Fort expands inmate population

BY DIANNE STALLINGS
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

Thirty new women inmates will be arriving in about two weeks at Fort Stanton prison for women. But unlike the prisoners already at the minimum security facility 12 miles northeast of Ruidoso, these women will be kept isolated and behind a security fence.

They are classified as minimum restrict inmates, requiring tighter security.

The situation worries Lincoln County Sheriff Tom Sullivan, who worked in corrections for several years, including at Camp Sierra Blanca when it was a prison for men.

"I'm concerned about the shortage of staff out there," Sullivan said. "They have about 72 inmates there already and these women require more supervision. They may have behavioral or drug problems. They may have been violent offenders."

But Michael Toms, spokesman for the state Department of Corrections, said Wednesday the women will be screened carefully before being sent to Fort Stanton.

"The problem we're having is that our female inmate population is the fastest growing segment in our prisons. It's out-growing the facility in Grants for women."

It will take a couple of weeks to move all 30 of the women to the fort,

"We are looking at moving some minimum restrict inmates there. They will be screened very closely and they will have a record of clear conduct and be on the verge of being made minimum custody," Toms he said.

"We're going to fence in one of the buildings and put them there," Toms said. "Female inmates in general are better behaved, but they're not murderers or things like that. When they're elevated to minimum security, they'll just move over to the general population at the fort."

As far as staffing is concerned, no new positions will be added, he said.

"We originally were set up for 140 inmates and we've never had that," Toms said. "We're always short a cou-

Trustees toss mayor's legal fees

• Downs trustees earlier this week voted against paying almost $8,000 to the attorney who is representing the mayor in a lawsuit against the council.

BY TONI K. LAXSON
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

Though the Ruidoso Downs Council on Monday voted against paying Robert Beauvais' bill of almost $8,000, the Ruidoso attorney said Tuesday he will continue to represent Mayor Joe Hayhurst in a lawsuit against the council.

"I met with the mayor this morning and I assured him I would continue the litigation, and that I fully expected to be paid when the case is concluded," Beauvais said from his office.

The lawsuit, filed by Hayhurst in May, basically asks for a judge's determination whether the Village Council acted properly when dismissing an employee in May. Hayhurst contends the council didn't.

During the council's regular meeting Monday night, trustees unanimously approved paying all the village's bills except for Beauvais', which amounted to $7,670.43.

"We didn't ask to be in this lawsuit," Trustee Margie Morales said before the vote. "And I have a problem with paying Mister Beauvais."

Hayhurst did not make any comment on the council's action Monday night.

Several trustees had been called to testify in a pretrial hearing held in late June. Beauvais filed a motion to force the village into paying the discharged employee, Cathy Olshaskie, who continued to come into work after her dismissal by the council.

The motion was denied, and Olshaskie stopped coming into work, but the hearing obviously rankled some of the village trustees.

"I spent three hours being discredited by this attorney (Beauvais) and I didn't hire him," Trustee Judy Miller said during the council session.

The lawsuit is to be heard by District Court Judge Jerry Ritter in Alamogordo. Judge Karen Parsons of Carrizozo excused herself from the case because she is a former member of the law firm owned by Downs Village Attorney Dan Bryant.

A scheduling conference for the case is set for 8:30 a.m. Aug. 20 in Ritter's court, a court official said Tuesday. A trial date will be set at that conference.

Beauvais said Tuesday he expected the council would reconsider their decision because it didn't seem equitable to pay the attorney representing them but refuse to pay for the mayor's representation in the case. Hayhurst was acting in his capacity as a mayor when he contacted Beauvais, he said.

"The mayor came to me and retained my services in good faith," he said.

River group blames Mescaleros for sediment

Officials at Ski Apache, however, maintain that the Rio Ruidoso is 'running clear here'

BY DIANNE STALLINGS
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

Members of the Ruidoso River Association contemplated the muddy water beneath the deck of the Chamber of Commerce building as they munched vegetable rolls and chicken wings while waiting for the second annual association meeting to begin.

By the time Dick Wisner, one of the four managing directors of the group, got around to the subject of sediment in the water, they didn't need convincing.

Wisner explained last Friday that the association's first thrust 19 months ago was to ensure an adequate flow of water in the stream system to support fish and plant life. That's been accomplished through a series of agreements with the village of Ruidoso to minimize the diversion of water from the stream, he said.

Now the focus of the 643-member association is shifting to water quality.

In the opinion of the association directors, and some state and federal officials, correcting water quality issues will depend to a great degree on the willingness of the Mescalero Apache Tribe and the U.S. Forest Service.

Changes must take place in the handling of sediment loading at Ski Apache recreation area for the river to meet Clean Water Act standards before it enters the village, Wisner said. "The problem is worse than we thought," he said.

The problem at Ski Apache comes from three sources, Wisner said:

- Heavy rain in the summer of 1997 caused a huge erosion cut to open up in the Apache Bowl, which slumped down into the Deep Freeze ski run. It tore out topsoil in the length of the entire run, carrying it downstream.

- A large parking lot covers what used to be the natural settling pond for the sediment from the ski area.

- Makeshift holding ponds constructed by Ski Apache to provide water for snowmaking are overloaded with sediment buildup that is pushed out and discharged downstream whenever it rains.

"Inasmuch as summer rains are inevitable, these ponds must be cleaned out as soon as possible before there is any hope that the Rio Ruidoso is going to meet water quality standards," Wisner said. "Until such time, the Rio Ruidoso will get a mud bath every time it rains."

But Roy Parker, manager of Ski Apache, said Wednesday association officials are operating on incorrect information in some cases, and have reached inaccurate conclusions.

"The creek's been running clear here and there's about six miles between here and Ruidoso," Parker said. "Upper Canyon contributes to (the sediment load) also. We had a flood last year and they will not accept that."

"We're contributing no more silt this year than we have in the past 30 years. Our holding ponds stop silt rather than letting it go by."

No flooding has occurred in Apache Bowl this year like it did last year, Parker said.

"We never had any problems, but last year there were tremendous rains, one in July and then again in August," he said. "We're talking three inches in 1 1/2 hours. The ground was soaked and then there was the down pour in August when everything was destabilized. They keep saying we had a dam break, but we don't have a dam up here."

"It's natural phenomena erosion here and all along the stream."

Parker said Ski Apache has spent a great deal of money to repair the damage from the flood last year.

"We put in a 200-foot-long, seven-foot culvert," he said. "We've put stabilizing mats (that allow grass to grow) all over and above that lift, and regrassed the whole thing. It was

A few days ago C.B. Knowlton fired his six shooter several times at F.M. Crockett, but none of the shots took effect. Knowlton and Crockett own farms near each other on the Rio Bonito, near Angus, and the attack on Crockett grew out of a previous difficulty between Knowlton and two of Crockett's boys, who claim that Knowlton fired his gun at them, accusing them of stealing his apples, as an excuse for wanting to take their lives. Crockett was fired on by Knowlton near the latter's place.

Crockett went to Capitan after officers who arrested Knowlton and took him to Capitan for preliminary hearing. He is now behind bars and the county bastille.

Work will temporarily close Mechem access

BY TONI K. LAXSON
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

Access to driveways and roads on the east side of Mechem Drive will be closed for several hours at a time possibly as soon as next week, road construction officials said recently.

Road crews are slated to start Monday treating soil with lime to make it more stable. Construction officials, deemed the soil under the roadway too clay-like to be a good base.

Access to roads and driveways will be closed for periods of three to four hours while road crews treat portions of Mechem Drive, said Bill Loomis, project manager for Meadow Valley Contractors, the Phoenix firm hired by the state for four highway construction projects in the Ruidoso area.

The treatment process includes mixing lime with the soil and compacting the mixture.

Cars and light vehicles may start crossing over the treated soil safely shortly after the process is finished and the soil is dry, said Ernest Sanchez, project manager with the New Mexico Transportation and Highways Department.

Heavy vehicles, such as semi-trucks, will not be allowed to drive across the treated soil until after it has completely

"set up," officials said. The soil should set between 24 hours and seven days after treatment. A more precise time period will be determined once the process has started, Sanchez said.

Mechem Drive, also called State Road 48, is being widened to add a turn lane and sidewalks. Some parts of the road will be four lanes when finished.

ple of people at all our facilities. That's normal operation for us. We would like to fill all the vacancies and I'm sure they'll do some recruiting."

The prison is authorized for 35 staff members, but is down one sergeant, one corrections officer and two classification officers, he said.

The fort was closed as a state hospital in 1995 by Gov. Gary Johnson and was reopened as a women's prison two years ago. An organization called Fort Stanton Inc. was formed with the goal of turning the fort into a living museum and convention center. The group is trying to raise money to that end.

Van Shamblin, who heads the organization, said, when corrections officials proposed the prison at the fort, they said at several public meetings only minimum security prisoners would be kept there.

"They also were supposed to be out in August 1998 (the end of a two-year lease)," she said. "We always expected it would be extended, but we never expected a different classification of prisoner. They just make and break promises - I don't know."

FEES: Some of the money billed was for work done for the Downs council

$3,646.45, submitted in the month of July, was approved by the council, according to information from village staff.

Hayhurst on Thursday said Bryant also has billed the village $3,785.50 for work his firm did representing the council in the lawsuit.

Bryant had said earlier that he would not represent either Hayhurst or the council in the lawsuit. To do so would be a conflict of interest, because a village attorney works for both the council and the mayor, he said.

Bryant was out of town this week and could not be reached for comment. His associate, Sean Baker, said Bryant found Rhodes to represent the council because of the conflict of interest issue.

Baker said the bill includes work done by the firm to file an entry of appearance on behalf of the council. The document was filed by Bryant's firm because of the way Hayhurst's original complaint was worded, he said, and because no attorney had been found at that time to represent the council.

The bill also includes a court appearance regarding the entry of appearance filing, Baker said. Also included is the work done to subsequently withdraw the entry of appearance documents by the firm, and in finding and hiring Rhodes, Baker said.

RIVER: Association members say it is about the river, not 'us against them'

grassed before. We used to mow up there."

The ponds were cleaned out last year, Parker said. The parking lot has been in place for more than 30 years.

"Last year's floods are ancient history and have nothing to do with what's happening now," he said.

He estimated that 30 percent of the sediment in the stream may come from the ski area, but 70 percent comes from other sources.

"There is a constant erosion going on in any watershed," he said. "There's no way the creek is going to stay clear under any circumstances when it's raining."

The ski resort has moved on its own to rehabilitate the Apache Bowl area, he said.

"For 17 years we had no problem there," Parker said. "There is nothing we can do to contain that kind of water. We are spending a lot of money up there, but no amount of money is going to stop it from coming down when it rains hard."

He has tried unsuccessfully to explain that to association officials, Parker said.

"It's become a battle ground of some kind," he said. "They won't listen to reason."

But Wisner said trying to remove sediment from a river after the fact is a much more daunting task than preventing the flow at the start.

He estimated as much as 60 percent of the sediment in the river originated from Ski Apache.

The association has quietly discussed the problem for the past year with tribal and Forest Service representatives, because the ski resort straddles tribal land and the Lincoln National Forest, Wisner said. But association directors have become frustrated with the slow pace of any changes upstream, he said.

"Inasmuch as these upstream water quality problems are holding us hostage downstream, the RRA has gone so far as to offer to spend some of its grant money on tribal lands," Wisner said during the annual meeting. "Some mitigations have finally begun in the past several months in the Apache Bowl and at the top of Deep Freeze, which appear to be helping, but the parking lot problems and the holding pond problems have at this point received little attention."

"The bottom line is that the RRA will need the cooperation of both of these entities upstream to accomplish our task downstream."

Director Ben Mason said many dirt roads in the community also wash sediment into the river.

He said the past year has been a learning process. "We had to learn what we could and couldn't get," Mason said. "We knew we had to be reasonable in our demands."

On a more positive note, Wisner announced that Mike Massey of the New Mexico Game and Fish Department and Joan Dale Hubbard of the Hubbard Foundation were added to the association advisory board.

ry board.

He reminded members that of the association's three original goals, much has been accomplished in two: improving the quantity of water in Rio Ruidoso and building public awareness of the problem through education and a broad-based, grass-roots organization. Under agreements with Ruidoso village officials, leakage from Grindstone Dam will be pumped back into the reservoir, cutting the need for diversion from the stream system in half.

By varying the water level in Grindstone like a normal reservoir, diversion also will be cut during periods of low flow in the stream, he said.

Those two improvements would have cut the need for diversion in the drought of 1996 by 70 percent to 80 percent, he contended.

"City officials have agreed in principle to protect the river by not diverting during times of low flow whenever possible and will join with the association in constructing a measuring device (on a weir in the river) to determine when flow is low," Wisner said. "They have religiously honored our gentleman's agreement and have shut off (diversion) at times of low flow."

Director Jim Shoop, owner of Fly's Etc., told members the directors asked the Mescalero for permission to use an existing weir structure in the stream just over the reservation line "paid for by U.S. tax dollars" to put up a monitor. But that request was denied a month ago.

Previously, a U.S. Geological Survey monitor was part of the concrete structure, measuring the cubic foot per second flow of the water, he said.

"It's gone now, so there's no historical data available to the village," Shoop said. Had a measuring device been in place, a nearby 16 inch diversion valve could have been closed or opened manually when needed, he said.

The association will put in a new weir about 15 feet from the old one and monitor it at a cost of between $20,000 and $30,000, he said.

The association will carry the brunt of the expense, but the USGA and the village also will financially participate, Shoop said. Grants will be sought, but at some point, association members may be contacted for help.

The association and village are working on common ground now, he said.

"We're the village and they are us," Shoop said. "It's not us against them. Without that jewel (the river), Ruidoso would not be Ruidoso as we know it."

Commission favors safe house for abused kids

BY DIANNE STALLINGS
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

A program to counsel and provide a safe house for abused children apparently hit the right chord with the Lincoln County Commission.

Not only did they approve giving the Otero-based group some surplus computers from the sheriff's office, offered by Sheriff Tom Sullivan, but they also are considering a safe house as a possible project for a Community Development Block Grant (CDBG).

Josie Jaramillo, program director for Kids Inc., said Tuesday she knew the budget for the county's fiscal year already was approved and she didn't expect financial help, just consideration for next year in the form of a building, equipment or monetary support.

County Attorney Alan Morel told commissioners he could draw up a contract spelling out what the county was receiving in services for the contributions.

Jaramillo explained that the program was started in February with the focus of helping children who have been sexually abused. At the safe house, a friendly, as well as safe, environment will be created for interviews with the child. The aim is to protect the child, but also to flag false allegations before they go too far.

The interviews would be videotaped to reduce the likelihood of the child having to repeat the story several times or of being influenced by the interviewers.

"We want to serve Otero and Lincoln County," she said, adding that many local people have to drive to Roswell for programs for such children and that can cause delays during the winter.

The board of directors for the program includes representatives from the state Children, Youth and Families Department and from law enforcement, such as Otero County's victim's advocate and sheriff, and Ruidoso Police Chief Lanny Maddox.

A representative from Otero County's major crime unit said sexual abuse of children or any abuse is heartbreaking to the officers who investigate the cases.

"We need to make it stop," he said. "We must either rehabilitate them (offenders) or put them away so they can't continue to harm these children."

The program was started with a $7,000 grant, the donation of six month rent on a building in Otero County and about $5,000 in video equipment, Jaramillo said.

Later in the meeting, on a suggestion by Capitan resident E.J. Fouratt, commissioners said they would consider the safe house as the project for the CDBG grant, but two other hearings on proposals will take place before they reach a decision. The next will be at 4 p.m. Aug. 25 in Carrizozo.

Torres released on bail

Former Ruidoso police officer Luis Torres, 49, charged with embezzlement and aggravated burglary, has been released on bail again awaiting his preliminary hearing in Ruidoso Magistrate Court.

Lincoln County District Judge Karen Parson approved a stipulated order for a $75,000 property bond after District Attorney Scot Key said he was satisfied that Torres was not a flight risk nor a risk to the community, a court official said.

Both Ruidoso Magistrate Judge William Butts and Carrizozo Magistrate Judge Gerald Dean have excused themselves from conducting the preliminary hearing, if enough evidence exists to send the case to district court in Carrizozo for trial.

The case will be assigned to another magistrate judge within the next 10 days.

Torres, who spent five years with the Ruidoso Police Department and previously served two years as police chief in Belen, is accused of spending money from a lost purse turned into him and of breaking into a local store. He was fired on July 15.

Between the initial embezzlement charge and the burglary charge about two weeks later, Torres also was out on a $75,000 bond on condition that he would stay in his parents' home in Belen. His parents put up a family farm as the guarantee for the bond.

Esquibel pleads guilty to misdemeanor battery, appeals sentence

BY SANDY SUGGITT
AND TONI K. LAXSON
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITERS

A former Ruidoso police officer has pleaded guilty to misdemeanor battery in the 12th District Court in Carlsbad, according to court officials.

Pete Esquibel was fined $500 and sentenced to 30 days in jail. Esquibel, an officer for 11 years, was to have reported to the Lincoln County Detention Center last week to start serving his sentence.

However, Esquibel is out on a $5,000 bond, pending an appeal of two judges' rulings on a motion from Esquibel to have the charges dismissed. Esquibel, in the motion, says he was denied his right to a trial within six months as man-daged by law.

Magistrate Judge William Butts of Ruidoso and District Judge Jay Forbes of Carlsbad, who sentenced him July 31, denied the motion on separate occasions, saying Esquibel was responsible for the delay.

Les Williams, a Carlsbad prosecutor in the case, said Esquibel's attorney, public defender Sam Damon of Alamogordo, must file the appeal with the New Mexico Court of Appeals within 15 days. Damon could not be reached for comment about the appeal.

The state Attorney General's office will handle prosecution if the Court of Appeals elects to hear the case, Williams said; otherwise it will be dismissed and he will have to pay the fine and serve out the 30-day sentence.

Charges stem from an incident at a local restaurant and bar, in February, 1997. At the time, Esquibel, who has testified that he had drunk too much, made advances toward a woman despite her efforts to discourage his attentions.

This will be Esquibel's second appeal. He appealed the case to district court after a jury found him guilty in Butts' court in February.

Esquibel was suspended with pay from active duty with the Ruidoso Police Department the month of the incident. His suspension was removed after a few months, but Esquibel provided the department with a physician's letter saying he was unable to work because of post-traumatic stress and collected disability from the village until January of this year, when the pay ran out, a village official has said.

OUR OPINION

Choose your own cliché

Don't sell clichés short; they wouldn't be called clichés if they hadn't stood the test of time and circumstances. Consider the sequence that culminated Tuesday with a decision by the Ruidoso Village Council to bring aboard a convention sales director: Before the last municipal election, the Ruidoso Valley Chamber of Commerce (a member-owned service agency) operated a Convention and Visitors Bureau under contract with the village, financed largely by the state-collected lodgers tax. (That's a tax, now 4 percent, added to motel and hotel bills and paid by every guest; the tax comes back to local government for use in promoting more tourism.) The chamber, essentially, encouraged Ruidoso tourism and recruited and coordinated events for the convention center.

In tourist-rich Ruidoso, the lodgers tax is substantial revenue, and rising (up some 13 percent so far this year). In some towns in New Mexico, it's a tasty apple municipal governments love to nibble. Many communities, however, use it to help finance a viable chamber organization. Mayor Robert Donaldson's village administration has chosen, apparently, to spread the wealth.

So...Ruidoso has split its tourism-promotion operation into chunks; no more "one-stop-shopping" service.

The Ruidoso Valley Chamber of Commerce now gets a piece of it to run a visitor center. The village contracted with Grindstone Graphics, a private company, to handle advertising and marketing for Ruidoso and the convention center, which the village owns. On Tuesday the council agreed to amend the Grindstone Graphics contract by adding about $30,000 annually—including travel expenses—to hire a convention sales director, who through Grindstone Graphics will be able to provide something called "receptive services."

Grindstone Graphics gets 20 percent of the cost of services provided as its share, a fee termed by the company "the industry standard." And so, the people of Ruidoso once again as of next week will have what amounts to a convention and visitors bureau.

The mayor said hiring a convention sales director was necessary because it was missing from the advertising and marketing contract. Specifically: "After talking with our visitor center contractor and, obviously, our marketing contractor, we decided what was missing in the contract, what we didn't cover. This is what was missing." (The chamber had a woman doing that quite well, before the lodgers tax contract expired; she lost her job when the village took over.)

Mayor Donaldson also says another missing item is a special events facilitator who can go after more such major events as the Golden Aspen Motorcycle Rally—but only if the lodgers tax goes up to 5 percent. The council was prepared to vote on a raise this week, but the mayor chose to postpone voting on that item for 60 days so more hearings can be held, and so that when a vote comes "everybody understands why and that we are moving in the best direction for everybody." Lots of noise from innkeepers on that one, remember? At some point, the lodgers tax will impact room rates.

So, are there any applicable clichés in this situation?
How about "if it wasn't broke, why fix it?"

THE SILVER LINING

So here we are on midday of Monday, Aug. 10, and John Shrecengost, our modern-day Billy the Kid, along with his friends and neighbors, has given us one more three-day sketch of the Kid's life in the Lincoln County War, carrying him a step further in his long-standing history of world-wide fame.

BY DAN STORM
COLUMNIST

This fame, this popularity, many have tried to explain; but most everyone else has just let it go at that.

The Kid, of course, was well known in Lincoln County, and to some extent all through New Mexico and the Southwest.

However, as historian Drew Gomer has pointed out, his world-wide fame began with his escape from jail in Lincoln.

Most everyone, except the Kid himself, had thought he was a goner. Even before the escape, a number of newspapers had headlined: "Billy the Kid hanged at Lincoln, N.M."

There is a story handed down of how the Kid, shortly after his escape, rolled on the ground laughing at the newspaper accounts of his hanging at Lincoln.

On the other hand, newspaper headlines far and wide carried accounts of his escape. This, along with a state-wide celebration.

Was it his last?
The Lincoln show is called "The Last Escape of Billy the Kid."

However, through the years stories have kept emerging that the Kid was not killed at Fort Sumner, but lived to be an old man. A fellow from over near Cloudcroft told me the Kid saw the first pageant in 1940, and didn't know whether to laugh or cry.

All in all, unless somebody gets it nailed down for sure, the death of the Kid will remain a great big quien sabe?

A cloudburst moves in

The weather spirits were kind to us during Lincoln Days.

And now, at 1:15 in the afternoon, a cloudburst moved in with eardrum-shattering, ground-shaking thunder.

Hooray for the rain, and I send up a prayer of thanks to Brother Lynn for building the bridge across the river a few years ago.

And, by the way, thank the Lord for the rain.

Applause for the Forest Festival

To the editor:

The Forest Festival (sponsored by the Forest Health Association of Lincoln County) was a wonderful and highly educational event.

My hope is we will have another such presentation in the very near future.

Everyone who has an interest in Lincoln County as far as quality of life—conservation of forest and wildlife, beauty of the area—should attend the next Forest Health Association Festival.

It will increase your appreciation of the many people who really care about our area.

My personal thanks and appreciation to each and every one of the folks involved in the Forest Health Association. Please have another presentation in the very near future.

I'll be there.
Will you?

Tijerina's cause still simmers

When Reies Tijerina and his fellow Alianza members staged their protest at Echo Amphitheatre in the Carson National Forest in 1966, it was essentially the first resistance by native Hispanic New Mexicans against the U.S. government and its policies since the Taos Rebellion in 1846.

BY MORROW
SINICATED COLUMNIST

It was an appropriate place for a demonstration. Much of the land encompassed by the forest, including the amphitheatre campground, had once been part of the "common lands" of several land grants in the area.

The federal government had refused to recognize many common land areas, and in doing so had crippled the economies of the grants. Although emotions were high, the gathering remained peaceful, and it brought attention to the legitimate complaints of those whose lands had been taken.

But the armed raid on the Rio Arriba County courthouse the following year alienated many who had begun to listen to Tijerina's harangues and to wonder if there weren't some truth in what he said.

A state police officer and a county jailer were shot in the raid. Although they eventually recovered, the change from peaceful civil disobedience to armed violence caused many New Mexicans to condemn Tijerina, the Alianza, and even their cause.

And then it got worse. Jailer Eulogio Salazar had been shot once as he jumped through a second story window in the courthouse, and again on the ground as he was trying to run from the building. His wounds were life-threatening and his recovery took a long time, but he did recover. His testimony was to be a centerpiece for the prosecution against Tijerina and the others charged in the raid.

Then, just a month before the preliminary hearing on the charges against Tijerina and his co-defendants, Salazar was found beaten to death in his car on a road near Tierra Amarilla. State Police Chief Joe Black said it was the worst beating he had seen in 30 years as an officer.

The bonds of the courthouse raid defendants were revoked. Although Tijerina said he was sure no Alianza members were involved, the credibility of the organization was shredded.

It turned out the raid defendants all had credible alibis, and none of them—nor anyone else—was ever indicted for Salazar's death, but Tijerina's crusade had been all but extinguished.

Tijerina was acquitted of the charges against him from the courthouse raid. But he was found guilty of federal charges that stemmed from the Echo Amphitheatre event and a later incident in which he burned some Forest Service signs and assaulted a ranger. In 1969, he began serving the first of two prison terms, for a total of five years, and when he was released he didn't stay in New Mexico. He moved to Mexico, changed the spelling of his name to "Tixerina," and ceased to be a player in the land grant struggles here.

Probably the most significant fact about Tijerina is that he was never involved in any civil lawsuit to reacquire grant land. The same can be said for most of his followers.

Did they have a valid complaint? I think it is clear they did. But the way they went about trying to achieve justice seems to have doomed their efforts. They were in most cases at least several decades too late in bringing up their grievances, and they failed to seek redress of those grievances in the courts, the only appropriate place to do so.

But, 20 years later, the fraud and injustices of the past continue to fester in the hearts of many present and former land grant residents. Reies Tijerina may be gone and all but forgotten, but the cause he was devoted to still lives.

It will continue to be a source of discontent and conflict for many years to come.

Next week Ben Lilly, the last mountain man.

Elsewhere: In 1969, the year Reies Tijerina went to jail, more than 300,000 people attended a marathon rock concert in a large field near Woodstock, New York.

News from Teignmouth

Bill Power, who's called Ruidoso home since 1974, likes to keep in touch, and especially since his wife, Pat, died not long ago.

That's the reason he has become an inveterate user of the Internet, and why he's upgrading his (and his four sons') computers with phone-video capabilities.

This bit of intelligence came our way because he dropped off a copy of an article about one of his sons, John Walsh, who retired from the U. S. Air Force in England, and now owns what we would call a retirement home in that country.

To quote from the Teignmouth News dated July 9:

The Star-Spangled Banner flew proudly over Briarcroft Residential Home when its American owner John Walsh declared independence for a few hours on the Fourth of July.

He couldn't go home to Ruidoso, New Mexico, but he could hang out the bunting, play Bruce Springsteen's "Born in the USA" and some down-home rock 'n' roll by the Charlie Daniels Band, get the Budweisers cold, the barbecue burning and invite residents, their families, friends and staff to have some all-American fun.

John gets a bit homesick on the Fourth and misses his family in America, so he decided to have a family occasion here and bring some American pizzazz to Teignmouth. He had his English wife Elaine.

Seventy folk munched burgers and dogs—the real thing, supplied for the occasion by John's ex-USAF colleagues at the Lakenheath air base and jetted in by Uncle Sam's own airline—and drank Coke and Buds while John listened to the sentimental, cryin' in your beer strains of Randy Travis and Country and Western stars.

"Everyone had a great time, especially the residents. We were proud to be American for the day, y'all," said care manager Jane Southey.

There were even fireworks when, at twilight's last gleaming the rocket's red flare lit the skies over Teignmouth and brought a complaint from a neighbor.

"Just another Redcoat," shrugged John, whose flag was still there...

Can you see why his dad, Bill Power, wants to keep in touch?

Bill admitted that son John does like to do things that get attention in the press; he's discovered it's cheap advertising.

LETTERS POLICY

The Ruidoso News encourages letters to the editor, especially about local topics and issues.

Each letter must be signed and must include the writer's daytime telephone number and address. The phone number and street or mailing address will not be printed; however, the author's hometown will be included. The telephone number will be used to verify authorship. No letter will be printed without the writer's name.

Letters should be 300 words or less in length, be of public interest and must avoid name-calling and libelous language. The Ruidoso News reserves the right to edit letters, so long as viewpoints are not altered. Shorter letters are preferred and generally receive greater reader-ship.

Letters may be hand-delivered to the News office at 104 Park Avenue or mailed to P.O. Box 123, Ruidoso, NM 88345, attention of the editor.

Running lady raising funds to fight leukemia

BY SANDY SUGGETT
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

Sana Echols is running around raising money for the Leukemia Society - literally.

On Nov. 15 she'll be running a marathon in Cozumel, Mexico to raise funds and awareness for the disease.

Echols is a member of the New Mexico-based Team in Training program of the Leukemia Society of America, Inc., and she's training to run in a fundraising marathon for research on leukemia and other cancers and for patient aid programs.

Echols, who started running four or five years ago, got involved with the program in Arroyo Seco (N.M.), where she was teaching first graders, but when she came to Ruidoso this summer, she began training with a team in Las Cruces.

"My sister's father-in-law was dying of leukemia, and there was nothing they could do to help. It's such a hopeless feeling. Giving isn't enough because you can't give enough," she said. These marathons raise the majority of the money the Leukemia Society uses for research and for patient aid since the program began in 1986, said Dieder Zorn, campaign assistant for the Leukemia Society of New Mexico in Albuquerque. Since 1993, Team in Training members have raised over $65 million in donations.

Echols explained that each runner needs to raise $1,750 by Sept. 4 and another $1,750 by Oct. 23. Eighty percent of that money goes to the Leukemia Society's program and 20 percent pays for airfare, accommodations in Cozumel, the entrance fee to the marathon and the victory celebration afterward.

"I struggle with asking for money," Echols said, "but it needs to be done. I'm looking for ideas, for people who want to help."

When she runs in Cozumel, she'll be wearing a T-shirt with the name of a child who's dying of leukemia and a button with the photograph of the child, she explained, "so you're running with that person."

Zorn explained that each participant is assigned a coach, trained for four months to walk or run the 26.2-mile marathon, and given workshops on nutrition and injury prevention. In exchange, the runners raise funds to benefit the Leukemia Society's programs. This is the largest endurance training program nationally, and 28,000 runners and walkers have been trained.

"The Leukemia Society's goal is to find a cure for this dread disease through its programs of patient aid, research and public information," said Zorn. The money raised by the marathons is used for research into the causes and potential cures for leukemia, lymphoma, Hodgkin's disease and multiple myeloma. Locally, it provides for two fully funded researchers at the University of New Mexico. It also funds patient aid programs to help with uninsured medical expenses, regardless of financial background.

Zorn noted that:

• Every ten minutes another child or adult dies of leukemia or a related cancer in this country.

• More than 110,700 will be

Fire destroys home in Palo Verde Slopes

Fire destroyed a residence at 106 Reynolds Drive in Palo Verde Slopes early Wednesday morning. The owners, Bill and Cindy Shiele, were not in the house at the time.

Ruidoso Downs Fire Chief Nick Herrera said his department was called to the fire by the sheriff's office at 3:27 a.m. and arrived at the scene at 3:38 a.m.

The structure was engulfed in flames by the time 11 firefighters, two engines, and a ladder company from Ruidoso Downs arrived and began fighting the fire. Glencoe Fire District provided three firefighters and one engine, and also shuttled water.

"It had been going for a little bit; it got enough momentum to give us a hard time," Herrera said. "It took us approximately three hours to get it under control."

Herrera said the State Fire

Marshal's office had determined that the fire was started by an extension cord.

He said the owners came into town about midnight and spoke with him and the State Fire Marshal's investigator.

BUSINESS BRIEFS

Extended income tax returns due Saturday

For the people who filed an extension on their income tax returns in April, Saturday is the deadline to either finally file their return or apply for another extension.

Returns mailed by 3 p.m. Saturday in any of the collection boxes at the main Ruidoso Post Office on Sudderth Drive will receive an Aug. 15 postmark, a postal employee said.

Construction values up

Ruidoso construction values in July, continuing a several-year trend, were up 14.7 percent over July of last year, according to the Ruidoso Planning Department.

For the year through July, values were 24.8 percent over last year, up from $14.9 million to $18.6 million, based on building permits.

Values for new homes for the year through July are up by 29 percent, from $9.9 million to $12.8 million, and new commercial construction values are up by 123 percent, from $533,000 to $870,000.

Unemployment gains

The unemployment rate in Lincoln County increased from 4.1 percent in May to 5 percent in June, according to the New Mexico Labor Market Review.

During the same time, the labor force increased in Lincoln County, from 7,826 to 8,329, a difference of 503 people, according to the review.

New restaurant owner

Rayne Greer has purchased the Main Street Deli, which has been in the Gazebo Shopping Center at 2103 Sudderth Drive for about seven years.

The Main Street Deli serves soups, salads, gyros, pastries, homemade desserts and more, Greer said. She kept the business's old menu and expanded on it, she said.

Greer, who lives in Capitán, said she bought the Main Street Deli to fulfill a dream of owning a restaurant after 20 years as a social worker. She intends to add a family meal catering service, in which people may order homemade meals 48 hours in advance.

The Main Street Deli is open six days a week, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. and from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. on Fridays and Saturdays. Closed Tuesdays. For more information contact Greer at 257-5175.

Travel writer recognized

Dave G. Houser of Ruidoso recently received a first-place award from the Society of American Travel Writers (SATW) Western Chapter at its annual meeting in Montreal, Canada.

Houser, a noted travel journalist and photographer, was honored for work he entered as a "self-illustrated travel article." Houser's winning piece, "Tour d'Europe," appeared in Palm Beach Illustrated last year.

• After decades of working for other sculptors and foundries, Gaylon Gillem has opened his own shop, called Bonito Bronze.

BY TONI K. LAXSON
 RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

Though Gaylon Gillem moved into his shop on May 1, it was July before he was ready to take customers. But then, a bronze casting shop takes a while to set up, he said.

"It took me a couple of months just to get equipment in that I ordered," said Gillem, an artist and foundry master. "But now I have the shop set up and I am open and ready for business and trying to locate some artists."

After decades of working in someone else's bronzing business, Gillem recently decided to open his own shop, called Bonito Bronze. Located in the White Mountain Plaza on Sudderth Drive, Bonito Bronze is a combination of art gallery, art studio, bronzing shop and classroom.

His edge over many other bronzing shops, Gillem said, is that his work has three decades of experience behind it. "Instead of someplace where they are training somebody at $6 an hour," he said.

He started in 1968 as a scholarship art student at Amarillo Junior College in Texas. At the school, he had an instructor named Lincoln Fox, who went on to become a nationally renowned sculptor.

"He actually influenced my entire career," Gillem said.

After college, Gillem received a call from Fox, telling him to come to Ruidoso to produce his bronzes for him. That was in 1973.

Following his apprenticeship with Fox, Gillem worked in foundries in Santa Fe and Ruidoso, most recently at the Legends Casting Co., which no longer pours metal for commercial customers, Gillem said.

When he opened his own shop, he named it Bonito Bronze because he and his wife had lived at Bonito Lake for several years and had always dreamed of opening a foundry near there.

Gillem has renovated the store by putting in a virtually sound-proof room in the back. The sound-proofing keeps the noise from his compressor and power tools at a minimum. In the rest of the shop, he has built shelves, work benches and plumbed in a sink.

Besides being his own boss, the shop has allowed Gillem to do more sculpting himself, an aspect that he is enjoying very much, he said.

"The most fun is doing the original. The rest of it is really work until you get to the end of the process, the patina," Gillem said. At that stage, he said, there's a thrill in seeing the final piece emerge.

Most of his business will be creating bronzes for other artists — and there are a surprisingly large number of scul-

Gaylon Gillem, and a sample of his bronze casting work.

Toni K. Laxson/Ruidoso News

tors in the Ruidoso area, he said.

The process of bronzing is probably much more complex than people realize, involving numerous steps, from creating molds to "finishing" a piece.

"In my shop, I'm doing everything except the actual pouring of the metal," Gillem said.

From an original sculpture brought in by an artist, he makes a relatively thin rubber mold. Using the mold, he makes a hollow wax mold that duplicates the original piece. He then "dresses the wax," a term for correcting any imperfections as well as eliminating the seam line.

Because they are so delicate, he delivers the wax molds himself to one of three foundries — there are two in Santa Fe he uses and one in Lubbock. At the foundry, a ceramic cast is made of both the interior and exterior of the wax mold. Quite often to accomplish this, a mold has to be cut into two or more pieces, depending on its size and shape.

The ceramic cast is fired, which causes the wax mold to melt out. Gillem said this is called the "lost wax process." Then molten bronze is poured into the ceramic mold. With a hammer and chisel, foundry workers remove the ceramic, called the investment, from around the bronze.

Gillem welds a piece back together, replaces lost patterns along the seam and puts details back in the design. He textures the surface and sandblasts a piece, which readies it for the patina process. In that process various chemicals are put on a sculpture to create different colors. The chemicals basically oxidize, or rust, the bronze to different hues.

"It's a lot of hard work all the way down the line," Gillem said. "A lot of other people touch the piece — not just the artist."

Gillem also holds sculpting classes throughout the year. Two of the week-long classes have met so far this summer and another is scheduled to start Sept. 21. It will focus on sculpting the human head and is designed for beginners and up, he said. Cost is $175 plus materials.

The shop also is a way for he and his wife to bolster the local art community, Gillem said.

"Basically, we want to be a service to the sculptors of Lincoln County," Gillem said.

Downs budget shows receipts tax 'clean up'

Ruidoso Downs Village Council took the following actions Monday:

• Approved a resolution for the village's year-end clean up of the 1997-98 budget. The resolved budget shows that just under $1.2 million of the village's total revenues of $1.4 million came from gross receipts taxes. Village Clerk Leann Weibrecht said about $600,000 of those revenues were rolled over into the village's 1998-99 budget, which started July 1.

• Adopted recommended fire safety codes. The codes are recommended by the National Fire Prevention Association. Fire Chief Nick Herrera said. The codes are available for inspection at village hall.

• Declined a request from several people that the council grandfather in customers of the Agua Fria water utility, which would waive the village requirement for a $60 deposit fee.

• Approved with one exception accounts payable. The council unanimously decided against paying the bill submitted by Robert Beauvais, who is representing Mayor Joe Hayhurst in a lawsuit against the council.

• Approved a request from Cowboy's Riding Stables to waive $105.35 of a sewer bill because of a water leak.

• Approved a sole source bid of $9,100 from R&R Fence Co. to put a fence around the Agua Fria water utility.

• Approved an annual contract with Lincoln County to house the village's prisoners at the Lincoln County Detention Center in Carrizozo at a cost of $50 a day.

• Approved a bid of $550 from Barco Products, Inc. for 100 traffic cones. The cones will be used jointly by the police and street department.

• Rejected bids for police vehicles from Ruidoso Ford and Sierra Blanca Motors because neither bid $22,429 and $27,825, respectively, met specifications. Bids will be resubmitted.

• Approved contributing as much as $1,000 for a reception on Aug. 17 at the Museum of the Horse for the Legislature's Revenue Stabilization and Tax Policy Committee.

Other local governments are contributing to the event as well.

• Approved a bid of $1,083 from New Horizon of Ruidoso for a new computer terminal in the utility department.

• Approved a combined bid of $24,000 from Chambers Motors of Oregon for a pumper and a one-ton truck.

Both will be used by the Downs Volunteer Fire Department.

Herrera said the new truck would be outfitted with equipment from the current truck. The department's current one-ton truck is getting old and maintenance could soon become a problem, he said.

• Approved hiring Jason Kinnick, a member of the volunteer fire department, as a part-time animal control officer.

Herrera said the new truck would be outfitted with equipment from the current truck. The department's current one-ton truck is getting old and maintenance could soon become a problem, he said.

Traffic jam

Cars started moving Monday afternoon because U.S. Highway 70 was closed since that morning to two lanes for road construction work, said Ruidoso Downs Police Chief David Hightower.

RUIDOSO POLICE

Vehicle burglarized

A vehicle with a dog in it was burglarized Aug. 7 in the parking lot of Schlotsky's Deli on Sudderth Drive. The owners of the vehicle left it parked in the covered parking area and locked it, leaving a window partially open. Someone reached into the window to open the door and removed a Clarion Brand AM/FM cassette player valued at $600. No other items were taken, and the dog was unharmed.

House burglarized

Diamond earrings valued at $3,000, an amethyst ring with diamonds valued at $600 and a camera (value unknown) were taken from a residence on Barcus Road sometime between June 18 and July 29.

The front door lock had been pried off and several window screens had been taken off windows.

The front door was open part way, the owner reported, and the carpet and plywood beneath it were damaged. The owner didn't realize she'd been burglarized until a contractor who came to look at the floor advised her someone had broken in through the front door.

Man arrested for assault

Beau Charles Michel of 29 Pines was arrested Wednesday morning for aggravated assault with a deadly weapon against a family member, aggravated battery against a family member, and battery against a family member, according to police reports.

Vehicle stolen, recovered

A 1984 Chevrolet Blazer valued at $4,000 was taken from Mecham Drive sometime between 10 p.m. Aug. 7 and 8 a.m. Aug. 8. Forced entry was not necessary as the rear window will not roll up. State Police found it on County Road/Airport Road wrecked and rolled over.

House broken into

A woman from Pittsburgh, Texas received a call from Century 21 that her summer home on Reese Drive in Ruidoso was open. She called the police and they found that the door had been kicked in. They could not determine if anything had been taken.

Residence burglarized

A VCR valued at $300 and a satellite box valued at $600 were taken from a residence on Valley View between 1 p.m. and 3 p.m. on Aug. 7. Entry was gained through the kitchen window, which was broken with the screen removed.

Wal-Mart sued over alleged injuries in store accident

Shirley Ann Dever filed suit Aug. 11 in Lincoln County District Court against Wal-Mart Stores Inc. for negligence.

She states in the suit that she was shopping on Aug. 3 when without touching anything, improperly stacked boxes on a shelf fell, striking her face and breaking her glasses.

Store personnel was negligent because they carelessly stacked cartons in the dog food aisle, failed to properly maintain the area in an accident-free condition and failed to place warning signs, Dever contends.

She wants compensatory damages to be determined at trial, medical expenses and compensation for related, future medical bills.

She claims as a result of the incident she has not been able to pursue normal activities in her home life. She is represented by attorney Gary Mitchell.

No one was available in the corporate offices of Wal-Mart to comment on the suit.

John Mark Scarbrough has completed his first year of law school August 1998.

He is currently attending Tulsa University School of Law in Tulsa, OK, and will receive a Doctorate of Jurisprudence in May 2000. Mark is the son of Lydia M. Scarbrough and the grandson of Norma C. Mecaskey of Big Pine Lodge in Ruidoso.

Coasting on their good looks

Sean McLeskey, coordinator of the Third Annual All American Custom Bike Show, has his picture taken by his son, Michael. Sean sits astride his own 1979 Harley Davidson—which doesn't have the necessary attributes to enter the show.

\ Most entries in the All American Custom Bike Show aren't utilitarian — just pretty.*

BY TONI K. LAXSON
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

Chances are, at least one of the glossy motorcycles on display Saturday at the Ruidoso Downs Race Track has never been touched by gasoline.

"Some don't even have oil in the engine. They don't run them at all — just push them up into place," said Sean McLeskey, coordinator of the Third Annual All American Custom Bike Show.

The event is the first of many festivities leading to the All American Futurity, known as the richest quarter horse race in the world. The other 13 events range from fiddlin' contests to the heavily attended yearling sale.

McLeskey, plant superintendent at the track and the idea man behind the bike show, said the motorcycles in the show are judged on aspects other than road performance. Style, scarcity, elaborate paint jobs, frills and overall coolness are factors, though.

"These bikes might have 20 or 30 miles on them," McLeskey said. Those miles probably were accrued by the owners just riding them into place for display at shows, he said.

The proud owners will "trailer" their motorcycles to shows rather than ride them, McLeskey said. He doesn't blame them, considering the time and money that goes into these showy bikes.

"If you spend $30,000 to $40,000, you don't want to ride it from here to Sturgis," McLeskey said. Sturgis, S.D., is the location of one of the nation's largest motorcycle rallies, where hundreds of bikes are entered every year, he said.

McLeskey himself has been a motorcycle buff almost since he could walk. He owns a 1979 Harley Davidson, that, unlike typical show bike entries, does a lot of road work, including trips to Sturgis. He would enter it in the show if there was a "rat bike" category, in which owners compete to see who has the most exhausted-looking motorcycle.

However, none of the show's five categories give any points for a worn out appearance. Instead, the classes are for stock bikes whose frames have not been altered, for custom bikes whose frames have been altered, for dresser bikes with amenities such as CD players and air conditioning, and for sportster bikes, which are smaller.

The overall winner of the show, which is to start at noon Saturday near the track's grandstand, will take home $500, and winners of five categories in competition will pocket $100 each, he said.

Entries are accepted until the start of the show. The fee is $25. Proceeds will go to the Big Brothers/Big Sisters of Lincoln County.

Sponsors of the custom bike show include Miller Beer; Nick Orcioli, owner of Michelena's restaurant in Ruidoso; and Jimmy Allison, owner of Champion Harley Davidson in Roswell, McLeskey said.

The show is free to the public, though there is a $3 parking fee per car at the track.

Fastest test at the track

The highlight of the bike show will be a 20-second race between Rick Baugh, track manager, on a dirt bike, and ex-jockey Kenny Hart on a quarterhorse. The race will be between the eighth and ninth races.

Fishing report

FISHABLE WATERS

Streams: Ruidoso, Bonito, Hondo, Pefasco
Lakes: Alto, Bonito, Lake Mesalero, Grindstone, Eagle Lakes.

Stream flows are fairly low, too low on most streams. Fishing is still fairly productive.

Fly selection for streams:

• Sizes 14 to 18
• Dries - stimulators, elk hair and god-dard caddis, blue winged olive, daves hoppers.

• Nymphs - pheasant tails, gold ribbed hairs ears, green rock worms, princes. Lake levels have been stable or dropping slightly since the end of runoff. Alto is four to five feet low and dingy. Grindstone is down three to four feet as well.

Fly selection for lakes:

• Sizes 12 to 22
• Dries - grubs, grass, black, cream and olive midges, elk hair caddis, adams, mayflies, crane, rust and black.

• Nymphs - large pheasant tails, dark wooly buggers, pistol pates.

Best times: Evenings are a strong favorite for both lakes and streams with early morning and late streams intermediate productive throughout the day.

British Invasion kicks soccer into high gear

Text and photos by Terrance Vestal of the Ruidoso News

While soccer is all the rage in Europe, it is certainly the up and coming sport throughout this country and Ruidoso and Lincoln County are no different.

Through the efforts of the Lincoln County Youth Soccer League, the British Challenger Soccer program came to Ruidoso.

David Cambourne from Wales, and Damian Ives from England, conducted morning and evening sessions throughout the week.

Twenty-four area youth, ages ranging from 7-10 attended the morning session, and 27 11- to 14-year olds attended the evening sessions.

This is the second summer in the program for Cambourne and the first for Ives.

Both said they appreciate the experience the program offers in the chance to visit the United States.

Ruidoso Downs Race Track features two races on Sunday's card

Sunday's race card at Ruidoso Downs features the World's Championship Quarter Horse Classic and the Land Of Enchantment Speed Handicap.

World's Championship Quarter Horse Classic

A field of eight square off in the $15,000 added World's Championship Quarter Horse Classic. The three-year-olds and up will compete at a distance of 440 yards.

Secret Cash Runaway, trained by Sam Sandoval, has a stakes win under his belt at the Ruidoso Downs 1998 meet. He captured the All American Gold Cup on June 26. Secret Cash Runaway won by a half of a length and beat out Dean Miracle.

On July 31, the two competed again in an allowance prep race for World's Championship Classic eligibles.

Dean Miracle prevailed, however, and Secret Cash Runaway ran a disappointing sixth. He will be looking to redeem himself on Sunday.

The field in order of post position: Streakin On The Moon, Six Delights, Dash Of Essence, Devine Wind, Mr.

Master Maker, Secret Cash Runaway, Etarag, and Dean Miracle.

Land Of Enchantment Speed Handicap

Twelve New Mexico Bred Thoroughbreds line up for the $10,000 added Land Of Enchantment Speed Handicap at six furlongs.

Naturally Naughty is high weighted at 119 pounds and will break from the number 12 post position. He ran second in the Governor's Handicap at Ruidoso Downs on May 31 and has already earned $20,479 in 1998. Naturally Naughty will have to improve over his last two races to win the Handicap but has had good works since then.

Brave Jack will carry 117 pounds to the post as the third high weight. He has the advantage of breaking from the number one post position with his regular rider, Adan Fuentes.

Tee Um Up is a horse with a good chance and likely to pay a good price. He loves to run on the front but has trouble holding on for the win. He has run four seconds in 1998 and earned $11,328 for his effort.

Track Notes:

On Saturday, Del Mar has a $2 million pick six guaranteed pool. Ruidoso Downs is offering wagering on Del Mar's pick six. Refer to the Daily Racing Form for past performance lists. The Daily Racing Form may be purchased at Ruidoso Downs.

Trials for the All American Futurity will be run on Thursday Aug. 20th. Due to the number of expected trials, post time will not be at 1:00 PM. Post time will be determined

HIKING

Big Bear Canyon Trail is no grizzly path for those on foot or on wheels

The trail offers a great mountain bike experience even for novices

Big Bear Canyon

The trail running up Big Bear Canyon is actually a Forest Service road but the poor condition makes it a better trail than a road.

Deep ruts and protruding rocks make it a high-clearance, 4-wheel-drive only type of road. Probably 98 out of 100 vehicles will avoid it due to the first rocky obstacles at its beginning where it crosses Bonito Creek at the Bonito Stables. Thus the recommendation to park just below it at the intersection of Roads 107 and 108.

To begin the hike, continue up USFS Road 107 to the Bonito Stables. Cross Bonito Creek and follow the jeep road that continues up Big Bear Canyon.

If you have a high clearance vehicle you have the option of driving to the stables, crossing Bonito Creek and parking just past the crossing. Otherwise park back where Road 108 intersects Road 107.

In my opinion, Big Bear Canyon offers the best mountain biking route in the Ruidoso area.

Littleton, Kraut, and Philadelphia Canyons seem to get all the press as the best mountain biking locales in the Bonito area, but there are numerous stretches of steep trails in these canyons that require pushing your bike uphill.

Big Bear Canyon Trail

GENERAL DESCRIPTION: A 5-mile round-trip hiking or mountain biking excursion into the upper Bonito drainage.

SPECIAL ATTRACTIONS: Running stream, easy grade, beautiful meadows.

AMOUNT OF USE: Light to moderate.

NET ELEVATION GAIN: 600 feet.

ESTIMATED HIKING TIME: 3 hours. DIFFICULTY: Easy.

DIRECTIONS: Take USFS Road 103 off of Hwy 37 toward Bonito Lake approximately 7 miles to the intersection of USFS Road 108. Park at the intersection.

Big Bear lets you ride all the time without any pushing.

As a result, it's a great place for novice and intermediate mountain bikers.

An added bonus is vehicular traffic and hikers are almost nonexistent and the only people you have a chance of seeing will be

REGIONAL BRIEFS

State Film Office
announces 1999
directory opening

The New Mexico Film Office is now accepting applications for listing and advertising space in the 1999 Film and Video Personnel/Business Directory. The deadline for submissions is Sept. 11, 1998.

The directory is the main fulfillment piece of the Film's Office. It contains the names of technicians and businesses that provide services to the motion picture industry. Copies of the directory are sent to all inquiries from production companies. The directory also is distributed at trade shows and in direct mail campaigns.

Martin Leger, directory editor, said the directory, which is in its 14th edition, is a "reflection on the depth of the industry in New Mexico."

A $50 fee is charged for each listing with a maximum of three listings per applicant allowed. Professionals listed in The Film Office Resource list will receive their applications in the mail.

Anyone not listed may request an application. For more information, call the New Mexico Film Office at (505) 827-9810.

1998 New Mexico Beef
Ambassador named in Ruidoso

Christopher Spear of Roswell has been named as the New Mexico Beef Ambassador after the 15-year-old won a contest that was held at the Inn of Pine Springs in Ruidoso Downs, N.M.

Spear won with his presentation, titled "Castle - What They Do For You - What They Do For Me."

He is a sophomore at Goddard High School in Roswell. He is an active member in Chaves County 4-H, the Chaves County 4-H Council, Goddard FFA and the Goddard High School Band.

He is the son of Barry and Juduan Prichard of Roswell.

Other contestants in this state competition were Amanda Bird of Capitan; Kendra Encinas of Los Lunas; Codi Montes of Hondo; Victoria Patton of Roswell; Maria Haral of Encino; and Rebecca Wells of Claunch.

HIKING: Take a sack lunch, there are plenty of places to stop and enjoy

horseback riders from the stable.

Please respect the safety of the horseback riders and slow down if you come upon them.

Whether you choose to hike or bike, the canyon climbs only about 600 feet over 2 1/2 miles to the boundary of the White Mountain Wilderness.

The road/trail splits near some old mine workings (which are on private property) shortly after you start up the canyon. The routes merge again so you can't make a wrong decision.

In addition, a true trail runs along portions of the canyon where horses have created some shortcuts, giving you another travel option.

Beautiful meadows line the stream banks as you proceed up the canyon making this area very picturesque.

Bring a sack lunch and you won't have a problem finding a place to enjoy it. Just make sure you haul out all your trash. This area is amazingly clean considering the easy access. Please help keep it that way.

Once the road ends, you have reached the boundary of the White Mountain Wilderness.

Bikes are prohibited from proceeding any further.

A trail does extend about 1/4 mile past the road but quickly disappears in the gravel of the canyon bottom. Just past where the trail disappears, the spring that feeds Bear Creek emerges from the canyon floor.

Continuing any further up the canyon is a difficult hike due to the lack of a trail and increasing steepness.

Camping locations are abundant along the road/trail and running water is always present. Make sure to treat the water before drinking it and you will enjoy this area.

Get the 'Street Beat' Sunday afternoon August 16th!

PERFORMING ARTS
SATURDAYS AT 10 & 2

Street Beat is a fun, fast-paced jazz dance retrospective that demonstrates how the social climate and events of the day affected jazz dance throughout the 20th century. Beginning with the Roaring 20s, each decade is brought to life with a fully-costumed dance number. The entire performance is narrated with information about the major events, fashions and key historical figures of the day.

The troupe visits the Charleston of the 20s, Tap and Ballroom Dancing of the 30s, Jitterbug, Swing, and the Lindy Hop from the 40s followed by the eras of the Twist, Hustle, Bump, Break Dancing and Slam Dancing.

MAKING THE FINAL CUT

Story by Teri K. Lasso

NOGAL MOVIEMAKER IS
WRAPPING HIS FIRST PROJECT
WITH OPTIMISM AND PLANS
FOR AT LEAST THREE MORE
GRASSROOT PRODUCTIONS.

David Briggs, and filmmakers like the Nogal man, are the future of the independent movie business, a member of the Hollywood machine said this week.

"He has all the right story-making elements going and, of course, the New Mexico scenery is gorgeous," said Greg Scanlan, one of the owners of Yale Film and Video, the North Hollywood lab that has been processing Briggs's film, "The Rockets."

"It's regional filmmaking ... And it's good, it's right there at the top," said Scanlan, who "previews" thousands of independent films as they come through his lab scene by scene for processing.

"It's nice to see stuff from different parts of the country. And he's captured his location really well," Scanlan said. "It's a good story, a good location and good actors."

Scanlan's praise is noteworthy because this is Briggs' first attempt at a feature film. Furthermore, its budget is $20,000, which in comparison to other production budgets, makes a shoestring look fat.

NATASHA LOPEZ, right, in a scene from "The Rockets," is interviewed by a radio DJ about her band.

Briggs, a massage therapist with a largely unused degree in video production, wrote the screenplay and is directing it. His wife, Beth Briggs, is the producer.

The actors and crew are all volunteers, including the full-time contributions of Chris Balkema, director of photography. The sets are the hills surrounding Nogal and local businesses willing to let them film inside. The extras are all the friends and neighbors Briggs and his buddies can round up.

Original music for the film, which is about a young woman who plays guitar in a country rock band, has been supplied by Briggs' brother, a guitarist and songwriter for Alabama.

"I got the right people together," Briggs said of his grassroots moviemaking attempt. "It's going to be a good movie but, of course, I'm going to say that. Let's put it this way — It's going to be a lot better than I ever expected it to be."

Most of the filming, which started in April, has been done on weekends, when the otherwise-employed actors and crew have time. As of this week, he has only one more scene and a few retakes left, Briggs said.

Sometimes the cast would be due on locations as early as 5 a.m., Briggs said. With only two exceptions, all who signed on with project back in January have stayed with it, he said.

He loves to brag about the people involved. For instance, Natasha Lopez, a 15-year-old local girl, plays the lead with skill and professionalism, he said. The plot follows Lopez's character as she pursues a musical career, true love and the villain who killed her father.

As for a scene where Lopez plays lead guitar in her country rock band, called the Rockets after the missiles from White Sands, Briggs said the novice actor is very convincing. "This girl steps out there (on a stage) and just absolutely wails," Briggs said.

Does she actually play?

"Not a note," Briggs responded.

He also touts the skills of Balkema, who had been working as a waiter until he heard about Briggs project. Now, the movie making effort is virtually a joint effort of Briggs and Balkema, who has a degree in filmmaking and is a member of the American Society of Cinematography.

Briggs' theory for good filmmaking revolves around having a good story to tell, he said.

"You can have everything Hollywood can provide — explosions, volcanoes, whatever — but you have got to get into those people," Briggs said.

There's no nudity or lovemaking scenes in the movie and the violence is kept to a minimum, Briggs said.

"You can watch this movie with your mom," Briggs said.

His long-range goal is to establish a movie production company in either Nogal or Capitan, Briggs said.

Briggs doesn't have a buyer yet for the "Rockets."

"But we've had quite a bit of interest," he said. "We have a couple of places in Hollywood already that want to take our film and represent us to the big companies."

What if the film doesn't sell?

"I really don't anticipate that," Briggs said.

RIVER NORTH JAZZES UP FAMILY FUN

Meredith Keaton
VANONOS STAFF WRITER

Chicago's River North Dance Company visits the Spencer Theater Saturday and Sunday to spread their jazz influenced message to more of the nation.

After a small start the company, which was made up of mostly recent high school grads at the time, has grown and expanded to encompass much more than basic jazz dancing. The group is comprised of former members of classes taught by Sherie Zunker-Dell, the company's current artistic director. Originally a commercial group, they now tour for performances throughout the nation. As the group became more involved in concert performances, they were recognized by Chicago area choreographers and began working with some big names in the business.

River North's big break proved to be a documentary special on them titled "Reality of a Dreamer," which aired locally. The success of Reality of a Dreamer led to its being aired nationally. The company soon began touring seriously.

The 38 week run of performances is landing River North first in Albuquerque, their first performance in New Mexico, and then at the Spencer Theater. As the group's coverage area expands they are setting their ultimate sights on touring internationally in the future. The group takes on the stereotype that jazz dance is a particular type of dance and that dance overall is a serious affair. Their performances consist of numerous shorter pieces and many costume changes, attempting to ensure that everyone in the audience enjoys something.

Sunday River North will have a youth performance at 4 p.m. entitled "Street Beat." The program is educational and entertaining, depicting changes in the U.S. decade by decade from the 20s to the present. Costumes and music is reflective of the nations attitudes and trends of the times and depictions of major national events highlight the show. Tickets for this performance are $8 for children under 13 and $15 for adults.

The shorter length of the pieces and the diversity of the themes in the River North performances gives the audience an experience that is atypical of dance concerts. The overall tone of the performance is light and entertaining, proving that dance doesn't have to be interpreted or cerebrally taxing. River North leaps on stage to show audiences that a whole range of emotions can be experienced in a short time and that dance and jazz are fun.

Q&A

Q. How did you get your start in dance?

A. "I was a child actor and I got into musicals. I was amazed by the dancers. I had always been an athlete and dance was challenging to me because I had to work at it."

Q. What drew you to work with River North?

A. "I was taking classes from Sherie Zunker-Dell and she started the group. I fell in love with the company and abandoned my other work to dance. The company is very innovative."

Q. What's the best part about performing?

A. "My having been an actor before gave me a real taste for being someone or something else. The audiences changing perspective of me and being able to be someone entirely different from myself."

Q. What are the companies overall goals?

A. "We have several. First, to prove to people that dance can be entertaining, fun and light. Second, to show people that you can experience several emotions in the course of an evening."

Q. What do you hope to do in the future?

A. "I'm 36, so as a dancer I'm looking at retirement. I've worked on some choreography during our down time and since I've been dancing so long it should be an easy transition."

PAUL ADAMIAN REVIVES 'GREATER TUNA'

by Sandy Suggitt
AMONGS STAFF WRITER

"Greater Tuna" is back in the area, this time at the Territorial Theater in Capitan. Roger Sowder and Kim Kearns star in this one-act satire about the down-home inhabitants of the third smallest town in Texas. They play all of them—Aunt Pearl, Arles, Petey Fisk, Phinas Blye and fifteen or twenty others—making for constant action and quick changes.

Roger Sowder starred in the last two performances, produced by the Ruidoso Little Theatre, and Kimble Kearns was assistant director. The first of these performances took second place at the Theater New Mexico AACT/FEST '91 in Los Alamos.

This time, Paul Adamian is directing the play in his "black box" at The Territorial Theater, the black-walled space of the building that will be used for the performance. Adamian, who teaches acting at Eastern New Mexico University, is enthusiastic about the play and the actors. Sowder and Kearns are "two wonderful players who surrender to their art very willingly," Adamian said.

"I think it's a hoot of a play," said Sowder. "It's one of the most well-written plays that I've ever played in."

Written by Jaston Williams, Joe Sears and Ed Howard, this play has been performed all over the country and now has two sequels, "Tuna Christmas" and "Red, White and Tuna."

GOT THE BLUES

BARE BONES BLUES BAND will play in White Oaks Saturday. Lead guitarist and vocalist, 15-year-old James Bullard has proven himself to be a hit with audiences in the Ruidoso area.

Q & A

Q. Who is your favorite character in Greater Tuna?

A. "Aunt Pearl. I've had as much fun with Aunt Pearl as anyone, but I can identify with just about every one of them, I've seen every one of them in my life."

Q. Which character taught you the most about yourself?

A. "Probably Pearl, as a mother of three kids and me being involved with kids at school... I never had children, I come from a big family and very strong family ties. Elmer Watkins is another character I enjoy, because he's so outrageously bigoted. He's a redneck that's associated with the Klan and I try to play him as a complete buffoon."

Q. How long have you been acting?

A. "I've been at it about ten years. Karen Reiter talked me into playing "Harvey" and I've been at it ever since."

Q. What do you like about acting?

A. "It allows you to be somebody else. I find it stimulating taking a character and making people believe who that character is. I find it stimulating taking a character and making people believe who that character is. It just gets in your blood. When you can bring people in and sit them down and get them believing..."

Q. What advice would you give aspiring actors?

A. "If they have a desire to be on stage, then they need to pursue that. I was a four-letter sportsman in school and coached for two years; arts were something I never experienced. Now I'm an advocate of the arts."

'UFO Encounter' Inspired Art Exhibit by Californian

Santa Barbara artist Bob DeBris is a very gifted photographer. Debris became familiar with the Roswell area is the summer of 1997, when he came to Roswell on a pilgrimage to attend the city's annual UFO Encounter. His mission was different from most of the attendees in that he sought to create photographic images of the event and the people who attended.

His photographs are difficult to characterize. He is not a documentarian in the strictest sense of the word, but his works are about people, places and events. He is fascinated by popular culture when it takes a turn toward the bizarre or extreme.

To look at the body of his photographs is like a visit to a carnival or an amusement park, where the visitor is curiously both half the observer and half the participant. While taking a journey of the imagination into the space invented within the photographs, you might find yourself looking at some combination of latter day Elvies, giant concrete dinosaurs, or sweetheart couples inside a trailer known as "El Palacio del Amor" (The Palace of Love). The exhibit featured at the Roswell Museum and Art Center follows along similar lines. The Encounter is something of a treasure trove for people into pop-culture's preoccupation with the weird. Last year's UFO Encounter is now this year's exhibit, as the Roswell Museum continues to explore local traditions. DeBris's works are on exhibit through October 4. Museum hours are Mon. through Sat. 9:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m., Sun. and holidays 1:00 p.m. to 5:00 p.m. The museum is located at 100 W. Eleventh Street in Roswell.

THE SECRET OF JOE HORNER AND FRANK CANTON

Drew Gombor
LINCOLN HERITAGE
TRUST HISTORIAN

Joe Horner was nobody to fool with. Killer and bandit, the Indiana native was a badman's badman. No small crimes – bank, stagecoach robbery and murder. It just wasn't healthy to be on Joe's bad side.

Frank Canton, on the other hand, was a much-respected lawman in Wyoming. The two men shared a bizarre secret that would not come to light until long after the disappearance of one of them.

Joe Horner

Josiah W. Horner was born the fifth of nine children on September 15, 1849 in Harrison Township, Indiana. When Joe was 13, the family settled in Ozark, Missouri. When Joe's father and elder brother John left to join the Confederacy, the youth was left as the male head of the family.

Most naive young men look at war as an adventure, and young Joe was no exception. In the spring of 1864, at the age of 14, Joe ran off to join up. He must have had an independent turn to his mind even then, because despite the fact that both his brother and father were serving with the Confederacy, Joe enlisted with the Union, serving with an uncle at Springfield, Missouri.

After the conclusion of the war, Joe was employed as a teamster working out of Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, and it was there that he reportedly killed his first man. As the story goes, a wagonmaster picked a fight with the youth and Joe killed him by striking him over the head with an oxen yoke, of all things.

Gone to Texas

By the end of 1866, the Horner family (including Joe) relocated to Denton County, Texas, where Joe became a cowboy. He spent the next five years working at this grueling profession, and sometime between 1871 and 1874, Joe decided that working was a tough way to make a living.

By 1874, when Horner was 25, he was ungainfully employed as a saloon thug and on May 7 of that year severely beat a man named Harris in a brawl in Jacksboro, Texas. The following month he was indicted for assault and two counts of cattle theft, which explains where his spending money came from.

October 10, 1874 was a landmark day for Joe. On that day he managed to get into no less than three separate gunfights. It started when Joe got into an argument with a black soldier from Fort Richardson in a Jacksboro saloon. Words were exchanged and both men went for their guns. When the gunsmoke cleared, the soldier was lying on the floor (he survived his wounds) and Joe was ordering another drink.

What he should have been doing was leaving town. As one might expect, a contingent of soldiers arrived in town later in the day to arrest him. When they attempted to do this, Joe once again opened fire. The result was that Joe's horse, as well as an innocent bystander, were killed.

Procuring another mount, Horner and a friend named Frank Lake galloped out of town with the cavalry in hot pursuit. Out on the prairie, the two engaged in another gun battle with the soldiers. Horner escaped, but Lake was wounded and captured.

At this point, Joe Horner disappears from history for a period of nearly 11 months. Disappearing and reappearing were talents that Joe possessed and was destined to use in even more spectacular fashion some time later.

Horner the bank robber

At any rate, by September of 1875, Joe found himself incarcerated in Jacksboro on a number of assault and rustling charges. Joe had a lot of friends, though, and on September 13, some of them broke him out of the Jacksboro jail.

Several months later, in January of 1876, Horner, in the company of two confederates, robbed a bank at Comanche, Texas and fled with more than $5,000 – quite a tidy sum in those days. Three weeks later, Horner was cornered in San Antonio and jailed in that city's infamous "Bat Cave" jail. He languished there for a year before he was finally tried and sentenced to 10 years of hard labor for the Comanche bank robbery.

Escape

On April 1, 1877, Joe Horner, in the company of a number of other inmates, made a daring escape from the "Bat Cave" and headed for the Mexican Border. Shortly after their escape, Horner and the other convicts held up a stagecoach for some travelling money.

Alert Uvalde County "minutemen" immediately took up the pursuit and, on April 17 captured Horner after a brief gunfight. Less than a week later Horner received yet another 10-year sentence for his trouble. The courts moved considerably quicker in those days than they do now.

WHO FRAMED AMARA WILLINGHAM?

We did. But it wasn't a pure matter of looking good (though she does look pretty dapper for a 7 1/2-year old second grader). A vision test at Capitan Elementary came up with some questions about Amara's eyes, questions answered by Dr. Randall Cox and his staff at the Lincoln County Eye Clinic. "Now I can read better," says Amara, daughter of Andy and Tamra Willingham of Alto. Tamra is a sales director for Mary Kay, and Andy runs Andy's Mechanic Service in Capitan... what the heck, one good plug deserves another! Set your pre-school eye exam today.

On May 5, 1877, Horner entered the dreaded Huntsville Penitentiary. But he already making other plans. On August 4, 1879, Horner escaped from a work gang and vanished. This time, his disappearance would last considerably longer than the previous 11-month period.

Frank Canton

Frank Canton had been employed as a cowboy for the Wyoming Stock Growers Association (WSGA) for some short time when he was appointed stock inspector by the association. With the appointment came the job of deputy sheriff of Johnson County, Wyoming.

The young man was such an efficient deputy that in November of the following year (1882), he was elected Sheriff of Johnson County. During the next four years, Canton would build a sterling record for himself, receiving much acclaim for his bravery.

In January of 1885, Canton and a young woman named Anna Wilkerson were married at Big Horn, Wyoming. In October of the same year, Canton became a local celebrity when he captured an infamous horsethief with the Hollywood-sounding name of Teton Jackson.

In March of 1886, Sheriff Canton presided over the only legal hanging that Johnson County ever had when, with his usual efficiency, he sent convicted murderer Bill Booth through the trap door of the gallows and directly across the River Styx.

(subbed) Chief of Detectives

On April 1, 1887, now former-Sheriff Canton was appointed chief of detectives for the WSGA. It was at this point, in the eyes of the small ranchers, that Canton "went bad." The WSGA consisted of most of the larger, wealthier ranchers in Wyoming and they considered the small ranchers to be little more than rustlers.

In December of 1891, the small ranchers felt that their suspicions of Canton were justified when he was suspected in the death of small rancher John Tisdale, who fell to an assassin's bullet on the road near Buffalo, Wyoming. Two days later, the body of another small rancher, Orley Jones, was discovered a few miles away. All eyes turned toward Frank Canton.

A week later Canton was cleared by a justice of the peace, but the small ranchers were unconvinced of his innocence and secured an indictment in another court charging him with the death of Tisdale. Canton read the writing on the wall and knew that if he were jailed, he would not live long enough to be tried. Without any further ado, he rather hurriedly left the area.

The Johnson County War

Approximately five months later, in April of 1892, the WSGA decided it was time to eliminate the small ranchers altogether and began to take steps to do so.

First they sent emissaries to Texas and began to recruit an army of gunmen that ultimately numbered some 50 or so hardcases. Once the Texans were in Wyoming and mobilized, the WSGA cut all communication lines out of the county. They did not want the outside world to know what was happening in Johnson County until it was all over.

With the county isolated, the little army, led by none other than Frank Canton, began prowling the countryside with a "dead list" of small ranchers that they intended to usher unceremoniously into the hereafter on sight.

Just before dawn on April 9, 1892, Canton's army surrounded a cabin that belonged to Nate Champion and his partner, Nick Ray – both of whose names were on the dead list. They intended to do away with both men as quickly as possible and to move on to their next victim. But Nate Champion was about to give them a lesson in courage that no man present would ever forget.

And back in Texas, the authorities had pretty much given up on ever finding Joe Horner. But they hadn't heard the last of him yet.
