ON THE SIDE

Second vote today on nuclear waste

For the second time in less than six weeks, Mescalero Apache voters will cast their ballots on a proposal to store nuclear waste on tribal land.

The polling place at the tribal headquarters will be open from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m.

On Jan. 31, tribal members defeated the spent nuclear fuel storage plan by a vote of 490 to 362. Then supporters of the plan collected 710 signatures on petitions calling for reconsideration of the plan.

The tribal council met Feb. 22 and scheduled a second vote for March 9.

A yes vote would clear the way for an agreement with a 33-member utility coalition.

Rural Carrizozo man dead after accidental shooting

A bullet from a gun the victim thought was unloaded took the life of 20-year-old Chad Jeffers early Wednesday.

The accident occurred while Jeffers was sitting on a couch with his younger brother, Phil Jeffers, 17, in a bunkhouse at the Jeffers ranch near Carrizozo, said Lincoln County Sheriff James McSwane.

"They were playing with a supposedly unloaded .38 caliber family hand gun," McSwane said. "Chad apparently thought he had emptied all of the ammunition from the gun on a table, then pointed it (at his temple) impulsively and fired. We later found only five rounds lying out.

Jeffers' parents own the ranch, which lies about seven miles east of Carrizozo off U.S. 380 near the junction with state highway 37.

His father, Phil Jeffers, is an orthopedic surgeon from Ohio. His mother, Kelsey Jeffers, was in another house on the ranch when Jeffers was shot about 12:20 a.m.

"Another friend also was in the bunk house," McSwane said. "No alcohol was involved. As far as I'm concerned and the investigating deputy, there is no cause to believe it was anything but an accident."

An autopsy was performed on Jeffers' body by the state medical investigator.

Thunder rolls to victory

by LAURA CLYMER

Ruidoso News Sports Writer
In impressive fashion, Ruidoso-trained heavyweight boxer Jimmy Thunder buckled another title belt around his waist Tuesday night in Prior Lake, Minn.

Thunder defeated former World Boxing Council heavyweight champion Trevor Berbick in a unanimous decision for the WBC Continental Americas crown.

Thunder is now the No. 5-ranked WBC contender.

Thunder, who trains at Ron Weathers' facility in Ruidoso, dominated the scheduled 12-round fight.

"I was prepared for any situation that he could try and get me," said the 28-year-old boxer Wednesday night.

The 40-year-old Berbick stunned Thunder only once, in the fifth round when he landed four straight right jabs.

"My strategy was to stay out of trouble and box him," Thunder said. "I wanted to take the fight to him and put pressure on him."

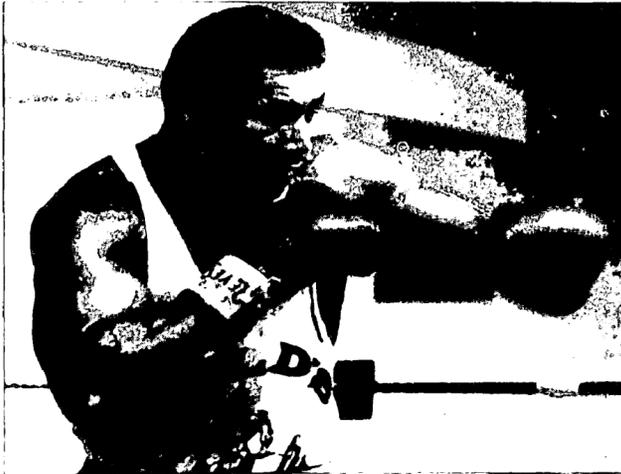

Thunder did just that. He opened the fight aggressively and never let Berbick get into a rhythm. He controlled every round, which was reflected in the judges' scores of 118-110, 119-110 and 117-111.

The victory improved Thunder's record to 24-5 with 18 KOs.

The rock-solid Samoan, who grew up in New Zealand, has won seven fights in a row. He already holds the International Boxing Organization's world heavyweight title.

Berbick, who hasn't boxed since serving two years in prison for a rape conviction, fell to 42-8-1 with 30 KOs.

Thunder said he was surprised by Berbick's fitness. The ex champ weighed in at 232 1/2 pounds, compared to Thunder's 228. They both have the same reach, 77 inches.

Jimmy Thunder

Laura Clymer/The Ruidoso News

With the victory, Thunder continues his climb up the contender's ladder in the heavyweight boxing ranks. Berbick is the second former world champion Thunder has defeated. In his last fight, Thunder earned a major decision over Tony Tubbs.

The WBC Continental Americas title is the first step toward contending for a world title. He said he is three or four fights away from contending for a world title.

"When you're a world champion, you have to defend against a top 10-ranked boxer," Thunder explained. Thunder said managers of the top-ranked boxers might select him because of his boxing style.

Thunder is originally from Down Under, where boxers learn a more up and down, stiff style of boxing. They aren't as flexible and have a tendency to just stand and swing.

Since his arrival in Ruidoso late last summer, Thunder has been working on his movement. He said he's growing more confident in his adjusted style with each fight.

Thunder said the high altitude and limited distractions in Ruidoso have made for excellent training surroundings. He's in the best condition he's ever been, Thunder said.

Thunder wouldn't disclose how much he earned for the win over Berbick.

"I got a good payday -- that's all I can say," he said.

Until the next payday, Thunder will keep training and waiting - waiting for that next phone call indicating who his next opponent will be.

Victory party

Fight fans can join Thunder for a victory celebration at 7 p.m. Saturday night in the Cree Meadows lounge in Ruidoso. Local singer and songwriter Nancy Barker will be performing a variety of music.

Senate vote favors nuclear waste control

by PETER EICHSTAEDT

The News Correspondent

New Mexico could set up a scientific watchdog agency to oversee the proposed storage of high-level waste on the Mescalero Reservation, under a bill approved Wednesday.

Senate Bill 219, sponsored by Sen. Tom Rutherford (D-Albuquerque), was adopted 20-9 by the Senate and now goes to the House.

The Senate approval came the day before members of the Mescalero tribe vote for a second time about whether to store nuclear waste on their reservation.

Rutherford said the bill would give the government some ability to control and regulate the movement of radioactive waste through the state, a power which it currently lacks.

The bill would create a state-run agency of scientists as part of the state Environment Department, who would provide oversight and concurrence.

The bill also allows the state to establish regulations that govern the transportation and storage of the high-level radioactive waste.

The bill was drafted and supported by an interim legislative committee, Rutherford said.

"It became apparent to us that without some change in statutes, the state would not have a say in what is happening," Rutherford said. "We would not be able to participate in regulations, hearings, etc."

"The state has a strong interest in the regulation of such activities for economic and public health reasons," he said. "This would allow the state to have some involvement. We believe this will help protect the citizens of the state."

Sen. Tim Jennings (D-Roswell) said he was concerned about how the bill might affect tribal sovereignty.

"I don't care any more for nuclear waste than anyone else," Jennings said, but "we have to live up to the letter of the agreements we signed."

Rutherford said the Mescalero and other tribes who have expressed interest in storing the waste on their lands are aware of the bill and do not object.

"The tribes have expressed an interest in working with us," he said.

Gambling bill set for hearing today

by PETER EICHSTAEDT

The News Correspondent

The Senate is expected to resume debate today on an omnibus lottery and gambling bill after bogging down late Tuesday night in parliamentary moves that killed the bill then resurrected it.

They planned on picking up debate Wednesday night, but instead chose to have dinner at the governor's mansion.

In the midst of heated debate Tuesday, the specter of a special session on the gambling was raised by Sen. Janice Paster (D-Albuquerque).

"I'd like to see us going to a special session on this issue a couple of months from now," Paster said. "We are making a major decision here."

Senate Bill 1052 is the product of nearly two months of work by the specially-appointed Senate Select Gaming Committee. The bill is among about 40 other gambling bills that have been introduced into the Legislature.

Among those is House Bill 29, sponsored by Reps. Richard Knowles (R-Roswell) and Max Coll (D-Santa Fe), that would make illegal all forms of video gambling in the state.

The Knowles-Coll bill already has been approved by the House and likely will be part of several gambling bills that will be sent to Gov. Gary Johnson.

Also, six other gambling measures were to be considered today by the House committee, including three lottery bills and one that would allow full-scale casino gambling in Taos and Lincoln counties.

Despite the apparent support in the Legislature for the omnibus gambling bill, the verbal sparring could be wasted.

"In its present form, I won't sign it," Johnson said of the bill on Tuesday. Johnson supports approval of existing video gambling machines in fraternal and charitable organizations, and expanded video gambling at racetracks. Johnson also has signed 13 gambling pacts with Indian tribes throughout the state.

Sen. John Arthur Smith (D-Deming), the sponsor of the omnibus bill, said another 4,000 video gambling machines could be added to the estimated 6,000 machines that now exist in the state.

Smith estimated that the bill would generate up to $160 million for the state between the lottery and the state's share from video gambling.

Smith said that about $550 million would be spent on gambling if the bill becomes law. He also estimated that same amount was already being spent on gambling on Indian lands.

"If this bill is enacted, there will be a lot of people unemployed very quickly," predicted Sen. Roman Maes (D-Santa Fe), because of the money that would be spent on gambling instead of goods and services in the economy.

The Senate agreed that all the money generated by the bill would go to fund construction of public schools, instead of being divided among parks, adult continuing education and corrections.

Sen. Emmit Jennings (R-Roswell) was critical of the move because it would encourage school districts to seek money from the state instead of passing local bond issues.

All American winner relates love for Ruidoso Downs track

by KATHLEEN McDONALD

Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Jack Wallace rode Savannah Junior to quarter horse racing fame 30 years ago at the Ruidoso Downs' All American Futurity.

Winning the biggest race on the quarter horse circuit gave Wallace a special love for this track, and today he lives just a quick canter away.

He'd hate to hear the call of the All American silenced and lost to memory.

Wallace started racing quarter horses 38 years ago, giving him a broad perspective on what he feels is an industry integral to America's western heritage.

"It all started with a couple of cowboys, ranchers, saying, 'I have a horse here that can outrun any,' Wallace recalled. "They'd get a match going, run 300 or 400 yards, and then would start talking about another horse to beat."

"That's the foundation -- it's that simple."

But with the industry struggling against the significant expansion of legalized gambling in several racing states, a direct link to regional history is being threatened, Wallace said. To this five-foot, six-inch man with reams of horse racing memories, the prospect of losing the Ruidoso Downs Racetrack is the worst.

"It would be like the thing you cared about most in your life was gone," he says from his adobe home, about a quarter mile from the track. "There's just so many friends, like close family, that I'd really feel bad for."

And as Wallace's wife Linda, the director of the Glencoe Rural Events Center and a racetrack pony girl for the past 15 years, notes, "Our whole neighborhood (housed with generations of stable hands, grooms and trainers) would be like a ghost town; there's no unemployment for racetracks."

Those who know the industry understand the money that is generated does not stay with the owner, Linda said. Rather, it takes a circuitous path that feeds many.

"It's a vicious circle; if you don't have good purses, the good horses won't come. Without the good horses, you don't have the people to add to the handles," Linda explained.

Track owner R.D. Hubbard has argued that he can no longer cover the track's heavy racing handle losses — close to $3 million since 1993 — since video gambling took root at the Inn of the Mountain Gods. If the track is not granted an equal competitive opportunity with the tribal casinos (which now have both machines and card tables), Hubbard said he will be forced to start laying off the track's 500 direct employees as early as next fall and shut down the 50-year-old track.

The Wallaces say proposed legislation to allow expanded gambling at the tracks would support a unique lifestyle that is comparative to the carnival life (though without the surreal eccentricities), a lifestyle that will otherwise become a fragment of history.

"We're a big family of people — some of the best people in the world and some sorry people too," Wallace related. "We would argue so much, fight so much, but if an outsider comes in and causes trouble he'd have to whoop us all — that's the way it is."

During his jockeying days, which included thoroughbred racing, Wallace traveled east and west to ride both independently and by contract. In the process, when his horse would roll or hook hooves with the other speeding beasts, he broke his neck, back, ribs, arms and legs, and suffered concussions and collapsed lungs. But Wallace always managed to come back and take another win.

He began riding in 1957, several years after wandering into the southwest from Ohio, working rodeos and ranches, shoeing horses and grooming. Finally, at 21 and about 108 pounds, he fit himself on top of a horse and took off with a career that spanned two decades with more than 2,000 races. He ended up with big wins in about 60 stake races.

His most defining win was on Savannah Junior — the 1,000-pound, 15 hands high colt trained by Ted Wells, father of current racetrack manager Scott Wells.

"Without a doubt it was the most important thing to happen to me in my life," he explained. "People all over the world saw coverage of it."

Winning the race was a surprise to both the jockey and Wells, Wallace said. Savannah was a longshot in the field, and had the number one location at the track's gate — a most undesirable position. Making the odds more chancy was the heavy rain that fell in the morning, soaking the track into a muddy mess.

"In the morning we were all nervous and uptight; Savannah did not like mud," he recalled.

However, acceptance of the disadvantageous track conditions somewhat calmed the jockey and made him stay loose.

"I almost didn't feel I had pressure on me anymore, thinking like if I got beat it was the track's fault," Wallace said.

When the bell rang and the horses broke the gates, Savannah defied all doubts.

"He broke very, very alert, and opened up daylight. He was so right — nothing could stop him," Wallace recalled.

The horse won by a wide margin, two and a half lengths, moving at such speed that Wallace said he had to concentrate on holding him down after crossing the wire.

Wallace received a pretty sum of money from the race, purchased a Cadillac and home in El Paso, and moved on through recognition to ride in other futurities and derbies.

"Some riders can handle the big races and some fall apart," he said. "But people call for you to ride if they see you can handle the pressure."

"It's a hustle," he said, "and that's what I loved."

state and get the gambling money," he said.

Jennings, however, was able to amend the bill to allow for local communities to vote on whether or not to allow the machines in fraternal and bars immediately upon the effect of the bill, if signed.

The bill was heavily criticized by Sen. Shannon Robinson (D-Albuquerque) because the three-member Lottery and Gaming Commission and the agency it would operate are semi-autonomous.

"They have no budget review, are outside the purchase code, and hire and fire people at will," Robinson said. "You can never figure out what these folks are doing."

"In three years we're going to back here dismantling this."

Smith said the commission and agency was created so that it can act independently.

"We're trying to set up a business mechanism to make money for the state," Smith explained, adding, "We're making the best effort we can to bring money into the state. Sunland Park would draw on the El Paso dollar. In Ruidoso, you can count the Texas plates."

Smith said the bill goes a long way toward legalizing what already exists in the state, because the existing video gambling machines are unregulated and unmonitored.

"The bottom line is that what is already out there right now...will be highly regulated machines," Smith said.

Key elements of the gambling bill include:

- A three-member governing board appointed by the governor would regulate the lottery and video gaming. A 10-member legislative oversight panel would also be created.

- Multi-state lotteries are authorized, increasing the amount of the prizes.

- All lottery and video machines would be linked by a statewide communication system providing instant information to the board.
- No one under 18 could buy a lottery ticket and no one under 21 could play the video gambling machines that would be placed in bars or restaurants.

- 50% of the lottery money wagered would be returned in prizes, and 85% of the money wagered in video gambling would be paid out in winnings.

- Racetracks would be required to pay 20% of the net proceeds to the state and 20% to the horsemen and breeders.

- Communities could approve or disapprove gambling for hotels, bars and fraternal organizations. If approved, gambling would be in place for 12 years. If the community rejects gambling, another vote could be held after three years.

- Fraternal organizations with liquor licenses, if approved by the local community, could have up to 10 video gambling machines; other liquor establishments, including restaurants, would be allowed five machines.

- Racetracks and resort hotels would be allowed an unlimited number of machines, but not full-scale casino gambling.

- Counties could vote out machines for liquor dispensers, but not for racetracks.

- Local voters would have to approve gambling in a resort hotel, which is defined as one with at least 150 rooms and seating for 200 people as well as a liquor license.

- The governing board would also be directed to come up with a plan to allow full-scale gambling in New Mexico by Feb. 1, 1997.

County commissioners back plans for fort use

by DIANNE STALLINGS

Ruidoso News Staff Writer
Stan Monks sees the future of Fort Stanton as a filming center for the entertainment industry.

Wilton Howell, a Lincoln County Commissioner, envisions a regional juvenile detention and treatment center, as a cooperative effort involving as many as 13 southern New Mexico counties.

And Commissioner L. Ray Nunley still is working to come up with a health-related use for the hospital, which is being phased out this month as a state government center for the developmentally disabled and for long-term care.

County commissioners Tuesday encouraged all three efforts to save some of the 200 jobs at risk with the hospital's closing, set to begin with a major layoff March 24.

Monks received a commitment from the commission for $1,000 to be used to attract film studios and companies to the fort.

A member of the Ruidoso Arts and Film Board, Monks said the film and television industry would be a compliment to local tourism activities.

Officials with the State Department of Tourism declined to pay for the advertisement, because the department's policy is not to feature just one industry or place.

If a major company used the fort, three films would probably be produced each year, Monks estimated. Related companies also could set up shop and support jobs would be created for secretaries, security and other categories, Monks and an associate said.

Monks said he is looking for anyone in the county who has contacts with studio executives, and asked them to call (505) 336-4896.

Commissioner Stirling Spencer offered the motion to approve the $1,000 as a one-time shot. It passed 3-2 with Howell and Nunley voting against it. The money will come from $20,000 set aside by the commission to find a new use for the fort.

"The governor has made an effort to keep this (under the jurisdiction of) the Department of Health," Nunley said. "I feel we should wait until the RFPs (requests for proposals) go out and come back in 30-60 days."

The requests for proposals will be sent by the state to companies in various fields, asking them to lay out how much they would pay to lease the fort and other terms.

Howell said jobs are important, but it's even more important to help troubled juveniles.

Since Gov. Gary Johnson favors a private company operating the fort, Howell said the governor should also look favorably on a southeast coalition that wants to do the same.

"I'd like your consensus to call a meeting and talk about it with the other counties," Howell said.

Montes authorized Howell to move ahead with his plan.

"I hope to persuade them to meet in Ruidoso and then, if they are interested, we can tell the governor we want a shot at it," Howell said.

"I see it run by a board with representatives from each county commission. A management group would be hired," Howell said. "Each entity would contribute toward its operation, but would pay a lower fee for their juveniles than non-members. The state would be billed for each day it housed a juvenile at the fort."

County zoning laws put on hold for more public input

by DIANNE STALLINGS

Ruidoso News Staff Writer

A rewrite of Lincoln County's zoning ordinance was put on hold for a few months Tuesday while hearings are conducted to design zoning maps.

County Manager Carol Cooney said many people have volunteered to help review the existing ordinance and add to the changes already suggested by the county Planning and Zoning Commission.

"I'd like to take more time as far as getting rid of outdated and harsh language," Cooney said. "I believe we can show zoning is not a taking of property rights, but rather a protection for Lincoln County life as we know it now."

She asked for at least 60 days delay on the ordinance while she gains input from the public on the zoning maps. Hearings will be staged in areas all over the county.

"I think we could wrap up the whole thing in six to nine months," she said. Without the maps and a comprehensive land use plan, the ordinance has been unenforceable since it was passed in 1988.

Several residents asked for changes, including:

- language that is not so restrictive it stops growth;

- rules on landscaping to encourage native vegetation and plants that use very little water;

- more categories under commercial use; as written, the definition is too broad and includes everything from light to heavy commercial activities, a woman said;

- removing hospitals as an acceptable use under the multiple family zone;

- distinguishing industrial use from other commercial uses;

- not locking the county into a requirement to hire an enforcement officer;

- and more detail in the definitions of what types of uses can be allowed under different residential designations.

One woman said golf courses, public schools and playgrounds should require special use permits; should not be permitted as an acceptable use under residential zoning; and should have to prove water availability.

Cooney said planners from other counties also offered to help her, and a Torrance County zoning ordinance passed in 1990 could be used for reference.

Without an enforceable ordinance, the Mescalero Apache tribal council could buy land in the county and build a casino or a nuclear waste storage plant "and residents of Lincoln County would be helpless to stop them," said Chairman Monroy Montes.

He has received many calls in the past few years from county residents distressed about some land use next to them that negatively impacts their property and peace of mind, Montes said.

When several people spoke against zoning, Commissioner Wilton Howell emphasized that the county already has a zoning ordinance.

"That's not open to debate. It's here. We have it," he said. "What we're talking about now is rewriting some sections and putting together the maps."

Teens charged with burglaries

State and Ruidoso police busted up a ring of suspected teen burglars this week, following the arrest of a youth suspected of stealing a car from Abilene, Texas.

The Thursday night apprehension of the 15-year-old Texan with ties to Ruidoso, who was seen driving the allegedly stolen Ford Tempo through Ruidoso, led to information that solved three Saturday night house burglaries in the Alto area.

Ruidoso police said the car thief's passenger, a 17-year-old Texan who was later charged with burglary, possession of stolen property, and breaking and entering, was found yesterday morning sleeping in an abandoned one-room house on Fourth Street with three other 17-year-old youths from Ruidoso.

One of those slumbering boys is also a suspect in the Alto burglaries, which included the theft of two guns later found in the Cedar Creek woods and a slot machine dumped outside a Ruidoso apartment building Sunday night.

The other two sleeping youths, both 17-year-old runaways, were charged with breaking and entering into the tiny, graffiti-strewn house, and criminal damage. One of those two is also being held on probation violations.

Four of the youths are being held at the juvenile holding facility in Alamogordo, awaiting court hearings. A fifth teen, wanted in connection with the Alto burglaries is at large, police said. He is also from Ruidoso. Police hold a warrant for his arrest on aggravated burglary charges.

Only one of the juveniles — one of the two charged with breaking and entering into the crash pad — was released to the custody of his father.

Police checked out the Fourth Avenue house after a neighbor called to report smoke coming out of the chimney of the boarded up cottage.

Hummingbird surveyors sought

Are you one of the many people in New Mexico who enjoy hummingbirds and would like to learn more about these flying jewels?

If so, the New Mexico Audubon Council and Partners in Flight would like you to join a statewide survey of hummingbirds.

The purpose of the study is to learn where, when and which hummingbirds occur in New Mexico. Information about their feeding, nesting and habitat requirements will also be part of the study.

People who join the survey will receive a set of instructions along with a packet of flowering plant seeds that should produce blossoms attractive to hummingbirds.

Participants will basically be asked which hummingbird species come to their feeders, how many and when. If this sounds like a lot of work, don't worry — no one has to spend all day every day watching. The organizers would like for you to spend a minimum of two days per week periodically checking your feeders for hummingbirds and making note of them.

At the conclusion of the study, the collected information will be distributed in a newsletter.

To sign up, send your name, address, county, city and zip code along with a stamped, self-addressed legal-sized envelope and a $5 donation to cover mailing and seed costs to the address below. Make checks payable to New Mexico Audubon Council.

BLM land management plans generate protests

by DIANNE STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

The weather was stormy at the Bureau of Land Management office in Roswell last week, as letters of protests poured in to beat a March 1 deadline.

It was the last day for comment on proposed changes in BLM resource management plans for the Roswell and Carlsbad districts, which include Lincoln County public lands.

The plans will govern how and when federal public land within the districts can be used, for up to 20 years.

The BLM manages more than 518,000 acres within Lincoln County's borders.

In response to a request from U.S. Sen. Pete Domenici (R-New Mexico) to give people more time to comment, an extension has been granted - but only for those who already submitted letters postmarked by March 1. They can add comments through March 15.

Domenici said he was disappointed that the agency did not simply extend the comment period for everyone.

In a letter to the BLM, he cited the complexity of the 350-page draft resource plan and environmental impact statement (EIS) for the Roswell district, plus a resource management plan amendment and EIS for Carlsbad.

The proposals would affect Lincoln, Lea, Quay, Chaves, Eddy, Lea, Curry, DeBaca and Guadalupe counties.

On another front, Congressman Joe Skeen (R-New Mexico) has blocked the money necessary for the BLM to put the plans in motion.

The Interior Appropriations Subcommittee approved an amendment offered by Skeen, who has a ranch in the Hondo area, to cut $70,000 from money previously allocated to the BLM. The amendment prevents the BLM from moving forward on resource management plans for the Roswell and Carlsbad areas.

County Commissioner Stirling

Spencer, who operates a ranch near Carrizozo, said he welcomed the help from the county's congressional delegation.

"It took the BLM's many, many employees from a staff of professionals three years to put these plans together and they are giving us 120 days to respond," Spencer said.

Oil and gas

Last week, the BLM issued a press release about the lack of specific criticism of the plans through letters or at public hearings.

Leslie Cone, Roswell district manager, said most of the comments had been general and referred more to laws that the agency is required to follow, such as the Endangered Species Act.

"Some of the comments we have received are beyond the scope of the (plans)," agreed Dave Stout, Roswell RMP team leader. "For example, we have received letters saying, in effect, that the BLM should change or ignore the Endangered Species Act, the National Historic Preservation Act and the Federal Cave Resources Protection Act."

Cone pointed out only Congress can change those laws.

She also emphasized that 98% of BLM managed lands in the Roswell District are open to oil and gas leasing. That would decrease by only 1% under the proposed management plan, she said.

The Bureau manages 3.678 million acres in southeast New Mexico. Under the current plan, 68,461 acres are closed to gas and oil leasing. Under the preferred alternatives of the management plans, 115,206 acres would be closed.

"Half the tracts proposed for closure are in areas with low to moderate potential for oil and gas development," she said. "The other half are in areas of high potential for oil and gas, but they are small and scattered tracts."

Two of those tracts are in Lincoln County; the Crockett Cave tract south of Carrizozo and Millrace Cave tract to the north.

"The leasing changes proposed do not affect existing leases. Only new oil and gas leases would be affected, and the majority of the Roswell District already is leased for oil and gas," Cone said.

That answer doesn't work for the oil industry.

"A lot of people are doing things and circulating letters and sending comments to the BLM," said Frank Yates of Yates Petroleum in Artesia. "Certainly there are many people very upset with the way the land has been managed."

"(BLM officials have) nitpicked away until the management plan has far greater impact than they are implying," Yates said. "They are suggesting that only a minute percentage of land would be withdrawn from use, but they failed to address all the land that hasn't been withdrawn, but will have land use restrictions imposed on them."

"They continue to put restrictions that have a negative ripple effect on the entire economy and on the resource itself."

In some cases, it's the lack of management by the agency that worries people, Yates said. For instance, the agency recently acquired property along the Rio Hondo in Lincoln County.

"People are concerned now that it's owned by the BLM, it won't be sufficiently managed to keep unwanted plants like salt cedar from taking over. It would make the land worthless and suck up the water," Yates said.

As for Stout's comment on following federal law, Yates responded, "One of our criticisms would be that they are not following the law, not following provisions in the Environmental Protection Act that require them to consider the social, economic and cultural impacts when addressing endangered species."

Multiple BLM uses, rec expansions in plan

A fact sheet about the Roswell Resource Area supplied by the Bureau of Land Management (BLM) illustrates the multi-use philosophy of the agency.

The chart shows that, out of 13.9 million acres in the Roswell BLM resource area, nearly 10 million acres (72%) is available for some type of mineral extraction, 98% of the land is available for livestock grazing, and nearly all public lands are open to recreational use such as hunting and fishing.

Out of 476,610 BLM acres in Lincoln County, 95% is available for grazing, 90% for oil and gas leasing and nearly all for recreation.

Howard Parman, BLM public affairs spokesman, said only a few new recreational uses are proposed in the Resource Management Plan draft for Lincoln County.

A low intensity recreational area with trails and fishing was suggested for the recently acquired Rio Bonito area around the settlement of Lincoln.

Two overlook areas to view Fort Stanton are under consideration, as are an interpretation site and trails around Fort Stanton Cave.

Four miles of additional trails would be developed at Valley of Fires Recreation Area, from the campground through the lava fields to Cooper Cabin.

Yates said the agency is too quick to restrict use of land suspected as habitat of a protected or endangered species, without evidence the restrictions are necessary.

Grazing rights

No drastic reductions would occur in grazing rights on land managed by the BLM, under the preferred alternative in the Roswell draft released Nov. 4, Cone said. However, some grazing rights would be lost as land marked for disposal is sold or swapped backed into private hands. The land most likely would continue to be used for grazing by the new owner, she said.

Grazing allotment categories and levels of use under plans written several years ago would continue, she said. Changes in use would be based on range monitoring data, as in the past.

Responding to criticism that the preferred alternative would reduce livestock numbers, Stout said the Roswell Resource Area authorizes 314,328 animal unit months, or AUMs, for use by permittees.

An AUM is the amount of forage a cow and her calf or five sheep will eat in a month, roughly 700 pounds.

"The draft RMP states that the preferred alternative would reduce AUMs in the Roswell resource area (by as much as) $7,706," he said. "The bulk of this amount, 34,260 AUMs, would result from proposed public land disposals."

In real numbers, that equates to a possible reduction of between 166 and 287 head of cattle or 883 to 1,435 head of sheep, Stout said.

Spencer said he's uncomfortable with the thrust of the draft.

"The way the plans are written they are aligned a lot with the rangeland reforms proposed by Interior Secretary Bruce Babbitt, but the writing is so general, it gives them a lot of latitude," he said.

The effect is to destabilize the multi-use concept on public lands, he contended.

"It burns me that through administrative actions they are trying to take away the right of lessees to do rangeland improvements such as fencing and water," Spencer said.

"In the past, lessees were willing to invest in capital improvements and tie themselves to the land," Spencer said. "Take that away and the water rights of those using the water, and you'll find people who go in, rape the land and leave it."

Howard Parman, public affairs spokesman for the BLM, said the writing of the RMP was not affected by Babbitt's proposed Rangeland Reform.

"The process of developing the RMP started before the Clinton administration came into office," he said. "It's a coincidence that there are some things alike. One was not used to develop the other."

"He has heard some people insist that the plan would take away rancher ownership of improvements on leased grazing land and give it to the government, but they are misinterpreting the document, Parman said.

Any changes in fencing to aid the movement of wildlife must have the agreement and cooperation of the grazing permit holder, Parman added.

"We're not going in and unilaterally moving things around," he said. "We may disallow fencing along the highway if not required for ranching operations. But I hear we're going to tear down the fence and not pay them for it, or blow out the state's fencing laws, and that's not the case."

Spencer said when ranchers showed up at hearings to talk to BLM officials in Carlsbad and Roswell, BLM officials "didn't use one suggestion" offered by the ranchers.

"It seems like all they really are doing is taking away the multi-use concept. And I still don't think they have a hand on wildlife management," Spencer said (see related box on multiple land use).

Hondo student wins art contest

Tyler Skeen, a third grade student at Hondo School, has been selected by the New Mexico State Highway and Transportation Department as New Mexico's third place winner in the 1995 Aviation Art Contest.

Admission is one dollar for ages 7 and up.

The cheerleaders will be competing against more than 200 other teams at the USA National Cheerleading Competitions in Anaheim, Calif. on March 17 and 18. The team will then compete in the New Mexico state competition in Albuquerque on Friday, March 24 and Saturday, March 25.

"Some states don't have a state competition and that's why we are going to the nationals first," Rebecca Durham, cheerleader sponsor, said.

This is the third year in a row that the RHS varsity cheerleaders have competed in the nationals.

Students learn newspaper business

by DON HIXON
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Ruidoso students are getting the inside scoop on the newspaper business, by writing and printing their own paper.

They are perfect examples of what Newspaper in Education Week seeks to encourage this week. The week is sponsored by the Newspaper Association of America Foundation and the International Reading Association.

The White Mountain Monthly is written, edited, and laid out by White Mountain Intermediate students under the direction of teacher Don Romero.

The White Mountain Monthly is printed by The Ruidoso News and is published once a month in The Ruidoso News' free weekly edition of the Good News Reporter, found in newsstands throughout the area. Publication dates vary, but the next edition of the school newspaper will come out March 29.

Articles in the school paper have addressed a proposed recreation center, school computer information, sports, upcoming school events, trivia quizzes, and student birthdays.

Students in Romero's class conduct interviews, write their stories, and submit them to a team of student editors. After the stories are approved, the students go to the offices of The Ruidoso News and paste up the stories on pages.

"We discovered that laying out the paper is harder than we thought it would be," student Eva Reyes said. "Sometimes when you put things on the page it wouldn't come out right."

Ruidoso High School students are getting into the publishing field, too. The high school recently purchased three offset presses from a man who decided to retire from the print shop business.

High school teacher Ron Maskew is hoping the new equipment will help students learn about how presses work.

"We are going to be teaching the basic principles of offset printing," Maskew said. "We are working with the graphic arts and computers to train students in how the entire process works."

Students will eventually print school forms and take care of special printing needs of the school district.

New driveway regs ready for hearing

by KATHLEEN McDONALD
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Residential driveways may be as steep and winding as contractors desire, if a newly redrafted Ruidoso Planning and Zoning ordinance is adopted by the village powers.

The driveway grade ordinance, which would only restrict slopes to 8% grades at a six-foot-long landing area adjacent to the street, was approved by the planning commission at a Monday night workshop. The recommendation will be presented at an April 3 public hearing at 6:30 p.m.

Changes to the six-year-old ordinance will affect new driveways for single and duplex residential units only; multifamily residences and industrial and commercial developments will still have to abide by the previous 12% maximum grade regulation.

Commissioners said the proposed paved landing area must have a three-inch-wide dip running down its center (to act as a trench). The required flat end of driveways is meant to satisfy safety concerns regarding rolling vehicles on the arduous slopes.

A drainage pipe with a minimum 18-inch circumference must run beneath the landing area, a feature the commissioners said will greatly reduce washes of gravel and sand into the street when rain pours.

"This is a working solution," said chairman Mike Radziewicz, while also adding, "we are aware that there will be without a doubt some incidents that will not work."

Builder Terry Whitaker said requiring cement to be poured at the six-foot landing where streets were unpaved was superfluous.

"It's silly to go to the expense of concrete when the rain will drag the dirt down," Whitaker complained. "It's just going to get covered up."

Assistant village manager Alan Briley, who worked together with the commission, P&Z staff, homebuilders and safety officials to draft the ordinance, agreed. He suggested, however, that since the village does plan to pave the roads in the next five years or so, having the foundation of a nice driveway and culvert in place was desirable and would save the town money.

Therefore, the commissioners and P&Z staff agreed that those seeking a building variance for new driveways along the village's 39 unpaved roads appeal in summary proceedings.

Commissioners, who were prompted to review the existing stringent code after area builders complained it limited future land development in hilly Ruidoso, said they felt the new ordinance was reasonable.

However, Commissioner Chez Rennick, who has been serving as acting village attorney and had not attended the previous workshops, questioned if some maximum grade would be desirable.

"With no maximum in the ordinance, the driveways could be steeper than stairs," he said.

Village officials believe driveway contractors will take "the common sense approach" when building, Briley said.

"They want to sell the house and will make it accessible," he said.

Homes on the steep grades may not be easily accessed by fire personnel, who previously expressed concerns about backing their trucks out of the driveways. But, most often, firemen park the massive vehicles in the street and run the water hoses up to houses, Radziewicz explained.

Also at the meeting, commissioners:

- approved the purchase of 15 feet of a village right-of-way by homeowner Jenny Dorgan for $396 on a platted but unconstructed portion of Alamogordo Street. Her house juts out nine feet into the road.
- reviewed the suggested treatment of a slope at 2801 Sudderth Drive to prevent erosion while the Visions store owner enlarges his commercial parking area. A neighbor, Bonnie Coe, asked for the approval to be tabled so Marquez could walk her through his plans.

Babbitt publishes proposed U.S. rangeland reforms

Interior Secretary Bruce Babbitt's draft rangeland reform regulations have been printed in the Federal Register. Congress has up to six months to pass legislation to override the Babbitt plan, which would become final without congressional action.

In December, Babbitt announced that rather than moving ahead with his plan to institute significant federal fee hikes and other major changes unilaterally as he did in early 1994, he would publish new regulations but delay their implementation for six months, the delay would allow time for Congress to hold hearings and debate the proposals.

COUNTY BRIEFS

Property tax rebate proposal rejected by county officials

A proposed property tax rebate for families earning less than $18,000 was rejected Tuesday by the Lincoln County Commission.

The rebate would have been paid for by imposing a special additional tax of up to one mill countywide on property owners. A mill equals $1 for every $1,000 of taxable property values after exemptions.

Since New Mexico taxes one-third of the assessed value, an owner of a house assessed at $100,000 would have paid $33.33 if a full mill had been levied.

Joel Crossano of Capitan urged passage of the measure. Crossano pointed to families around Fort Stanton Hospital that may face job losses due to the state facility's closing. The maximum rebate would be $250.

The New Mexico Legislature first gave counties the option to enact the rebate last year. The state requires counties to consider the idea in January of every odd-numbered year. However, county officials learned that very few counties were even aware of the measure, which was put together to grant some tax relief to residents of Santa Fe, hard hit by spiraling property values.

County Clerk Martha Proctor said it would cost the county $20,000 for a special election to impose the tax.

"This isn't Santa Fe," Chairman Monroy Montes said. "I don't think it's necessary now." Commissioner Stirling Spencer said other, better-crafted tax relief bills are being considered in the current legislative session.

County endorses care for mothers and children

With the magic words, "We're not asking the county for any money," Verna Adams won support from the Lincoln County Commission Tuesday for a grant application to serve mothers, their infants and young children.

Adams, director of Home Health Care Services of Lincoln County, was representing the Lincoln County Maternal Child Health Council, said the group is preparing a grant that would pay for one registered nurse and one health educator. They would serve about 90 families and work with local school districts to offer parenting education for young mothers and fathers.

The action is in response to a needs assessment survey by LCMCHC that pinpointed that segment of the county's population as medically underserved.

THE SILVER LINING

The Mountain World Begins to Listen To The Voice of Spring

Along about this time in March, winter begins to prepare to leave us for this year and welcomes in the season of spring.

Winter is still with us, and yet the early messengers of "The Queen of Seasons" are appearing throughout the Mountain Land.

Jack Frost brought in that cold wave with the driving snow on the first of March; and the cold north wind kept blowing through the vale.

Then at mid-morning of the fifth, the wind made a sudden turn-around and began blowing out of the west, waving the cedar tops, setting the apricot branches to swinging and swaying, sounding call through the pines on the hill tops, and strumming a harmony of wind-harp chords through the branches of the river trees.

This is the March wind singing its "Song of Spring."

As it moves the branches of the trees, awakening them from their winter sleep, it starts the life force flowing upward from the roots.

The small apricot tree, which brought out its first blossom on Feb. 28, by the end of the day was in full bloom.

The apricot tree, beside cheering the world with the sight of the first fruit blossom of the year and the first breath of spring, is an old and trusted friend of the bees, who come out of their winter sleep to gather their first nectar and pollen from these earliest of fruit blossoms.

All throughout the day the bees kept buzzing in against the wind from their hollow tree near the river to the east.

The whole colony of 50 or 60 were out in force, eager to go to work after a winter that, although mild, is long.

They had to struggle against the wind, being blown back by a sudden strong gust of wind, but they would battle their way back through the gale.

Once they landed on a blossom, they could not be shaken away but stood working while the branches whipped, and thrashed and waved. Their little humming work songs were drowned out by the loud calling of the March wind.

A few snowbirds rode the rocking branches, completing the spring-in-winter bee and blossom pageant.

So now the blossom parade has begun. Following the apricot will come the plum, peach, cherry, pear and apple — stretching over a month or so.

The blossom parade is late this year and the cool weather continues. This is good news, bringing hopes of a fruit crop this year.

CONTRIBUTE EARLY

The table below shows the benefit of making contributions early on, whether or not a formula timing plan is utilized. As you can see below, the investor who makes ten $5,000 annual contributions will always outperform one who waits ten years and then tries to play "catch up" by contributing $7,500 every year for the next several dozen years.

RHS cage coach resigns

by LAURA CLYMER

Ruidoso News Sports Writer

First-year coach Sid Wright resigned from his position as Ruidoso boys' varsity basketball coach Monday morning, less than 12 hours before the Warriors played a first-round district playoff game against Cobre.

Junior varsity coach Ben Sanchez was named interim head coach.

The team learned of Wright's resignation from Ruidoso athletic director Les Carter.

"I was called into Mr. (Ron) Hodges' office and given a letter of resignation by Sid Wright," Carter said. He met with the team and read the letter. "I told them I couldn't answer any questions because I didn't know anything."

Ruidoso principal Ron Hodges said he met with Wright before school Monday morning to discuss the present state of the basketball program and where it was going.

"After 10 minutes, Coach Wright chose to resign on the grounds of personal reasons," Hodges said.

Hodges then asked Sanchez to interim head coach for the remainder of the season.

"He reluctantly did, so it wasn't a case where he jumped at the job," Hodges said of Sanchez' acceptance.

Hodges wouldn't comment on whether or not he asked for Wright's resignation. Hodges said, however, he didn't discourage Wright from resigning.

Paxton Wright, a senior on the team, said his father was forced to resign. When learning of his father's resignation, Paxton turned in his uniform.

Wright has not responded to attempts to reach him for comment about the situation.

Wright will remain as a teacher at Ruidoso High.

Ruidoso Schools Superintendent Mike Gladden said he would accept Wright's resignation. Gladden said he wasn't surprised to learn of the resignation.

When asked why he wasn't surprised, Gladden hesitated and then said, "I just wasn't surprised."

Neither Hodges or Gladden would specify what personal reasons might force Wright to resign, nor would they comment on his coaching performance this season.

Wright was hired in August after Paul Kirkwood resigned the position in July. He previously coached in Texas, where his teams won more than 80% of their games. Wright returned to coaching after a 10-year hiatus. This was his first coaching assignment since spending a year at Texas Tech University as a graduate assistant in 1984-85.

The Warriors were 8-15 overall and 4-6 in the District 3-AAA under Wright. They finished the district regular season in fourth place.

Last year, the team finished 6-17.

According to Gladden, Kirkwood's late resignation put the district in a bind.

"We were just under the gun trying to have the position filled before school started," Gladden said. "We didn't have three finalists to choose from that late in the summer," Gladden said.

Hodges added, "Coach Wright was not our first choice, but we ran out of time and position. However, he was given every opportunity and given the support, both financial and personnel, to build a program."

Hodges said the job was originally offered to Sanchez in July. But Sanchez turned it down.

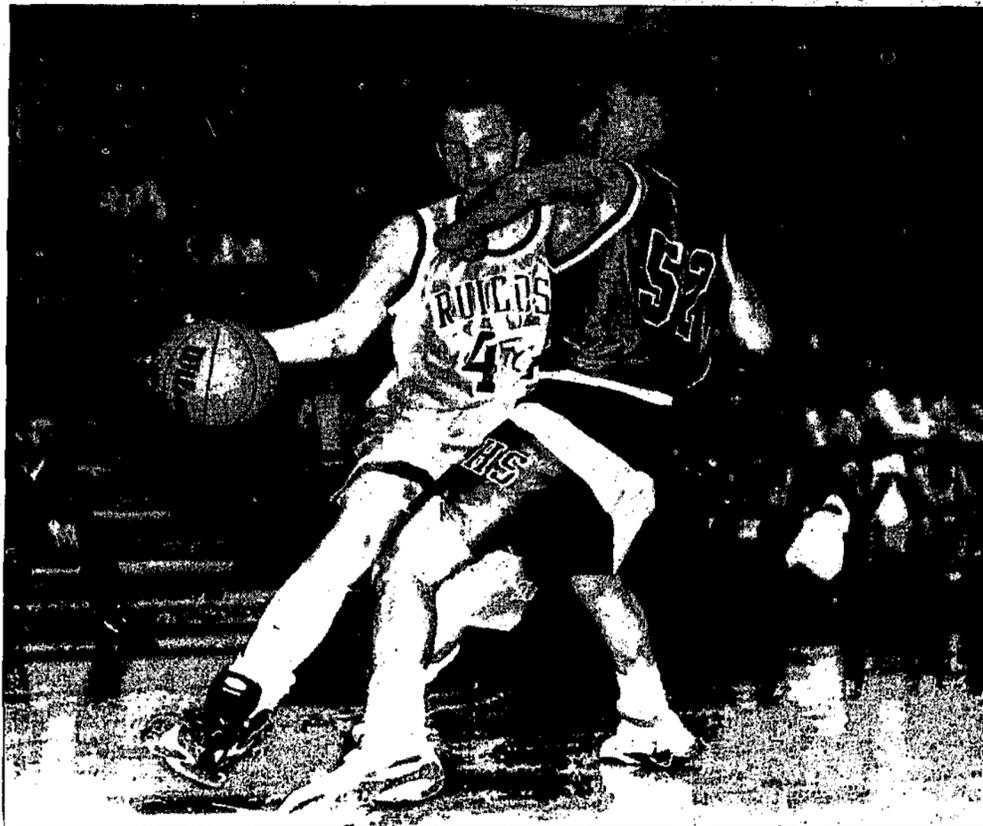

Sanchez has declined to comment about the situation until the end of the season, but he did say he considered coming to Ruidoso in July.

When former athletic director Juan Baca resigned in October, another teaching position opened up in Ruidoso, as Carter assumed the athletic director's responsibilities.

Sanchez then resigned from his position at Menaul to accept a teaching position and coaching assignment with Ruidoso.

Sanchez graduated from the University of New Mexico with a bachelor's of science degree in physical education and health. He's coached previously at El Dorado High School in Albuquerque, Skyline High School in Dallas, Texas, Saint Mary's School in Belen and most recently at Menaul.

He has a career head coaching record of 108-46. In five years at Menaul, Sanchez' teams were 39-17.

Warriors face SHS in semis

by LAURA CLYMER

Ruidoso News Sports Writer

The Ruidoso boys' basketball team is one victory away from qualifying for the Class AAA state tournament.

A pair of two-point victories have kept the Ruidoso boys' basketball team alive in the postseason. The Warriors defeated Hot Springs, 41-39, last night and travel to Socorro tonight for a semifinal contest at 7 p.m.

Ruidoso improved to 10-15 overall with last night's win.

If Ruidoso wins, the Warriors play No. 1-ranked Silver Saturday night for the district championship.

"If we win tonight, no matter what happens we go (to the state tournament)," said interim head coach Ben Sanchez. Sanchez took over coaching the Warriors Monday morning when Sid Wright resigned (see related story this page).

Socorro finished the regular season with a 16-6 overall mark and an 8-2 district record. The Warriors earned a bye the first two rounds of the district tournament. They haven't played since the weekend and should be well-rested.

Ruidoso played Monday night and last night in Truth or Consequences. They must play again at Socorro.

"We are definitely a tired basketball team and that concerns me," Sanchez said. "We haven't had a lot of preparation."

Sanchez said the Warriors will play mostly zone defenses, although he would prefer to play half-court man. But the Warriors aren't a very good man-to-man defensive ballclub at this point in the season, Sanchez said.

The key for Ruidoso will limiting Socorro's inside game. Socorro, Sanchez said, has two of the better post players in the state.

Ruidoso will have to rebound defensively and deny the ball to the Kenneth Greenwood. Greenwood scored 28 points against Ruidoso during the regular season.

Sanchez thinks if the Warriors can accomplish those two things and prevent Socorro from shooting above 40% from the field, Ruidoso has a chance to win.

RHS fends off Tigers

For the second consecutive game, reserve player Jackie Roe hit critical free throws late in the game for the Warriors.

On Monday night against Cobre, Roe's free throw tied the game at 77 with 10 seconds left. He missed the second attempt, but teammate Zack Turner corralled the rebound and scored the winning basket with eight seconds left.

Wednesday night was similar. This time, Roe sank both free throws with 1:30 on the clock. Roe's points - his only two of the game - tied the game at 39.

Senior guard Malik Waters provided the winning margin this time. His two free throws with 14 seconds left gave Ruidoso a 41-39 lead.

Hot Springs' shot to tie the game with two seconds remaining missed badly, and the Warriors won.

The Tigers controlled the pace of the game from the start, but that came as no surprise to Sanchez.

"We knew they were going to come out and run their delay game," Sanchez said.

For nearly every possession, Hot Springs would run two to three minutes off the clock before taking a shot. Sanchez said the tactic worked in part because the slower pace frustrated the Warriors.

"They (Hot Springs) did everything they wanted to do except win the game," Sanchez said.

The Tigers rallied from a 24-17 halftime deficit to take a 33-31 lead after three quarters. Ruidoso trailed by four points with two minutes left in the game. Hot Springs helped the Ruidoso cause by going 0-for-6 from the charity stripe in the fourth quarter.

Junior guard Joshua Hodges led the Warriors with 13 points.

"He was an all-state player last night," Sanchez said of Hodges' performance.

Waters and Todd Young added eight points each. Daniel Espinosa scored six for the Warriors.

Ruidoso 79, Cobre 77

In another thriller, Ruidoso withstood a Cobre rally to beat the Indians, 79-77, in a first-round district tournament game Monday night.

Ruidoso took advantage of Cobre's cold shooting. The Warriors jumped to a 26-11 lead after one period of play.

Cobre slowly chipped away at the Ruidoso lead and trailed by only seven points at halftime.

Ruidoso maintained its lead even though senior guard Malik Waters picked up his fourth foul at the 6:29 mark of the third quarter.

But Cobre rallied in the last four minutes of the third quarter. The Indians scored 12 straight points to climb within one point. They eventually got their first lead of the night with 1:07 left in the quarter.

Waters and Todd Young rallied the Warriors in the fourth quarter. Waters scored 11 of his game-high 27 points in the final period before fouling out with 2:34 left in the game. Young scored key buckets inside as the Warriors rallied.

Daniel Espinosa's bucket knotted the game at 73 with 1:50 left, and the two teams battled back and forth until Roe's and Turner's heroics in final seconds of the game.

Southern ski clubs form own league

by LAURA CLYMER

Ruidoso News Sports Writer

Members and fans of the Ruidoso Ski Team won't have to travel as far to ski competitions next year.

Six New Mexico ski clubs, two southern Colorado clubs and an Arizona team have allied to form the southern league of the Rocky Mountain Division.

The Rocky Mountain Division is one of five regions that make up the feeder system for the United States Ski Association. In addition to the 10 southern clubs, the division includes teams from Aspen, Vail, Winter Park, Steamboat Springs and Breckenridge.

It's a change RST coach Hubert Seigmann hopes will improve his team's performance and will encourage younger skiers at a critical time in their development.

"We'll cut down our time on the road so we'll have more time on the snow," Seigmann said.

With expenses rising, the club also will cut traveling costs by going to qualifiers closer to home.

"It will help our clubs become more financially strong," he said.

The 10 ski teams have agreed to hold three JIII (14 and 15-year-olds) age-class and ability competitions on the same weekends next year. The age-class and ability races will take place at different sites.

Next year's JIII ability races will be held at Taos, Ruidoso and Santa Fe. The JIII age-class races will be at Taos, Santa Fe and Los Alamos.

Seigmann said age-class and ability qualifiers for JI, JII, JIV and JV will remain the same.

This way, Seigmann said, everyone is competing on the same weekend, freeing up other weekends for practice.

As it stands now, Seigmann or part of it competing nearly every weekend. He said the travel time takes its toll on the skiers and their parents' pocketbooks.

Seigmann points to this year's JIII championships as an example.

JIII skiers will have to get through two qualifiers before making it to the championships at Vail. To send skiers to both qualifiers is simply cost prohibitive.

"Because we're so far south, it probably hurt us the most," Seigmann said of the 1995 JIII championships. As a result, no one from RST is going to Breckenridge and Monarch in Colorado for qualifiers.

JIII skiers are at a crucial time in their racing development, Seigmann stressed. He described it as "the crossroads" for a skier.

From JIII, skiers can springboard into more age-class racing and eventually to ability racing. Ability racers must be at least 15 years old. There are three levels to ability racing. The final step, the Trophy Series, can be a skier's ticket to upper level racing and a shot at the U.S. Ski Team.

But the rough travel schedule and time demands have caused some of RST's JIII racers to "fizzle out," Seigmann said. The new format, he hopes, will keep more racers interested in competing.

From the three qualifiers, the southern clubs will send a quota of racers to the championships. Seigmann said he still doesn't know how many spots at the championships will go to members from the southern clubs. He has to go the governing body and fight for slots this spring.

Seigmann hopes to get 15-20 qualifying slots out of 90-100. Teams from the Central and Rocky Mountain Divisions compete at the championships.

The RST coach said he's been working on this idea for the last six years. It started with the formation of the Southwest Coaches Association. Four years ago, Seigmann started the Southwest Championships for clubs from New Mexico and Arizona. He carved a traveling trophy for the winning team, and ever since then the ties among the clubs strengthened.

Seigmann credits the alliance to the coaches who have been at the various clubs for several years.

RST enjoys chance to ski on home slopes

The Ruidoso Ski Team played host to an age-class qualifier last weekend. Several RST members took advantage of their opportunity to show off in front of the home crowd, posting three top finishes.

"It went great," said RST coach Hubert Seigmann. "Everybody's real excited about it."

RST's top finisher was Rebecca Conley, who took second and fourth places in the JIV slalom races Sunday. Holly Kelly, Erin Raterman, Jacob Prewitt and Ben Pruden also took third places in their respective classes and races.

As the season winds down, Seigmann said RST members will focus on upcoming championships.

Eight members will compete in the JIV championships March 21-26 at Crested Butte. Nearly 150 racers from the Rocky Mountain and Central Divisions will compete in super G, giant slalom, slalom and terrain races, Seigmann said.

Those competing will race a qualifying run. The top half will make up the championship field, and the rest will comprise the consolation field.

After that, JIIIs and second-year JIVs will race next at the Southwest Championships in Santa Fe on April 8.

Seigmann added that RST will hold team tryouts March 18 and April 8. Those interested should report at 10 a.m. near the lost and found building at Ski Apache. Skiers trying out should be out of the wedge technique and be able to ski all trails on the mountain.

New AARP associate state director hails from Ruidoso

Charlotte C. Jarratt, a 24-year resident of Ruidoso, has been appointed associate state director of the American Association of Retired Persons (AARP) by national President Eugene Lehmann and the executive board.

Jarratt organized the local AARP Chapter, as well as the Retired Teachers' organization in Lincoln County. She is a charter member of both organizations.

The Lincoln County Chapter #4512 of AARP had Jarratt as its president in 1993.

During 1993, Jarratt was appointed to serve as district director of District VIII, and was in charge of Lincoln and Otero counties until Dec. 31, 1994.

Jarratt began her associate state director duties Jan. 1, 1995, and will remain in the position for two years. She has been involved in training sessions, workshops, conferences, meetings, and briefings since November.

AARP has 174,828 members in New Mexico and 33 million across the country.

Weavers, spinners display talents

A group of artisans creating handwoven clothing, pillows, rugs, tapestries and baskets hope to delight the eye and indulge the senses at Eagle Ranch Art Gallery during the month of March.

Spinning wheels and looms are their tools and artistic talent is their trade.

Maggie Doyle of Capitan is a nationally recognized fourth generation hand weaver with degrees in Art Education and Textiles.

Throughout the last 20 years, Doyle has received awards from numerous invitational and juried Fine Arts Festivals, including a competitive purchase award, for their permanent Textiles Collections, from the Smithsonian Institute in Washington.

Maggie creates handwoven clothing, drawing her inspiration from the landscapes of her New Mexico home. Using natural fibers, dyes and hand spun yarns, the garments are finished with knitted trim and hand-made buttons.

Mary Basmann of Alto weaves on two, four-shaft floor looms, organizing her work around color and texture. Her pieces are almost always done with mixed, bright colors. Georgia Van Pelt is a math teacher who got involved with weaving when one of her daughters wanted to learn to weave. As a result, Georgia found herself with a floor loom. She began a small business in California doing mohair throws and scarves and has now expanded into clothing and custom works.

Pam Murray has been a weaving instructor at Northern New Mexico Community College and moved to Alamogordo several years ago. Pam specializes in Rio Grande Style tapestries and offers private weaving lessons.

Martha Williams of Cloud Country is a basket weaver. Each week a group meets at her home to weave baskets. Martha started with loom weaving while living in Taos in 1978 and also uses the spinning wheel.

Annie Oakley of La Luz has coordinated the show. Her talented fingers have created many works which will also be part of the show.

The Spinners and Weavers Show runs through March 31.

In conjunction with the Spinners and Weavers Show currently filling the gallery at Eagle Ranch, the artists are planning a full day of showing the public "how it's done." From 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday, March 11, both spinners and weavers will be demonstrating their crafts.

Georgia Van Pelt and Doris Youngblood will be available to answer questions and explain techniques of using the loom during the morning hours. Mary Basmann and Jeanette Seddon will demonstrate their skills at weaving in the afternoon.

Other artists that will be demonstrating both spinning and weaving off and on throughout the day are: Ilene Bass, Carron Davilla, Mary Gilliam, Nancy Johnston, Pam Murray, Annie Oakley, Anita Manzenberger, Flo Wright, and Bette Evans.

Each month an artist or group of artists from Lincoln and Otero counties are highlighted in the gallery. This month, the artists are representing both counties. Eagle Ranch Art Gallery is located at 7288 Hwy 54/70, north of Alamogordo, and is open 9 a.m. to 6 p.m., seven days a week.

Local family seeks help for Bosnians

by DON HIXON
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Iris Hadzihasonovic was swimming with friends in April of 1992 when the decapitated and burned body of a man floated by.

For Hadzihasonovic, whose friends joked about the body because he was a Muslim, it was a rude awakening.

Hadzihasonovic lived in the town of Prijedor in northwest Bosnia, before the outbreak of 'ethnic cleansing' in May of 1992.

To escape shelling in Bosnia, her family went to Croatia.

"The worst thing in Croatia was that I couldn't go to school," she said. "I came too late. I missed a year of school and that was the thing that hurt me most."

Hadzihasonovic tells her story in hopes that American colleges will offer scholarships to English-speaking Bosnian students so they can get the education they cannot get at home.

Pam Crocker-Davis, daughter of Ruidoso residents Roy and Mildred Crocker, is deeply involved in the effort to help Bosnian students. Davis works with the Bosnian Student Project, an organization dedicated to helping achieve the goal.

Another aspect of Davis' involvement in helping the Bosnian people is finding ways to circumvent normal channels and send relief dollars directly to Bosnia.

Davis is also part of a team that uses computer e-mail to deliver messages for families and friends separated by the war in Bosnia. Calling themselves Sarajevo Pony Express, team members in Sarajevo help connect people with relatives in Bosnian cities where mail, phone, or personal contact is impossible.

"The peacemaking use of the information highway is only possible because of Sarajevans willing to reach out, take risks, and continue to help their neighbors, even though they themselves remain in peril," Davis wrote in a letter to her parents.

Because of the team's efforts, children have been reconnected with parents they thought were dead, documents are being obtained for student refugees in America that will allow them to continue their education, and critical conversations about peace are still occurring among people in a region devastated by war, Davis' letter said.

Sarajevo Pony Express estimates that a family of four needs about $750 to buy enough basic goods to get through the rest of the winter.

Those interested in helping with the project may send money directly to Sarajevo Winter, c/o Roxbury Highlands Bank, 515 Centre St., Jamaica Plain, MA, 02130; or they may send it locally to Roy and Mildred Crocker, P.O. Box 2459, Ruidoso, NM, 88345.

Free concert in Capitan

Michael Shawn Davis will present a free concert at the Capitan Multipurpose Gym at 7 p.m. Wednesday, March 15.

Davis, who is presently serving as minister of youth and music at East Baptist Church in Denison, Texas, has presented many concerts throughout Texas, Oklahoma, and New Mexico.

He was selected as International Country Gospel Male Vocalist in 1992, 1993, and 1994, and enjoys touching the hearts of both young and old with his music.

The concert is free and everyone is welcome. Davis is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ed Davis of Capitan.

Flat tires plague landfill road residents

by DIANNE STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

In the last three years, John Wilson says he's changed 47 flat tires and bought 23 new tires - all because of nails on Capitan Landfill Road.

Wilson and some of his neighbors told Lincoln County Commissioners Tuesday they're tired of footing the bill for contractors and others who allow nails and sharp debris to fall out of their trucks on the way to the landfill.

"I've brought petitions with the signatures of 21 residents asking for the road to be closed, because of all the problems," Wilson said. "The biggest problem is the nails, but there's also trash blowing around."

Wilson said he has complained to the Lincoln County Solid Waste Authority (which operates the landfill for yard waste, construction debris and large appliances) and to the state Environment Department.

"I had two blow outs going to Roswell," he said. "Do you know how it feels to wake up with a couple of flat tires when you need to get to work? I feel the road is hazardous. The county is responsible to close the landfill or fix that road."

Commissioner Wilton Howell pointed out that the county doesn't own the landfill and has no authority over its operation. The authority board consists of representatives from the county and its five municipalities.

"I'm no longer on that board, but I will go back and ask (the authority) for a better magnet if that would solve the problem," Howell said. Commissioners agreed to send a letter to the authority, asking the manager to increase the number of times the road is swept with a special magnet to pick up nails. Currently, the magnet is run once a week.

Commissioners said it's not feasible to close the road at this time. The landfill should be in operation for at least another three years.

"Two different roads lead there," Road Manager Bill Cupit said. "Both run directly through a subdivision and residential areas. Twenty-seven or more families are on the road used now."

The only other way to access the landfill would be to cross about a half-mile of private property, he said.

Commissioner Bill Schwetmann, who brought the problem to the attention of the commission, said the authority's general manager should be asked to attend the next commission meeting to tell how the situation will be resolved.

Although commissioners discussed possibly putting a hard surface on the gravel road, the estimated $80,000 to $100,000 price tag seemed to end that consideration for now. The road was enlarged from 16 feet to 28 feet wide a few years ago.

"I think you need a hard, flat surface on the road" to facilitate the sweeper and to keep the nails in a flat position, Cupit said. The surfacing project is in the county's five-year road improvement plan.

"Even if it was paved, there still would be debris," Spencer said. "Why aren't there more flats on U.S. 380 (that leads to the landfill turnout)?"

We need to determine whether the nails are falling out on the way into the landfill or on the way out."

"The big problem is that most people put three times more in their trailer than it can hold, although I think some (nails) are falling off as the trucks come back empty," Cupit said. The road is bumpy and there's nothing to hold them down."

He suggested the attendant at the landfill check the bed of each truck and require the driver to sweep the bed, if necessary, before returning to the road.

Chairman Monroy Montes said the county should look at building a guard house at the entrance to the landfill road and checking loads before they enter.

"I think before we spend any money, we ought to know exactly what's happening and then get it fixed," Spencer said.

"We could have someone monitor everything coming in and out for a week," Cupit suggested.

"Roofing nails are the worst," Montes said. "Maybe the contractors should be liable for the cost of (eliminating the situation). We could start a fund to address the residents' cost and the problem."

Commissioners said they would ask Sheriff James McSwane and the State Police to intensify their patrols on the highways leading to the landfill and to cite trucks for uncovered loads.

Jody Roberts, who also lives on the road, said he considers the excessive speed of drivers and the dust their vehicles raise a bigger problem.

"The dust is so bad, I'm treating my mares and foals for lung infection," he said. "It would help if the sheriff would police the area."

Montes said at one time, the sheriff was asked to schedule regular patrols on the road.

Cupit resigns as road manager

After more than three years at the helm of the Lincoln County Road Department, Bill Cupit resigned Tuesday.

Cupit is being forced to take back a construction-related business he sold before taking the county government job. In his letter of resignation, Cupit said he was doing what he believed was right for his family.

No one will be hired to replace him until the beginning of the next fiscal year, Commissioner Wilton Howell said Thursday.

"He's done such a good job organizing the department and projects, it probably can run three months on automatic pilot," Howell said.

Until his replacement is picked, County Manager Carolin Cooney will be in charge. Kim Roper, Cupit's administrative assistant, will handle the office and foreman Albert Hernandez will supervise the field work.

"I was unhappy and surprised by the resignation," said Commission Chairman Monroy Montes Wednesday. "He's the best road manager this county ever had. I'm still in shock."

"He came in at a time when many corrections and major projects were needed. We may be at a point now with the five-year plan he drafted, where it will be more routine. We'll miss him."

Montes also applauded the road department crew, saying they delivered what Cupit required to create a top notch organization.

Cupit was disappointed and hurt over the last few weeks when residents who had been supporters of his management of the department seemed to turn on him because the commission decided to increase an assessment for subdivision road maintenance, Montes said.

New Capitan school board members seated tonight

by DIANNE STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Two new members will be welcomed to the Capitan School Board when it meets at 7 p.m. today.

Jim Hobbs of the Flying J Ranch, and Freda McSwane, elected to the school board in February, will be sworn into office. Hobbs replaces Jim King and McSwane will take the place of chairman Tom Trost.

Beverly Payne, who has served on the board for the past two years, was re-elected without opposition for a four year term.

King initially filed to run, but later stepped out of the race when five other candidates filed for his chair.

Trost, who had been on the board 10 years and served as president for three years, didn't attempt a run for another term.

A general work session at 6:30 p.m. in the board room of the old administration building will precede the regular meeting.

District Superintendent Diana Sonnamaker said one of the top items on the agenda will be discussion about a summer school program.

"We could work with Job Training Partnership Act qualified students," she said. "If enough qualify, there would be no cost to us or students for some classes. If not, we'd have to see if there are enough students who may have failed a class to pay for summer school. In either case, we need the board's permission."

The board also will consider a request to realign the social studies curriculum by moving Government and Economics from the freshmen level to a senior course.

"It would take three years to phase in," she said. "The change will help catch the kids who move in after their freshman year" and need the course to graduate."

Other items and people on the agenda include:

- Stan Monks, who's involved in an effort to convert Fort Stanton Hospital into a center for motion picture filming. He's scheduled to talk to the board about involving more volunteers in the school system;

- Virgil Stephens, speaking about a different philosophy in teaching science;

- school cheerleaders, who want to thank the board for sanctioning their efforts to raise money for a dance competition over spring break that will be staged during a cruise to the Bahamas;

- a final reading of the weapons in school policy;

- a report on a grant application for landscaping around the new middle school;

- and a review of the proposed 1995-96 school calendar.

Let Legislature have its say with gambling bills

Governor Johnson seemingly disrupted the public debate process Tuesday by calling a press conference in the midst of legislative debate on a gambling bill to say he'd veto it.

The best way to work through the mire of gambling issues is to let the Legislature debate it out and come up with a plan - a plan that is created by a large number of elected officials representing various interests. Governor Johnson should honor this process.

In some cases, it can be refreshing to have a governor who tells people what he thinks before the election, then sticks to it. But in this case, is it fair for him to form an opinion about what kind of gambling will be allowed, before the debate even begins?

The Legislature seemed to be in a state of confusion at the time of this writing (the paper's B section and Opinion Page are printed early Wednesday afternoon, while the A section is printed Thursday morning). Tuesday night, the bill was killed and resubmitted so it could be heard again Wednesday afternoon. We surely can't predict what will happen with Senate Bill 1052, and neither can Governor Johnson. And there will undoubtedly be yet more debate on more gambling legalization bills in the days to come, so it's anyone's guess what the Legislature will come up with.

It's only fair that the governor at least listen to what the Legislature has to say before he tells them what he's going to do. The Legislature (and the people who elected its members) has the right to believe all its work has a purpose.

Taos class urges vote against nukes

TO THE EDITOR:

This letter was written as a class project by the fifth grade class at Enos Garcia Middle School in Taos, and sent to the Mescalero Tribal Council and The Ruidoso News.

Dear Tribal Council:

We are Stella Montoya's fifth grade class of Enos Garcia Middle School. We are very concerned about the nuclear waste dump that you will be voting on come March 9.

We are afraid for our future because we don't think that our world will be fit to live in if people keep using and storing nuclear energy. We are pleading with you to think of us and your own children and grandchildren. Please keep the Mother Earth fit to live in. Vote no for the waste dump.

We understand that you are concerned about jobs for your tribe but there must be another way to make money other than abusing our state. There is no way that the dump would only affect you. People would stop coming here to visit because they would be afraid of contamination, animals would die off and habitats would be destroyed. How do you think that your ancestors would vote if they were here?

We don't mean to be disrespectful but we are desperate to influence you to vote down the dump. Please vote with your hearts and spirits. Thank you.

Stella Montoya's fifth grade class

Paper insensitive to son's 1992 death

TO THE EDITOR:

First, I'd like to express my condolences to the family of David Brian LaMay. I have also lost a son, Pierre Shield, in a fatal traffic accident and I know the tremendous loss you are feeling now and will feel in the years to come.

This letter is regarding the story about the Ruidoso High School senior who was killed. The story said, "The last RHS student to die was Pierre Shield, who was killed in a 1992 drunk driving accident." What are you telling your readers when they read in the article that describes the recent tragedy of David Brian LaMay? That my son, Pierre, was a drunk driver? My son was not "killed in a drunk driving accident." He was killed by a drunk driver.

You have caused me to endure the immense suffering and agony which families feel when remembering the tragic loss of a son or daughter. You have defamed the memory of my son to his friends and the community.

You can so eloquently and compassionately describe the tragic deaths of other young lives lost to accidents. Why do you not so eloquently and compassionately describe the death of my son? Do your RHS sources know that Pierre was a senior and was only two weeks away from his graduation, that he lettered in football, that he was an active member of the Indian Club or that he was with the Mescalero Reformed Church High School Youth Group?

I do not belittle the death of others. I feel that incomprehensible pain their families must be feeling now and will feel forever. Let's hope that, in the future, you resist the urge to so casually misinform. Please resist the urge to cruelly expose and reopen painful memories.

Stop nuclear waste at its source

TO THE EDITOR:

The Great Spirit has instructed us that we have a sacred bond with our Mother Earth and an obligation to the creatures who live upon it. This is why it is disturbing that the federal government and the nuclear power industry seem determined to ruin forever some of the few lands we have left.

On Jan. 31, Mescalero Apache tribal members in southern New Mexico voted 492-300 against the placement of nuclear waste on their pristine ancestral land. For over a year, the tribal council has been negotiating with Northern States Power Company in Minnesota, which represents 35 other nuclear utilities throughout the U.S., to accept their thousands of tons of lethal radioactive nuclear waste.

Shortly after the rejection of nuclear waste storage at the polls, the Mescalero housing director, who is a tribal member and is funded by the U.S. Housing and Urban Development agency (HUD), went door to door asking people to sign a petition calling for another vote.

On March 9, the Apaches will vote again on whether to continue negotiations with the nuclear utilities. Why must they go through this divisive agony again? It seems the nuclear industry wants an easy way out of their dilemma of what to do with their wastes (that no one seems to want), presumably so they can continue generating more.

As a mother and a grandmother, I am concerned about the future survival of our people. Indian people have been divided between those tempted by short-term money and those who fear the long-term health consequences of taking the U.S. high-level radioactive waste. So far, those who take the long view have prevailed.

Of the 17 tribes who considered establishing a "temporary" nuclear waste storage site, only three remain. But the debate has done serious damage to harmonious relationships among our people. We appeal to the U.S. government and those who use nuclear energy: take responsibility for your own wastes and leave us alone!

The problem for the nuclear power industry is that radioactive wastes are building up at their commercial nuclear plants. People living near the plants don't want the waste and are demanding that it be moved.

Industry and government have responded in two ways: 1) creating "at reactor storage" systems that will hold the waste for up to 50 years while a permanent solution is explored, and 2) proposing a system of so-called "monitored retrievable storage" (MRS) sites away from reactors, where this waste could be "temporarily" stored.

The U.S. government targeted Native Americans for several reasons: their lands are some of the most isolated in North America, they are some of the most impoverished and, consequently, most politically vulnerable and, perhaps most important, tribal sovereignty can be used to bypass state environmental laws.

How ironic that, after centuries attempting to destroy Native American sovereignty, the U.S. government is suddenly interested in promoting sovereignty - just so it can dump its lethal garbage!

All Indian treaties and agreements with the U.S. government have been broken. Today's Indians remember yesterday's broken promises, and today's political situation in Washington, D.C. is an example of how volatile U.S. policy decisions can be. The Indians cannot trust the federal government and certainly cannot trust the nuclear industry whose driving force is monetary profit.

A growing number of Indian Nations have exercised their sovereign national rights in a different way by declaring their lands Nuclear Free Zones. Thirteen tribes have already done this. Among them are four tribes in Oklahoma and the White Mountain Apaches in Arizona, sister Nation to the Mescalero Apaches. In addition, the Inuit Circumpolar Conference has repeatedly called for a Nuclear Free Arctic, and the Cheyenne River Sioux have banned radioactive waste from their land in South Dakota.

What kind of society are we that permits the manufacture of products that cannot be safely disposed of? We Americans should be ashamed for allowing our government and business community to perpetuate this rancid industry. We must work together as people of the world to stop the nuclear industry that is dividing and contaminating us.

Those of you who use nuclear energy, won't you please join us by agreeing not to dump your toxic wastes on anyone else and stop the contamination at its source - by working for the shutdown of all nuclear power reactors as rapidly as possible? Tell the federal government to spend taxpayers' dollars researching alternative, cleaner sources of energy. Let your members of Congress and utility companies know that a more positive choice for economic development for Indian tribes would be to encourage the production of safe sources of energy such as the wind and sun, not by pressuring them to serve as hosts for the nation's nuclear garbage dump.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Truth may only come with accident

TO THE EDITOR:

Obviously my timing for expressing hope for the tomorrows of South Central New Mexico are routinely premature. For the third time I have inaccurately declared a bright and healthy future for the region.

Sadly the world is now expressing serious doubts about the people in the region. What on earth is wrong with those people? A question I am hit with virtually daily. Bottom line is, I don't have a notion. Who knows, and at this time too many people are starting to say, "who cares."

What else can be done? The U.S. government withdrew its temporary nuclear waste storage program for the area, all state and local governments passed resolutions against the nuclear dump, most local professional organizations declared total opposition, and finally and what should have been the most important act, the Mescalero people voted down the dump. But it goes on as though the proponents are deaf and blind. Something will get their attention someday.

It is starting to appear that only through the horrors of a nuclear accident will the truth be realized by the advocates. That's too late though isn't it? The money will be meaningless, as they beg for help. Help which no one will be able to provide at any price. Perhaps then and only then will this issue be truly finished and over, then all will be over.

HOW MUCH WILL IT COST TO RETAIN THE SERVICES OF BUYERS REAL ESTATE SERVICES?

There is no need for you to incur additional cost for our services when Buyers Real Estate Services helps you buy a home. The most common way is exactly the same way other real estate agents are paid. The typical commission paid at closing is usually divided between the listing agent and the buyers agent. The only difference is that our contract says our portion of the commission is paid "on behalf of the buyer" and comes from the proceeds of the transaction.

DOES BUYERS REAL ESTATE SERVICES HAVE ACCESS TO ALL RESOURCES LIKE THE MULTIPLE LISTING SERVICE?

Absolutely yes, and more. "We belong to the local Board of Realtors and MLS, so we can show you homes listed with this service. In addition, we also show homes that are "for sale by owner" and "for sale by builder". We can show you any advertised property.
