Donaldson ranch threatened by fire

Lightning sparked three fires in Lincoln County about noon Wednesday. The largest has burned 2,000 acres on the Picacho ranch of television newscaster Sam Donaldson.

"It looks like we will get a handle on it this morning," state District Forest Manager Barbara Luna said about 9 a.m. today. "The weird thing about this fire is because it is so dry, we had active flames all night long when usually the humidity at night allows us to get a handle overnight."

Unfortunately, the lightning only brought scattered rain with it, not enough to saturate the parched vegetation, said Dave Cummings of the U.S. Forest Service. The last significant rain in the Ruidoso area, nearly a quarter-inch, fell April 4.

Donaldson has been actively involved in the firefighting effort on his ranch east of U.S. 70 at the eastern edge of the county, Luna said.

"We've used air tankers and 17-18 engines from this agency, other agencies and county fire departments," she said. "Two Mescalero hand crews are working on it and yesterday, so was their helicopter crew."

Reported at the same time was a fire on the Loveless Ranch north of Capitan, which is considered contained this morning at 720 acres, Luna said.

"We had three or four calls come in at the same time, but some of them were seeing smoke from the two main fires. One fire stopped on a small portion of acreage nearby," Luna said.

About 3:30 p.m. yesterday, the U.S. Forest Service responded to a fire on West Mountain in the Capitan.

"We're calling it the Jacob Fire and about 80 acres are involved," Cummings said. "It died down during the night and we worked to get a line around it, but we're not calling it contained or controlled.

There's some road access, but it's rough terrain. It's calm now, but we're expecting more wind this afternoon." Ground crews and air tankers are fighting that blaze.

Veterinarian Jack Sales examines Classic Run, a three-year-old filly, at the the Ruidoso Downs Race Track. Sales, and all of the vets at the racetrack, are checking horses for vesicular stomatitis, a highly contagious virus that has affected livestock in five counties across the state. There have been no reported cases of the disease in Lincoln County or surrounding areas, but the track is taking strong precautions as a preventive measure. Classic run is owned by Charles Blalock from Stanton, Texas.

Officials take virus precautions

by DON HIXON

Ruidoso News Staff Writer

A virus spreading among New Mexico's domesticated animals has not been reported in Lincoln County, and officials with the government and Ruidoso Downs Race Track are taking extreme precautions to keep it that way.

A wild horse adoption scheduled for Saturday in Ruidoso Downs has been canceled by the Bureau of Land Management in an effort to control the virus.

Horses entering the racetrack must have proof they were inspected by a veterinarian within the past 12 hours and specifically checked for the virus.

With nearly all the nominations for the track's famous All American Futurity coming from outside the state, track officials have much at stake and are doing everything possible to avoid being quarantined, noted General Manager Scott Wells.

The virus, vesicular stomatitis (VS), primarily affects horses, swine and cattle but can also affect sheep, goats, wild animals and humans.

No local cases

Cases of VS have been reported in horses in Valencia, Santa Fe, Doña Ana, Bernalillo and Catron counties, said Kendra Pratt, an official with the United States Department of Agriculture Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service.

None of these counties border Lincoln County. No reports of the disease in humans or animals have been reported in or around Lincoln County.

"We told the BLM that it would be a good idea to delay the adoptions because of the VS outbreak," Pratt said. "We just don't want the disease to spread."

"We have 19 investigations going on just in Valencia County. We have a real concentration there."

There are presently 59 ongoing investigations of the disease in New Mexico and those being investigated are under state order to not move their animals until tests are completed, she said.

"We are also restricting interstate movement of livestock within a ten-mile radius of any area where investigations are being conducted," Pratt said.

The New Mexico Department of Health is investigating nine possible cases of VS in humans, said public relations officer Carolyn Hutchinson.

Five cases are from the Silver City area, three from Las Cruces, and one from the Corrales area, she said.

Racetrack precautions

Racetracks across the state have implemented stringent inspections and precautions to insure safety of race horses, Pratt said.

"The racing commission has instituted some very strict health requirements," she said.

Racing Commission Chairman Eddie Fowler of Ruidoso drove immediately to Albuquerque when he received notification of the outbreak, Wells said.

Village bond election set for Aug. 22

by KATHLEEN McDONALD
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

John Owen is one of several Ruidoso homeowners who has water problems village officials say they could resolve if voters approve the issuance of $2 million worth of bonds.

The bond issue, planned to upgrade old two-inch water lines with six-inch loops, is one of six infrastructure improvements the village council will put on the ballot for an Aug. 22 election. On Tuesday the council approved a resolution calling for the vote on $6.5 million worth of projects.

Owen says his Ruidoso vacation home, built at a high elevation, has often been left without a trickle of water running through its pipes on weekends, especially holiday weekends.

"They tell me they're doing the best they can," he says of village officials. "But that doesn't solve the problem."

His frustration stems from the inadequate water pressure and volume since he built the house on the steep slope of Yellow Pine Road seven years ago.

Owen's neighborhood is part of 25 miles worth of the two-inch, 30-year-old lines the village wants to replace with six-inch lines. Improvements of all the lines are expected to cost $1.2 million. Included in that voter package is another $800,000 for expansion of the Grindstone water treatment plant.

"The primary issue has been pressure, and it has been a problem during peak demand at lower levels, making it difficult to give adequate pressure to higher elevations," Village Manager Gary Jackson explained.

With the new $1.8 million Grindstone Treatment Plant on line and treating more than one million gallons of water a day, the number of customers on the village's two water sources has been lessened. This has greatly improved the pressure problem, Jackson said.

Previously, all city water came from the two million gallon per day Alto Plant, which had trouble serving up to 35,000 people on busy holiday weekends.

"The second matter is volume. Once water gets up there, then how much gets there is the issue," Jackson said.

Volume has been a serious problem for homeowners tapped onto the old two-inch lines.

Even if voters fail to pass the $2 million bond issue, village officials still plan to replace the lines in Owen's neighborhood and other areas before Labor Day weekend. Approximately $200,000 has been set aside in the new budget for the project.

Ruidoso will draft law vs. skateboards

by KATHLEEN McDONALD
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

A proposed Ruidoso ordinance banning skateboarding, rollerblading, skating and bicycling is in the works following a vote by the village council Tuesday.

Before the ordinance is drafted and reviewed at a public hearing, a new skateboard park is scheduled to be constructed by the village.

Councilors voted 5-1 to draft and review the ordinance, after four merchants at Tuesday's meeting asked officials to put a stop to alleged criminal behavior and menacing activities of skateboarders.

The vote reversed an April decision by the council not to draft a new ordinance, but to instead form an ad hoc skateboarding committee to consider a skateboard park.

Seagal puts up dukes against nukes

Ruidoso officials have been trying to convince the film industry to come to Lincoln County for the past year, but not for the reason that's bringing action film star Steven Seagal to Ruidoso Saturday.

Seagal, who has been hitting it big at the box office ever since his first film, "Above the Law," will bring his environmental protection message to the Ruidoso Civic Events Center at 1:30 p.m.

Seagal will be speaking about the safety of the proposed nuclear waste dump on the Mescalero Apache reservation.

Rufina Laws of Humans Against Nuclear Dumps (HANDS) and Nettie Fossum of Mescalero Apache Stronghold also are on the program for the afternoon.

The appearance was put together at the invitation of the Ruidoso Upper Canyon Association (RUCCA), a local anti-nuclear waste group.

Steven Seagal

"He's coming at his own expense," said Hazel Haynsworth, president of RUCCA. "This is what he does because he's wholeheartedly convinced that nuclear waste is a threat to the environment."

"He has not fought this issue, because this is the first time it's arisen, but he knows enough to know there's danger involved and that will be his emphasis."

"He's a very spiritual kind of person."

Seagal will be accompanied by Lew Dunn, a co-worker on environmental issues who helped set up the speech.

Seagal, who has starred in six hit films, took a major step toward his goal of eventually starring in thought-provoking films that challenge movie audiences and allow him to broaden his roles, when he starred in and directed "On Deadly Ground."

The movie was an environmental epic produced by his production company, Steamroller.

Born in Detroit, Seagal became interested in martial arts at the age of seven. He later became a master of Aikido.

His latest film, "Under Siege II: Dark Territory," takes place almost entirely on a moving train.

Tickets to hear his comments are $3.50 and are available at The Ruidoso Valley Chamber of Commerce on Sudderth Drive.

"He made sure that tracks received the most current and most complete recommendations about what steps to take in regard to the problem," Wells said.

All horses that enter or leave the Ruidoso Downs Race Track grounds are required to have a current health inspection certificate, Wells said.

"In normal times, the certificate only has to be presented in a two or three-day time span, but currently, because of the alert issued by the racing commission, it has to have been issued within 12 hours of the time of the horses' entry on racetrack grounds," he said. "In addition, the certificate must specifically state, in the vet's own handwriting, that symptoms for VS have been specifically checked.

The cancellation of events like the BLM horse adoption are positive rather than negative, Wells said.

"I'm not worried about vesicular stomatitis here because of all of our precautions," he said. "But I'm glad we don't increase chances of bringing disease into the county by other kinds of gatherings. Outside of the racing industry, maybe the controls are not as stringent as they are inside, because, let's face it, we have the most to lose."

The racetrack was instructed to step up its insect control efforts immediately, Wells said.

"We spray with insecticide and follow the recommendations of the county agent for a total program of insect control," he said. "Another thing that we do is remove waste products from the track every day, including waste bedding, so insects are just not a problem."

"I think we've done everything within our power."

Ruidoso Downs has both a track and state veterinarian on site when horses are present, and about 12 privately contracted vets are usually at the track, Wells said.

"The vets are charged with compliance on the health regulations and everything is documented all the way through," he said.

One reason Ruidoso Downs Race Track is so interested in the problem is because 95% of the nominations for the All American Futurity come from outside of New Mexico, Wells said.

"We sure wouldn't want to be quarantined," he said. "All the top quarter horses in the country are planning to be here sometime this season and many of them are from Texas, California and so on, and that just makes it that much more important to maintain absolutely the highest levels of caution."

Santa Fe adoption

BLM was planning to offer approximately 50 wild horses from a managed herd in Socorro at the Ruidoso Downs adoption. The horses were rounded up in April, with the majority ranging in age from one to four years. Ten burros were also expected to be available. None of the animals has shown signs of VS and the cancellation is simply a precaution to prevent further spreading of vesicular stomatitis, Harrington said.

"Although the Ruidoso Downs adoption will not be rescheduled, BLM will return to New Mexico during 1995," BLM Wild Horse and Burro Specialist Jack Albright said. "A wild horse adoption will be held in Santa Fe on August 12 at the Terri Berg Training Stables."

Wild horse and burro adoptions are available to pre-approved applicants only. Interested adopters may write BLM at 221 N. Service Road, Moore, Okla., or call (405) 790-1000 for an application packet.

Billy the Kid byway official

by KATHLEEN McDONALD
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

The "Billy the Kid Loop" in Lincoln County has been named an official state scenic byway.

The Ruidoso Village Council voted Tuesday to apply for federal grant funds to advertise the scenic byway.

"The first hurdle has been passed," Jackson said at Tuesday's meeting. "We really are hoping to get our foot in the door and get funding during the first go-around."

The loop will direct motorists through Ruidoso on U.S. Highway 70, into Capitan via State Highway 48, through Lincoln on State Highway 380, and through the Hondo Valley on Highway 70 back to Ruidoso.

Funding must be applied for by June 30, or the village must wait again until March. A decision would come in August, Jackson said. The funds, which would provide signage and possibly an interpretive center, would likely be made available in about a year.

"There's a good probability that we'll get some funding," Jackson predicted.

With the grant application, the village must provide a corridor management plan showing how the environment along the route will be preserved.

The village must match the funding grant by 20%, but that could be fulfilled by using local services, Jackson said. Advertising certain parts of the loop, which already is being done, could also fulfill the grant match requirement. So could the work of village road maintenance crews or the time of assistant village manager Alan Briley, who is an engineer, Jackson said.

Sub-agreements with the other entities participating along the loop could also be made, so money spent by other governments could be included in the 20% funding match.

The council authorized the loop's ad hoc committee to meet next week to complete the application. Partners in the route will be called for input, including the Village of Capitan, Lincoln, the U.S. Bureau of Land Management, state parks, and the U.S. Forest service.

Precautions advised by state against virus

The vesicular stomatitis virus is believed to be transmitted by black flies, mosquitoes and other biting insects, but cannot be spread from person to person, said Carolyn Hutchinson with the state department of health.

It is transmitted to humans through close contact with infected animals and through insect bites.

No vaccination for the disease is available and the department of health is urging New Mexicans to protect themselves by avoiding close contact with horses and by protecting themselves from insect bites, a health department news release says.

The cooperative State-Federal Livestock Disease Task Force has issued a statement urging livestock owners to avoid congregating animals and to not move them from their property.

"We are advising people to keep their animals on their own property as much as possible until this disease situation subsides," said task force Director of Field Operations, Dr. Phil LaRussa, in a written statement.

Horse shows, competitive events, sale yards and rodeos are presented as examples of activities to be avoided, the statement says.

Onset of the illness in humans usually occurs from 24 to 48 hours after exposure and includes symptoms of fever, muscle aches and blisters in the mouth similar to ones caused by the herpes virus. Symptoms usually last four to seven days.

In animals, the virus causes blistering lesions in nostrils, mouth, hooves and tongues, but is usually not fatal and healthy animals generally recover.

If infected, the blisters swell and break, leaving raw tissue that is so painful that the animals generally refuse to eat or drink and show signs of lameness with severe weight loss usually following, a U.S. Department of Agriculture fact sheet said.

but to address all the old line items (some are as small as one dollar), Jackson said, voters will need to use the bond measure. The $800,000 for Grindstone expansion would enlarge the newly completed water plant to treat an additional 1 million gallons of water daily.

Sven Owen, who lives most of the year in Roswell, has contended that the pressure was good during the past two weekends he spent in the house.

Six bond issues listed

All Ruidoso property owners who live in Lincoln County and pay property taxes to the Village of Ruidoso during the year preceding the election can vote in the Aug. 22 bond election.

The Ruidoso Village Council provided and scheduled the election at its Tuesday meeting.

There will be six separate issues on the ballot, adding up to $5.5 million worth of bond issues. Officials said 98% of the debt would be paid off by the year 2005.

Items on the ballot include:

- $2 million for water line and water treatment plant improvements;
- $1.5 million to reduce infiltration of ground and river water in sewer lines running along the creeks and river beds;
- $1.6 million to construct a new library;
- $100,000 for a senior citizen building remodeling;
- $350,000 for a village hall addition;
- and $1 million to build and improve athletic fields.

If all the bond issues are approved, the bonds are sold in early 1996, the village's current debt service rate of 9.619 mills is expected to remain the same because other debt is about to be paid off.

The current tax rate translates to $721 in annual taxes on a $75,000 home. For a $50,000 home it is $481, and on a $100,000 home it is $961.

Qualified Lincoln County voters who live outside Ruidoso but own land in city limits must file a certificate of eligibility with the village clerk between June 23 and Aug. 7. They must have paid taxes on the property within the last year.

All citizens who want to vote must be registered with the county clerk by July 25.

Redistribution of water through the new Grindstone plant has not come without problems, officials said. Pressure zones have been shifted in the village's entire water system, Ruidoso's assistant manager Alan Briley explained, and there has been some reversal of water which has loosened minerals clinging to pipes.

The brown stuff flowed through the pipes of Sitzmark Chalet last weekend, and motel owner Neil Freed issued a complaint to councilors at their Tuesday meeting.

"This cost us money," Freed said while waving a glass jar full of brown water at the councilors. He said it was not an isolated incident.

"Some areas of town had no pressure, and some areas had their water heaters blown out," Briley said of the system readjustment. "It's going to happen until we get it equalized."

Property owners who find brown water in their taps are encouraged to call the water department, or police dispatch if the water department is closed, Briley said. The dispatcher will then contact a water worker, who will open hydrants and clear out the lines in a half-hour's time, he said.

Cool Water

In New Mexico we all know the blessing of water.

Since earliest times, the words of the prophet Isaiah have come true throughout our state: "The wilderness and solitary places shall be glad, and the desert shall rejoice and blossom as the rose."

During this time of year, and especially this year, the magic power of water is revealed to us in many ways. The cactus and the yucca survive through the driest times, along with the piñon and cedar. Even the lilacs, rose bushes, grapevines and fruit trees around the yard survive through the dry days of June, in most years. This year they have needed a little help.

The large apricot tree out on Blue Bird Meadow has survived 50 years with no help. Fifty years! How time flies. I hadn't realized the tree was that old, and all this time depending on Mother Nature for its water.

Today it is standing green on the dry meadow, yet its leaves are barely half size as the tree rationed its strength waiting for the rain.

Then there is a small pear tree that for years has been growing year after year, depending only on rain and snow.

This spring it put out only very small leaves, waiting for a change in the drought.

About five days ago I gave it about six gallons of water, and today it does not look like

Be Careful at the Water

In the novel "Kidnapped" by Robert Louis Stevenson, Alan Stewart and his young companion David Balfour are escaping from the English Redcoats. They have to jump across a raging torrent near Glencoe, Scotland.

Alan makes the leap. David almost does, but he falls into the water, to be rescued by the quick action of Alan.

Alan, a man of medium-small stature and a giant ego, proclaims himself the bravest man in the world (a claim not far off the mark).

After the jumping incident he jokingly says to David, "Ye're no very gleg at jumping." Gleg in the Scottish dialect of the day meant "spry" or "active."

Seeing that David was embarrassed, he said, "Hoots, lad. Small blame to ye. To be feared of a thing and yet to do it, makes the prettiest (bravest) kind of a man. And then there was water there, and water's a thing that dauntons (frightens) even me."

As one who has nearly drowned twice, and bears the scar on his forehead from diving at the wrong place at Bar Springs in Austin, Texas, I often recall these last words of Alan Stewart: "You need not feel 'daunted' at water if you will follow rules of safety and encourage others to do likewise."

If you are out in a lake in a canoe, do not dive overboard to take a swim unless you leave someone in the canoe. The lightest breeze will carry the canoe away faster than you can swim. Do not go swimming in a strange place alone; and be always cautious about diving.

There are any number of warnings about water, but one rule will cover all: just be careful.

Ruidoso, Fort Stanton among worst water violators

by KATHLEEN McDONALD
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Ruidoso and Fort Stanton were among 10 New Mexico towns that most frequently violated the Safe Drinking Water Act in 1993-94, but state officials say the problems have been largely solved.

Ruidoso and Fort Stanton's violations all centered around their treatment systems' failure to meet the act's turbidity standards, said Carl Stubbs of the state environmental department. The water quality passed all other standards, however.

Turbidity is the cloudiness in water, due to fine particles of silt or sand.

Ruidoso violated the turbidity standard nine times in 1994, Stubbs said, and three times this year before a filtering device at the Alto Treatment Plant was replaced.

Fort Stanton was in violation six times last year and once this year before repairing a cracked plate that supported the filter, Stubbs said.

Stubbs, who works from a field office in Ruidoso, did not have the 1993 counts for Ruidoso or Fort Stanton readily available, but said they were fewer than the 1994 violations.

The turbidity condition mostly affects aesthetic quality, said Robert Gallegos, chief of the state Environmental Department's Drinking Water Bureau. But it is an important treatment standard, because parasites can be carried with turbidity, he added.

Turbidity is one of 83 contamination standards that are tested for compliance with the 1986 act.

"It's not that turbidity makes people sick, but parasites sometimes attach themselves to this silt or sand which can make people sick," Gallegos said.

He stressed, however, that test results for both Ruidoso and Fort Stanton have been clean regarding microbiological organisms such as viruses, bacteria and parasites.

Areas like Ruidoso met the standard for years, but the compliance level was doubled by the federal government in 1993 for areas treating surface water. Achievement of the new level is "a real tight number to meet," Gallegos conceded.

Last year's drought didn't help Ruidoso's turbidity problem, officials said.

Stubbs explained that as water wells went dry, people were depending on Eagle Creek and Alto

Lake for all their water. The treatment plant is designed to only treat two million gallons of the lake water per day, but was in fact treating three million gallons each day.

"It's not that turbidity (in the water) makes people sick, but parasites sometimes attach themselves to this silt or sand which can make people sick."

ROBERT GALLEGOS
ENVIRONMENTAL DEPARTMENT'S DRINKING WATER BUREAU

"The Alto Plant was operating beyond capacity and high turbidity will result under those conditions," he said.

The new Grindstone Treatment Plant will alleviate that excessive treatment problem, both Stubbs and Gallegos said.

For the past two months the turbidity standards have been met, Stubbs noted.

The state must be vigilant with systems that treat surface water, Gallegos said, since violations can make people sick.

"We were flagging the turbidity problem there, and the department feels that they (Ruidoso and Fort Stanton) are effectively trying to meet that standard," he said.

The state's violations were compiled in a report by the Environmental Working Group and circulated by the New Mexico Public Interest Research Group, which is fighting efforts in Congress to weaken the Safe Drinking Water Act.

Gallegos contended that "any weakening (of the 1986 act) will not affect the microbiologic con-taminant levels we are trying to protect people from."

Most of the changes sought by Congress would slow the addition of new tests required on water systems, Gallegos said.

When the act was passed in 1986, safe drinking water standards required only 23 contaminants to be treated by water systems. The level is now at 83, and tests for the contaminants are costly. Amendments to the act in 1991 require tests for new 25 contaminants to be added every three years, Gallegos said.

The EPA is in the process of identifying and listing 25 more contaminants to test this year.

"Congress is saying eliminate the need for 25 new ones every three years. There may be new ones to look for, but the EPA has to look at the cost analysis (for identifying and treating the contaminant) and the risk or benefit to people," Gallegos said.

"So, it's not eliminating (new standards), but will slow it down," he concluded.

Ruidoso School Board approves tentative school district budget

by DON HIXON

Ruidoso News Staff Writer
Deciding to contract with a food service company for the Ruidoso Public Schools was tabled at Tuesday's school board meeting.

Superintendent of Schools Mike Gladden suggested that the board call a special meeting to decide about whether or not to contract with a food service company.

"The proposals we have received are in binders several inches thick," Gladden said. "We need time to study them so we don't overlook anything."

The district is considering the food service concept because of continual over-runs in the cafeteria budget.

The board voted to have the special meeting at noon next Wednesday, June 21 at the Administration offices.

Board members approved the tentative 1995-96 Ruidoso School District budget at the meeting.

Because of uncertainty about the possibility of Mescalero students attending schools on the reservation, the projected enrollment for growth was set at only 3.5 new students or a .15% increase over last year.

Last year's final budget total was $13,418,063. The 1995-96 tentative budget was set at $13,800,123.

"This is a tentative budget and we do expect additional dollars as grant monies come in," district business manager Caron Snow said.

New dollars, anticipated because of a statewide increase in appropriated unit value, will generate new revenue in the amount of $202,571 Snow said, but everything is subject to change depending on the Mescalero situation.

Gladden has said that Mescalero Tribal President Wendell Chino told him that the reservation planned to build its own school system and have students attending them beginning with the next school year. Presently, Mescalero has only an elementary school. Tribal officials refused comment on the issue when contacted by The Ruidoso News.

Slightly more than 400 Mescalero students attend Ruidoso schools said school officials.

Other school board business included:

— a presentation of the Friend of Ruidoso Schools Award to Simon Simms of Mescalero. Simms has been active in the Ruidoso schools for more than 15 years; — recognition by the Ruidoso Education Association (REA) of their employees of the month. This month's employees are Glenda Farus from Nob Hill Early Childhood Center, Cindy Eggleston of Sierra Vista Primary, Betty Day from White Mountain Elementary, Jeamsie Price of White Mountain Intermediate, Linda Casler of Ruidoso Middle School and Eddie Parker from Ruidoso High School. Claudia Garrett of Sierra Vista Primary was selected as one of last month's honorees but was inadvertently left off of the REA list provided to The Ruidoso News.

— Director of Instructional Support Paul Wirth gave an update on the District Technology Plan. Administrators and teachers provide input about how to improve technology in the schools and hope to have computer networking capabilities in place soon, Wirth said.

— announced the acceptance of a bid of $22,642 to Yon Rue of Ruidoso for playground improvements and equipment at Sierra Vista Primary School.

— awarded a bid of $3,700 to Southern New Mexico Office Machines of Las Cruces for district office machine maintenance;

— approved a Hondo/Ruidoso Schools joint power agreement providing for special services to a Hondo student who requires them;

— approved the district's 1995 Open Meetings Act Resolution. State law requires the annual resolution from school boards.

— accepted the resignation of Ruidoso High School/middle school bilingual teacher Jill Legge, who said in her resignation letter that she was relocating and pursuing another career;

— and accepted the resignation of Sierra Vista Primary Secretary Diane Newsom, who is relocating because her husband has accepted a principal's job in another area.

The next regular school board meeting is scheduled for 7 p.m., Tuesday, July 11 at the Administration Office, 200 Horton Circle. Call 257-4051 for more information or to have an item placed on the school board agenda.

Ruidoso school officials attend Albuquerque seminar, retreat

by DON HIXON
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Ruidoso's school board and district administrators attended a law conference and then held a retreat in Albuquerque last weekend.

The New Mexico School Boards Association's 16th Annual School Law Conference was a two-day event at the Marriott Hotel in Albuquerque.

Attending the events were all five school board members, superintendent Mike Gladden, Director of Instructional Support Paul Wirth, district business manager Caron Snow and all but one school principal, for a total of 13 people.

Hotel accommodations and meals were the responsibility of those attending the conference, although the standard $50 per diem, per day was given, Snow said. The per diem payments added up to $1,300.

The school district also paid for the $75 per person conference registration fee, or $975 for all 13 Ruidoso participants, Gladden said.

Law conference topics included sessions on student discipline, sexual harassment, school bond issues, the open meetings act, religion in the schools, school board member recall, first amendment rights of employees, just cause for terminating or discharging employees, and school board versus school administration responsibilities.

"I think it's one of the most informative things we attend," school board member James Paxton said.

Those attending the conference broke up into groups so different conference areas could be covered, he said.

Frank Cannella was one of the principals attending the conference.

Cannella is principal of White Mountain Elementary School.

"They really put together an outstanding conference," Cannella said. "They talked a lot about micro-managing of schools by school boards."

"The law states that a school board is there to set up a general type of policy, and principals and superintendents are there to do the day-by-day operating of the schools, hiring and firing of people and purchasing supplies and equipment."

Some cases of school boards' responsibilities were cited at the conference, Cannella said.

"That's really not their role," he said. "Their role is one of general policy setting."

School board retreat

After the conference ended on Saturday, the school board and administrators convened one of their two annual retreats. The Albuquerque retreat, also at the Marriott Hotel, was open to the public but no one else attended the meeting, Paxton said.

The retreat agenda included a presentation by North Central Accreditation (NCA) officials, information regarding a teacher survey on school board goals, and a round-table discussion.

"The NCA presentation went on for so long that we didn't have time for much else," Gladden said. "We did pass out the survey results and we will talk about that at the next retreat in August."

Although the location of the August retreat has not been determined, the date has tentatively been set for Saturday, August 19. The retreat is open to the public.

Father and son reunited at Downs

Cliff, Casey and Braxton Lambert will celebrate Father's Day together at the Ruidoso Downs Race Track. Cliff is a trainer and his son Casey is a jockey.

Father's Day could have a little more meaning than usual this Sunday for Ruidoso Downs trainer Cliff Lambert and his son Casey, a jockey who has returned to the track to ride full-time for the first season in several years.

"We're real tickled to have him back this summer," says the senior Lambert as he steered his pony horse around the shedrow one morning. "He's been riding at a lot bigger tracks, with a chance to make more money, but he decided to spend the summer with us."

Casey, 29, competed successfully at Sam Houston, the Woodlands, Canterbury Downs and Albuquerque after he left the Southwest in the late 1980s. He's the only one of Lambert's four children who followed his father's footsteps into the racing industry.

"My other sons, Cliff and Cody, compete in rodeos but were too big to become jockeys. My daughter Cheyenne is small enough, but she's teaching school in Amarillo," Lambert says.

Cliff and Casey's teamwork got rolling in 1981, when they captured the Governor's Handicap with Double B. Express. It was Casey's first win, and it was a moment neither will ever forget.

"I've had a lot of thrills in racing," says Cliff, who began teaching his son to ride when he was nine, "but Casey's win on that horse was the biggest one of my career."

After 42 years in the industry, first as a jockey and then a trainer, Cliff has more than his share of memorable accomplishments. Before he retired from riding he won the first All American Futurity aboard Galobar in 1959.

During 1993 and 1994 he was the leading Thoroughbred trainer at Ruidoso Downs. He won his first title here in 1973 and annually ranks among the track's top conditioners.

During the 1980s, the Lamberts combined to win many of Ruidoso Downs' most important stakes events. Their first major trophy was the Ruidoso Thoroughbred Derby with Pop's Spirits in 1982. They took back-to-back editions of the Norgor Thoroughbred Futurity in 1986 and 1987, with Cliff's Place and Fearless Ego.

"That's back in the days when it was really worth a lot more money," Casey recalls. The $153,000 purse for Cliff's Place's victory in 1986 still stands as a record amount.

Cliff also developed Bold Ego, the horse that many would argue is the best runner to ever compete in the Southwest. He went on to national acclaim with a win in the Arkansas Derby and a second in the 1981 Preakness Stakes. Casey remembers galloping Bold Ego.

"He was just a natural athlete," Casey says. "During that time Dad was training 50 head of horses here, so we sent him to Jack Van Berg, who trained him for the Arkansas Derby and the Preakness. Later in his career he came back here to run."

Bold Ego retired with earnings of $511,648 and also set the track record of 1:05 for 5 1/2 furlongs at Ruidoso Downs in 1982.

The Lamberts are a unique combination at Ruidoso Downs this season, since Casey is the only jockey riding for a trainer father.

When asked if having his son up on his horses is any different than giving instructions to another rider, Cliff answers, "I guess I have more confidence in Casey. We communicate really well. A lot of other riders might be intimidated to tell me if a horse is sore or has a problem. Casey and I can talk to each other."

Although he rides most of his father's horses, Casey accepts other mounts if he feels he has a better chance to win a race.

"I'd never want to hold him back," Cliff says. "That's part of our relationship."

The irony of competition was underlined in last Saturday's eighth race, when Casey brought home Streakin Victory to a length and three-quarter win over Way Cool, a runner trained by his father.

Is riding for his father a bit of a double-edged sword?

Top state horses head Zia race list

Run For Randi and The Color Queen, the first two finishers in the New Mexican Spring Futurity at Sunland Park, head a list of 70 two-year-olds entered in trials for the $140,000 Zia Quarter Horse Futurity Thursday at Ruidoso Downs.

The John Stinebaugh charge, Dash For Randi, is undefeated in three career starts including her last in the Spring Futurity in early May. The daughter of Young Beduino will be ridden by regular rider J.R. Valenzuela and looks like the one to beat in the fifth trial, which also drew The Color Queen.

Trained by Fred Danley, The Color Queen finished a length behind Dash For Randi in the futurity and has been a consistent competitor in all four of her career outings. The filly finished third in a maid contest here May 28 as the 3-5 favorite, but should improve Thursday under jockey Billy Peterson.

The purse for this year's futurity is nearly double the amount of last year's $76,000 offering.

Speedsters clash in Rainbow trials

Ronas Sound, first in the Ruidoso Derby here on Memorial Day, and Andrews EZ Effort, the star of the Lazy E Derby at Remington Park and the West Texas Derby at Sunland Park, are among the sophomore quarter horses ready to lay their talents on the line in the Rainbow Derby Trials Friday at Ruidoso Downs.

Friday's nine-race card, which begins with the first event at 1:15 p.m., will feature six trials for the rich Rainbow Derby, and three divisions of trials for the Zia Quarter Horse Derby for New Mexico-breds.

A total of 56 speedsters will contest the 440-yard Rainbow Derby Trials, with the 10 fastest qualifiers remaining eligible for the finals on Monday, July 3.

James Helzer and M. & B. Harper's Ronas Sound, the fastest qualifier for the Ruidoso Derby, went on to win the final by a half length. Ronas Sound is undefeated in two starts for trainer Dwayne "Sleepy" Gilbreath this season. The luck of the draw placed Ronas Sound in the first division of the trials.

Noblesse Six, winner of the 1994 All American Futurity but an off-the-board finisher in the Ruidoso Derby, is also in the first division.

Rocking R Farm's Andrews EZ Effort, currently the top-ranked runner in the American Quarter Horse Association poll, has been impressive winning his last three starts, and now has six wins from 12 races and earnings of $243,018. The fifth division of the trials will be the first local appearance for Andrews EZ Effort since last year's Grade I Rainbow Futurity. Billy Peterson will be in the irons.

Other prominent names for the trials include Delightful Lark, runner-up in the Ruidoso Derby, and Ruidoso Derby Consolation star Mildly Sinful, both entered in the sixth division. The Fling King, third to Andrews EZ Effort in the Lazy E Derby, is the probable choice for the second division.

All Iced Up is among the 25 state-breds ready to run in the trials for the Zia Derby Quarter Horse Trials, which will be Friday's seventh, eighth and ninth events. A winner of six of her 10 lifetime starts, All Iced Up was first in the Pelican at Albuquerque and winner of the New Mexico Breeders Quarter Horse Handicap at Sunland Park.

Dianne Stallings/The Ruidoso News

Jim Riggins (left), manager of the Lincoln County Humane Society shelter, explains to Capitan trustee Byron Carpenter and other board members how a contract with the village will help residents, pets and stray animals. Strays will be sent to the shelter in Ruidoso to ensure that while they are confined, they are given proper care. If they are adopted, they will be neutered to ensure that they do not produce more unwanted litters. The shelter also will provide a central contact point for people looking for lost dogs.

Shelter handles Capitan strays

by-DIANNE STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Animals picked up by Capitan's impounding officer will be taken to the Lincoln County Humane Society shelter in Ruidoso, where they will have proper care and a better chance for adoption, village trustees agreed Monday.

The charge of $4,441 for the year will not be increased even if more animals than anticipated are brought in from the Capitan area, said Jim Riggins, shelter manager.

"The main thing we have been doing in the six months since the expansion (of the shelter was completed) is to analyze expenses and revenues and to look at the statistics of where the animals are coming from, how we get them and what happens to them," Riggins said. "We saw that the shelter is a central impound used by people throughout the county."

That's good, because most rural villages aren't able to operate shelters where dogs can be kept healthy, clean and well-fed, Riggins said. As those substandard holding areas become more visible and the state requires more points of compliance, most look for someone else to take over.

One of the reasons the society can operate economically is that it is non-profit, the budget contains no fluff and employees receive no weighty benefit packages, Riggins said.

"I've been running shelters for over 10 years and there are no surprises," Riggins said. "We don't have vehicles to worry about."

Capitan had set aside $5,000 to refurbish its pens and attempt to operate a small shelter. But trustees said at the price quoted by the society, there still would be money left to improve the local pens for use as a holding place until animals are transferred to the shelter. At the same time, Capitan would be free from the expense of trying to run a shelter.

shelter by a Capitan resident, it ends up filling a slot in the community with a sterile animal instead of one that could continue to reproduce, Riggins said.

"That furthers our mission, which is to put ourselves out of business," Riggins said.

Fewer than 10% of the animals impounded are reclaimed by their owners, he said.

The state requires that every person reclaiming an animal from the shelter leave a $25 deposit for the spaying or neutering or that they buy a breeder's permit. The village can set a high price on the permit, Riggins said. It's a way of placing the expense of animal control where it belongs, he said.

Fees, such as regular licenses, can be collected by the shelter and used to offset the monthly charge to the village, Riggins added.

Surplus animals are becoming more of a problem despite the destruction of 18 million a year in shelters across the nation.

Shelters are no longer an optional service in a community, Riggins said.

In other business, the board: — awarded a contract to the lowest of three bids for base course, delivered at $11.25 per yard, to Bonnell Sand and Gravel.

— agreed to consider modifying the village's water fee ordinance to include a $225 disconnect fee (one-half the cost of connection), because the job could take two hours or longer to locate the line and find the valve.

— appointed former village trustee Gilbert Montoya to the Carrizozo-Capitan Natural Gas Board.

JIM RIGGINS
SHELTER MANAGER

The price was based on statistics that showed Capitan accounted for 7.17% of the animals at the shelter since November.

Ruidoso is paying $40,000, the county is budgeted for $12,000, Capitan for $4,400 and Ruidoso Downs, which has not signed up, at $4,300.

Ruidoso Downs has its own small holding area but it's difficult for the animal impounding officer, who also serves in other capacities, to care for animals as well, Riggins said.

The society shelter offers state-of-the-art animal care, an attractive facility that is not just a 72-hour holding pen, and professional adoption with follow-up that ensures all animals are spayed or neutered or the owner obtains a breeder's license, Riggins said. Riggins has a federal license and is national certified to handle euthanasia (humane destruction) of animals.

Newsom retires as principal and moves to Oklahoma

After 10 years as principal of Capitan Elementary and 24 years in New Mexico education, Jerry Newsom has finished his career in this state.

But he's not hanging up his principal's patience. Newsom is headed to Ponca City, Okla., to take over an elementary school there because he has family in the area.

The school board accepted his resignation last Thursday and will advertise for his replacement, said Superintendent Diana Sonnamaker Billingsley.

The school also will be looking for a new music teacher. Dolores Earwood, who headed the program for the last two years, has resigned to work in the Carrizozo school system.

In other action, the board accepted the resignation of elementary teacher Amy Riddle so she can pursue a graduate degree in Wisconsin.

Three new employees were hired. Dionne Harden-Lewis will be a middle school language arts instructor and coach. A first year teacher, she's a graduate of Eastern New Mexico University. Buddy Little will teach high school math and coach. Little is a first-year teacher from Tatum. Liz Montes will be the cafeteria director.

Student newscasts nominated for Emmy

The student crew and teacher JoBeth Vinson of the Capitan School District's News 101 communications class have been nominated for an Emmy by the Rocky Mountain chapter of the National Academy of Television Arts and Sciences, for their documentary on the closure of Fort Stanton hospital.

The news story was nominated in the student productions category. Four other News 101 teams in the United States also have been nominated.

The Capitan students and teacher plan to attend the awards ceremony, a formal tuxedo affair, on June 24 in Phoenix, Ariz., said Superintendent Diana Sonnamaker Billingsley.

The seven students are Amy Cline, Michelle Payton, Rodney Sedillo, Nathan Koreny, Jennifer Wheeler, Theresa Bruder and Randy Hutchison.

Weight room at Capitan High School stays open to public

The weight room at Capitan High School will be open from 7:30 p.m. to 9 p.m. Monday through Thursday during the summer.

Community groups, law enforcement officials and others are invited to use the facility free. An instructor, Yolanda Cline, will be on duty to supervise and assist in weight training programs.

Prices of meals rise

Capitan students and teachers will be paying a little bit more for their school meals in September.

The school board voted last Thursday to increase lunch prices for elementary students from $1.15 to $1.25; for secondary students from $1.25 to $1.50; and for adults from $2 to $2.50.

Breakfast prices will go up by 10 cents to 75 cents for everyone.

The increase will reduce an anticipated $15,000 subsidy from general operating money.

The few parents at the meeting said they would rather see the money spent on supplies or teachers than to subsidize the food program. The increase is expected to generate about $4,680 in additional income for the cafeteria.

Facing cuts because of an anticipated drop in enrollment tied to the closing of nearby Fort Stanton state hospital, the board approved the tentative 1995-96 school year budget during a public hearing Thursday.

The state suggested no changes when it reviewed the proposed $3,531,697 budget in Santa Fe May 31. The total includes $2,443,859 in operational money and the rest in fixed accounts, such as debt service and transportation.

The skin-tight budget hinged on the agreement of teachers and other employees to take one step back on their pay ladder. Salaries and benefits account for 80% of the district's operational budget.

To support that budget, the majority of the money is a state reimbursement based on student enrollment, totalling $2,281,175.

Local taxes only account for $25,095 of the revenue. Other local sources, federal sources, grants and bond money round out the revenue side.

Residents asked to conserve water

Fix that dripping faucet and turn off your yard hose when the sun is high in the sky, Capitan village trustees urged residents Monday.

"We really need to concentrate on conservation," said water department foreman Terry Cox. "We've had no rain and pumped 6.75 million gallons last month and that's quite a lot for here, about 1.5 million over the same period last year."

Because of the drought, watering of lawns in Capitan has been restricted to after 6 p.m. and before 8 a.m. to minimize loss through evaporation.

If the village's only well goes down, the village could fall back for a short period on water from Alamogordo's Bonito Lake pipeline. But it would have to be labeled as unfit for human consumption, because the village's filter plant is not sufficiently operational, Cox said.

Capitan Mayor Norm Renfro said the Village of Ruidoso is interested in buying out Capitan's ownership portion of the water rights for Eagle Creek. The two communities now are partners in the stream's water rights.

Renfro said the village usually doesn't need water when the creek flowing well during the winter. To keep its right to the water delivered in the winter, the village would have to build a storage unit. Ruidoso also is closer to the creek, Renfro said.

"We really need to concentrate on conservation. We've had no rain and pumped 6.75 million gallons last month... about 1.5 million over the same period last year."

TERRY COX
WATER DEPARTMENT FOREMAN

He'd like to see Capitan become self-sufficient with drilled wells and storage tanks. With the money from the sale of the creek rights (alongside money saved by not having to repair the old filter system), several wells could be established, Renfro said.

To avoid a challenge by the state engineer over justification for the purchase of water rights by the village this past year, a 40-year study and inventory of water resources and rights, projected growth and other factors is needed, Beauvais said. The trustees agreed.

How to pay for the study is another question, one that Village Clerk Deborah Cummins has tried to research. But because the state Legislature was tight-fisted in its last session, no money is available through previous avenues, she told the trustees.

It's possible to include water as an element of a master plan update that could be paid for with a Community Development Block Grant, Cummins said.

Beauvais said he fears the water study might be diluted too much if it is just one element of a master plan.

"We need a specific and technical water study," he said.

Tying it to a block grant also could mean lengthy delays, based on past experience, Renfro added.

On Cummins' suggestion, the trustees agreed to consider using part of the money generated by a recent water rate increase to pay for the study, instead of buying water rights.

The trustees asked the village's Water Advisory Board to review a sample request for proposals from an Otero County water study. Dave Cummins, the acting water board chairman, asked the trustees to attend the next board meeting to work on the wording together.

LINCOLN COUNTY SCRAPBOOK

A glimpse into Lincoln County's past, compiled by Polly E. Chavez.

Capitan Mountaineer June 23, 1916

So far, we have heard of Lincoln County furnishing three recruits to the United States army. Lieutenant Hird, while up in this country last week from Roswell, got three recruits at Hondo for Battery A, now at Columbus on the Mexican border, who are Perry Hightower, Charlie Hilburn and young Green, son of Postmaster Green, of that place. Their willingness to serve their country at this time speaks well for the patriotism of the young men. Young Hightower is a Spanish-American and the example he has set is worthy of special mention. It shows in the fullest his readiness to help defend it against invaders. He has set a good example to the native people with whom he is closely related, and we believe his action emphasizes the sentiments of nearly all the native people living in this part of the country.

Jupiter and Antares are coming into their own as the leading luminaries of the evening. They're in the south-south-east after dark, with Antares less than a fist-width at arm's length below Jupiter. To their right and below are the many white stars of Scorpius, contrasting nicely with Antares' brighter orange-red.

Feds release millions for WIPP site

The Department of Energy has released $20 million to New Mexico to prepare for the Waste Isolation Pilot Plant near Carlsbad, said Sen. Pete Domenici (R-NM).

The funding will be provided to the state for preparedness projects, including road upgrades and bypasses around Carlsbad, Roswell, Santa Fe and Hobbs, Domenici said.

"I am very pleased that the DOE is finally releasing this funding," Domenici said. "The people of New Mexico, as hosts to WIPP, have every right to expect that the state will be prepared in the event that the facility begins accepting waste."

Throughout the congressional appropriations process last year, Domenici was instrumental in protecting the WIPP funding. President Clinton had recommended using the funds for other programs unrelated to the WIPP project.

Hurd gallery art show opens Saturday

The Hurd La-Rinconada Gallery in San Patricio will exhibit the paintings of Janis Porter Marckstein beginning Saturday. Marckstein, a resident of Alto, has been recognized in many art shows and competitions in her former home of San Antonio, Texas.

Marckstein's works, reminiscent of Georgia O'Keeffe, are clean and vibrant in color. Working in oils, she seeks to capture the simplicity of the world surrounding her while adding an underlying unique interpretation. She tries to compel the viewer to look beyond the subject matter and delve directly into dreamlike details.

Highlights of awards Marckstein's works have received include five San Antonio Art League recognitions.

The Marckstein show will be available for public viewing at the Hurd La-Rinconada Gallery, located off Highway 70 in San Patricio, through June 30. Admission is free. The gallery is open Monday through Saturday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., and Sundays 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Silver Dollar hosts jazz on Father's Day

The Tinnie Silver Dollar Restaurant presents the second concert of the season on Sunday, June 18 at 2:30 p.m. The 6th annual Father's Day concert will feature trumpeter and vocalist Gerald Hunter, and vibraphonist Bill Gross appearing with pianist Michael Francis and his quartet.

Members of the group include Demetrius Williams on drums, "Pancho" Anguiano on bass and Pete Ruiz on tenor saxophone. Guitarist Lester Price is also expected to appear.

The concert will feature swing and bebop-era jazz tunes and standards.

Gerald Hunter and the Michael Francis Quartet appeared last year and the great audience response led Tinnie's to bring them back again this season. The Tinnie's Father's Day concert is traditionally the best attended of the year's offerings.

Vibraphonist Bill Gross is a familiar figure to anyone dining on Sundays at the Inn of the Mountain Gods. He has entertained there for many years. Those who have never seen him play with a jazz group have a pleasant surprise in store for them.

General Manager Maxine Francis advises guests to arrive early for the 2:30 p.m. event. Seating under the covered veranda will be available on a first come, first served basis. Appetizers and beverages will be served on the veranda and lunch and dinner will be available inside the restaurant.

The Tinnie Silver Dollar is located 25 minutes east of Ruidoso in Tinnie on U.S. 70/380.

Admission for the concert is $2, with children 14 and under free.

Tide has turned on downtown skateboards

The Ruidoso Village Council has understandably changed its stance about outlawing skateboards downtown, voting Tuesday to pursue a ban by writing up an ordinance.

When they voted against the ban in April, school was still in session. Now that school's out, the sport of skateboarding has apparently become more popular downtown.

Unfortunately, some obnoxious boarders have also been attracted to the downtown activity. Some of the boarders (and those who hang with them) have defaced village and private property, flipped off passersby, littered on a regular basis, and even run out into the middle of the street and back for entertainment.

As a result, about 35 merchants reportedly showed up for Tuesday's council meeting, compared to only a few at the April meeting. Some who had supported the boarders in the past have changed their minds after putting up with the troublemakers in recent weeks.

Just as the council listened to the large contingency of skateboarders who attended the April meeting, the council listened to the merchants Tuesday. The council then responded the best way it knew how: stick with plans to create a skateboard park and take the boarders off the downtown sidewalks.

We're told that some of the skateboarders aren't the only ones who have been obnoxious, however; at Tuesday's council meeting, some merchants acted in a rude manner while the two dozen teens were polite. We would hope that as adults, we can set a good example for teenagers about how to act in government meetings and elsewhere, despite the understandable frustration some merchants are feeling.

We also hope those skateboarders who are respecting their current privilege of hanging out downtown don't feel like their efforts are to no avail. Those who recently sanded down village benches chipped by other boarders, for example, are part of the reason we still support a skateboard park.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Fire money should go to equipment

TO THE EDITOR:

I am writing this letter to all members of communities who wonder why their volunteer fire departments don't have money for needed equipment. The money for the fire department comes from money paid in on fire insurance (3%) for homes and businesses.

This money is pooled in Santa Fe with the state. There is always an excess of money. For example, the fund in July 1, 1991, was $22,099,839. After budgeting, there was an excess of $9,826,402 turned back to the state. In July 1, 1992, the fund was $22,666,095 with an excess of $9,910,569 turned back to the state. In July 1, 1993, the fund was $26,812,729 with an excess of $13,582 turned back to the state general fund. These figures come from the state office.

Rather than give it to needy fire departments for equipment, this money is rolled back into the state coffers to use on "pork barrel" projects to buy more votes in certain areas.

This leaves fire departments trying to scrape money up for equipment through fundraising projects, or in some communities, they have increased gross tax receipts with the increase being set aside for the fire department. This is double jeopardy, since you the people are paying tax twice for the same purpose. To me, it is unnecessary for people to pay extra funds, especially through increased taxes, when the necessary funding is already sitting in Santa Fe.

It is time people started letting their representatives in Santa Fe know that they want the money that is already there used for the purpose for which it was raised.

State Rep. Vincent Gallegosa, Democrat, introduced Bill 174 to get more funding for the fire departments. State Rep. Dub Williams, Republican, of Ruidoso Downs was working with Ann M. Crook, Republican, of Clovis to get the bill passed to at least increase the amount allotted to the fire departments.

The bill passed in the House, but according to sources in Santa Fe, was held at the desk of Max Coll, Democrat, chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, until 44 minutes before the session closed for the year. It was then passed to the Senate. Needless to say, there was no time for a vote so it was not passed. It makes a person wonder if

Mr. Coll had his own ideas as to what "pork barrel" projects he wanted the money spent on rather than the fire departments.

The people who support more funding for the fire departments will try again next year, but they need the letters and support of the people to get the bill entered and passed.

Start writing your state representatives and senators now to let them know we want fire funding to be used for fire equipment and not for "pork barrel" projects.

Former Greeters sought for reunion

TO THE EDITOR:

During March, 1985, John Jeffers, the new executive director of the Chamber of Commerce, announced that he was organizing a group of women to be a public relations arm of the Chamber, and so the Ruidoso Valley Greeters came into existence.

Being 10 years old, the Greeters want to have a reunion. Trying to locate every ex-Greeter is proving quite a problem.

If you know anything about one of these listed "lost Greeters," please call the Chamber of Commerce at 257-7395.

Update day care regulations now

TO THE EDITOR:

(This letter was sent to State Rep. Dub Williams and copied to the Ruidoso News).

My daughter is currently enrolled in Starlite Montessori School. I took the news about the New Mexico CY&F Licensing Bureau with great concern and a degree of disgust.

I can't believe that another great advantage to children is going to be destroyed by bureaucracy, and neither can the many other parents, both those who have experienced and those who have not experienced the Starlite Montessori's educational advantage.

Of the people I have spoken to, (all have heard of Montessori or have had children who have gone there), two things remained constant. One was praise. The other was that all were willing to sign petitions or whatever else needed to be done to save our school from this bureaucratic witch hunt, which appears to have no merit and seems almost vindictive. Or maybe just another Napoleon exercising his power. You see, I could understand if "we the people" were given a voice in this, but the way it seems is that once the bureaucracy has spoken, then all we taxpaying citizens are supposed to do is just put our tails between our legs and scurry off.

It comes down now to interpreting the regulation properly, understanding that there are exceptions to every rule, and updating a regulation to satisfy a new generation's needs.

The regulation states that Starlite would be exempt from day care licensing if it accepted children only over five years old. My daughter just turned five, and thanks to Starlite, we have an appointment with the elementary school principal to see if Shalane may start first grade next year. She turned five Feb. 16 and reads fairly well phonetically. She impresses me with a constantly increasing vocabulary and retention of newly-learned words. Shalane can count to 100 and if anyone could sit long enough to listen to anyone count to 1,000, she would. Shalane can count in 10s and 100s and can do some simple addition and subtraction. She loves to learn, which is what Starlite is all about. If Starlite Montessori were a day care, my child would not be going there. My wife and I are constantly pursuing our quest for education and have decided that no matter what the cost that we would give our child every educational advantage possible. I promise you that a day care was not even considered in that program.

Starlite is a wonderful SCHOOL. I emphasize the word SCHOOL, because their whole format is based on teaching a child how to learn. What greater gift can we give our children? I would have a hard time believing that you can find a juvenile delinquent that attended Starlite. Starlite allows the parents not only to take pride in their children's new-found learning abilities, but also allows them to be part of it with regular evaluations and visits to the school.

I'm not sorry that I go on and on about Shalane. Since attending Starlite even her manual dexterity just astounds me. She ties her own shoes, buttons, snaps, pours, measures, washes dishes, tells me what to do when I can't figure out how to run my computer and beats me every time at Nintendo. She's so proud too, but not as proud as Valerie, her mother, and I are.

Now we come to the exception to the rule. Starlite Montessori does not double as a day care as do the other Montessoris. We have no need for a day care, and what good would be a day care that only catered to people from 8:30 to 11:30 a.m.? How many people work only three hours a day and those particular hours on top of that?

Now we come to the five-year-old clause of the exemption. I've not read a psychology book yet that hasn't taught us that from birth to death we are always learning, with birth being our most energetic learning to diminishing quest for learning as we grow older. Even in the womb a fetus learns to manipulate its digits and limbs and responds to its mother's voice. That's called learning and until the age of six or so, this desire to learn is at its greatest. Then, depending on our motivation and learning habits, we either continue our quest or settle for mediocrity. My daughter is five and functions at a second-grade level.

Now we come to updating a regulation to satisfy a new generation's needs. We have plenty of parents who will sign petitions and write letters, but we need you, a very much respected educator and representative, to help us voice our desire that Starlite Montessori be classified as a private school where our children are educated without discrimination to their age, not a day care where this tutoring is not available.
