Views wide apart on wolf release

A public hearing in Socorro Wednesday illustrated the continuing differences between ranchers and environmentalists on a proposal to reintroduce the Mexican wolf into sections of New Mexico and Arizona.

Although the mood was polite, the differences in viewpoints among the 300 people attending were sharp. The list of those who wanted to speak grew so long, the four-hour session had to be extended another half-hour.

Check Monday's paper for the full story on the hearing sponsored by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

Ban affects fuelwood cutters

by DIANNE STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

While people including their own firewood won't be cutting in the two states to halt timber harvest activities with the exception of personal fuelwood cutting.

The ban is in response to a Federal District Court ruling aimed at protecting the habitat of the Mexican spotted owl.

Some of the businesses that sell wood for fuel have stockpiled enough to finish out the winter, but others are scrambling to find wood to cut on private land.

Jerry Hawkes, who manages the Smokey Bear District of the Lincoln National Forest around Ruidoso, said 74 projects were stopped in the local district. About 900 permit holders in the region have been negatively affected, he said.

A federal judge in Arizona concluded Aug. 24 that the Forest Service is not complying with the Endangered Species Act. The judge stopped all timber harvest activities in Arizona and New Mexico until forest officials conduct more biological studies with the assistance of the U.S. Fish & Wildlife Service.

Responding to that order, the Regional Forester on Aug. 25 directed all national forests in the two states to halt timber harvest activities with the exception of personal fuelwood cutting.

Until the Forest Service is able to clarify the scope of the injunction, everything else is on hold.

"This has been going on since September," Hawkes said. "Our problem is that all this has been done (to protect) the habitat of the endangered Mexican spotted owl. Yet, the piñon-juniper areas where fuelwood cutting was allowed is not their usual habitat."

"We use tree cutting as a tool to improve wildlife habitat, watershed conditions and the land," Hawkes said. "Without it, soil erosion occurs and gullies form, because the trees are so thick. We're trying to make up for the lack of fires, the tool nature used to use to clean out the forest floor and clean out weak trees."

René Stirman of Ruidoso is one of the cutters who lost his place to work in the forest and only has a small reserve of wood. Although the fuelwood business is not his only source of support, it's significant income, he said. Stirman was cutting wood on Gavilan Ridge when the court order was issued.

"I wish the judge could see the difference," Stirman said. "The grass is waist high and the deer come right up while we're working. Before, it was so thick with trees no sunlight could get through."

The price of fuelwood is bound to go up if the order stays in place, Stirman said.

René Bustamante, who operates Tree Masters Inc. in Alto, said most of his wood comes from projects on private ranches and he has stockpiled enough to last through the winter season. He still cuts trees for power companies with easements on forest land.

"The (court) order came in late for this year," Bustamante said. "Most timber men drop it (cut wood) in the summer. The wood needs time to cure. It wouldn't affect them much this year."

Hawkes is optimistic the court will either modify its order soon, or an agreement will be worked out with the environmental groups who

Sensuous statue sparks criminal charge by citizen

by KATHLEEN McDONALD
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

A Ruidoso business owner has charged artist Candyce Garrett with the crime of displaying sexually oriented materials harmful to minors.

Dennis Johnston's unusual citizen criminal complaint refers to the statue of a man and a woman in a sensuous pose Garrett carved this summer outside her Sudderth Drive studio.

He said he filed the criminal complaint to find the local legal limit to public displays.

Garrett's art is "powerful," but the open sidewalk display of the statue is not, he said.

"I want to see where the city stands on this, where are our lines," he said. "Maybe this is the limit, people in the act of sexual intercourse or sexual activity right out in public display."

Johnston said he has never met Garrett, and never looked at the statue up close, even though his shop, Johnston's Jewelers, is just a few blocks down the street.

The highly-visible sculpture has been the subject of heated debate in this community. It was shipped Oct. 8 to a Texas resident who commissioned it, but Johnston still wants to find out what the law allows.

Garrett, 48, is now starting another commissioned piece of a seven-foot female nude that was requested by a Ruidoso man. Because of the "dust factor" and its size, Garrett said she definitely plans to carve the piece outdoors as she did the last one.

Johnston's complaint, co-signed by Pastor Ed Vinson of Capitan's Christ Community Fellowship, was filed yesterday at magistrate court.

Vinson has stronger feelings about the art than Johnston, saying the statue itself is obscene.

"Just its being in public view is offensive to me," Vinson said.

Garrett pleaded innocent of the charge after being notified of the complaint by Judge William Butts.

Butts said a trial will be scheduled within the next 45 days. He told Garrett she has the right to a jury trial, and may waive that right.

"I guess there's a group out there that doesn't appreciate art, does not understand art, and is fighting it," Garrett said. "I guess fear's behind everything, but I don't know what they're afraid of."

If found guilty of the misdemeanor charge, Garrett could be sentenced to a maximum year in jail and/or a $1,000 fine.

"This is a nuisance," Garrett said. "I'm just trying to do my own work in my own place, minding my own business, and all this happens."

Garrett has hired criminal attorneys Gary Mitchell and Adam Rafkin to defend her.

"They're eager to take this on," Garrett said. "I'll take this as far as I have to."

Johnston's complaint was filed without a law enforcement officer, so it can only be prosecuted by the offices of the district attorney or the attorney general. If they refuse, Johnston and Vinson will have to prosecute, Butts said. The duo may have to settle for the private. They cannot have a private attorney prosecute for them.

Please see Sculpture, page 2A

Garrett works on her sculpture.

Citizen's charge could be test of New Mexico's law

Ruidoso Police Chief Lanny Maddox says Candyce Garrett's suggestive sculpture apparently doesn't violate any municipal laws.

However, Maddox told Dennis Johnston about a state law that may apply to Johnston's objections.

Whether the state law is applicable is up to a judge's discretion, Maddox said.

"Once (a court) establishes what is obscene to an entire population, then you have a starting point for restrictions," Maddox said.

Otherwise, the definition of obscenity "is up to each individual's interpretation," he said.

The state law is general and vague, Maddox said. It refers to the sale or distribution of art which displays genitalia in sexual acts and which is harmful to minors.

The sculpture was a commissioned piece, so Garrett wasn't distributing or selling it. Nor was there a display of genitalia, Maddox said. Therefore, the police left Garrett alone.

Johnston will have to prove the sculpture was harmful to minors in order for Garrett to be found guilty, Ruidoso Magistrate Judge William Butts said.

As described by the state law, material harmful to minors is "patently offensive to the prevailing standards in the adult community as a whole with respect to what is suitable material for minors."

The law also states material harmful to minors "predominantly appeals to the prurient, shameful or morbid interest of minors," and is "utterly without redeeming social importance for minors."

Property tax bills on the way

by DIANNE STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Lincoln County property tax bills will be mailed over the next two weeks, delivering the news that some property owners have created since hearing the entire county was re-assessed this year.

The number of property tax bills being mailed this year, 25,834, represent an increase of 274 over 1994. The increase resulted from the creation of new parcels through subdividing and the break-up of some ranches or larger tracts, said County Treasurer Joan Park.

The state-mandated reassessment drove the taxable value of property in the county up about 18% from $279 million in 1994 to $326.5 in 1995. Residential values totalled $213.2 million and non-residential, $113.2 million.

The new development, alongside a slight increase in old values, will generate $9,425,208 in property taxes for the county this year compared to $9,050,969 for 1994.

About $150 million in taxable property value was lost to the county because of exemptions claimed by property owners, said Doug Whittaker of the county assessor's office.

A $2,000 exemption for families living in the county and owning a home was granted to 2,055 applicants and totalled $3.9 million.

Veterans claimed nearly $2 million in exemptions. Non-profit groups and churches filed for nearly $4.6 million in exemptions.

Property taxes are delinquent if not paid within 30 days after the due date of Nov. 10 for the first half and April 10 for the second half.

Taxes of less than $10 can be paid in halves. Interest will accrue at 1% per month. A minimum penalty of $5 will be charged on delinquent taxes.

To protest any aspect of the tax bill, the first half of the tax must be paid before Dec. 10. A claim for refund then may be filed in district court in Carrizozo by Jan. 9.

For more information about the tax statement, call the treasurer's office at (505) 648-2397. Questions about the assessed value of the property should be directed to the assessor's office at (505) 648-2306.

TALE OF THE TRAIL

□ New Orleans woman keeps diary of Cowboy Symposium ride

(Following is a diary kept by Henri Hall on her three-day Lincoln County Cowboy Symposium trail ride last week. She is a Times-Picayune columnist in New Orleans, La.)

Roy Rogers never had it so good! The Lincoln County Cowboy Symposium Trail Ride was scheduled to meet bright and early on a cold, crispy Tuesday morning in the Ruidoso Downs parking lot at 8 a.m. We arrived at 7 a.m. What can I say? We were among the city slickers.

"We" constituted the following four cowgirls: Cheryl Frischhertz, Phyllis Taylor (who owns Circle Bar West in Tinnie), and Henri Hall (yours truly), all from New Orleans; and Cille Dickinson of Lincoln. We called ourselves The Bad Girls.

The festivities had commenced the night before with a "Getting to Know You party" at the Enchantment Inn. Everyone was greeted with warm smiles, cold drinks, delicious hors d'oeuvres, delightful entertainment and great big "howdys." Later that night, we dreamed of straddling a saddle and riding into the wild, wild west.

Forget having a good hair day and perfect makeup. We had to haul horses, tack, feed, tents and personal belongings to our rendezvous. It all seemed impossible. How were we going to pack champagne, wine, caviar, margaritas, brie cheese, Pepperidge farm cookies and other bare necessities into those tiny little saddlebags?

Excitement began to reach a crescendo as other horse trailers and numerous riders began to fill the pseudo arena. Buck Reams, coordinator of the event, gathered all the wanna-bes around and distributed hand-tooled leather name tags to all participating buckaroos. The souvenir nametags broke the ice.

Immediately, we were all new best friends.

Gene Melton of Ruidoso was assigned the role of fearless leader and was assisted on the ride by Terry Rodebush and Will Burgess of Graham, Texas; Caroline Ames and Julio Miller of Ruidoso Downs; and Gene Melton's son, Shane (yes, he's named after the movie "Shane" starring Alan Ladd).

Buck Reams of Graham was the wagon boss, and Cecil Chino was our guide through the Mescalero Apache Reservation.

Others on the three-day ride were Jug and Jason Cox of Fort Worth, Texas; Bobby Beans from Sophia, N.C.; Jimmy and Doyleene Hopson of Gatesville, Texas; Funtain Stewellen, Gay Harris and Marcie Flowers of Ruidoso; Ann Pollard Kinnan and Joe Kinnan of San Patricio; and Jena Hall of Capitan.

Cowboy Scrimshiere supplied the steady steeds for the various novices and wranglers without mounts.

Everyone was chomping at the bit to hit the Mescalero Indian Reservation and began to holler "Hi-ho Silver" when alpha leader Melton gave the signal to move out single file. As we were perfecting our jog-trot, I overheard Cheryl hissing to one of our trail bosses, "I am not interested in the difference between a cinch strap and a breast strap. Just tell me everything I need to know that will save my life."

As our caravan rambled up into the scenic mountains, the trees began to take on a richer shade of green, the blue sky seemed more intense, the air smelled sweeter and the bustling highway — along with time — ceased to exist. One of our faithful ramrods soon spotted an oasis at high noon, denoting it was time to dismount and enjoy a little sustenance. Will, the keeper of our trusty pack horse, supplied us with cool libations but we were hungry for more. The dinner bell rang. Lunch! Cowpokes dashed to the spread.

"Where are the napkins and utensils?" I asked.

"What'd you say?" Jerry responded. "I was married for 15 years, so I'm hard of hearing."

"Just cowboy up," grinned Buck, his blue eyes twinkling.

That was just enough motivation for Cille to tear off a narrow piece of cardboard to dip into a jar of mayonnaise. We had utensils.

Moans and groans filled the grove when Melton, Sr., threw his leg over his new gray gelding. His motion meant that we had to follow suit.

"How long does the soreness last?" cried Doyleene and Jimmy.

"It disappears after a hot bath," replied Bobby.

"What hot bath?" screamed Doyleene as she stared at her unforgiving saddle.

There was gorgeous country at every turn and when we settled down at the end of our first day in the Land of Enchantment, our site was picturesque.

Buck had parked the Hollywood movie chuckwagon under a white canvas tarp. He had a dugout burning with bright red coals and began to pull out Hulk Hogan-sized black cast iron pots and pans in every shape imaginable. Pamela Melton and Jeanne Sanderson appeared as sous chefs for Buck and Terry. They began to chop, bake and cook. The Bad Girls began to sip champagne, savor appetizers and chill wine for dinner. How else were we going to be able to put up our tents and the picket line for our horses?

As we debated our dilemma, young Shane sauntered up to our campsite. We all stared at each other and smiled.

The dinner bell rang out once again (I was already learning to salivate at the sound, just like the dog in Pavlov's theory). What a spread! There was golden chicken-fried steak, country gravy, fresh green beans, garlic mashed potatoes, biscuits and bubbly peach cobbler.

Oh well, I thought, I'll ride it off tomorrow.

After the last bit of cobbler was devoured, Nathaniel Chee, member of the Apache Tribe and authentic medicine man, introduced everyone present to the ceremonial dance of the Mountain Gods. Five Mescalero Indians appeared in full dress and full black body paint and proceeded to dance and chant around a bonfire that was larger than life. It was fascinating to watch — almost ethereal. When the religious ritual was over, Chee invited us to dance to the rhythmic beat of the drums. We were thrilled.

The next morning, we were awakened by the delicious aroma of fresh, black coffee and the panicked voices of Jug and Jason. Horses had eluded father and son. Cecil and Funtain volunteered to help Jug in his search. They all split up and, within 20 minutes, Chino returned with two four-legged prodigals. Of course, then we had to go and look for Funtain and Jug.

After the dust settled, we enjoyed a hearty breakfast of scrambled eggs with sausage, peppers, onions, tomatoes and piping hot flour tortillas. Phyllis took a bite and said, "Why does everything taste so good when you are outdoors?" No one could answer, we just kept on stuffing our faces.

The greenhorns and the experts kept plowing through the brush. They came upon a vast and beautiful plain that looked like a scene from the movie "Dances with Wolves." It was breathtaking. We rode through that unique plain dotted with yellow wildflowers and stopped for lunch on Dub Williams' ranch.

The smell of singed hair hung in the air as we roped and branded a small herd of Williams' calves. We were getting seasoned.

We bid Williams adieu and set out to look for that evening's camp. After all, it was our last night on the trail and we still had a few bottles of Kendall Jackson to kill. Our leaders found one more gorgeous place to light. It was a lushly wooded area with just enough clearing for our mess tent.

"This is awesome," Joe said emphatically. And we all agreed.

After a banquet of charbroiled ribeye steaks, sliced potatoes, sour-creamed corn with chile, biscuits and chocolate sauerkraut cake, all of the bow-legged riders sat around the crackling campfire and listened to the poems and songs delivered by Cowboy Symposium founder Ray Reed, Buck, Funtain, Will and Jena. Jena treated us to her latest composition, "I Don't Dream Any More."

The Bad Girls enjoyed the entertainment in style. Bobbie Fincannon had come up the trail carrying crystal, long-stemmed wine glasses.

After a long night of wine and song, Cille and I decided to sleep under the stars. No tent. We were getting crusty.

My bunkmate and I were rudely awakened early the next day by Gene when he yelled, "Whose mascara is this?"

"What kind is it?" yelled back Gay.

Gene answered with great trepidation, "May-be-lina, and it's not my color."

We could hardly wash our faces much less try to apply mascara, so we decided to eat breakfast instead. Bacon beats mascara any time.

It was our final day. We did not want this fantasy-come-true to end. Unbeknownst to us, the best was yet to come.

Buzzwords like "steep" and "Snowy River" were overheard coming from the mouths of repeat riders. Our surefooted equines kept on climbing. I knew what was ahead and was eager to meet the challenge again. All at once, we were at the top of an extremely steep grade, staring over the edges of our stirrups, down into a very small crevice.

"How do we get down there?" squealed Gay.

"In single file and nicely spaced apart," retorted Terry.

Everyone obeyed. However, no one wanted to get behind Marcie. Her mare had a bright red ribbon attached to her tail. By the third day, we all knew what that meant:

a kicker.

Marcie graciously volunteered to be last, and we were off. You could hear "ya-hoes" and "yee-haws" all through the valley. The cowboys and the cowgirls were having a hoot, just like The Man from Snowy River — we had pushed the edge of the envelope.

As we forged along, the path became narrower and narrower. Ann suggested we send Will up ahead to blaze a trail. The ice chests on his pack horse were cutting a wide swath through the woods. We learned that chaps do serve a purpose. They are not just for looks.

Our final pastoral pleasure was a large meadow covered with thick, green grass. What temptation. The Bad Girls committed one last deed together. We collected our trusted horses and cantered across the field. Heaven. It was tantamount to riding Pegasus. We came to a halt, turned onto a road and confronted reality in the form of a freeway.

Disappointment and melancholia set in. But as our horses walked onto the grounds at the Cowboy Symposium at Glencoe, I looked at Caroline in her black and yellow leather chaps, she's a former barrel racer and now resides in this wondrous territory. I glanced over at Gene with his dog Rowdy yapping at his horse's hooves. And I felt privileged that I had the opportunity to ride alongside special individuals just like them.

It made me proud, so I straightened up my shoulders, sat tall in the saddle and held my head high as we led our horses past the envious crowds.

filed the suit. "I think we will reach a settlement," he said. "This is a serious situation. Tree harvesting for fuelwood provides employment in the county."

That type of activity has little in common with large timber operations that cut down whole stands of trees.

A commercial fuelwood permit could go for as low as $10 after the bidding is finished, he said.

They bid for the permits and what they pay depends on a lot of factors like where it's located, how easy it is to reach, the size of the wood, the amount of wood and how much extra work we ask for," Hawkes said. "Often we ask them to fall smaller trees that they can't really use and we mark other ones to be saved that they'd like to cut."

The Forest Service has been trying to work out a solution, Hawkes said. Staff compiled a list of more than 900 activities determined to not affect the owl or its habitat. The list includes trail construction, prescribed burning, timber stand improvement, road maintenance, campground construction, fire protection, personal use Christmas tree cutting, and removal of hazard trees.

The list was submitted Sept. 7 to the groups that filed the original suit.

Since the owl was listed as endangered, the Forest Service has consulted with the Fish and Wildlife Service on every timber harvest action, said Pat Jackson of the Service's Southwestern Region Public Affairs Office in Albuquerque.

Projects were changed to protect the owl. The Forest Service has been updating its plans using the best available scientific information. It started formally consulting with the Fish & Wildlife on projects last July.

Johnston contacted the D.A.'s office about prosecuting the case, but hasn't received an answer.

"I feel this has to do with my relationship to God," he said. "Who's going to stand up for right or wrong in this city, state, country? Who's going to help us make these stands?"

As the status was sculpted into distinct images, Johnston became increasingly alarmed that the village government or police were not doing anything to screen it from view.

Johnston went to village hall and learned there is no ordinance prohibiting what Garrett was carving. He then checked with the police department and was told Garrett was not violating any village laws.

Meanwhile, the father of two witnessed other children staring at the statue and found himself questioning whether he would want his children to have sexual material forced on them before they're ready.

He likened the statue's display before children to giving a small child a Playboy magazine before it's ready to understand sexual concepts.

The material may confuse a child, and that can be harmful, he said.

"It's not up to the public to decide when it's time to teach kids about life like that," he said.

With the state statute in hand, Johnston approached Pastor Vinson and suggested they take a stand against the sculpture.

"Candee has made a statement, and now it's our turn," Johnston said.

Vinson has contacted other area churches which will join the plaintiffs during the trial, Johnston said.

Mescalero man pleads guilty to knife attack

Nathaniel Chae, Jr., 34, of Mescalero, pleaded guilty in U.S. District Court in Albuquerque Oct. 17 to assault causing serious bodily injury.

Chae admitted to assaulting and seriously injuring Jennifer Ann Lester on May 14 on the Mescalero Indian Reservation, said U.S. Attorney John J. Kelly in a press release.

Apparently upset over a complaint Lester filed against him, Chae arrived at Lester's home on the evening of May 14 and attacked her with an eight-inch long knife, cutting her hand as she protected her face from the assault, Kelly said.

Lester's children witnessed the assault and yelled at Chae to leave their mother alone. Chae then pulled Lester outside by the hair to a nearby ravine. As Lester screamed, Chae ripped off her shirt and stuffed it into her mouth. He then hit her on the neck and head with the knife handle, Kelly said.

Lester fell and Chae then kicked and stabbed her, cutting her hand and slapping her abdomen. The knife broke and Chae ran away, Kelly said. He was later arrested after one of Lester's children notified the police.

Chae is scheduled to be sentenced by U.S. District Court Judge Santiago Campos on Jan. 3, 1995. The maximum sentence is 10 years imprisonment and a $250,000 fine. The case was investigated by the Federal Bureau of Investigation and will be prosecuted by Assistant U.S. Attorney James T. Martin.

Input sought for Pecos water plan

A meeting for public input on the Pecos River Basin regional water plan is set for 10 a.m. Tuesday in Ruidoso Downs Village Hall.

The plan could impact water users throughout the Hondo Valley area.

The session is sponsored by the Pecos Valley Water Users Organization.

Geronimo trial reset for third time

For the third time, Joseph Geronimo's trial on a charge of disturbing the peace has been rescheduled.

The Mescalero Apache political activist was scheduled to face a jury Wednesday, but a tribal court clerk said a new date would be picked for some time in mid-November.

Last June, Geronimo loudly objected when a Ruidoso News reporter was asked to leave a Mescalero tribal council meeting. He subsequently was charged with disturbing the peace. However, that didn't stop him from running for the post of council vice president. He drew the second highest number of votes in a primary election earlier this month, and will face former vice president Keith Miller in the general election Nov. 7.

Conviction on the charge would carry a maximum sentence of one year in jail and a $5,000 fine.

Hospital trustees vote on use of state open meetings act

Lincoln County Medical Center trustees will vote whether to comply with the state's open meetings law at their meeting tonight.

The hospital board sometimes closes sections of its meetings to the public that would not be allowed to be closed under the New Mexico Open Meetings Act.

Business Women's Week proclaimed

Mayor Jerry Shaw of Ruidoso has proclaimed the week of October 15-21 as "Business Women's Week" in conjunction with an annual event sponsored by the National Federation of Business and Professional Women (BPNW/USA).

Anyone interested in learning more about BPNW or establishing a local BPNW organization is encouraged to contact the mayor's office at 258-4343.

Lincol White is 80 years young

More than 100 loved ones and friends gathered Oct. 18 at the home of Lincol White to help him celebrate his 80th birthday.

Among those present were sisters Ruth Taylor, Veralee Pritchard, Betty Caudell, and Margaret Garrett; brother Johnnie White; daughters Patty Jensen, Nancy Richardson, Louise James, and Nina Mimer; and son, Lincol White Jr., also known as "Tommy." Many of his grandchildren and great-grandchildren were also on hand. In all, Lincol has 17 grandchildren, 36 great-grandchildren, and three great-great-grandchildren.

A large birthday cake, decorated with pine trees, horses and deer, was shared by the folks. Lincoln gave me a large slice to take home.

For a birthday present he received a rocker reclining chair from all his kinfolks. His sister Nancy gave him a long work table that was set in front of the main window of his living room, so during the winter he can work on his jewelry and "watch the world go by," as Nancy said.

Lincol's jewelry shows authentic quality and originality, and brings out his appreciation of Native American culture.

Regarding his reclining chair, Lincol says, "This will come in handy later on when I get old."

And so our good friend remains ever young and an inspiration to all of us, and we wish him many happy returns of the day, and all God's blessings.

Winged Messengers Welcome the Approach of Indian Summer

On the morning of the 15th, under a sky of the bluest of the blue with the first of the autumn leaves shining in the golden sun, the first stellar jay of the year appeared in the pathway to the door.

This bird of dark blue with a black Scotch cap is a citizen of the pines and spruce and aspen. At this time of year he comes down to spend some time cheering the vale through the winter.

Just a few minutes later, here came the first snowbirds of the year a week or so early. Then the woodpecker began hammering his tattoo on the side of the house, trying to make himself a winter home.

Indian summer, that little season-within-a-season, begins after the first heavy frost which brings the latest of the leaf colors out in full radiance. Then the world is in a lull, a dreamy spell of warm sunny days of purple hills and leaf colors of every hue.

All as if the march of the seasons had come to a pause to celebrate.

Usually by this time Indian summer is here, because the first hard frost arrives here in the vale on Oct. 8 or 10.

On the 15th, only the box elder, cottonwood, and walnut were dressed in their fall colors, with the oakbrush barely turning light orange.

Indian Summer in the Mountain Land

Indian summer in our mountain land is something all our own.

We have something of the lower country blending with the features of the hills and mountains — thereby presenting an autumn color-palett of special charm.

The colors move up the valleys to assemble at the mountain, and we see the lemon yellow of the wild grape vine, the gold of the aspen, the crimson of the woodbine and mountain maple, the copper-bronze of the oaks and the many colored tapestry of the oakbrush — all like an endless pattern of mountain autumn leaf jewelry set in a background of evergreens high and low on every hand.

The Birds of Happiness

Coming home in mid-afternoon, just west of the corral, I saw a small flash of dark blue flying from the power lines over to the cedars — the western bluebird arriving to celebrate Indian Summer and early winter here in Storm Vale.

Let us thank our Lord for the approach of Indian Summer and all His many great blessings, and let us all be a blessing in the lives of others.

Ruidoso's asst. fire chief sentenced in elk shooting

by KATHLEEN McDONALD
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Ruidoso's assistant fire chief was sentenced in magistrate court Tuesday for allegedly shooting at an elk from his vehicle.

Robbie Hall pleaded no contest to the petty misdemeanor criminal complaint filed by game warden Ron Moore.

Hall said after the sentencing that there "was no truth" to the road hunting charge.

However, he didn't want to go through the "problem of hiring a lawyer and all the other stuff," so he entered the no contest plea, he said.

Judge William Butts sentenced Hall to 180 days of probation, and a $500 fine with $250 suspended.

"Shooting from the road is not very sportsman-like and it's a clear violation of the Department of Game and Fish rules and regulations, and the law," Butts said.

The no contest plea means Hall is not admitting guilt, but doesn't want to contest the charge.

"But, as far as the state's concerned, a no contest plea is the same as a guilty plea," Butts said.

Hall could have been sentenced to a maximum six months in jail and a $500 fine.

His firearm and vehicle could also have been seized by the state. A witness to the alleged shooting complained Hall fired at a bull elk while still inside his vehicle on a Rancho Ruidoso dirt road.

Moore could not be reached Wednesday or Thursday morning about what allegedly happened to the elk, and whether Hall had a proper elk hunting tag.

"Shooting from the road is not very sportsman-like."

WILLIAM BUTTS
JUDGE

The neighbor's complaint was made Oct. 7, the same day as the alleged shooting. Moore filed the charge with the court Oct. 13.

Hall came to court without a scheduled hearing Tuesday after being notified of the complaint by Moore.

"I just wanted to get it over with, make it up to my neighbors, didn't want to hurt anyone's feelings and so that's what I did," he explained yesterday.

Tigers declawed

by LAURA CLYMER

Ruidoso News Sports Writer

Backed by a charged-up crowd that created a playoff-type atmosphere, the Ruidoso girls volleyball team survived another demon Tuesday.

The Warriors got the better of Hot Springs in a five-set marathon match, 15-11, 6-15, 14-16, 19-17 and 15-4. Just a month earlier, Hot Springs won a five-game match in Truth or Consequences.

In the past week, the Warriors have knocked off two teams that have haunted them in the past — Silver and now Hot Springs.

Tuesday's win improved the Warriors to 14-3 overall and 6-1 in District 3AAA play. Hot Springs fell to 4-3 in district play. Ruidoso and Silver are tied for first place with 6-1 district records.

Ruidoso can lay claim to the district title if it wins its final two district matches — Saturday against Cobre and Tuesday versus Silver.

Tuesday's match with the Hot Springs Tigers featured amazing comebacks by both teams and plenty of emotion.

Much of that emotion poured onto the floor when students and fans mobbed the Ruidoso players after the final point of the three-hour-long match.

"They (the Warriors) just didn't throw the towel in," said Ruidoso's first-year coach Jauna Sanchez. "They made a commitment (to win the district) and they showed they can do it."

The Warriors had five opportunities to "throw the towel in" during the fourth game. Down two games to one and trailing 14-8 in the fourth game, Ruidoso battled back to a 14-14 tie. Before tying the game at 14, Sanchez called her last timeout when the Warriors trailed 14-13.

The team had talked about winning the district title and this was its last chance to do it; it was do or die, Sanchez reminded the team in the middle.

"Do" they did. Sanchez's team fended off five would-be match points in the fourth game before Amber Livingston's ace gave the Warriors the game at 19-17 and a brand new life.

"Whoever won that fourth game was going to win the match," Sanchez said.

The Warriors rode the momentum from the come-from-behind win in the fourth game to a relatively easy 15-4 victory in the decisive fifth game.

After the match, Sanchez handed out praise to her team and the home crowd. The fans, high school band and cheerleaders gave the Warriors an edge with their enthusiastic cheering, Sanchez said.

Ruidoso used a balanced offensive attack to beat the Tigers. Four Warriors were in double digits for kills.

Livingston led the team with 16 kills. Sheryl Dockery and Heather Stover had a dozen kills each and Angelica Figueroa added 11 kills.

Stover, who sets most of the time, gave the Warriors another consistent hitter to use. The senior setter/hitter will find herself on the attack more often because of her hitting ability, Sanchez said.

Ruidoso wasn't as sharp from the service line. The Warriors committed 15 service errors. Although those errors hurt Ruidoso, it didn't kill them.

"We won and I'm very proud of them (the team)," Sanchez said.

Also proud are the Warriors' classmates and fans who celebrated the victory with the team. It was a well-deserved celebration.

Rising phoenix

After the ouster of its coach and a year of turmoil, the Ruidoso girls volleyball team has returned to its winning ways of the past

by LAURA CLYMER

Ruidoso News Sports Writer

Ruidoso's return to the top of the district volleyball standings might surprise some people. Even the Warriors are a bit surprised — for good reason.

Ruidoso finished 8-10 last year and didn't make it out of the district playoffs. With essentially the same core of players, the Warriors are 14-3 thus far this year.

Like a phoenix, the team has risen from the ashes of controversy and upheaval of just a year ago. The Warriors have put the past behind them, and thanks to a new coach found renewed confidence in their abilities.

But the trip hasn't been easy. Coach ousted

In May 1994, former Ruidoso coach Jody Blanton was "reassigned" by Superintendent Mike Gladden. The Ruidoso School Board backed Gladden's decision in July, despite more than 300 petition signatures from local supporters.

Blanton was a strict, demanding coach, yet popular with her players. She was also successful in her five years with the team; the Warriors won the state championship in 1990.

Blanton initially fought the decision to remove her as coach of the Warriors but kept her on the Ruidoso teaching staff. The ensuing battle between Blanton and the school district was not pleasant. Blanton filed an injunction against the district to prevent it from replacing her. The lines were drawn, and the players in the volleyball program were caught in the middle.

Ruidoso eventually hired a replacement for Blanton, former boys basketball coach Sid Wright. But Wright resigned after two days of practice and former girls basketball coach Janie Roland was saddled with the responsibility.

Neither Wright nor Roland was prepared to coach volleyball — both were hired to coach basketball. The girls on the team knew this, and the situation escalated from unpleasant to downright ugly.

Angelica Figueroa remembers her first volleyball practices in the fall of 1995. Figueroa was new to the Warrior volleyball program. Her family moved to Ruidoso from Santa Fe. It didn't take her long to realize she had transferred to a program in turmoil.

"When I came here it seemed like a bunch of chaos. The first day I walked in I saw a coach get mouthed back at, two girls walk off — quit because they didn't feel like running. I could tell right away we were going to have some big problems," Figueroa said.

"I felt really sorry for everybody here because from all the articles and from what I had already heard before I even stepped on the court, coach Blanton was a really, really nice coach and the girls loved her a lot," Figueroa said. "And then when they (school administrators) threw them some coach who didn't even want to be there, of course they (the players) are going to rebel. Anyone in their right mind would rebel."

"Last year, all the fun was taken out of the game. It wasn't a game anymore."

Small-town politics

Figueroa was new to the program, but seniors Heather Stover and Amber Livingston had played for Ruidoso since middle school. Both are three-year starters.

It was Blanton and Ruidoso Middle School coach Robin Johnson who first planted the seed in Livingston's, Stover's and their Warrior teammates' minds that this team would win the Class AAA state title — that was when Amber and Heather were eighth graders.

After last year's fiasco, both girls agree without hesitation they feel cheated.

"Nobody really knows the whole story except for the school board. They didn't even tell the coach (Blanton) what she was fired for," Stover said.

Both also agree the players were pawns in a political game.

"Politics plays a part in every small town," Livingston said. "I think it plays a part every year. I think it's playing a part right now. I don't think there is ever going to be a year when politics doesn't play a part."

These two seniors — both crucial to the Warriors' success — seem wise beyond their years when they talk about the situation that led to Blanton's ouster. Yet, with all that has happened, they aren't bitter. Livingston doesn't blame last year's coach, Roland.

"We have become more independent without having to look over and say to a coach, 'What did I do wrong?'" Livingston said. "The Warriors learned self-motivation among other things, she added.

This year's coach, Jauna Sanchez, has been instrumental in helping her team put last year's woes behind it.

The past is the past

Sanchez had an idea of what she was getting into when she accepted the volleyball coaching job at Ruidoso.

"I just knew that they had been through a tough time," Sanchez said. She knew she would be some of the players' fourth coach in four years.

She didn't adjust her approach to the team, however, regardless of the team's previous successes or failures. Sanchez acknowledged what had happened, but insisted the team put the past in the past.

Her positive feedback and emphasis on team play has restored the confidence of the Warriors.

"We've always had six individuals instead of one team. Now we have one team instead of six individuals," Stover said.

Figueroa added, "We were moping around the court (one practice), moving in slow mo and she said, 'Don't even think about stepping on this court unless you are going to have fun.'" Figueroa noted the twist on words.

"Usually they say, 'Don't step on the court unless you're going to give 100%,'" Figueroa related.

The turning point

Players and coach agreed the turning point for the Warriors came at the Habel Tournament in early September. After losing their opening match in the tourney, Sanchez and the team had a heart-to-heart talk. The Warriors responded by winning four straight and the tourney title.

"I could have told you during summer open gym these girls had talent to be good. But talent and putting it all together are totally different stories," Sanchez said.

After crucial district victories over rivals Silver and Hot Springs, it seems the Warriors have found the right formula.

The Warriors have their core with Livingston and Stover. The addition of Figueroa last year and Sheryl Dockery this year solidified the Warriors both mentally and physically.

"These girls get along. I never see them yell at each other on the court," Sanchez said, adding the team has "bonding" sleepovers on nights before weekend matches.

Sanchez doesn't mind that the Warriors think they will win the state tournament.

"In this case I think it's good. We need as many positive players as possible."

"These girls are good athletes, great kids. I like them a lot. I consider myself lucky," Sanchez said.

After a year of turmoil and lost confidence, the team's faith is restored. A phoenix is rising in Ruidoso: it's the Warrior volleyball team.

CAPITAN

Saturday discipline session OK'd for Capitan students

by DIANNE STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Capitan students might want to think twice before they violate the Capitan School District discipline code.

From now on, they'll be spending Saturday mornings at school to pay for their transgressions. They no longer will be able to work off that strike against them by serving a day of in-school suspension (ISS) during the regular school week.

And students assigned to Saturday ISS will not be able to participate in any athletic event or extracurricular activity that day or evening.

The Saturday ISS will be assigned when a student is tardy to the same class four times, said High School Principal Darrel Stierwalt. The classes where that occurs most frequently are first period and fifth period, right after lunch.

Other violations that would result in ISS include showing disrespect for the staff, using profane or offensive language, insubordination, failure to follow reasonable directives, leaving school at lunch (middle school only), failing to report after school for assigned detentions, inappropriate behavior in the cafeteria and truancy.

The first Saturday session is set for Nov. 4, Stierwalt said. He received permission from the Capitan School Board Thursday after explaining that some students deliberately were violating rules to be sent to ISS (in-school suspension).

They use the day cut-off from friends as an extended study hall to catch up on assignments, read books or write book reports. It also serves as a way to avoid a deadline in class, he said.

The burden then is thrown onto teachers, who have to repeat lessons and work with the students who miss regular classes.

"We've had ISS for a number of years for discipline or tardies, but we discovered recently that some were using it as a means of catching up on homework," he said. "They were intentionally doing something not too bad, but enough to break the discipline code."

Teachers will be paid $15 an hour to supervise the Saturday ISS sessions that will run from 8 a.m. to noon at the high school. Students from the middle school and high school will fall under the new approach, Stierwalt said.

"If a student fails to show up for the Saturday session or is late, they will be suspended from school for a day the following Monday," he said.

Employment will not be accepted as an excuse for missing the Saturday ISS. A second violation (missing or being late for ISS) will result in three days of out-of-school suspension (OSS), a third violation in six days of OSS.

Parents will be notified of the change by letters sent home with students next Monday and an insert for the student handbook, Stierwalt said.

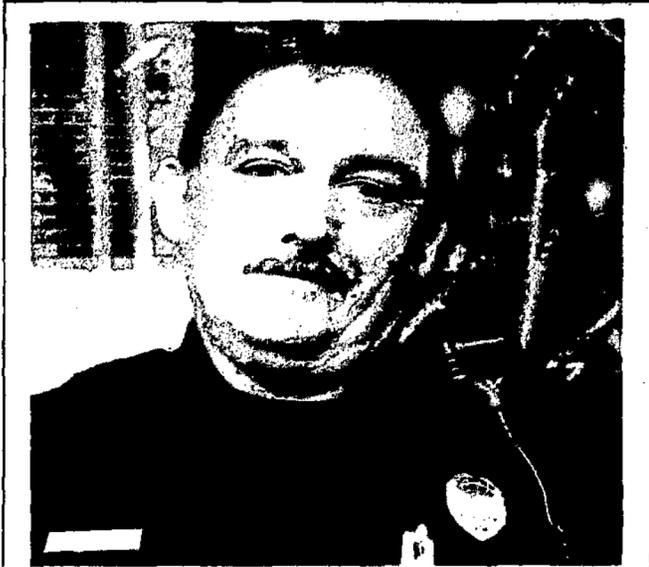

"The board wanted to be sure ample time was given to notify the parents before we started," he said.

Board members Jim Hobbs and Russell Shearer stressed notification since parents may have to drive the student to the school Saturday morning. Involving parents in the punishment may be an extra bonus to ensure the students don't repeat the mistake, Stierwalt said.

"I think this is a real positive thing," he said. "I'm real sure that the board allowed it. This way it takes up their time, instead of the school's time. They don't miss any classes. I think we'll see some student behavioral changes."

In other business Thursday, the school board took under consideration a request by the Music Boosters to purchase 10 more band uniforms for $4,908.

Supt. Dianna Sonnemaker said no money is available. The district won't know until February whether it will receive more money from the state than budgeted.

Capitan's new chief

Carol Durbin is on the job as Capitan's new police chief. He was hired in September to take over for Tony Cano, who resigned. Durbin is a rancher who formerly worked with the Roswell Police Department.

Skaters to be banned

Skateboards and rollerblades could be confiscated if used on Capitan School District property, under a proposed new district rule.

A prohibition against skateboards and rollerblades on district property was discussed Thursday by the school board members.

Because of the district's liability for any injury on grounds and its goal of providing a safe environment for students, a ban against skateboards and rollerblades may be imposed during school hours, after school and on weekends.

Under the proposal, students would be warned of the violation the first time. Skateboards and rollerblades would be confiscated on the second and subsequent offenses. Parents would be contacted to arrange a conference and the return of the student's property.

On the third offense, the student also would be given one day of out-of-school suspension.

Best friends

Five fourth graders who are best friends gather at the top of a jungle gym in the playground of Capitan Elementary. The happy troupe spends recess and lunch time together. They try to work on class assignments together and talk on the phone after school hours. Tommy Aldaz, the lone boy in the group, said he doesn't mind the all-female company. Solid waste authority seeks grants

By DIANNE STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Hoping for some financial help on major projects, the Lincoln County Solid Waste Authority approved two grant applications Monday.

The first, in the form of a resolution to the state Environment Department (ED), urged approval of a $609,000 grant application for the regional landfill operated by the authority and its neighboring counterpart, the Otero County Solid Waste Authority.

The money would be used to purchase new equipment and to open a new cell for disposal at the landfill south of Alamogordo.

The second application to the ED is for $310,000 to pay for the closure of the authority's debris landfill at Capitan and setting up an alternative processing center to handle the material.

Former authority general manager

Joe Lewandowski submitted a summary of two approaches for the landfill at Capitan.

If the board decides to keep the landfill open, it would have to acquire more land; complete a new permitting process with hearings; and construct a new site with roads, fencing and any new requirements imposed by the ED, he said.

The difference between pursuing that course or converting would be less than $20,000; about $474,000 to continue the landfill and $490,000 to start a new procedure, he said.

But if the landfill is kept open and stricter regulations are imposed by the ED, the authority would have to comply, which could be costlier in the long run, Lewandowski said.

"The modification of the (Gavilan Canyon garbage) transfer station would be the most feasible operation to pursue," Lewandowski said. "Only an amendment to the permit would be required. Open-top trailers of at least 117 cubic yards would be positioned for use by customers. No personnel would lose their jobs. The job position would simply change."

A disposal convenience station similar to one in Carrizozo would also need to be constructed, probably in the Capitan area, Lewandowski said.

Lewandowski has contended the landfill at Capitan is no longer needed. The items now dumped at that site can be handled by using recycling techniques, he said. The authority operates one of the most successful recycling operations in the state.

The solid waste authority is a coalition of the county and its five municipalities formed to collect and dispose of garbage countywide.

YOUR HEALTH & FITNESS

By Barbara A. Brehm, Ed. D.

Help yourself:
A strategy for injury prevention

Some risk of injury is part of a high-energy lifestyle. Everyone is at some risk, no matter how old, how fit, how experienced or how careful. Injury can side-line an athlete or turn an avid fitness enthusiast into an exercise dropout.

Injuries that occur suddenly, like a sprained ankle, may be classified as acute. Chronic injuries occur slowly over time. They may begin as mild aches and pains and gradually get worse. Shin splints and tendonitis are examples of chronic sport injuries.

Adult recreational exercisers are more likely to experience chronic rather than acute injuries. These usually result from improper training techniques. The reason we exercise is that the body adapts to appropriate exercise stress by becoming stronger. The physical changes that occur are called the training effect: stronger muscles, a more efficient heart and a better ability to metabolize fat. However, if there is too much stress, the body does not adapt, but weakens and breaks down.

Preventing injury is always easier than treating an injury once it develops, even if prevention means cutting back on how much you are exercising. An injury can keep you out of your exercise program quite a while, and rehabilitation can be a slow and tedious process — not nearly as much fun as your exercise program! The key to avoiding injury is to figure out your own limits and understand how to exercise effectively and safely.

Get in shape before you start an exercise program. Sound crazy? Too often, in their enthusiasm to follow recommendations regarding optimal amounts of exercise, beginning exercisers may do more than their muscles and joints are ready for. Let's say you want eventually to work out on the rowing ergometer for 20 minutes. You may need to begin with five or 10 minutes, building up to an "aerobic duration" gradually.

Don't do too much too soon. In exercise science language, this means increase overload gradually. We challenge our bodies by asking them to do more than they're accustomed to doing. We increase the distance, the pace, the intensity, the weight, the number of repetitions or how long we exercise. This increase, or overload, should be increased slowly. Slow, steady progress is the way to go.

Warm up and cool down. Begin your workout with five to 10 minutes of gentle, repetitive movements involving all muscle groups, gradually increasing the intensity. Warm joints and muscles are less likely to get injured during your workout. Decreasing exercise intensity during cool down helps your body adjust back to resting level.

Recognize warning signs. Some symptoms indicate possible need for immediate medical attention. These include irregular heart beats; pain or pressure in the chest, arm or throat; dizziness, fainting or confusion.

More common are warning signs that you are simply overtraining and need to reduce training volume. These include soreness in muscles or joints, difficulty sleeping, loss of appetite and weight, and fatigue.

Don't ignore pain. Pain is a message that something is wrong. Exercising before an injury has healed, or when an overuse injury is in its early stages, will only slow the healing process and may even cause worse injury.

Invest in good footwear and safety equipment. A good pair of shoes is one of the most important pieces of equipment for almost every activity (except swimming). Be sure the shoe fits you perfectly, and is designed for any problems you may experience, such as pronation.

If your activities require safety equipment, be sure it meets industry safety standards and is as comfortable as possible. For example, people who play squash or racquetball should wear safety glasses. Outdoor cyclists should know how to check their bicycles for safety and wear a good helmet.

If you do get injured, don't let it stop your lifelong commitment to fitness. Most active people have to cope with at least a mild injury from time to time. They must learn to slow down for a while, follow the instructions of their healthcare provider, devote themselves to physical therapy, and do whatever they can to maintain as much fitness as possible while the injury is healing. A lifelong commitment to fitness means doing your best during the rehabilitation process and getting on with your exercise program as soon as (but not before) you're ready.

Ruidoso students' taste buds prefer new lunch lineup

by DON HIXON
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Looking more like a mall food court than a school cafeteria, bright neon signs proclaim a variety of new dining options at Ruidoso High School.

Students and faculty agree that things are better than last year.

"This year we can tell what we are eating," counselor Bob Elder said. "Last year we couldn't tell sometimes."

Aramark Corporation, hired by the school district in June, has initiated changes in the food program which appear to be reducing low participation and budget overruns which previously plagued the program.

"District-wide participation in the food program has increased compared with the same time last year," Ken Weaver told the Ruidoso School Board last week. Weaver, who works for Aramark Corporation, is the Ruidoso schools' new food service director.

Weaver told the board that after 27 days of operation, 32,186 lunches were served in the district versus 27,678 lunches served during the same time last year, a 16% increase.

By far the largest increase in lunch participation was the 168% increase at Ruidoso High School, where the most variety is offered. However, part of that increase is because of the new closed campus rule for freshmen.

RHS students interviewed while eating lunch Tuesday gave overall high marks to the cafeteria changes.

"It's a whole lot better this year than last year," junior Brian Phillips said while munching on Esta Fiesta green enchiladas.

Esta Fiesta, where a different Mexican food is available daily, is just one of the options now available at the high school.

Other options include the addition of the Reality Check Store, Grillworks, Itza Pizza and a snack bar at the high school.

The Reality Check Store offers soft drinks, juices, sandwiches, pretzels, school supplies, and T-shirts.

"This is where I go every day," freshman Carrie Bailey said as she left Reality Check with a bottled iced tea and chips. "It's fast and I like the selection."

The RHS snack bar offers soft drinks, lemon ices, nachos, cheese fries and Frito pies. Grillworks serves hamburgers, fries and chicken sandwiches with a free soft drink.

"The hamburgers are pretty good," one freshman said. "But I still wish we could go off campus."

Itza Pizza offers a choice of several varieties of pizza plus a free soft drink, while Expressway offers a full meal ranging from chicken dishes to Salisbury steak.

"My favorite thing is the pizza," Kevin Hoyt said. "I got the enchiladas today just for a change."

The variety of food seems to have eliminated long cafeteria lines. Students were timed Tuesday as they headed for their food choice of the day. Almost everyone had food and was eating within 12 minutes.

"Last year we had to stand in line for like 30 minutes," junior stay, said Ken Weaver, director of the new food service program.

Middle school lunch numbers are up from 3,374 last year to 4,604 this year, a 33.5% increase. Elementary lunches are up from 14,808 to 15,306, a 3.4% increase.

A la carte offerings instituted by Aramark have resulted in sales increases from $137 last year to $9,965 this year in just 27 days, Weaver said.

Larry Bednors said. "I think they're doing good."

Elementary-level students will also soon have items like fruit juice and ice cream available, but not candy.

"Both fruit juice and ice cream have some nutritional value," Weaver said. "The middle and high school students demand access to candy but we don't want it available at the elementary level."

Aramark has also attempted to educate the kindergarten, primary and elementary students about positive nutritional habits with a costumed character, Bruce the Moose. He traveled to the elementary schools during September with nutritional messages incorporated into a magic show.

Now that the district's new cafeteria program has kicked off, the next target will be lowering food costs, Weaver said.

"Labor costs are fixed by the state but we can make a lot of headway with food costs," Weaver said.

Ruidoso Superintendent of Schools Mike Gladden said he likes the way things are going since Aramark took over.

"At this point I'm optimistic," he told the board. "If you haven't eaten at the cafeterias, you really should."

EDITORIAL

Our dying river needs chance to heal itself

We're killing our river. As it leaves the pristine forest and meanders through Ruidoso, the Rio Ruidoso picks up trash, construction soil runoff, pet feces, lawn fertilizer, septic tank runoff, and municipal sewage treatment leftovers. If it's in town, anywhere, it's likely to eventually end up in the river.

The overload of nutrients from these sources causes wild swings in oxygen and this in turn stresses the trout in the river. The sediment fills holes in the river where trout eggs are hatched and where invertebrates live, taking away the food sources of the fish.

These sources of pollution are hard to see, but the trash isn't. It's everywhere, and sometimes it's been there so long it's beginning to mulch into the ground. Some of this trash is toxic, some just looks horrible. Some gets into the eddies and mixes with sticks, causing a buildup of water like a dam and widening the river, making it even more shallow and uninhabitable for our fish.

People who think they are innocently making dams for their pleasure should think again. This also causes the river to widen and become more shallow.

A couple of fishermen in town are trying to take the first step to put a stop to this murder. Jim Shoop and Dick Ramsey organized a river clean-up day. This year's clean-up begins at 11 a.m. Saturday at Two Rivers Park.

These gentlemen, and others who tirelessly try to clean up after the pigs who shamelessly throw their trash onto the ground, are to be commended.

It remains a mystery why this beautiful state is one of the most trashed states in the country. Why do our people do this to the place they love, when people in other states don't? How do we stop this problem at its source?

The fact is, New Mexico has the most erodible soil in the United States. Those who disturb the soil must move quickly to restore it with grass and native plants. It's obvious to anyone who drives down Sudderth during a rainstorm that tons of mud is washed into the river every time Mother Nature tries to clean it away.

If our fishermen and others notice the river through town has gone from waist-deep to ankle-deep in less than a decade, what will it look like at the turn of the century? Will the sound of water be totally drowned by our carelessness?

Besides joining the effort to clean up the trash — whenever we go to the river, we can take a trash bag along — there are other things we can do. Clean up after your pets. Limit the use of fertilizer. Keep septic tanks in good working order, and don't install them in riparian areas. Local governments can keep their sewage treatment systems in good working order and, as Ruidoso Downs is doing, try to get people with septic tanks on the municipal system. Local governments can also take a hard look at their construction standards to see how well they attempt to reduce runoff.

The Rio Ruidoso is alive; she will heal herself if she can stop choking. Please, give her the chance.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Celebrate Halloween in school

TO THE EDITOR:

WHAT? NO HALLOWEEN?!

Again this year, the elementary schools have decided that there will be no dressing up nor any Halloween activities.

Last year I found out about it too late to stand up and say anything. However, this year I want my feelings to be known.

It is my belief that the whole concept of Halloween has been blown totally out of proportion. Many adults have taken all the fun out of this day and are convinced that it has to be seen as a day that should be thought of as totally bad, and what is worse, have convinced their children of the same (alot can be said for what we can take as good and remold into what is bad).

These same adults are finding dozens of ways to crucify any traditions. What they have done is to take another tradition and totally trash it! I am not a devil worshiper, nor do I look at Halloween as anything but a day children can let their imaginations run wild (as children they are supposed to be able to do this). A few treats and a couple of "Boos" and they are happy.

Oh, I am not kidding myself, there are always going to be those that let things get out of hand. But aren't these the same group that ruin everything else for the majority? Why should we continue to cater to that group that ruins things for everyone else? Why should they always win?

I know that any extra activity, like Halloween puts an extra burden on our educators. However, there must be a way they can incorporate a little Halloween into the classroom for a small part of the day. Possibly they might even figure out a way to make a learning experience out of the whole thing with a little imaginative thinking.

I am not advocating spending a whole day to Halloween, just let the kids enjoy a little tradition, before another tradition is taken away from them. Just let them be kids before they have to grow up to the reality of being adult, living in the real world where you have to justify everything you do or don't do. Remember, not all kids will get to go out to a haunted house, or trick or treat. Let them enjoy something with their friends. For a minute, just remember what it was like to be a kid.

If you have any opinion, please call the elementary schools to let them know what your feelings are. This letter to the editor was the only way I could reach a large group of people so that a majority could be heard for a change, not just the complainers.

Ministers aren't morally bankrupt

TO THE EDITOR:

The recent letter to the editor in this paper attacking our clergy as "morally bankrupt" was quite offensive to me.

Anyone who actually knows any of our clergy is quite aware they don't really need to be defended, but since some people may not, I feel obliged to speak up. In my profession I naturally see a lot of people who are suffering in various ways, physical and spiritual. In many cases I have seen the local ministers help people dramatically by their selfless giving and caring. They do indeed "practice what they preach."

One night while I was working in the emergency room, a young woman was brought in with a fatal gunshot wound to the head. The pastor of the Baptist church came in at 2 a.m. and spent 45 minutes on the telephone with the girl's parents in another state, praying with them and talking to them, and helped them a great deal. No one made him come in and no one paid him for it; they were not of his congregation nor even his denomination.

There are numerous other examples involving many different ministers of various denominations which I won't have space to tell, but I will say the longer I am in my profession, the more respect and admiration I have for theirs.

Morally bankrupt, baloney! The love of God is far better demonstrated by selfless acts of giving and caring than by righteous indignation.

Wrong to cut music teacher

TO THE EDITOR:

I would like to express my feelings concerning the music department in our Capitan schools. Because of budget cuts, according to our board of education and school administration, they had to cut back to one instructor in the music department for the 1995-96 school year (however, I understand that high school enrollment is up this year at least 30 students over last year).

Budget cut? This resulted in the resignation of Delores Earwood, who was the choral director. Mrs. Earwood is a beautiful, competent lady who did a very fine job with our choral group last year. She was told by the administration that she would have to instruct both the marching band as well as chorus for the 1995-96 school year. She felt she could not handle both positions in a school the size of Capitan. She resigned and accepted a position with the Carrizozo Schools, definitely Carrizozo's gain and Capitan's loss.

Some students excel in sports and some excel in the arts and music. There are at least 12 athletic coaches, that I know of, in the Capitan School System. Why can't we strike a happy medium and provide an adequate program for all of the students? I am not implying that Mr. Ellison, our present music instructor, is not doing a good job. I merely want to emphasize that I feel, along with many others I'm sure, that one person cannot do justice to both band and chorus. Why can't we do away with an athletic coaching position if need be and hire a good choral director?

I feel that our Capitan Board of Education and Capitan administration acted very irresponsibly in letting Delores Earwood get away from the Capitan School System.

Not pleased with editorial

TO THE EDITOR:

As a Californian who recently purchased property in Ruidoso, we subscribe to "The News" and receive it here in Oakland. We always look forward to receiving the paper and reading about what's happening in the town we plan to live in one day soon. I was not happy to read your editorial of September 18.

We purchased land at a price we felt was fair to ourselves and the seller - a little pricey by the way. We are leaving California because we no longer need to be near a big stressful city, and property values do reflect, first and foremost, location. Certainly, one of the attractions of Lincoln County is the cost of living, and we were looking forward to the open spaces, and a quiet, wholesome, comfortable, and economical lifestyle; as well as to contribute to the community and its economy.

I take umbrage at your comment that "such buyers are willing to pay a pretty penny in states that don't have California prices." Firstly, we don't have pretty pennies — not all Californians are Hollywood movie stars! We have worked many years to afford peaceful and beautiful surroundings. We were planning to build and live in what we thought a safe, welcoming, wholesome, fair, up-and-coming and prosperous community of people. If Lincoln County is taking advantage of and gouging us, we certainly can find other counties and states in these United States who would welcome a new and good citizenry.

Our decision to settle in Lincoln County was not flippant, and your comments have now caused us to rethink our choice. The people of Ruidoso who I have met seem to have been warm and friendly. I am hoping you are only one individual with this avarice.

Wake up and see Little Theater play

TO THE EDITOR:

Hey fellow Ruidosans and visitors — wake up to one of the best, inexpensive entertainments in town — the Community Theatre's production of "Bell, Book & Candle."

It's a delightful evening with an excellent cast of local talent under the direction of Margaret Norbury. Let's all get with it and support our local theatre along with other local events. The grass isn't always greener on the other side of the fence. Our hometown people have just as much to offer and sometimes more than those in other towns and cities. This beautiful little village has attracted many talented people as permanent residents.

These artisans — whether performers, musicians, writers, artists or craftsmen — need our encouragement and support to keep their talents flourishing and our community special.

"Bell, Book & Candle" will run until Saturday, Oct. 21.
