Apache vote changes 2nd time around

Don Hixon/The Ruidoso News

Johnson won't budge on gambling stance

by DIANNE STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Gov. Gary Johnson Thursday remained opposed to any plan that would expand gambling beyond the parameters he outlined before his election.

In a telephone press conference, Johnson said he could not support Senate Bill 1052, because it would permit video gambling machines in bars, restaurants and hotels, plus a local option vote.

"I have said all along I would sign a bill allowing video gaming at the racetracks and I see that as keeping my promise to the horse racing industry in New Mexico," Johnson said. "That's what they said they needed to survive until about seven weeks ago, when that no longer was what they needed to survive. They needed more."

Representatives of the tracks in New Mexico have contended that they need the same level of gambling as casinos on Indian reservations to keep the industry viable. Last summer, that level was video gaming, but under compacts Johnson signed with tribes in the state, the casinos are allowed to expand into table games.

Track owners, including R.D. Hubbard at Ruidoso Downs, want the same opportunity, but Johnson said that approach might not help racing.

"I envision the way they're trying to set it up, that the horses would be racing around the track and nobody would be watching," he said. "They'd all be inside the casino. That isn't the purpose here. The purpose is to ensure horse racing survives."

Johnson said his approach allows plenty of gambling days for tracks, not just the summer racing season.

"It would be just days of horse racing or simulcasting live racing, so I believe it's most of the year," he said.

"All sorts of gambling bills apparently will be coming to my desk," Johnson said. "What I said last summer was that I would sign a compact with the Indians, which I have done; I would allow video gaming at race tracks; and a lottery. I would like to see legislation that would legitimize the fraternal and non-profit gambling, not allow an expansion, but legitimize what they're already doing. I think that

A rift deeper than the canyons surrounding the Mescalero Apache reservation split families and friends last week, as tribal members headed to the polls to determine the tribe's future.

For the second time, they voted on a proposal to store up to 40,000 metric tons of radioactive nuclear waste from power plants for 40 years on their reservation.

Unlike the first referendum six weeks ago, this time the majority said yes to the promise of economic gain and new jobs. Advocates out-voted opponents 593 to 372, nearly 100 votes stronger than the opposite margin the first time when 490 voted against the idea and 362 were for it.

If the storage site becomes reality, it will be the first private storage site as well as the largest single storage site in the nation.

For opponents — who see the storage plan as dangerous for the land, future generations and the Mescalero culture — the vote signaled the beginning of a long battle, said Abraham Chee, a 23-year-old resident of the reservation.

"It's not over yet," he said, adding that he was relieved to finally speak out about his opposition. "I wanted to for awhile," he said. "I couldn't stand it any longer."

Some don't think the conflict will lessen now that the second election is over.

"I think there will probably be more conflict, because the people who don't want it will fight it," said Chee's sister Velva Apache.

"Some of the tribal members treat you differently (because a person is opposed to storage). I think there will be a lot of hatred, driving (tribal members) further and further apart."

The final tally was not the overwhelming approval that some anticipated, since 710 people signed petitions asking for a second vote, Chee observed.

Several tribal members complained pressure was exerted to get people to sign the petitions, because the leaders of the petition drive included the director of housing and other administration officials. Still others claimed financial promises were made by those carrying the petitions.

Rufina Laws, who has long publicly opposed the project, said the vote will throw the issue into the national spotlight, because the fuel must cross several states to reach New Mexico.

"Now that this utility-instigated vote has come out in favor of the dump, the issue will be forced directly back to the people of the United States, because they are going to have to check out how close they are to a major transport system shipping this stuff," Laws said.

"They are endangered directly now. They are being threatened with their property, their families,

Skeen questions vote's credibility, raises ire

by DIANNE STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

U.S. Congressman Joe Skeen (R-NM) Friday questioned the credibility of the second Mescalero vote on nuclear waste storage, while state officials evaluated their next step.

Other government officials also questioned the viability of the election, which came less than six weeks after the tribe's initial rejection of the plan.

"I can't endorse the outcome of this election, knowing that just five weeks ago, the Mescalero people voted overwhelmingly against this same proposal," said Skeen, whose 2nd Congressional District includes Lincoln County and the proposed interim storage site in Otero County.

He's not sure the tribal leadership has won the support of the state government, county commission, local leaders or the Mescalero people — a condition he has contended is necessary before proceeding with the project.

"The tribal leaders claim that their members didn't have time to fully understand this complicated issue before the Jan. 31 vote, but I wonder if a second vote would have been necessary had they won the first vote," Skeen said. "I can't in good conscience recognize the credibility or sanctity of this second vote."

He said he still favors building a temporary storage facility at the site of the proposed permanent repository at Nevada's Yucca Mountain, to eliminate double transportation problems.

"I am pleased that there is renewed interest at the Department of Energy (DOE) and in Congress in building an interim storage facility in Nevada," said Skeen, who owns a ranch in Lincoln County. "I will do all I can to advance that proposal in Congress. I believe this is the best possible alternative."

Tribe's rebuttal

Hours after Skeen's statement hit the wires, Mescalero Vice President Fred Peso sent out a response, accusing Skeen and New Mexico Attorney General Tom Udall of attacking the tribe with lies and innuendo.

According to Udall's press secretary, Udall was quoted in The New York Times saying it appeared to him that tribal leadership strong-armed members to change the vote. He went on to say the issue of sovereignty becomes murky when it involves something with a substantial impact on public safety.

If a permanent site is not ready in 39 years, the state may have to pick up the pieces, Udall said.

"They questioned our motives and methods, suggesting that tribal officials 'strong-armed' this election," Peso said in reaction. "(They) are not Indians. They know nothing about what it is like to be an Indian or to live on a reservation (where) one in three people is unemployed. Yet they do not hesitate to judge us and publicly attack our decisions."

"At best, Skeen is a hypocrite. At worst, he is an Indian fighter."

Peso said Skeen has supported non-Indian business opportunities that involve nuclear experiments and storage.

With federal money on which they have depended heavily now drying up, the tribe must create its own business opportunities to survive, Peso said.

He defended the second election, saying the tribal constitution was followed and that the second vote showed that young tribal members looked at the future and wondered how the tribe would survive without the project's benefits.

Gov. Gary Johnson still hadn't decided Friday whether the state will try to block the storage project. He has been uncommitted on the issue since before his election last November.

Peso said the tribe, as a sovereign nation, stands ready to fight any action by the governor or the state Legislature.

Two bills have been introduced in the House and Senate, one aimed at prohibiting the transport in the state of untreated or unprocessed commercial spent fuel. The other would establish conditions that must be met in order to store any nuclear fuel in the state.

Other voices

U.S. Sen. Pete Domenici backed away from any judgment.

"I am not in a position to pass judgment on their first or second votes," he said. "But I repeat that I do not favor this (a temporary storage site on the reservation), whether its public or private."

The approval of the storage project by Mescalero voters came as no surprise to either side of the issue, but some opponents say the vote is just the beginning of their struggle.

Ruidoso Village Manager Gary Jackson said the village continues to be in opposition to the MRS, a position first stated in 1991.

"We will certainly be evaluating what steps would be appropriate to continue that stance at this point," he said. "A bill (that would give the state some authority over transportation and storage of nuclear waste) is making its way through the legislature and a lobbyist is watching that."

Lincoln County Commissioner Wilton Howell said opponents should find out whether the tribal administration is interested in a third vote.

"Maybe they should contact (Mescalero President) Wendell Chino and see if he will go for two out of three elections," Howell said. "It sure looks like there's a tie now."

Budget, tax, gambling debated as legislators face last week of session

by PETER EICHSTAEDT
The News Correspondent

Action has increased as the 1995 Legislature hurtles toward its constitutional close at noon Saturday.

The Legislature has adopted a compromise bill that would spend $1.3 billion for public education. The bill contains $84 million more than last year's education budget.

Although the bill provides the biggest education budget ever, educators said it is inadequate. The bill asks that schools provide a minimum of 3% raises.

State School Superintendent Alan Morgan contended the bill provides sufficient money for an average 4.5% raise statewide, but because of the way money is distributed, some school districts may not get enough money for the average raises.

The public school funding bill will not get a friendly reception from Gov. Gary Johnson, however.

"I'm anxiously awaiting it," Johnson said, adding that the bill spends $30 million more than he believes is needed.

"Hopefully I can fix it," Johnson said, referring to his line-item veto power which lets him cut portions of the bill without vetoing the whole thing. "If it's not fixable, I'd send it back."

Gambling mire

Regarding gambling, a bill is also on its way to Johnson that would make all video gambling in the state illegal. An estimated 6,000 video machines are currently in use by fraternal and charitable groups.

Johnson said he likely will veto that bill, because he favors making such activity legal.

Meanwhile, work on a bill that would allow statewide video gambling at bars, restaurants, fraternal and charitable organizations, and racetracks has stalled.

The bill became mired in controversy early last week and appears doomed.

The Senate did approve a bill that would create a state lottery, but that bill does not involve any video machines. The lottery bill now goes to the House, which is also considering a wide variety of gambling bills.

House Speaker Ray Sanchez (D-Albuquerque) said he favored a lottery, but little else regarding gambling.

"I'm not sure you will see a comprehensive gambling bill come out of this session," Sanchez said.

Sanchez said he wanted to hold off on further gambling in the state until the impact of Indian gambling compacts could be assessed.

"We need to look at that phenomenon," Sanchez said. "I would rather wait a year. We need to look at it (gambling) very, very carefully."

Gas tax repeal signed

To the cheers and applause of his staff and a handful of Republican legislators, Johnson has signed a repeal of the state's controversial 6-cent gasoline tax in a public ceremony in the Roundhouse rotunda.

The repeal removes five of the six cents, and delays repeal of the sixth cent for eight years because the $9 million it raises annually has been committed to road project bonds.

"I had a tough decision," Johnson said. "We...risked not having a (repeal) bill at all. This is not a clear-cut victory." Johnson called the tax "a symbol of the arrogance of government."

Johnson said the gas tax cut is the only one he will see this session. "I don't see tax cuts getting to my desk," Johnson said.

Budget still up in air

Work by conference committee continued behind closed doors over the weekend on the state budget.

Johnson had dire predictions for quick resolution to the differences between the size of the budgets the governor wants and what the Legislature wants.

"We're $50 million apart," Johnson said. "They better get to work on this issue. How much time do we spend on red and green chile?"

Johnson referred to a bill sponsored by Rep. Ben Lujan (D-Santa Fe) that proposes to make the question, "Red or green chile?" the official state question. (The bill passed the House 59-6 and now is in the Senate.)

Although the possibility of a special session has been raised, Johnson said he is reluctant to call one. "I don't want a special session," he said.

First veto

Johnson exercised his veto power for the first time Thursday by rejecting a proposal for the state to buy the $32,000-acre Chama Ranch, a prime elk habitat area near Chama in northern New Mexico.

The bill would have used about $7.5 million from an obscure insurance fund for a down payment on the $25 million asking price.

Johnson objected to the funding method as a misuse of public funds and an unaffordable luxury for the state. "That's not right," Johnson said. "I don't see how we can afford to buy the Chama Land and Cattle Company."

The governor also vetoed a bill that would have created a tax amnesty program in which people could pay back taxes and not face a penalty.

would represent a very limited expansion of gambling in New Mexico.

Fort stance mellows

"Five private companies have looked at Fort Stanton (in Lincoln County) and they all are favorable," Johnson said. "I don't hold out any hope that they will take over in the next few months, but given a fairly short amount of time, maybe a year, we will have a use."

"That means it being a state facility of some sort also, maybe a boot camp or rehabilitation center. It's a great facility."

Johnson previously said he didn't want the state to continue to operate the facility.

Money is included in the National Crime Bill that may be funneled to each state for a boot camp for youthful offenders, Johnson said.

"Maybe we can tie that in, but we're wide open for suggestions," he said. "We don't want to hurriedly try to make it a facility that isn't viable long range."

A 1990 court decision signaled the end to the fort's role as a center for the developmentally disabled. Johnson then cut off a possible future role as a long-term care facility by including only $500,000 in his proposed budget for the fort in 1995-96.

Gas tax

Johnson said he's optimistic that consumers will see a drop in prices at the pump when his repeal of three more cents of the state gas tax takes effect July 1.

"We're in a free market as far as gasoline goes," he acknowledged. "But if there is any evidence at all of collusion or monopoly, of getting together and saying they (distributors and retailers) are not going to lower (prices by three cents), then there would certainly be some action, but I don't think that's going to happen."

He signed the repeal of the six cent tax Thursday.

Two cents already were withdrawn last year, but not permanently repealed. Another three cents will be withdrawn July 1, followed by the final cent in eight years, after bonds for county road improvements are paid off with the tax. One cent in tax generates $9 million a year.

The gas tax has been a symbol of government that had grown too much and taxed excessively, he said.

More taxes to go

The governor's proposal to repeal the gross receipts tax on prescription drugs "still is in the hopper," Johnson said. "I'm not holding out much hope. They do not want to reduce taxes up here and I'm talking about the Democratic leadership. Reducing taxes means they have less money to spend. The way I look at that is, let's have less money to spend, let's force ourselves into a certain kind of accountability."

Johnson said his short time as governor has been stimulating.

"It's been a non-stop process, but I enjoy it," he said. "Golly, this is blood boiling, no yawn, and from that standpoint, it's a great job."

"I honestly believe I was elected for a reason and that was to come up here and lead fiscal responsibility to this whole process and that's what I'm doing. I'm spending money like it's mine, because it is. It's mine and yours."

Goodloe sisters relate good life of Lincoln County ranching

Two blue jean-clad sisters in high leather boots and cowboy hats recited the pleasures of ranch life Wednesday.

Speaking and singing to about 100 members and guests at the Ruidoso Woman's Club, they told of their efforts to pass along to their daughters that heritage; self-reliance, dedication to family and endurance under adversity.

While their father Sid Goodloe watched, Cindy Goodloe Smith and Sherry Goodloe Underwood shared memories of growing up on the family ranch near Capitan.

"Mother and Dad loved animals and they taught us that if we cared for them, they'll do their best for you," Smith said. "And we learned if you care for the land, it will take care of you."

"I love the open spaces. They have to whip me to go to town to buy groceries."

She told of the encouragement from her parents to learn how to work cattle, to identify different types of grasses and to conquer other skills needed for ranch life.

They also were assigned chores.

"We didn't know how important they all were until we got older," Smith said. Her daughter Shayla Renee already is copying and learning, she said.

Smith enjoys training horses and her husband, sculptor Wes Smith, helps break the rougher ones.

Ranch life teaches responsibility to children by caring for animals and having chores, she said. Many children in the city don't have that opportunity. Shayla raises sheep, and works the cattle on horseback.

"We think it's important to raise our children the same and pass it down," she said. "We hope they can preserve the morals, ideals, skills and knowledge."

Underwood said she followed the example of her older sister, Smith, as well as her parents and three brothers.

"Cindy put me on horseback and took time with me," Underwood said. "She nurtured the love I had for roping and riding."

In turn, she's teaching her own children, she said.

"Women hold the fort down a lot, but they don't want credit," Underwood said. "They want to support their husbands and take care of home, livestock and children."

Underwood also spoke of her time in Hollywood when she appeared in commercials and films, usually dressed as a man and handling a team of horses.

"When I was eight, I wanted to drive a six-horse hitch like John Wayne," she said. That dream sent her west to California where she met her husband, who later did stunt work in films.

But she found the lifestyle in Hollywood shallow. Eventually, she returned to the ranch with some more commercial work at Old Tucson in Arizona.

Underwood said the biggest threats to the ranching life today are federal laws such as the Endangered Species Act, with their impacts on how public and private land may be used.

After singing and strumming a few cowboy songs, Underwood ended the program with a demonstration of her roping ability as she twirled a loop around herself, her two daughters and niece.

Nuclear power companies move quickly after vote

by DIANNE STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

While nuclear storage proponents were celebrating Thursday's victory on the Mescalero Apache reservation, their utility partners were already moving ahead Friday to firm up a binding agreement.

"We plan to get together (this) week," Scott Northard said of the potential 33 commercial nuclear reactor companies interested in storing their waste on the reservation.

"We have to pull together the other utilities and evaluate the referendum outcome, and try to gauge the level of interest in proceeding with the utilities," said Northard, who is project manager for the lead company, Northern States Utilities of Minnesota. "I think there will be a lot of interest."

Then the group will have to re-establish the process of signing up equity partners versus storage customers. That process was interrupted when the proposal failed to pass in the first vote Jan. 31.

Under the most optimistic timetable, the earth wouldn't move on the project for another four years, Northard said. After the corporate structures are organized, and site assessments are completed, the company could apply for a license as early as the end of 1996.

The first of the potential 40,000 metric tons of radioactive waste wouldn't arrive until 2002.

A U.S. appeals court ruling in January, which would allow utilities to store their radioactive waste indefinitely at their nuclear power plants without conducting formal hearings or environmental assessments, won't impact Northern States' need for the Mescalero temporary storage plant, Northard said.

"I really don't know whether that will impact (the overall project)," he said. "Every utility has to make a decision based on all factors that affect them. Northern States Power certainly is still interested in proceeding with this project."

"We have a set of conditions that cause us to look for additional storage beyond 2002. Many other utilities are in similar situations, but everyone will have to look at it individually and decide for themselves, and I really don't know what the impact of that ruling may be."

"It probably relates more to the federal requirements, and many states have additional requirements on their utilities that may not be affected by that ruling."

As far as other alternatives being pushed in Congress, such as putting a government interim storage project at the proposed permanent repository at Yucca Mountain in Nevada, Northard said his company can't wait around to see what's going to happen. The repository project may be 15 years away.

"The whole reason we're involved in a project privately for interim storage with the tribe is because the federal government failed in its effort to get it done in a timely manner," he said. "That's the whole reason the tribe came and talked to the utilities last February (1994), because they were upset with the federal process as well.

"We will continue to support efforts to get the Department of Energy (DOE) to meet their obligations, but we're just concerned it won't be in a timely enough manner. We needed something to bridge the gap."

The DOE said it would accept ownership of spent nuclear fuel rods, the waste left by nuclear power production, by 1998. Despite spending $2 billion studying the Yucca Mountain project, the government still hasn't determined if the site is suitable.

Letter of Intent details

On the tribe's end of the bargain, it must secure approval of a lease or grant of a lease by the Secretary of the Interior, according to a Letter of Intent between the tribal council and utilities.

It must also pick a storage site and start studies needed for its federal license application. The site most often mentioned is on the western edge of the reservation in the Tularosa Basin, about 25 miles south of Carrizozo near Three Rivers archaeological site.

Failure to select a suitable site by July 31 would be grounds for termination of the project, according to the letter.

Any time until the first shipment of fuel arrives, the agreement also could be canceled by the utilities if:

— the tribal council and utilities fail to sign a development agreement within 60 days after the election (the agreement would state the conditions for development and construction of the storage plant and define the relationship between the tribe, utilities and Facility Corporation);

— adequate funding is not secured for any phase by a date listed in the development agreement;

— they fail to obtain all necessary permits and licenses by a date to be established;

— or they are unable to obtain commitments to store at least 20,000 metric tons of waste by a date to be established.

The Facility Corporation will be incorporated in the state of Delaware by the tribe and consortium. It is designed to own or lease property and equipment from the tribe, and operate the above ground storage site for spent nuclear fuel from domestic commercial power reactors.

The board of directors is to consist of four representatives of the tribe and five representing the utilities.

Two pages are missing from the copy of the letter of intent obtained by The Ruidoso News. But a section of the letter states that all dollar amounts are in 1994 terms and that appropriate indices for escalation will be included in future agreements.

A provision is included for the tribe to impose an annual fee not to exceed $150,000 on the Facility Corporation, to recover tribal government oversight costs of the storage plant.

The agreement and licensing period would be 40 years. If the waste is still at the site in 42 years, damages of twice the annual storage fee would be paid. That amount would increase in two-year increments to a maximum of five times the original fee if the waste is still at the site in 46-50 years.

The tribe is scheduled to receive $4 million before the site even opens, in quarterly installments of $166,750 beginning immediately.

After the first spent fuel shipment has arrived, the Facility Corporation will pay the tribe $1 million a year in addition to $100 per metric tons of waste stored. Once the investors have recouped their initial equity, compounded at 12% per year, future dividends would be distributed on the basis of 60% to the tribe and 40% to the Utility Company, representing the utility partners.

More details on council's agreement

Other points in the letter of intent between the Mescalero tribal council and nuclear power companies include:

— fuel casks will not be opened at the storage site, and casks previously used in a spent fuel storage pool at a reactor site will not be allowed;

— the tribe's sovereign immunity will be waived in reference to actions and enforcement proceedings concerning the development agreement, the lease and other agreements between the entities and the tribe;

— the tribe will waive the jurisdiction of the Mescalero tribal court in favor of federal court in agreement disputes;

— relocation money of up to $300,000 is to be allocated for families who live in tribal housing in the storage site area of the reservation;

— decommissioning of the site will be accomplished within five years from the time the last fuel is removed, and money will be set aside in advance for that purpose by the Facility Corporation;

— the corporation will be required to employ members of the tribe on a priority basis for positions including skilled, technical and management, if qualified;

— rail shipments are anticipated as the method of transport, in 75-ton or 125-ton casks;

— quarterly newsletters, the content approved by the tribal council, will be sent to tribal members about the project.

Council takes precautions this time

More caution and less bravado marked advocates' approach to the second Mescalero election on the plan to store nuclear waste on the reservation.

Their extra steps paid off Thursday as tribal members approved the plan by a 593 to 372 vote. In the first election Jan. 31, the plan was rejected 490 to 362.

Several persons close to the Chino administration said the tribal council was overly confident in that first election.

But Thursday, Donalyn Torres, once a fierce opponent of the storage plan and now a backer, showed up at the Ruidoso Care Center with two other tribe members and two independent observers from the White Mountain and Jicarilla Apache tribes.

They traveled to the center 20 miles away to collect five or six absentee votes from elderly Mes-calero who are residents there.

While the elderly sat in their wheelchairs around a cluster of tables, someone loudly asked whether they understood what they were signing.

When stopped outside for comment, one of the Mescalero took the arms of the two observers and guided them into a waiting van.

She told them, "We want to stay as far away from the press as possible."

their future," Laws explained. "Now the number affected by this highly radioactive waste increases (dramatically), if it's moved by the 94 reactors of the (utility) consortium to our land."

Laws said she expects to step back from the local protest movement for awhile and let others lead the effort. She said she will concentrate on speaking across the country on the overall issue of nuclear power, nuclear waste and fuel transport.

Chino and utilities pleased with outcome

Mescalero President Wendell Chino issued a statement that he was proud the tribe decided to move forward with the business opportunity.

"This project will bring jobs and a better life for our people, but more important, it will enable us to build a secure future for our children and grandchildren," Chino said.

An estimated $2.3 billion in total revenues is expected to be generated over the 40-year life of the project, with possible direct and indirect benefits to the tribe of $250 million, Chino said.

"Tribal leaders expect the project to create between 200-300 jobs on the reservation, where currently, one in three tribal members are unemployed," Chino said. "The surrounding region is also expected to benefit economically from the project."

A spokesman for Northern States Power of Minnesota, the lead nuclear power company in the 33-member consortium, said Friday the group is pleased with the outcome of the Mescalero referendum.

"We're glad those who wanted a second vote got the opportunity," said Scott Northard, Northern States storage project manager. "Obviously, we are interested in proceeding and believe the project will be good for all involved."

"It can serve not only the tribe, but the surrounding community. We always believed that once the tribal members got all the facts on the safety and benefits of the project, they would support it. I think this time there were a lot more people out working on the reservation in support of the project. They really worked hard to counter inaccurate and misleading information that had been distributed the first time."

Northard said the utilities think support for the project will grow in the future, "as we get a chance to demonstrate the safety and potential benefits that this facility can provide, not only to the tribe but to the surrounding communities."

"We're committed to ensuring that this will be one of the safest industrial facilities in New Mexico, if not the country."

Three decades of experience has shown that the spent fuel rods can be stored and transported safely, Northard contended.

"We'd love the opportunity to share that information with the community," he said.

Sides clash

Election day Thursday was marked by a confrontation between supporters of the plan and opponents in the parking lot outside the voting building.

Dave Dale, head of the Sacramento environmental group, said he drove to Mescalero to deliver pizza with a member of the Ruidoso Upper Canyon Association, which also has been active in fighting the storage plan.

"The association wanted to send some food down for the 20 or so protesters in front of the election place," Dale said. Unlike the first election when media were barred from getting anywhere near the polling place, this time media and voters, advocates and opponents mingled.

"People were driving all around in pickups with 'Vote yes' signs and intimidating people," Dale said.

He was trying to find out where the food should be delivered when a heavy set woman in a truck began yelling, obscenities at him, Dale said.

"She pulled right up in front of me, yelling obscenities and telling me to get off the reservation 'you white man,'" he said.

"I said, 'Look, I'm here to feed your people, and I'm more than the tribal council would do.' She screamed again and a BIA (Bureau of Indian Affairs) cop came up and said I was not supposed to be on reservation and to get off."

Dale said he delivered the food and left.

Ches said the police, who had been summoned by his group because the drivers of several pickup trucks circling in the parking lot seemed to be drunk, never did anything about the drivers.

"We were afraid they'd run over a kid," Ches said.

Disappointed by vote

Ches said he was not surprised by the vote.

"I'm upset about the vote, but I kind of knew deep down inside it would pass," he said. He (Chino) didn't know how to lose. I knew that he would try so hard."

Mescalero administration officials contend they're pursuing the plan for the people, but Ches said he thinks it's for greed.

"What I didn't feel was right was that all the tribal council members protested against the previous vote," Ches said. "Nobody helped us (opponents). They should have been neutral and we all should have been treated the same."

Ches said he also was disappointed to see some middle-aged people he had looked up to, change their position on the issue.

"I've been in (ceremonial) dances with them, wearing costumes representing Mother Earth," he said. "They don't know what their tradition is, I guess."

Beauty is focus of Aesthetics

by DON HIXON
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Aesthetics is no longer just a concept, thanks to Carla Daves Mancha.

Mancha recently opened Aesthetics, a hair, skin, and nail salon specializing in hair coloring, hair cutting, and skin care.

Mancha, sister of local resident and newly elected school board member Karen Anderson, moved to Ruidoso from Santa Fe where she lived for 2 1/2 years.

Her 11 years of experience includes more than 2,000 hours of professional training from various beauty institutions, including Midland College of Cosmetology, Alamogordo Beauty College, the Carlos Valenzuela Advanced Hair Cutting Academy in Phoenix and the Goldwell Advanced Hair Coloring School. She was an instructor at Vogue College of Cosmetology in Santa Fe before relocating to Ruidoso in 1994.

Aesthetics is located next to Radio Shack in a charming rock building. The interior has a large woodburning stove and bright decor.

"I'm very excited about a new aspect of Aesthetics," Mancha said. "We now have a licensed massage therapist, Beth Miller, on staff in addition to our other services."

The salon features Logics hair coloring products, which Mancha says is new to this area, and M.D. Formulations, an exclusive line of skin rejuvenation products.

Mancha uses formulations with glycolic acid in many beauty applications, including skin peels.

"The glycolic acid accelerates the removal of the dry, thickened, outer layer of skin," Mancha said. "In order to use the formula, you must be a licensed aesthetician."

Aesthetics also features Matrix, Redken, and Paul Mitchell products. The salon offers manicures and pedicures in addition to hair styling and skin care services.

"We are a full service salon," Mancha said. "Men, women, children, perming, cutting, we offer just about everything."

Mancha offers the following tips for keeping skin young and healthy.

— Take short showers and baths. Choose warm water over hot; it's not as drying.

— Exercise regularly. It increases the flow of nutrients and oxygen to the skin, giving skin a healthier glow.

— Wear a broad-spectrum sun block every day. The primary cause of premature aging of the skin is exposure to the sun without adequate protection.

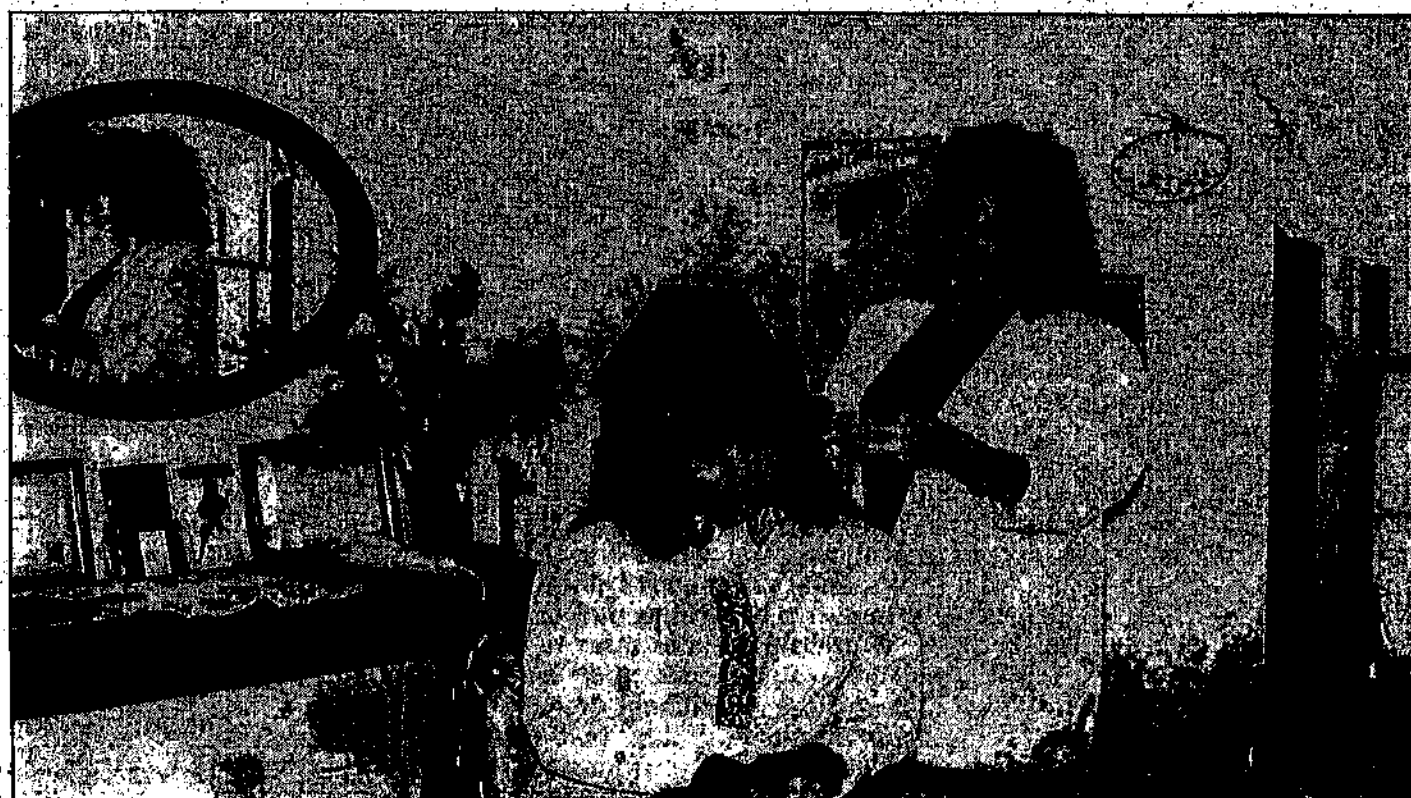

— Be gentle when removing eye makeup. The skin around the eyes is very delicate.

— Wear sunglasses. This protects the eyes and the delicate skin around them. Avoid mirrored glasses that may intensify the sun's rays.

— Drink plenty of water, eat a well-balanced diet and get ample sleep.

— Minimize stress, don't smoke, and drink alcohol in moderation.

Aesthetics is located at 106 Whitlock next to Radio Shack. The phone number is 257-4039.

Carla Daves Mancha, right, performs her magic on customer Kay Krezer at Aesthetics, a new hair, skin, and nail salon in Ruidoso. Mancha, who has 11 years of experience in the beauty business, specializes in hair coloring, hair cutting, and skin care.

Cool, clear water flows from Hill Springs

by DON HIXON

Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Legend has it that, in the 1940s, Bruce Griffith won Hill Spring in a poker game.

Griffith, who died several years ago, was the father of Sue Davis, who now owns the spring, the Agua Fria Water Company and the surrounding Agua Fria Subdivision with husband Smokey.

"It's probably not true that Bruce won it in a poker game, but it's a great story," Smokey said.

Actually Griffith, who moved to this area from Rhode Island, bought 360 acres and half of the flow of Hill Spring and began to develop the Agua Fria Subdivision, Sue Davis said.

Before the Public Service Commission told Griffith to stop, he was providing water from Hill Spring for five dollars per month to anyone who purchased a lot in the Agua Fria Subdivision. In 1978, the PSC required Griffith to install water meters for customers.

"The price for water went way up then, that's for sure," Smokey said.

The Davis' own half of Hill Spring is nestled against the side of a mountain in Ruidoso Downs. They use their portion of the spring to service 85 customers in their subdivision. The other half is owned by the Village of Ruidoso Downs.

Smokey Davis has a master's in Mechanical Engineering with a Nuclear Option from Arizona State University, and a bachelor's from New Mexico State University.

"I was involved with the advanced development of fluid dynamics in the aerospace industry for many years," Smokey said.

Smokey led the way to where the spring flows. An old faded sign reminds people that the community of Green Tree will prosecute trespassers.

"What is now Ruidoso Downs was at one time called Palo Verde," Sue Davis said. "When the community wanted a post office, they changed the name to Green Tree."

Green Tree is Palo Verde in Spanish. Sue Davis said the name change was necessary because there was already another Palo Verde in New Mexico. Green Tree became Ruidoso Downs in the 50s, when the village wanted to have a stronger association with the racetrack.

Smokey unlocked a small steel door and, stooping down, entered the confines of the spring house.

"Sorry the light bulb is burned out," he said, flicking on a flashlight.

Smokey pointed the flashlight at another steel door, this one in the bottom of the concrete structure. He opened the door and pointed the flashlight's beam to the rushing water below.

"One of the amazing things about this spring is that it flows at a constant 350 gallons per minute, day in and day out," Smokey said.

Because the spring is co-owned by both Agua Fria and the village, Griffith installed a T-shaped divider to divert the flow into two equal portions.

Water flow is but one interesting fact about the spring.

"Nobody is sure where the spring originates," Smokey said. "It is thought that it comes from the Guadalupe Mountains, but nobody knows for sure."

Because of the constant flow, the purity of the water, and the fact that it is so large, state engineers still occasionally ask to see the spring, Smokey said.

Another aspect that makes Hill Spring unique is that it operates by gravity flow and does not rely on pumps to get to the land below.

"The Indians used gravity flow from the spring to irrigate and farm the valley," Smokey said. "The evidence is that it's good pure dirt down there (in the valley), and you can still see the calcified buildup of ditches created by the Indians to transport the water."

Smokey said geologists last examined the Indian ditches in the early 1950s.

"I've always thought it was interesting that these ditches are still here," he said.

Ruidoso Downs is in the process of purchasing the Agua Fria portion of Hill Spring, Sue Davis said.

"The village is expanding and needs the other half of the spring," she said. "For the last three years we let them use Agua Fria water at no charge just to be neighborly."

Ruidoso Downs currently services about 700 water customers with its share of the spring, Smokey said.

Ruidoso Downs proposes to purchase the Agua Fria Water System for $375,000, using a 40-year Farmer's Home Administration loan.

"We have the purchase agreement and hopefully the sale will be finalized within 90 days," Sue Davis said. "It will do them, (Ruidoso Downs) good and it will do us good."

Water quality at Agua Fria is exceptionally pure, Smokey said.

"We are under the same rules and regulations as Ruidoso Downs, and have to meet all the EPA standards," he said.

EPA standards include a requirement that water quality be tested each month.

Various upgrades have been made to the system over the years, Smokey said.

"We put in a new water tank and replaced 80% of the lines serving the Agua Fria subdivision," he said.

After Ruidoso Downs takes over the water company, the Davis' plan to continue developing the Agua Fria subdivision.

"We are just tired of running the water company," Sue Davis said.

Don Hixon/The Ruidoso News

Smokey Davis shines his flashlight into the divided flow of the Agua Fria Spring inside the spring house. The Agua Fria spring, flowing at a constant 350 gallons per minute is divided so that one half serves Ruidoso Downs and the other half serves the Agua Fria Subdivision.

Incorrect Social Security numbers could be taxing Taxpayers wishing to avoid refund delays should make sure that all Social Security numbers appearing on their tax returns are correct. If a name and number do not match, the return is rejected by the IRS. This results, for instance, when maiden names are changed to married names or children are adopted. If this information is not changed with the Social Security Administration, there will likely be a mis-match on the return. Delays could be up to 24 weeks for returns sent by mail.

"Electronic filing may offer a speedier solution," David Whatley of the Ruidoso H & R Block office said.

Print Shop of Ruidoso offers new line of expanded services

by DON HIXON

Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Sounds of an offset press reverberate as three women busily work on another printing job.

Tory Fritz, Karen Jones and Vicki Eichelberger operate The Print Shop of Ruidoso, Inc., a new full service printing service located at 651 Sudderth Drive.

The business is housed in the former Tory's Print Shop, but the new business offers much more in-house printing and expanded services.

Using state-of-the-art computer graphics, an AB Dick offset press, and a laser color printer, The Print Shop offers a variety of services to the Lincoln County area.

"We offer many design services, including typesetting, printing, folding, scanning, and scoring," Fritz said. "We are particularly excited about now being able to print four color posters and flyers at excellent prices with a quick turnaround time."

Fritz, who is a partner in the printing business with Jones, has been a graphic artist and typesetter for seven years and learned her craft in Ruidoso. She has also worked in various business management positions in Houston, SE

Louis and Los Angeles, and has planned and organized a number of large seminars and conventions.

"Because of my background I have a business management point of view," Fritz said. "I've learned what is important in an advertising campaign, and how to get good results."

Jones was a graphic artist for eight years in California and for three years in Ruidoso.

"I've had a lot of experience in typesetting and pre-press operations like camera processing and platemaking," Jones said.

Fritz said she is impressed with Jones' abilities and her keen eye and sense of design, balance and quality.

Office manager Vicki Eichelberger has had extensive experience in office management.

"Vicki knows how to make a customer feel welcome," Fritz said. "She has plenty of first-hand knowledge of the graphic arts and printing industry."

Jones said another unique aspect of the business is that it offers ad writing and selling services.

The Print Shop of Ruidoso Inc. is open from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday. The phone number is 237-9119.

Ruidoso council considers film studio

Ruidoso Village Council members may contribute to an effort to transform Fort Stanton into a film studio.

The proposal, which includes a request for advertising dollars, will be discussed at tomorrow night's 6:30 p.m. meeting at City Hall.

The funding overture is being made by Stan Monks, a Ruidoso Arts and Film Board member, who first came up with the movie studio idea for the expiring long-term care facility.

Monks just secured $1,000 of a necessary $1,710 from the Lincoln County Commission to advertise the historic facility in the Hollywood Reporter. He is requesting the rest of the funding from municipalities in the county.

The council will consider Monks' bid, but as advised by Village Manager Gary Jackson, any funding that may be approved should be contingent upon the failure of the Legislature (which will end its session Friday) to find a use for the facility.

Councilors will also consider:

- consulting services for a Scenic Byways grant;
- a fee schedule for rental facilities at Sierra Blanca Airport;
- approval of a certification form for $20,199 in library bond funds through the state's 1994 capital projects general obligation bond act;

- sale of a 15-foot strip of road for $396 to a homeowner on Alamogordo Street whose house encroaches on the platted public right-of-way;
- and a resolution amending the 1994-95 fiscal year budget for $10,102 for water billing and $18,500 for the water department.

Downs council meets

Police Chief David Hightower will present officer Chris Condon the American Police Hall of Fame Silver Star for Bravery at Monday's Ruidoso Downs Village Council meeting.

Condon will receive the award for bravery in the line of duty stemming from a 1994 shooting incident at the Texas Connection Restaurant.

Also on the agenda for the meeting:

- trustees will decide if Ruidoso Downs should lease a trailer and property at 123 Downs Drive to the Village of Ruidoso Downs and Ruidoso Downs Auxiliary for $1 per year for 99 years;
- approval of a sign application for G & D RV and Mobile Home Park.

Wild horses up for adoption March 18, 19

The first opportunity for adoptions of White Sands Missile Range feral (wild) horses is scheduled for March 18 and 19 at the Otero County Fairgrounds in Alamogordo.

The Tadpole Cattle Company of Bartlesville, Okla., through a contract with the missile range, is conducting the program. The horses may be viewed at the fairgrounds beginning at 8 a.m., March 18. Adopters will have the opportunity to select horses based on a lottery system.

Guidelines for these adoptions are based on procedures used by the Bureau of Land Management in its wild horse adoption program. Applications can be picked up at the Otero County Extension Office at the fairgrounds in Alamogordo now through the day of adoption.

The adoption fee is $125 per horse. This fee must be paid at the time of the adoption.

THE DREAMER

Spring Comes Smiling Through The Cold Wave

After spring weather with the apricot trees in full bloom on the seventh, here came a cold blast out of the north in the early morning of the eighth that brought the temperature down to sixteen above zero — the second to the coldest morning of the year.

However, the bright sun shining in a blue sky brought the temperatures almost up to 70 by midday.

Then on the morning of the ninth, today, it was 20 above, with a light cloud cover overhead.

Sunrise Cloud Colors

This morning, March 9, the sun came up early at 7:20 away to the east over Sunrise Mountain, shining its half-light through a thin veil of clouds. This time of year the sun rises over a lower slope of the mountain, while in midwinter it comes up over the tip top.

Shining through the thin layer of clouds, the sun was surrounded by an airy circle of crimson with the center edges touched with a blend of fiery orange and pink.

With the rising of the sun these cloud-and-sunrise colors kept changing and blending as you watched.

Suddenly appeared a small section of rainbow called a "Sun Dog," while down below the rising sun, the cedars and pinons were cast in a haze of deep purple and rainbow colors.

Storm Mountain, away to the west, was trimmed in gold and light crimson.

And now at midday the snow birds are feeding in the pathway to the door, while "Red Neck" the tame cottontail rabbit has come out from his home under the lilac bushes and is nibbling at his small stack of alfalfa hay.

The cows are all dozing in the sunshine on this cheerful spring-in-winter day.

Happy Birthday To Brook Newsome

This will reach you on the eve of the 13th birthday of my little neighbor just down the way, Brook Newsome.

She was born in Austin, Texas but has lived most of her life in Glencoe.

Brook is in the seventh grade in Ruidoso Middle School, where she is a good student and a great favorite among her classmates.

Judges say bill needed, but Senate doesn't agree

by KATHLEEN McDONALD
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Whether or not judges pack guns under their robes will no longer be the suspenseful question.

A bill sponsored by freshman Representative Dub Williams (R-Glencoe) passed the state House, but it was rejected by the Senate Wednesday.

The bill would have allowed judges to carry concealed weapons after completing a firearms instruction course.

The legislation was described by Williams as a way to protect judges and promote order in the courtroom.

Local district and magistrate court judges supported the legislation, describing the serious death threats they have received while on the bench and their concerns regarding the increase of court judges' violent deaths in recent years.

Seven judges in the country were murdered last year, said Lincoln County's district court Judge Richard Parsons — more than enough to heighten concern for judges' safety. And most of those incidents have involved domestic cases involving family violence, paternity cases or divorce, not the hardened criminals, Parsons said.

Further heightening the judges' sense of vulnerability is the relatively wide open entrances to their courtrooms, the lack of weapon detectors and lack of full-time bailiffs.

Although Judge Parsons says he probably wouldn't carry a weapon, ("I can't see much use in strapping on my gun just to go to my car"), he did say he has received numerous threats during his 10 years on the bench for being a "hard nose." He has been followed while driving his vehicle, and has learned of plots against his courtroom.

Parsons was warned by police officers to "pack a piece" about five years ago, after a man he sentenced to 16 years in prison for attacking his wife with an axe escaped from jail.

"The rumor was, he was coming to Ruidoso to get me," Judge Parsons recalls. The guy was eventually apprehended in Montana.

Such intimidation has prompted him to keep a gun in his courtroom. "On one or two occasions, I've pulled it out and put it by the bench," Parsons said.

He has also issued an order prohibiting the public from carrying weapons into the courtroom and has, on occasion, requested a bailiff to put down defendants he's been warned plan to cause trouble.

Signs warning the public they are subject to a bodily search upon entering the courthouse are posted at the entrances. Adherence to the decree is basically honorary, however, as the searches have only taken place when guards are present.

"You can't live and do your job if you're afraid you're going to die on the job," the judge asserted. Yet because he can't possibly remember everyone he has sent to prison, he said he basically avoids public gatherings at night.

"With my military training I'm pretty good with a gun, whether it's a machine gun, shotgun, cannon or pistol," Judge Parsons noted, but added, "The trouble is, if you have a gun, you have to make up your mind whether or not to use it."

Judge Gerald Dean, who presides as magistrate court judge in Carrizozo, expressed mixed emotions about the legislation, but suggested it may be a necessary avenue for greater security.

"In this day and time I do feel the need for a little security — any judge would," he said. "My intent of shooting someone is zero. I love my job and think I'm doing a community service. But I'd hate to give my life over it."

Judge Dean, who has been holding court for nine years, has seen defendants become irate over relatively minor incidents — fines from traffic tickets and situations involving dogs.

But, again, it is the domestic cases that have appeared most volatile.

About one and a half years ago, Judge Dean received a serious death threat over the telephone in the middle of the night.

"They were seeing if they could shake me up," he said.

The caller did, and as the judge admits, he has since kept a gun tucked away in the courtroom.

Also supporting the legislation is Judge William Butts of the magistrate court in Ruidoso.

"I have been in situations in the courthouse where the need for protection was probably necessary," Judge Butts said. "If someone was to come into the court with a weapon, at least the judge wouldn't be caught defenseless."

However, the incidence of direct violence against judges in rurally located courtrooms is rare, he added.

Judge Butts, who has served the bench for approximately two years, was almost run over last year by a female defendant he found in contempt of court.

When she became disorderly, Butts told her she was in contempt of court and she ran outside, the judge recalled. He went out after her and was met by a speeding car.

"She would have run over me if I had not jumped out of the way," he said.

"These are violent times," Butts concluded.

Free concert in Capitan March 15

Michael Shawn Davis will present a free concert at the Capitan Multipurpose Gym at 7 p.m. Wednesday, March 15.

YCT is not affiliated with any one political party; rather it chooses to support the most conservative candidate in any one race.

Mendez continues Pacific, Persian Gulf deployment

Navy Fireman Apprentice Saul H. Mendez, son of Jose L. and Maria D. Mendez of Ruidoso, is more than halfway through a six-month deployment to the Western Pacific Ocean and Persian Gulf aboard the destroyer tender USS Cape Cod.

Mendez is one of more than 1,800 sailors aboard the 645-foot-long repair ship, which departed San Diego in October. Mendez's ship can perform a wide-range of shipboard maintenance and also provide logistics support to Navy units in remote areas.

Mendez and his fellow crew members spent a month in Yokosuka, Japan, where they completed more than 2,000 repair jobs in support of Navy ships deployed to the Western Pacific Ocean.

Mendez and the Cape Cod crew also have been providing fleet repair services for ships in the Persian Gulf.

The lightning strikes—and the thunder rolls...

Some random thoughts and observations from around our world of sports and recreation.

A little stinger before looking at some success stories. The Ruidoso revolving door got a mighty spin last Monday when boys' basketball coach Sid Wright, the boys' third coach in four years, was forced to resign.

Round and round it goes (again), where it stops nobody knows? Or, has it stopped already at interim head coach Ben Sanchez?

We won't know officially until after spring break when athletic director Les Carter, high school principal Ron Hodges and superintendent Mike Gladden sit down to decide what will happen next.

Dozens of fans turned out both Friday and Saturday night to congratulate boxer Jimmy Thunder for winning the World Boxing Council Continental Americas title Tuesday night.

The soft-spoken Samoan, who trains in Ruidoso, moved up in the contender's rankings with his victory over former world champ Trevor Berbick.

Thunder is not your typical boxer. He's a family man. He's a religious man. A member of the Pacific Island Church, Thunder won't train or fight on Sunday.

If George Foreman challenged to a Sunday fight, what would be Thunder's response?

"I'd tell him see you Monday night," says Thunder.

Thunder trains full-time, six days a week. And he's self-effacing, but that doesn't mean he's not confident.

His secret is in knowing he's trained harder than anyone else. One look at his body will attest to that.

So it does run in the family. First cousins Dorley Patton and Tara Miller close out their college athletic careers this spring. Both are former Ruidoso High School standouts.

Miller recently finished her career as a player on Western New Mexico State's women's basketball team. The daughter of Wanda and Merle Miller played in 103 games for the Mustangs, a school record.

Miller posted some nifty statistics in her career. She scored 789 points, handed out 207 assists, grabbed 194 rebounds and recorded 169 steals. And, by the way, she will graduate in May with honors.

Miller's dad says her little league basketball coach, Lyn Willard, inspired her to be the player and person she has become. Not a bad job.

Miller and Patton played volleyball and ran track together at Ruidoso during their freshman and sophomore years.

Patton didn't play basketball with Miller because Miller played the game like a guy, Patton recalls.

"She definitely had the corner on basketball," Patton says of her first cousin.

While Miller dominated the courts, Patton held her court on the track.

She established school records in the 100-meter hurdles and 300-meter hurdles. At the state meet, Patton was third in the 300-meter hurdles and fifth in the 100-meter hurdles as a sophomore. She was well on her way toward a terrific career at Ruidoso.

But midway through her junior year, Patton moved to Odessa, Texas.

"When she was here she was just a very motivated individual. She would take your criticism and congratulations in stride," remembers Ruidoso track coach Ronny Maskew. "We were kind of shocked when she left because we knew she would've been a top finisher in state by the time she was a senior."

The larger high school didn't prevent Patton from having an outstanding prep career. She eventually earned an athletic scholarship to Angelo State University in San Angelo, Texas. At ASU, Patton was developed into a cross country runner rather than a hurdler.

Three times, she participated in the NCAA Division II women's cross country championships with her team. This year, she was the Rambelles' highest finisher (10th overall) at the Lone Star Conference meet.

She's now set her sights on qualifying for the NCAA Div. II outdoor track championships in the 400-meter hurdles.

Patton will graduate in May with a bachelor of arts degree. She majored in journalism and communications. After taking some time off to go on a mission with her church, Patton will pursue a career in either print or broadcast journalism.

She clearly has her ducks in line. Who is one of several people Patton credits? Coach Ronny Maskew.

"Really, words can't describe what he means to me. He just believed in me. He was such a motivator," Patton says. Maskew is absolutely the most influential coach she's had, says Patton. Patton says Maskew has both great knowledge and motivational skills.

"I want to give at least part of my career to him. And to just say thank you," Patton says.

RHS tracksters open season with good effort

by LAURA CLYMER

Ruidoso News Sports Writer

If results from the first track meet of the year are any indication, Ruidoso track coach Ronny Maskew and his Warriors are in for a good year.

The Warriors participated at the highly-acclaimed West Texas Relays in Odessa Friday and Saturday. More than 1,700 tracksters competed in the 51-year-old event.

"It's one of the premier meets in the southwestern United States," Maskew said.

This was the 11th year Ruidoso has participated. Maskew takes his teams to the relays because it's an opportunity to compete two weeks before any meet in New Mexico.

Even though this was the second or third meet for most of their Texas competitors, the Warriors performed well and had several top finishes.

Junior Kyle Humphreys won the long jump with a leap of 21-7 1/2. Last year at this same meet, Humphreys recorded a 18-4.

Humphreys finished fifth in 110-meter hurdles. He recorded a 15.57 in the finals. He also took sixth place in the triple jump (41-3 1/2), an event he won't be able to compete for at New Mexico's state meet because it's not offered.

"We were very pleased with things," Maskew said. "We thought the kids performed really well."

David Hufstetler was third in the 300-meter hurdles and freshman distance runner Bridget Tam was fourth in the 3200-meter run. Tam shaved 35 minutes off her preliminary time. She ran a 12 minutes, 25.33 seconds in the finals.

"With what we saw, we know we have some kids, if they continue to work hard, they will do well," Maskew said of his team. He added that in several events, the girls seemed far ahead of where they were last year. Overall, Maskew said he was impressed with team's efforts.

Ruidoso's next meet will be the Rose Relays in Tularosa on Tuesday, March 21.

Socorro romps past tired Warriors, 80-54

by LAURA CLYMER

Ruidoso News Sports Writer

Socorro's inside-outside duo of Kenneth Greenwood and Jonathan Pino proved too much for Ruidoso Thursday night. The district's No. 2-seed team downed Ruidoso, 80-54.

Greenwood and Pino each scored 19 points to lead Socorro past the visiting Warriors in the District 3-AAA semifinal for boys' basketball.

The loss eliminated Ruidoso from postseason play. The Warriors finish the season 10-16 overall. A victory would have given Ruidoso a berth in the state tournament this weekend in Albuquerque.

Socorro outscored the fatigued Warriors in all but one quarter. Thursday night's game was Ruidoso's third in four nights.

Socorro opened up a 35-20 lead at halftime. Ruidoso rallied in the third quarter and cut the lead to 46-34. But Socorro responded in the final period with a 34-point outburst.

Ruidoso senior Malik Waters led all scorers with 26 points. Jackie Roe added 11 points for the Warriors.

Socorro improved to 17-6 with the victory. Socorro played No. 1-ranked Silver Saturday night for the district championship. Both teams will participate in Class AAA state championship tournament this weekend.

Thursday night proved to be the last game for Ruidoso seniors Waters, Zack Turner, Daniel Espinosa, Scott Christensen and Todd Young.

Golf scrambles benefit teams

The Ruidoso Warrior golf team will host the first of four benefit golf scrambles Sunday, May 19, at Cree Meadows. The scramble is open to the public and starts at 12:30 p.m.

Cost is $25 per player plus cart fees. Proceeds benefit the boys and girls teams and will help fund transportation and meal expenses.

Participants can pay $80 for all four scrambles and receive a 1995 Warrior golf team ball cap. Each tournament will have at least $500 in prizes.

Players will be matched according to handicap in an A-B-C-D format. At least one Warrior golfer will play with each team.

After Sunday's opening scramble at Cree Meadows, the remaining schedule includes: March 26 at Alto Lakes Country Club, April 2 at the Links of Sierra Blanca and April 9 at the Inn of the Mountain Gods.

Call the Cree Meadows Pro Shop for more information or to sign up at 257-5815.

Ruidoso woman arrested for alleged burglary, criminal damage to house

A Ruidoso woman was arrested Thursday after allegedly entering a neighbor's home and trashing it with the intent to steal a large quantity of jewelry.

Ruidoso police arrested 23-year-old Rebecca Ackerman on charges of residential burglary and criminal damage to property. She was later released with a promise to appear in court.

Ackerman's arrest came two weeks after the Violet Street residents discovered $4,000 in damage inside their house, police said.

They found their home out of order when pulling in the driveway and hitting a stranger's packed suitcase. Upon entry to the house they found a window had been broken and food was dumped all over the floor. Also found in the kitchen was an open beer, blood, a puddle of urine and heaps of dog food, police said.

Their computer had been dropped in the hallway, police said, and a sack of dog food had been emptied on the floor of their bedroom and filled instead with jewelry and other items.

Police said that while checking out the burglary scene they received a call from Lincoln County Medical Center regarding a woman who was intoxicated and expressing concern about her suitcase and medication.

The patient, who police said was Ackerman, had apparently been transported to the hospital for treatment by a Pizza Hut delivery driver who found her with her dog in Midtown, wearing only a white t-shirt covered with blood.

Police later identified the suitcase as Ackerman's and learned that she went over to the victims' house the day after the break-in to apologize. They believe she received her injuries when breaking through the window to the house, police said.

Poor Scoop

by DIANNE STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Although Jim Riggins is no newcomer to shelter management and breeding abuses, he was surprised to find in Ruidoso a high amount of breeding, selling and promotion of wolf/dog crosses.

"Along with everybody else, I was taken with these beautiful and majestic animals with a regal bearing and wild looks," said Riggins, manager of the Lincoln County Humane Society shelter. "This is probably as far as many people get in their thinking when they decide to buy one and take it into their homes and neighborhoods. I, however, had to educate myself on the hybrid as more and more turned up at the shelter."

"Historically, there always has been a 'bad dog' in American culture," Riggins said. "In my experience, I have seen it progress from German shepherds to Doberman pinchers to pit bulls to chow chow to Rottweilers and now, at least locally, to wolf hybrid."

"Without exception, these animals are victims of human vanity and machismo and mis-breeding, both intentional and deliberate. In the case of all but the hybrid, these conditions can be reversed through a few generations of responsible breeding and discontinuing abusive training or treatment that brings on mental illness."

"With exception of the hybrid, the 'bad dog' is the exception rather than the rule."

The hybrid is torn between the drives of a domesticated canine and that of a wild animal, he said.

"It took thousands of years of domesticating dogs to reduce their wolf-like characteristics. It's arrogant to think that a modern breeder in a few generations can produce a well balanced or happy animal, especially when many attempt to keep the concentration of wolf consistent."

The danger, many animal control experts contend, is that the hybrid retains the predator, instincts of the wolf, but has lost the pure wolf's fear of man.

"These animals are sentenced to be unacceptable in any but the most controlled conditions," Riggins said.

The Humane Society of the United States, the Lincoln County Humane Society and many other animal protection groups have taken the position that they will not adopt stray or owner-released hybrids. The hybrids, through no fault of their own, are destroyed.

That position is not as much related to tragic incidents of mauling and deaths of children by hybrids, as it is for the future of the individual animals, Riggins said.

"The driving reason why these animals are not allowed to be adopted is that we can not realistically guarantee them a happy life," Riggins said. "We may be able to ensure initially that they get what they need; security, room to roam and lack of potential for disaster. But things change, people die and get divorced, and these animals are given away or placed as 'dogs.' At a worse case scenario, they spend their lives on the end of a chain."

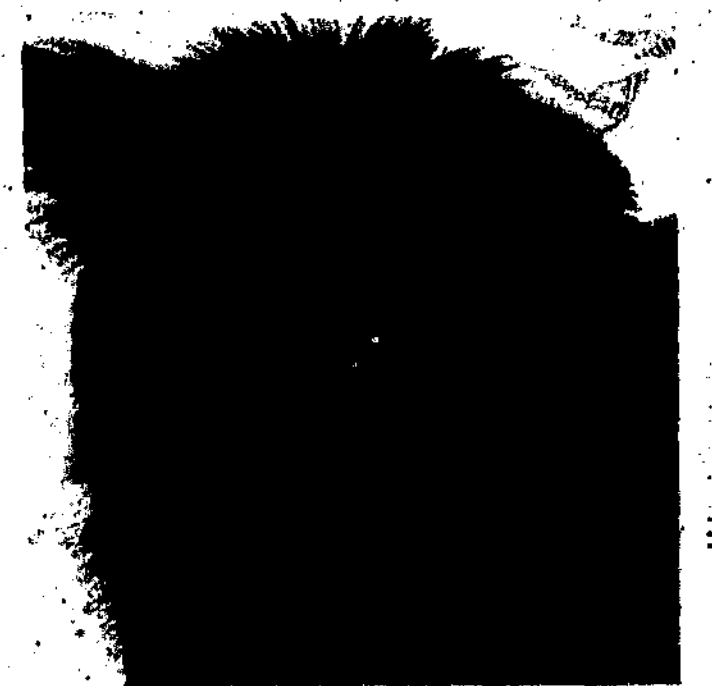

"I am certainly not judging these beautiful creatures as unworthy, but am trying to break a legacy of tragedy. It's a terrible thing to do to a dog and a terrible thing to do to a wolf."

Banchee is a spayed husky/shepherd cross. She's sweet-natured, obedient and housebroken. She knows her commands and is between two to three years old. She's medium size and weighs about 45 pounds.

Bonito is an attractive and affectionate chow chow. Shelter workers say she's one of the most gentle of that breed they have seen. She's not large and has a thick black coat. She was picked up running loose in town.

Hopefully, strife will decrease after vote

Since a second vote was scheduled on the proposed storage of spent nuclear fuel, strife has escalated on the Mescalero Apache Reservation. It is sad to see the people divided, to see friends no longer friends, to see hateful letters mailed to tribal members and left on their doorsteps.

Accusing the opposition of being racists and bigots serves no purpose except to increase bad feelings.

Now that the vote is over, it would be nice if the situation could calm down. Unfortunately, however, with the continuation of the storage proposal, the strife may continue. We can only hope that it will continue at a less frenzied level, without the name-calling.

The second election brought at least 113 more people to the polls than the first election. It seems apparent that some voters also changed their minds, since 490 voted against the project in the first vote, and 372 voted against it the second time.

Those against the project must accept the majority decision and realize they will have many years of input ahead. Several more hurdles must be faced by the tribal council and nuclear power companies, including a license and a lease from the federal government. Opponents can offer valuable input if they focus their efforts to make sure that, if the project does go forward, it is done right.

With the changing plans of the U.S. government (such as recent approval for storage at the power plants) and strong opposition by some powerful congressmen, it remains unclear whether the project will even go forward.

NEW MEXICO PERSPECTIVE

New study reveals political money tyranny

by ROGER MORRIS
Syndicated columnist

In one of the more important studies ever done on state legislative elections, an Albuquerque non-profit group called Re-Visioning New Mexico has just released initial findings in a long-term research project on money in local politics. The results are shocking.

A detailed study of the 1992 and 1994 elections to the New Mexico House of Representatives proves how much we live under that perverse golden rule of politics — those with the gold rule.

What was supposed to be a citizen legislature elected with relatively modest campaigns has become a Frankenstein, raking cash with one hand and strangling democracy with the other. Consider a few of the facts:

— Compared to fairly stable funding during the 1988, 1990, and 1992 New Mexico House elections, contributions and spending in 1994 shot up an incredible 52% — from $944,881 in '92 to over $1.4 million in '94.

— Per district, the average House seat in the Legislature now costs more than $20,000 to win, almost doubling in the past four years.

— Not surprisingly, winners outspend losers by more than three to one. And entrenched (well-purchased?) incumbents average nearly twice as much campaign boodle as challengers.

— Nearly 60% of the '92 political money came from corporations and large businesses, which outspent labor more than 12 to one.

— But the deep pockets belonged to candidates and their families as well, accounting for more than $100,000 in 1992 alone, and making the state Legislature increasingly to preserve the well-heeled.

— The 84 Democratic candidates in 1994 outspent 65 Republicans by nearly a million dollars to $698,313. But GOP spending jumped from 41% of Democratic money in 1992 to 57% last year — part of a clear trend toward heavily financed Republican challenges of the Democratic majority throughout the state, and making both parties hostage to monies interests.

The real winners, of course, were less the elected candidates than the big interests who have mortgaged state government. The study identifies them clearly — lawyers and lobbyists, banks and financial institutions, the health industry, racetracks and gambling, tobacco, major oil and gas, utilities, real estate giants, and a horde of profit-driven special "causes," from liquor interests trying to evade regulation to insurance companies protecting their monopolies, and on and on.

Funded in part and based on research methods by the respected Center for Responsive Politics in Washington, the Re-Visioning study documents vividly the money tyranny in New Mexico politics. It should be required reading in every school and college in the state.

In the candidate-by-candidate, committee-by-committee accounting of contributions, there are clear answers to the annual mysteries of our legislative sessions. A glance at the donor list of our most illustrious politicians can tell you in an instant why certain bills skate through and others die a bleak death in the dark.

A scan of the study's telling "Committee Profiles" will tell you where power really resides in the Roundhouse, why a quarter million gets poured into the campaign coffers of a committee like Rules and Order of Business, and another $200,000 is siphoned to members of a panel like Appropriations and Finance, or even the good old Voters and Elections Committee that oversees the polls and interests' self-preservation around the state.

"Real constituents, the people who live in a district and who can vote for a candidate, become less important than 'cash constituents,' and the people who fund election campaigns," says the study. "In many cases the panel constituents do not even live in the same state, let alone the same district, as the candidate."

There's more to come from the Re-Visioning expose, and Sunmount will be following it in the weeks ahead. But these first findings are all too plain. Our state, like the rest of the nation, has become largely a special interest republic, with a government mainly of, by and for the highest bidders.

It gives a new twist to that old adage: Poor New Mexico, so far from heaven, so close to the next payoff.

(Roger Morris' latest book, Promises of Change: The Clintons and the Washington They Met, will be published this winter.)

Watch out for Senate Bill 510

TO THE EDITOR:

Whoa, Nellie! Could it be time for Ruidosians to pull up in their gambling gallop and masticate some of the eco-political silage being dumped in their cribs?

Are Ruidosians who rode their stick horses in Santa Fe to protest mistreatment of horsemen about to be kicked in their economic solar plexus by those same horsey friends they went to defend?

SB510 passed the Senate 30-7 Feb. 24 and looms as a massive threat to Ruidoso. This bill, which was devised by the New Mexico Horsemen's Association, would allow for off-track wagering.

The bill would permit "any person, firm, association or corporation" to apply for a license to offer wagering on horse race simulcasts on television screens from any or several racetracks.

What does this mean to Ruidoso should the House approve the measure and it become law? It means folks would not need to come to Ruidoso to bet on the ponies! It means horse race betting parlors could pop up in places like Clovis, Hobbs, Carlsbad, Roswell, Alamogordo, Las Cruces or anywhere in the state!

And you can bet your boots there are many, many entrepreneurs across New Mexico just chomping at the bit to do just that!

As per their interests, this, no doubt, would put many, many bucks into the purse structures at the state's racetracks. BUT, what would it do to the economies of communities in which tracks are located? It would likely not greatly affect large places like Albuquerque or El Paso, but it could punch nasty holes in the economy of a small town like Ruidoso!

As stated in the opening sentence, perhaps it is time Ruidosians stop and chew and digest just what, exactly, is going on in this greedy gambling scenario. Does the horse racing industry want to have cake and ice cream and leave Ruidosians to eat mush?

Support Senate Bill 530 and SB 1001

TO THE EDITOR:

As the Secretary/Treasurer of Youth Empowered for Success (YES, Inc.) I would like to ask the community for their support of two bills which have been presented to the Legislature during this session.

The first is House Bill 530. This is the initiation of the Parents As Teachers program in Lincoln County. We feel the Parents As Teachers program is an extremely effective educational program because it is designed to provide all parents of children, from birth to age three, the information and support they need to give their children a solid foundation for school success, increase parents' knowledge of child development and appropriate ways to stimulate learning, provide a means for early detection of potential learning problems, along with a host of other goals. In a nutshell, we feel it will be very effective in early prevention of youth problems.

Secondly, we need support of Senate Bill 1001, Section 10 and the Gavilan Canyon School Day Treatment Program as part of the Ruidoso schools. Gavilan Canyon School provides appropriate educational programming, therapeutic counseling and rehabilitative services to those students within the Ruidoso School District who, because of significant emotional disturbances, aberrant behavior patterns, and/or socially unacceptable tendencies, demonstrate needs that are not currently being met within the general education programs of the public schools.

We need letters to be written by individuals in the community urging Governor Johnson's support of the two bills. A hand written message would be most effective. It doesn't have to be long. Just state the bill number and a brief description. You may either bring it to the School Administration Office at 200 Horton Circle or mail it directly to:

Ron Becker is great coach

TO THE EDITOR:

There have been many unfair accusations made in regard to our Capitan boys' basketball team having their scheduled practice.

That practice was announced following the recent Capitan - Cloudcroft basketball game. The boys were told that if school was canceled because of snow, that the team would meet for practice at noon. My son was aware of the practice schedule on Tuesday evening, as we discussed it upon his arrival home from the game.

If seems that rumor has it that Mr. Becker called the practice after the faculty was notified of the cancellation of school (due to a student's suicide). That simply is not the case.

As a parent, I can tell you that I am grateful that my son had the opportunity to be involved in a structured activity in light of the circumstances surrounding the decision to cancel school. I am grateful that he is involved in a program that is sensitive to the needs and feelings of young people. I am grateful, especially today, that he had the opportunity to receive guidance from men who were able to share some wisdom about handling the loss of a friend. I am grateful that my son has the opportunity to be influenced by such men.

Through I was not present at practice, I can tell you that the information that was shared with our teams was very beneficial and it was done in a very sensitive, caring fashion. At least that is the feeling I got from talking with my son.

How sensitive it is to hold in doubt the decision to carry on as planned? As far as my son and I are concerned, being at the gym today was the best possible therapy in a very sad situation.

I, as the parent of a player on the boys' basketball team, am going on record as saying that Mr. Becker made the right decision in holding practice as scheduled today. Further, I am going on record as saying he held the scheduled practice with the best interest of the boys in mind.

Beyond these things, I would like to say that I am grateful to Mr. Becker for the positive influence he has been in the life of my son. My son will grow to be a fine man because of the lessons of life he has learned while being under Ron Becker's direction.

Many of these lessons are ones that could only have been taught by a coach who is sensitive, firm, perceptive, honest, and caring. Such a man is Ron Becker.

Teen class can help

TO THE EDITOR:

The recent tragic deaths of two Lincoln County youths prompts me to write this letter.

The wave of sympathy and empathy that follows is enormous. The willingness of adults to listen to children and adolescents, to be more aware of their concerns, fears, and pains flares up. An atmosphere of helplessness prevails. The cry goes up: what is happening to our youth?

My question is: do parents not know that there is help out there?

That there are free opportunities to explore the best and most successful ways of parenting kids, raising them to be self-reliant in a self-indulgent world, of promoting a cooperative, life-affirming, encouraging atmosphere in the home?

Tuesday night there was barely a parking space at the Ruidoso High School, what with a game going on and the university courses, both laudable activities. As I opened the door to start my spring sessions of "Resolving Conflict with Teenagers and PreTeens," I had to remove a sign reading "Fullbearers Only." When my session began, five parents gathered to learn how to do their best as parents. Don't get me wrong, the six of us had a great time and will continue to do so for five more Tuesday evenings from 7 to 9 o'clock. But where are all the others who need help and could gain from the experience? Do join us.

Can't figure out why tracks are being sacrificed

TO THE EDITOR:

You can't raise up one group of people with the sacrifice of another group. This is a cowboy's way of explaining something a profound man once said.

As the days pass, it becomes more apparent the gaming compacts did just that. Every group that had some gaming are flinching and, writhing, disturbed at the amazing turn of events.

What the race horse industry can't figure out is, why would you take a $4 million revenue promise and gut a $20 million tax income? Isn't this the state that is looking for jobs for its citizens? Under any circumstances, I bet we would offer all kinds of tax incentives for an industry that employs 9,300 and delivers environmentally friendly jobs and $20 million in tax revenues.

Please help me figure this out. I want to know when I am trying to feed my horses.

Please demand answers from GTE, US West

TO THE EDITOR:

Just a reminder — I am Dorrie Robinson, mother of the 18-month-old boy Matt Mozeleski who died Dec. 18, 1994.

There have been other issues which affect our community that have caught your attention, like the nuclear waste site and the racetrack problem. But a lot of you have asked if there was anything you could do for me and now I would like to ask you all to get involved and demand some answers from U.S. West and GTE as far as the "duke in the trunk" of a phone line.

Yes, I was the only one who lost that night, but what if it had been you? What if you were depending on getting through to 911 due to a loved one needing help? I am only asking for help to make sure it doesn't happen to you. I don't want Matt to die in vain. I would like to see something done so that it doesn't happen to someone else.

Please write to:

Geronimo welcome to have my job

TO THE EDITOR:

A recent allegation made by Joseph Geronimo-Via-Carrillo that all lead management in the tribal enterprises are non-tribal members, and white at that, is not completely true. The newest enterprise, Mescalero Metal Fabrication, has a tribal member as general manager — Mr. Ray Beck.

At this time I would like to present a challenge to Mr. Geronimo-Via-Carrillo: sir, if you are willing to get an engineering or business education, some years of experience in the general area of steel products manufacturing (five would be acceptable to start), you can have the position of quality/technical manager at Mescalero Metal Fab (MMF) that is currently filled by me, a white tribal affiliate.

Before you make a commitment, let me fill you in on this position: you will be required to spend countless hours in front of a computer working on things white people (contractors) require, you must spend hours on the phone with white people, you may have to enter into contracts with white people that will create employment for tribal members, and lastly you may have to sell the products you make to white people (that might be considered selling out to white people).

Response to Chino's letter

TO THE EDITOR:

In answer to President Chino's letter of Feb. 23, I stand corrected and send my apologies to President Chino for thinking he was in charge of the Mescalero Apache Reservation. In most political arenas, it does not matter if there is a council or not, the head man or woman takes the heat, so to speak. Mayor Shaw is likely to be pinpointed with criticism if the council of Ruidoso does something unpopular. President Bush and Reagan are definitely getting heat for the way they ran the U.S. while president and their equivalent of a Tribal Council was much larger than yours.

I am sure that when I made reference to President Chino requesting books, it was understood by most that it was for the Mescalero school system and not for himself personally. As he has long since been out of school, he would have no use for the books personally. The Ruidoso school is not what you would call well-funded. The request should have been put to the federal government as the tribe's controlling agent, or to the state government.

I did not ask "what can kids talk about," when referring to the nuclear issue. I said "what else would kid talk about after hearing it for three years." Mr. Chino himself supported this in his statement of "I also might add that what is discussed at home usually is reflected in what kids talk about in and out of school."

I also did not state that the ski area was required to provide the school skiing program. The ski area has been thoughtful and generous in providing the program. My point is, either provide the program or don't provide the program; but don't give it or take it away because the leadership of Mescalero doesn't agree with the opinions of Ruidoso residents.

You (and I use this word loosely to encompass all the leadership of the Mescalero Apache Reservation and the Ski Apache area) have indeed made a large capital investment in Ski Apache and both economies of Mescalero and Ruidoso do benefit from it. Keeping this in mind, why was the threat even that it would be closed if we voiced our right of freedom of speech against the MRS? This action would have hurt the economy of Mescalero much more than Ruidoso.

Santa Rosa best site for prison

TO THE EDITOR:

The competition among New Mexico cities and towns for a new prison is heating up. Unfortunately, the numerous benefits of Santa Rosa, the prime candidate, are sometimes forgotten as discussion shifts to the late entrants in this race.

The New Mexico Senate recognized the advantages of building the new prison in Santa Rosa a year ago when it approved a legislative memorial starting the process. The community recognized the same advantages when it held a town meeting a few months later on the topic. No one spoke against the idea at the meeting.

Everything else being equal, there's nothing wrong with making the site selection based on political considerations. But everything else is not equal. Santa Rosa is the best site for at least three major reasons:

1. The Corrections Department already evaluated Santa Rosa as a site and found that it scored very high and is the ideal location for the state's next prison. The other sites, now being talked about haven't undergone similar evaluation, a requirement that costs both time and money, but that saves money and trouble in the long run.

2. The four-county area that would be impacted by a Santa Rosa prison needs this economic boost more than other areas of the state. Guadalupe County alone struggles with an average unemployment rate of 10% compared to the statewide average of 6.3%. Unlike most other regions of New Mexico, northeastern New Mexico does not currently have a state correctional facility.

3. The Santa Rosa prison, despite its rural location and its economic impact on rural New Mexico, would still be easily accessible from Albuquerque, Santa Fe and Las Cruces. It is situated along one of New Mexico's major interstates, I-40, just like all of New Mexico's other medium- and maximum-security prisons located in Los Lunas, Grants, Las Cruces and Santa Fe. Such easy access cuts down on transportation costs and logistical and supply problems.

Many people are seeking a location for the new prison based upon which city offers the state the best deal. But I contend that it isn't a question of whether Santa Rosa is giving the state the best deal, but rather whether Santa Rosa is the best deal for the state. Revitalizing Santa Rosa and the entire Guadalupe, San Miguel, Quay and De Baca counties area is good not just for the area, but for all of New Mexico.

As rural New Mexico goes, so goes the rest of the state.

Something else is being overlooked in this competition for a prison and the jobs it will bring: long-range, deliberative consideration of our state's corrections needs. The legislative has received testimony that a 1,200-bed medium-security prison would be full the day it opens. Think carefully about that statement. As soon as we finish building this 1,200-bed prison — whether we build it in Santa Rosa or somewhere else — we will again be out of prison space.

If we change New Mexico's "good time" laws as expected, we will be even further behind in the race for enough space for criminals.

The prudent course of action now is to begin the site evaluation and selection process for a second and third prison while the prison at Santa Rosa is being built. By the time the Santa Rosa prison opens, and immediately fills to capacity, New Mexico will be prepared to build another prison in another location.

Competition for prisons should be replaced with planning for prisons.

Senator Pete Campos,
D-Santa Rosa

Support HR 956

TO THE EDITOR:

(This letter was sent to U.S. Rep. Joe Skeen, R-New Mexico) Dear Mr. Skeen;

We have an opportunity to go one step in improving our legal system by passing the HR 956 Bill. As an insurance agent, I deal daily with the pressures people feel in the high cost of carrying liability insurance.

Although medical expenses, physical damage costs, and even pain and suffering are viable reimbursements, the PUNITIVE damage awards are just plain ridiculous! They are used by the few in our society to take advantage of the system and receive big bucks for nothing! It has evolved into an easy way for our some people to make exorbitant monies at the expense of society in general. In Alabama, a person found out the car manufacturer had touched up some scratches in the paint job of his new car prior to purchase. He sued and was awarded $4,000 for a new paint job, and $4 million in punitive damages!

Consider how this has affected all the organized kids' activity programs like Little League programs, Scouting programs, YMCAs, youth camps, etc. The Girl Scouts now have to sell in excess of 87,000 boxes of cookies to cover the cost of their liability protection because of the possibilities of excessive punitive awards.

Anyone who deals with the public, on any kind of level, is faced with the responsibility and outrageous costs of buying coverage large enough to cover that occasion when another member of society, along with their legal representatives, would like to become rich for any cause they can win in a court of law, or intimidate for an out-of-court settlement.

Although HR 956 wouldn't eliminate punitive damages, it would limit awards to three times one's economic damages or $250,000, whichever is greater. This appears to be a viable limitation, especially since punitive damage awards are designed to punish the wrongdoer.

Please support HR 956.

County best public lands manager

TO THE EDITOR:

This letter is in response to State Land Commissioner Ray Powell's letter of Feb. 23, 1995. The inference throughout his letter is that the public lands, under state ownership and managed at the county level, would eventually become privatized.

Lincoln County Ordinance 1994-7 recognizes the existence and legitimacy of public lands. Under this ordinance a "public land management process" will be developed which acknowledges and protects the split estate of property rights including, but not limited to, recreation, hunting, fishing, water, fuel wood, harvesting, timber harvesting, mining, and grazing.

These property rights are the custom, culture, and economy of Lincoln County. Management by the county through a public land management process, developed by residents of the county and incorporating free market principles, would protect and enhance the custom, culture, and economy, and lessen our dependence on federal handouts.

The fact that New Mexico is the number one recipient of BLM payments in lieu of taxes (PILT) is a distinction that I am not particularly proud of and is an indicator of "welfare" status. The public lands can be managed much more efficiently at the state and local levels. This is clearly in evidence as it costs the State Land Office 78 cents per acre to administer the State Trust Lands, whereby the cost of federal administration on the public lands is two to five times higher per acre. In Montana, the state made $13.7 million over a five-year period from its timber program, while in the same five-year period Montana's 10 national forests lost $42 million. A comparison of effective watershed protection from logging reveals that the State of Montana had a 99% rating versus a 92% rating for the federal government.

This data shows that an official with fiduciary responsibility can manage the resources much more effectively and efficiently than an official who cannot be held accountable by the electorate.

Seven of the original 13 states owned the public lands westward to the Mississippi River. The federal government owned no public lands and only had jurisdiction over the public lands after the seven states ceded these lands to the federal government for the sole purpose of disposal in order to settle the war debt.

Congress pledged that new states would be formed from this cession of public lands and they would "have the same rights of sovereignty, freedom, and independence as the other states."

The original states voluntarily ceded their public lands to the federal government for an expressed purpose. After-admitted states ceded their public lands involuntarily through the various enabling acts as a condition for gaining statehood.

Equal footing pertains to political representation as well as sovereignty, and the after-admitted states do not have the same rights of sovereignty as the original 13.

The Supreme Court held in Coyle v. Smith that "When a new state is admitted into the Union, it is so admitted with all of the powers of sovereignty and jurisdiction which pertain to the original thirteen states, and that such powers, many not be constitutionally diminished, impaired, or shorn away by any conditions, compacts, or stipulations embraced in the act under which the new state come into the Union..."

In other words, the stipulation in Sec. 2(B) of the Enabling Act for New Mexico in which "the people inhabiting said proposed state do agree and declare that they forever disclaim all right and title to the unappropriated and ungranted public lands..." is an unconstitutional condition for statehood and New Mexico should have sovereignty and jurisdiction over its public lands.

Mr. Powell states that litigating the equal footing doctrine is pointless and only benefits the lawyers. What if past litigants for civil rights and constitutional rights cases had taken that attitude; where would we be today?

Alexander Hamilton stated in Federalist Papers No. 33 that "If the federal government should...make a tyrannical use of its powers, the people...must appeal to the standard they have formed, and take such measures to redress the injury done to the constitution..." The people will take such measures by their right to vote and litigate.

Robert Nelson of the University of Maryland estimates that New Mexico would net $100 million dollars if the public land revenues stayed in New Mexico instead of going to Washington. That is a conservative estimate based on the assumption that cost of public land administration remains the same under state and county management as federal management, which we know would not be true as seen by Montana's timber program and the New Mexico State Land Office vs. federal land agencies' administrative cost per acre. New Mexico can lose its "welfare" status as a federal dependent.

The social values and recreational values of the public lands will be preserved inviolate. That is part of our culture.

HOW MUCH WILL IT COST TO RETAIN THE SERVICES OF BUYERS REAL ESTATE SERVICES?

There is no need for you to incur additional cost for our services when Buyers Real Estate Services helps you buy a home. The most common way to exactly the same way other real estate agents are paid. The typical commission paid at closing is usually divided between the listing agent and the buyer's agent. The only difference is that our contract says our portion of the commission is paid "on behalf of the buyer" and comes from the proceeds of the transaction.

DOES BUYERS REAL ESTATE SERVICES HAVE ACCESS TO ALL RESOURCES LIKE THE MULTIPLE LISTING SERVICE?

Absolutely yes, and more. We belong to the local Board of Realtors and M.L.S. so we can show you homes listed with this service. In addition, we also show homes that are "for sale by owner" and "for sale by buyer". We can show you any advertised property.

Amazing Grace with Bill Moyers

Amazing Grace with Bill Moyers tells the story of the hymn, "Amazing Grace," and the people who draw strength from it. "Amazing Grace" is one of the most popular and enduring hymns in the English language. Across distances of time, nationality, and society, it has become a courier of the spirit of millions of people.

Ironically, the lyrics of "Amazing Grace" were written by an English slave ship captain, John Newton. In the 18th century, he came to faith after surviving a storm at sea. When he wrote the hymn that made him famous, he had become a country preacher.

Today, the song continues to serve as a source of in-spiration and strength for many people, including singer Judy Collins, opera star Jessye Norman, singer Johnny Cash, and folk singer Jean Ritchie. The program features their performances as well as their insights about the hymn's impact in their lives.

Amazing Grace with Bill Moyers airs Tuesday, March 14th at 7:00 p.m. and Saturday, March 18th at 10:00 p.m. It also repeats Tuesday, March 28th at 11:00 p.m.

Vince Gill & Tammy Wynette on Austin City Limits Specials

Two of country music's most talented artists are featured this month on Austin City Limits Specials. Superstar Vince Gill and veteran Tammy Wynette each display their considerable skill in back-to-back performances.

Country music's most highly awarded artist performs his best-known hits in Vince Gill in Concert. The reigning Country Music Association (CMA) Entertainer of the Year sings the songs that have made him famous, including "Victim of Life's Circumstances," "Tryin' to Get Over You," "What the Cowgirls Do," and many more.

The "First Lady of Country Music" showcases country songs in Tammy Wynette in Concert. She performs "Your Good Girl's Gonna Go Bad," "D-I-V-O-R-C-E," "Singing my Song," "That's the Way It Could Have Been," and — her favorite among all the songs she's written or those written for her — "Til I Can Make It On My Own."

Vince Gill in Concert and Tammy Wynette in Concert, Austin City Limits Specials, will air Saturday, March 18th at 8:15 p.m. and 9:00 p.m., respectively.
