Lightning strike results in outage

Darkness pervaded the Ruidoso area about 9 p.m. Friday when a bolt of lightning hit a main power line near Alamogordo.

The outage lasted about six minutes, according to Buddy Guthrie, area supervisor for Otero Electric Cooperative Inc.

A flash of lightning struck the main transmission line in the Sacramento Mountains around 8 p.m., said a spokesman with Plains Electric Power Company in Albuquerque. The transmission line feeds an area that includes Alamogordo, Hollywood, Ruidoso Downs and Ruidoso. The Plains Electric Power Company is a main supplier of the power pool.

A Plains Electric Power Company spokesman said the company's computer recorded an outage at 8 p.m.

Ruidoso theatre sets casting call

Director Margaret Norbury has set a casting call for Ruidoso Little Theatre's fall show "Bell, Book and Candle."

Auditions are 7 p.m. Monday and Tuesday at the theatre, 2961 Sudderth. Two women and three men are needed, all ages; plus backstage help, costumes, makeup, lights, set construction and props.

The play will run weekends Sept. 28 through Oct. 24.

Anyone interested should attend the auditions or call Norbury at 258-3417.

Ruidoso Little Theatre's production of "Bus Stop," William Inge's classic romantic comedy, continues at 8 p.m. Thursdays through Saturdays, Aug. 10 through Aug. 19.

For ticket reservations call the Chamber at 257-7395.

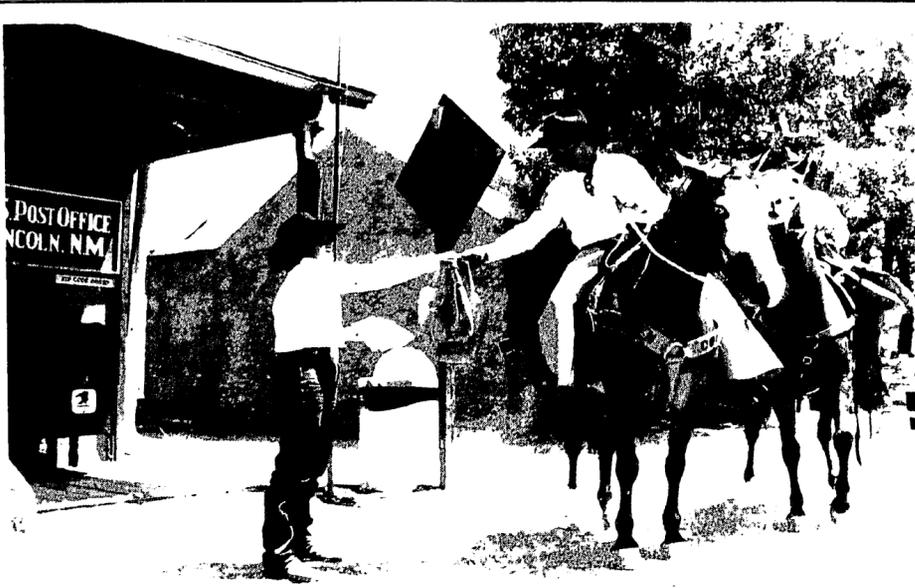

School considers lunch restrictions

The Ruidoso School Board will decide if ninth-graders at Ruidoso High School (RHS) should be restricted to the campus at Tuesday's school board meeting.

Currently, all students are allowed to leave the high school campus during lunch.

Other school business on the agenda includes a report about beginning school activities and special teaching and coaching assignments.

The school board meeting begins at 7 p.m. Tuesday at the school administration office, 200 Horton Circle.

Commissioners OK electronic monitors

by DIANNE STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Electronic monitors on criminal offenders' ankles may reduce the inmate load at the Lincoln County Detention Center.

County commissioners, who are responsible for operating the jail in Carrizozo, agreed Tuesday to a 90-day test of the monitors as an alternative to jail time. The option would be offered to some employed misdemeanor offenders, who pay a daily charge for the device and who are willing to be under house arrest.

Although the number of inmates this year has not exceeded the jail's capacity of 50, the population passed the maximum a few times last year, said jail administrator Wayland Hill. Some prisoners slept on mattresses placed on the floor, he said.

Hill attributed the recent high inmate numbers to DWI (driving while intoxicated) laws enacted in July 1994 that require jail time, and to a July 1995 requirement for sentencing judges to approve any time off for good behavior. Previously, the jail administrator could grant the time off, within certain parameters.

Part of the problem is the summer tourist season, Ruidoso Magistrate Judge William Butts said. Crime traditionally increases during the summer months, he said from his office Tuesday.

When the jail reached capacity last week, Hill said he met with judges in the county and asked them to grant probation to some misdemeanor, non-violent offenders.

Butts said he granted probation to five.

Lincoln County Fair starts on Wednesday

by DIANNE STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Kids, cattle, goats and geese will flock to Capitan Wednesday through Saturday for the 1995 Annual Lincoln County Fair.

While strolling among the exhibits or checking out the livestock, visitors also will be able to test their blood pressure, be inoculated against measles and read about other programs offered by the county health department.

This year, a ranch rodeo is scheduled at 6 p.m. Saturday between the last fair event and a dance. The ranch rodeo continues at 1 p.m. Sunday.

The rodeo, usually staged during the county's July 4th celebration in connection with the Smokey Bear Stampede, was postponed this year.

An outbreak of the virus vesicular stomatitis stopped the movement of cattle last month in several Western states.

"It hurt us, because the regulars didn't come" and weren't around to compete in the Stampede rodeo later, said Gordon Barham, president of the county fair association. "We still had a fairly good turnout."

Quarantines in areas affecting county fair participants should be lifted in time for the ranch rodeo this weekend, Barham said.

Although usually not fatal, the virus causes blisters in and around the mouths, tongues and teats of cattle, resulting in significant weight loss.

One of the major money-raising activities to help pay for the fair, the ranch rodeo also is a crowd pleaser, Barham said. The competitions involve teamwork and are based on actual skills required to operate a ranch, he said.

Senior center director expresses need for more space

by KATHLEEN McDONALD
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

(This is fourth in a series of seven about proposed bond issues for the Village of Ruidoso Aug. 22 election.)

Ruidoso's Senior Citizen Center is like a clubhouse for 100 or so visitors passing through its doors each week, said program manager Sandy Jourdan.

But unlike most clubs, only a segment of its patrons can enjoy the setting at any one given time.

That's because the 20-year-old senior center, located at the back end of the Ruidoso Library, is just one big room.

"With only one room, we can only set up one activity," Jourdan said.

More than 1,000 people visit the center each year, and about 15-20 newcomers enter the building each day, she said.

"We're real limited to what we can have at one time because different groups don't mix well together," Jourdan said.

Classes for quilters and painters can't co-exist because the paint fumes make some of the quilters sick, she explained.

These conditions dictate the schedule of events at the senior center, Jourdan said.

"So, this is the seniors' dream — to have the extra room at the library," Jourdan said. "It's the reason I'd like to see both the library and senior citizen center bond (issues) pass," Jourdan said.

The issues — $100,000 to renovate the library to serve as a senior center and $1.6 million to build a new library — will be separate ballot votes at the Aug. 22 election.

The two issues are contingent upon each other.

Without passage of the library bond issue, the senior center can't expand because the library would have to stay where it is, said Mayor Jerry Shaw.

"We've pretty well ascertained that the library should move (if the bond issue passes)," she said.

Building space and parking are inadequate for both senior center and library patrons, Shaw said.

Seniors have said the present location of their center — it's centrally located and easily accessible in the winter.

"We're trying to meet the needs of Ruidoso, and the senior citizens certainly need more room," Shaw said. "They actively use their center. Moving into the library will be a nice deal for them."

Shaw stressed that passage of all seven of the bond issues — which total $6.65 million — will not result in a tax increase.

"We are not increasing taxes. If we were, I might even feel differently about it," she said.

The new bond issues will be replacing taxes currently paid by property owners on older bonds. Those bond issues are nearly paid off, and if new bond issues are sold this winter, the current tax rate will be the same.

"To the best of my knowledge, the schools have always done this with bonds. I've never known them to let a bond expire without having another one standing by," Shaw said.

seniors, the center is their only social outlet.

"We have lots of widows and this is where they come to have a good time. This, and church," she said.

Many play bridge, quilt, do aerobics or read. But because of the acoustics and lack of space dividers, activities must take place separately, Jourdan said.

In addition to bridge and the daily blood pressure screenings, the most popular events at the center are weekly potluck luncheons and monthly barbecue dances.

Often, more than 100 people show up for these shindigs, forcing some to park near the pool, in front of the library or on the street. Others must sit outside because the seating inside is limited to 75.

"This is fine, unless it's raining," Jourdan said.

With more space, Jourdan said she would like to add a card and game room where people could play bridge as well as shoot pool or play ping pong.

"We'd have some people coming in every day for that, and we'd have more men coming in," she said.

Should the bond issue pass, Jourdan said the center could add water therapy classes at a reduced price for seniors, have an arts and crafts room, offer daily art activities and reintroduce a ceramics class.

Also on Jourdan's wish list is a private room where seniors could meet with social security representatives. They currently meet once a week, seated in the open at one of the tables in the center.

"We have lots of widows and this is where they come to have a good time. This, and church."

SANDY JOURDAN
PROGRAM MANAGER

Other representatives, like those from the veterans administration and the Internal Revenue Service also deserve private meeting areas, Jourdan said.

Even without the additional space next door, Jourdan has improvement plans for the building. A $25,000 grant plus another $7,000 from the village will pay for an automatic front door and for renovations to make the restrooms accessible to handicapped individuals.

Because no bidder has made an offer within the $32,000 price tag, the village has opted to hold off on the restroom remodeling request until after the August bond issue election.

Renovation of the center's kitchen also has been put on the back burner, even though the village just received an $81,000 state grant for the work. Attached to these funds is another state grant for $26,500 to pay for kitchen equipment.

If the bond issues for both the senior center and the library pass, a bid can be made for one large construction job rather than for three separate jobs, she explained.

Passage of the senior center bond issue will cost property owners with property assessed at $60,000 about $3 a year, said Village Manager Gary Jackson. For properties assessed at $90,000, the issue will cost Ruidoso property owners about $4 a year.

But the levies would be replacing taxes that are already being paid by property owners on maturing bond issues, he added.

If all seven bond issues pass, they will be paid off by the year 2003, he said.

Monitors

Stanton," Hill said Tuesday. "I called and they put them somewhere else. We're down to 33 inmates now."

"I was charging the camp $45 a day for each prisoner, but if I don't leave room for local offenders and I have to send our inmates somewhere else, it will cost me more," Hill said.

Ankle monitors have created some problems in Otero County, Hill told the Lincoln commissioners Tuesday.

"The big concern is keeping track (of the offenders) once they are put on the bracelet," Hill said. "Otero hired a man just to take care of that. They had 10 on (ankle monitors), including juveniles. The man had to drive by where they were supposed to be twice a day and the monitors put off a signal. That would be a problem for us if (those using the monitors) were in Ruidoso (because of travel time of employees from the Carrizozo jail)."

Ankle monitors have worked well for the past two months in Lincoln County's DWI probation program, coordinator Charlie White told commissioners. His system, offered by Sentencing Alternatives of Anaheim, Calif., is different from the type used in Otero County and doesn't require local monitoring.

White urged the commissioners to try the ankle units to alleviate problems at the jail. The California company tracks the signals and sends a computer printout each day by fax showing the prisoners' movements. White's office also will be notified by telephone if an offender's monitor does not send a signal at the appropriate time, White said.

"We set up windows for the offenders to be away from home for work, to shop for groceries or other necessities," White said. "He has to be at home at set times. Failure to be there is a probation violation."

Thirty-three different signals are sent out by the ankle device on a random basis during the time period the offender is to be at home, work or other pre-established sites, White said. The random approach prevents the offender from trying to duplicate the signal, he said.

"It doesn't cost the county a cent," he added. "The offender pays $7.50 a day for the unit and a $50 installation fee that can be adjusted according to a sliding scale."

"The company handles the billing and pursues anyone who doesn't pay. Failure to pay also is a probation violation. Some money goes into a fund for those who are indigent."

The company also carries liability insurance to cover actions of those on monitors, White said.

As long as the county isn't negligent in its use of the ankle monitors, the company will cover court costs and provide expert witnesses, if something happens, White said.

About 7% of the jail's population would be eligible for the program, and that percentage would make a difference, Hill said. The judges would decide which inmates to allow in the program.

Commissioner Wilton Howell said other options to jail time need to be found, because he's not interested in enlarging the jail.

The county should also consider charging prisoners a per-day rate when they stay in jail, Howell said.

But he emphasized that saving money is not the primary motive for looking at alternatives to jail time for misdemeanor offenders.

"It's not necessarily to save money, but to make room for the ones who really need to be in jail," Howell said.

Commissioners agreed to attend a meeting Aug. 17 at the Otero County jail to see a demonstration by different monitoring companies.

Serious felonies increased

Although the number of criminal offenders passing through Ruidoso magistrate court decreased slightly last year, serious felonies and DWI convictions increased, said Judge William Butts.

Fiscal 1993-94 posted 3,172 cases compared with 2,935 cases in 1994-95, ending June 30.

The drop in cases was because of a reduction in the number of traffic tickets, but that would have no effect on the jail population, since tickets usually only involve fines, Butts said.

The 12th District Court in Carrizozo headed by Judge Richard Parsons also seems to be experiencing an overall decrease in adult criminal cases.

The court recorded 151 cases in calendar year 1994. By August this year, 58 cases had been filed, according to the court clerk.

County raises jail fees

When the Lincoln County Detention Center isn't filled with its own prisoners, it houses prisoners from other counties and the state.

Those agencies were paying $45 a day per prisoner, but jail administrator Wayland Hill received commission approval Tuesday to increase the charge to $50 a day, the same as Chaves County. Otero County charges $57.

It costs the county $50 a day to care for the inmates, Hill said. The county was losing money with the $45 charge, he said, especially for juvenile offenders. Other detention centers charge $80 per juvenile offender, he said.

The $59,000 expected to be generated this fiscal year from housing state and out-of-county prisoners in Lincoln County will offset part of the county's $163,000 subsidy of the jail, said County Manager Carolin Cooney.

At $50 a day, the center is anticipating 1,180 prisoner days for non-county inmates.

Although it is most cost effective to keep the jail at the maximum count of 50 prisoners, that requires all temporary holding cells and multiple bed cells to be filled. It doesn't leave any room for sudden influxes of local offenders. The county loses money when Hill doesn't have a few vacant beds to take care of those offenders and has to send them to another county's detention center that charges more.

Camp Sierra Blanca Adult Rehabilitation Center, a minimum security prison northeast of Ruidoso, houses inmates at the county jail while waiting for space to open in the camp or to ship them to another prison.

The jail was built in 1964. Leandro Vega was the first sheriff to use it in 1965.

The detention center was designed to house 48 inmates, men, women and juveniles. At some point the county added a two-person holding cell for prisoners waiting to be transported to the state penitentiary or to other facilities.

A renovation two years ago added a recreation space and enlarged a visitors' area, but added no cells. Current commissioners have said they are not interested in enlarging the jail.

Court and Dusti Franklin brush their animals daily in preparation for the fair.

Franklin duo raises champions

by KATHLEEN McDONALD
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Court Franklin, an 11-year-old 4-H member, already has an impressive resume of Lincoln County Fair livestock winners.

But with his quiet humility, you wouldn't know he'd ever won a prize.

"I can't be confident," Franklin said from his family's Glencoe ranch Wednesday. "There's no way to tell if I'll win," he said while taking a break from tending his animals.

At this week's Lincoln County Fair, Franklin hopes he can add more winners to his resume.

He plans to show a Black Angus, a Charolais cross and a Limousin cross — raised his granddad and great-uncle raised at their ranch. The six or seven sheep he'll enter will be mostly Hampshire, Suffolks and fine wool crosses.

Judging will take place Thursday and Friday, and the award presentations and livestock sales will be Saturday.

At last year's county fair his entries captured top honors, the Grand Champion Steer and the Grand Champion Hampshire Lamb.

About 80 lambs and 25 steers were shown at the 1994 county fair, said Court's mother, Celeste.

Court then entered his animals in the 1994 New Mexico State Fair and won Champion Hampshire Lamb with the same lamb that took the top prize in Captain. One of his steers was second in its class.

Court sold the 120-pound champion lamb for around $12 a pound and the 1,200-pound steer for $1.20 per pound.

Just as the judges may vary from year to year, so do their preferences, he explained.

"One might like more muscle, and one might like more finish on top," Court said.

"I just try to pick the right lambs for the right judges — same for the steers," he said, after admitting he is a little nervous about the competition in the upcoming state fair held in Albuquerque.

"I think there's going to be a lot of better lambs there, 'cause you learn after lots of years of showing."

In 1993, when Court was nine and old enough to present animals at the county fair, he entered lambs and won Grand Champion Hampshire Lamb.

Through the county and state fair sales of his animals, the freckle-faced boy finances his 4-H livestock projects. He's in a partnership with his 9-year-old sister Dusti, who has helped fill the pot since first entering shows last fall.

Dusti was too young to show at the 1994 Lincoln County Fair, but was old enough in time for the Eastern New Mexico State Fair in Roswell. At that competition, her steer won the Champion Lightweight Steer prize.

Dusti plans to enter two steers, a Black Angus and a Mainarjou, and five lambs in the Lincoln County show. The steer and lambs are livestock from her grandparents' ranch in House.

"It's kind of a Franklin family thing," Celeste said of her children's success showing livestock.

When her husband Warren, a veterinarian and animal nutritionist, and his sister were children, they joined forces and showed steers. That Franklin duo won four grand champion titles and one reserve grand champion.

"It was more than any other family who ever showed steers," Court said. "They were partners like me and Dusti are."

Court and Dusti have spent their summer working the animals, brushing, feeding and exercising them in preparation for fair competitions.

"It's been pretty intense for the last couple of months," Celeste said. "The chores start early in the morning and pretty much last all day."

Between the chores, the two work on their showman skills — poking the steers to lift their bellies, or teaching the sheep to extend their muscles.

"I've gotten knocked down, scrapped, and body slammed," said Dusti, who dreams of showing pigs someday. Despite the bumps and bruises, she said she loves the steers.

"You don't have to pick them up, push against them or have to get your arms tired like you do with sheep," she explained.

But as Court related, "The lambs are easier to handle — when they stop and you're not dragged a half mile behind them."

They include team branding, wild cow milking, horse catching and team tying.

Admission will be $5 for adults and $3 for children under 12.

"For people who have never seen a ranch rodeo before, it's so different from a regular rodeo," Barham said.

Fair fun

Fair participants should check in livestock from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. Tuesday. Inside entries will be accepted from 4 p.m. to 7 p.m. Tuesday and again from 9 a.m. to noon on Wednesday.

Hamburgers and other lunch treats will be on sale at 4-H booths.

The Junior Livestock Sale, the event that draws children from all over the county and from neighboring communities, begins at 2 p.m.

More than 200 animals, not including poultry and rabbits, are expected to be entered for competition.

Inside the fair buildings, competitions and exhibitions will include painting, photography, flower arrangements, vegetables and fruits, leathercraft, canned products, clothing, quilts and household items.

County health department employees will have a booth at the fair Friday and Saturday. Free blood pressure and anemia tests will be offered. Shots for measles/mumps and diphtheria, and for tetanus and rubella will be given to teens and infants. Adults should accompany children, whose shot records should be provided.

Electronic monitors are step in right direction

The Lincoln County government has come up with a palpable solution to its overcrowding problem at the jail.

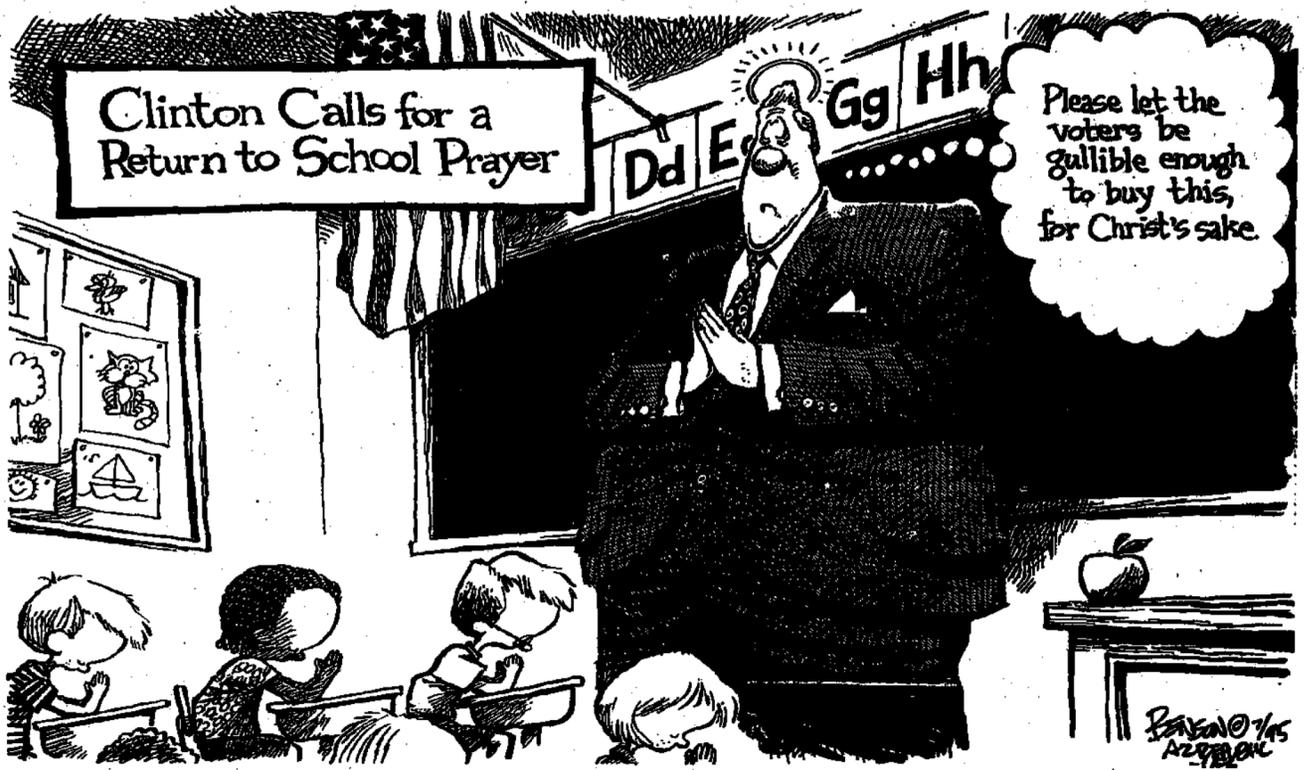

While our state and many others continue to build more and more penitentiaries to lock up more and more prisoners and spend millions and millions of taxpayer dollars, the county is taking a different approach.

The use of electronic monitors is appropriate for minor offenders. It appears county officials are studying the devices in enough detail to come up with a workable solution.

The use of a reputable company that can keep track of the prisoners, instead of having to drive by the prisoners' locations all the time, is a better route. The California company described by some officials even carries liability insurance to cover court costs, plus handles all the billing.

That's what we really like: prisoners who want to be involved in the electronic monitoring have to pay for the cost. While this may discriminate against the poor, its advantages far outweigh that negative. Namely, prisoners pay for their crimes in more literal ways. Someday, we'd like to see all prisoners pay for the cost of their incarceration, because it looks like this country won't be able to afford it.

We'd also like to see more support for prevention programs and rehabilitation, because the constant increase in this country's prison population is breaking the backs of the taxpayers. The present system just isn't working.

U.S. representative ponders Medicare crisis

by JOE SKEEN

U.S. Representative (R-N.M.)

The financial crisis we face in our Medicare system can be summed up in four words: Medicare is going broke.

As we approach its 30th anniversary, we are faced with the reality that if nothing is done to protect, preserve and strengthen Medicare, the system will be bankrupt by the year 2002. However, Republicans in Congress recognize this problem and we will not allow Medicare to go broke.

First let me outline the problem in more detail. According to an April report by Medicare's Board of Trustees, the Medicare Part A trust fund will go broke by the year 2002.

This fund is supported by a 2.9 percent payroll tax. When the fund is exhausted, the government is barred by law from paying its bills. That means that if we do nothing, there will be no Medicare for senior citizens when Medicare goes broke — an option we must not even think about.

While the trustees were quick to identify Medicare's financial problem, they failed to recommend any solutions. For the first few months since the report was issued, President Clinton and his cabinet said our "cuts" — which aren't cuts at all — would devastate senior citizens.

President Clinton's latest budget acknowledges the problem. In his budget, the president admits Medicare is in trouble and makes an attempt to address the problem by slowing the growth of Medicare. It's unclear, however, how he actually intends to save Medicare and how he is going to get the House Democrats, who want to turn Medicare into a political football, to work on sustaining Medicare for current and future retirees.

We have heard from many of you who are concerned about this program and we appreciate your input and ideas. We have determined that six basic principles will guide our efforts to strengthen Medicare.

First, we must act immediately to preserve Medicare for current retirees, and to protect the system for the next generation of beneficiaries.

Second, Medicare spending must increase at a slower rate. The budget agreement we passed guarantees spending will increase from $4,800 per beneficiary this year to $6,700 per beneficiary in seven years, an increase of nearly 40%. Overall, our budget plan will increase Medicare spending by 53%.

Third, senior citizens deserve the same choices available to other Americans. Medicare beneficiaries are given only one option when they enroll in the program — a bureaucratic, outdated, one-size-fits-all program that hasn't really changed since Congress passed it 30 years ago.

Fourth, government must not interfere in the relationship between patients and their doctors.

Burdensome Medicare regulations on patients and providers must be eased. Medicare beneficiaries must be able to continue their existing coverage — including their choice of doctors and hospitals.

Fifth, senior citizens should be rewarded for helping to root out waste, fraud, and abuse. Patients and taxpayers are being cheated out of billions of dollars that should be spent on health care, but the money is instead being wasted on unnecessary and costly tests and procedures, sloppy billing, and deliberate fraud. It's time for government to stop looking the other way and begin to clean up this mess. Seniors should be enlisted to help. They should receive a reward for every dollar they save by exposing any type of waste, fraud and abuse.

Finally, strengthening Medicare is too important to be left to "politics-as-usual." The health of 37 million senior and disabled Americans is too important to be left to partisan politics. For too long, the crisis facing Medicare was ignored. The Republican majority in Congress will not close its eyes to difficult problems with the hope that they will magically disappear.

It is my hope that together we can find solutions that will save Medicare from bankruptcy. With President Clinton finally admitting that the program is in serious trouble, perhaps we can take the politics out of the process as we work toward a program that will be there for current and future seniors.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Sculpture is simply sex on the sidewalk

TO THE EDITOR:

This letter is in response to Joe Carother's letter in the Thursday, July 27th issue of The Ruidoso News.

Take a look across the street from Dave McGary's studio and what do you see? You see sex on the sidewalk.

The couple "sharing a moment of quiet and peace in loving repose" is nothing short of tasteless. Such interaction between a man and a woman was given to us for our own private pleasure, not to be shown off, mimicked, reproduced, or displayed in a public place.

I feel sorry for any woman or girl who has been raped or assaulted that walks up on this so-called "art." I also feel sorry for a local minister who had to answer his six-year-old daughter when she asked, "Daddy, what are they doing?" while referring to the "art."

I believe art has limits. Those limits are what separate art from pornography. If Candyor Garrett wants to create such "art" she should do so in the privacy of her home or studio, not in clear view of every man, woman, and child that passes by.

And we wonder what's wrong with the young people these days! In this case we have an adult sculpting a scene (in clear view) that anyone in my high school would have gotten licks and suspension for drawing on a piece of paper! What kind of leadership example is that?!

Concerned callers think mist is smoke

TO THE EDITOR:

Many of our neighbors in Ruidoso have reported that there is smoke pouring from our upper level.

We thank you for your concern, especially that of the fire department which has come quickly to our rescue more than once.

There is only one minor problem, no fire! The "smoke" that has been seen pouring out of the Misty Gourmet Shoppe (Mountain Man Nut and Fruit Dist.) at 2301 Sudderth is actually a fine water mist, compliments of a newly-acquired misting system installed by the shoppe owners. The misting system is a new innovation in keeping cool (not to mention a wonderful way of getting everyone's attention).

So, if you find yourself walking or driving by our dual-level pink and gray building, don't be alarmed, just enjoy the shower as well as a few delicious samples.

TO THE EDITOR:

This letter comes with the most heart-felt thank you I can give to all the people who helped my three-year-old son, Alexander Castaneda, who was bitten by a rattlesnake

July 20. May each of you know that without all of you, he wouldn't be here today.

Special thanks to the ambulance crew, Mike Long and Miss Roper, all the nurses and doctors in the emergency room at Lincoln County Medical Center, Dr. Ariens Brown, Sara McGuire (for her gentle heart and great strength), the ambulance crew, Rusty Morrow and Don Merritt, the air van team of nurses that flew us to Albuquerque and the entire group of doctors and nurses who took care of my son in Albuquerque, U.N.M. Hospital.

Thanks also to Ed and Patti Gillissen for their help and support, Ursula Goss for all she did for my family while I was in Albuquerque with Alexander, and to all of Captain Ruidoso and surrounding areas that prayed for my son. May you all know that each of you helped Alexander heal. May you know that I will never forget any of you, and I will always be thankful to each of you. May God Bless you as he has us.

Slick Ace overcomes slow start to win Zia Handicap

Slick Ace, ridden by jockey Chris Zamora, overcame a slow start to win the $13,100 Zia Handicap Sunday.

Slick Ace quickly regrouped from a slow start to overtake early leader Designs By Pyro in the final strides to win the $13,100 Zia Handicap for New Mexico-bred quarter horses, Sunday. It marked the first career stakes win at Ruidoso Downs for trainer James Paschall.

The 4-year-old gelding by The Adamas trailed at the start of the 400-yard Zia while Designs By Pyro grabbed a quick early advantage.

Under strong urging by jockey Chris Zamora, Slick Ace got on even terms with his primary rival, then gained a slim lead.

Nearing the wire the gelding maintained the lead then held off a late charge from All Iced Up to win by a neck. The winning time was 20.11 over a good track.

"I watched the race from behind the gate and it looked like he broke third or fourth. He came on at the end, but that's his running style," said Paschall, who trains Slick Ace for his mother, Teresa of El Paso.

Zamora rode three winners on Sunday including Slick Ace, who is quickly becoming one of his favorite horses. "I've been a fan of his since the first time I rode him in February."

Zamora rides first call for trainer Richard Fry who had four entrants in the Zia, but opted to ride Slick Ace.

"I felt stronger about this colt than any of Fry's horses," Zamora said.

Zamora said he wasn't concerned when Slick Ace broke a bit tardy. "He never does break well and the three horse (Designs By Pyro) really left well. I hand rode him until we reached the three horse, then I got after him a bit. I got after him late too because the eight horse (All Iced Up) was flying."

The first place check was worth $7,860 to the Paschalls.

All Iced Up finished second, a half-length in front of Designs By Pyro who won the Zia in 1994.

Western Magic noses out Tai Chick

Caroline Ames' Western Magic battled down the stretch with favorite Tai Chick and just got a nose in front at the wire to win the $2,700 featured allowance contest Thursday at Ruidoso Downs.

The 4-year-old New Mexico-bred gelding by The Adamas broke sharply under jockey G.R. Carter. Western Magic held a slim lead over Tai Chick midway through the 350-yard dash.

With 50 yards to go both horses battled neck-and-neck with Western Magic eventually prevailing by the narrowest of margins. The winning time was 17.95 over a fast track.

Might Get The Cash finished a head back in third.

Western Magic is trained by J.B. Montgomery for Ames of Ruidoso Downs.

Racindurty upsets Jena Jinsky

Racindurty swept by Smart Attack and the favored Jena Jinsky on the way to a three-length victory in Friday's $4,600 featured race at Ruidoso Downs. The victory gave jockey Carlos Rivas his second win of the afternoon.

After letting Smart Attack and Jena Jinsky tire each other in a speed duel, Racindurty was poised to take command at the eighth pole.

She went on to finish the 5 1/2 furlongs in 1:05 1/5 and score the mild upset in her first race since June 17.

The 3-year-old filly is trained by Simon Buechler and had won back-to-back allowance events at Ruidoso Downs in May. Racindurty returned $9.80, $4.00 and $2.60.

Smart Attack, under Billy Peterson, finished a half length in front of Jena Jinsky and delivered a healthy $12.40 and $3.60 place payoff.

Jena Jinsky, winner of the Road Runner Handicap in June and runner-up in last week's Ruidoso Oaks, failed to deliver as the heavy favorite in the group of seven 3-year-old fillies, but held on for a $2.60 show payoff.

St. Helens Shadow wins Kachina Stakes in final stretch run

St. Helens Shadow may have been regarded as an understudy, but she quickly assumed the role of leading lady in the closing seconds of the $71,117 Kachina Stakes Saturday at Ruidoso Downs.

With jockey Billy Peterson coaching her through the six furlongs, St. Helens Shadow veered wide on the turn for home. But she maintained a determined move until she caught Mari Go Round at the wire to score a neck victory in the season's showcase event for 2-year-old thoroughbred fillies.

Both fillies are owned by Texas brothers Lynn and Drew Alexander. Mari Go Round received most of the pre-race publicity and was considered the stronger half of the betting entry.

The Kachina was the first career victory and only the second lifetime start for St. Helens Shadow, who reached the wire in 1:12 3/5 over a good track. The winner's share of the Kachina purse was worth $35,836.64.

"We're lucky we caught her," said Billy Peterson about his ride aboard the winner.

"She was trying to get out the whole way, especially on the turn. I was losing ground fast, and the gray horse (Mari Go Round) was hugging the rail. I figured she'd improve a lot off the trials, and she did."

St. Helens Shadow, who is named for Mt. St. Helens in Oregon, is a Kentucky-bred daughter of Septieme Ciel. She was purchased for $15,500 at the 1994 Washington Thoroughbred Breeders' Yearling Sale in Seattle.

"We flew over Mt. St. Helens on our way home, and I said 'Gee, we bought her in Mt. St. Helens Shadow, and that's how we named her,'" said Lynn Alexander, a car dealer in San Angelo, Texas.

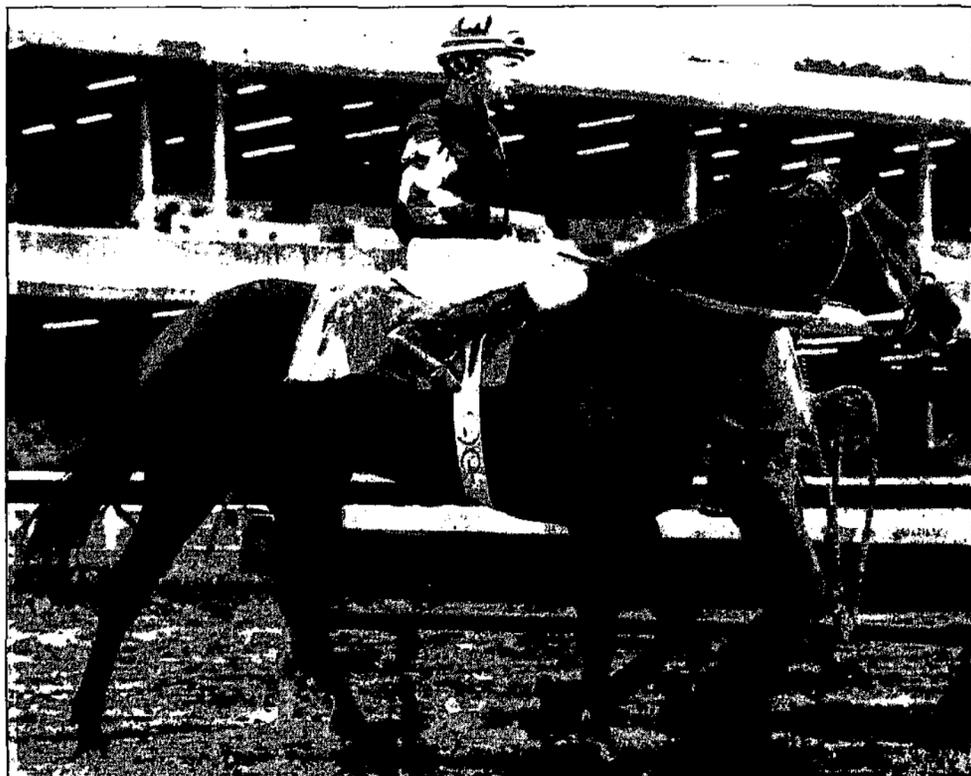

The brothers went to the other end of the country and picked Mari Go Round out of an Ocala, Florida Sale.

They gave trainer Bob Arnet St. Helens Shadow to train. Roy Barrington, who broke Mari Go Round over the winter, oversees the training chores of the gray filly.

"We thought we'd have a good chance to win with one of them today," added Lynn. "It looks like Mari Go Round will be the sprinter and St. Helens Shadow will like to run longer."

NMSU intern relives youth as he creates Cedar Creek fishery

by JUNG WHA YOON
Ruidoso News Intern

Richard Vacirca, wildlife assistant for the U.S. Forest Service, is reliving his childhood as he works toward creating a fishery at Cedar Creek.

Vacirca, a joint fisheries and wildlife science major at New Mexico State University, is completing a summer internship at Smokey Bear Ranger Station in Ruidoso.

During his childhood, Vacirca spent many enjoyable hours fishing in a stream that ran by his family's cabin in the Santa Fe National Forest.

"My brother and I always fished in that stream since we were kids," Vacirca recalled. "We always tried to make the stream better so we could get more pools. We knew this would bring in more fish. So as kids, we were always making pools and making structures."

Vacirca said he was kind of surprised when he first came to Smokey Bear Ranger Station, because he was doing the same kind of thing.

He and others in the U.S. Forest Service are conducting research on the feasibility of creating a fishery at Cedar Creek.

Larry Cordova, wildlife biologist for the U.S. Forest Service, especially wants to develop a fishery for youth.

Cedar Creek was chosen because it is one of the only creeks in the area that flows year round.

The Forest Service has only been moderately involved in fisheries, Vacirca observed, but now the agency seems to be more and more interested in developing fisheries.

"It's a part of land management. It's part of what the Forest Service is all about. It's also a big part of New Mexico recreation," Vacirca said.

The biggest problem Cedar Creek has is the yearly water flow. A solid fishery is only possible eight months of the year. During the other four months, which coincides with summer, the water flow is low.

Vacirca has to figure out what impact the low flow will have on whatever fish the Forest Service wants to put into Cedar Creek.

At the moment, Vacirca is leaning toward either brook or brown trout. They do well in creek areas and have good survival skills. Also, they are desirable and aesthetically pleasing to the public, he said.

Cedar Creek is a small waterway and because of low water flows, it is more geared toward advanced fishermen. For youth, the Forest Service is looking into creating a dam that would impound water. This part of the creek would be stocked regularly, making conditions easier for children.

For now, Vacirca is making habitat maps, looking at key structures, making numerous measurements, researching water velocity, researching water discharge and more. Others are making vegetation and small animal surveys. Still others are making sure there will be enough food for fish.

"You want to do what's right instead of just going out there like it is and stocking a bunch of fish. That could be a big, big mistake," Vacirca said.

After the research is done, the Forest Service gets down to the nitty gritty work with picks, shovels, saws and drills. They will make log and rock structures, create undercuts, make bank improvements to lessen the effects of erosion, and plant willows to tie up eroded banks.

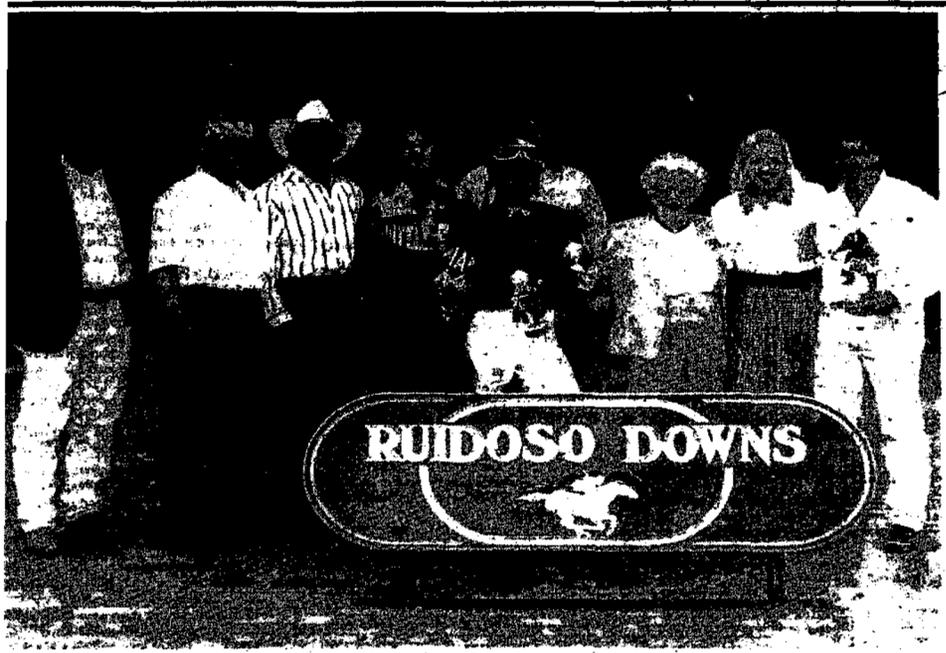

The fishery will not be realized immediately but Vacirca feels there is a distinct possibility there will be a fishery at Cedar Creek.

"So far, I think it can happen," Vacirca said.

LINCOLN COUNTY SCRAPBOOK

A glimpse into Lincoln County's past, compiled by Polly E. Chavez with excerpts from "A History of Lincoln County Post Offices."

Fort Stanton

Less than two years after the Fort was established the first postmaster, Davis S. Garland was appointed in 1857, making this the first post office in Lincoln County.

In June of 1855, Governor Merriwether made a treaty designating a reservation near the fort and established the new fort. It was named for Captain Henry W. Stanton, killed in January of that year.

Colonel Miles, who commanded the campaigns against the Apaches, opened a wagon route. This route started from Fort Fillmore on the Jornada del Muerto, about 15 miles south of the Organ Mountain Pass, and crossed the Tularosa Basin to the junction of the Ruidoso with the Bonito. Here it joined the route opened by a cooperating force from Albuquerque.

Thus was established the route by which mail was safely dispatched by buckboard and stage to serve the southern half of New Mexico.

Newest member of search and rescue squad follows her nose

by DON HIXON
 Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Chessey, a friendly Lab/rottweiler mix, sat at the Lincoln County Humane Society Animal Shelter hoping she would be rescued.

Beatrice Barnett and Pablo Falcon were searching for a good dog.

When the search and rescue operation was complete, Chessey was adopted and drafted as the first member of the new K-9 unit for the White Mountain Search and Rescue group.

Chessey is named after the game of chess because playing it requires a lot of wit, the same trait necessary to find people in need in a search and rescue operation, Barnett said.

"We adopted Chessey in the middle of May," she said. "She was dropped off just the weekend before, along with her brother and sister, and we are hoping to find somebody who knows more about her background, especially relating to her parents' health and characters."

The new recruit is 4.5 months old and has already started her search and rescue training.

"Chessey is a very friendly, joyful dog who likes running and playing, especially hide and seek," Falcon said. "She is receiving special training for wilderness searches and searching for a scent."

The puppy is being trained in twice-a-week sessions to obey hand, voice and radio commands, he said. Chessey will be drilled on an obstacle course and receive other advanced search and rescue training.

"Ideally, each search and rescue team will have two dogs and one person carrying a compass and map," Barnett said. "We hope to eventually have 10 K-9 search and rescue dogs."

Barnett and Falcon encourages anyone who is interested in becoming a part of the White Mountain Search and Rescue team, or feel that they may have a good canine candidate for the K-9 unit, to call them at 258-3046 or 258-6069.

Pictured with owner Beatrice Barnett, Chessey, the first recruit of the White Mountain Search and Rescue K-9 unit, attends a special training session at School House Park. Chessey was adopted from the Lincoln County Humane Society.

Native fox threatened, not endangered

Although the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service has determined that the swift fox population is under enough stress to be endangered, it will not be listed as an endangered species at this time.

Other species have a higher priority, according to agency spokesman Hans Stuart in Albuquerque.

"The service has determined that the scientific and commercial information on the status of the swift fox shows listing under the U.S. Endangered Species Act is justified," he said. The swift fox is a resident of New Mexico, as well as several other Western states.

The "warranted, but precluded," 12-month finding for the fox elevates its candidate species status from a category 2 (species for which the service has information that a listing is appropriate, but not sufficient to support a proposal) to a category 1 (species for which the service has substantial information supporting a proposal to list).

In one year, the service will review any new information and reassess the status of the swift fox.

The primary threat to the fox today is loss of habitat from a variety of human activities, Stuart said. They include fragmentation of habitat as a result of converting land to agricultural use and mineral extraction; rodent and predator control actions; habitat alteration from overgrazing and other species of fox; and legal and illegal hunting.

Based on survey information, agency officials think some reoccupation of former habitat has occurred in Colorado, Wyoming and Kansas.

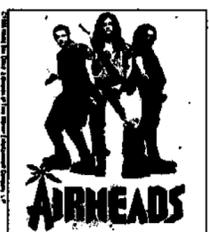

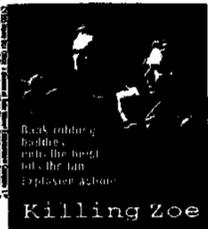

The plan developed aims to reduce threats and improve the status of the fox as a proactive alternative, equivalent to a recovery plan, Stuart said.

"One of the items noted in U.S. Interior Secretary Bruce Babbitt's 10-point plan to improve the Endangered Species Act included efforts that the federal government would pursue to help prevent species from declining to the point they must be protected under the Act," he said.

Jon Sharps, a private biologist in South Dakota, submitted the petition to the service to list the swift fox, which is the smallest member of North American canids. It weighs between four to six pounds and stands about 11-12 inches tall at the shoulder as an adult. The species is characterized by a black tip on the tail and buff-gray hair on the ears, feet and back. The animal's sides are reddish and the undercoat is white.

Cruise couple helps make dream vacations come true

by DON HIXON

Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Ah, the Caribbean. The mere thought of it conjures up tropical visions of blue sky and warm sun with palm trees swaying in balmy breezes.

If the thought of a cruise makes you want to start packing your bags, Rance and Lynn Panchuk at Cruise Vacations may have the perfect travel package.

Cruise Vacations opened in Ruidoso on July 17 and the Panchuks, who call themselves the "cruise couple," are busy matching folks with exotic vacation packages.

Lynn Panchuk worked as a travel agent for more than 20 years in Rhode Island before the couple decided to relocate to Ruidoso.

She had been stationed at Holloman Air Force Base in Alamogordo when she was in the Air Force 20 years ago and never forgot the beauty of the state.

"I always thought New Mexico was beautiful," she said. "And Ruidoso is one of the most beautiful places in New Mexico."

Rance owned and operated a photography store in Rhode Island. He now helps Lynn with the new travel business.

"I liked the vacation part of the travel business," she said. "But I want to concentrate on travel packages rather than airline tickets and business packages."

Travel brochures offering virtually every kind of vacation package available cover an entire wall of the Cruise Vacation office. Rance and Lynn said they feel confident that they can come up with the perfect vacation for just about anyone.

"What makes us different is that most of our packages have no hidden charges and include airfare, meals and port taxes," Lynn said.

So if you find the travel bug has bitten and you can't wait to pack those bags and head for some exotic port-of-call, you may want to give Rance and Lynn a call at 257-4991 or stop by their office at 510 Mechem Drive.

Amison, whose background includes engineering and computers, has many years in the recording studio business.

Amison is a self-taught recording engineer. He studied music theory and composition.

"I took serious music theory lessons," he said. "My mother is a trained concert pianist, my father played in a band and many of my other relatives are musically inclined."

Amison has produced major events for five years at Ruidoso Downs Race Track for the ESPN television sports network.

Yaking Cat Studios has both analog and digital capabilities, in addition to mixing, sound effects, composing, producing and arranging.

The studio also offers a karaoke service for people who want to make their own tapes.

"People walk out of the studio with a very high quality cassette tape," he said. "I pride myself on the fact that the sound is very, very clean."

After helping an artist make a recording, Amison gives his client a list of independent music companies.

"I enjoy working with people who come in with simple song ideas," Amison said. "I help arrange their music, add background parts and make it lush."

Studio time costs around $45 an hour and includes both composition and production.

For a consultation with Amison, call Yaking Cat Studios at 258-3815.

County loses grant project money

by DIANNE STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

For the second time in as many years, Lincoln County lost out on a major grant project money primarily because it has no debts.

A protest of the decision will be sent to the Community Development Block Grants council, county commissioners said last week.

Commissioners miffed

County Manager Carol Cooney said she hasn't received the scoring sheet from the state. However, the state Department of Finance and Administration (DFA) project representative told her grant reviewers award fewer points to a debt-free county, she said.

The county had requested $245,000 of a two-phase, $400,000 project to improve and enlarge the health clinic in Carrizozo.

"The thing we were marked down the most on was fiscal capacity," Cooney said. "They were critical of the fact that the county is fiscally sound."

County commissioners want the state to explain that approach. During a meeting last week, they told Cooney to send a letter of protest. Before she complies, she wants to see the scoring sheet, Cooney said.

"The process is flawed," Chairman Monroy Montes said. "Five years ago a housing grant was awarded and nothing has changed significantly since then. It's politics, pure and simple."

"I think we should send them a letter saying we don't appreciate the results for the last three to four years and that we are not interested in going back (for future grant applications), because they don't know how to allocate their resources."

How can the state encourage counties to stand on their own feet financially and then penalize them for the same effort, commissioners asked.

The county had offered a $45,000 match for the grant and had enough low and moderate-income residents to qualify, Cooney said. It owns the land and was ready to move on the project, she said.

Last year, the county lost points for not being in debt when it applied for a $195,000 grant to build a senior citizens center in San Patricio. It was to be the first phase of a two-part project.

But in that application, the county also saw points knocked off because it didn't own the land for the center and did not offer a high match grant.

Need ranks high

A community's financial situation is one of seven criteria considered by the state in awarding block grants, said Anita Hisenberg, bureau chief of community development of the state local government division.

"Another bureau deals with (the financial) aspect and they take the figures directly from the applicant's operating budget," Hisenberg said Friday. "(Lincoln County) had in excess of $1 million in overall capacity (uncommitted money)."

The excess money also impacts negatively on another ranking point — need, she said. A financially flush county or city is expected to be able to handle its own projects, she said.

Other ranking points are: — appropriateness. At least 51% of the population must have low to moderate income.

— the amount of money or in-kind effort the community is willing to pledge toward the project.

— how citizens were involved in choosing the project.

— how the community has tied the project into its long-term planning.

— whether the project is feasible and ready to go. — how many people benefit in relation to the amount requested.

Once the points are assigned and counted, the applications are ranked. They are grouped into categories of high, medium and low rankings and reviewed by the community development council.

The members of the council decide who gets what.

This year, the council received 86 requests totalling $25 million. It awarded 67 grants totalling $16 million.

"If they disagree, anybody can file a protest," Hisenberg said. "We also give them an opportunity to come in and look at rating sheets."

Capitan, 'Zozo awarded

The villages of Carrizozo and Capitan were more fortunate, depending on the point of view. Both villages are in debt with bond issues for water improvements and they were approved for grants.

Officials with both villages said the towns are financially secure. The villages were selected on the merits of their multi-phased road improvement projects and their high local matching effort, officials said.

Capitan received $300,000.

"We rated high on our project and were automatically funded for the second phase," said Village Clerk Deborah Cummins. The new project will improve and surface Third Street and some side streets.

Fourth Street is being improved under the first $309,602 phase of the grant.

Carrizozo received $280,000 for the seventh phase of a street improvement plan. It had requested $400,000, said Village Clerk Carol Schlarb.

Streets are being handled on a priority basis, and village officials haven't determined where the work will occur with the latest grant money, she said.

Dog killed in violent bear attack

by DIANNE STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

A 400-pound bear was shot and killed after it attacked and ate a cocker spaniel in Alto Village.

Duchess, a 7-year-old black cocker owned by Richard and Eva Cantu, was on a two-story deck of the family home when the attack occurred July 27.

No one was home during the attack, but when Cantu returned home about 7:30 p.m., it didn't take long for him to realize what had happened.

"It looked like a crime scene. I followed the blood," he said. "It looked like the bear reached over the gate and swatted (Duchess) and wounded her. She ran to the other end of the deck. The bear climbed over and got her, then climbed back over and went into the woods."

Cantu followed the blood trail and spotted the bear from a safe distance with binoculars. It was eating the dog. He returned to the house and called 911. Cantu kept the bear in sight from his third floor balcony until Lincoln County Sheriff's Deputy Trini Zepeda arrived.

With permission from the state Game and Fish Division, Zepeda killed the bear, shooting it twice.

"It was a big male, about 400 pounds," Zepeda said. "They said to shoot him because something must be wrong with him and it might attack a person."

The bear may have been attracted to the lower deck because of a hummingbird feeder, Zepeda said.

"The dog probably barked and came at it," he said. "After the bear killed the dog, he just took it. The dog was trapped on the deck. It had no place to go. (The bear) took the dog about 400 yards away and ate most of it."

Before it was shot, the bear buried the remains of the dog to feed on it again, Cantu said. "If someone had walked by not knowing the body was there, the bear might have attacked them," he said.

His wife had spotted the bear crossing from the ski area to the Inn Credible restaurant three or four days earlier, Cantu said.

Bears often are seen in the neighborhood, but in the eight years he has lived in Lincoln County, this kind of behavior "is highly unusual," he said. "I'm an animal lover and going after it wasn't for revenge. It was such unusual behavior. That's why I tracked the bear. It would have been bad if we hadn't found it or didn't know it was the right bear."

Cantu would like the bear's body to be tested for disease.

"It would not be routine to test a bear unless it showed some symptoms," said Thomas Moody, chief of the game division's southeast operations. "Attacking and eating a dog, while somewhat unusual, is not unheard of at this time of year and with the number of people in that area feeding the bears."

Cantu's neighbor was upset, because she was walking in the same wooded area with her grandchildren earlier that day, he said.

His wife, Eva, and daughter, Dinah, sunbathes on the deck and could have been attacked, Cantu said. The experience has been an emotional reminder that bears, like other wild animals, are unpredictable.

Laws records message on compact disc

by DIANNE STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

In an effort to deliver her anti-nuclear waste message to a new audience, Rufina Laws has recorded a track on a new compact disc (CD) called "The Obligated Whisper."

Against a background of rhythmic ethnic music, Laws speaks of a vision she experienced in 1990, warning of a toxic flow oozing from the mountains around her family home in Mescalero.

When Laws, a Mescalero Apache, subsequently returned to the reservation, her mother unknowingly revealed the meaning of the vision by asking Laws, "What does nuclear waste mean?"

The question led to Laws' discovery of a plan by the Tribal Council to store spent nuclear fuel rods on the reservation.

Laws soon became the most outspoken opponent on the reservation. She is credited with mobilizing others in the tribe, resulting in a defeat of the plan in a January election. But advocates of the storage plan launched a petition drive. The proposal was approved in a second election in March.

The CD released by AZIMA ("spark of life" in an African dialect) marks the 50th anniversary of the nuclear age, the detonation of the first atomic bomb at White Sands Missile Range and the nuclear destruction of the cities of Hiroshima and Nagasaki, Japan.

"The CD was created by the contributions of an international group of artists that are seeking to awaken the consciences of America, to touch hearts, minds and souls of the need for humanity to become responsible for its impact upon their seventh generation," Laws said.

A second Mescalero also worked on the project. Apache artist Charles Belin created the sculptures pictured on the cover of the CD. Both Belin and Laws donated their talents.

Laws, director of the non-profit Humans Against Nuclear Waste Dumps (HANDS), has sent the CD to radio stations throughout the Southwest, asking that it be played from Sunday through Wednesday "to help raise the conscience of Americans and show the insanity of the pursuit of nuclear energy and power."

The CD marks the 50th year of the nuclear age and the destruction it has brought on humanity and the biosphere," she said.

Any profits from the sale of the CD will benefit HANDS.

The CDs can be purchased for $10 plus shipping and handling by contacting Laws at P.O. Box 2170, Ruidoso, N.M. 88345. Or call (505) 257-3823 or fax 257-2882.

LEGAL NOTICE DECISION MEMO Eagle Wildlife Habitat Improvement Project

Smokey Bear Ranger District
Lincoln National Forest
Lincoln County
New Mexico

I have decided to implement a wildlife habitat improvement project to stimulate browse and improve the vegetative diversity of the area. The project will involve the thinning of seedlings and saplings by chainsaw, on approximately 500 acres of piñon-juniper woodlands to create fuels, followed by a prescribed burn in the second year on approximately 50 acres. This project was proposed as a wildlife habitat improvement project by the southeast area Sikes Act Citizens' Review Committee, and approved for funding under the Sikes Act by New Mexico Department of Game and Fish.

The Eagle project area is located near Hightower Mountain North of Highway 70 near Ruidoso Downs in T. 10 S., R. 14 & 15 E., Sections 19, 25, 30 and 36 NMPM. Scoping and project design was conducted by District staff, the grazing permittee and the adjacent private landowner within the planning area. Other agencies, organizations and persons contacted during scoping include: New Mexico Department of Game and Fish; N.M. Environment Department; U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service; Thomas S. Cooper, Grazing Permittee; Southeast Area Sikes Act Citizens' Review Committee.

This project is in Forest Plan Management Area 1D where the primary emphasis is on range management and fuelwood production. This project is consistent with management direction and Standards and Guidelines documented in the Lincoln National Forest Plan. Previous experience with similar projects has demonstrated that the proposed action will have no significant environmental impacts, either individually or cumulatively. No extraordinary circumstances exist which might cause the action to have significant effects; therefore, the action has been categorically excluded from further documentation pursuant to 40 CFR 1508.4 as outlined in Forest Service Handbook 1909.15, Section 31.2 (6). Implementation of this project is scheduled to take place immediately.

This decision pursuant to 36 CFR 215.8(a)(4) is not subject to appeal and may be implemented immediately after publication of legal notice in the Ruidoso News. For additional information concerning this decision or the Forest Service appeal process, contact District Ranger, Smokey Bear Ranger District, 901 Mechem, Ruidoso, NM 88345, (505)257-4095.

AFTERNOON

PET CORNER

These pets are currently up for adoption at Lincoln County Humane Society
Call 257-9841

A one-year-old bearded collie/terrier mix, Mr. Dibbs was left at the shelter. He needs lots of love and care. He appears to have been neglected or abused. He's small and seems to be housebroken.

Turtle is a graceful and slim tortoiseshell cat who came to the shelter in June with her kitten named Bitsy. As with most cats, she would be a low maintenance, but affectionate companion, suited to an apartment.

The chance of humans contracting rabies is extremely small, but the fatal viral disease flourishes in the animal population of southern New Mexico and El Paso, Texas.

"The southern counties in New Mexico are the capitol for live rabies in North America," said Jim Riggins, Lincoln County Humane Society shelter director.

"El Paso is where the big thrust is now," he said. "They're about to declare an epidemic. In human terms, that's only few cases, but they are sending officers out and arresting people for not vaccinating their dogs and cats.

"The problem is that there's no barbed wire fence along the border separating Texas and New Mexico from Mexico. Dogs wander back and forth with a history of no vaccinations, no maternal anti-bodies. They merge with pets and strays in several communities."

If your dog or cat bites someone, a state-dictated rabies quarantine procedure must be followed.

The animal is under quarantine for 10 days. If a domesticated animal had live rabies virus in its mouth when it bit or scratched someone, the animal will show symptoms or die within 10 days, Riggins said. This leaves nearly a three-week window of opportunity to have the animal's brain tested for the presence of the virus and for the bite victim to undergo treatment.

However, if an animal is isn't tested and the victim doesn't get treatment and ends up contracting rabies, the prognosis is death for the victim.

Wild animals and semi-wild animals such as wolf hybrids don't receive the 10-day chance to survive. By state law, they must be destroyed immediately and then tested, Riggins said. Some changes in this law are being considered for hybrids and ferrets by the State Epidemiology Department, Riggins said.

Any warm-blooded vertebrate animal, including some rodents, can contract rabies.

As an alternative to quarantine in a shelter, a home quarantine may be allowed for animals with current rabies vaccinations if the animals were confined when the incident occurred. Adequate facilities must exist at the home. A bite victim can refuse to allow a home quarantine.

A bite release is common in the case of a family or friend's pet that always is confined.
