Reliving 'Old Lincoln Days'

Preparations for the 'Last Escape of Billy the Kid' are already under way for Aug. 7-9

BY DIANNE STALLINGS

Playing Billy the Kid — Lincoln County's most infamous outlaw — in the annual pageant as part of Old Lincoln Days isn't an assignment to be taken lightly.

For the sixth year, John Shrecengost will act the part of The Kid Aug. 7-9 in "The Last Escape of Billy the Kid." He follows in the boot prints of other local notables, including the late Peter Hurd, a well-known Western artist who lived in San Patricio and took the first Kid role in 1940.

"I was kind of grandfathered in," the 19-year-old Shrecengost says of the casting. "My father (Bill) played Billy for 15 years and my brother, Thomas, for five years."

Not that Shrecengost didn't work his way into the lead. He spent five years as a nameless outlaw in the production.

"I've been in the pageant all my life," he said. "When I was young, I played a town kid."

Each year Shrecengost dons the special Billy outfit he's assembled for his brief moment of fame on the stage.

Randy and Leanne England also will perform during the weekend.

Although the pageant is the centerpiece of the weekend, other activities planned for "Old Lincoln Days" include a fiddler's contest at 2 p.m. Saturday, Mass at the historic San Juan Church at 1 p.m. Saturday and a parade at 11 a.m. Sunday.

Shrecengost will be joined on the outdoor stage by assorted friends and enemies of The Kid at 8:30 p.m. Friday, Aug. 7, and Saturday, Aug. 8, then again at 3 p.m. Sunday, Aug. 9 at the amphitheater on the west end of the historic settlement of Lincoln, where The Kid escaped from jail, killing two deputies.

The pageant tells the story of the Lincoln County War that transformed The Kid from a ranch hand to an outlaw and was sparked by the killing of a transplanted Englishman named William Tunstall. The story ends with The Kid's escape from the courthouse jail, a building open to public tours.

Visitors from throughout the United States and from many other countries come to Lincoln, on U.S. 380 between Hondo and Capitan to see the annual

Road work on Highway 70 to start in August

• An information meeting on the Highway 70 project is scheduled for 6:30 p.m. Monday at Ruidoso Downs Village Hall.

Two road construction projects in Ruidoso and Ruidoso Downs will start in August and two on-going projects are expected to pick up speed, according to state officials and construction managers.

• Work on a $7.6 million project to repave 6 miles of U.S. Highway 70 east from Sudderth Drive to where the four-lane highway narrows to two lanes may begin as soon as Aug. 10, a subcontractor for the project said.

• A $7.6 million project to straighten and widen 2.6 miles of Mechem from White Mountain Drive to Ski Run Road will start next week, said Bill Loomis, a project manager for Meadow Valley Contractors, Inc., the Phoenix-based company with state contracts for the four road construction projects in the Ruidoso area.

• A $1 million project to repave Ski Run Road, slated initially to take place in mid-June, now should occur sometime before Labor Day, pending state approval of a proposed asphalt mix, a project manager said.

• The on-going work along 4 miles of Mechem Drive should be back to full speed in August after Meadow Valley receives state approval on a proposal to stabilize clay-like soil, Loomis said.

As of Thursday, little information was available about the project to repave 6 miles of Highway 70. Al Oulman, Meadow Valley project manager, said information about the job will be released to the public at a meeting 6:30 p.m. Monday at Ruidoso Downs Village Hall.

A pre-construction meeting, in which the state and contractor go over the project as well as conclude contractual paperwork, is scheduled Tuesday morning.

A sub-contractor on the project, Wes Owen, said workers will probably begin putting an overlay (of asphalt) on the road as soon as Aug. 10.

Mechem to Ski Run Road

The second phase of road construction heading north on Mechem Drive from the intersection of White Mountain Drive differs from the other jobs, Loomis said.

"The road is going to straighten out considerably," he said.

Many of the curves along the road won't be as curve when the job is finished, he said.

Surveying work along the 2.6-mile portion of Mechem has already begun. In two to three weeks, traffic will be moved to the west side of the road to allow construction work on the east side, Loomis said.

Because the road's path is changing, there will be many places where construction work will not be adjacent to the traffic flow and won't hamper motorists, he said.

Some clearing of trees is to begin next week, as well as "pioneering" the job, he said. Pioneering is basically checking the terrain to see what problems may be ahead, he said. For example, the company may need fill

Village administration locks its doors to unwanted visitors

• Visitors now must be "buzzed" back to administrative offices.

BY TONI K. LAXSON
 RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

Dave Parks almost walked into a door at Ruidoso Village Hall recently.

The local insurance agent, who was at village hall for business reasons, was caught off-guard by the locked doors leading to village administrative offices.

"I almost ran through the door when I tried to go in," said Parks. After trying to access the offices through another door, Parks went back to the information desk and gave his name to a clerk. The clerk then called back to Deputy Village Clerk Irma Nava to let her know he was there before "buzzing" the door open, Parks said.

Village Manager Alan Briley said doors to administrative offices were locked beginning July 15 because of security concerns. "Especially during council meetings," Briley said.

"We have people walking around (through the administrative offices). So, the mayor (Robert Donaldson) decided to put a buzzer on the doors ... There's no reason for people to go through our offices when we are not there, and that has been happening," Briley said.

Briley said a theft from one office occurred about a year ago; and about two months ago, racetrack tickets were taken from the mayor's office.

Donaldson was out of town this week on vacation and could not be reached for comment about the locks.

Neither the water department nor the planning department are behind the locked doors, which cost the village about $300 to install.

People will have the same access to village administrators as they have had in the past, Briley said. Appointments are not required to see an administrator, he said. Anyone wishing to see Briley, for example, would announce themselves to a clerk at the information desk.

"And they will see if I'm available or not," he said. "There's no sense in going back if I'm not there."

The measure is not unreasonable, he said, adding that no one would expect to be able to walk directly into a bank president's office, a newspaper publisher's office, the governor's office or the president's office.

Briley said Thursday he has received only two complaints about the locked doors.

Parks said he is not mad about the locked doors, only saddened they are deemed necessary by the mayor and village administrators. He has heard the locks may be in response to some people who have abused the village's open hallways in the past by continually taking up officials' time.

"If it is necessary, I think it's a little sad that it has gotten to that point," Parks said. "And if people are taking advantage of just stomping into officials' offices ... then that's not good either. But it seems to me that we can handle it without having to put locks on the doors."

Frank Sawyer, another local insurance agent, echoed most of Park's statements, adding a concern about the perception of open government.

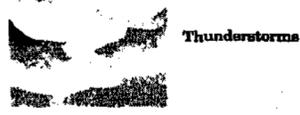

"Behind the locked doors are they doing the people's business, or are they giving the people the business?" Sawyer said.

Al Junge, a frequent visitor to village hall, said he is protesting the locked doors in a letter.

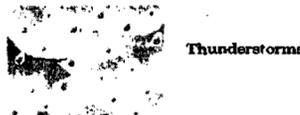

"The hallways belong to the citizens ... If they feel there is a safety problem back there the answer is very simple, each person should lock their door," Junge said.

Commission meets tonight to discuss county jail

Anyone with ideas about where Lincoln County should build its new jail should come ready to voice their opinions Friday at the County Commission's special site review meeting at 6:30 p.m. in the Ruidoso Convention Center.

Residents of the town of Carrizozo, who want the jail to stay in their community, turned out last Friday to state their case.

Budget items on the agenda include a determination of commission action during a previous budget session on overtime for the sheriff's office.

Some commissioners said Sheriff Tom Sullivan was told to reduce his overtime when the board approved temporary positions and an application for two new deputies under a grant program. But County Clerk Martha Proctor said her information does not reflect a motion to that effect.

Commission Chairman L. Ray Nunley will report on the status of the county jail's compliance with fire safety codes. Other jail-related issues may be discussed.

The meeting will end with a closed-to-the-public executive session.

Inmate accuses county jail guards of larceny

BY DIANNE STALLINGS
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

An inmate in the Lincoln County Detention Center whose wife claims he was denied medical treatment, filed larceny charges Tuesday against three jail guards and its administrator.

Ivan Johnson file the petty misdemeanor charges in the Carrizozo court of Magistrate Judge Gerald Dean. He named as defendants jail administrator Mike Borrego and jailers Bob Turner, Kenneth Vega and Janet Walker, according to court records.

Johnson claims six or seven postage stamps were removed from his cell. His wife, Hollyce Johnson contends the action is retaliation for her previous complaints and a visit last Friday by a representative of the American Civil Liberties Union, sparked by Johnson and other former and current inmates.

Borrego said last week a routine shakedown of inmate cells was conducted to ferret out contraband, combustibles and county property.

"We do it about once every 10 days unannounced except to give them an opportunity to put their personal items on the bed," he said. "Everything else is looked at for possible discarding."

"He claims some property was missing, but I've had no request from him to replace it. We can respond to any allegation or investigation that comes along."

A spokesman for Judge Dean said summons will be issued to the four people named by Johnson. They will be arraigned and read their rights. Conviction on a petty misdemeanor is punishable by up to six months in jail and a $500 fine.

"My husband was shackled and handcuffed when they brought him from the jail to court," Hollyce Johnson said Wednesday. "I was in the same courtroom with Ivan, but the jailers wouldn't allow any contact."

Johnson is serving the last few months of a sentence for violation of the conditions of an order against domestic violence.

His wife claim when Johnson was ill in jail and running a high fever, he was denied proper medical care and that the situation was repeated later when his finger became infected.

Hollyce Johnson took her complaints to the county commissioners two months ago. They asked County Attorney Alan Morel to investigate. No report on the investigation has surfaced in public meetings.

The jail is managed by Correctional Systems Inc., which supplies an administrator as part of its contract.

The situation hasn't changed since she filed her first complaints, Hollyce Johnson said.

LCMC expansion could start in January 1999

A proposed $1.5 million expansion and renovation of the Lincoln County Medical Center may be ready to go out for bids in November, said hospital administrator Valerie Miller.

And if all goes as planned, ground will be broken for the project on Sudderth Drive in January, 1999.

Besides extensive rearranging of departments to create more space, 4,500 square feet will be added to the county-owned facility managed by Presbyterian HealthCare Systems, Miller said.

Depending on money availability, this is supposed to be the first of three phases of construction and remodeling.

"The functional design of the first phase has been completed," Miller said. "This phase will expand the emergency department, add a third X-ray room, and move C.T. scanning (computer tomography, which produces images of the body in slices and in great detail) inside the building adjacent to the existing X-ray department. It also will provide for a new patient registration area, waiting room and outpatient service area.

"This expansion is designed to provide greater patient convenience with more of a 'one-stop shopping' approach for outpatient services such as laboratory, respiratory services and cardiology procedures."

Unfortunately, the cost is too high to move the X-ray department and patients will have a short walk to access that area, she said.

The design includes a new front entrance to the hospital with a covered driveway for patients and families to be dropped off in inclement weather.

Emergency department patients will have a separate entrance on the west side of the building to accommodate those who walk in or need to be dropped off from a vehicle. A restricted ambulance entrance also is part of the design.

All of the construction will take place on the west side of the building, which means a temporary entrance must be created for emergency department patients and ambulances, Miller said.

S.M.P.C. Architects from Albuquerque submitted this sketch of what the hospital should look like after renovations are completed.

"This will be an inconvenience for our patients, but it is our commitment to minimize the difficulties for everyone," she said. "It's expected construction and remodeling will take about one year."

"I hope everyone will be patient with us as the inconvenience will be worth the end product and will allow us to serve the public better in the future."

"And there will be blasting, on that I can assure you," he said.

Pre-blast surveys will be done before any explosive materials are used and all the blasts will be monitored seismically to ensure shock waves are not traveling through the ground, he said.

Workers will apply a material called "ampho-dirt" in the areas that need to be broken up by explosives.

Ski Run Road

FOR THE RECORD

Frontier Medical is a not-for-profit agency for home health care, not a profit-making agency as stated in Wednesday's story on home health and hospice services.

A meeting between Meadow Valley managers and U.S. Forestry officials is to take place soon regarding a plan to pave Ski Run Road and the affect on spotted owls, Loomis said.

The owl, an endangered species, has a habitat in the forest near Ski Run Road. However, it has been determined that the company will not disturb the owl's nests with the road work noise except in one section, Loomis said, referring to earlier discussions with Forestry officials. That portion of the road will be done after Sept. 1, when the owl's nesting season is considered over.

The project initially was to start in mid-June, with the road to be closed to through traffic for about two weeks. However, Meadow Valley is awaiting state approval on a hot mix, or asphalt, design before starting the project, Loomis said. He declined to estimate when the project now will start.

"We want to have this (approval of the hot mix) in hand before we ask to close it again," Loomis said, adding, "We hope to have this job completed before Labor Day."

Mechem Drive from Sudderth

A tentative solution to this unstable soil discovered under Mechem Road has been reached by state officials and Meadow Valley executives, Loomis said.

When too much clay was found in soil samples taken near the intersection of White Mountain Road in late June, much of the project was put on hold until a solution could be found.

The proposed answer is a lime-treatment, roughly estimated to add $600,000 to the project's initial $8 million price tag.

Meadow Valley this week was in the process of submitting a formalized proposal on how to apply the lime-mixture, Loomis said.

"We are still negotiating on that — the price as well as the work," Lorenz said Thursday. "We don't want to just jump in and do something and then find out later that it wasn't the right thing to do."

For example, the lime should be mixed with the soil to the proper depth and amount, she said.

Once a proposal is officially accepted by the state, then the company will contract with a subcontractor for the lime-treatment. Loomis said it will probably take the subcontractor, Brown & Brown of Kansas, two weeks after official notice to bring equipment here.

However, "We are going to be doing earth-moving ahead of that," Loomis said.

Lorenz also said the Mechem road work may soon include additional traffic controls, especially near White Mountain Drive.

"It's very difficult to get people to slow down at the north end of the project," she said.

County continues management search for Glencoe Events Center

Commissioners say Museum of the Horse bid is too expensive

BY DIANNE STALLINGS
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

Lincoln County Commissioners will advertise longer and offer another option for a private group to take over the county Rural Events Center in Glencoe.

The last time they asked for proposals to manage the center on U.S. 70 about 17 miles east of Ruidoso, some groups that expressed an interest complained they didn't have enough time to come up with a comprehensive proposal.

The only entity to answer the advertisement was the Museum of the Horse, created by The Hubbard Foundation, whose principals, R. D. and Joan Dale Hubbard, also are backers of the annual Lincoln County Cowboy Symposium that's staged at the Glencoe center.

But Commission Chairman L. Ray Nunley said the annual $146,000 or more fee requested by the museum was just too steep for the county.

Museum officials wouldn't budge off that mark, insisting it is the minimum needed to promote the center and create some permanent exhibits there about the area's early history.

"I'm convinced the museum could do an extremely good job running the center and could get it off dead center, but I'm also convinced we may be able to find a better deal," Nunley said last week during a special commission meeting.

A motion to rebid the request for proposals was amended by Commissioner Rex Wilson to include a provision for leasing the building and grounds.

It passed 3-2 with Commissioners Wilton Howell and Monroy Montes voting against it.

David Cufumins from Capitan said he'd prefer the county sell the center, which some Capitan residents think represents competition for rodeos, ropings and other arena-related functions — and might someday steal the annual county fair.

Montes said because federal dollars are involved, the center can't be sold and there might be limitations on leasing unless it goes to a non-profit organization.

County Attorney Alan Morel said he would read agreements signed by the commission to be sure it can be leased.

"I think we had to get federal agency OK to lease," Howell said.

"Nothing says they won't allow it," Commissioner William Schwettmann said. "Why not try? We won't lose anything."

The center was purchased by the county with $250,000 from the state Legislature. Additional grants and allocations were secured to add an outdoor arena, bleachers and other improvements.

The county budgeted about $78,000 for its operation this year.

The commission pays about $19,000 each year to the county fair association to manage the county fairgrounds in Capitan and to stage the annual county fair.

The fairgrounds also has received money from the legislature for improvements.

Volunteers use muscles to care for the woods

BY DIANNE STALLINGS
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

Before the summer monsoon season began, 13 volunteers lent their muscles to the U.S. Forest Service and gave trails within the Capitan Mountains Wilderness some special care.

Led by Smokey Bear Ranger District's Bob Palko, the group, including some other Forest Service employees, spent five days camped in the wilderness and cleared about 180 trees that had fallen across portions of 21 miles of the Summit Peak, Capitan Peak, Pierce Canyon, Seven Cabins and Pancho Canyon trails.

Because they were in the wilderness, no motorized equipment could be used and the project was accomplished with cross cut saws, other hand tools and lots of hard work, said Sam Tobias, who's in charge of recreational lands in the Smokey Bear district of the forest.

Supporting the crew was a logistical problem, because of the remote location and the lack of water, he said.

But outfitter Ken Armata, who provided a cook, food and pack stock to haul the water and camp gear, tackled and overcame each obstacle.

The crew consisted of six volunteers from the American Hiking Society, Dick Barrett from the Ruidoso Senior Volunteer Program, Ray Geschke from Roswell, Youth Conservation Corps member Sky Trueblood from Ruidoso and Forest Service employees Palko, Chris Brown, David Sanchez and Jeromey Pinto.

Church to be built on condo site

Church officials say there's no set schedule yet for building on the 14-acre lot on Country Club Drive.

BY TONI K. LAXSON
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

A beleaguered condo development site across from the Cree Meadows County Club became church property last week.

"It's a relief," said Roy Crocker, whose family has owned the 14-acre piece on Country Club Drive for roughly 15 years. "We are happy to have it sold, and particularly happy to have it sold to the First Baptist Church."

Linda Stanford, church secretary, said the congregation that now meets at 420 Mechem Drive intends to eventually build a new church on the site. The congregation, especially its Sunday school classes, is quickly growing out of space at the present building, built in 1947, Stanford said.

Several years ago the land had been sold to a Texas developer who was going to build 77 townhomes and 15 condominiums at the site, according to a local contractor involved with the project.

However, Crocker filed a foreclosure lawsuit after the developer defaulted on the payments. The land had been back on the market for about a year before its sale Friday to the First Baptist Church.

Both Crocker and Dwight Andrews, who is on the church's long-range planning committee, declined to say what the purchase price was.

No architectural plans have been drawn up for the building, which is still probably several years away from being built, church members said.

"We are trying to pay the property off first," Stanford said.

NEWS BRIEFS

Humane Society garage sale successful

The Lincoln County Humane Society's annual garage sale sponsored by The Ruidoso News raised $6,300 Saturday to benefit the society's spay and neuter fund.

This is the seventh year for the sale and in that time period, the event has raised an estimated total of $16,300 for the fund.

The sale has grown from being crowded into the press and newspaper insertion rooms at the newspaper office on Park Avenue to taking up most of a warehouse room at Eastern New Mexico University in Sierra Mall off Mechem Drive.

The one thing that hasn't changed is the support of the animal lovers who annually donate items for the sale and then show up to purchase other goods at the sale or to make cash donations.

The spay and neuter fund enhances the chances of abandoned animals for adoption and helps owners of other animals (that didn't come from the shelter), who may find it difficult financially to pay for the procedure.

The goal is to control the population of unwanted animals through prevention of litters, instead of euthanizing a healthy animal.

Parents can apply for free or reduced meals for children before school starts this year, said Ken Weaver, director of food services for Ruidoso Schools.

Pre-application days are Aug. 4 and 5, 9 a.m. to noon in the administration board room, and applications can be picked up at the Ruidoso Municipal Schools Administration Building at 200 Horton Circle.

OUR OPINION

Something contentious this way comes

Contentious discord — or something — has reared its head over Lincoln County's heretofore successful anti-drunken-driving (or anti-DWI) program.

When that discord finds the judiciary on one side and county commissioners and their employees on the other, it's got to be taken seriously.

Charlie White and his assistant had developed one of the most successful "get the drunks off the highways" programs in the state, but found themselves on the outside looking in after it was found that the program's budget was over-spent some months before the end of the contract year. (It didn't help, perhaps, that they proposed some major raises for themselves in the 1998-99 budget.)

Ruidoso's elected magistrate judge, William Butts, says the county's acting manager, Martha Guevara, has hired two people "with no experience, no knowledge of DWI laws" to run the program. One is a former state legislator named Richard Kloeppel and the other is County Commissioner Monroy Montes' brother, Johnny.

Butts has threatened to pull out of the county program, and has proposed that the village of Ruidoso go for the state grant money that funds the program, along with the administration of it. The county, says Judge Butts, has demonstrated it can't oversee the program, since it let its employees over-spend.

On the other hand, Acting Manager Guevara notes that DWI program salaries are paid from grant money; that the county can hire whomever it pleases; and that in a small county it's hard to find somebody not related, so "that can't be a factor in hiring."

She also said it would be a disappointment if Judge Butts withdrew from the program, which offers assistance in monitoring DWI offenders to ensure that they receive counseling and fulfill conditions of probation.

Commissioner Montes believes there's personal dislike for him on Butts' part, and that the judge shouldn't let such things cloud his judgment. Butts cites the job description advertised by the county when it was trying to hire a program manager, and says it doesn't match the hires.

Commissioner Wilton Howell has chimed in by noting a political tilt in Butts' own initial appointment as magistrate by then Gov. Bruce King (whom Butts had guarded as a member of the New Mexico State Police). The judge merely states that he was qualified, unlike the DWI appointees.

Without taking sides, we must commend all parties for one thing:

It's a rare load of dirty laundry indeed that gets so thoroughly washed in public. We trust all the voters are watching.

Taxes that work well

To the editor:

This summer my grandson and many other children were recipients of our taxes at work. They attended the Summer Science Camp sponsored through Eastern New Mexico University and grants from NASA.

These children, in three weeks, were introduced to computer science, geology, chemistry, forestry, math, astronomy and so much more!

The wonderful teachers, driver and young mentors instilled in these children the desire to continue to learn the sciences and to stay in school.

Children from all economic levels were involved, as there was no charge to the families except for the time to take their children to the Ruidoso Middle School. Those children from outside the Ruidoso area even had a school bus pick them up and take them home each day.

This wonderful learning opportunity will be available again next summer, if funding is available, and I can only say, if you want to give your child or grandchild something that can affect their whole life, contact ENMU-Ruidoso for information on the Summer Science Camp. Keep children learning and in school.

Consumers beware

To the editor:

If you are in the market to have your home painted, beware of the glut of "fly-by-night" painters and carpenters that have overtaken Ruidoso. They want to paint your home and rake your pine needles in the same breath.

Virtually anyone can slop paint on a house and give you a bill for it. It takes a knowledgeable, professional, experienced painter who is also licensed, bonded and insured to make sure you receive top quality work for your dollar. Always make sure you see your painter's license. It is against the law to paint without a license; you can be fined and your painter may be both fined and possibly jailed.

Assuming you find a...painter, you must still check his references, and ask to see his work if at all possible. Know what you're paying for—check the square footage of the area you want painted. Most painting jobs should not run more than 50 cents a square foot for exteriors. Most all jobs in the Ruidoso area will need power washing to remove loose and peeling paint as well as dirt from the surface... Make sure the surface area has sufficient time to dry... Real painters do not paint in the rain, and do not paint wet houses. ... I wrote a letter in the early spring when the days were warm and it still was freezing at night, warning not to paint when there are still freezing temperatures at night.

The same advice applies here. The paint will not stick. Preparation is the key to a long-lasting paint job. Loose and peeling paint must be removed. All raw wood surfaces must be primed. Paint will not stick to wood, paint only sticks to primer and properly prepared painted surfaces. Read the instructions on a can of paint, and make sure your painter follows them—they are put there for a reason.

I have painted homes in the Ruidoso area for more than 25 years. Fully one-fourth of the jobs I do consist of cleaning up someone else's mess, re-painting houses that were shoddily done in the past. The consumer got cheated.

Always put two to three coats on problem areas such as the bottom...where the water splashes and the snow lays against it.

These are just a few ... hints to help you get the paint job you pay for.

A new job for Chino?

Having learned by reading the state's biggest city paper that the Navajo Nation, the nation's biggest Indian tribe, has had three presidents in just one week (and four in a year), it crossed our mind that, if he's interested, there might be a job waiting for Wendell Chino when he retires next year as leader of the Mescalero Apaches.

MOUNTAIN ASIDES

BY KEITH GREEN
RUIDOSO NEWS

His 40 years of leadership, most of it as elected tribal president, should qualify him well to set up as a consultant for tribes seeking to bring stability to tribal government—not to mention a wealth of information about how to beat the feds, the state, and just about every other political body seeking to subrogate Indian sovereignty.

President Chino, of course, might just want to retire (as he said after winning the last election), but many, many people have discovered that when the moment of stepping into retirement actually arrives they tend to have some second thoughts.

Nevertheless, should a retired President Chino choose to do something else, he might even have an inside track on getting a job with the Navajos; in his youth, he worked for them.

Then again, he might decide to run for tribal president just one more time...and that wouldn't surprise anybody.

The other big news making the headlines this week was the multi-layered legal power game being played by the White House, Monica Lewinsky, Ken Starr and a supporting cast of garrulous lawyers and strong, silent Secret Service agents.

Now it appears that Ms. Lewinsky will testify that, yes, they did, and, yes, the President suggested ways to deny that they did—all in exchange for her immunity from prosecution for perjury.

About all we can think of that might bring a quick end to it all would be for Hillary Clinton to get really, really angry.

The roots of the Tijerina movement

Reies Lopez Tijerina was born in a one-room adobe house on the outskirts of Falls City, Texas, on Sept. 21, 1926.

His father was a sharecropper.

As early as he could remember, his grandfather, Santiago Tijerina, told him stories of injustice and land fraud. Santiago was an heir to a land grant near Laredo, Texas, and his stories helped Reies mold the obsession that would eventually make him famous — or infamous, as some would claim — years later.

During the Depression, the large Tijerina family moved from farm to farm in Texas, and then elsewhere, picking cotton, hoeing onions, shelling pecans. Reies's mother died when he was seven, but not before instilling in him her deep religious convictions. In 1946, Reies enrolled in an Assembly of God bible school in Isleta, Texas, and began a career as a minister. He was a forceful speaker and had been guided since childhood by dreams and visions. Now, despite the fact that he had married a fellow student at the bible school, he pursued his inner voice, living in a cave for a time to find illumination.

He spent three years as pastor of a church in Victoria, Texas, and then took his message on the road, preaching wherever he could across the Southwest. He spoke in Spanish to Spanish-American and Mexican audiences, and he spoke of God and the injustices those people had suffered. At some point his Assembly of God credentials were revoked because of his "unorthodox attitude," but that didn't stop his preaching.

In the mid-1950s, Tijerina and his family joined 16 other families in an attempt to establish a pueblo like the ones that had worked so well for their ancestors.

They bought 150 acres of dry, hot land south of Phoenix, Arizona, built a church and houses, started a school and called themselves the "Heralds of Peace."

Their village was, in fact, a commune, similar to the ones that would spring up across the country a decade or so later as part of the "hippie" phenomenon. And this commune suffered a similar opposition from its neighbors.

The local school board questioned the adequacy of the school and stolen property was allegedly discovered in the pueblo. When the courts dismissed the charges, somebody set most of the buildings on fire. The Heralds of Peace were forced to move on.

Tijerina and six fellow Heralds decided to take their visions to New Mexico.

Another similarity these men shared with the hippies who followed was their facial hair. Beards were very rare in the 1950s, in the Spanish-American community as well as the nation as a whole. Most of the beards in northern New Mexico belonged to old men or to artists in Santa Fe and Taos.

Tijerina had a mustache, but his fellow Heralds were bearded when they arrived in Chama in 1968 — perhaps to disguise their identities after their several run-ins with the law in Arizona. The locals quickly nicknamed them los barbudos — the bearded ones.

It isn't clear what the Heralds were doing in New Mexico, or what they intended to do. Tijerina was a preacher, and the others were connected with his ministry, but the message they were bringing was vague. They didn't stay long.

But while they were there, Reies heard more stories of stolen land grants and dispossessed families — the same kind of stories he had heard from his grandfather as a child and later across the Southwest as he traveled. This time, he was shown original deeds and other documents that he felt verified the complaints. It was a turning point for him.

It was several years before he returned to northern New Mexico, but when he did his message was anything but vague.

Next week: The occupation of Echo Amphitheater.

Elsewhere: Reies Tijerina and Queen Elizabeth II of England were born in 1926, as was the Book-of-the-Month Club.

YOUR OPINION

Who wants a new jail?

To the editor:

I write this letter with significant concern and dismay about the debate over the location of the proposed new Lincoln County Detention Facility. The Town of Carrizozo has made a very generous offer of assistance to Lincoln County and Lincoln County taxpayers for locating the new detention facility within Carrizozo. As a taxpayer, I am most concerned about how the new detention facility will positively and adversely affect the county and the communities within the county.

As taxpayers we must be very concerned about the cost of this new facility. Knowing that Carrizozo has offered land for the facility to the county at no cost, and knowing that Carrizozo has offered contiguous land for residential development for employees of the new facility at no cost, and knowing that Carrizozo has offered to extend utilities to the location at no cost, and knowing that Carrizozo will provide water and sewer services at no cost makes me wonder why there are any other locations being actively considered. It seems to me that Carrizozo is a very viable and logical location strictly from a cost perspective.

Aside from cost, however, there may be a more important issue for Lincoln County to consider in locating the new detention facility—economic impact. As we all know, Carrizozo is a county and state government-driven economy. All of the county offices are there, the Twelfth Judicial District Courthouse is there, the magistrate courthouse is there, the Lincoln County sheriff's office and existing detention facility are all located in Carrizozo.

Conversely Ruidoso and Ruidoso Downs and the surrounding environs are not government-driven economies. Ruidoso and Ruidoso Downs are tourist-driven economies and much consideration needs to be given to the affect of locating a new detention facility in the respective communities.

On the one hand, locating the new detention facility in the county and state government-driven economy of Carrizozo makes perfectly good sense. It would be in close proximity to the judicial complex, in close proximity to the sheriff's office, and in close proximity to the existing medical facility utilized by Lincoln County. Additionally, and equally importantly, there are precious few tourists in Carrizozo to be offended by the existence of a new detention facility.

Contrasting that with the Villages of Ruidoso and Ruidoso Downs, which are tourist-driven economies, one is hard-pressed to imagine how the addition of a new detention facility to either of these communities would enhance their tourism image or their local economies. The economies of Ruidoso and Ruidoso Downs are built on tourism. The last time I checked, the good folks who patronize our villages and form the life-blood of our economies are not coming to see men and women in orange in a new detention facility. In fact, I know of no tourist-driven economy that boasts of having a detention facility as one of its attractions.

Strictly from this perspective, one has to wonder why on earth some of the county commissioners would consider Ruidoso or Ruidoso Downs as a possible location for a new detention facility, unless there are other political motivations at work.

Finally, we must consider the desires of the different communities. Clearly Carrizozo has put its money where its mouth is and wants the new detention facility. The good citizens of Carrizozo welcome this facility with open arms. Conversely, I suspect that most of the good folks of Ruidoso and Ruidoso Downs are less than enthusiastic about the prospect of having a new detention facility built in their backyard.

I write this letter in hopes that all of the citizens of Lincoln County will be better informed and will voice their considered opinion and judgment to the county commissioners on Friday (today) at 6:30 p.m. in the Civic Events Center in Ruidoso. Despite some attitudes to the contrary, this county still belongs to the taxpayers and decisions should not be forced upon us that are not in our collective best interests.

anniversary of the wedding of Bob and Betty Lambert.

They're my neighbors just up the river at the Canyon Trading Post.

Robert E. Lambert and the former Beatrice Jane Vyne, affectionately known as "Betty," were married July 28, 1945, in Skull Valley, Ariz.

Betty, a natural-born artist, studied art in college in Missouri, Arizona and California.

She works in oil, pen and ink, sculpture and ornamental silver. She specializes in depicting the life of the Navajo Indians, drawing upon her youthful memories of the days when her father owned a trading post on the Navajo Reservation.

Bob moved with his mother from his native home in Kentucky to Arizona as a boy, for her health. His mother recovered, and Bob became a cowboy.

After living the life of Arizona ranchers for 20 years, Bob and Betty moved to the Ruidoso Valley in 1969, where they established the Canyon Trading Post.

It is a treasure house of arts and crafts of Native American background.

Bob is a walking storybook of true tales of his life-long experience as a cowboy and rancher.

The trading post is a landmark known from coast to coast for a vast variety of gifts and antique treasures; and also as a center of friendship and hospitality.

We all extend congratulations to Bob and Betty on the occasion of their 53rd wedding anniversary.

What kind of Kid was he?

According to statements made by his school teacher about his boyhood days in Silver City, Billy the Kid never caused any trouble and helped out with the chores.

The nearest you can come to knowing someone without actually being acquainted with him, is by conversation with those who knew him.

In listening to those who knew him, you get the impression that the Kid, according to the custom of the day, placed a high value on friendship; that much of his trouble resulted from taking up for his friends.

Among the Spanish people, the Kid was liked and admired because in their words he was un joven muy caballero (a youth very much of a gentleman).

Such great importance did the Spanish people place on good manners, courtesy, politeness and all-around consideration, that they classed anyone outstanding in these qualities of character as "well educated."

Therefore, often in speaking of Billy the Kid, they said of him also that he was bien educado (well educated). It also has been handed down that the Kid was fond of children and that they in turn were attracted to him. Some who knew him said "he was named right...He was a kid and didn't get a chance to grow up."

Although born in New York, the Kid became a child of the West, and the West has remained ever more fond of their adopted son.

GUEST COMMENTARY

Partners against wildfire

BY ALAN S. DEFLER
U. S. FOREST SERVICE

It was just a few weeks ago that the media were deeply involved reporting huge wildfire activity in Mexico, Florida and New Mexico. There are still several months left of what we traditionally think of as the Western "fire season."

Just because our monsoon season has begun, those of us in the Southwest should not relax. In fact, now is the time to become really active in your personal efforts to be prepared for future fire activity. Your past efforts are appreciated. Your future efforts are critical.

...I suggest you join the effort to manage our lands in ways that include fuels management, not fire exclusion.

Fire has been and always will be an integral part of our Southwest environment. Disregarding this fact will result in devastating fires that threaten lives, destroy property, and severely affect basic soil, water and wildlife resources. Federal and state natural resource agencies are committed to safety and a full range of wildland fire prevention techniques. However, it can't be done without help.

The solution lies in creating effective partnerships and in reducing the amount of fuel available to burn. Sounds simple, doesn't it? Unfortunately, it isn't. I can suggest some steps that you and your neighbors can take to help us maintain healthy Southwest ecosystems.

- Reduce fuels (dead branches near the ground, old limbs on the ground, etc.) and you become part of the solution. Create local partnerships with federal, state and local agencies. Get affected officials involved, recognize that the biggest risk you face results from doing nothing...

- Create a defensible space around your house that is free of dead forest materials. Thinning, prescribed fire, and chipping are examples of techniques that need to be used. Remember, tree densities are too great when tree crowns (tops) are touching each other. You must cut some trees.

- Seek the expertise of Forest Service and State

Forestry for advice and assistance on brush and tree removal. The partnerships I suggested earlier will help you gain support, and leverage the funding to "make it happen."

There are some really good examples of completed and ongoing fuel treatment projects in the Southwest. They can be seen in the Ruidoso and Albuquerque areas... Conversely, there are many high-hazard areas in critical need of treatment. They're only waiting for the right conditions and ignition.

We in the Forest Service believe we have a window of opportunity of 15 to 20 years in which to make progress in solving this problem.

You truly can be a part of the solution. Let's not wait until the Southwest experiences a tragedy similar to what Florida is just emerging from. We need to accelerate fuels treatments, both mechanical and prescribed fire... One way or another, our Southwest fuels will burn. It isn't a matter of whether but when. Can we partner with you?

The author is director of aviation and fire management for the Southwestern Region, U. S. Forest Service, a part of the U. S. Department of Agriculture. His office is in Albuquerque.

Cattle market in the state

New Mexico cattle and calves on feed and destined for the slaughter market as of July 1 totaled 82,000, according to a recent release from the New Mexico Agricultural Statistics Service. In the nation, the count was 9.16 million in June.

New Mexico is 12th in the nation for the number of cattle, according to the release.

The state total for June is a 4,000 head increase from the previous month, but an 8,000 head decrease from last July's inventory, the service said. Placements of cattle and calves on feed during June totaled 20,000 head, the same as last month and one year earlier. Marketings of fed cattle fell to 15,000 head in June, down 25 percent from this May and 35 percent from last June.

Livestock slaughtered in New Mexico in June totaled 2,000 head — 100 more than last June. Total live weight slaughtered, 1.857 million pounds, is up 7 percent from a year ago.

Tai Chi — It's a martial art for everyone

The gentle movements of the discipline make the classes possible for even 90-year-olds with bad knees, says instructor Randy Bruck.

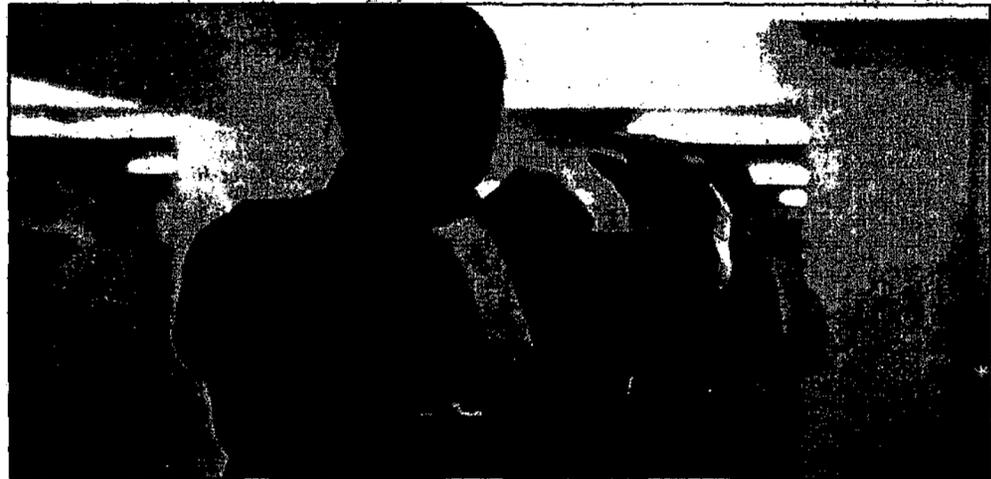

BY TONI K. LAXSON
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

Randy Bruck is very specific about the style of Tai Chi he teaches.

"This is the 'Yang' style," said Bruck, who has started classes on the martial art form Tuesday and Thursday nights at the Ruidoso Athletic Club (RAC).

"And I started this style of Tai Chi in 1994 ... I've been practicing martial arts since 1980."

Of all the Tai Chi styles — there are four major disciplines and several minor — Yang is the easiest on the body because the stance is higher — in other words, a person doesn't have to bend their knees as much as they go through the 60 movements of the Yang style, Bruck said.

Randy Bruck, Tai Chi instructor, teaches the martial art discipline to a small class in the basement of the RAC.

"I've seen 90-year-old ladies do it with ease," he said. "Older people with bad knees can still do it."

The three other major styles of Tai Chi are the "Wu," the "Sun" and the "Chen," Bruck said.

The Yang style was created by Grand Master William C.C. Chen, he said.

Bruck, who works in construction when not teaching Tai Chi, says most of the people signing up for his classes do so for their health.

Tai Chi is not only an exercise great for relieving tension, but it has been said to alleviate arthritis, Bruck said.

"A lot of people don't take Tai Chi as a martial art, but I do teach it as a martial art if they want to learn," Bruck said. He first got into martial arts while living in Seattle, Wash., after a friend convinced him to try it, he said.

"When I moved to Tucson (Ariz.) I couldn't find any Kung Fu classes, which is what I was interested in. But I found Tai Chi and started taking a class," Bruck said.

Now, he prefers the Tai Chi over any other martial arts discipline, he said.

Vocational training under Mescalero Apache program opening doors

BY DIANNE STALLINGS
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

Lucinda Yuzos was looking for a job. D.L. Vigil was looking for a future. Both of them found what they needed in the Mescalero vocational-technical training program. Twenty young adults at a time are enrolled in the program, which has a constant waiting list of another 60 applicants, said Frank Buchler, program director. "The title is the Mescalero Employment and Vocational Program," he said. "So it's there to give people jobs and to train them." The training isn't confined to construction trades. Buchler and instructors Frank Crawley and Larry Brusuelas also arrange guest speakers from real estate, investment, banking and other industries, who talk to program participants about how to buy a house, balance a check book, select a car and develop other life skills.

The construction training benefits the enrollees, even as it helps the Mescalero Apache Tribe, which sponsors the program. The trainees built a center for the tribe's Head Start program, concession stands for the tribal rodeo grounds, picnic tables for the annual feasts, constructed the conservation office, and rehabilitated homes for the elderly and needy. They've learned how to install hot water heaters, re-tile floors, repair roofs and add decks. "This normally is a three-month program, with classes changing at the end of each session," Buchler said. "But this last group has been six months. It runs year-around." Although they juggle several projects at a time, the most recent is a four-bedroom, three-bath rectory for St. Joseph Mission that will be used to accommodate visiting priests and will include a small chapel, Buchler said. The difference in cost to the mission is significant, Crawley said. Construction under the program will run about $25 a square foot (with a total of 1,750 square feet) compared to a commercial contractor's cost of $50 and a retail cost of $60 to $100 in different parts of Lincoln and Otero counties. The three instructors are well qualified to guide their younger charges. Buchler taught vocational and construction trades for 20 years, mostly on reservations, including the Hopi and Navajo. He started a night school in Holbrook, Ariz., after finding that as director of facilities management on the Hopi Reservation, he couldn't find enough trained staff to handle the necessary work. "I taught the people at night who worked for me during the day," Buchler said. After playing golf at the Inn of the Mountain Gods, he stopped at Mescalero to drop off some information about a seminar he taught. "I've been here ever since," he said. The program started four years ago. Crawley was a contractor in Oklahoma and Texas before coming to Ruidoso, where he built for 20 years, then decided to try teaching the trade. Brusuelas worked for the Mescalero Housing Authority until Buchler said he needed help. That was two years ago. "I stayed, because I enjoy working with the students," Brusuelas said. "They're eager to learn and it's exciting to give something back to the tribe. I learned my trade in the (Mescalero) housing authority. When I had twin boys and needed a job, they gave me the opportunity." "We've had a pretty good success rate," Buchler said. "Some (previous program participants) have been in various jobs for two years." Seeing the tribe become self-sufficient is a major push of the Mescalero leadership, Buchler said. Following that lead, he and his supervisor, John Shendo, tribal education director, with guidance from Tribal President Wendell Chino and other advisers such as Dale Webb, are trying to make the vocational program stand on its own. To that end, a pallet assembly business was started recently and is headed by John Brusuelas in the same area as the metal fabrication center. Buchler lined up a healthy starting order of 10,000 pallets from Albert Wagner, manager of the Loving Salt Ltd. Co. In September, program participants plan to open a store next to the tribal general store that would sell safety equipment, jeans, cowboy boots and other items. The retail operation will give students a chance to learn inventory control, marketing, pricing, cashiering, reordering and other skills. To generate money for the program, several students also operate a snack bar in the tribal community center on U.S. 70. Lucinda Yuzos, who already has been in the program for eight months, said she hopes to earn a job full-time supervising a crew. "I needed a job when I joined," the 24-year-old said. "I learned a lot about construction.

My father was a carpenter. I'd like to become a supervisor. I've remodeled, painted, helped build the Head Start building and I've learned about electricity and built picnic tables." She discovered she was tougher than she thought and has learned to enjoy the work, Yuzos said, adding, "I'd like to stay on with the program in some way." D. L. Vigil plans to use the skills he's acquired to build his own house. "I've worked on four houses while I've been here," the 28-year-old Vigil said. "I like all the aspects of it - not just one part. I like doing everything from the ground up." The popularity of the program is beyond dispute. Buchler has never had to advertise. But by word-of-mouth, the waiting list has stayed at a constant 60 since its inception and the list of requests for projects just keeps growing.

Largest ENMU Ruidoso class gets diplomas

BY SANDY SUGGITT
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

The largest graduating class of Eastern New Mexico University's Instructional Center (Ruidoso) picked up their diplomas Wednesday. Twenty-seven students received their associate of arts degrees and two received a certificate in child development, said Cheri LeCounte, student affairs professional. Commencement ceremonies took place in May at the main campus in Portales. Students gave ENMU high marks for excellent instruction and for understanding the needs of adult students. "It's really good for adults continuing or starting their post-high school education," said Marjorie Jones, "because here they understand that you're an adult and you have a life." "This caliber of school in this neck of the woods is amazing," Gena Whitlock said. "Most of our instructors have their master's and some have their doctoral degrees." Since James Miller, campus director, and LeCounte opened Ruidoso's ENMU center in 1991, 104 diplomas or certificates have been conferred. This past spring, the center served a total of 639 students. Most of the classes are held at Ruidoso High School, and businesses and churches have assisted with rooms for classes. The instructional center itself, off Mechem Drive, has one large and one small classroom, a computer lab, and three instructional television rooms connecting students to the main campus in Portales. Some of the students will begin their careers, others will continue their schooling here or at other colleges and universities. "We confer the largest number of degrees in general studies because... (that coursework) consists of the first two years of general education toward a baccalaureate degree. We do a lot of the general education background and send them on," said LeCounte. While the majority of the students come from Ruidoso or Ruidoso Downs, others come from Tularosa, Hondo, San Patricio and as far away as Roswell when they can't find the course they want at that ENMU campus. LeCounte looks after the needs of the students and will send them elsewhere for a course that's not currently offered here, she said. Some students like to start college closer to home. There's also a difference in tuition between four-year and two-year institutions: in-district Ruidoso students pay $23 per credit hour, while most four-year colleges charge over $100 per credit hour, LeCounte said. "Some students can continue with their bachelor's degrees here in Ruidoso via ITV—instructional television, or distance learning," she said.

Burglar strikes on Mechem Drive

A rifle, a portable stereo and some prescription medicines were stolen from an apartment on Mechem Drive between 5 and 11 p.m. Wednesday. The kitchen window was smashed in, dresser drawers and clothes were pulled out, and a padlock was knocked off a small freezer. Blood was found on the refrigerator.

The rifle, taken from the bedroom closet, was an 1890 or 1918 bolt-action .30-40 Krag military rifle. Prescription medications taken were for high blood pressure, arthritis, and several for pain, including a bottle of morphine containing approximately 70 pills.

Unlocked residence hit by burglars

Jewelry was taken from a residence on Meander Drive sometime between 10:30 a.m. Saturday and 10:35 a.m. Sunday.

The burglar entered through the unlocked front door, took jewelry from the back bedroom and left a drawer pulled out and placed next to the jewelry box.

The resident had gone out and didn't notice the theft until Sunday morning. The value of the jewelry was not estimated.

'Lincoln County Solid Waste Authority needs a plan of action - now'

BY DIANNE STALLINGS
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

Instead of thinking about a plan for the county to take on its own garbage collection, representatives of the Lincoln County Solid Waste Authority should be trying to come up with something that would be in the best interests of the entire coalition, says Capitan Trustee Debra Ingle.

After listening to County Commissioner Monroy Montes complain Friday, July 24, about a lack of a plan for the authority after the village of Ruidoso leaves in September, Ingle asked why Montes and other members haven't come up with something in the last year.

"No one has pushed hard enough for a plan to generate one," Ingle said. Yet, members have known for more than a year that Ruidoso was interested in picking up its own garbage, she said.

"I'm working on a plan now, but one that is in the best interests of the authority as a whole," Ingle said. "Why aren't we working together for the best interests of the authority?"

The authority was formed in 1991 as a coalition of the county and its five municipalities to collect and dispose of garbage during a period when local landfills were forced to shut down by the state. In cooperation with a parallel group in Otero County, a regional landfill was built south of Alamogordo. When Ruidoso leaves the collection portion of the authority, it will remain a partner in the landfill and will pay a lower rate for dumping.

Ruidoso used to earn a profit from collecting garbage, but that was when the refuse could be dumped locally and didn't have to be transported as many miles. The village council already has acknowledged it will cost $2 a month more than the current $7.50 residential customer rate to cover the expense of picking up yard waste plus an additional 75 cents to operate a recycling program.

Montes said a plan needs to be in place before Ruidoso leaves the authority's collection side in September, because employees "don't have a clue" right now about their futures.

He wants commissioners to think about the county purchasing its own equipment and operating a collection service out of the road department using three employees.

About 3,400 county residents are being served, which would generate $214,000 a year, Montes said. Even figuring that 10 percent will be uncollectible accounts, the county would end up with $194,000, he said. Another 73 commercial accounts also are in the county and generate about $75,000, he said.

Because of the growth in retail and service purchases in the county, the amount of gross receipts tax pledged to the repayment of the debt incurred to build the landfill has grown from $20,000 a year to $70,000, Montes said. But the landfill is paying for itself and that money eventually comes back to the authority.

The county has consistently been the only portion of the authority's operation that generates more money than it costs to provide service, Montes said.

"Why should the county pay for polycarts lost in Ruidoso Downs?" he asked. Montes suggested spending $90,000 to operate a new collection division and $225,000 on equipment. The county also could cut back from 80 to 50 sites with dumpsters, he said.

A yearly charge could be included with the annual tax bill or sent quarterly, he said.

"I don't want to wait until September and find we have no plan," Montes said.

The general manager of the authority says it will require more than a dozen people to operate after Ruidoso leaves, the commissioner pointed out.

Montes said he also is bothered by Ruidoso representatives continuing to vote on issues that will affect the authority after the village leaves.

"They have no interest or investment in that and they shouldn't have a say," Montes said, pointing to a recent vote to buy some equipment.

Capitan resident David

Cummins reminded Montes that a community such as Corona, which sits at the northern border of the county, might need some help to manage their garbage collection service. Maybe the county could handle Corona's collection too, he said.

A vote to buy more roll-off containers, which generate a great deal of money for the authority, comes too late, Montes said. The authority should have been pushing that angle years ago, he said.

Commission Chairman Ray Nunley said before the county decides anything, it should consult with the other villages.

"This commission has no authority over the solid waste group," he said. "The solid waste authority needs to develop a plan."

Plague cases continue in New Mexico

Human plague was confirmed in a 25-year-old woman from Santa Fe County Wednesday by the Scientific Laboratory Division of the New Mexico Department of Health.

The patient, the fifth confirmed case of the disease in the state this year, is hospitalized and is expected to recover fully.

No cases have been reported in Lincoln County.

"Plague activity continues in the rodent populations over a large geographic area of northern New Mexico," said Public Health Veterinarian Dr. Paul Ettestad. "Besides this latest human case, we also have had two cases in cats in the last week from Rio Arriba and Sandoval counties. With the summer monsoon rains, our rodent populations may likely remain high for the rest of the summer, so people need to continue to take precautions to prevent exposure to plague."

The source of the Santa Fe woman's infection is unclear, but health officials suspect she was exposed to infected rodents or their fleas. An investigation at the home of the patient is being conducted by the Vector Control Program of the state environment department.

A bacterial disease, plague generally is transmitted to humans through the bites of infected fleas, but also can be transmitted by direct contact with infected animals, including rodents, wildlife and pets, Ettestad said. "Most people become ill two to seven days after being infected with the plague bacteria."

Plague symptoms in humans include fever, painful swollen lymph nodes in the groin, armpit or neck, chills, and sometimes headache, vomiting and diarrhea.

Symptoms in cats are similar and most commonly include fever, lethargy, lack of appetite and swollen lymph nodes usually in the neck area.

With prompt diagnosis and appropriate antibiotic treatment, the fatality rate in people and pets can be greatly reduced.

To prevent plague, both the state Department of Health and the New Mexico Environment Department recommend avoiding sick or dead rodents, not allowing children to play near rodent nests or burrows, spraying or dusting pets regularly with an effective flea powder, wearing gloves when skinning animals, cleaning up areas near the house when rodents could live, and preventing pets from roaming and hunting.

The first two cases of human plague this year were in a 45-year-old woman and a 60-year-old woman, from different locations in Santa Fe County. Both recovered.

The third case was a 40-year-old woman from Taos County, and the fourth case was a 14-year-old boy from Santa Fe County. Both recovered.

State gas prices low compared to nation

Gas prices in the Southwest region are some of the lowest in the country this month at an average of $1.058 for a gallon of self-service regular unleaded, according to information from AAA New Mexico.

The region includes Arizona at $1.12 per gallon, Oklahoma and Texas at a low of $1 each and New Mexico at $1.089.

Still feeling the effect of Wal-Mart introducing self-serve gasoline late last year, which hit a low a few weeks ago of 91.9 cents, Ruidoso and Ruidoso Downs fare well in the statistics.

Most local gasoline stations have priced their regular unleaded at below $1 per gallon - a big relief from the $1.19 to $1.35 a gallon, depending on if it was tourist season, charged for years in the community.

Only the average for the Southeast region was lower than New Mexico at $1.0134 this month.

The Southeast region encompasses nine southern states including Georgia, which reports the lowest gas price in the United States at 92.63 cents per gallon.

In New Mexico, regular unleaded, self-serve gas has increased by less than one cent since last month when the price of a gallon was $1.084.

Nationally, prices throughout the country continue to drop an average of one cent from $1.108 last month to $1.099 this month, meaning drivers in New Mexico are paying at least one penny less for gas this month than most motorists across the United States.

Last year at this time, prices were almost 19 cents higher nationally at $1.273 per gallon.

New Mexico then ranked fifteenth in the nation for the highest average price. One year later, the state holds the twenty-third position.

Mid-grade, self-serve unleaded sells for $1.1657 per gallon in the state and premium unleaded averaged $1.288 this month.

American Automobile Association New Mexico is a not-for-profit auto club providing members with roadside assistance, full-service travel agency, diagnostic center, trip planning, traffic safety programs, legislative advocacy, insurance and financial products and programs.

Grab your mallet. Saddle your steed. The San Patricio polo season gets underway today with first-round play in the Peter Hurd Memorial Cup tournament.

Seven polo teams with players and horses from across the country take to the 300-yard by 160-yard pitch, first at Yates Field in Roswell then Saturday and Sunday at the San Patricio polo grounds.

Fans are invited to bring chairs and picnic baskets and spend the day along the sidelines. There is no admission charge to the matches.
The Peter Hurd Memorial

Cup marks the start of San Patricio's month-long season. Tournaments are slated for each weekend in August.

The players and the horses, however, are in the midst of their year-round sport, said San Patricio Polo Club member and player Tom Nickloff.

Matches circulate across the country, stopping in a location for one to three months.

"I played in California for a few weeks in the end of May and first of June," said Nickloff, noting that Santa Fe is in season now as well.

Teams slated to compete in the USPA-sanctioned Hurd Cup hail from Midland, Texas; Denver; Roswell; Abilene, Texas; Ft. Worth and El Paso.

The San Patricio Polo Club will join forces with a Y Bar O from Midland so local fans will have something to cheer about.

Spectators, however, must be wary.

Fillies meet Sunday for Kachina

BY TANYA LAIB-SHIPLEY
RUIDOSO DOWNS PUBLICITY

A field of 12 2-year-old fillies are set to compete in the $67,598 Kachina Stakes at six furlongs Sunday at Ruidoso Downs.

With only two trials, the fillies only had to run sixth or better to qualify for the final.

The first trial was a speed duel between Louisiana Reign and Solid Silver. Solid Silver, racing on the outside of Louisiana Reign, got her nose in front just in time for the win. Solid Silver broke her maiden at Louisiana Downs. Louisiana Reign won her second outing at Sunland Park and earned a 100 speed index for her effort. Bessame, putting in a solid late rally, ran third to the dueling fillies.

Wadif answered any questions as to her ability in the second trial. She dominated the field and won by seven lengths. Her rider, Chris Zamora, appeared to be easing her the last 16th of a mile as her lead over the field increased. Wadif ran a 1:18 for the six furlongs. It was a full second faster than Solid Silver's time in the first trial. Second to Wadif was Wave Runner. Although racing wide, Prime Hope finished third.

The 12 finalists are: Solid Silver, Louisiana Reign, Bessame, Irish Candy, Don't Bite me, Tellif, Wadif, Wave Stalker, Prime Hope, Cielo Serenade, Not So Chick and Capitol Brass.

Saturday's feature is the $10,000-added Zia Handicap for New Mexico Bred quarter horses. The field of 10, 3-year-olds and up will compete.

Nothing scary about Phantom Trail

Phantom Trail Loop

The Phantom Trail Loop hike begins by ascending Argentina Trail #39 for 1.5 miles to the intersection with Cut Across Trail #38. Turn south onto Cut Across Trail and climb onto the ridge separating Argentina Canyon and Little Bonito Creek. Once on the ridge, the Cut Across Trail sidehills for 3/4 mile to the junction with Little Bonito Trail #37.

Continue uphill (west) on the Little Bonito Trail for another 1/3 mile to the intersection of a myriad of trails located in a saddle that comprises the crest of the range. This 1/3 mile stretch of trail will be the only route duplication during the entire hike.

Take Phantom Trail #29 which runs in a southwesterly direction toward the Spring Cabin Spring. The Phantom Trail does not conform to the USFS topo map depiction well. The trail doesn't extend completely down to the Spring Cabin as shown. The trail extends to the ridge above the cabin and drops down to Spring Cabin Spring. This spring is located within a fenced enclosure to protect it from livestock. A barrel has been sunk into the spring to collect water but it is a marginal source of drinking water at best.

The cabin is a USFS facility that is locked and nothing of special interest that warrants a side trip to visit. Instead, follow the Phantom Trail below the spring and it soon emerges on the top of a resistant lava flow at the head of Spring Canyon. The lava flow and 30 million years of weathering has created a cliff of considerable height that offers impressive views of the Tularosa Basin and Spring Canyon.

Phantom Trail #29 continues for another 1 1/2 miles along the top of the ridge without considerable elevation gain or loss. This trail does not intersect Crest Trail #25 as shown on the USFS topo map but extends all the way to Barber Ridge Trail #49.

Turn southeast on Barber Ridge Trail #49 for a few hundred yards to the intersection with Crest Trail #25. Follow the Crest Trail for about 2 miles in a northerly direction around Spring Point back to the intersection with Little Bonito Trail #37. Views of the upper Bonito Creek and a mostly flat trail make this stretch of the hike an enjoyable one.

The rainy season has made a mess of the end of the adult women's and men's softball seasons.

As a result of the almost daily afternoon showers, league tournament play has been delayed, and Parks and Recreation director Rafael Salas has decided to cancel the men's and women's all-star games.

For the second time this month, the all-star games were rained out Wednesday. Salas doesn't have enough playing dates to schedule the game for yet a third time. All players selected to play in the all-star game will receive their T-shirts, Salas said Thursday.

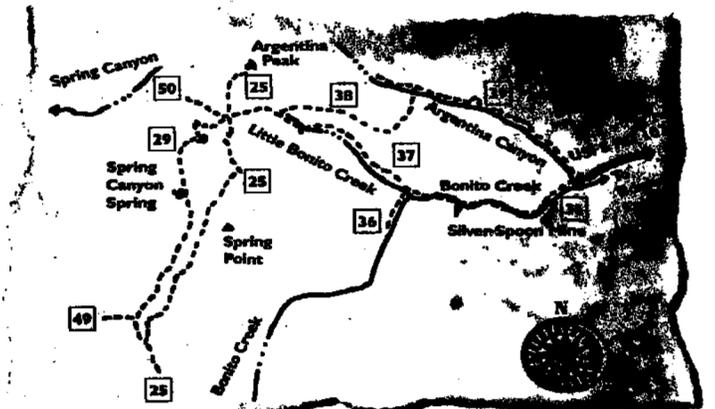

Torrential downpours Thursdays pushed the men's league tournament until after the state tournaments Aug. 7-9. About a half dozen local men's teams will attend the state finals which will be played in Albuquerque and Clovis.

Meanwhile, Salas rescheduled the women's tournament for Monday, Tuesday and possibly Wednesday. First-round tournament games and rescheduled league games originally slated for July 27 will be played Monday, Aug. 3, Salas said.

home empty handed. The area's best finisher was the Flamingo Softball Club which went 2-2 and finished in fifth place of 11 teams in the Women's Class D bracket.

The Flamingos cruised through their first two games before meeting up with eventual state champion Floors and More out of Albuquerque.

"We had a chance. We were killing them," said Mark Eckert of the Flamingos. In a 1-0 loss to Floors and More in the loser's bracket, the Flamingos were ousted by the Playas from Hobbs. Playas ended up finishing second.

Also competing in the Women's Class D tourney were the Blue Angels who went 0-2.

In the Women's Class C bracket, Thunder 'n Lightning rallied in the bottom of the seventh inning to claim a 23-22 victory over Who Cares of Deming. Thunder 'n Lightning trailed 22-21 going into the seventh and loaded the bases with nobody out. Sharon Saenz knocked home Monique Ramos with a single to tie the game. Then Gladys Bob hit a sacrifice fly to left field to score the Thunder 'n Lightning runner from third base for the victory.

But what Thunder 'n Lightning did to Who Cares happened to the locals later in the day. Albuquerque's Incognito scored the winning run in the last of the seventh to put Thunder 'n Lightning in the loser's bracket. The locals had rallied in their half of the seventh. Billie Ann Saenz delivered the key hit, a two-run triple to pull Thunder 'n Lightning within one. Alicia Garcia's single scored Saenz to knot the game at 15.

Then Incognito answered right back with a run to win the game, 16-15.

Saturday evening, Thunder 'n Lightning's bats fell silent, and Mystique of Clovis eliminated the locals with a 22-7 win.

POLO: Matches signal start of play

"Please remember polo can be a dangerous sport," Nickloff said. "It can be a lot of fun and spectacular to watch. It's a totally sensory sport with the pounding of the hooves and the snorting of the horses, but spectators have to remember that things are moving very fast and they have to pay attention for safety reasons.

"So please, no dogs off leashes, watch your children, be aware of stuff like that."

Game times

Matches today at Yates Field begin at 1 p.m., 3 p.m. and 5 p.m.

Saturday's and Sunday's matches in San Patricio are set for 11 a.m., 1 p.m. and 2:30 p.m. Admission is free to all matches.

How to get there: Take Highway 70 east toward Roswell. In San Patricio, take the Hurd-LaRinconada Gallery exit. The polo grounds lie adjacent to the gallery.

multiple trail intersections, turn east onto Little Bonito Trail #37 and begin the final leg of the hike back to the parking lot. After proceeding down the Little Bonito Trail for 1 1/2 miles, the intersection with Big Bonito Trail #36 is reached. Continue east (downhill) on Big Bonito Trail for another 1 1/2 miles to the trailhead.

The Big Bonito Trail crosses the creek several times but can usually be crossed without wading thanks to strategically-placed boards from the Silver Spoon Mine and large rocks. Just above the trailhead another mine extends into the hillside and gives you a hint of the effort required to carve these holes into the mountainside.

Camping locations abound along the Phantom and Crest Trails but water can be a problem during dry seasons. Spring Cabin Spring, as mentioned earlier, is a marginal source of water. Spring Canyon Spring is usually more of a step than a spring but water can usually be obtained with a little effort. Small campsites are present along Argentina Canyon and Bonito Creek that have ample water. Make sure to treat all water as the protozoan Giardia is a persistent problem in high-country water supplies.

Funding set to fight youth drug use

New Mexico will receive $2.7 million per year for the next three years to fight drug use among its young residents.

The money from the federal Health and Human Services Department is part of the new State Incentive Grants for Community Based Action program, said state Department of Health Cabinet Secretary Alex Valdez.

Thirteen other states also are receiving money to mobilize and coordinate statewide efforts over the next three years to prevent substance use in the under 18 population.

Officials with the department of health plan to have money available within the next few months to community based organizations through a request for proposal process. The statewide comprehensive prevention strategy will focus on 12-17 year-old children.

"We're delighted to receive this grant from the federal government to augment the work we're already doing," said Don Maestas, bureau chief in the health department's Behavioral Health Services Division. "With this three-year, $8.1 million incentive program, we will be in the position to provide more funds, therefore more services, to communities to stem the destruction caused by substance abuse."

Valdez pointed out that a recent report published by the Department of Health shows that marijuana, cocaine/crack and inhalant use is rising among seventh to 12th graders in New Mexico.

"It's critical that we have a powerful, coordinated effort to turn the tide to see these numbers drop," Valdez said. "This federal grant allows more resources to be devoted to preventing kids from using drugs. New Mexico has such an opportunity right now to see our youth become drug free. We have to take full advantage of it."

The $2.7 million allocation this year is in addition to $1.8 million recently awarded by the Department of Health and being shared by 23 community-based organizations around the state through the Behavioral Health Services Division's yearly request for proposal process.

MILLER'S MOTIF

by Diana Stallings
VARADORA STAFF WRITER

"I WOULD CLIMB UP IN TREES AND DRAW BABY HAWKS WHILE THE MOTHER WAS DIVING DOWN AT ME."

Artist Linda Miller's house is hard to see from the highway, tucked into a field of wild flowers and hidden by a bend in the dirt road leading to the entrance.

Visitors are greeted by a small herd of dogs - the latest a Great Pyrenees named Copita recently acquired from the local humane society - assorted chickens and roosters, and if they're lucky, by an angora goat named Miss Lily, the most famous of Miller's menagerie.

Step through the door of the house Miller and assorted friends and artisans have built over the years since she moved to San Patricio, and there's no doubt an artist is in residence.

A massive 19-by-36 foot grand dining hall is flanked by a 7-by-10-foot window framed by carved 1881 beams and set off by a 12-foot dining table accented with candlesticks of varying sizes and shapes.

"I'm nearly finished after a year and a half," Miller said of the addition that ties together under roof her home and studio. Although she originally planned to use the grand hall as a gallery, "People said it would be a crime to hang paintings on these walls," Miller said.

The walls are styrofoam poured with concrete - which allowed the foundation and walls to go up in six days - but they look like turn-of-the-century plaster.

The grand scale creates a startling contrast to Miller's studio and her work on canvas - where she paints the nests of hummingbirds, intricate beaded Native American bags, flowers, ballet shoes, birds and other animals.

From any angle in her studio, a still life could be captured. Delicate eggs, nests, feathers and all sorts of other unusual pieces she has found over the years are displayed in a casual, but artful arrangement, illuminated by the light from a picture window that looks out at the world that captivates Miller's creative energy and imagination.

A common thread of "old world" atmosphere in her living style, her painting style and her personal style of hospitality ties everything together.

Miller resides in the heart of a colony of artists who have settled from Hondo Valley to Glencoe over the last few decades, following the lead of the late Peter Hurd and his wife, the late Henriette Wyeth.

As Miller often notes, her timing in life seems fine-tuned to her needs.

For instance:

- One of the collectors of her work just happened to be available when she needed help with the walls and traded labor for some of her art work

- A cousin was able to save five loads of brick from the old mercantile store in the Texas town where her family homesteaded. Miller used the bricks in her entryway.

- When she needed someone to plaster the large fireplace in the grand hall, Miller ran into a young man she taught the craft 13 years earlier and he helped her. The fireplace mantle is graced by an angel wing given to her by John Meigs. Its mate was owned by Henriette Wyeth and now sits on the mantle of the Wyeth's daughter, who also is an artist in San Patricio.

- The concrete for a round wall in the hallway leading from her home to the studio was left over from a bridge construction project.

- Miller was able to trade for a 300-pound sunburst pattern copper door set that was one of three removed from The Inn of the Mountain Gods when it was renovated for handicap access. The set hangs from 200-pound timbers.

- Much of the wood accents in the addition came from an 1881 log house in Roswell that was torn down 10 years ago and saved by Miller.

Although the construction project has monopolized a great deal of her time for the past year, Miller also has been busy at the easel. Some of her more recent subjects have been Native American beaded bags and beaded ceremonial dresses, and true to her fascination with animals, a sassy red rooster, who seems to know he will be immortalized in Miller's art.

She is finishing up a painting for Jackie Spencer, benefactor of the Spencer Theater for the Performing Arts, and is preparing to begin a series on santos, old statues of saints acquired in Mexico by her brother in a trade for some spurs.

Born in Snyder, Texas, Miller's pioneer family always produced at least one artistic member per generation. Her brother is a poet and her mother an innovative seamstress.

Miller's talent was recognized early by her mother and teachers. She received her first formal training the summer of her 14th year when her great aunt brought her to Lincoln County to train with Katherine Hale Travis, who normally accepted no students younger than 16.

She started with oils, then pastels, dry paint and engraving.

Her first subjects were still lifes. The Travis training concentrated on portraits.

But much of Miller's focus seemed to be on birds and their nests, partly because the eggs and nests were unlikely painting subjects.

"I would climb up in trees and draw baby hawks while the mother was diving down at me," she said during an earlier interview.

In 1964, Miller had her first show.

"SILENCE TAKING SHAPE"

The foreword was by John Ford and Wyeth. Her works sold out in 15 minutes. But she was reluctant to take advantage of the immediate commercial possibilities on the local market. Instead, she chose to continue studying and refining her art in preparation of what she hoped would be broader recognition someday.

Eight years later, in 1972, while viewing a polo game, oil man Robert O. Anderson invited her to stay at one of the best ranches, Diamond A Ranch, because of her interest in art and horses — she has since raised and raced several equines.

"I thought I would never paint flowers, but Henriette encouraged me," Miller said. "I'm so critical of my work. I'm my worst enemy."

Although she is surrounded by her animals and friends nearby, Miller said, "People never realize how much an artist gives up. Painting is never easy.

"THE CHRISTMAS PONY"

It's hours and hours of hard work."

For Miller, each painting starts different. She has no formula approach.

"I never know the secret," she said. "Each one is like I'm a new painter."

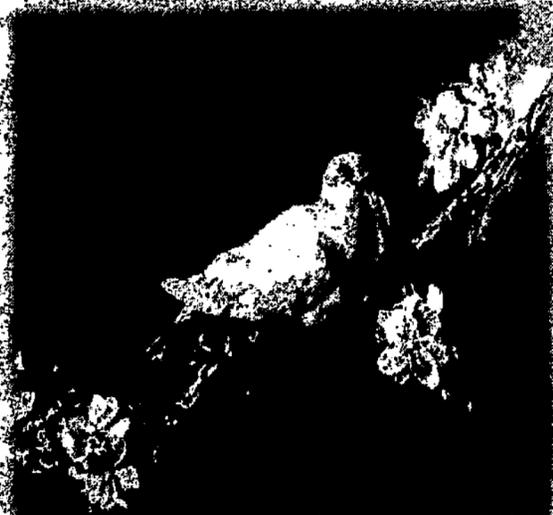

And that suits her just fine. She bores easily and keeps multiple projects going at the same time, even varying the medium from oil to watercolor to sketching.

One of her newest enterprises is a children's book written by Miss Lily, in which her "fleecy" friend explains how different animals entered Miller's life and became her models.

Her bond with animals are long lasting, Miller said, recalling a hawk she found in a windstorm, apparently stunned. She scooped it up and put it in her cap. The next morning, the bird appeared alert. She donned a leather glove and as she released it, told the hawk not to forget her. To this day, it still returns.

Book signing - Author to autograph latest work about Fort Stanton

John P. Ryan, author of "Fort Stanton and Its Community, 1855-1896," the newly released book about Fort Stanton, will be at the Lincoln Heritage Trust to sign his book from 1 p.m. to 3 p.m. Saturday, Aug. 8.

Fort Stanton figured prominently during the Indian War era and the Lincoln County War. Because of the fort, its need for services and supplies, the town of Lincoln developed and grew. By the time Fort Stanton was deactivated, Lincoln was a thriving community that could survive on its own.

"Fort Stanton and Its Community" is the second in the "Frontier Forts and People Series" published by Yucca Tree Press of Las Cruces. The book is available in both trade paper and cloth. The cloth is a limited edition of 250 signed, numbered copies.

Both the historian and the newcomer will enjoy "Fort Stanton and Its Community" and will find it contains interesting information.

After the signing, the book will be available at the Lincoln Heritage Trust and in area book stores. It is also available from the publisher, Yucca Tree Press, 2130 Hixon Drive, Las Cruces, NM 88005. Paper books are $13.95 plus $2 shipping and cloth books are $25.

John Ryan lives in Las Cruces and teaches history at the El Paso Community College. He is currently working on another book about a New Mexico Indian/Civil War era fort.

Poet's corner

When the cloud of confusion rests heavy on my soul,
 I don't exactly know where to go,
 I do however know the answer lies somewhere in my heart, to find the truth takes a bigger one than I.
 To look to nature as the base of my being to see to see the sun slowly rising on the hills, to know my maker will help me find my way home,
 he instilled in me everything I need to unlock the hidden and so desperately needed key.
 I don't for one moment think he'd leave me stranded,
 on this island of desperation.
 To try with only my humble way of thinking to set me free.
 So I will forever be looking for the serenity in me.

SWEET SOUNDS OF MUSIC

QUARTETTO GELATO performs Saturday.

SPENCER'S SUMMER SEASON COMES TO A CRESCENDO

A powerful August line-up concludes the Summer '98 season at the Spencer Theater for the Performing Arts. After enjoying a successful inaugural year of sold-out shows and big-name performers, the Spencer Theater wraps up the season in August with Canadian sensation Quartetto Gelato, Chicago's famous Trinity Irish Dancers and River North Dance Company, classical crossover pianist John Bayless, and the long-running Broadway hit "Nunsense" performance by the Albuquerque Civic Light Opera.

"These shows are selling fast," said Spencer Executive Director Theta Smith. "In a way it's kind of amazing that we've found such a great audience in southern New Mexico and West Texas. The last modern dance group we had here - Alvin Ailey - the audience gave them a standing ovation. In fact, we see a lot of standing ovations here."

The praise goes both ways. Canadian Brass, which performed at the Spencer in June, praised the acoustics in the 514-seat hall, and the Alvin Ailey dancers were thrilled with the backstage facilities, Smith said. The celebrity autograph wall at the theater's stage door is peppered with artists' commendations of the theater, which opened its doors in October 1997. Founded by Jackie and A.N. Spencer, the private non-profit performing arts center is the only facility of its kind in southern New Mexico.

The organization's first fund-raising drive was a greater success than anyone anticipated, generating more than 500 contributions between $250 and $3,000 each. Renewals for the 1998-99 seasons are already coming in.

"Our patrons and benefactors, people who join the Spencer Circle, are the heart and soul of this operation," Smith said. "As they should be, because without an audience, this is just a pretty building."

The rest of the summer line-up is:

• Quartetto Gelato
Saturday

An unusual chamber group with an eclectic of tangos, gypsy fiddling, operatic arias, classical masterworks, and dazzling showpieces, performed on oboe, violin, viola, and cello, plus English horn, accordion, classical guitar, mandolin and robust tenor voice. "Quartetto Gelato plays with both the precision expected of a string quartet in Beethoven and the abandonment of gypsies improvising around a campfire."

• Trinity Irish Dance Co.

notes one reviewer. In 1996, Quartetto Gelato was recognized by National Public Radio as Performance Today's "Debut Artist of the Year." The panel of music critics who made the selection characterized the quartet as "an amazing ensemble that achieves the nearly impossible: they play salon music with real style and classical music with real precision."

Who else gives the tear-your-heart-out "Danny Boy" and a show-stopping "O Sole Mio" in the same concert? The Gelato repertoire isn't limited to Bach - in fact, it doesn't seem limited at all with a two-fold instrumental range of oboe, violin, viola and cello, plus English horn, accordion, classical guitar, mandolin and a robust tenor voice. These multi-talented musicians move easily through an eclectic repertoire of tangos, gypsy fiddling, operatic arias, classical masterworks and dazzling showpieces.

According to The Tennessean, "Quartetto Gelato plays with both the precision expected of a string quartet in Beethoven and the abandonment of gypsies improvising around a campfire."

Smooth local jazz next on Flickinger music series plate

Smooth jazz, rhythm and blues, and a new vocalist characterize the sounds of Phade, the next performers at Tailgate V Jazz Plus. Sponsored by the Flickinger Center and the Space Center, the concert begins at 8:30 p.m. Saturday, Aug. 8, and is held in the parking lot at the Space Center in Alamogordo.

Tickets for the upper parking lot are $18. There are a limited number of these remaining. Tickets to park and remain in the lower lot are $10. Tickets may be purchased in advance at the Flickinger Center or at the gate the night of the concert. For information call 437-2202.

Phade is a well oiled musical extravaganza, taking some oldies and new pop songs and converting them into smooth jazz. They will entertain with rhythm and blues as well as jazz. With the recent addition of a vocalist, the group's music has moved in new directions, embodying not only heart filled sounds but sweet, harmonic voices as well.

Phade, from Holloman Air Force Base, has entertained at many locations around the area. Band leader Willie Lacey is the drummer. Lacey got his start in Chicago, and brings fresh ideas and stunning licks to the sounds of the moving, grooving band.

Eddie Caro, the percussionist, comes from Manhattan and adds a latin feel to the band. Russell Singleton plays bass guitar and sings background vocals. Sing has toured throughout Spain and Europe and brings class, style and grace to the group.

Lead vocalist Sandra Chippis combines the vocal styles of Anita Baker and Tony Braxton to bring smooth and harmonious sounds to the music.

The jazz sense of New Orleans is provided by keyboardist and vocalist, Henderson Price. Lead and rhythm guitarist, James Raspin, hails from Alamogordo.

IN CONCERT

TRIO SONOR performs Tuesday at the First Christian Church.

Unique trio to play at First Christian

Tuesday will mark the homecoming for one-third of the musical group Trio Sonor, when it performs at 7 p.m. at the First Christian Church.

The performance is the first of three concerts in the trio's southwest summer concert tour. Trio Sonor features a provocative combination of instruments: former Ruidosoan Bryan Hutchinson on the piano, John Masserini on the clarinet and Albie Micklich on the bassoon.

Hutchinson and Masserini are natives of New Mexico. They met up with Micklich at Michigan State University where all three were enrolled in the music school's graduate program.

The trio strives for a program that has diversity and warmth. That's a challenge because there isn't the benefit of a large body of literature from which to draw. The solution is a combined program of established works supplemented by arrangements of pieces not intended for this particular combination.

Mikhail Glinka's Trio Pathetique is one popular work written for the piano-clarinet-bassoon combination, and is a lively and lyrical work. Max Bruch composed eight romantic trio pieces that work well with the bassoon assuming the viola/cello role. The popularity of Argentinian Astor Piazzollo's tangos inspired the group to arrange two for the concerts, as well as including Tango composed by Canadian Glenn Morley. Also an arrangement, the Morley work was written for flute instead of clarinet. Rounding off the program is a duo by François Gebauer.

Bryan Hutchinson, son of Ruidoso residents Ken and Karen Hutchinson, is an alumnus of "Up With People." He attended Eastern New Mexico University, completed the bachelor's of music degree in piano performance at New Mexico State University, and began graduate work at UNM. He eventually completed his master's in music degree at MSU. He now teaches music.

Masserini graduated from UNM with a bachelor's degree in music in 1995. He was accepted for graduate work at Michigan State University where he will complete his doctorate in music next year. He has just returned from a clarinet summit under the direction of Richard Stoltzman.

Micklich completed degrees from the Julliard School in New York. He has worked with an array of artists including Pierre Boulez, Kurt Masur, David Sandborn and The Who.

LINCOLN HERITAGE
TRUST HISTORIAN

BOUDRE'S AND ROBERTS' GUNS ROARED SIMULTANEOUSLY. ROBERTS WAS STRUCK IN THE FRONT BY A BULLET FROM BOUDRE'S GUN THAT WOULD ULTIMATELY PROVE FATAL. BUCKSHOT NOT ONLY DIDN'T GO DOWN, BUT HE KEPT FIRING, RAPIDLY AND ACCURATELY.

It was April Fool's Day, 1878, and the Regulators had planned an elaborate and macabre "joke" to play on Lincoln County's chief lawman. About 9 a.m., a fusillade from the Regulators killed both the Sheriff and one of the four deputies walking with him near the front of the Tunstall Store. The deputy, George Hindman, lived for a few brief minutes after the ambush. But Brady, his body perforated some 16 times by heavy-caliber bullets, was dead when he hit the ground.

After Sheriff Brady's body slumped lifelessly into the dirt, the Kid, in the company of Jim French, darted out into the street - a place that was rapidly becoming an extremely unhealthy place to be. Historians still debate exactly what the duo were after. Possibly it was some official papers that they knew to be on Sheriff Brady's person. Another version suggests that Billy simply wanted to retrieve his prized Winchester that Brady had confiscated some time earlier - this does not explain why French would go with him, though.

At any rate, they never got as far as the body. A bullet clipped both of them, wounding French in the side and the Kid in the fleshy portion of his thigh, making it impossible for him to mount a horse.

Going into the Tunstall Store, the Kid was hastily concealed under the floor with a gun in each hand. The Murphy men (as they were known even after Jimmy Dolan had taken complete control of the company) searched fruitlessly for the youth. Luckily for him (or perhaps them), it didn't occur to them to look underneath the floorboards.

Meanwhile, local dogs were lapping up the blood of the fallen lawmen.

Billy's Escape

Some time later, the Kid was brought out behind the Tunstall Store, his wound dressed, and a horse brought to him. Mounting up, Billy galloped down the hillside, crossed the Rio Bonito and took off in an easterly direction. Several of the more alert Murphy men, spying the Kid's fleeing form, ran out to the hillside and began shooting at the young fugitive. None of their bullets took effect, however, and as soon as Billy was out of rifle range, he dismounted and made a sweeping bow back in the direction of the town.

This is one of many incidents in the life of the Kid that make it difficult, for me at least, to dislike him.

Neither George nor Frank Coe, despite George's avowed hatred for Sheriff Brady, were present on that bloody morning. That is a fact that attests either to the common sense of the Coes, or perhaps they were simply occupied elsewhere. In the end, it makes no difference.

After the end of the Lincoln County War, the only criminals (I use the word "criminal" guardedly - virtually everyone involved in the Lincoln County War could reasonably be classified as a criminal at one time or another) that the authorities ever made any effort to prosecute were the assassins of Sheriff Brady. And the only one of the six men that did the shooting that was ever brought to trial was Billy the Kid.

Anyone that has read this column regularly for a length of time is undoubtedly aware of my endless amazement at this particular statistic. Think about it. Countless murders, innumerable robberies and rapes and only one man - a boy, really - is ever brought to trial for anything.

Kind of gives new meaning to the word "justice," doesn't it?

Blazer's Mill

The Coes may not have been present for the infamous assassination of Sheriff Brady, but they were most definitely on hand several days later at a place called Blazer's Mill, located in what is now downtown Mesalero.

The reason for Andrew L. "Buckshot" Roberts' presence at the Blazer residence that day is still under debate. The general consensus among historians today is that Roberts and the Regulators met quite by accident.

George Coe, however, felt that Roberts was hunting for the Regulators for the rewards being posted for them.

It is possible that both stories are true. If Roberts was, in fact, searching for the Regulators for the reasons stated by George

We did. But it wasn't a pure matter of looking good (though she does look pretty dapper for a 7 1/2-year old second grader). Continued from page 13C

Coe (and by noted historian Robert Mullin), then it must be assumed that he was unaware of their number (at the time of the confrontation the Regulators numbered in excess of a dozen men). For one lone man to attempt to arrest more than a dozen extremely irritable and heavily armed men would have been tantamount to suicide.

At any rate, the Regulators were already inside the Blazer house dining when Roberts rode up, dismounted and approached the house with a Winchester. Roberts had left his sidearm on his horse in deference to a rule of Blazer's that no six-guns be carried into the house. However, the fact that he carried his rifle indicates he must have been at least a little suspicious.

Frank Coe, who knew Roberts, went out to "greet" him. The two men sat on the porch steps and discussed the situation. Coe talked long and hard to get Roberts to surrender, but to no avail. Roberts was acutely aware that the last two men the Regulators had taken prisoner had simply been executed.

This discussion went on and on, with the Regulators inside the house growing increasingly impatient. Finally, a delegation was sent out to assist Frank. It consisted of Charlie Bowdre, Billy the Kid and George Coe. When the trio rounded the corner of the building, Bowdre immediately "threw down" (drew his weapon) on Roberts. Unfortunately for all concerned, Buckshot Roberts was far more dangerous than anyone had figured.

When Bowdre commanded Roberts to throw up his hands, the latter replied, "Not much, Maryann" and opened fire.

Buckshot Roberts had acquired his nickname because of a load of buckshot that he carried in his shoulder as the result of some previous unpleasantness. This wound prevented him from raising a rifle to his shoulder, forcing him to fire from the hip. And firing from the hip, he was deadly accurate.

Bowdre's and Roberts' guns roared simultaneously. Roberts was struck in the groin by a bullet from Bowdre's gun that would ultimately prove fatal. Buckshot not only didn't go down, but he kept firing rapidly and accurately. His first bullet struck Bowdre in the belt buckle, knocking the wind out of him. Another bullet scratched the Kid and still another struck George Coe in the hand effectively removing his trigger finger.

By this time, the other Regulators entered the fray, and the firing became general. Regulator John Middleton was struck in the chest as Roberts backed, still pumping his Winchester, into the office of Dr. Blazer. What the Regulators did not know was that Roberts was out of ammo.

Roberts, of course, was acutely aware of this fact, so when he got inside, he immediately began to search for another weapon. And he found it, too, hanging right over the door - a buffalo gun.

Regulator Captain Dick Brewer, meanwhile, had run some 100 yards from the building and taken a position behind a pile of logs. When Roberts saw a puff of smoke (from Brewer's gun) rise up behind the logs, he took aim at the spot. The next time that Brewer raised up, Roberts fired. The bullet struck Brewer in the eye and took off the back of his head.

The other Regulators, seeing their leader in such a condition, decided that they wanted no more of Buckshot Roberts, and hastily left the scene. Besides, several of them, including George Coe, were in need of medical attention.

Buckshot Roberts died at noon the next day, and was buried next to Dick Brewer - a fact that undoubtedly has both men spinning in their graves like tops to this day.

Peppin's Appointment

A month after Brady's death, Murphy/Dolan faction man George Peppin was appointed Sheriff of Lincoln County. His loyalties did not go unnoticed by George Coe, who commented in his autobiography that, "This appointment smacked of the control of the old 'Santa Fe Ring' and caused much comment."

He was right. The easily led Peppin was a tool of the ever-manipulative Jimmy Dolan from beginning to end.

Later in the month, it was Frank Coe's turn to take the spotlight, and the incident came extremely close to costing Frank his life.

COMMUNITY EDUCATION PROGRAM

The Ruidoso Center Community Education Program is designed for people who are not interested in formal credit programs of study. The program strives to fulfill that part of Ruidoso Center's mission which is "to make inexpensive, high quality educational services available at convenient times for the residents of the Ruidoso School District and the surrounding area of Lincoln and northern Otero Counties." Programs are also designed to be of interest to visitors to the Ruidoso area. The program is oriented toward lifelong learning and the fulfillment of the individual.

DON'T KEEP IT TO YOURSELF. SHARE YOUR KNOWLEDGE!!

Our instructors are a diverse and talented group of people, each with something very special to share. If you would like to propose a class, workshop, trip or tour for ENMU consideration, just give us a call. Whether you would like to teach in our program or just recommend an activity, we'd love to hear from you!

COURSE FEES

The Ruidoso Center Community Education program is a self-sustaining program with course fees covering all program-related expenses. Fees are based on an estimated minimum number of students. Unlike credit programs of study at ENMU-Ruidoso, the Community Services Program does not depend on state and local taxes for support. Honored Americans (ages 62+) will pay half fees unless otherwise specified.

CLASS CHANGES AND CANCELLATIONS

The Ruidoso Center reserves the right to cancel any course with insufficient enrollment. Locations, dates and times of classes and instructors are also subject to change. A class will be closed when it reaches maximum enrollment, so you are encouraged to register early. Classes with insufficient enrollment will be cancelled, and you will be notified by phone. To make contacting you easier, please give day and evening phone numbers with your registration. Refunds will be automatically processed on courses which the Ruidoso Center cancels.

REGISTER EARLY - MOST CLASSES BEGIN AFTER SEPTEMBER 2!!!

Register as soon as possible to assure a space in the class or classes you want. Registration begins July 13. Mail-in, walk-in or FAXED registrations will also be accepted until the start of class. Phone registration is also available for Community Ed classes with payment necessary before the first class.

FIVE EASY WAYS TO EN- ROLL FOR YOUR COURSE!

We offer continuous registration up to the starting date of each class but emphasize the importance of early registration. If you wait until the last minute, you risk the possibility that a particular class is full or has been cancelled. Generally, we do NOT take on-site registration at class and instructors cannot accept your payment in class. We cannot permit anyone who is not registered to attend class. No acknowledgment will be sent to you! You are automatically enrolled as soon as we receive your registration form and payment.
