After more than 30 years, Willie Nelson returns to Ruidoso Downs

Western singer Willie Nelson returns to Ruidoso Sunday after 30 years — and what he remembers most about the last trip is that it took him three days to get out of town.

"We kept partying every night and kept missing our plane," Nelson said. "We had to drive down to Albuquerque to catch a plane and by the time we'd get down there, we'd miss it and we'd say, 'The hell with it, and we'd go back to Ruidoso and party another night and miss another another plane.'"

Back then Nelson played at the Chaparral, which was near the Hubbard Museum of the American West — where an exhibit and later, possibly, a museum will be named after him.

Nelson remembers playing at bars in Midtown: "Wherever there was a bandstand and a

Glen Barrow, facilities director of Ruidoso Downs Race Track, stands before what will be transformed into Willie Nelson's concert stage by Sunday evening. The country great will perform not far from where he played here more than 30 years ago in what is now the Hubbard Museum of the American West.

Transforming a racetrack into a stage

There's a trick to turning a racetrack into a concert hall in less than four hours. Glen Barrow has three words for it: planning, planning and more planning.

"It's just details, logistics and timing — everything falling together at the right time," Barrow said. "And we just have to be lucky. If we get another downpour like we have been having, it's going to be tough."

Barrow, facilities director at the Ruidoso Downs Race Track, on Sunday will oversee the quick conversion of the racetrack in front of the stadium into a stage for Willie Nelson.

Though other concerts have been held there in the past, "This is probably the biggest production of its type at the track," Barrow said.

Fritz Widaman, track director of public relations, said that to facilitate the concert, Sunday's post times at the racetrack will start at noon.

The last race is to end at 3:30 p.m. Nelson is to start singing at 8 p.m. In between, a crew of 45-50 track employees will be working in overdrive.

Preliminary work on the 30-by-40-foot stage will actually start around 7 p.m. Saturday for Barrow

Election process 'mean spirited,' official says

BY DIANNE STALLINGS
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

A member of the Mescalero Apache Election Board refused to sign the certificate of election results from Monday's special presidential election, saying the process was handled in a "mean-spirited" manner.

Election board member Rufina Laws, who took a lead role in fighting a proposal a few years ago to store nuclear waste on the reservation, sent a memorandum Tuesday to board president Elizabeth LaPaz stating her objections.

"I will not sign the certificate of election, because the method in which this election was brought forth is establishing a bad precedence in our political system," Laws wrote. "It is mean spirited and doesn't represent the will of the people of this tribe and if using the election board in this manner makes the 'special election' legal, then the election board is being used in an abusive manner by all involved.

"The election board represents a sacred trust," she has no criticism of election board members, but she felt compelled to take a stand as a matter of conscience, Laws said. She is speaking out because her tribe can no longer isolate itself from the rest of the community, she said.

"We have to have a more open process if we truly are to develop into some form of a democratic society," Laws said Thursday. "Otherwise, we will be left in our own little world while the rest of the world moves forward. In this day and age, we will not survive if we do not open up with information critical to the betterment of the entire community, instead of hoarding information like it was gold or holding it as a means of securing political power."

Although Catherine Dede, a public relations consultant for the tribe, said the removal in May of Paul Ortega and Oliver Enjady as president and vice president of the tribe followed constitutional requirements, and newly elected president Sara Misquez has issued statements to tribal members outlining why the council took the action, Laws said she believes the special election was unnecessary.

"I believe that Paul Ortega and Oliver Enjady may have made some mistakes," she said. "I do not believe their mistakes were intentional. I believe they both have the tribe's interest at heart."

When Wendell Chino, who died in November after leading the tribe for more than 40 years, first became president, he was a minister, Laws said.

"I'm sure he made mistakes," she said. "But he stayed in power. He did not relinquish to anyone or try to step aside."

In his refusal to relinquish his role, he didn't allow for anyone to learn how to manage the reins of power, Laws said.

Council reviews 'customer friendly' laws

BY TONI K. LAXSON
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

Next month, Ruidoso village councilors will vote on five ordinance amendments proposed by Mayor Robert Donaldson either to improve the village's "customer friendly" quotient or, as in one case, to reduce fire dangers.

"It's basically just stuff that has come up over the last few months that we have talked with about the staff that will make village hall more responsive to its customers," Donaldson said recently of the proposed amendments.

Four of the amendments focus on processes and rules in the Ruidoso Planning Department. They range from prerequisites for filing variance requests to parking space requirements. A fifth proposed amendment would give Texas-New Mexico Power Company greater authority to cut or trim trees that pose hazards to electrical lines.

Sketch amendment

Scheduled for a public hearing and vote Sept. 14, this proposed ordinance amendment would allow potentially less costly permit applications to the Ruidoso Planning and Zoning Commission.

Instead of paying for a surveyor to provide application information, applicants could work with village planners on their own sketches of proposed work. If the proposal is denied or changed, the applicant would not have to pay twice for survey work or other charges. Once the request is tentatively approved by the commission, a surveyor's rendering that confirmed the first sketch would be required for final approval.

"This allows people to learn what they can do before spending the money," Donaldson said Tuesday during a Ruidoso village council meeting. "For the Bill McCartys (a longtime developer in Ruidoso) of the world who know the rules and understand the process, they can go ahead (with the surveyor's renderings)."

Minor design variances

When a parking space is off village specifications by 1 foot or less, this proposed ordinance-amendment would allow the Ruidoso Planning Department to waive the requirement for a variance request, Donaldson said.

"Why should this take four to six weeks to push through?" he said of the current requirement that even minor variances go before the Ruidoso Planning and Zoning Commission for approval.

Donaldson is proposing that minor variance requests, which typically are all approved by the commission, be waived automatically based on a set of definitions for what constitutes "minor."

This amendment, to come before the Ruidoso Village Council Sept. 14 for a public hearing and vote, also is a measure that would save money and time for residents and contractors, Donaldson said.

ELECTIONS: Laws questions Ortega, Enjady's removal

"When he suddenly was gone, it left a vacuum with no one understanding what needed to be done," she said. "This left the entire tribe wondering where we're going next and how."

When Chino died, Ortega moved up from vice president and Enjady, then a council member, was selected to be vice president by the tribal council.

Within the first two months, the Ortega/Enjady administration was challenged and tribal members voted to stick with them and not have a special election.

Misquez, who had been tribal administrator under

Chino, was appointed to the council by Ortega.

"She had seen how Chino functioned in his role and she knew what needed to be done," Laws said. "That's why I think Paul brought her in."

Ortega has said he relied heavily on the advice of the tribal finance officer and didn't know until days before charges were leveled against him that anything was wrong.

The manner in which the removal of Ortega and Enjady was handled and the calling of a special election "totally undermines the vote the people gave to Paul and Oliver just a few months earlier," she said.

"If they did any damage, it was minuscule," Laws said. "If we are one of top five richest of the Indian nations, and our late leader was one of the wealthiest men in the Indian nations, how could Paul and Oliver brought down the tribe in six months?"

If the tribe is in financial ruin, why was there talk before the election of members receiving $200 to $500 dividends, Laws asked.

Although she had doubts about accepting the appointment to the election board, Laws said she went ahead to be able to watch the process and intended to remain silent.

"But in going through it, I believe the special election was designed to bring special people into power and continue business as usual," she said.

Misquez could not be reached for comment.

Two die in accident

A Hobbs man and his 12-year-old nephew died Tuesday night on U.S. Highway 380 about 35 miles west of Carrizozo after the semi-truck they were in rolled, a state police dispatcher said Wednesday.

Billy Hull, 35, and Dusty Hull, 12, both were pronounced dead at the scene, state police said.

The elder Hull was driving west on the highway at about 9 p.m. in a semi-truck. He reportedly failed to negotiate a curve and over compensated. The truck overturned and slide upside down for 870 feet before coming to a stop, state police said.

bar, I played," he said.

Now Nelson is stopping in Ruidoso in the early part of a hectic 69-city tour of the United States with little time to rest between stops. But he said he's been doing it for so long he guesses he's "sort of acclimated." His children used to travel with him when they were young, he said, and he still gets together with them while he is on the road.

He credits an old friend of his, Ruidoso resident Dave King, for the concert at 8 p.m. Sunday at the Ruidoso Downs Race Track.

The greatest accomplishment of his career is keeping the band together so long and that he's been able to stay out on the road all these years, he said.

Fame was worth all the trouble to get it because along with it came the means to support his family and give them things "that ordinarily I wouldn't be able to do."

Nelson didn't want to name who he'd most enjoyed collaborating with, but he did say "Waylon (Jennings) was the prettiest — just kidding."

What would Nelson most like to be remembered for? "That they got a good show. I'd like for people to think that they got their money's worth."

Here are some of the terrible things which according to a country exchange, are likely to befall a delinquent subscriber: Last week a delinquent subscriber said that he would pay up Saturday, if he lived. He's dead. Another, "I'll see you tomorrow." He's blind. Still another one said, "I hope to pay you this week or go to the devil." He's gone. There are hundreds who ought to take warnings by these procrastinators and pay up their subscriptions, now.

MEET THE PRESS OF THE RUIDOSO NEWS

There is a Ruidoso News reporter for every story in Ruidoso. With an editorial department comprised of six talented writers, each reporter can cover a particular section of community news.

Editor Terrance Vestal coordinates the efforts of the editorial staff. He designates reporters to cover breaking news and makes story assignments. He also contributes to the editorial pages, and proofs and edits stories before they run in the paper. Working alongside Terrance is Vamonos Editor Laura Clymer. Laura oversees the weekly production of Vamonos, writing and assigning stories and assisting in the production of the entertainment guide.

Laura updates the Bellas Artes, Going Out and Movie Listings features weekly and generates stories on artists of local and national renown. Laura also reports on games and scores on the sports page.

Toni Laxton and Dianne Stallings work each week to cover the city and county news beats. Toni reports on local issues involving the Village of Ruidoso, the State Highway Department and businesses in the community. She compiles the business brief section in every Friday's paper. Local businesses are always welcome to submit information to Toni regarding a change in location, a change in ownership, professional honors or awards, or new businesses. The editorial department and the community can use the information to track trends and concerns in the local market. There are restrictions on the amount of space for Business Briefs, so information provided is edited for availability.

Dianne Stallings covers news in the Lincoln County government, the National Forest Service, and the communities surrounding Ruidoso. Dianne works to represent Carrizozo, Capitan, Hondo, Glencoe, Lincoln and the rural community in the newspaper. Correspondents also assist in the coverage of the county.

Toni and Dianne both work with Sandy Suggitt to cover breaking news stories. Sandy also assists Vamonos editor Laura Clymer in covering entertainment and the arts. In addition, Sandy reports Police-business and educational news, and compiles the obituary column.

Keith Green, the editorial adviser, produces commentary and editorial opinion on the editorial page each week. Keith's duties include accepting and editing Letters to the Editor. Keith works with the entire editorial staff to produce a biweekly product that covers every aspect of the community. But staff reporters are not always made aware of every breaking story in the county, and information can sometimes be late, or incomplete. Even with an organized and solid editorial department, coverage can be imperfect.

Feedback is always welcome. Story ideas and commentary from the community are encouraged. The more information the community provides the editorial staff of the newspaper, the better the newspaper's coverage of the community can be.

The deadline for editorial information regarding education, business, weddings or engagements is Friday at noon for the following Friday. Otherwise, general news is compiled on Mondays for Wednesday's issue and Wednesday for Friday's issue.

Alleged rapist placed under house arrest

BY SANDY SUGGITT
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

A Capitan man charged with rape will be put under house arrest with an electronic monitoring bracelet in lieu of monetary bond as per the order of a local magistrate.

Magistrate William R. Butts, however, did not find probable cause for charges of kidnapping or intimidation of a witness during the hearing on Wednesday.

At the preliminary hearing Thursday, bound the 35-year-old defendant over on a charge of criminal sexual penetration, a first-degree felony, referring to testimony from a member of a rape crisis team who found damage to the vaginal area of the victim and said the woman was in a state of "mental distress, anguish and hysteria."

Butts did not find probable cause to bind over the defendant for kidnapping because, he said, "The alleged victim in this case had every opportunity to ask for help and she didn't do that."

He was referring to a period of time between the alleged kidnapping in Ruidoso, which allegedly occurred at about 2 p.m. on July 17, and the time she reported it to the police, which was about midnight.

On the stand the victim said that she met the defendant on July 14 and spent three to four hours talking with him.

On July 15, when she was working at Circle K he came to the store and she called the police when he allegedly threatened a customer and told the customer she was his girlfriend.

On July 17, she went to Allsup's with no intention of meeting him, she said, and the defendant got into her car and threatened her with a knife.

She said he made her drive to Win, Place and Show bar and "pretend I was his girlfriend."

Later, she said, he made her drive to his home in Capitan where he allegedly raped her, saying that he would get her and her two nieces if she told anyone about the alleged crime.

Defense Attorney Shawn Boyne asked the victim if she had ever wanted to have sex with a man, and Stevens objected, but Butts ruled the question admissible.

Stevens called Mariellen Wise Levison, a registered nurse at Lincoln County Medical Center who is a member of a four-person rape crisis team and who examined the alleged victim.

Levison said she observed that the woman's clothing was ripped, that she had urinated on herself, had blood droplets on her pants, and a pool of blood on her inner body parts when she began a pelvic exam. Levison said she was in too much pain to permit her to do the entire exam, and the next day when she came to the physician's office, she was still upset and in physical pain.

Butts asked Levison how she could tell the difference between "rough, lengthy consensual sex" and a rape.

"If it was consensual, lengthy sex, why would they be in the emergency room urinating on themselves, bleeding at the nose and seeking help?" Levison replied. "There are plenty of people who have rough, lengthy consensual sex and don't come into the emergency room."

Burglary on White Mountain Drive

Ruidoso Police report that a large sum of money in quarters was taken from a residence in Recreation Village, 717, White Mountain Drive. The owner found the door pushed or kicked off its hinges, but nothing appeared to have been disturbed except the money. Police are investigating the leads.

Burglary on Candlewood

The front door of a residence in the 100 block of Candlewood was bashed in Aug. 5 and about $850 in VCRs, compact discs and playstations were stolen and about $1,000 of criminal damage was done, police report. Police found pry marks on the door where suspects apparently attempted to break in before bashing in the door.

Man charged with aggravated battery

Gary A. Loretto, 24, of Ruidoso, was arrested at 6:21 p.m. Aug. 7 for aggravated battery against a household member in the 100 block of Dropping Juniper Drive.

Police investigate battery

Police are investigating the aggravated battery of a 19-year-old male that occurred about 2:30 a.m. Aug. 4 in the 100 block of Doña Ana Drive.

Two charged with battery

Police arrested Darin Pino, 32, of Ruidoso and Andrea D. McCutcheon, 23, of Ruidoso and charged each with battery against a household member August 10.

ORDINANCES: Several public hearings will be held

Banners

Another proposed amendment would allow people to put up banners in the village for up to eight weeks, 56 days, in any time increments they would like. Currently, regulations specify banner permits of up to four times a year.

Village Manager Alan Briley said the $10 permit for banners would have to be applied for each time a banner is put out.

The amendment is to come before the council Sept. 14 for a public hearing and vote.

Grandfathered parking spaces

If approved, this amendment would "grandfather" all the current commercial parking space requirements in the village. So, if a retail shop was converted into a restaurant, the parking space requirements would not increase, village leaders said.

The ordinance amendment is to go before the Ruidoso Village Council Sept. 28 for a public hearing and vote.

Under the amendment, new structures would still need to meet parking lot specifications based on the type of business going in.

The Ruidoso Planning and Zoning Commission regularly grants variances for parking space requirements, Donaldson said. "And if we are going to do that, then why not just do this?"

Utility forest management

A proposed ordinance amendment would give Texas-New Mexico Power Company greater authority to trim and cut back trees near electrical lines. The proposal will go before at least two public hearings before a vote is taken because it involves private property, Donaldson said this week.

The first of those public hearings is scheduled for the Sept. 28 council meeting.

The amendment was first proposed two months ago after a tree limb fell on an electrical line and sparked a large fire off of Hull Road and Warrior Drive. Currently, the power company has limited authority to remove trees and tree limbs on private property.

"What brought this about is the avoidance of a catastrophic fire," Jim Bassett, who oversees the Ruidoso office of Texas-New Mexico Power, told village councilors this week.

Donaldson added that he is "certainly tired of snow laden branches in the winter bringing down electrical lines."

In the proposed amendment, property owners would be required to maintain low vegetation near power lines.

OUR OPINION

Circumstances and opportunity

Sara Misquez, the newly elected president of the Mescalero Apache Tribe, today stands on the edge of opportunity.

Between now and November, President Misquez (no more "interim" or "acting") will have a chance to demonstrate to her people that they chose wisely in elevating her to the tribe's highest office. Her years as tribal administrator at the right hand of long-time President Wendell Chino gave her a grounding in the nuts and bolts of tribal government.

No doubt that association also taught her something about the way an expert politician — and certainly Chino was that — could create an agenda and nurture it to completion.

The tribal president, it seems from afar, has at least two political roles: To demonstrate positive leadership in advancing the well-being of tribal members, and to be chief spokesperson, negotiator and defender of the tribe to the world outside the reservation.

President Misquez, a mother and grandmother, earned a business degree from Haskell of Lawrence, Kan., the oldest Indian college in the nation, and came home to make a career with the tribe.

Her education and experience is ideal for the job she has been given by her people. Her willingness to reach beyond the reservation boundaries, as demonstrated by recent signed commentary in this and other newspapers, we take as a positive indicator; that she understands the Mescalero Apache people are citizens of a state and nation as well as a tribe.

Time is limited between now and the November general tribal election, but it's enough for the new tribal president to demonstrate the leadership her people are seeking.

We wish her well.

Hats off to Carrizozo

Carrizozo this month is celebrating her centennial as an incorporated community.

A century ago, she was little more than a siding on the newly completed El Paso and Northeastern Railroad and had ambitions. (White Oaks was the county's metropolis, but fading. Ruidoso was little more than a grist mill.)

Carrizozo captured the Lincoln County Court House after a few years, and has battled to keep it ever since.

So, from Ruidoso (just 53 years old) we send congratulations, and wish Carrizozo many happy birthdays to come.

YOUR OPINION

Good Samaritan

To the editor:

Yes, there are good Samaritans! Last Wednesday morning I was riding my bicycle on the path around the Links Golf Course. As I approached the library my front tire went off the pavement. I lost control, smashed into the golf fence, bicycle on top of me. A lady I had just met, walking, quickly came to help me.

A foursome of golfers appeared, one brave man hurling the fence; another man, walking, came to help.

I believe the golfer did manage to get over the fence. I want to thank all of the Samaritans and the emergency room nurse and doctor, and my husband, for helping to heal my wounds.

Who's in charge?

To the editor:

If (the letter) "Strawberry plants and their aftermath" is in reference to officer Sombrano, then (the writer is) a victim of watching "Titanic" too many times. The fact is... Mr. Sombrano pleaded no contest to charges against him. Does this sound like an innocent police officer?

From the reaction of the mayor and city manager... it is quite clear to me now that (Police Chief) Lanny Maddox is in control of the village. Mayor (Robert) Donaldson is just another one of Lanny Maddox's "yes men." ... It is terrible that the many good police officers in the Ruidoso Police Department are going to be scarred by the actions of Mr. Sombrano and Mr. Maddox. It is my understanding that in the next council elections four seats will be open. (We) as a community have an option. We could take back our community by forming a group to promote good honest candidates for the village council and mayor's office.

We need a local government where the police chief is held responsible for the actions of personnel in his department. Mr. Maddox at this time may be telling Mayor Donaldson and Manager Alan Briley the direction the city should be taking, and they may be answering, "Yes, Mr. Boss Man."

It is time the village... start thinking about electing a mayor with a backbone...

The only positive for Mr. Maddox is that he should be swamped with applications to join the force. In the last three weeks every thief in Ruidoso may have applied for a police officer job.

Letter reaction

To the editor:

My letter... published July 16

concerning Officer Sombrano's shoplifting from Wal-Mart certainly brought many surprise reactions... Before my paper was even delivered, my phone started ringing and continued through the next week. Ironically, I got four calls from policemen...

Everywhere I went people thanked me, and asked me to stay alert and encourage others to become involved. I am truly shocked at how many people read the paper. I received no complaints... to date.

In my original letter one small word was misspelled that dramatically changed the meaning... and I claim "no foul" because I believe most people read it the way I meant it... The sentence read: "Shame on Chief Maddox! Has Officer Sombrano been fired yet?" It was printed as "fined," an extremely easy mistake... but dramatically changed its meaning...

Chief Maddox... please do not insult my intelligence by saying you knew nothing about Sombrano, Wal-Mart, Condon and "his chief," and the rush to judgment made ... on Sunday by (Judge) Mansell...

If you weren't notified immediately about your officer and his problem, or very soon thereafter, then you, sir, apparently have lost the respect your title commands. If you have lost touch with your officers, then you are the weak link in the chain of command and need should be replaced...

ECONOMIC COMMENTARY

The economy: Stopping a runaway train

BY SUNG WON SOHN
CHIEF ECONOMIST, WELLS FARGO

The runaway economic train is fueled by robust job growth, easy money and stock market wealth. The slow motion monetary policy hasn't slowed the train much. To be sure, there are sound reasons for the "go slow" approach.

The link between economic growth and inflation is uncertain. Despite the red-hot economy, the core inflation rate has not budged much. While global economic conditions have improved, there are concerns in Japan, Latin America and Europe. Y2K is another potential problem.

However, the recent crop of economic statistics point to an overheated economy. Chairman Greenspan may have to slam on the brakes. The ballooning current account deficit is also contributing to higher interest rates.

Earlier, a voracious appetite for U.S. assets by foreign investors led to the stronger dollar as well as lower inflation and interest rates, boosting purchasing power of the economy. Now the reverse is true. Investors swamped with the dollar are moving on to greener pastures. The United States has to attract foreign capital by raising interest rates. The weaker dollar will lead to more inflation and tighter monetary policy.

A faster rise in interest rates and a possible correction in the stock market in the United States spell trouble for the fledgling economic expansion abroad. Until recently, the massive liquidity creation by central banks could not be absorbed by the real economy; interest rates plunged and a lot of money went into stock markets. Economic growth overseas means that central banks may have to mop up excess liquidity, raising interest rates. The higher interest rates and repercussions from the United States could sap global economic growth.

Deteriorating credit

Credit market conditions are deteriorating. Corporate spreads and swap rates have jumped. Setbacks in equity will force more firms to turn to bonds and bank loans. Rising corporate leverage ratios make businesses more vulnerable to higher interest rates.

The slow motion monetary policy has not been helpful to bonds. A sustained drop in yields will come only after there are convincing signs that the economy will cool and the inflation risk diminishes. In the meantime, the treasury yield curve is flattening. Factors influencing the slope include monetary policy, budget surpluses, the value of the dollar and Y2K. The yield curve is inversely correlated with the real federal funds rate. Tighter monetary policy raises the short-end of the curve, while chopping inflation expectations, helping the long-end. Tighter monetary policy also hits the potbelly of the curve because holders of mortgage-backed securities hedge by shorting treasuries.

Solid economic growth boosts budget surpluses and lower inflation expectations. However, the weaker dollar raises inflation psychology. Y2K concerns increase investors' preference for liquidity and safety, favoring treasuries over other assets. Maturities well beyond the turn of this year and into the 2 to 5 year ranges are popular. Swaps can be used to tailor maturities.

Stocks lagging bonds

Stocks can no longer count on a strong economy and lower interest rates. Rising interest rates will damage economic growth and earnings expectations, eventually triggering a market correction. Internet stocks are ahead of the pack. Technically, there no longer is the breadth of the market which supported the boom.

Historically, the first couple of monetary tightening, had little impact on equities. The federal funds rate had to rise about 15 percent from the starting level; this implies 5.5 percent. Only when the market is worried about a possible recession will a sustained correction ensue.

We are not there yet. See the local business report on page 2C today.

LETTERS POLICY

The Ruidoso News encourages letters to the editor, especially about local topics and issues. Each letter must be signed and must include the writer's daytime telephone number and address.

Letters should be 300 words or less in length, of public interest and avoid libelous language. The Ruidoso News reserves the right to reject letters, or to edit them, so long as viewpoints are not altered.

Letters may be hand-delivered to the office at 104 Park Avenue or mailed to P.O. Box 128, Ruidoso, NM 88355, attention of the editor.

Education by the byte

Among the things I'm happy to learn is that the Ruidoso School District leads all public school systems in the state in the use of technology.

Superintendent Mike Gladden says every classroom now has a big-screen TV hooked up to computers that are hooked to the Internet.

It's all strung together with fiber optics, thanks to lots of support by, among others, CableVision, the Ruidoso Instruction Center of Eastern New Mexico University and some grants from far places.

No question, the Internet can provide an education, if patience doesn't wane. It also can lead people down some distant by-ways, but Gladden says there'll be safeguards against student attempts to check out the Luscious Lips web site, whatever that is.

Internet stock trading, offshore gambling, instant news, merchandise marts, packaged propaganda — all that's out there, waiting for the diligent, and the gullible.

Without doubt, school is a different sort of place than it was earlier in the century.

Maybe that was what was in school board member Jackie Brannum's mind when she remarked to other board members recently that some Ruidoso High graduates are complaining that they had to take remedial math classes after they enrolled in college.

Come to think about it, we don't recall a web site that provides drills to memorize the multiplication tables. Not to say there isn't one out there.

And we did pick up a comment from a local businessman the other day that some kids who came in to apply for a job, or for credit, couldn't read or write well enough to fill out the forms.

But that, no doubt, is apocryphal. Or an argument against "social promotion," a feature of New Mexico secondary education for decades.

Hubbard proposes a Willie Nelson museum

BY TONI K. LAXSON
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

Every legend deserves a museum.

Though not yet finalized, plans are in the works for a museum dedicated to country and western icon Willie Nelson in Ruidoso Downs.

On Sunday evening, 90 minutes before Nelson's performance at the Ruidoso Downs Race Track, the museum's creation is to be announced at a reception in the track's Jockey Club.

R.D. Hubbard, racetrack owner and co-founder of the Hubbard Museum of the American West, is proposing to build the archive commemorating Nelson's 40-year career as a singer/songwriter.

On Thursday, Hubbard

said he could not discuss too many details of the proposed museum until after Nelson officially signed with it.

Nelson, contacted Thursday in Boise, Idaho, said he felt honored by the proposal that started here in Ruidoso.

"Some folks in the town, friends of mine, Dave King, an old friend of mine, and some other folks, the Hubbards, they are the ones that started talking about it and approached me on it," Nelson said.

Hubbard said the museum would start off as an exhibit inside the Hubbard Museum of the American West next to the Ruidoso Downs Race Track. "And the long-term plan is to build a separate museum," he said.

Hubbard declined to say what items may be included in the museum. "It's all too early to say," he said. "Nothing has been agreed to at this time."

Hubbard suggested a symmetry to the museum's creation: The last time Nelson performed in Ruidoso, about 30 years ago, it was at the Chaparral, now the home of the Hubbard Museum of the American West.

Jill Wylly, a publicist for Willie Nelson out of Las Vegas, Nev., said Thursday the museum would be the first dedicated solely to Nelson, though some pieces from Nelson's career are part of the Country Music Hall of Fame in Nashville, Tenn.

Reporter Sandy Suggitt contributed to this story.

STAGE: The concert should not obstruct any races

as he sets up building materials for the stage. Actually construction begins at about midnight.

The stage, without its canopy of trusses, will be built on the outside lane of the track where quarter horse races run. Sunday's races are all thoroughbreds, and will be on the inside lane, he said.

The stage will not be high enough to obstruct the view of Sunday's races, Barrow said.

On Sunday afternoon, lights, trusses and a 20-foot canopy will go up on the stage.

"Then we bring in another truck with all of the equipment, all of the sound equipment, and Willie's gear," Barrow said. "I have it timed so that one thing happens, then another thing happens, and then we open the show."

Besides setting up a stage in a very short period of time, logistical challenges include providing power sources (two generators are being brought in — one for sound and another for the lights), ensuring adequate security, feeding the Nelson's stage crews, finding a suitable place for the buses and semi-trucks that roll in with the concert and placing Nelson's own bus as close to the stage as possible, Barrow said.

Besides Barrow and race-track crews, the concert is getting some setup assistance and advice from two companies with expertise in the area — Mother Hubbard's out of Las Cruces and SPI Productions out of Albuquerque, he said.

His job doesn't end when the concert does. Barrow and his crews are to again work overnight on Sunday.

"We are going to tear it all down that night and put the race track together for the next day," he said. "We hope to be able to use it by 10 a.m."

Barrow, a Nelson fan for decades, says all the work is worth it — not just because he'll hear favorite songs sung live — but because of the benefit the big name concert provides to the community.

Ruidoso Downs takes a loan for a fire station

BY TONI K. LAXSON
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

Ruidoso Downs village trustees Monday accepted a loan of $411,267 for the New Mexico Finance Authority for the land and building costs of a new fire station.

The 20-year loan, which the village will pay back at a low 3-percent interest rate, will buy the village a $225,000, 7.5-acre lot on the east side of Ruidoso Downs as well as build a $160,000 fire station on the lot, Village Clerk Leann Weihbrecht said.

No information was available from the village about the land's current owner.

Ruidoso Downs needs a new fire station because the existing one, located across from Village Hall at 122 Downs Drive, is "really old and just too small," Weihbrecht said.

Construction on the fire station will probably not start until after the first of 2000, Weihbrecht said.

Drawings of the proposed building have already been completed, which means the village may choose to not hire an architect for the project, she said.

The New Mexico Finance Authority loan is to come through by Sept. 14, and Ruidoso Downs is to finalize purchase of the land Sept. 15, village leaders said.

The new fire station is tentatively planned to have 8,500 square feet, and will include bays for fire trucks, offices, sleeping quarters, bathrooms, a training room, a reception room, a laundry room, a mechanical room and a combination kitchen/day room, Weihbrecht said.

With the fire department's current staff of two paid members and 12 volunteers, the sleeping quarters are not yet needed, but will be when the department expands, Weihbrecht said.

The current fire station has bays for fire trucks, an office area, a meeting area and bathrooms, she said.

The village will continue to use the current facility to house fire equipment after the new station is completed, Weihbrecht added.

Kathy Sylvia, director of financial analysis with the New Mexico Finance Authority, attended the Ruidoso Downs Village Council meeting Monday night to answer any questions from village trustees about the loan.

Following the meeting, she said Ruidoso Downs qualified for the loan at what are called "disadvantaged rates" based on income levels in the village.

"Your bottom line is you are paying 3 percent on the money," she told the council.

"Can I get some of that?" Trustee Ray Hayhurst joked in response.

Sylvia told trustees the money will be available following a 30-day period for citizens to register complaints regarding the loan.

Trustees also took the following actions:

- Approved hiring Jason Kinnick as a full-time animal control officer. Kinnick was working part-time in the position.

- Approved a request from Fire Chief Nick Herrera for the purchase of additional 4 sets of bunker gear at a cost of $5,399.76 from Gall's Inc.

- Approved a resolution for the New Mexico Environmental Department for the construction of a new water tank in the village.

- Heard a mayoral proclamation naming Aug. 15 as Willie Nelson Day. Nelson is to perform Aug. 15 at the Ruidoso Downs Race Track.

At the concert, Nelson and track officials are to announce a long-term agreement between the country and western celebrity and the race-track.

- Approved amendments to the village animal control ordinance to include a list of definitions, such as when an animal is deemed to be "running at large."

According to the amended ordinance, an animal is running at large when it is beyond the boundaries of the premises of the animal's owner or keeper unless it is on a secure leash of no more than 6 feet in length.

The owner or keeper's premises is an area which is totally enclosed where an animal cannot get out or another animal can get in.

- Came out of a closed session discussion of personnel issues and voted to not hire an applicant for a new position of laborer for the village.

The village is to again advertise for the position.

VILLAGE BRIEFS

More workers needed for pine needle cleanup

The village of Ruidoso will hire additional employees for pine needle collections, Village Manager Alan Briley said Tuesday.

Currently, the Ruidoso Solid Waste Department is two to three months behind in the collection of yard waste materials, which consists primarily of pine needles, Briley said. The department has established a regular route for curbside pickup of non-bagged yard waste, for which residents pay a monthly charge of $2. To catch up on the backlog of pine needle piles, village personnel will start working double shifts, 12-16 hours a day, Briley said. In addition, special arrangements will be made with Sierra Contracting, where the village disposes of yard waste materials, to accept loads after regular business hours, he said.

He asked that residents contact the Solid Waste Department, 257-1502, if their pine needle piles were missed along a collection route.

Village sets up waiver system for sewer hookups

• The village of Ruidoso has set up a waiver system for those required to tie onto village sewer lines when the cost reaches $2,500 or more.

BY TONI K. LAXSON
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

Ruidoso village leaders recently raised a proposed cost "threshold" from $1,500 to $2,500 for determining when it is too expensive for a homeowner to tie onto village sewer lines.

The waiver will apply after homeowners show their septic systems are in working order, Village Manager Alan Briley said.

The policy change, accepted unanimously last month by the Ruidoso Village Council, came after a nine-month study showed more than 200 homes were within 200 feet of sewer lines but are still using septic tanks.

According to building codes adapted from state regulations, homes within 200 feet of sewer lines have 30 days to apply for a permit to switch from septic tanks to sewer lines.

Residents of those homes then have six months to complete the switch, with an opportunity for another six-month extension.

However, because of the cost that switch represents for some homes, Ruidoso village councilors agreed a waiver should be allowed.

Briley said a waiver is allowed under a section for plumbing codes, which gives administrative discretion for determining "availability" in regard to sewer lines.

Only eight of the 200 homeowners contacted have requested in writing waivers from the village about the sewer line requirement, Briley said.

Another 84 of the homeowners have tied on to sewer lines, 55 have pulled permits but not completed the work and another 56 have not yet responded to the village, he said.

"We have sent out about 318 letters to date," Briley said. "The success story is that we have discovered (another) 100 customers who were on sewer but not paying the bill."

The system for applying for waivers starts with an inspection of a home's septic system by a licensed plumber or septic tank installer.

If the system is in good order, the next step is an estimate of the cost for a homeowner to switch from a septic tank to sewer lines by a licensed contractor or plumber, Briley said.

When that cost estimate is $2,500 or more, or the homeowner has an income at 60 percent or less than the average for this area, then the waiver is granted.

The homeowner is required to pay an $11 monthly charge for access to sewer lines, according to the policy.

With each waiver, the property's title will be attached with a requirement for the sewer tie-on when it next changes hands, Briley said.

Though the council had earlier discussed a waiver threshold based on a cost of $1,500, that figure grew to $2,500 during discussion at the past council session, Briley said.

"One of the reasons is we had new information on cost estimates," he said.

Earlier, $1,800 had been given as the maximum cost for running a sewer line as far as 200 feet in mountainous terrain.

"But $1,800 is pretty much the base minimum," Briley said. "The staff felt like the ordinance is there for a reason, and we think that the whole intent is to get people on the sewer and off septic tanks. And if we waive (the requirement) all the time, no one will get on sewer."

Casino arbitration continues

BY TONI K. LAXSON
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

After 18 months of delays, the arbitration process over New Mexico Indian tribes' nonpayment of slot machine revenues is back in gear.

Gregory Quinlan, an attorney for the Mescalero Apache Tribe, said recently the American Arbitration Association is seeking a preliminary arbitration hearing sometime before November and possibly as soon as this month.

The association is asking Quinlan and others involved in the arbitration to indicate which days in August, September and October they have free for the hearing, Quinlan said. Participants were asked to submit their schedules to the association by Monday, he said.

The arbitration process started in March 1998 between the New Mexico Gaming Control Board and the Mescalero Apache Tribe, one of two tribes in the state whose casinos have not made revenue-sharing payments since the passage of revised gaming legislation in spring 1997.

Under that legislation, tribes operating casinos are required to pay the state 16 percent of slot machine revenues. Tribal representatives, including the late Mescalero President Wendell Chino, said that amount is too high to comply with the federal Indian Gaming Control Act.

Presbyterian kicks off a new breast cancer awareness campaign

BY DIANNE STALLINGS
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

Some unusual beaded necklaces will start showing up around the necks of hundreds of women in Lincoln County next month.

They were designed to remind women and men of the dangers of breast cancer and the need for regular mammograms.

The timing of the necklace campaign by Presbyterian HealthCare Services, the parent company of the group that manages the county hospital in Ruidoso, also provides a perfect promotion to the annual mammogram campaign put on each October by the Ruidoso Altrusa club.

"The beads on the necklace represent five different sizes of breast lumps found by self-examination and mammography," said Julie Sterchi, assistant administrator at the Lincoln County Medical Center. "We're asking individuals to wear the necklaces and a pin that says to ask them about the beads."

The beads on the necklaces start with a small size represented the average lump that can be detected by regular mammograms. The next size up is the average size detected by a first mammogram. The next largest is the size able to be detected by women who practice regular breast self-examination. The next is the size discovered by women who do occasional self-examination and the largest is the average size found by women untrained in breast self-examination.

"It's pretty frightening," Sterchi said. "It really demonstrates the need to be aware of having routine mammograms. It's a good visual illustration."

The beads are a new approach this year for the hospital. Sterchi expects to see necklaces on auxiliary personnel and staff.

"But we also want to get the necklaces out into the community, to reach folks who don't regularly come to the hospital or go in for yearly exams," she said.

Literature that will be distributed includes a card to be filled out and will go to the hospital, listing the person's name, address, primary physician, insurance plan, how long since the last mammogram and if the person wants a hospital representative to call them.

Nurse Maury St. John, left, who specializes in cancer cases, and Cindy Wolfel of the Lincoln County Medical Center, model their beaded necklaces as part of the fight against breast cancer, which kills an estimated 100,000 people each year nationwide, according to the American Cancer Society.

To help women make the decision to move forward with a mammogram, Altrusa members 12 years ago started their lower-cost program in cooperation with the county hospital.

"When we started, we were trying to get women who never previously had a mammogram for a baseline screening," said Dianne Vowel, who chairs the project. "But now we do a full fledged mammogram with two views of each breast."

The expansion of approach primarily came at the urging of Dr. Don Wolfel, who supervises the project from the hospital side and "reads" the x-rays.

"We had 35 women the first year and now we have more than 400 every year," Vowel said.

Although the program begins Oct. 4 and runs through Oct. 29, if appointments go beyond that date, the service still will be given for the $55 charge, she said.

A mammogram normally costs about $124.

"The hospital gives us the month of October and works its other emergency patients in around the appointments we have set up," she said. "Over the years, we have fine-tuned the operation. We also have a lot of repeats now. I think it's a wonderful thing to be able to take advantage of the lower price. Too many women otherwise might opt to buy more school clothes for their children or take care of a household need."

Although initially women with no previous mammograms were targeted, Altrusa soon saw a need to provide annual exams.

"We saw that the recommended age to start mammograms kept coming down," Vowel said. "First it was 50, then 40 and now they are saying to begin in your 30s, because younger and younger women are getting breast cancer. The younger they start with a healthy breast, the better basis of comparison for the doctors as they age."

Altrusa provides a staff of four to the hospital to handle the screening program, collect the money, do the paperwork and send out results, which speeds up the arrival of the information to the patient, Vowel said.

"We have four breast cancer survivors among our members, so the project is very near and dear to our hearts," she said. "We have 95 percent participation by members in some form."

Starting Sept. 24, appointments for October can be set up by calling Vowel at 258-4210.

Cedar Creek residents continue to boil water

Cedar Creek area residents need to continue buying bottled water or boiling water this weekend, state environmental officials said.

Samples from the water supply for the Cedar Creek Cabin Owners Association, which serves up to 450 people, indicated E. coli/fecal coliform bacteria in the water.

Water needs to be boiled at least 10 minutes before use for drinking, cooking or cleaning dishes, state officials said.

Becky Crown, with local office of the New Mexico Environment Department, said the administrators of the water supply are trying to improve the system's chlorination process to eliminate the bacteria.

"They are getting their disinfection practices worked out," she said.

Crown has received four or five calls regarding the contamination, some from nearby well owners who were concerned about the status of their water supply.

Bacterial contamination is a common occurrence during the monsoon season, she said.

"This time of year we have a lot of flood waters and they can get into the wells if they are not sealed properly," she said.

Symptoms of E. coli infection include diarrhea, cramps, nausea, possible jaundice, headaches and fatigue. The bacteria is typical associated with sewage or animal waste.

Hospital expansion avoids a potential snag

BY DIANNE STALLINGS
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

A review of parking lot expansion plans at Lincoln County Medical Center by hospital administrator Jim Gibson turned up a potential problem that could have stopped construction on the project.

While going over plans late last month, Gibson discovered the project spilled over onto private land owned by Southwest Health Foundation, an organization associated with Presbyterian HealthCare Systems, which manages the hospital in Ruidoso.

Knowing that county money can't be spent on private land, he contacted Presbyterian and then met with County Manager Tom Stewart to resolve the problem.

"There has been no intrusion at this point," Gibson said. "The property abuts hospital property on the west side. I think people were aware of the problem, but I just resurfaced the issue."

The company will deed over the small portion of the land required to accommodate the enlarged parking lot, said Gene Walton, senior vice president for legal services for Presbyterian.

"We were working on this before we received the letter (from Stewart), considering all the different ways this could be resolved," Walton said. The company could have given the county an easement, the county could have condemned the land or the company could deed it over to the county, he said.

The letter he received from Stewart gave Presbyterian 10 working days to produce a warranty deed transferring the property to the county without stipulations, or the work would have to stop until the situation was resolved.

Stewart said he sent the letter after meeting with Gibson and Kevin McMullen from Presbyterian, and then talking to County Attorney Alan Morel.

"There is no problem, but there could have been," Morel said Tuesday. "Obviously, we can't put public money into private land. When this project was designed, there was no issue, but at some point the parking lot design was expanded. This came up all of a sudden. What they've proposed is acceptable. They have bent over backwards to work with us."

The issue of being careful about not intruding on private land during the hospital expansion was discussed about six months ago, Morel said. Commissioner Wilton Howell was especially worried about a slip-up, because the private land abuts the hospital property.

Fishing report

For fly fishing -
RIO RUIDOSO: The best patterns are pheasant tails, green rock worms and prince nymphs. Late afternoon until dusk are producing scattered dry fly action along the vegetation lines of the riverbanks. The best dries have been parachute adams, blue wing olives and hendricksons. Upper canyon on the reservation has been fishing well. Toss what you got here.

BONITO CREEK: Not any change from last week. There is water flow below Bonito, however few fish are found here. Above Bonito on the South Fork has been good with numerous small native fish.

BONITO LAKE: Water level is good with reports of early and late fishing good on dry flies. Best reported patterns are blue wing olives, hendricksons and light cahills. The spin caster will do well with a bubble right and a propeller fly tied on the business end. The hot propeller flies last week and this week seem to be the one with a pink body and white hackle, gold and silver have caught fish.

GRINDSTONE LAKE: Late evening fishing will produce the better fishing here. Take advantage of midge and damselfly hatches. Several evenings this past week, dry flies such as light cahills, parachute adams and griffin's gnats have provided numerous surface takes. Toss a few streamers at dusk thirty and hold on to the rod grip. A few big boys have cruised the shoreline at dusk.

LAKE MESCALERO: The lake level is good. Shoreline and boat fishing have produced nice fish in the evening hours. Dry flies that have been working are parachute adams, hendricksons, mosquitoes and midges.

EAGLE LAKES: The fishing has been steady but spotty. Propeller flies behind a bubble will do well for the spin casters. It's hard to beat a parachute adams or a blue wing olive during the last hour of the day. Eagle Lakes are always good for one of the county's best nature shows. Sightings of elk and deer usually help keep you entertained. The stocking of Eagle Lakes is question because of the firechy disaster in Mescalero.

Jim Shoop, Fly's Etc.

For bait fishing -
RIO RUIDOSO: It has been pretty good when it's clear. Use salmon eggs and parrot minnows.

GRINDSTONE RESERVOIR: Fair to good, mostly morning and evening fishing. Powerbait, worms and pistol peps.

BONITO LAKE: Fair to good; mostly morning and evening fishing. Powerbait, worms and pistol peps.

EAGLE LAKES: Not much word since stocking stopped earlier this month.

Golf scores an eagle with kids

BY LAURA CLYMER
RUIDOSO NEWS SPORTS EDITOR

As he watched his putt attempt skid past the hole on the practice green, 12-year-old Mescalero junior golfer P.J. Smith said to his teammate with refreshing honesty, "I hit that too hard."

Smith was one of 30 youth golfers participating in a nine-hole tournament for Native American children at the Inn of the Mountain Gods Wednesday. The tournament was the culmination of summer golf programs at the Mescalero Apache Reservation, the Pueblo of Jemez, the Pueblo of Isleta and the Santa Ana Pueblo. The programs were funded by a United States Golf Association grant totaling $59,400.

It was comments like Smith's that ruled the day and shoed away the "attitudes and airs" usually found on the links.

This tournament was for fun, for developing a love of the game, and even though awards were handed out to the top three finishers in each age group, every participant received a T-shirt and a goody bag of prizes and was treated to a cookout after the tournament.

"A lot of them are beginners and some have played golf before, but never organized like this," said Simon Simms, Mescalero's liaison for its youth golf program. Simms works with the children through the reservation's Carrizo Community Center and the Mescalero Boys and Girls Club.

Simms said plans are for the Mescalero tournament to become an annual event. It is also hoped that the other three Native American junior golf programs will host tournaments of their own by next summer.

"They're using Mescalero as the pilot site (for a tournament)," Simms said.

The continuation of the Mescalero tournament will depend, in part, on whether or not someone will organize the tournament like Simms did. Simms said he plans to return to college in Albuquerque soon.

The Mescalero golf program started in June. It consisted of golf lessons and practice for two hours a day, three days a week. Participants received 10 rounds of golf free of charge also. Simms said the program started with about a dozen young golfers and half of them finished the program.

Mescalero received about $20,000 of the USGA grant. Grant money is issued in four increments of about $5,000 each, Simms said, throughout the year.

USGA President Buzz Taylor said the grant money provides access and affordability to golf courses to Native American youth across the country.

It was working Wednesday. The Mescalero faction of young golfers unanimously said they would keep playing, even after the tournament, and their reasons were straightforward.

"I like playing out there," said 10-year-old Autumn Enjady.

Softball leagues down to final outs

BY LAURA CLYMER
RUIDOSO NEWS SPORTS EDITOR

Shaking off the rust and dust accumulated after a two-week vacation from league play mandated by the monsoon season, adult softball players returned to the diamonds this week at Eagle Creek Sports Complex.

Ruidoso Men's League Tournament play started Monday with first- and second-round games, and continued Wednesday after a Tuesday night rainout. And if the rain holds off for another day, Thursday's games will pare down the list of survivors to four teams.

Ruidoso sports coordinator Claudia Branum has scheduled the winner's bracket final, the third-place game and the championship game for Tuesday.

The Women's League Tournament is scheduled for Monday. Overflow will meet Blue Angels at 6:30 p.m. on field B, with the winner advancing to the championship game against the Flamings. The "if" game is set for 8:40 p.m.

The men's league tournament has so far gone according to form. The top four teams from the regular season received first-round byes.

Regular-season champ Extreme advanced to the quarterfinals with a 12-10 win over Ruff Raff. Extreme will meet the Grizzlies, who held off Merchants, 18-16. In the top half of the bracket, Omega Southwest edged the Nads, 24-23. Omega SW will face the Bombers who rallied to defeat the Homeboys, 18-17, despite being short-handed.

Quarterfinal winners will play at 6:30 p.m. Tuesday on field A. The third-place game is set for 7:35 p.m., followed by the championship game at 8:40 p.m. and the "if" game at 8:45 p.m. if necessary.

Men's state tournaments this weekend

Eight local teams will compete in the men's class D and E state tournaments this weekend. The men's class E tournament will be played at the Hooper Complex in Alamogordo.

Local teams competing in the class E tournament and their respective game times are:

- Nads, 9 p.m. today
- Apache Warriors, 10:15 p.m. today
- Homeboys, 10:15 p.m. today
- Extreme, 10:15 p.m. today
- Mescalero Indians, 8:15 a.m. Saturday
- Grizzlies, 8:15 a.m. Saturday
- Los Amigos, 9:30 a.m. Saturday

Branum said a team representative must attend a coaches' meeting at 7 p.m. today at the Holiday Inn Express in Alamogordo.

The Merchants will represent Ruidoso in the men's class D tournament at the Sportsplex in Albuquerque. Branum didn't have the Merchants game time by press time.

Start of coed league delayed

Branum will hand out games schedules for the Ruidoso Coed Softball league at a manager's meeting at 6:30 p.m., Thursday, Aug. 19 at the senior citizen's center.

So far, nine coed teams have signed up tentatively to play. Deadline for teams to pay their $150 entry fee is Tuesday, Aug. 17.

League play will begin Aug. 25.

Little turnover for RHS coaching staff

12 of the 13 varsity coaches are returnees

BY LAURA CLYMER
RUIDOSO NEWS SPORTS EDITOR

The Ruidoso athletic coaching staff is near complete. All it lacks is a pair of assistant junior varsity basketball coaches, said Ruidoso Schools Superintendent Mike Gladden.

The only new edition to the 1999-2000 Warrior varsity coaching ranks is girls' basketball coach Jim Varnadore. Varnadore replaces Jeannie Jackson, who moved to Arizona.

Gladden said the search is on for a boys' junior varsity assistant basketball coach as well as a girls' junior varsity assistant basketball coach.

Otherwise, the sidelines will look familiar to Warriors' fans.

Les Carter enters his fifth year as head coach of the Ruidoso football team, while on the volleyball court, Fran Webb directs her third edition of Warriors. Dave Anderson begins his third year as head soccer mentor and Ronny Maskew will coach the Ruidoso cross-country runners, as he enters his 28th year in coaching.

Activities director Ron Wall will oversee his 10th Ruidoso boys' golf team this fall and springs as well.

When winter rolls around, second-year coach Billy Page will enter his first full year as boys' varsity basketball coach after taking over the Warriors in early December 1998 when then-coach Gary Grahm was fired.

The spring coaching lineup is the same with Carter directing the girls' golf team, Mike Morris leading the boys' baseball team and Brian Baca overseeing the girls' softball team. Maskew heads up the Ruidoso track team as well.

Here's the wind up

Two teams from last weekend's Peter Hurd Cup will be in San Patricio for another round of polo Saturday and Sunday. Cowboy Chemical, which won the Peter Hurd Cup with a 6-4 decision over Morning Glory, returns for this weekend's Border Circuit Governors Cup. Fans will have the opportunity to see the locals saddle up as San Patricio/Berrenda Creek combine to play also. Matches will begin at noon both days at the polo field across from the Hurd-La Rinconada Gallery in San Patricio. Pictured above, a Morning Glory player chases down a ball during a consolation match Aug. 8.

Tips to get back to the books

If your brain remains on vacation mode after the first school bell has rung, you may need help getting back on the academic track:

- Get enough sleep! A rested mind is a sharper mind. Eight to 10 hours of sleep will aid both attention span and concentration.
- Schedule study/homework sessions for the same time each day. A consistent schedule makes it easier to establish study time as a daily habit.
- Choose a quiet, comfortable place for study where basic supplies, such as paper, sharpened pencils, erasers, scissors, dictionary, etc., are handy. Turn off the television and any loud music.
- Use a calendar or planner to keep track of daily assignments.
- Don't procrastinate! Begin working on assignments the same day they are given, even if it's just to break the assignment into steps and set deadline dates for each task.
- If you get bored, switch to another subject/task for a while.
- Take short breaks every 30 to 60 minutes (the older the student, the longer he/she can go between breaks).
- Read every day; elementary students should begin with a minimum of 15 minutes.
- Whenever appropriate, encourage children to do their homework independently.
- Eat healthy meals and snacks. Just as with adequate sleep, nutrition can influence performance. (Article Resource Association)

The Silver Lining
by Daniel A. Storm

Lincoln County...is filled with folks who came here desperately ill with their life fires burning low and who were restored to glowing health.

Then, beside the climate, there is the beauty of the countryside. The weather man has dressed up our hills and vales in true show-case style.

Speaking of climate and scenery, I am reminded of our old friend, Bill Dick Browning who was a great humorist along with his bronc riding and fiddle playing.

Back in the Model-T days when Ruidoso was called Ruidoso Springs and was just being discovered as a haven of escape from the heat of the low country, Bill Dick used to say to the summer folks:

"Isn't it nice up here in this high/multitude with this mountain view falling on you?"

Policewomen face flames
to save four race horses

The Ruidoso Downs Race-track fire of 1979 could have been worse. According to Danny García of the Ruidoso Fire Department, the rapid and courageous action of two Ruidoso police officers, Holly Barron and Hazel Poissot, saved the lives of four horses trapped in their stalls.

Barron and Poissot were working the midnight-to-8 a.m. shift Thursday and were the first to reach the scene of the fire at about 4:37 a.m.

The scene they encountered was one of "sheer panic," Barron (said) Saturday. While the horses were "screaming burning, people were standing around and looking," she said.

"Two stalls were gone and the rest were catching," Barron said.

The racehorse "Two Tall Jones" owned by Jimmy Jones of Ardmore, Okla., managed to kick open the gates, Barron said. "If it hadn't been for that, we couldn't have saved them."

Ruidoso Fire Chief Virgil Reynolds said he and members of his department would like to thank everyone for being careful during the dry season.

Reynolds and five of his firefighters just returned this week from the new fire fighting school in Socorro.

Meals are prepared at the Ruidoso Downs Senior Center, and delivered throughout the Downs-Ruidoso area.

Volunteers needed to keep the service for home-bound people going HOT MEALS AT HOME, WITH A SMILE

BY TONI K. LAXSON
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

Volunteers come and go in the local home-delivered meals program, but Mary Rivas' smiling face has been a sure thing for more than five years.

The former manager of area lodging establishments, Rivas retired in 1994 after sustaining a back injury. Then she heard drivers were needed to take hot meals to elderly and home-bound residents.

"I read about it on the front page of the newspaper that they were wanting volunteers," Rivas said. She applied, "They put me to work."

Rivas said she enjoys, "really enjoys," providing the service, meeting the people and getting to know them.

"I went to this lady's house last Thursday and it was her birthday. She was 99 years old, and I thought that was terrific," she said.

Once again, the program is short volunteers, say Tommy Hood, manager of the Ruidoso Downs facility, and Charlotte Seitz, who coordinates retired volunteers under the RSVP program.

They need about four more volunteers for the home-delivered meal program, which is federally sponsored, managed through Lincoln County, and implemented at the Ruidoso Downs Senior Citizens Center for residents in both Ruidoso and Ruidoso Downs.

Volunteers typically work two days a week. Two volunteers are needed every day to deliver meals on two routes, one of which Rivas says takes her about 90 minutes to complete. There are about 16 homes on each route, and 32 on the total list.

In the last fiscal year, which ended June 30, the Ruidoso Downs-based home delivery program provided 6,548 meals, Hood said.

Scheduling volunteers to deliver those meals has been tricky. Many volunteers, with the notable exception of Rivas and a few others, stay with the program for a relatively short period of time, Hood said. When none are available to make the routes, he either has to break free from his duties at the center or find someone else who can.

"We have to adjust the schedule every month," he said. "One of the problems we have is that we don't have any organizations (such as a civic group) that are involved with it," he said, explaining that in other towns, civic clubs adopt the program and keep it staffed from a pool of volunteers.

The deliveries depend on volunteers through the RSVP office, a federal program that puts retired volunteers 55 years old or older to work in their communities.

"I think some of the current ones would like to take a rest," Seitz said of those making the deliveries.

Hood added, "And I have two ladies right now who are just temporary. It's been a constant battle... We are just trying to figure out how to communicate with people, how we can get the word out (that help is needed)."

Thirty-two people in the area receive the hot meals. Hood and Seitz said referrals to the list generally come from Home Health Services or local doctors. Some of those on the list have suffered a recent injury or illness and will receive meals until they recover, Hood and Seitz said.

Rivas says she enjoys making the deliveries to her regulars as well as meeting new people put on the list for hot meals. She finds the work rewarding and doesn't mind that she has to use her own car and gas for the deliveries, which she provides with a smile and a hug. "Sometimes I'm the only person they see all day," she said. "Some of them are sick and sometimes they cry. You have to give them extra loving..."

"But we would like some extra volunteers," Rivas said Wednesday. "Tomorrow I'm off — I have to go to the doctor."

Someone will have had to make her deliveries Thursday. However, to make up for her day off, Rivas will deliver meals today.

Hispanic culture tribute scheduled Saturday at Glencoe

BY SANDY SUGGITT
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

GLENCOE — Roping, riding, racing and dancing at Glencoe Rural Events Center will raise money for Hispanic scholarships in the second annual Tribute to Hispanic Culture Saturday.

Last year about 4,000 people attended, raising money for one $200 scholarship for each of the five Lincoln County schools — Ruidoso, Capitán, Hondo, Corona, Carrizozo.

"Our goal this year is to make this an annual event and to give $1,000 to each school," said organizer Dolores Rue. To that end, this year's event promises to be bigger and better.

Besides the rodeo competitions — barrel racing, open bull riding and team roping — an all-girl group from the Alamogordo-Tularosa area called "The Wild Cards" will perform on horses throughout the day and introduce each event, Rue said.

For children, there will be pony rides and balloon-jumpers. The Hondo and Ruidoso Fiesta Dancers will perform. More vendors are expected this year to provide for all appetites, and Rue said she's working on getting charros to perform tricks with ropes on horseback, as well as mariachis.

Roping, riding, racing, sign-up and performance events begin at 9 a.m.

"Nite Fall," a Socorro variety band, will perform Spanish, country and rock 'n' roll music for dancing from 8 p.m. until 1 a.m., Rue said.

For more information, call Dolores Rue at 378-4345.

General admission for day events is $5 for adults, $3 for youth 12 and under, and children 5 and under free. Admission to the dance is an additional $5 for adults, $3 for youth 12 and under, and children 5 and under free.

BUSINESS BRIEFS

Visitor Center sets record in Ruidoso

The Ruidoso Visitor Center inside the Ruidoso Valley Chamber of Commerce recently announced that visitor inquiries by either phone calls or walk-in traffic broke all records for the month of July.

Joan Zagone, chamber executive director, said staff at the Visitor Center and chamber responded to 7,605 phone calls and 7,032 visitors in the month. Previous high counts had been 5,530 phone calls in July 1995 and 5,529 walk-ins in early July 1998.

"It felt like an overwhelming month for us, but we were somewhat shocked ourselves when we added up everyone's counters at the chamber for a total count," Zagone said. "It is especially amazing when recognized that the Visitor Center staff is composed of only two full-time and one part-time staff members during the week and one part-time staff person on the weekend."

Visitor Center staff includes Joanne Joy, Larry Ayers, Judy Dotson and Sheree Wisner.

Village construction values for July drop

Construction values for Ruidoso and a 3-mile-deep perimeter dropped in July by 10 percent from the same period last year.

For the year, construction values were up by 23 percent, based on the construction permits filed in July with the Ruidoso Planning Department.

In July, construction values for single-family homes dropped by 12 percent, from $2 million to $1.8 million. Residential additions/alterations decreased 32 percent, from $428,848 to $291,522.

Permits for 11 new homes were filed with the department in July, the projects ranging in value, from $85,000 to $236,000.

New commercial construction for the month increased by 5 percent, from $76,000 to $80,000; and commercial additions/alterations increased 130 percent, from $32,000 to $73,500.

For the year through July, single-family home construction values were up by 19 percent, according to departmental statistics.

Commercial additions/alterations were up by 223 percent for the year in July, from $533,110 to $1.7 million.

2000 agriculture bill includes research work at NMSU

WASHINGTON — The Senate has passed the FY 2000 Agriculture Appropriations Bill with funding to advance agriculture research at New Mexico State University, continue wastewater system development in the colonias along the U.S.-Mexico border, and provide nutrition assistance to children and low-income families.

In passing the bill, the Senate also included a $7.4-billion emergency agriculture assistance package that could benefit New Mexico chile, cotton and livestock producers. The nearly $72 billion Agriculture Appropriations Bill will next be referred to a conference committee where differences in the House and Senate-passed versions of the bill will be reconciled.

"While we see progress being made in agriculture research and other federally-supported programs, this bill has been expanded to begin meeting the very real problems surfacing on farms throughout the country," said Sen. Pete Domenici, R-NM.

"Overall, the Senate recognizes that New Mexico State University is doing some innovative and advanced agriculture research, particularly in terms of developing new farm-

The number of permits issued by the department in July also dropped by about 11 percent, while the number for the year remained up by 25 percent, according to the department.

Permit fees collected by the village for the year to date were up by about 8 percent, from $109,905 to $118,973.

Real estate agency awarded ranking

Coldwell Banker SDC, Realtors of Ruidoso was ranked in the top 10 in the office size category of 11-20 agents for the second quarter of 1999 in the number of listings sold for the entire Western region of Coldwell Banker Real Estate Corporation, a company press release said.

The office also ranked in the top five in New Mexico for listings sold, total gross commission income and closed transactions.

"Coldwell Banker SDC, Realtors exemplifies the standards of excellence for which Coldwell Banker offices are known," Alex Perriello, company president, said. "It is an honor to recognize Coldwell Banker SDC Realtors with this award."

The agency, located at 307 Mechem Drive can be reached at (505) 257-5111. It has served the Ruidoso area for 18 years.

Vision Awards nominations accepted

Nominations now are being accepted by the New Mexico Commission on the Status of Women for the 1999 Vision Award.

The commission presents the award to employers who, as role models, display innovative solutions to the challenges of balancing family and work. Some of the solutions and possibilities for providing assistance to employees have included flextime, on-site child care, job-sharing and accommodation-leave policies.

The Commission on the Status of Women invites people to nominate an employer who has made provisions for employees in balancing work and family. To receive a nomination form, call the commission at (800) 432-9168. The deadline for nominations is Aug. 16. Winners will be honored at ceremonies on Sept. 25 in Albuquerque.

ing and ranching technologies for arid lands," he said. "We also know that we have a role in working with the colonias to help them gain adequate water and wastewater systems. We've continued funding for this program."

The bill also continues to support the National Drought Policy Commission, which began work in July to formulate recommendations on coordinating federal, state, tribal and local drought policies. The commission is tasked with determining better ways to coordinate preparedness and response to drought emergencies.

Domenici, a Senate Appropriations Committee member, said the bill contains, among other things:

- $250,000 for the NMSU Plant, Drought, and Disease Resistance Gene Cataloging program to develop tools to study plant genes on a large scale, and create a DNA library for plant drought and disease resistant gene cataloging;

- $398,000 for the Consortium on Southwest Biotechnology Research, which includes NMSU and Los Alamos National Laboratory, to develop plant species that can withstand arid and semi-arid conditions.

Bilingual language exposure is one aspect of the area's newest preschool facility.

Getting an early start is a bit easier with "learning centers" like this one, shown by Adriana Castro, with a little help from her son.

Early childhood, early learning

"Lots of research has been done; the most important years are the early years." — Adriana Castro

• Adriana Castro, with seven years experience in early childhood development, has opened a preschool in Ruidoso Downs.

Adriana Castro has converted a former feed store on U.S. Highway 70 into a fully equipped preschool where children will learn a combination of Spanish and English.

"I'm bilingual, and we will have bilingual teachers in the classrooms, so the children will be exposed to both languages," said Castro, who opened My Child First Early Childhood Center earlier this month in Ruidoso Downs.

She is taking registrations now for the state-certified center — a 2,100-square-foot building with 7,000-square-foot outdoor area — where she can enroll up to 34 children, from infants to preschoolers.

Renovation on the building started in April. Besides classrooms and an office area, structural changes in the building include four handicap-equipped bathrooms. Inside the decorated and toy-filled classrooms, Castro has set up "learning centers," where children not only play but learn basic skills, such as how to wash their hands.

Castro emphasized the developmental opportunities at her preschool, something she learned about in her seven years in the area of early childhood development. She has mottoes on the walls in both Spanish and English, drawing centers, science centers, language centers, globes and maps, among other things in the classrooms.

Where: 330 U.S. Highway 70

"Now is the time. Lots of research has been done; the most important years are the early years," Castro said.

She has worked in a YMCA in El Paso and a Montessori school in Albuquerque before moving to Ruidoso. Here, she's worked in the Lincoln County Head Start program and for the past two years at the Lincoln County Parents as Teachers program, which is affiliated with the Ruidoso branch of Eastern New Mexico University.

"The benefit of that is all my experience and all I've learned ... it's all in here," Castro said with a gesture to the learning stations set up around the center. "This is a rich learning environment."

Her reasoning for opening the center is twofold: She wanted to stay with her 1-year-old son, Cristian; and a survey of the area showed a need for quality preschool services, she said.

"I became a mommy a year ago; and it was difficult because I wanted to be with my son," Castro said. "And this

► TAX RELIEF

Domenici makes plea for tax relief

WASHINGTON — U.S. Sen. Pete Domenici, chairman of the Senate Budget Committee that drafted the blueprint for major tax relief during the next decade, last week asked President Clinton to set aside his partisan opposition to the tax relief package.

Domenici joined a majority in the Senate on Aug. 5 to pass, 50-49, the Financial Freedom Act of 1999, a 10-year, $792 billion tax relief package that would reduce the amount of taxes paid for almost 600,000 New Mexico families.

"Mr. President, please sign this bill," Domenici said in a speech to the Senate prior to the vote. "Regardless of what the president says, we first set aside money to fix Social Security. We have money to fix Medicare and fund priorities like education and defense. Even with all that, we have enough to provide this responsible and prudent tax relief for New Mexico families."

"I am very pleased with this bill. It is fair, it is the right thing to do and it should be done before the money gets spent on more government. This bill provides tax cuts for taxpayers," he said. "The president needs to sign this law so virtually every New Mexican and millions of American families will not have to overpay us for the cost of running the federal government."

The following provisions in the bill were proposed and worked on by Domenici:

1. Widening and lowering the lowest tax bracket for individual taxpayers;
2. Lowering the tax rate on estate and gift taxes;
3. Eliminating the individual Alternative Minimum Tax;
4. Providing relief from the marriage penalty in current tax law;
5. Providing an expensing increase for small businesses;

6. Providing some oil and gas tax relief;

"Mr. President, please sign this plan."

Sen. Pete Domenici,
Budget committee chair

7. Making the research and experimentation tax credit permanent to help innovative technology companies; and,
8. Increasing to $5,000 the Individual Retirement Account (IRA) limits for working men and women.

The tax bill will use non-Social Security surplus revenues—all tax overpayments from American workers—to provide phased-in tax relief for families, children and small businesses over the next 10 years.

A majority of the benefits would be directed toward middle-class families, with about 60 percent of the relief by 2004 going to those making $75,000 or less. In New Mexico, the act of lowering the 15 percent tax bracket to 14 percent will mean lower taxes for 574,341 families.

An additional 234,000 New Mexico taxpayers would pay lower taxes with these changes.

"We shouldn't keep more than we need and pile up their money waiting for the so-called perfect time for a tax cut. If you believe leaving it here for a future tax cut or that it won't be spent, then you must believe in the tooth fairy. It's just not realistic," Domenici said. "The final plan is excellent. Mr. President, please sign this plan."

"It preserves and expands the child care, education and foster care credits and protects them from the nefarious Alternative Minimum Tax. For the seven out of 10 taxpayers who will lose some of their credits because of the AMT, I say, Mr. President, please sign this bill," he said.

"For the 15 million people who would be helped by the retirement security provisions in this bill, I say, Mr. President, please sign this bill."

Societal changes major cause of recent drop in crime rates

Long-term societal changes, more than any one presidential initiative, have resulted in the dramatic decrease in crime rates during the last two decades, researchers say.

"The drop in most of the serious crimes has been especially pronounced during the Clinton presidency," says Dr. Darrell Steffensmeier, professor of sociology at Penn State. "FBI statistics show that violent crimes fell about 18 percent in 1996 from 1992, and national murder rates reached the lowest level since 1969. Property crime rates, particularly burglary, also fell steadily."

"President Clinton, in his 1998 State of the Union address and elsewhere, has taken credit for the crime reduction," Steffensmeier notes. "To some degree, he is justified, since, under his watch, the government has funded the hiring of more police officers and put a greater emphasis on community-based crime prevention initiatives."

"Some attribute the recent decline in crime to dramatic increases in incarceration rates that presumably incapacitate or prevent crimes by locking up high-frequency offenders who commit a disproportionate amount of all index crimes," says Steffensmeier. "However, because the rise in incarceration rates extends backwards at least into the late 1970s and thus predates the 1990s drop in crime, it appears unlikely that higher imprisonment rates explain much, if any, of the recent drop in crime, just as they don't account for its rise in the late 1980s."

A more likely explanation for the decline in crime rates is an improved economy and recent developments in crime prevention.

The strong economy not only may cause some would-be criminals to seek legitimate employment, but it may also enhance overall public morale leading to greater confidence in government and other institutions.

Steffensmeier and Miles D. Harer, research analyst with the Federal Bureau of Prisons, are co-authors of the paper, "Making Sense of Recent U.S. Crime Trends, 1980-96/8: Age-Composition Effects and Other Explanations," presented today (Aug. 9) at the American Sociological Association meeting in Chicago. The same paper will appear in the August issue of the Journal Of Research In Crime And Delinquency.

"Also, over the past half-decade, media and citizen concerns about the 'crime problem' have fueled an unprecedented number of rational crime-fighting initiatives," Steffensmeier notes. "These involve not only community policing, prosecution and mobilization but youth and gang programs, targeting of crime 'hot spots,' drug courts with diversion to treatment, in- and after-school programs, juvenile curfews, conflict resolution classes and community-based alternatives to incarceration."

"Another major factor here is the combined aging and cultural dominance of the baby boomers, now entering their forties and fifties."

Steffensmeier says. "These now make up 30 percent of the population, and they head nearly 4 in 10 households. This enormous, accumulating age shift has now reached the threshold or 'critical mass' stage needed to trigger an en masse change in our cultural values and collective conscience."

This in turn has resulted in greater civility and a lesser emphasis on narcissistic, materialistic values, adds the College of the Liberal Arts faculty member.

People, especially males, are most crime-prone in their late teens and early twenties.

The relative shrinking of this age group might be construed as one cause of the reduced crime rate.

This was certainly true during the 1980s and early 1990s, the Reagan and Bush years, according to Steffensmeier.

"On the other hand, age composition effects had only a small impact on crime rates during the Clinton Nineties," says Steffensmeier. "Even when the figures are adjusted for decreases in the most crime-prone age groups, there was still a significant drop in crime under Clinton. This suggests that, at least to some degree, crime rate declines were due to more basic changes in society."

"Our data suggests that, while crime rates will go up slowly between 2000 and 2010, the crime explosion expected by some experts will not take place," he notes.

UCR statistics are based on police department counts of citizen reports of victimization and on the number of crimes or victimizations witnessed by the police themselves. Offenses listed in the UCR do not refer to all types of crime, but to seven "serious" offenses that make up the Crime Index: homicide, aggravated assault, forcible rape, robbery, burglary, larceny-theft and motor vehicle theft.

The NCVS is a survey of scientifically selected sample of households throughout the nation.

Bingaman reacts to negative state child-rearing finding

WASHINGTON — U.S. Sen. Jeff Bingaman, D-NM, says a recent report labeling New Mexico as the 49th best state to raise a child should not be taken literally. But, he said, the report points to some areas where parents, lawmakers, and community leaders should work together to make New Mexico a better place to grow up.

Bingaman is advancing a legislative agenda in the senate to help ensure that young people have the four cornerstones of healthy childhood — access to decent health care, access to a good public education, economically secure families and safe neighborhoods.

"I grew up in Silver City and I'm not willing to accept the conclusions of this report at face value. At the same time, I think it's clear there are some key areas where we are falling far short of our obligations to young people," Bingaman said.

The report, released in late July by the Children's Rights Council, ranks New Mexico the 49th best place to raise a child, based on ten criteria. Louisiana ranked 50th and the District of Columbia ranked 51st. The report looked at criteria including child abuse, infant mortality rates, childhood immunizations, high school dropout rates, percentage of juvenile arrests. Last year's report ranked New Mexico as the worst state to raise a child, barring Washington, D.C.

"It's particularly disturbing to realize that New Mexico has fallen from 36th place to the bottom of the heap in just five years. Many parents are doing a heroic job of raising their children under difficult circumstances. Clearly, if we care about the future of our state, we all have to re-commit ourselves as parents, educators and lawmakers to the future of our children," Bingaman said.

While noting that the federal government cannot provide a total solution to any of the problems facing the state, Bingaman did say that steps could be taken to strengthen public education, create safer communities, improve access to health care, and help the state attract high wage jobs that can provide a family some measure of economic security.

In the Senate, Bingaman is advancing several initiatives designed to improve the conditions facing children. For instance, the Senate recently approved a Bingaman measure to help schools improve security with the help of experts at Sandia Labs. A separate bill moving through the Senate includes provisions he authored providing more drug and alcohol treatment options for teenagers. He has also authored comprehensive legislation to improve access to dental care for poor children in New Mexico — only one in five of whom receive any kind of preventive dental services.

Bingaman also said he will lead efforts to strengthen teacher quality, increase investments in education technology, reduce the size of overcrowded high schools, raise academic standards, and reduce the dropout rate. Bingaman said all of these efforts could help New Mexico do better by its young people.

"I grew up in New Mexico and it was a wonderful experience. I want our state to once again be a good place to grow up and stay," Bingaman said.

Can't Stop Singing

Can't Stop Singing is an entertaining look at barbershop in the '90s. It goes behind the scenes of the 60th annual competition of the Society for the Preservation and Encouragement of Barber Shop Quartet Singing in America (SPEBSQA) in Atlanta. The program traces the fortunes of several quartets in pursuit of the world championship, including Bank Street from Albuquerque.

With jazz, the spiritual, and the cowboy song, barbershop harmony is one of the musical forms considered uniquely American in its origins. Can't Stop Singing demonstrates a variety of musical styles, showcasing "Lover Come Back to Me," a 1950s love song, "Wedding Bells Are Breaking Up That Old Gang of Mine," an American pop standard, and "Joshua Fit the Battle of Jericho," a foot-stomping gospel song performed with intensity and dazzling choreography. "Nobody Knows What a Redhead Mama Can Do" features jazz-rhythms and hot chord progressions, while "Love Me and the World Is Mine" is a classic barbershop ballad. An enduring facet of the barbershop style is a love of slapstick. "Stupid Name Medley" is a comic tribute to all the names of past world champions.

Can't Stop Singing will be broadcast Monday, August 16th at 8:00 p.m. on KENW-TV.

Our National Parks

For millions of years, the sun has risen and fallen over the American wilderness with wondrous continuity. Our National Parks: Sunrise to Sunset offers viewers the opportunity to share in those cycles. This natural history documentary uses stunning photography, soaring music, and poetic narration to explore one day in the life of the nation's most pristine wilderness areas.

Our National Parks: Sunrise to Sunset is followed by Our National Parks: The Four Seasons. From Alaska to Gettysburg and from Yellowstone to the Black Hills, The Four Seasons captures American landscapes in all their glory through images of spectacular scenery, dramatic wildlife, unusual time-lapse sequences, and intimate glimpses of nature. The program highlights each season and features sparse narrative punctuated with quotes from trappers, settlers, naturalists, poets, and writers who lived in and loved the land.

Our National Parks: Sunrise to Sunset will be broadcast Sunday, August 15th at 6:30 p.m. followed by Our National Parks: The Four Seasons at 7:25 p.m.

Third Annual Gold Road Arts Tour features Carrizozo-White Oaks talent

*T*HE GOLD ROAD ART

Tour celebrates the richness of art and crafts that now flourish along the 13-mile route where ore wagons once hauled the fruits of the earth out of White Oaks and delivered it to distant smelters. In its prime, in the late 1800s, White Oaks was a bustling and booming mining town. One longtime resident estimated that White Oaks reached a population of about 2,500 around 1896, which was by far the largest town in

TOUR

The third annual "Gold Road" Arts Tour runs from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday and Sunday, Aug. 21-22, in the historic mining community of White Oaks and the railroad town of Carrizozo.

When the railroad bypassed White Oak's offer to sell them land, instead of offer it free, and when the almost pure gold vein was followed to its deepest point and petered out - White Oaks turned into an almost ghost town. Unlike other historic communities in New Mexico, White Oaks is left with remnants of East Coast influences instead of adobe, including the brick Victorian Hoyle-Wetzel house and white wood-framed Gumm-New home.

Today White Oaks is a budding arts community, and 14 area artists and craftsmen will present their work either from their studios, the Carrizozo Hardware or White Oaks Schoolhouse Museum. Lunch will be served at the Schoolhouse Museum.

The Gold Road Arts Tour started out as a Sept. event, but it was moved to Aug. in order to give the large community of summer residents in Lincoln County an opportunity to attend.

The husband-wife team of sculptor Kenneth Payne and work artist Suzanne Donazetti-Payne will be showing their designs at Peter Wolf's Carrizozo Hardware while porcelain painter Bill Kerr will open his home-studio at 401 11th St. in Carrizozo.

In White Oaks four artists will display at the White Oaks Schoolhouse Museum. Sam Huston (once a professional rodeo rider and pro boxer and now a state highway patrolman) will offer his bronze sculptures, while Carrie Scott will show her needlework quilts and crafts. Her husband, David, will have an assortment of native wood walking sticks and canes. Photojournalist Brad Cooper will display color prints accompanied by historical tales about the mining town. Cooper is marketing director at the Spencer Theater for the Performing Arts.

Nearby, painter and sculptor Bob Reynierson will show his work along with a newcomer to the arts-crafts scene, Willa Adkins. Across the street in the historic Taylor-Duncan home impressionist painter Palla will open her home-studio.

Up White Oaks Avenue, just past the "Pavement Ends" sign a "Ghost Town Whimsies" sign will lead you to the bunkhouse gallery of craftsperson Valerie Thomas. Thomas is an emergency room nurse at the hospital in Alamogordo and her husband, David, is a Lincoln County deputy sheriff.

A few miles outside White Oaks, on the side of a mountain off "Pat Garrett Lane" is the home studio of Jean Anderson who works in wood folk arts carving and sculpture.

Ivy Heymann's White Oaks Pottery is four miles outside White Oaks. Her pottery studio will be open and Carrizozo jeweler John West will display his work in her second story gallery.

For further information on the Gold Road Arts Tour contact Ivy Heymann in White Oaks at 648-2985, or Brad-Cooper in Ruidoso at 336-0027. Tour maps will be available at the Carrizozo Hardware and at the White Oaks Schoolhouse Museum. Admittance to the art display and cafe area of the schoolhouse is free while a $2 per person (or $5 per family) admission is charged for those wishing to tour the schoolhouse museum.

The Gold Road Tour is one of three annual arts-historical events in the former ghost town of White Oaks. The other two are the Artists of White Oaks Studio Tour in April, and Miner's Day in June.

Dianne Stallings

ANN BUFFINGTON looks over the book she and Johnson Stearns put together to commemorate 100 years of Carrizozo history.

Looking back through Carrizozo's past

by Dianne Stallings
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

A new book — part of Carrizozo's centennial celebration — shares dozens of photographs of the early days of the town collected and protected for years by Johnson Stearns.

On 52-pages, the photos show club groups, the old courthouse, school activities and dramatic scenes such as the installation of electric lines from White Oaks to the Parsons Mine. Books will be available to review during an open house from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday at the Lincoln County Historical Society's archives and office at the corner of 11th and E Avenue in the old Masonic building.

Working with Stearns to sort out the best examples, arrange them and write the text was Ann Buffington, an author and member of the Carrizozo chapter of the Lincoln County Historical Society, the group that took on the project to raise money for a town museum.

"About February, we started thinking about the centennial," she said. "No one had planned ahead as we should. We decided we needed something nice that people could keep and remember to commemorate the centennial."

With only six months to put the project together, they thought about Stearns' collection of photographs. "He loves sharing them," Buffington said. "I've spent lots of time with him. Of course, he said he'd be delighted to do the book."

Carrizozo chapter members decided they would pay for the work and hope to collect enough money to cover expenses and put aside something toward the museum.

Erica Baker, who teaches a computer class at Eastern New Mexico University, laid out the book for publication.

"We got it to the printers and it was ready by June 1," Buffington said. "We printed 1,000. They sell for $15. We wanted it to be reasonable so we could share with everyone."

Stearns said he started his collection because people gave him photographs for safe keeping. The first came from his mother, who saved a pile from the early 1900s.

"Callie Roselle saved buttons. People said they never saw a collection like her (collection)," Stearns said. "She had many pictures and I wanted to buy them, but she said, 'No.' She called me later and gave them to me."

When Albert Roberts died, his family asked Stearns if he wanted photos Roberts collected from the 1880s showing livery stables and many scenes no longer existing in the area.

Roberts was a Texaco dealer, who was born in Carrizozo, Stearns said. His dad was deputy sheriff when the county seat was moved from Lincoln to Carrizozo. A bunch of people who didn't want that to happen, loaded up all of the record books in a wagon and drove into the hills, but Roberts' father went after them and convinced them to bring the books back, Stearns said.

He received another box of photos after Clara Brazel Snow died. Her family was from the Little Creek area.

"I just kept them," Stearns said of his collection.

The book idea appealed to him. "So many people come back to Carrizozo and say they remember how it used to be with the old round house and railroad hotel," he said. "We just thought for the centennial celebration, it would be appropriate to have a book."

"I was born here and ever since I was a kid I have loved it. I love the block where I flew kites, where I spun tops and threw marbles."

Buffington's favorite photo in the book is the crew working on electric lines against the dramatic backdrop of the mountains.

Hearing of a competition for photos illustrating events of this century to be assembled by the Christian Science Monitor in an edition called, "Snapshots of the Century," Buffington submitted the electric line photo and it was selected.

"I thought it was terribly interesting myself," Stearns said. "They had no big machines in those days, just manpower. The picture is just so typical of something that happened nearly 100 years ago."

The photo of the old courthouse chosen for the cover is a "real heart breaker," Buffington said. The imposing structure was torn down when a new courthouse was built in the 1960s.

Most of the pictures come from the 1910 and 1920 decades when Carrizozo was booming and building, Buffington said. Fewer examples are available from the 1930s and 1940s.

Another of Buffington's favorites is the photo of horseback riders on the malpais.

"One of the wonderful things about Johnson is that he is able to identify many of these people," she said. "He has a wonderful memory and he doesn't forget anybody, where they lived and walked."

Buffington, who was raised in southern California and then lived in Pueblo, Colo., moved to Santa Fe in 1968, then spent 12 years in Lincoln and six years in Carrizozo. Her credits include editing "Memoirs of a Country Doctor," also put out by the society, in addition to articles for the "Southern New Mexico Historical Review," the El Paso Historical Society's publication and for Mountain Passages, all dealing with local history.

The LCHS also recently published a brochure on a driving or walking tour of the historic buildings of Carrizozo. The project was paid for by the South Central Mountain Resource Conservation and Development Council and put together by the Carrizozo Action Team. Sketches are by Palla Duncan from White Oaks.

The Stearns and Buffington photo book may be purchased at The Caboose Visitors Center in Carrizozo, Roy's Drug Store and the Carrizozo Hardware Store. It can be ordered by mail by sending a check for $18 to cover the book, shipping and handling, to the LCHS, Box 579, Carrizozo, NM 88301. Make the check payable to the Carrizozo chapter of the LCHS.

the return of Willie Nelson

The legendary Willie Nelson will make a stop in Ruidoso for an 8 p.m. show Sunday at Ruidoso Downs Race Track.

The last time Nelson made his way through Ruidoso was more than 25 years ago.

Tickets still are available for Sunday's show, said racetrack general manager Rick Baugh. The grandstand at the track seats 7,000 and Baugh said seats are available at $20 a ticket in advance and $25 the day of the show.

With more than 200 albums to his credit, Nelson most recently released "Teatro" late last year to rave reviews. "Teatro" features several new songs plus a host of songs Nelson wrote in the early 1960s.

Since cutting his first single in 1957, Nelson has recorded gospel albums, jazz albums, movie soundtracks, duet projects and live albums.

According Island Record publicity, Nelson divides his time between the road and his beloved Pedernales recording studio/golf course in the Hill Country outside of Austin, Texas.

Asked when he plans to retire, the 65-plus-year-old Nelson replies, "All I do is play music and golf - which one do you want me to give up?"

Nelson's Ruidoso engagement is stop No. 10 on a 69-date tour which started Aug. 5 in Big Sky, Mont. After criss-crossing the country, his tour ends Jan. 1, 2000 in Sparks, Nevada.

LOVIN' SPOONFUL plays Saturday at the West Conference Center of the Inn of the Mountain Gods.

A dose of good times

The sensationally '60s group Lovin' Spoonful will have its Ruidoso debut Saturday at the Inn of the Mountain Gods. The band, which features a mix of folk music, rock and roll and a pinch of country, topped the charts in the mid-60s and is back together to entertain a new audience all over again.

The group, reborn since 1991, is composed of Joe Butler, Steve Boone and Jerry Yester. Derived from the original lineup of four, the band has lost and replaced of the original members since 1965, but is still going strong.

With songs like "Do You Believe in Magic" and "Never Goin' Back" the band is known among the greats of "Good Time" music. They have also under their belts two soundtrack albums for a pair of "young" movie directors: Woody Allen (What's Up Tiger Lily) and Francis Ford Coppola (You're a Big Boy Now). Lovin' Spoonful toured constantly during this period and played at college campuses across the country.

In 1967, Zal Yanovsky left the band for a solo career and Jerry Yester, of the Modern Folk Quartet, took his place. The group then pioneered the new Ampex 16-track recording with their fourth album, "Everything Playing," dishing out more hits like "Darlin' Be Home Soon" and "Six O-Clock." The next year, another member, John Sebastian, also left to go solo. With the '60s and "Good Time" era wrapping up, so did the band, but not without a promise to rekindle the flame some day.

That day is now, and fans can still catch the band as rockin' as ever at 7 p.m. Saturday in the West Conference Center at the Inn of the Mountain Gods. Those under 21 won't be admitted, and tickets are $20 for pre-assigned seating. For more ticket information, call the Inn at 257-5141.

A COMBINATION of Sweet Adeline choruses from Las Cruces and El Paso sing old-time favorites at 7 p.m. Saturday at Spencer Theater.

Two scoops of sweetness

The Spencer Theater will serve up an old-fashioned ice cream social accompanied by the enchanting tunes of the Sweet Adelines Chorus at 7 p.m. Saturday.

Weather permitting, the special performance will be on the back lawn of the Alto theater, in sight of mutable mountain shadows and the gloaming of a setting sun. As the 48 ladies harmonize familiar tunes such as "Cocktails for Two," "Sentimental Journey," "That Old Black Magic," and "Chattanooga Choo Choo," ice cream treats will be served, complimentary of Cellular One, the Southwest Dairy Museum and New Mexico Farmers.

Tickets are $12 per car load and will be sold at the gate only. In the case of inclement weather those already holding tickets can watch the performance indoors.

The chorus of ladies entertaining at the Spencer is a combination of the Las Cruces Grande and El Paso Sungold choruses. Both are part of the region 21 chapter of the Sweet Adelines International, which also includes Arizona and parts of Southern California.

Founded in Tulsa, Okla. in the 1940s, the Sweet Adelines International is actually an off-shoot of the Barbershop Quartet and is committed to advancing the musical art form of harmonized tenor, lead, baritone and bass tones.

In the midst of the Sweet Adelines' 17-song repertoire, a male quartet called the Rogues of the Rio Grande will interject a few favorites like "Hello My Baby" and "Just The Way You Are." Together, the harmonies will have listeners sauntering back into yesteryear with the cozy connotations the barbershop harmony always brings.

Patrons are invited to bring picnic blankets, cushions or stadium chairs and to dress comfortably with warm clothing (no coolers, please).

For more information about the Summer Swingtime Social or the Spencer Theater's upcoming winter season, visit www.spencertheater.com, or contact the box office at 888-818-7872.

The Regulators

Part two of a series

Drew Gamber
HISTORIAN,

OF THE AMERICAN WEST

Yginio ... is buried in and historians alike. At

THE LINCOLN COUNTY COURTHOUSE, formerly the Murphy-Dolan store and later the scene of Billy the Kid's famous jailbreak.

With so many movies filling us with misinformation, it can be difficult to keep track of the real participants of the Lincoln County War. To be fair to Hollywood, even I admit that to make a coherent film about the War, many of the characters would, by necessity, have to be composite. There are just too many of them. Luckily, as a writer, I don't have to do such things.

Yginio Salazar

Most of the Regulators were young men, but Yginio Salazar, at 15, may have been the youngest. Despite the fact that he was present for many of the skirmishes of the War, Yginio is best remembered for what happened to him during the Five Day Battle.

The Five Day Battle is generally considered to be the final defeat for the Regulators, but at the time, they didn't feel that way at all. The survivors made absolutely no admission of any sort of defeat. On the contrary, they felt that it was still more reason to seek revenge.

During the final hours of that last, desperate day in the burning McSween house, Yginio was one of the last men to escape from the place. And he came extremely close to not leaving it at all.

Deceptive Appearances

After Billy the Kid's decoy party had made its exit, Yginio was one of the men left in the house. Unfortunately for Yginio, and even more so for Vicente Romero and Francisco Zamora, who were killed, McSween did not act swiftly or decisively enough to take advantage of the Kid's diversion. When the gunsmoke finally cleared after that final confrontation, there appeared to be six men lying dead in the McSween back yard. There was McSween, Zamora, Romero, Harvey Morris and Murphy/Dolan adherent Bob Beckwith, all of whom were exceedingly dead. And then there was Yginio, who only appeared to be dead.

Hit several times as he exited the McSween house, Yginio lay among his dead friends for hours. During that period, outlaw John Kinney discussed with another man whether or not he should put another bullet into the "greaser." He was advised that it would be a waste of a bullet and didn't, luckily for Yginio.

About midnight, the victors of the fray (the Murphy/Dolan faction) reeled off to their beds or bedrolls, and Yginio took painful advantage of the situation. He began an excruciating half-mile crawl to a sympathetic home—that of Jose Otero.

The next morning, a disappointed John Kinney followed Yginio's blood trail, with the idea of correcting his "error" of the previous evening and killing the youthful Regulator.

Luckily for Yginio, Dr. Appel, of Fort Stanton, was already in attendance. When Kinney and three of his cohorts showed up at the Otero door, Appel informed them in no uncertain terms that if any harm came to Yginio, he would see them hang. The quartet skulked off.

Pals

After all this, Yginio moved off to Las Tablas in the Capitan where he lived quietly. Nearly three years later, in late April of 1881, an old friend of Yginio's showed up at his door in need of help.

It was El Chivato, Billy the Kid, who had just shot his way out of jail in Lincoln, and had immediately headed for the home of someone he knew he could trust—Yginio Salazar. The Kid needed assistance in that he needed to divest himself of those pesky leg irons, only one leg of which he had managed to free before his leisurely departure from Lincoln.

Yginio was more than happy to help his friend in this endeavor and even went and rustled up (the exact verb) another horse for the Kid. Yginio was one of the best friends that Billy ever had, a fact of which the Kid was most definitely aware.

Eventually returning to Lincoln, Yginio became an upstanding citizen and died there in 1936. His family, known as fine people to all who know them, still reside there.

Oh yes, one last thing about Yginio. He is buried in the Lincoln cemetery and his large headstone is a draw for tourists and historians alike. At the bottom is inscribed "Pal of Billy the Kid."

Doc Scurlock

Josiah Gordon "Doc" Scurlock may well be the single most interesting character among the Regulators, for the simple reason that his background was radically different from the others.

Born in Alabama in 1849, Doc seems to have come by his nickname honestly. Before coming west, he studied medicine in New Orleans. In later life, he pursued many unlikely pursuits that a man known as a gunman would not be expected to do. A linguist and reader of the classics, he was also a poet and a teacher, as well as a farmer. His medicinal training seems to have made him a trifle paranoid on the subject of health. At the age of 20, Doc went to Mexico, with its dry climate, because he feared tuberculosis, or consumption, as it was then known. Two years later, he returned to the United States and secured work with cattleman John Chisum in Texas. Four years after that, he was in New Mexico, where the Chisum outfit had relocated.

In late 1875 or early 1876, Doc discovered the scalped and mutilated body of his line-riding partner, Newt Huggins. Doc was no fool, he could see the handwriting on the wall, even if it was in Apache. He rode the 60 miles back to the Chisum ranch in record time and informed the boys of two things: 1) that his partner had been killed and 2) he wanted to quit.

John Chisum, notorious for not paying his debts, refused to either let Doc go, or more importantly, pay him off. Doc, however, had absolutely no intention of sharing Newt Huggins' fate. He absconded with some Chisum horses, two saddles and a gun and headed for Arizona.

When Chisum found out about Doc's indiscretion, he immediately sent two of his men who were handy with guns after the delinquent employee. When they caught up with him, Doc argued his case so persuasively that the two gunmen actually told him "that he had done the right thing" and let him go!

Dental Problems

Doc's two front teeth were missing and he lost them in a most unique way. In a card game that was less than cordial, one of the other players shot Doc at point blank range right in the face, knocking out his two front teeth and then exiting through the back of his neck without doing any serious damage.

In the fall of 1876, Doc had another mishap involving firearms. While examining a pistol, he accidentally discharged it and killed his friend Mike Harkins, a fact which distressed Doc greatly.

But not so much that he changed his wedding plans and a few weeks later, he married 16-year-old Antonia Herrera. The couple eventually had 10 children.

At about the same time Doc was active in what has come to be known as the "Horse Thief War." It seems that horse theft had become so common that Doc and a number of other citizens rode around the countryside decorating trees with perpetrators.

During the Lincoln County War, he was the last official captain of the Regulators, inheriting the title from its previous holders, all of whom had relinquished it in sad and extremely sudden circumstances.

After the war, he took his family and relocated to Texas. They lived in various places. He worked as a ranch hand in Potter County at the LX Ranch, then on to Vernon, where he taught school. After that the Scurlocks turned up in Cleburne (near Fort Worth), then Granbury and then Mabank (near Dallas). Ultimately, the family settled in Eastland, where Doc died on July 25, 1929.

It was a tragic loss for history. Literate and urbane, there was much Doc could have told us about the Lincoln County War and Billy the Kid. Unfortunately, he chose to disassociate himself from his past and steadfastly refused to discuss it to his dying day.

COMMUNITY EDUCATION PROGRAM

The Ruidoso Center Community Education Program is designed for people who are not interested in formal credit programs of study. The program strives to fulfill that part of Ruidoso Center's mission which is "to make inexpensive, high quality educational services available at convenient times for the residents of the Ruidoso School District and the surrounding area of Lincoln and northern Otero Counties." Programs are also designed to be of interest to visitors to the Ruidoso area. The program is oriented toward lifelong learning and the fulfillment of the individual.

CLASS CHANGES AND CANCELLATIONS

The Ruidoso Center reserves the right to cancel any course with insufficient enrollment. Locations, dates and times of classes and instructors are also subject to change. A class will be closed when it reaches maximum enrollment, so you are encouraged to register early. Classes with insufficient enrollment will be cancelled, and you will be notified by phone. To make contacting you easier, please give day and evening phone numbers with your registration. Refunds will be automatically processed on courses which the Ruidoso Center cancels.

COURSE FEES

The Ruidoso Center Community Education program is a self-sustaining program with course fees covering all program-related expenses. Fees are based on an estimated minimum number of students. Unlike credit programs of study at ENMU-Ruidoso, the Community Services Program does not depend on state and local taxes for support. Honored Americans (ages 62+) will pay half fees unless otherwise specified.

REGISTER EARLY - MOST CLASSES BEGIN AFTER SEPTEMBER 6 !!!

We offer continuous registration up to the start date for each class but emphasize the importance of early registration. If you wait until the last minute, you risk the possibility that a particular class is full or has been cancelled. We do not take on-site registration at class and instructors cannot accept your payment in class. We also cannot allow anyone who is not registered to attend class. Once you have registered, no further acknowledgment will be sent to you! You are automatically enrolled as soon as we receive your registration form and payment.
