag are rippling against the soft green of the mountain.

Jays and pinon birds glide in from the hillside; and the sun shining through their spread wings turns them into birds from heaven with wings of blue light.

The temperature here in mid-morning is 58 degrees with the breeze now out of the south, bringing warm air into the vale.

Snow and rain of the last few days has all soaked into the thirsty ground, and you can see the tiny new blades of grass beginning to turn the mountain meadows green on the sunny side of the valley. And the buds on the lilac bushes are beginning to swell.

All this is response to a spring-like interlude here at the beginning of what is normally

by Daniel Agnew Storm

the coldest time of the year. You can feel your heart rejoice as you look out at a mountain world bright and cheerful here at the beginning of a glorious new year.

Best Wishes to John and Jaime Woodhouse

After bringing us many happy days while broadcasting to us on Constant Country KBUY, John and Jaime Woodhouse are moving to Roswell, where they will work for station KORK.

We wish them every good fortune and hope they will be back to visit. And after all, Roswell and Ruidoso belong to the same large neighborhood.

This is being sent to you a little after high noon on Jan. 12 and will reach you on the birthday of Martin Luther King Jr.

On this special day let us pray to the Lord that justice and good will may prevail among all mankind throughout the world.

And let us be grateful that New Mexico is a land of true brotherhood under the fatherhood of God.

The Months Ahead of Us

There is an old Spanish jingle that goes: "Enero primero, Febrero le falta poco, Marzo airoso, Abril lluvioso, Salimos a mayo, florido y hermoso." (January, the leader, February it lacks a little, March, rainy April, We come to May flowerly and beautiful.) January is indeed "the leader" showing the way to a wonderful New Year. Let us thank our Lord for this especially fine January, and all our blessings.

Ruidoso schools see decline in student absences and suspensions

by DON HIXON
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

School officials have reported a drop in suspensions and absences this school year.

And students told the Ruidoso School Board Tuesday they are gaining self-confidence because of the Challengers program, and even those with academic difficulties are improving.

Meeting for the first time this year, the Ruidoso School Board heard reports and updates on several items and programs.

Ron Hodges, Ruidoso High School principal, and Jenny Ames, student body president, reported about student improvements.

"We've noticed big changes in every area since Principal Hodges was hired," Ames told the board. "Morale has improved and there's a lot more pride."

Hodges quoted several sets of statistics to the board, including:

— The honor roll has 33 more students than last year.

— During the first semester, the number of students who received no credit in a course because of ten absences or more has dropped from 121 last year to 68 this year.

— Out-of-school suspensions have decreased by 77% since September of 1994.

— In-school suspensions and detentions have gone from 40-60 per week in 1993-1994 to 15 per week during the first semester of 1994-1995.

Hodges said providing a safe school environment that enhances the learning atmosphere for students, as well as the teaching atmosphere for staff, is still a priority.

Students and parents involved with Challengers, the Ruidoso Middle School's Alternative Education Program, raised $8,200 during September and October so the program is self-sufficient, said Jack Nelson, program adviser and Ruidoso Middle School counselor.

Several students involved in the program showed a video of a recent scuba training class and gave a progress report on activities and accomplishments.

The Challengers program uses a team approach to teach students leadership and cooperation.

First aid, including CPA training, is next on the agenda for the Challengers. Students in the program have already been rock climbing and rappelling, learned navigation skills, taken several hikes and camping trips, and simulated NASA space shuttle launchings.

Also reporting to the school board was Dr. Arlene Brown, who said the Student Health Center was treating more students this year because of expanded hours and increased student awareness. The center is open two days per week at the high school and one day at the middle school. Brown said the center may provide services at the elementary school next.

Certificates of appreciation for "Dedication and Commitment to the Students of Ruidoso High School" were presented by student body members to members of the school board and to The Ruidoso News.

The next meeting of the Ruidoso School Board of Education is at 7 p.m. Feb. 14 at the Administration Office, 200 Horton Circle.

Commissioners explore trimming Zia senior services

by DIANNE STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

As budget preparation time nears, Lincoln County Commissioners are casting cutting eyes at major programs in the county, looking for ways to streamline operations and reduce costs.

Commission Chairman Monroy Montes suggested that Cheryl LaBelle, director of the Zia Senior Citizens program, explore the possibility of centralizing portions of her operation.

"We have five centers, five cooks, five site managers and five drivers. There's no end," he said.

LaBelle said she contacted the state about using a central kitchen for meal preparation, but was told none of the other programs in the state operate that way and travel expenses would outweigh any salary savings benefit.

LaBelle said she has considered using frozen meals for the Corona center, which is situated at the northwest corner of the county.

The best approach would be to centralize purchasing and buy a walk-in freezer, allowing her to buy meat and other items in larger quantities and cut paperwork, LaBelle suggested. Meal preparation would continue at the individual sites or at nearby restaurants.

While Zia's total budget is $275,323 to run the five sites, only $25,656 comes from the county, down from $38,000 originally pledged for 1994-95, Commissioner L. Ray Nunley noted. That figure includes some transportation for medical appointments as far away as Albuquerque.

"How can you guarantee us it won't cost us a $60,000 match next year?" Montes asked.

"I don't know," LaBelle said. "I guess you just don't grow old."

Nunley said program participants have met or exceeded goals set by the county to raise money for the centers.

Commissioner Stirling Spencer said he doesn't want a public program to encroach on private businesses such as restaurants.

Montes asked for a report in 90 days detailing possible cuts or more efficient approaches to the service.

New liquor dispenser license fee set by county commission

Restaurant owners in the unincorporated areas of Lincoln County who want to serve alcohol with meals will pay $250 a year for a county license, in addition to state fees.

During their meeting Friday, county commissioners approved the license fee as part of a six-category schedule.

Lincoln County voters approved the new license category in the general election Nov. 3. The category was proposed by David and Virginia Vigil, owners of The Ellis Store in the settlement of Lincoln. They wanted to be able to serve wine with gourmet meals prepared at their bed and breakfast and for group dinners.

The license for temporary functions was also increased, from $10 to $50/day, but all other categories stayed the same.

In a related matter, a liquor dispenser license owned by Ruth Rael of Vaughn was transferred to David Hawkins, doing business as Ramon's Bar in the small town of Yesso at the northeast corner of the county.

Commissioner Stirling Spencer also requested permission to ask the state to re-examine the fee it charges to social clubs.

"Some of them don't make $500 a year," he said. "But the state moved their fee up from $200 to $1,200, and we need something more equitable."

Russian museum curator Lolanta Bondernko and Museum of Horse director Jay Wright study two bronzes by Russian artist Lancere. Bondernko, who runs one of the foremost horse-related museums in the world, confirmed Wright's suspicions about the pieces while she was here to help prepare for a show of Russian works.

Museum of Horse unearths bronzes by famous Russian while preparing for show

by DON HIXON
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Two bronze sculptures at the Museum of the Horse are causing excitement both in the United States and in Russia.

"We discovered two pieces in the Ann Stradling collection from one of the most famous Russian equine artists, Lancere," said Jay Wright, director of the museum. "We suspected they might be by Lancere but with the arrival of Lolanta Bondernko from Russia, we received confirmation. This is very exciting."

Bondernko is curator of the Museum of Horsebreeding in Moscow. Ironically, the discovery of the Lancere pieces was confirmed personally by this Russian expert because she was here to organize an exhibit at the Museum of the Horse of paintings and bronze sculptures from her museum.

This is only the second time these particular works have been allowed to be on display outside of Russia. The art was created by celebrated Russian 19th century artists.

"This could be the last time the exhibit tours," Bondernko said. "Our government funding has been cut off and without it we may not be able to continue."

Not surprisingly, the Museum of Horsebreeding collection includes some Lancere pieces, too.

"The discovery of two pieces by Lancere at this museum (in Ruidoso Downs) is exciting," Bondernko said. "We brought three of his pieces with us for the exhibition and to find two more already here is simply wonderful!"

Bondernko said Lancere was originally from France, but with the close of the Napoleonic Wars in the early 1800s, he stayed in Russia, began sculpting horses and was soon considered a national treasure.

The Russian exhibit will be titled "The Imperial Russian Horse: Equine Art From the Reign of the Czars." It opens at the Museum of the Horse in April.

Noted English equine art historian John Fairley, in his book Racing in Art, described the collection of art at the Museum of Horsebreeding as "probably the most extraordinary display of equestrian art in the world."

Bondernko was in Ruidoso Downs Monday to supervise the unpacking of the pieces. She spoke to The Ruidoso News through interpreter Tony Mishuk.

"I've been in the United States twice," Bondernko said. "The first time was last year, when the exhibit was shown at the Kentucky Derby Museum in Louisville, and now for this second showing in Ruidoso Downs."

Bondernko has been a curator with the Russian museum since 1970.

"I graduated with a degree from the Institute of Culture in Moscow in 1969 and was fortunate to find a position with the Museum of the Horsebreeding at the Timirjasev's Agricultural Academy in Moscow right away," she said.

Bondernko said the Museum of Horsebreeding differs from the Museum of the Horse because it does not have wagons and accessories on display. It does, however, display artifacts pertaining to native Russian and other important horse breeds.

"We have many paintings and sculptures tracing the different types of horses and lineages," Bondernko said. "Our museum was created in 1912 because there was no other country in the world with the horse livestock capita (more than 35 million) and the variety of breeds of horses as were in Russia." Scenes of racing, as well as military and sporting uses of the horse, are featured in the upcoming exhibit.

There are 41 pieces in the exhibition, 11 sculptures and 30 paintings, Bondernko said.

More than a dozen of the paintings are by N.E. Sverchkoff (1817-1898), considered by many to be one of the world's greatest talents in horse art, Bondernko said.

Lancere's works, along with the rest of the Russian exhibition, will be at the Museum of the Horse from April 22 until Sept. 10, 1995.

Peep Scoop

If your pet seems to spend hours each day shaking its head or scratching its ears, chances are you'll find earmites are the source of the problem.

According to Sandra Ford, assistant manager of the Lincoln County Humane Society animal shelter, earmites are a parasitic infestation that is quite common in most climates.

Unlike other parasites, the earmites don't feed on blood. It prefers the dead skin that continually is being sloughed off the animal, she said.

Earmites live out their three to four-week life cycle in the animal's outer ear canal, causing inflammation and sometimes more serious trouble from the constant scratching and shaking of the pet's head.

If you suspect earmites, consult your veterinarian about treatment, which usually consists of at-home administration of medication for up to four weeks, Ford advised. It's important to follow through with your vet's prescribed treatment to destroy all the adult mites and their larvae as a safeguard against the infestation recurring.

Earmites can spread easily from one pet to the next, she said. Your vet may recommend that you treat all pets at the same time.

Cat owners also should be aware that when a cat curls up for a nap, the mites can fall out of the ear or crawl and begin an infestation at the cat's tail base. That spot can be treated with a flea powder and the ear medication. Ford cautioned pet owners never to use flea powder in any animal's ear.

Meeting Wednesday

Persons interested in volunteering their time to help abandoned animals in the county are invited to the noon meeting Wednesday of the humane society at Cree Meadows Country Club.

Many different ways are open to help, including donating the money to sponsor an animal for neutering, spending time in the office, walking the dogs or playing with the cats.

During the summer, the society will start up puppy patrols again at Wal-Mart and will be looking for volunteer teams to hand out educational literature and to show off some of the spectacular animals up for adoption.

Next fall, society members hope to begin an outreach program in county schools and will need volunteers to assist.

Donations of food, bedding and other items also are appreciated.

Contact Ford or shelter manager Jim Higgins at 257-9841, or stop at the shelter on Gavilan Canyon Road for more information.

Bexer, a four-year-old Scotty-poo, is a real lover and enjoys "talking" when sitting on a new friend's lap. He's low to the ground and a bundle of hair. Because he's already neutered, his adoption fee is lower.

Naomi is a strikingly attractive gray and white Labra-dane. She's spayed and knows her sit and stay commands. She loves to play. A big baby herself, she gets along well with children. She'll need a BIG fenced yard!

Martines is new massage therapist

Joe Martines recently joined the growing group of alternative health care professionals practicing at The Centre for the Healing Arts in Ruidoso. Martines is a licensed massage therapist who has lived in the Ruidoso area all his life.

Martines' office at The Centre for the Healing Arts is located at 100 Lower Terrace in Ruidoso. He may be reached by calling 257-7655.

Library conference coming to Ruidoso

The New Mexico Library Association will hold its 72nd annual conference at the Ruidoso Convention and Civic Events Center April 26-28. Approximately 400 public and school librarians from the state are expected.

Ruidoso merchants and business owners are encouraged to get acquainted with the visiting members, said Nancy Eckert, Ruidoso Public Library director.

"We will have a special display table set up in the registration area for area businesses," she said.

For exhibit booth reservations, call 257-4335.

Tax training at annual convention

Owners of H & R Block income tax offices in New Mexico and Texas met recently in Dallas for an annual convention. They planned for the 1995 tax season and reviewed changes in tax laws and electronic filing requirements.

David Whitley, owner of the Ruidoso H & R Block office for the past 12 years, said the convention placed emphasis on handling IRS audits, major changes to the way the IRS will review claims for Earned Income Credits, income from discharge of indebtedness and service to clients.

The Ruidoso H & R Block office is located at 1400 Sudderth and is open Monday through Saturday.

Social Security could affect refund

If you want to file your income taxes electronically this year, everyone (even children under age one) listed on your tax return will need valid social security numbers.

The name and social security number of each person listed on your tax return must correspond with information on file with the Social Security Administration.

These requirements result from new IRS electronic filing procedures and may affect you in one or more of the following situations:

1) You have recently had a child and have not yet applied for or received his or her social security number.

2) You have changed your name because of marriage or divorce and have not informed the Social Security Administration of the change. The same is true for anyone else listed on your tax return, such as your spouse or dependents.

3) Someone listed on your tax return does not have a social security number for one reason or another. Taking the following steps could prevent problems when filing.

1) Apply for social security numbers for those who don't have them.

Individuals should use Form SS-5 to apply for a social security number.

2) Check your social security card and that of your spouse (if you're married) and make sure the names and numbers the Social Security Administration has on file match the information that will appear on your tax return. Inform the Social Security Administration of name changes on Form SS-5.

3) Check the social security card information for everyone else that will be listed on your tax return.

Form SS-5 may be obtained from the Social Security Administration or by calling 1-800-772-1213.

Coffee is steaming at the Steaming Bean

by DON HIXON

Ruidoso News Staff Writer

If a simple cup of hot black Folgers isn't your cup of tea, The Steaming Bean Coffee Co. has some more unusual varieties: Nutty Irishman, Banana Gorilla or Ski Lift Latte, to name a few.

The Bean recently began brewing coffee in downtown Ruidoso, 2629 Sudderth. It also serves old-fashioned hot chocolate and Torani steamers.

Steaming Bean Coffee Co. is owned and operated by Debbie Haines and her nine-year-old son Matt.

They moved to Ruidoso two years ago from Telluride, Colo. and opened the Steaming Bean in May of this year, Haines said.

Steaming Bean Coffee Co. has its headquarters in Telluride with other locations in Durango, Gunnison and Montrose, Colo. The company was featured in the January issue of Southern Living magazine.

"They were looking for a way to promote their coffee and we think they have a fantastic coffee line with great packaging," Haines said. "That's why we chose the Steaming Bean, but we are not a franchise."

The store has an espresso and cappuccino bar and uses 100% Arabica gourmet coffee beans. They have more than 20 coffee combinations on the menu.

"We can make just about any flavor of coffee you desire," she said. "We use an exclusive line of Torani flavorings so if you have a favorite candy bar we can make a coffee to taste like it."

Matt Haines, a student at White Mountain Elementary, helps his mother in the shop after school and on the weekends.

"Matt helps out a lot," Haines said. "He does deliveries to some of the businesses close by and is real good about doing things around the store."

Steaming Bean Coffee Co. also has a selection of pastries as beverage companions, including fresh baked Kaluah chocolate cake, white chocolate chip and macadamia nut cookies, cream cheese pound cake, bagels, muffins, and homemade cookies and brownies.

"What a lot of people don't realize is that even though we are a coffee company, we have quite a few things for kids and non-coffee drinkers," Haines said. "We have hot chocolate, which Matt says is the best in the world, and we have 'steamers,' made with Torani flavorings and steamed milk topped with whipped cream."

Steaming Bean Coffee Co. sells bags of coffee and gift baskets. Haines has also designed the Steaming Bean Locals Club, so when a customer purchases 10 beverages they get the 11th free.

Steaming Bean Coffee Co. opens every day at 9:30 a.m. The phone number is 257-7892.

Ruidoso Little Theater starts 1995 season with "Mary, Mary"

The Ruidoso Little Theater has chosen its four productions for the 1995 season.

The first play is in rehearsal and opens Feb. 16. "Mary, Mary," written by Jean Kerr, is a romantic comedy.

Mary McKellaway is contrary, clever and witty. When she arrives at the home of her ex-husband Bob to help with his taxes, we get a sampling of her wit and charm. Their marriage, it seems, floundered on the rocks of her unrelenting sense of humor. When Dirk, Bob's movie star friend, falls in love with Mary, Bob realizes he still needs her. Just in time - he's on the verge of marrying Tiffany, a rich young health nut, true love triumphs in the end.

Two male performers are still needed for "Mary, Mary," one in his 30s and one in his 50s.

The play runs Thursday-Saturday, Feb. 16-March 11.

Next on the boards will be "The Cemetery Club" by Ivan Menchell. Play dates are Thursday-Saturday, May 4-May 27.

When does the grieving stop and the living begin again for three widows? the answers are: Never for Doris, 'Soon' for Ida, and Lucille never started. Every month they go together to visit the graves of their departed husbands. When Ida finds life still holds surprises for her - in the person of Sam, a lonely butcher - Doris thinks she hasn't mourned enough and Lucille suggests she play the field. As they struggle to understand one another, the battles they wage are compassionate and funny.

The summer show will be William Inge's popular romance, "Bus Stop."

A bus out of Kansas City pulls up at a roadside diner in the middle of a snowstorm...all roads are blocked and the five travelers must hole up until morning. At the center of the story is a lovely nightclub entertainer who's been abducted by a rough young cowboy determined to take her to Montana. As a counterpoint to the main romance, the owner of the cafe and the bus driver find time to develop a friendship; a middle-aged scholar comes to terms with himself; and a young girl gets her first taste of romance.

"Bus Stop" will run Thursday-Saturday, July 13-Aug. 5.

The final play of the season is "Bell, Book and Candle" by John van Druten, scheduled Thursday-Saturday, Sept. 21-Oct. 14.

Gillian Holroyd casts a spell over an unattached publisher. He falls head over heels in love with her at once, and wants to marry her. But witches, unfortunately, cannot fall in love. This minute imperfection leads to a number of difficulties before the happy conclusion of the romance.

A children's play and workshop are planned for June, and the annual Betty Awards will be held on Dec. 2.

Season ticket prices are $30 and center stage society tickets are $60. To purchase tickets, write RLTI, Inc., P.O. Box 851, Ruidoso, NM 88345; or phone 257-5190 (theater) or 258-3417 (Steve Norbury).

RLTI, Inc. is a non-profit organization dedicated to bringing live theater to Ruidoso. Donations are tax-deductible.

Ruidoso Little Theater is always on the lookout for people interested in theater. Volunteers do everything from building sets, to applying make-up, to creating costumes.

The Betty Awards on Dec. 10 marked the end of Ruidoso Little Theater's first season in its new home at 2961 Sudderth Drive.

The Best Play Award was shared by "Play it again, Sam" and "The Odd Couple - Female Version." Best Director went to Mary Maxson for "Play it again, Sam." Susan Rogalla won Best Actress for her work in "The Murder Room" and Best Actor honors were shared by Steve Norbury for "Play it again, Sam" and Gene Templeton for "The Murder Room." Many business and technical worker awards were also given away.

Laura Clymer/The Ruidoso News

Catch me if you can

Ruidoso freshman Tawnya Reynolds attempts to dribble past her Cobre opponent. The Warriors opened district play against the visiting Indians Friday night. Cobre prevailed, 49-24. Ruidoso then lost to Silver Saturday night, dropping its record to 2-9 overall and 0-2 in district play. Coach Janie Roland's Warriors return to action this Friday night at Socorro before hosting Santa Teresa this Saturday night.

Hoopsters ready for district

by LAURA CLYMER
Ruidoso News Sports Writer

A little bit of adversity has gone a long way for the Ruidoso boys' basketball team. At least the Warriors' head coach Sid Wright thinks so.

"We played better basketball against Portales, Artesia and New Mexico Military Institute than we've played all year," Wright said. "We're certainly playing together better than we ever had."

Ruidoso has opened the new year with a tough pre-district schedule. On top of that, senior point guard Cory Hood, a starter, left the team last week for personal reasons.

But the Warriors have risen to the challenges, Wright said.

Teamwork will be key for the Warriors as they begin their district campaign this weekend, and so will the home crowd.

"We really need the fan support. The season is for real starting Friday," Wright said.

Tomorrow night Ruidoso hosts Portales before heading into District 3A play. The two teams met Jan. 7 with host Portales posting an 88-77 victory.

In their last meeting, PHS shot a sizzling 62% from the field. Wright doesn't expect the Rams to put up those numbers again. The Warriors will stick to their game plan of pressure defense and up-tempo offense.

Losses on the road to Artesia Thursday night (98-70) and NMMI (88-60) Saturday night dropped Ruidoso to 3-8 overall, but Wright said the Warriors stayed with their opponents and proved they could play with some of the better teams in the area.

"It has made us better, no doubt," Wright said of the team's schedule. "Last year these teams blew Ruidoso off the floor."

NMMI used a 12-0 run at the start of the third quarter to overpower the Warriors. The Colts' Taymon Domzalaki led all scorers with 30 points and grabbed a dozen rebounds.

"He's definitely a player," Wright said of the Duke-bound Domzalaki. "We tried the take the philosophy of letting him get his points and play the others straight up."

The strategy worked OK until the Colts took advantage of a Ruidoso lapse in the second half.

Ruidoso's Malik Waters countered with a 25-point performance, including four 3-pointers. Gabe Aguilar had 12 and Todd Young added 11 for the Warriors.

Now two full weeks into the new year, Wright said his players seem to be settling into their roles better. The first-year coach is able to platoon players and he is getting more consistent play from his big men inside.

Waters, Aguilar and Paxton Wright will share point guard duties in the absence of Hood. Wright said Hood talked to his teammates last week.

"He said he was just tired," Wright said.

The Warriors put another issue behind them at the Tularosa game Jan. 3. Wright disciplined Waters for a derogatory gesture he made during Ruidoso's Dec. 20 game against Capitan.

"There has been disciplinary action taken. I think it was appropriate," Wright said. The situation was handled by the coaching staff with the approval of the athletic director.

Wrestling team adjusts goals

by LAURA CLYMER

Ruidoso News Sports Writer

It's been a season of dashed hopes and changed expectations for coach Gerald Ames and his Warrior wrestlers.

The hopes of wrestling for some team success have altered to individuals wrestling for personal achievement.

Wrestling is largely an individual sport, but Ames was counting on a core of six experienced wrestlers to carry the team and its younger members through the season.

With only two of those six wrestling, Ames said the Warriors have set their sights on preparing junior Beau Jarvis and senior Matt Bates for the state tournament, and on getting the younger wrestlers some quality experience.

"Wrestling is not a team sport, but you feed off each others' success," Ames said.

For example, last year several Ruidoso wrestlers battled amongst themselves for most takedowns on the team. Now, with only two experienced wrestlers, competition within the team is a little more lopsided.

"Most of the kids we're wrestling shouldn't be wrestling varsity," Ames said. Of the six wrestlers Ames took to El Paso over the weekend for the Bowie Invitational, three were freshmen.

"We're going to struggle with them and try to bring them up a level," he said.

While Jarvis and Bates strive toward placing in the state tournament, Ames' underclassmen strive to stay off their backs.

"Our main thing right now is just to accomplish a move," Ames said. The Ruidoso coach said the Warriors work on scoring points and breaking down moves.

Most of the freshmen are happy to be wrestling varsity, Ames said. Success is knowing they were more successful this time than last time.

Ames has had to adjust his hopes, but this year has been no more trying than others, the long-time coach admitted.

"They are all trying" — this one mostly because I had such high expectations. I really expected us to do well," he said.

Ruidoso will enjoy the next couple of weeks wrestling in front of the home crowd. The Warriors' first home match of the season is Thursday against Roswell. Ruidoso then hosts a five-team tournament Saturday, Roswell, New Mexico Military Institute, Goddard, Carlsbad and possibly Cobre come to town Saturday.

urday for a day-long competition.

For the Warriors, the goal for these next events is basic.

"We're just going to try to survive. We're going to come out of those matches with just a few wins," Ames said.

Bates fifth at Bowie

Senior Matt Bates proved he can contend with some of the region's best wrestlers.

The 160-pound wrestler posted a 3-2 record at the El Paso Bowie Invitational — good enough for 5th overall in a field of 28 wrestlers.

Ames said Bates' performance is a good indication that he'll do well at state.

Ruidoso's other state hopeful, Beau Jarvis, had a tougher weekend. The 134-pounder won his first match, but then took on the tourney's No. 1 seeded wrestler. He lost out in the next two matches.

Junior Shaun Cobb was the only other Ruidoso wrestler to pick up a win. Cobb was 1-2 overall with a pin.

Tigers third at Reserve

by LAURA CLYMER

Ruidoso News Sports Writer

Despite losing one of its team leaders, the Capitan girls' basketball squad kept its form and took 3rd place at the Reserve Tournament over the weekend.

Tiger co-captain Jessica Cline injured her right knee in practice Monday, Jan. 9. The senior guard is one of the team's leading scorers, a three-year starter and four-year varsity player.

But the Tigers will have to play without Cline for at least the next couple of weeks, if not for the season.

"If she's back by the district tourney we'll be lucky," Capitan coach Norm Cline said. "We just have to go on and do with what we have."

Capitan did just that in Reserve.

The Tigers defeated Animas, 41-38, for 3rd place Saturday.

CHS easily could have been in the championship game had it not lost in overtime to Juarez Colonial in the semifinals.

"We really played well both Friday and Saturday," Cline said. "It was a good tournament for us."

The Tigers downed Reserve's junior varsity team, 55-15, Thursday in the opening round.

Against Juarez Colonial, Capitan faced a pair of 6-footers and one of the best guards they've played, Cline said.

The Tigers had two chances to beat Colonial in the waning moments of regulation. Capitan rallied from nine points down in the last three minutes to tie the game at 51. With less than 15 seconds in the game, Capitan's Coye Robbins stole the ball. Her short jumper rimmed out.

CHS had another chance to win it when Mandi Aldaz rebounded Robbins' miss. Aldaz's putback had the same fate, rattling in before bouncing out.

Colonial recovered in overtime and went on to win 59-55. Cris Gonzales led a balanced Capitan attack with 10 points. Amy Cline added seven points.

Capitan's free-throw shooting in the 4th quarter held off Animas in the 3rd place game. Freshman Sonya Wood hit five of six charity shots and the Tigers as a team nailed seven of 10 in the 4th quarter.

The Tiger defense limited the Panthers to just three field goals in the 2nd half. Animas stayed in the game because Capitan kept sending the Panthers to the free-throw line. Animas scored 17 points from the charity stripe in the 2nd half.

Aldaz paced the Tiger with 10 points followed by Wood's nine points. Robbins added seven.

Cline, who usually plays a number of players, adjusted his lineup according to his opponent at the tournament. The Capitan coach divided Jessica Cline's minutes evenly among the remaining players.

He'll stick with that strategy as the Tigers (6-7 overall) head into district play.

Depredation hunt deadline approaches

For big game hunters, the first deadline of the year to apply for a special hunt is approaching.

The last day to apply for "depredation hunts" on deer, elk, antelope and oryx is Feb. 4. Hunters seem to have a lot of questions about the depredation hunts, so let's see what they're all about.

The purpose for the hunts is when deer, elk or antelope feed on agricultural crops or damage fences and other property. Oryx also sometimes interfere with operations at White Sands Missile Range. When either of these problems occur, some of the offending animals will be removed. To accomplish this purpose, the Department of Game and Fish will hold special control hunts. If these hunts are necessary, they will be held on short notice, involve small areas and be limited to a few hunters. Those hunters interested in participating on these depredation hunts need to apply by Feb. 4.

For the depredation hunts, an

Inside the Outdoors

unlimited number of licenses are available so everyone that applies will receive a license. But these licenses are only valid after a depredation problem has occurred and the eligible hunter has been contacted. They are not valid for any other hunt or time period. The selection process for those participating depends on the luck of the draw.

Those applying will be placed randomly on a standby list. If a control hunt is needed, department officials will start at the top of the list to notify applicants about hunt areas, dates, bag limit and any special restrictions. Those contacted and assigned to a depredation hunt will have their licenses validated at that time. If a hunter cannot participate or cannot be contacted, his or her name will be moved to the bottom of the list and another hunter will be contacted. Those hunters drawn, but not assigned to a hunt, will have the license fee refunded ($6 application fee is not refunded) after April 1, 1995.

Remember, all hunters that apply for a depredation hunt are ineligible to apply for any other special hunt for that species. They may not apply for other elk, antelope, oryx or deer entry permits. Deer hunters may hunt during the regular bow, muzzleloader or rifle hunts, but those that do harvest a deer will become ineligible for the depredation hunt.

Information sheets on these hunts may be picked up from all license vendors. Application forms may be obtained by contacting any Game Department office. Only one person may apply on each form for depredation hunts. A separate form must be used for each species. Completed forms must be mailed to the Game Department office in Santa Fe. Applications must be postmarked by Feb. 4 and will be accepted up to five days after the deadline. The application costs for residents of New Mexico are $41 for oryx, $41 for elk, $26 for antelope and $6 for deer entry permits.

Remember, all those that apply will be successful in drawing, but will only be able to hunt if a problem arises. It may mean that only a very limited number of people that apply will actually get to hunt. Those interested in applying for depredation permits must do so by Feb. 4.

(Those applying for these special hunts should use the following hunt codes. Deer depredation, C-5-063 for southeast quadrant of the state, C-5-062 for southwest quadrant of the state. Elk depredation, E-5-468 for southeast quadrant of the state, E-5-467 for southwest quadrant of the state. Antelope depredation, A-5-576 for southeast quadrant, Oryx depredation, O-5-510 for southwest quadrant.)

Commissioners turn down county sheriff money requests

by DIANNE STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

County Commissioners have nixed or postponed action on several requests for money, most until the usual annual budget workshops begin in three months.

On a motion by Commissioner L. Ray Nunley, they rejected a proposal to hire a part-time secretary to be paid $13,500. The money would come from the grant that finances the county's narcotic enforcement unit. It had been designated for the district attorney's legal staff. But District Attorney Bert Atkins approved using it for a secretary to handle the unit's paperwork at the substation in Ruidoso.

Chairman Monroy Montes reminded McSwane that the board last year deleted a position at the substation.

"I'd be hesitant to reinstate it," he said.

If money is left in the grant at the end of the year, it will revert back to the state, McSwane's administrative assistant Laurie Ventura pointed out.

Ventura also was disappointed to hear commissioners turn down a raise to bring her $20,764 salary up to $23,777. The sheriff said the raise would put her pay in line with other administrative assistants in the courthouse. The cost for the remaining six months of the fiscal year would have been $1,727.50.

Of five other similar New Mexico counties, only one has a bigger sheriff's budget, according to figures gathered by one commissioner.

While Commissioner Stirling Spencer said Ventura, known as a cost cutter for the county, he wasn't ready to vote until he had more information on other salaries in the courthouse, which he requested before the commissioners' regular meeting Feb. 7.

Ventura said she saved the county about $2,400 by discovering some duplicate charges and overcharges by the company that maintains the office's radio equipment.

Detention officers fared better. Jail supervisor Wayland Hill convinced commissioners to move three of his detention officers, and a cook/matron, up one step on the county pay matrix.

"All of the jailers are on the same step now whether they've been here nine years or were just hired," Hill said.

The jailer raises will cost about $1,600 for the remainder of the fiscal year ending June 30. The top man will see his annual salary go up from $19,690 to $20,325.

As part of his preparation to review budgets this spring, Commissioner Wilton Howell submitted a sheet comparing the cost of running the road department, the sheriff's department, the detention center and the Zia Senior Citizens program in six comparable counties around the state. The figures were gathered by the staff of the county attorney, he said.

The figures say only Otero County, with a population of about 55,000 compared to Lincoln County's 14,000, exceeded the Lincoln County Sheriff's $1,093,688 budget. Otero's budget was listed at $1.7 million, Taos County at $784,370, Socorro at $416,516, Colfax at $439,257 and Sierra at $391,561.

Help existing racetrack industry instead of looking for new one

With the future of video machine gambling up in the air now that Amendment 8 has been shot down, it's heartening to hear the governor and speaker of the House are aware of the importance of helping the racetrack industry stay alive.

However, some legislators in the state's largest communities sound alarmingly high-minded.

Horse racing is a marginal industry and it might be best to allow it to die, said Rep. Luciano Varela, D-Santa Fe. Blaming the troubles of horse racing on existing Indian gambling is not a solution, said Rep. Edward Sandoval, D-Albuquerque.

Their communities might be able to withstand losing their largest industry, but smaller resorts like Ruidoso could be devastated. Our resorts attract visitors as much or more than cities. And as state-wide representatives, they should be more sensitive to the needs of the 4th largest retail industry in this state.

States around the country offer millions in tax breaks these days to attract new industries. Sadly, when one of their existing industries needs help, states sometimes ignore it.

The racetracks are worth saving, and studies indicate they wouldn't be in trouble without the existing competition of gambling on Indian reservations. Experts at legislative hearings also indicate the racetracks will take a hard shot from a new lottery, and video gaming elsewhere.

The Indians deserve a chance to make some money off these enterprises, and they are providing employment to their people. But if the governor is going to sign a gambling compact with reservations and pueblos, it's only fair to untie the hands of others already in the industry.

Racetracks are the logical industry to take on expanded gambling. Unlike charity organizations, horse tracks are run by experienced people, and already set up under government regulations. And with only four racetracks, there wouldn't be a proliferation of video gambling as there would be if every charity group had it.

Governor Johnson should veto any bill that won't keep our racetracks alive. Such an action would be profoundly cheaper than trying to find another $367 million industry to replace the tracks.

What your boss (AND HIS INSURANCE Co.) are REALLY drug-testing for:

CAN YOU SAY, "ILLEGAL SEARCH?" I KNEW YOU COULD.

'Big J' may be issue during Senate hearings

by HAL RHODES

Syndicated Columnist

State Senate Democrats have thrown down no gauntlets, yet. But Gary Johnson's "Big J Enterprises" could become an issue when the state's upper-house begins confirmation proceedings on some of the new governor's cabinet secretaries later this month.

By law, all of Johnson's cabinet appointments must be confirmed by the Senate; and, if confirmed, some will be responsible for supervising state agencies which regulate contracting firms like "Big J."

During his campaign, Johnson was confronted with a spate of charges centering on allegedly questionable "Big J" business practices. Those charges proved not to be politically fatal to then-candidate Johnson, but suspicions linger in some quarters that the governor's business interests could conflict with his sworn duty to uphold state laws and regulations that apply to firms like "Big J."

Johnson's press secretary, Diane Kinderwater, says Johnson has attempted to remove any appearance of a "conflict of interest by removing himself from the company and putting it ('Big J') in a blind trust."

Given "Big J's" sheer visibility, and Johnson's ties to it, some skeptics question how "blind" any such trust can be.

"I'm sure there will be inquiries into these things," says Senate Democratic Whip Tim Jennings, adding, "We (the Senate) have an obligation to identify any possible problems here, and by identifying them perhaps stop them before they happen."

One Johnson cabinet secretary who could face questions on potential conflicts of interest involving his agency and the governor's business interests is Mark Weidner, the governor's choice to head the state Environment Department.

Weidner, who has acknowledged submitting a personal business proposal of his own to the Environment Department subsequent to his nomination as its top official, is already in hot water with some lawmakers who question the propriety of his actions.

But, to make matters worse, Weidner's department also embraces the state Occupational Safety and Health Bureau that has previously investigated "Big J" construction activities.

Which may be why Sen. Jennings says, "I see a potential conflict of interest here...Certainly Johnson has to be squeaky clean on this kind of thing or he'll be in trouble."

And, barring the unexpected, during his confirmation hearings Weidner will likely be asked how he plans to prevent even the perception of such a conflict should his department's OSHB be asked in the future to look into "Big J" work practices.

As Jennings sees it, this is no minor matter, "because if someone gets hurt as a result of a cover-up (of unsafe working conditions at "Big J"), the state itself could face serious liability problems."

Curiously, one Johnson cabinet-level official who will not be subjected to Senate confirmation is Robin Dozier-Otten, superintendent of the state Regulation and Licensing Department, which is charged with regulating construction firms like "Big J."

By a fluke state law, Otten is exempt from Senate confirmation. Yet, ironically, one of the key agencies in her department is the Construction Industries Division.

During his campaign, Johnson was frequently critical of the CID. Last summer, following numerous press accounts of falsified tests and other alleged "Big J" irregularities in its construction activities at the Intel plant in Rio Rancho, the CID was charged with investigating the matters.

Complicating matters all the more, the director of the Construction and Industries Division, Pat Vandergriff, was one of those mid-level state employees who was fired by Gov. Johnson when he took office Jan. 1.

Nonetheless, Dozier-Otten will be spared from having to face tough Senate confirmation questions about future CID handling of any issues involving "Big J."

And that could be unfortunate for a governor who can ill-afford lingering doubts about his business affairs and the ways they might compromise his duties as the state's chief executive.

Thanks to all who helped after death

TO THE EDITOR:

It has been hard for me to express my thanks because I haven't been too thankful for the death of my son Matt Mozeleski on Dec. 19.

However, I am thankful for the prayers extended because God has given me strength. Thanks to all who have contributed money to help with the cost of things. Since all monies were given to Mark, I don't know all who gave but please accept my heartfelt thanks.

With sincere gratitude,

Dorrie Robinson

Local concerts are great

TO THE EDITOR:

(This letter was written to the Ruidoso Community Concert Association.)

I enjoyed the Judy Carmichael concert so much; I didn't realize what pleasant evenings I've been missing. So, please save me a ticket for next year; my check is enclosed.

And, if by chance there is a ticket available for the rest of this season, please call me so I can send you a check.

Thank you for providing this little mountain community with beautiful music.

Summer residents have rights, too

TO THE EDITOR:

I have been a "summer resident" of Ruidoso for the past seven years, with occasional winter visits to my property in Ponderosa Heights. I feel that permanent residents are unaware of the indifference of city officials to two of their greatest assets.

On Oct. 7, having sold my property, I requested all utilities and the post office to discontinue service on Oct. 11. All complied — except the Ruidoso water department. I offered to surrender the $50 water deposit but was told that was not necessary, that they would subtract the monthly bill and mail the difference. The meter was read on Oct. 11 but not disconnected. On Nov. 28, I received a bill for two months service and a notice that my service would be disconnected if I did not pay in 10 days. The following day I received a notice that my water had been disconnected, a check for just over $7 enclosed, and my deposit confiscated. The check was dated Oct. 17! BOTH envelopes were postmarked Nov. 23. I wrote the Ruidoso water department asking for correction of the error.

I then wrote to Ruidoso Mayor Jerry Shaw, asking her assistance in correcting the error. A month has passed and to date, I have heard from neither the Ruidoso water department or the mayor.

One summer I noted a water leak in the street in Ponderosa Heights that literally bubbled since it was so large, I called the water department but nothing happened. All sorts of city vehicles drove through this daily. Finally I called the city manager and repair action was taken. The same thing happened at another place the following summer. Why such indifference with one of Ruidoso's most precious commodities?

Summer residents house thousands of relatives and friends who spend lots of dollars in Ruidoso during the summer and winter ski seasons. Summer residents pay taxes and utilities the year round even though they receive actual benefits only 4 or 5 months of the year. In a sense they are taxed with no representation on the city council. Their desires and ideas are disregarded by council members. As outlined above, even the mayor does not care to answer correspondence.

Since "summer residents" cannot vote, it is up to permanent residents to see what is fair to all residents, and take action. If they want their city to grow and prosper, indifference to "summer residents" and water supplies must cease. Attention to property owners other than those who own commercial endeavors should at least be considered.

The New Explorers "The Science of Star Trek"

In January, The New Explorers presents "The Science of Star Trek" which journeys through NASA research centers, high-tech labs, and Hollywood sound stages to compare science fact to science fiction in the legendary television series "Star Trek." Program host Bill Kurtis talks with "Star Trek" star Leonard Nimoy (Spock), Avery Brooks (Commander Benjamin Sisko) of "Star Trek: Deep Space Nine," and Colm Meany (Lt. O'Brien) from both "Star Trek: The Next Generation" and "Deep Space Nine." This episode explains how the "Star Trek" universe is created how futuristic props like transporters, phasers, and holodecks, as well as special effects and detailed sets are combined to make the science fiction of "Star Trek" seem real. "The Science of Star Trek" on The New Explorers will be broadcast Wednesday, January 18th at 7:00 p.m. on KENW-TV.

AMERICA'S WAR ON POVERTY

On January 16th, 1995, as America commemorates Martin Luther King, Jr.'s efforts to achieve social and economic justice for all, PBS will present a landmark series examining the poverty programs of the 1960s and 1970s, and their impact on those whom King fought to empower. More than three decades ago — in the midst of unprecedented national prosperity — policy makers, the media, and the American public made the startling discovery that millions across the country were living in poverty. Our nation responded with federal programs, foundation and private sector initiatives, and grassroots efforts. Few chapters in American history have been more politicized, distorted, and misunderstood than the "unconditional war on poverty" declared by President Lyndon B. Johnson during his State of the Union address on January 8th, 1964. Thirty-one years later, America's War on Poverty, five one-hour programs, will document this historical moment of opportunity — a time when America seemed to possess inexhaustible natural and technical resources and an abundance of goodwill. Through the eyes of well-known political figures and poor people, activists and onlookers, the series offers first-hand accounts from the front lines of this "war." From the struggles of Head Start in Mississippi to the conflicts of VISTA in Appalachia, and from community organizing on the streets of Newark and in the fields of California to the formation of a national welfare rights movement, the series chronicles events that capture the vitality and conflicting visions of America's war on poverty. America's War on Poverty will be broadcast Monday through Wednesday, January 16th — 18th at 8:00 p.m. on KENW-TV.
