Hearing on wolf return Wednesday on Socorro campus

The only official New Mexico public hearing to gather public comments on the plan to return the Mexican wolf to the wild is scheduled for Wednesday in Socorro.

The major wolf release area in New Mexico is proposed at the White Sands Missile Range, about 30 miles west of Ruidoso on the other side of the Sacramento Mountains.

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service has studied the release of captive wolves and made the proposals.

The hearing will be 4-9 p.m. at Macey Center Auditorium at the New Mexico Tech campus in Socorro. The session will break from 6-7 p.m.

People who want to speak may sign up from 3 to 8 p.m. The order of speakers will be determined by lottery. Time may be limited to ensure everyone will be heard.

The Fish & Wildlife's study has four alternatives.

Mexican wolves, protected under the Endangered Species Act since 1976, were eliminated from their historic range by the mid-1900s.

Today, 137 Mexican wolves survive in zoos and captive breeding facilities in the U.S. and Mexico.

County's auction brings in $68,930

The Lincoln County government netted $68,930 from items sold at auction last month.

Another $14,000 of goods belonging to the Hondo and Carrizozo school districts also were auctioned, for a sale total of $68,930.

The county stages its annual auction at the Glencoe Rural Events Center.

Items sold this year included a 1988 ambulance, a 1985 Ford pickup and several vehicles confiscated by the sheriff's office that were connected to arrests on drug charges.

Used office equipment and furniture went on the block from county departments. Confiscated jewelry, radios, VCRs, televisions, ski equipment, microwaves, furniture, a circular saw, phone systems and sleeping bags from the sheriff's office also went to the highest bidder. Confiscated rifles and pistols were sold only to dealers.

Juvenile jails ready to explode, state chief warns

by DIANNE STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Overcrowding at juvenile detention centers in Springer and Albuquerque could spark an emotional explosion at any time, a top juvenile justice official said Wednesday.

Loretta Chavez Henry, director of the juvenile justice division of the Department of Children, Youth and Families (CYF), was in Ruidoso to brief the public on "Restoring Justice," a new plan for juvenile corrections reform.

Earlier in the day, her boss, CYF Secretary Heather Wilson, was guest speaker at the annual meeting of companies and government entities operating jails around the state. After stopping to see local judges, Wilson headed to Santa Fe to pick up her child from the babysitter, Henry said.

Henry was left to face about 25 elected officials, attorneys, juvenile justice workers and others who showed up for the evening session. The meeting was one of 21 scheduled for sites around the state.

Local attorney Gary Mitchell, whose law firm acts as public defender for juveniles in criminal cases, took the offensive.

Noting his caseload has increased three-fold in the last few years, Mitchell asked Henry, "Are we going to wait until five or six kids are killed to do something about overcrowding (at Springer Boys School and the Youth Detention and Diagnostic Center in Albuquerque)?"

In August 1995, the state squeezed three juvenile offenders into each room and the population was 124 more than the 459-person capacity, Henry said. That situation continues.

"I personally don't sleep at night, because I worry what you say is going to happen. I feel it could blow real soon," Henry said. The CYF wants to provide for offenders in each community instead of moving them out of their home territory, she said.

The department is trying to establish criteria for early release of juvenile offenders. It's possible an interim treatment program in Farmington and a planned boot camp in Lovington may help provide alternative placement, she said.

Fort Stanton plans

Mitchell and Lincoln County commissioners Monroy Montes and Wilton Howell urged the CYF to support a proposal by Youth Services International (YSI) to lease Fort Stanton for a privately-run juvenile rehabilitation and detention center.

The fort, 15 miles northeast of Ruidoso, was closed in March after 40 years as a state hospital and training center for the developmentally disabled. The state has advertised nationally trying to attract companies large enough and successful enough to be able to afford the high cost of upkeep for the fort's 70 buildings.

Henry said the CYF cannot consider endorsing the proposal to lease the fort to YSI until the company provides some follow-up data to show the rate of successful rehabilitation.

If the state Legislature approves a $38.1 million budget for CYF this year as part of a three-year $142 million package, $4.4 will go toward expanding the juvenile rehab program, Henry said. The next year, $9.2 million will go for construction and other capital expenses.

"You could lose $4.5 million in one lawsuit," Howell said. It's time more money is devoted to facilities and alternative programs, he said.

Why wait for state money to break free when a private company (YSI) already operating under the name of Desert Hills in Albuquerque is interested in leasing the fort immediately, commissioners asked.

Howell said he paid his own way to visit YSI programs in Tucson and Albuquerque. He was critical of Henry for traveling 2,000 miles to Florida to see a model of an environmental camp when she had never visited Desert Hills.

"I sought out people with kids in those facilities and they were quite pleased," Howell said.

Send money

More money, more manpower and more local involvement are needed to combat juvenile crime, local officials told Henry.

They criticized the past lack of attention to the needs of juveniles in Lincoln County.

The only successful alternative program cited was the Gavilan Canyon School, started by local effort with legislative money and now supported through the Ruidoso School District.

When the district turned to the state for help with the school, no department would cough up any money, said Paul Wirth, director of instructional support for the Ruidoso district.

"We know the issues. We know each other," Wirth said. Available money can be used for something already showing dividends, "or we can use taxpayers' money and study it to death," he said.

"Work with us. Cut the bureaucracy," Wirth said. "Day treatment is highly successful, but when we tried to get a license (from the state for the alternate school at Gavilan), we hit a stone wall."

Investigators question Lincoln County officials about sheriff

by DIANNE STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Two state police officers are questioning county officials and employees in their investigation of Lincoln County Sheriff James McSwane and his office.

They were in town last week talking to, among others, County Commission Chairman Monroy Montes. County Commissioners Stirling Spencer and L. Ray Nunley couldn't be reached for comment. Commissioners Wilton Howell and Bill Schwettmann said they haven't been contacted.

"My impression after about a 45-minute discussion was that they already had talked to several people, some judges and deputies," Montes said Friday. "They're focusing on commissioners who forwarded the material" containing accusations against the sheriff and some of his deputies.

"They maintain that everything they hear seems to open discussion up to other things," he said. "I feel this (investigation) will be fairly thorough. It's all interconnected."

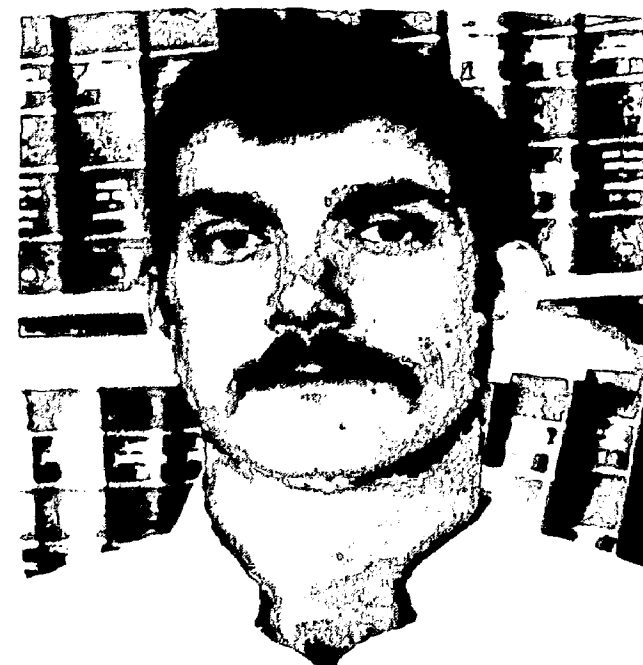

Two women are accusing Sheriff McSwane and deputy Angelo Vega of trying to coerce them into setting up county commissioners on drug charges.

McSwane has denied the charges.

The charges were outlined in a letter from local attorney Gary Mitchell. A copy of Mitchell's letter was sent to District Attorney Bert Atkins, who requested an investigator from outside the county be appointed to look into the accusations. About the same time, District Judge Richard A. Parsons contacted the New Mexico Attorney General's office, asking for an independent investigator and saying he may call a grand jury.

State police criminal investigator Wesley Waller, who was appointed to head the investigation, could not be reached for comment Friday at his office in Clovis.

Montes said Waller has a good reputation for results. Waller led an investigation into road department corruption in Curry County a few years ago that yielded several convictions.

Sheriff James McSwane

Waller is working with an undercover state police officer from Roswell, Montes said.

"They are hearing about problems in three areas, the administrative, civil and criminal," Montes said.

However, their jurisdiction covers only the criminal, he said.

It would be premature to comment on specifics of the investigation, Montes said.

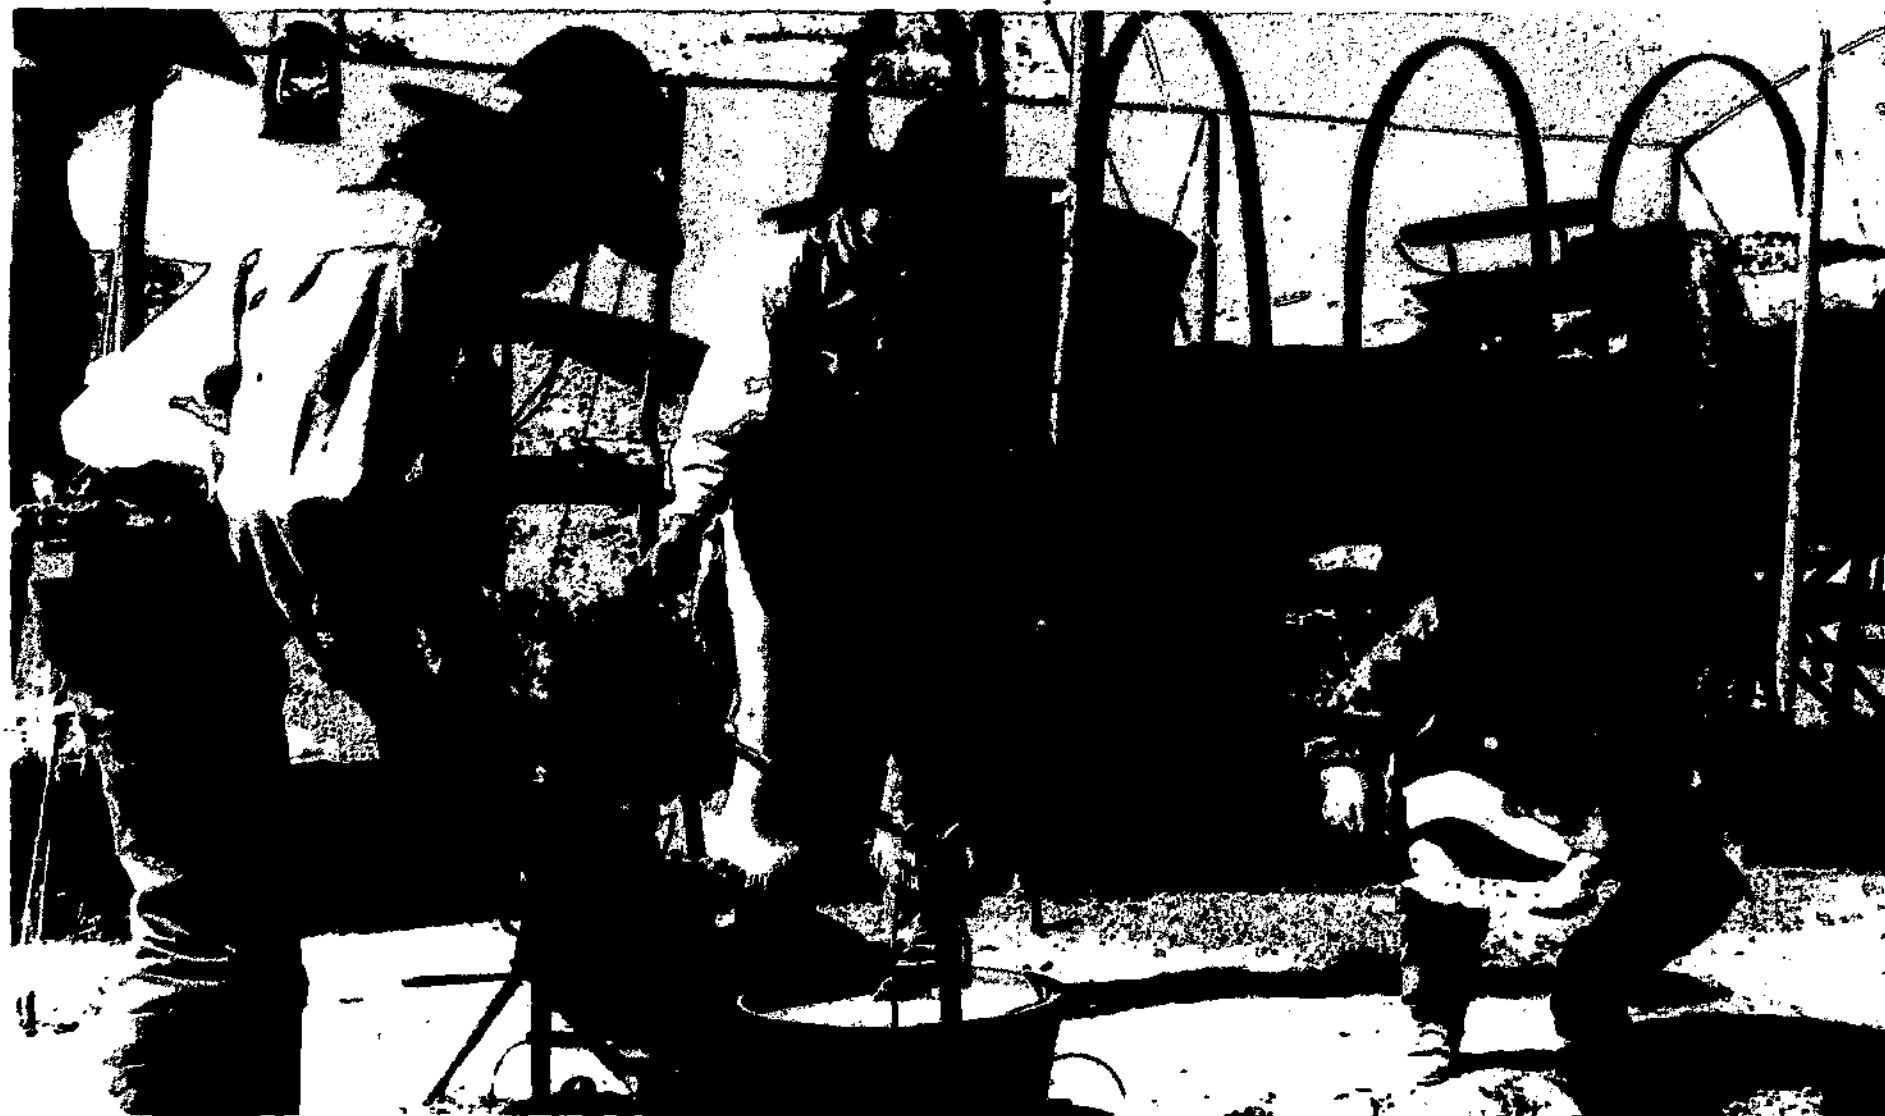

"They have to sift through several documents and talk to witnesses and then they will recommend for whatever reasons whether to pursue criminal charges," Montes said. "I feel they are very neutral in this and have no preconceived ideas."

Juveniles

Lincoln County, said she's grateful for the addition of two more local employees since Wilson was appointed secretary by Gov. Gary Johnson.

But the county was neglected before Wilson, she said.

"The community for years tried to do something for its juveniles, but it was always a lack of money," Parnell said. "We got ignored until recently by higher ups."

The Gavilan School has been a significant boost for at-risk children, and those on probation have been given priority placement, she said.

"I've had them (juveniles on probation) turned around," Parnell said of Gavilan.

The CYF is committed to allowing communities to become more involved, but how to do that while still managing the budget has yet to be worked out, Henry said.

"I sense a lot of anger over what the department has and hasn't done," Henry observed. "I have my own frustrations, but with 750 employees, it's enough to get through the day and put the fires out."

More coordination with the adult justice system will determine whether the juvenile programs are successful, Henry said. State officials are convinced it's more cost effective to spend $10,000 today to rehabilitate a juvenile than $40,000 later for an adult jail cell for a 50-year-old inmate who can't be changed.

Statistics show huge rise in juvenile crime; jail population up 38% in year

The director of the state's juvenile justice division presented these facts and statistics at Wednesday's meeting in Ruidoso:

- juvenile offender referrals have increased from 19,500 in 1985 to 34,856 in 1995;
- within the last year, the average daily population at the state juvenile facilities has increased from 118 to 190.

- the average age of those sent to state centers continues to be 15;
- in 1987, 14.4% of youthful offenders in facilities were sentenced for violent crimes. In 1995, the figure increased to 38.5%.
- by the time an offender reaches Springer, he has an average of six to nine offenses already against him.

- 70-90% of those in the state's juvenile facilities have a substance abuse problem, and 60-80% have a learning disability or a history of special education;
- of those in facilities, 62.2% are Hispanic, 22.3% are Anglo American, 7% black and 5.5% Native American;

- and property crimes are still the leading crime for those who were sentenced, at 33% compared to 2% for violent crimes and 13% for other crimes against people.

Short-term proposals to deal with problem

In the Restoring Justice plan, proposed short-term measures for reducing the number of incarcerated juveniles in New Mexico include:

- allow more juveniles being evaluated in a 15-day stay to go back to their communities when the evaluation is completed;
- early parole of juveniles based on established criteria;
- furlough for low-risk offenders into day treatment and community corrections programs;

- and boosting the staff-to-offender ratio at Springer and YDDC.

Over a period of three years, state Children, Youth and Families officials hope to give judges more options for sentencing, including:

- creating an environmental work camp for high risk, serious offenders, an approach with an 86% rehabilitation success rate in Florida. Classification of offenders is being reworked to separate high, medium and low-risk children;

- starting a 50-bed boot camp to provide intermediate sanctions for children who need a structured environment;
- building regional multi-purpose facilities for emergency treatment, secure areas and shelter space for those who have to be detained or need a safe place;

- creating transitional living units for juveniles who can't stay at home or who are moving from a correctional facility back into the community, but need a gradual transition. Plans call for units in Las Cruces, Albuquerque and Roswell;
- and providing a network of support for children who return to a community, to help them complete rehabilitation.

Lincoln County residents offer solutions

Those attending the state Children, Youth & Families town meeting in Ruidoso Wednesday urged state support for:

- ensuring at-risk students are not cut from extracurricular and recreation activities that may help keep them in school or keep them busy after school hours;

- developing a mentor program where adults can work one-on-one with juveniles or with a group of five at a time;
- and evaluating juvenile offenders locally instead of spending $3,000 for 15 days at the Youth Detention and Diagnostic Center (YDDC) in Albuquerque.

"We're the true evaluators, the people who work with these kids," local attorney Gary Mitchell said. "Besides, they spend less than one hour with an evaluator in a 15-day stay at the YDDC.

"A lot of judges aren't enthusiastic about diagnostic either," Henry said, adding that it costs $100 a day to keep a juvenile at the (YDDC) and only $40 a day at a community-based transitional living unit.

County contractor withdraws

The company awarded a contract to service Lincoln County's communication equipment has withdrawn its offer.

In a letter to the county, Carl Applin, owner of A & G Southwest Co., cited as his reasons a protest filed by another bidder and animosity on the part of some county employees.

"The protest of the bid has basically put my business 'on hold' for more than three months," Applin wrote. "I feel that there are a certain few county employees that have shown animosity towards me due to the bid being awarded to my company. I don't feel that I can have a good working relationship with them..."

Applin did not return calls from The Ruidoso News.

Paul Keith, owner of Allcomm Communication, filed a protest when commissioners voted 3-2 last July to award a radio maintenance contract to Applin.

Keith submitted the low bid for the contract and was recommended by the county manager, who said he had been working on the equipment without a contract for months.

Commissioners voting for Applin later said they were concerned about Keith meeting Federal Communication Commission (FCC) licensing requirements. Keith said although no FCC license is required to work on the county's radio system, his employees are licensed.

Quilting tradition stretches back 2,000 years

by DIANNE STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

People's fingers have been busy with quilting needles for more than 2,000 years.

References to quilts as armor pads, blankets and clothing are recorded in ancient Greece, India, China and many other parts of the world.

Some patterns persist, although modern-day quilters tend to start with the traditional and then stretch the design by twisting and turning the blocks and changing colors.

Judy Oliver and Johanna Burnett, members of the Ruidoso Quilting Guild, shared some of the history and modern techniques of quilting with members of the Ruidoso Woman's Club last week.

Oliver has been quilting for five years. Burnett has been at it for 20 years and some of her pieces hang in the Lincoln County Artist's Cooperative Gallery in Four Seasons Mall.

In pioneer days, friendship quilts were a means of remembering people after leaving home, Oliver said. Each friend would create several blocks for the quilt, embroidering their names on them. Later all the friends would get together and sew the blocks into a quilt.

The best quilts, often wedding gifts, usually were saved for guests to use.

Crazy quilts were created out of necessity in frontier homes where cloth was at a premium and all scraps had to be utilized. When a quilt was worn out, it was not thrown away. It would be used as the batting inside another quilt.

In the 1600s, only four fabrics were available: silk, wool, linen and cotton.

Silk was too expensive, Oliver said. Cotton was still tending to be the favorite, although finding 100% cotton sometimes is difficult, she said.

"It wasn't until 1790 that the first cotton fabric mill was built in America," she said.

One of the reasons for tiny quilting stitches and stitch designs outside of the color blocks is, cotton batting tended to ball up and become useless when washed, unless the stitches kept it in place.

Today, polyester fiber is used, which doesn't come apart, eliminating the need for such tiny, close stitches, Burnett said.

After the Women's Club meeting, Burnett headed off to compete in an international quilt show in Houston, where 900 quilts were to be displayed. Last year in that competition, a quilt with 19,000 pieces captured everyone's attention, she said.

She showed examples of several favorite quilting themes and talked about others, including, Grandmother's Flower Garden, the Iris Chain, Grandmother's Fans, the Dresden Plate, Trip Around the World, Bow Tie, Drunkard's Path, Jacob's Ladder and Flower Basket.

Recently, new designs have been created using the names of states, such as Ohio Rose and Road to Alabama, Burnett said.

No matter what the design, the finished product reflects the creator, she said.

"People say we take a perfectly good piece of fabric, cut it up and sew it back together again, but you put a lot of you into it," Burnett said.

That's why she can start with a basic design and make it her own special piece by changing the arrangement of blocks and introducing different colors, she said.

"It's not an expensive hobby to get into," Burnett said. She uses graph paper and poster board to map out her block designs.

She hand quilts most of the time using a hand-held frame for each block. Coloring books often are a source of interesting graphic designs and shapes that lend themselves to quilting.

For those with machines and without the patience to map out a design, "cheater sheets" can be purchased with a design already in place that only needs to be stuffed with batting and backed before quilting along the lines.

Quilting can be accomplished by piecing together pieces of fabric, by appliqueing one piece to another, or by quilting a design on one large piece of material.

The two women invited novice and long-time quilters to visit the quilting guild to share ideas and hints. The group meets at 7 p.m. the third Tuesday of each month in the dining room of First Baptist Church on Mechem Drive in Ruidoso.

Family quilts are heirlooms, handed down for generations, Oliver said. They should be used, but treated gently, she said, adding, "They're precious treasures from the past and can't be replaced."

A beastly blessing

About 50 pet owners and their canine or feline friends showed up Saturday at School House Park for the Blessing of the Beasts ceremony performed by Father Dave Berg of Santa Rita Church in Carrizozo. The special blessing of animals with holy water is performed in conjunction with the Catholic celebration of the feast day of St. Francis of Assisi, known for his love of nature and the planet's creatures. The Ruidoso blessing and pet photographs were sponsored locally by the Lincoln County Humane Society. In above photo, Alia Cornelius, 3, walks her dog Spunky during the pet parade that followed the blessing. Spunky is nose to nose with Nala, her sister, being walked by Kiana Cornelius (not pictured). Below, Little Boy, a Yorkie/teacup poodle mix, receives a blessing from Father Berg while owner Roslynne Rhodes watches.

THE DREAMER

Columbus Day

This is being sent to you a half-hour after high noon on Oct. 12, a storybook October day with the pure blue sky, smiling down upon a mountain world bright with green, and touched with autumn leaf colors of early fall.

Five hundred and three years ago today, the great dreamer who never gave up his dream saw his dream come true.

After being turned down by the kings of Portugal and France, he presented his idea to King Ferdinand and Queen Isabella of Spain.

They expressed interest in his plan but said they were too busy in the war with the Moors. Disheartened but not discouraged, Columbus started for the coast intending to try again to interest France in his voyage.

However, it so happened that the war with the Moors was suddenly over, and members of the Catholic priesthood influenced Queen Isabella to sponsor Columbus' undertaking.

So a messenger was sent after Columbus, and after an agreement was signed by the king and queen of Spain, three ships were placed at his disposal: the Nina, the Pinta and the Santa Maria. Captain of the Nina was Vicent Pinzon, and of the Pinta, his brother Martin Pinzon. Columbus was in command of the lead ship, the Santa Maria.

Then at two o'clock the morning of Oct. 12, Rodrigo De Triana, a sailor on the Pinta, from high on his lookout on the mast, shouted at the top of his voice: "Tierra! Tierra! Tierra!" (Land! Land! Land!).

"After landing, we all gave thanks to God, kneeling upon the shore, kissing the ground, and gave thanks for the great deliverance," Columbus wrote.

Let us send up a prayer of thanks for the great dreamer Christopher Columbus.

Pope John Paul II

Some of the largest crowds in the history of our country welcomed Pope John Paul II on his fourth visit to these shores.

And Pope John Paul's love of America comes shining through. At age 75 he has traveled to countries all over the world, speaks several languages fluently, and is at home among all sorts and conditions of people.

A true man of destiny, he played a major role in the downfall of Russian Communism. Against all odds and under the constant threat of Communist oppression, he strengthened the church in his native Poland, so that it became a vital force, a turning point in the victory over Communism.

Pope John Paul has forgiven the man who made an attempt upon his life. He recovered from that bullet wound as well as a hip injury, and now, after failing health, he has rebounded and has thrived on his recent busy schedule which would have exhausted many men half his age.

Pope John Paul has said that his visits to the United States always give him a great uplift and inspiration. This was shown in his talk, full of hope and inspiration, to the United Nations.

Thank you, John Paul II, for the blessing that your visit has brought to our country.

Colts buck Warriors, 28-0

by LAURA CLYMER

Ruidoso News Sports Writer
Silver's football team proved it is worth its weighty No. 5 state ranking with 28-0 shut out of Ruidoso Friday.

The victory gave the Colts the inside track on the District 3AAA title race, and sent the Warriors into a four-way tie for second place. Ruidoso slipped to 4-3 overall.

Momentum seemed to turn against the Warriors shortly after the Colts scored their first touchdown in the second quarter. Silver scored with 8:53 left in the period on a nifty hook'n ladder play.

After the ensuing kickoff, the Warriors started a drive from their own 30-yard line. Junior quarterback Pascal Enjady completed three passes in a row to march Ruidoso to the Silver 36-yard line. But the drive stalled and kicker Cory Hood's 44-yard field goal attempt fell short.

"We needed to establish that we could move the ball on them," said Ruidoso coach Les Carter. "It was a letdown (when we didn't score). Mentally it hurt us a lot."

Silver capitalized on a Ruidoso turnover late in the first half. The Colts scored eight plays later with just 30 seconds left for a 14-0 halftime lead.

The Warriors never got on track offensively the rest of the game, while Silver tacked on a TD in each of the final quarters.

A Silver City defender knocks the ball away from Ruidoso's Brandon Eamello during first half action between the Colts and the Warriors. Silver City won the showdown with the Warriors, 28-0.

Spikers attempt to cool off Hot Springs

by LAURA CLYMER

Ruidoso News Sports Writer

The challengers keep coming and the Ruidoso volleyball team has dismissed the last eight in a row.

The Warriors will try to keep that trend going when District 3AAA for Hot Springs comes to town Tuesday.

Ruidoso and Hot Springs will try to bump each other out of a three-way tie for first place. The Warriors and Tigers share top honors with Silver's Colts. All three teams have just one district loss.

Coach Jauna Sanchez's troops will be out to avenge their only district loss, their last loss, a 15-6, 11-15, 15-7, 6-15 and 15-4 decision to Hot Springs Sept. 12.

Since then, the Warriors have rattled off eight straight victories. Ruidoso is 14-3 overall and 6-1 in the district.

The Warriors enter Tuesday's game coming off a 15-3, 15-12 and 15-3 win at Socorro Saturday.

Senior Amber Livingston had 16 kills to lead the Warriors Saturday. Sheryl Dockery and

VOLLEYBALL MATCHUP

Ruidoso

Varsity starts 5:30 p.m.

Angelica Figueroa recorded eight kills apiece.

"Our passing is getting better, but the test will be this Tuesday when we have some hitters hitting against us," Sanchez said.

In their previous match, the Warriors had trouble with the Tigers' outside hitters. Ruidoso also self-destructed from the service line, committing 17 service errors.

But Ruidoso has cut down on its service errors in its last several matches. The Warriors had a mere four service misfires Saturday in Socorro.

Sanchez said her girls have learned to have confidence in their abilities.

"Having a home crowd is going to make these girls think that everyone else believes in them too," Sanchez said.

RHS kickers clinch playoff spot

by LAURA CLYMER

Ruidoso News Sports Writer

A simple reminder of their team goals was all the Ruidoso soccer players needed to rally from a 2-0 halftime deficit Friday against Santa Teresa.

The Warriors scored five unanswered goals in the second half to win the crucial district match over the Desert Warriors, 8-2.

Ruidoso captured the District 3AAA title and a trip to the state soccer tournament when it coupled the Santa Teresa win with Saturday's 8-0 shutout of Silver. The Warriors improved to 10-4 overall and stayed undefeated in the district.

Ruidoso's slow first-half start versus Santa Teresa reminded coach Dean Hood of his team's 10-minute breakdown against Hobbs Oct. 7.

"It didn't look good," Hood said.

At halftime, Hood said he didn't rant and rave. The Warriors' coach simply talked to the team about its goals for the season — improve upon last year's 11-5 record and return to the state soccer tournament.

The Warriors responded and followed their "worst half" of soccer with one of their best, Hood said.

Matthew Ensor got Ruidoso on the scoreboard 10 minutes into the second half of play. Cory Hood then tied the game at 2-2. Jimmy Stover's penalty kick put the Warriors ahead for good. Stover and Piper Adamian scored Ruidoso's final goals.

"We kind of did to Santa Teresa what Hobbs did to us," Hood said.

The comeback win showed Hood his team had the character to come back against a solid team.

Saturday's win over Silver clinched the district title for the Warriors. The Colts are a better team than the final score indicated, Hood said.

The Warriors scored four goals in each half against Silver. Scoring for Ruidoso were Danny Schrader, Leaf Anderson, Stover, Adamian (2) and Hood (3). Recording assists were Randy Randolph, Dean Jarvis, Anderson (2), Ensor, Stover and Hood.

Coach Hood took advantage of the lopsided victory by playing everyone, and even switching some of the Warriors to different positions.

Ruidoso travels to Roswell Thursday to take on New Mexico Military Institute. The Colts are 8-6 and playing good soccer of late, Hood said. When the two teams met earlier in the season, Ruidoso claimed a 6-1 victory.

Track general manager moves to museum job

by LAURA CLYMER

Ruidoso News Sports Writer

Former Ruidoso Downs Race Track General Manager Scott Wells has landed himself a new job in the marketing department of The Museum of the Horse. Wells will start his new job Nov. 1, confirmed Mark Wilson, president of Hubbard Enterprises, Friday.

Racetrack owner R.D. Hubbard said Wells, who took a personal leave of absence from the track July 22, was to return to his general managing duties just before Labor Day weekend.

But Wells never returned as general manager. After the conclusion of the racing season, Hubbard announced Sept. 7 full-time track personnel would be cut 50%. When a Ruidoso News reporter asked to talk with Wells two days after the 38th running of the All American Futurity, the reporter was told Wells no longer worked there.

Wilson initially declined Friday to comment on the Wells situation, but then said, "We're pleased that we will be able to utilize Scott's skills in helping to market the Museum. He's well-known in racing and he's well-known in the community. He has very strong marketing and personal relations skills, and we're pleased that he will be staying with the organization."

The general manager's position will not be filled, Wilson said. The position was eliminated in the September downsizing, he said.

In his September announcement about the cuts, Hubbard cited a cash loss of $2 million this summer, not including $200,000 in overpaid horsemen's purses.

Director of Operations Rick Baugh is handling the day-to-day operations of the track. Baugh previously served as maintenance operator. Other full-time administrative employees include: John Sherry, vice president of Hubbard Enterprises, Tracey Moran, marketing assistant, and Vicki McCabe, nominations secretary.

Eight full-time employees and several part-time employees have been handling the administrative, office, maintenance and security duties at the racetrack. This doesn't include the staff at the Sports Theater. Moran has been helping out at Hollywood Park and is slated to return in six weeks to Ruidoso, Sherry said.

The racetrack staff will stay skeletal until the live racing starts up again next spring, Wilson said.

"Let's face it, these are extraordinarily hard times for us right now," Wilson said. "We told everybody this was coming. I don't think they wanted to believe it, but they do now."

Special session?

In the last several weeks, Gov. Gary Johnson has talked with legislators about a possible special legislative session in November.

Wilson is doubtful a special session will be called.

"If they do have a special session, they'll deal with budget issues and they would also like to try to agree upon a formula or procedure for renegotiating the voided Indian gaming compacts."

"Not that they would try to resolve the Indian gaming issue, but that they would try to agree upon a procedure," Wilson said.

For the second year in a row, the racing industry will ask the Legislature to expand gambling at the state's racetracks, Wilson said.

"We're cautiously optimistic that the Legislature will decide as a policy matter that saving its third or fourth largest industry makes some sense," he said.

And again, the industry's argument will be the notion of a "level playing field."

"It (Indian gambling) does provide benefits to the pueblos that they couldn't otherwise have, but it does have a negative impact on the racing industry," Wilson said. "Our position is the same as it has always been — we're not opposed to Indian gaming, we recognize its merits to the native peoples, but at the same time it has a helluva negative impact on our industry, and all we are asking for is the ability to be able to diversify our menu a little bit, be able to compete a little bit and save our jobs and our industry."

try and make some money for the state. And hopefully we will coexist fairly well with the pueblos."

Wilson said Indian leaders he has talked with don't want to be viewed as responsible for putting the racing industry out of business. Indian leaders would like the racing industry to be successful, Wilson said, noting the recent purchase of The Downs of Santa Fe by the Pojoaque Pueblo.

"We're just hoping the Legislature will understand that they will take a vote on whether or not they want the racing industry to continue to be a part of New Mexico."

"We encourage them to make that up or down vote, and if there's no light left at the end of the tunnel for racing because they decide as a policy matter they don't want to do something that will help us, then it won't be here. But we're cautiously optimistic that the Legislature leadership understands our plight," Wilson said.

"We've tried and tried and tried and the one message that doesn't seem to be getting across is that we need to have gaming machines and card games."

But in last year's legislative session, the racing industry and advocates failed to convince lawmakers that full casino gambling was the cure to the industry's ills. The governor said he would approve of video gaming at tracks, but the Legislature ran out of time before voting on bills that would have allowed expanded track gambling.

"I understand that we were criticized (for asking for full casino gambling). But you know, I don't mind getting criticized for telling the truth. It just comes down to that," Wilson said.

Ruidoso Downs Race Track must have full casino gambling to be economically viable, Wilson said.

"Maybe we're not very politically astute, but at least we're telling the truth from the business scenario," he said.

Wilson and other are going to try to make that argument again to the Legislature and the Governor.

Shorter race meet?

Racetrack owners won't have to submit proposals for race meets until 90 days prior to their meet, said Julian Luna, New Mexico Racing Commission agency director.

Luna said the commission decided to give track owners the 90-day option because of the uncertainty of the 1996 legislative session.

"We're waiting to see what will happen in the off-season," Luna said.

In the past, the commission requested race meet lengths and schedules in October to help with planning.

Ruidoso Downs track owner Hubbard announced in mid-August that he will request a shortened 41-day meet for 1996, but that may change.

The outcome of the legislative session will play a part in Hubbard's request.

"We are planning to run a race meet next year but we're working on all sorts of different issues, and it may be a little different than what we've talked about in the past," Wilson said.

Dodgin' staples and tacks is all in a day's work

by DON HIXON

Ruidoso News Staff Writer

If you ever take a flight on European Airlines, you may be sitting in a chair upholstered by Ivan or Holly Johnson.

The Johnsons recently opened J.J.'s Mobil Upholstery and Window Cleaning in Ruidoso. They named the new business after their toddler son Jamie Johnson.

"I grew up dodgin' staples and tacks since the day I learned to walk."

HOLLY JOHNSON

"We worked on several jetliners for European Airlines," Holly said. "We've also done extensive work on trains and boats in addition to hundreds of vehicles and furniture pieces."

"I was the in-house upholsterer for New Mexico Military Institute in Roswell for many years," Ivan said. "They had some funding cutbacks, the upholstery department went with the cuts, so we made the move to Ruidoso."

The new business specializes in all kinds of upholstery services, and between them, the couple has more than 50 years of experience.

"I grew up dodgin' staples and tacks since the day I learned to walk," Holly said. "My mother owns an upholstery shop so I can't remember not being in the business."

Custom work is the businesses specialty, Ivan said.

"We do a lot of automotive work like convertible tops, interiors, dashes and weather stripping," he said. "We specialize in custom car interiors and do a lot of show cars."

Custom-made spa covers, canvas and awning work, and pick-up truck bed liners and covers are also specialties of J.J.'s Mobile Upholstery, Ivan said.

The company has a special tool known as a sear, used to fix unraveling rugs.

"We are mobile because we have everything we need mounted in our van," he said. "That means we can do most of our work on site."

The window cleaning aspect of the business services both commercial and residential sites.

"We are happy to give free estimates on any of our services," Holly said. "And we serve all of Lincoln County."

We're in a transition time. Leftover summer stars and constellations are still holding their own in the western sky in early evening — everything from Draco and Hercules through Ophiuchus and Serpens. The Summer Triangle is just moving westward off the zenith.

Changing world of health care is confusing

The world of health care is rapidly changing, and attempts by health care providers to adjust can sometimes be a shot in the dark since the U.S. government has not reached a consensus on how it wants to react. The Hillary plan went nowhere, and now it's up in the air as to how Congress will finish the game.

Like many other hospitals, the Lincoln County Medical Center has turned to a managed care group, called the Lincoln County Medical Alliance. This coalition of health care providers is meant to keep costs down and keep this hospital in business, things we all agree are needed.

It's akin to the retail marketplace, in that large companies like Wal-Mart can offer lower prices with their large-volume purchasing power. It's good for the customer seeking affordable merchandise. But there are valid long-term concerns as small businesses are driven out of business because they can't compete with that large-volume buying. In the long run, that can give consumers less variety and can hurt local economies.

With the trends we are seeing in the health care field, it's more and more important that home health care providers are supported (publicly and privately) in the scheme of things. Managed health care plans set limits on how long people should be in the hospital for specific treatments, and sometimes individuals don't fit into this mold and need more care when they're sent home.

It's good the Lincoln County Medical Center has a non-exclusive managed care system, so health care providers that aren't members of the Alliance can still be used.

As a local doctor has commented, the alliance's goal should be to serve the community, not the hospital. As long as that goal is kept in mind, everyone has a chance to survive in this topsy-turvy world of health care.

By the way, the world is changing.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Don't expand historic district

TO THE EDITOR:

(This letter was sent to Monroy Montes and copied to The Ruidoso News.)

Dear Mr. Monroy Montes
Chairman, Lincoln County Commission

I have recently heard from my friends and neighbors that the Lincoln County Historical Board wishes to expand their area of influence in the Lincoln Historical District. It is my understanding that they wish to expand the boundaries from 1/2 mile on either side of U.S. Highway 380 to 1 mile on either side of the highway, and extend their influence down to Hondo. I wish to express my opposition to this proposed expansion for several reasons.

First and foremost, the members of the historical board are not elected members from the area that they provide oversight over. They are responsible to no one for their actions! They are not elected members, and thus have no accountability to the landowners who they wish to control. It is my opinion that the appointed board members do not apply the printed guidelines in a consistent manner, in their architectural reviews. Their actions appear to be arbitrary and capricious and subject to litigation.

The community of Lincoln is not an incorporated community, with community leaders elected by the voters and landowners of the community. The validity of the arrangement of the Lincoln County Commission providing the legal vehicle for the Lincoln County Historical District, without elections of the board members, is suspect, and subject to litigation.

When the historical district was being considered by the citizens and landowners within the proposed historical district, the county attorney for Lincoln County assured the citizens that if the proposed historical district experiment did not work out, the citizens could vote out the district. Based upon that assurance, one of the citizens changed her vote to the affirmative, and the historical district was passed by one vote.

Most of the citizens within the Lincoln County Historical District wish to do away with the district entirely.

At best, the Lincoln County Historical District boundaries should be reduced to the town of Lincoln itself, with the northern boundary being the Rio Bonito, the southern boundary being the irrigation ditch behind Lincoln, and the flashing lights on either end of town being the boundaries along Highway 380.

The extension of the historical district boundaries one mile south of Highway 380 south of the town of Lincoln, will be considered as a taking by members of the Thomas Ranch Partnership, and will result in litigation against the responsible parties. We run a commercial cattle operation on the lands south of Lincoln, and do not need the interference of the Lincoln County Historical Board in the operation of our ranch enterprise.

I respectfully request that any proposed expansion of the Lincoln Historic District be denied, and that serious consideration be given to doing away with the Lincoln Historic District altogether, or at the very least confining the area of influence to the town of Lincoln.

Abandoned project on Country Club Drive is an eyesore

TO THE EDITOR:

Shame on you, City Fathers! I thought your job was to protect our mountains. Have you seen the rape of the mountain on Country Club Drive? Probably not.

Huge trees, some 30 inches in diameter, were chopped down. Smaller ones were ripped off, jerked out by the roots. Tons of earth were moved off and tons dragged in, nearly burying our neighbors at the end of our street. Then lines were buried leaving wires sticking out of the scalped mountain.

Aluminum cans were placed strategically across the barren, now-leveled mountain. Then two structures were partially built, and finally the whole project was abandoned!

This happened last year, much to our horror. Now weeds have grown on mounds of trash and those half-built structures pathetically stand guard with their gaping windows overlooking the mess. Someone was driving a dirt-moving machine back and forth the last time we were in Ruidoso, where we have a nearby home.

You can't replace the mountain. You can't replant nature's handwork with hundreds-of-years-old trees. But you can prevent this from happening again by insisting building projects leave as many trees standing as possible, even if they have to build around them as we did.

Isn't there some kind of a fine for committing such a crime?

Betty Lamb
Ruidoso

(Editor's note: Village Planning Director Cleatus Richards said the tree removal activity was approved by the village. Developers plan to plant more trees. If utilities and street improvements on the financially troubled project are not completed by 1996, the village is likely to pull the bond on the project, Richards said. Project officials are trying to arrange for new financing.)

Prevent such art in future

TO THE EDITOR:

I am in full agreement with Mr. Huffman's letter concerning the sculpture on our main street.

I feel this sculpture should be blocked from public view. Anyone wanting to see this piece could go inside the shop.

I'm asking the village council, mayor, etc. to take steps to prevent this sort of thing from happening again.

If this sculpture had been a banner, it would have immediately been ordered removed.

Village officials, please draft some rules and regulations to handle things like this!

Betty Hicks

Thanks for weekend water

TO THE EDITOR:

(This letter was written to Richard Sanchez of the Village of Ruidoso Water Department and copied to The Ruidoso News.)

It gives my family and guests pleasure for the first time since we built our new home on Yellow Pine Road to know that we will have water on weekends and holidays.

The new line has provided us with clean water and adequate pressure since the Labor Day weekend.

I do not believe either you or the village administration have any idea what an inconvenience this has been for us for years.

We also appreciate the way you duplicated the entrance to our driveway after the new water line was installed.

Again, thank you to you and your staff.

Another industrial zone isn't needed

TO THE EDITOR:

Some years ago the village paid an awful lot of money for a professional planning and zoning company to come in from out of town and make recommendations so some control could be exercised in the proper growth of our community.

On Sept. 6, the planning commission approved Lots 3 and 4 of Block 3 in the Wingfield Subdivision (122 Vision Drive) be changed from C2 to C4. What had been a residence is now a body shop and auto repair business.

On Oct. 18, the planning commission will consider changing Lots 25 and 26 (121 and 123 Vision Drive) from C2 to an unproposed zoning designation but to be used for a future shop, storage of heavy equipment and as an equipment yard.

Lincoln County Cablevision was already in place when the professional zoning map was done. Vision Street used to be called Wingfield Street and is one of the avenues into our historic upper canyon. It is between South Street and the traffic circle at the west end of Sud-dorth, already a congested traffic area. Commercial traffic and vehicles used in the referenced changes will certainly have an impact on that congestion and on the maintenance of subject streets. Will the new owners be responsible for changes and/or improvements to the street due to traffic identity and use, or will the village (taxpayers) have to foot the bill for sidewalks, gutters and widening?

There are already industrial zones on the Paradise Canyon road and at the "Y" where the skating rink was. Could the auto and body shop zoning decision be reversed and the neighborhood returned to C2? Why does a village the size of Ruidoso need three industrial zone locations?

PET CORNER

These pets are currently up for adoption at Lincoln County Humane Society
Call 257-9841

Jasmine is a two-year-old tick hound, who would feel right at home on a ranch. She's already spayed, has plenty of energy and a willingness to learn. Her owner left her because he'll be traveling.

Carla is a striking pointer-bull terrier mix who's about 11 months old. Her blue eyes stand out against a black and white coat. She's submissive and eager to be loved. She'd enjoy playing in the park with a Frisbee.

Poor Scoop

Cat owners should be sure that their pets are vaccinated against feline leukemia, cancer of the white blood cells.

The viral disease is infectious and can be transmitted by direct contact. Recently, cats have been showing up at the Lincoln County Humane Society shelter with the disease, said shelter director Jim Riggins.

The shelter usually reflects what is happening in the general pet community.

A mother cat can transmit the deadly disease her young, Riggins said. However, humans are not at risk as the virus is canine specific and has not been known to be transmitted to humans, he said.

While no treatment or cure exists for the disease, it can be prevented with a vaccine.

Before vaccinating a cat, it should be tested to determine if the disease already is present.

"One out of four cats exposed to the disease may develop their own immunity and lead a normal, healthy life," Riggins said. "But they always will remain a carrier, able to infect any other cats they encounter."

Keeping a cat indoors and away from other cats roaming the neighborhood is a good safeguard, he said.

Within six months, the disease usually claims the life of a cat that doesn't develop immunity. Kittens are especially vulnerable.

Another deadly disease against which cats now can be protected is feline infectious peritonitis (FIP). The vaccine is inhaled through the nose, the most common avenue of infection.

The disease can take two courses. Usually death will occur in a few weeks with the more common wet variety. The cat will run a fever, lose weight, its abdomen will swell, it may vomit and have diarrhea. It also may develop jaundice, respiratory problems and abnormalities in the nervous system.

The other type, called dry FIP acts slowly and may be present in a cat for years before a significant loss of weight is noticed. Mouth ulcers, blood in the urine or stool may develop.

Contact your veterinarian for a diagnosis. Although no cure has been developed, several type of treatment could prolong your cat's life or improve the quality of life for as long as possible.
