Cynthia Trujillo, an employee of Seasons Nursery, which was owned by the late Wilton Howell, packs cement around a memorial cross for the former commissioner. The cross, which was built out of oak by Trujillo's father, Arturo, was signed by a number of Seasons Nursery employees and posted Friday near the site where Howell was killed in a one-vehicle accident on Interstate 10 south of Las Cruces. Seasons Nursery workers say the symbolic gesture helped bring about some closure to Howell's untimely death.

Hondo takes helm of Glencoe Center

BY DIANNE STALLINGS RUIDOSO NEWS STATE WRITER

Lincoln County commissioners will let the Hondo School Board form its own advisory board to oversee activities at the county-owned Glencoe Rural Events Center.

They agreed Thursday during a regular monthly meeting to advertise for a hearing to rescind an ordinance that created a commission-appointed community advisory board for the center on U.S. 70 about 12 miles east of Ruidoso Downs.

They contended that although approval by the U.S. Department of Agriculture for the lease agreement with the school district requires that the commission retain oversight, control won't change if the district has its own advisory board.

In a letter dated Aug. 10, Barbara Casey, Hondo school superintendent, told commissioners that since the district took over the center in mid-July, it discovered several problems.

She wrote that the center was poorly maintained, infested by rodents, has leaks in the roof and leaking water pipes. Trash hadn't been picked up, weeds are uncut, the tractor lacked oil, the restrooms were filthy and the bull chutes needed to be welded.

The commission decided not to hire a new manager after Linda Wallace quit more than a year ago. The center was opened only for previously scheduled events. Casey wrote that contractual agreements with private individuals and with groups failed to follow the fee schedule set by commissioners and in most cases, proper lia-

Almost two years ago today, the Mescalero Tribe was to submit its first payment to the state for 16 percent of slot machine profits.

After many delays, a preliminary hearing in the arbitration process between the New Mexico Gaming Control Board and Mescalero Tribe is to start at 9:30 a.m. today at the Mescalero Inn. Joining in the arbitration will be the Acoma and Taos pueblos.

Eliza Stewart, an attorney for the New Mexico Gaming Control Board, said the preliminary hearing will include arguments on the arbitrators' authority in resolving the dispute over shared slot machine profits. She said attorneys for the tribes are expected to say that authority extends to an assessment of the compacts between gaming tribes and the state.

Stewart said she will argue against including discussion of the compacts' validity.

"The arbitration clause doesn't grant it, and under the New Mexico Constitution it couldn't grant it," Stewart said. "We are saying the arbitrators only have as much power as is given to them under the arbitration clause.'

"We believe that their cuthority" extends to only how much the tribes owe," said Madonna Bixby, also an attorney for the New Mexico Gaming Control Board.

None of the three attorneys for tribes could be reached for comment Thursday. Tribal representatives have said the state's percentage of revenues from tribal casinos is too high to comply with federal guidelines. Under the 1997 gaming bill, tribal casinos are to pay 16 percent of slot machine revenues in addition to regulatory fees.

Stewart said the first issue discussed today will be whether the hearing is open to the public. Stewart said she will ask for an open hearing, adding that the Gaming Control Board wants residents to know about the arbitration proceedings. She did not expect a decision today from the three arbitrators about the scope of the arbitration process. But, "We are hopeful that they will make a decision on that as early as possible," Stewart said.

The American Arbitration Association, which is coordinating the arbitration process, has pushed back the date of the actual arbitration from a tentative date in early November because of scheduling problems, Bixby and Stew-

"There aren't any dates where everyone can get together at least through February," Stewart said.

The new Ruidoso High School gymnasiums are nearing completion — more than eight months past completion date and the school district's attorney is looking at assessing monetary damages to the contractor.

The attorney for the Ruidoso Municipal School District, Dan Friedman out of Santa Fe, sent a letter to the Cortez III, the construction company building the gyms, about possible contract breaches.

The letter states that the district will not pay any more requests for payment until totally satisfied with the job, Superintendent of Schools Mike Gladden told the school board at its regular meeting Sept. 14.

Gladden told the school board that all that's lacking in the two gyms is to install a sprinkler head in each mechanical room - where heating and cooling units are stored - as requested by the State Fire Marshall.

The original completion date was the end of January 1999, Gladden said. He suggested a manpower shortage caused some of the delays, but the architect of the project, Scott Stafford of Greer-Stafford said Cortez III did not order supplies in a timely fashion.

"We have to prove that there have been damages to the school district of $250 a day and we hold out retainage until the project is 100 percent complete," Gladden said. "That's what we'll be thinking about — are we justified in saying the contractor is responsible for this amount for non-completion of the deadline

Lodge owner claims property flooded by road construction

BY TONI K. LAXSON RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

Lester Mazurek said he is tired of public officials' playing a "ping pong game of responsibility" about constant flooding at his lodging establishment.

"I am not complaining because we have rain from the sky," said Mazurek, a European transplant and owner of the Village Lodge. "I'm complaining because of lack of good design."

The problem began a year ago with road construction, said Mazurek, who joins a number of other business and homeowners to attribute flooding problems to the construction.

A culvert under Mechem Drive has always drained rainwater from both sides of the street to a point just above the lodging. But newly installed curbs on the street are funneling more water to the inlet than in the past, he said.

Before the curbs were put in, "the water simply goes everywhere. Now, the water cannot go everywhere. So, those new curbs have increased the amount of water coming against the buildings," Mazurek said in his thickly accented English.

Mazurek said he has taken his complaints to the road construction company, Meadow Valley Contractors Inc., the village of Ruidoso and the New Mexico Highway and Transportation Department. Both the contractor and the village referred him to the state office, which told him the problem is on

A glimpse into Lincoln County's past, compiled from local newspapers by Polly E. Chavez.

White Oaks Eagle Sept. 21, 1899

White Oaks, and in fact all of Lincoln County, has had the meanest mail service on record for more than two years. The service from El Paso and all the southern portion of the territory is miserable. Letters are some times on the road a week from El Paso here and sixteen or seventeen days reaching us from the Sacramento country. This system can certainly be improved.

The El Paso and Northeastern railway is now withing ten or twelve miles of us, and the service from El Paso should come over this line instead of by stage over the Sacramento mountains.

Weeds will be cut on a regular basis and other minor repair will be handled as soon as possible, she wrote.

Mary Prudencio, the district's business manager, handles reservations, fee collection, maintenance oversight and bill payments.

People renting the center must abide by contract stipulations and pay deposits, Casey wrote. Fees are collected 30 days before the date of use.

The district is enforcing the language in the contract, she wrote. "We strongly believe this will protect both the county and the school district from any unnecessary liability."

A separate account was opened at Norwest Bank for the $19,500 given to the district annually for management of the center. The first monthly payment will pay for electricity, for an alarm system, propane gas, telephone, garbage disposal, supplies and maintenance, she wrote.

She invited commissioners to join the advisory board for the center.

In a related issue, commissioners agreed that in the future the county should not allow its water truck to be used for events staged at the county fairground in Capitan or at the Glencoe center.

County Attorney Alan Morel will determine those events for which the county already is contractually obligated to provide the truck. When the events are over, no new commitment will be approved, commissioners said. In the meantime when the truck is used, the road department should supply a paid employee, trained on the equipment, to drive the water truck, Morel

"Then we should determine private property and therefore not their jurisdiction.

The position of the highway department is our responsibility ends with the highway," he said.

Mohammad Moabed, district engineer for the state highway department, said Tuesday he has talked with Mazurek on previous occasions and intends to met with him again next week. Moabed disagreed that the drainage situation had changed because of highway construction.

"When you build on an arroyo ... that arroyo is going to carry water," Moabed said.

"Are they getting more water today then they did before? I don't think so, and our design does not show it."

Ernest Sanchez, who oversees Mechem Drive road construction projects for the state, said Mazurek's problems with too much rainwater is not unlike everyone else the length of the project because of the recent volume of rain. Ruidoso received more than a quarter of its average annual rainfall in August alone.

We are going to meet with him again and see if there is anything more we can do out there," Moabed said.

"We have many people complain"

> Irene Mazurek, lodge co-owner

If state drainage engineers decide Mazurek is right more water is draining onto his property because of the road design — then the highway department can step in after getting permission from Mazurek, he said. The state could fix the problem based on engineers' recommendations, he added.

Mazurek said the problem is in the design - that water draining off the road should have been directed into an underground pipe. A Meadow Valley official has reinforced his opinion, he said.

Three times in the past week alone, water and debris have swept down to the back of Mazurek's lodge where a 6-inch high water mark can be seen on the buildings. Three times this week, he and his wife, Irene Mazurek, have cleaned up pooled water in the lodge's laundry room shared with guests.

"From 2 o'clock at night I clean up," she said.

They are concerned a guest will be electrocuted when using the 220-volt machinery while standing in water. Besides the laundry room, water enters an adjacent workroom and collects under the lodge's crawl space, creating unpleasant odors in the rooms, he and his wife said.

"We have many people complain," Irene Mazurek said.

Gladden agreed that there were change-orders, "but well within the percentage you would expect on a project of this scope. You allow for the days when you do change orders, the extra days it would be for the contractor.'

Gladden also said when there are documented raindays or other non-work days, these days legitimately extend the project finish date. He said in this case "it's in the 150-day area that they're over - way beyond the end of January, which was the projected finish date." School board member ally beyond any completion Frank Sayner said he wanted to know whose job it was to oversee the project and see that it was completed.

"The architect said it's not his job to see that a job is completed on time," Sayner said.

"Then who's job is it? If that's not his job, then we need a new architect.'

Stafford said it's the contractor's responsibility to complete a project.

"He has complete control over the scheduling," Stafford said. "We have no control over the contractor. We inspect the quality of the work. We cannot tell him how to do the work and when to do the work."

Gladden and the board members discussed the proposed Nob Hill additions and the bidding process, which requires the district to select the lowest bidder, and what this would mean in terms of delays there.

"At Nob Hill it would be a calamity that would affect the start of school," Sayner said. "The gyms were a separate building, so it didn't affect school. I either want an architect or someone that will see that those things are completed on schedule." Gladden said when bidding comes up for the Nob Hill construction job, "if we have a problem with one that can be substantiated, then we will take a close look at that." He said he believes that if problems can be documented with the lowest bidder, the district would not be obligated to accept that bid.

A date for the open houses of the gyms will be announced soon, Gladden said, and will probably be scheduled for a Sunday afternoon.

Ruidoso planning director search continues

BY TONI K. LAXSON RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

Wyatt Sparks, a local surveyor since 1982, has an idea about the type of person Ruidoso should hire as its new planning department direcguess the biggest attribute is somebody who wants to reduce the paper work, reduce the bureaucracy," said Sparks, who deals with the planning department often.

Ruidoso Village Manager Alan Briley last week interviewed three candidates for the position of planning department director. One of the two candidates interviewed by telephone is to come into Ruidoso from Missouri Thursday for an interview in person with Briley.

"We had 28 apply and we narrowed it down to 13, and from that we narrowed it down to five, and two declined an interview," Briley said this week.

The finalist coming in next week, Jerry Caster, has 19 years of municipal planning experience, the last nine vears with the town of Bridgeton, Mo., Briley said.

If the interview with Caster pans out, Briley anticinates making an offer on the position in early October. If it does not, Briley said he will bring in other finalists for personal interviews. Though the position has been open since May, Briley said he is not in a rush to hire someone to fill the former job of Cleatus Richards, who is now special projects coordinator for the village.

"I'm going to make sure this is done right," Briley

Larry Hill, a department building inspector, has been acting as interim director since Richards left the posi-

Briley said he is putting an extra effort into the search for Richards' replacement. In the Ruidoso area, where construction, development and real estate are primary industries, the planning department director is a high profile position, he said.

The village advertised the job in the Albuquerque Journal as well as a national trade magazine. Briley said applications poured in from across the country. Besides Caster, other finalists are from Ohio, Arizona and Ruidoso. The Ruidoso candidate is Darrell Bremner, a planner with the village for five years, who has a master's degree in planning from Pennsylvania

State University.
All of the job finalists more than meet the minimum requirements specified for the position, Briley said.

Because of the position's importance, Briley said he will research the candidates' performance as municipal planners, including interviews with real estate agents and home builders in the applicants' communities.

"I want to do more than just check references," he said.

Briley has said one quality sought in the new director is the ability to work well with the public.

Pony Express race founder dies

Bill R. Ward, former curator of the Lincoln Museum, died Wednesday in Ruidoso after a lengthy illness.

Graveside services are set for 10 a.m. Saturday at Nogal Cemetery. Visitation will be from 2 p.m. to 5 p.m. today at LaGrone Funeral Chapel in Ruidoso. Ward, who was 76, is credited with starting the Pony Express Race from White Oaks to Lincoln that was changed a few years ago to a trail ride and camp-out leading up to Old Lin-coln Days. He also helped start the Mule-O-Rama at Ruidoso Downs Race Track.

Jamil Hindi and his father, Brahaim, now 81, rode in the race for 25 years after it started in 1969 and until it was

"I hadn't see Bill in years," Hindi said Thursday. "He knew my father better, but I liked him. He was a man with good humor and a real cowboy."

Ward first moved to Ruidoso in 1964 and then bought a house

Ward was born in 1923 at Broken Bow, Okla. He grew up on a ranch at Hatch, N.M., rode in rodeos, but took the most pride in being a ranch cowboy, according to his family.

He married Pat Alston in February 1952 in Alamogordo. In 1980, Ward moved to the Alston Ranch at Tatum. He's survived by his wife, who lives in Ruidoso; his two sons, Bill R. Water service lost with blown pressure station

BY TONI K. LAXSON RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

Between 200 and 300 Ruidoso homes were without water for most of Saturday as well as Monday morning because of a failed water pressure station, village officials said Monday. Richard Sanchez, director of the Ruidoso Water Department, said the water outages affected the northern sections of the village, including the White Mountain area, parts of del Norte and Juniper Hills.

A pressure reduction station off of Valley View Drive on the northern edge of the village "blew out" early Saturday, sending high pressure water into main lines and through pipes to homes. The station is needed because the water feeding the lines is coming from a higher elevation - the two 5-million gallon water tanks in Alto.

"And when it opened on us it blew out two 6-inch lines. We spent Saturday fixing those," Sanchez said.

It was good that the two "feeder" lines broke soon after the pressure station failed, Sanchez said, otherwise, high pressure water could have caused damage to water lines on private property. Sanchez said the water pressure in parts of the affected neighborhoods could have reached as much as 200 pounds,

Village Manager Alan Briley on Monday said the water pressure that did get through before the lines broke was enough to "pop off" some water fixtures in homes.

Water was restored by Saturday evening, but was lost again early Monday when the pressure station inadvertently shut off the flow of water, Sanchez said.

"Apparently, it shut back down. We had to rebuild it today," he said Monday.

Water service was again restored by 12:30 p.m. that day,

"We're sorry for the inconvenience to everybody," Sanchez

OUR OPINION

A small miracle at a little park in Capitan

Most people in Lincoln County, and many around the nation, know about Smokey, the black bear cub rescued from a tree during a fire in the Capitan Mountains in 1950 that became a symbol of the U.S. Forest Service's campaign to prevent forest fires.

Smokey spent his life in the National Zoo in Washington. D. C., becoming famous as a symbol, and beloved by children for his very presence. When he died, he was brought back to the mountains where his life began, and now rests in the Smokey Bear Historical Park in Capitan.

That small park on Smokey Bear Boulevard (or U. S. Highway 380) in many respects has become the heart and soul of the village over the 20 years since it was founded. On every nice day in summer, vehicles from dozens of states would stop along the boulevard and family groups would walk to the park building, stroll the paths through a small botanical park and stand for a moment beside the marker over Smokey's grave.

But this little park, unlike most, was operated by the state forestry division, and a year ago officials began to review the park's future. One of the options was to close it.

When word circulated among the coffee-drinkers at the Smokey Bear Cafe, through the town and into the ranches, something began to happen. No way was that park going to close; it was the town's core, it's main claim to fame.

Barbara Luna, the Capitan district forester, discovered tremendous support for the park at home, and just about everywhere else.

With that evidence, the forestry division was able to demonstrate to the Legislature that Smokey Bear Historical Park had a future, if the state would support it, too.

So the Capitan forestry office has $250,000 to improve exhibits on the three acres of land that make up the park.

Manager Eddie Tudor and Luna are developing plans to make the park even more appealing to visitors. Youth volunteers already have done much to improve the park with the development of an amphitheater where foresters can conduct outdoor education programs for students in Lincoln and neighboring counties.

Now Tudor is eager for input from visitors about how to make the park better for everybody who comes visiting.

Luna called the park's rescue as a "classic example" of a community pulling together. And that's a perfectly good reason to go by and pay silent tribute to the little black bear who made it all possible.

Government that works!

Posted by: Jim Alston, Sept. 14

I have often carped at local government practices and policies, but when they do something right, I guess I'd better note it also.

When Ruidoso went back into the solid waste collection business, taking over from the most inefficient and sloppy (Lincoln County Solid Waste Authority), they appointed a former village employee, Leonard Corona, to head up the department. In just a few short months he and his limited number of employees, crippled with crappy equipment and a very limited budget, have made a tremendous difference in the way the Village looks. They should be recognized for the job they're doing. I applaud them!

Posted by: R. Donaldson, Sept. 15

Follow-up to: Government that works! I will make sure that Leonard gets your congratulations. In terms of equipment, we muchased all new four wheel drive garbage trucks as well as the truck we use to pickup pine needles with from the beginning. We use one of the old trucks for backup. We also have purchased approximately 150 new 3yard dumpsters which are still being placed. We will take the old dumpsters and combine the parts, rehab and paint to have additional clean and useful units. We are spending $200,000 to rehab the transfer station after years of abuse by LCSWA. We have authorized two additional employees for the pine needle pickup. We will then run two shifts (16 hours a day) picking up the needles. If you haven't noticed, we are also picking trash up on the weekends and holidays so the dumpsters hopefully will not over flow as often. We are always open to constructive suggestions that might help us to improve the service further.

This exchange between a Ruidoso resident and the village mayor, Robert Donaldson, was taken from the Ruidoso News "forum" page at its site on the World Wide Web:

Encouraging children

To the editor. We would like to extend our thanks to the Ruidoso Public Library and all of the sponsors who contributed to the summer reading program for children. Not only did our daughter enjoy being read to, but she was also rewarded with a very nice hardcover book and a great T-shirt. We appreciate the encouragement given to the children of this community. A youth place

To the editor:

As you know (That Place teen center) has closed. I know that it will make a difference to some of the teens that they don't have a place to go. I hope as a community we can find a place for the teens to meet and be able to share what is going on in their lives. That's what they did at the center. ... We teens in Ruidoso. They have so much to teach us. I hope we get the opportunity to learn from them. Your paper certainly tried to be a vehicle.

Professionally, it's done wonders for keeping us at the newspaper aware of what our readers really think. There's something about a computer screen that provides just enough distance to lift the barrier on civil discourse, so our readers can let 'er rip, wordwise.

Indeed, I'm glad people still know how to write. I've inveighed for years against declining reading (and writing) test scores in schools across the state and nation, but until computer technology jumps into voice delivery at a reasonable cost, it looks like we'll have to depend on writing skills to mine the Internet.

So it's nice to see somebody is trying to do something about those writing skills.

Our own Senator Pete Domenici advises, by e-mail naturally, that he's supporting an expansion of something called the National Writing Project, a money-awarding thing designed to teach teachers how to teach writing.

Isn't that wonderful news? Maybe in a few years we'll have many teachers in all the public schools who take pride in the quality of their students' writing.

GUEST COMMENTARY

Building an environmental infrastructure

BY PETER MAGGIORE AND JENNIFER SALISBURY NEW MEXICO CABINET SECRETARIES

The authors, respectively, are secretaries of the New Mexico Environment Department and the New Mexico Energy, Minerals and Natural Re-sources Department.

Environmental consciousness is not a single act, but a process of learning and contin-uous improvement. Achieving environmental excellence requires that an organization make "environment" a core business practice. This means that the environmental ethic permeates the entire organiza-tion, making the pursuit of en-vironmental excellence some-thing avertons does every day thing everyone does every day. Embracing the environmental ethic in this way is the true path to "sustainability" — living in productive harmony with nature.

Sept. 21 marks a milestone in New Mexicans' efforts to achieve environmental sustainability. It is the date of the first annual ceremony recognizing recipients of the Green Zia Environmental Excellence recognizing approach recognition awards.

The program is the putgrowth of a seven-year alliance speatheaded by the Energy.
Minerals and Natural Resources and Environment departments. It is a partnership among state, local and federal agencies, industry, environmental advocacy groups and others seeking to promote pollution prevention and efficient resource use.

The program provides tools and technical assistance to support organizations working toward environmental excellence, with an emphasis on instituting environmental management systems that enable both large and small organizations to integrate the environment into their decision-making and daily activities. The recognition pro-gram acknowledges organiza-tions taking significant steps to incorporate an environmental. ethic into their operations. The emphasis of the program is on learning and improvement, not awards per se.

Organizations participating in the environmental excellence program use prevention-based strategies to improve their environmental perfor-mance. The focus is on preventing waste from occurring, not managing waste after the fact. This results not only in improved environmental performance, but also in improved economic performance and more efficient resource use. Herein lies the future of real environmental protection.

The ultimate result of pursuing a systems approach to environmental management is efficiency. All elements operate in harmony, with full knowledge of the process, no unnecessary use of resources, and no waste. In this sense, nature provides the best model for efficiency. A healthy economy and a clean environment are not mutually exclusive.

This year (1999) is the first of this unique recognition pro-gram, which is based on the Malcolm Baldridge criteria for performance excellence. New Mexico has pioneered the use of performance excellence criteria to promote pollution prevention. Other states ... are taking note and following our lead. The Green Zia Program promotes the use of a systematic approach to pollution prevention involving leadership; planning; attention to customers, markets and stakeholders; information and analysis; employees; pro-cess management; and careful tracking of results. It is based on the belief that organizations have within them the best source of knowledge for achiev-ing environmental improve-

Any organization can bene-fit from the program. Training and technical assistance is available to help you get start-ed on your journey. The next-round is starting (this month) with a training on how to build an environmental manage-a business operating at peak ment system designed specifically for your organization. Contact Pat Gallagher at (505) 827-0677 for program information; for training information contact Chris Campbell at (505) 848-4251.

Sentencing of former officer postponed again

BY DIANNE STALLINGS

The sentencing of former Ruidoso police officer Luis Torres was postponed Thursday.

The case was on the schedule of former 12th Judicial District Judge Robert Doughty before his retirement. It was switched to Judge Jerry Ritter, because Gov. Gary Johnson hasn't named anyone to re-place Doughty. But Wednesday, court offi-cials realized that Ritter, who holds court in Alamogordo, had recused himself from the embezzlement case shortly after it was filed, according to a court clerk, Judge Karen Parsons in Carrizozo also declined to hear the case. Chief Judge Frank Wilson is the only judge left in the dis-trict and probably will take the sentencing hearing unless a new judge is appointed to Doughty's District II seat.

Torres could face up to 18 months in prison on the felony embezzlement charge stemming from a sting created by the police department after Torres was suspected in an attempted burglary of a local business.

The former officer, who during his 20-year law enforcement career also served as chief of police in Belen, was convicted in June of taking more than $250 from a purse turned into him during a late night shift.

Torres was acquitted on a more serious felony charge of aggravated burglary.

The phone line to the building was cut.

Students reported drunk at the high school

Ruidoso High School Principal Bill Green called the police department about three intoxicated juveniles at about 3:10 p.m. Sept. 7. When the police arrived, they saw the three in the bed of a pickup truck, according to police. "It was very apparent that all three were extremely intoxicated. They admitted to drinking vodka away from the school grounds," the report states.

An ambulance arrived and EMT personnel evaluated all three and took one to Lincoln County Medical Center because of his level of intoxication, where he was treated and released to his father. The other two were arrested, taken to the police department, processed and released with the authority of the Juvenile Probation Office.

Vehicle recovered, then reported missing

Police found an abandoned '75 VW convertible two-door car at 10:30 p.m. Sept. 6 at 524 First St., after receiving a call about it. On Sept. 7, the owner, Mark D. Schumpert of Ruidoso, went to the police department and reported it stolen between 4-11 p.m. Sept. 6.

Ruidoso man charged with paraphernalia

Police arrested Christopher Shepard, 18, of Ruidoso at 10:37 p.m. Sept. 7 and charged him with possession of paraphernalia. A call had come in about a possible domestic violence situation at 100 Mechem Drive and police responding to that call spotted Shepard on a bicycle at Porr Drive and Harvard Place and stopped and searched him, the report states. Shepard was involved in the domestic situation but said it was only verbal.

Mescalero school board members elected

BY DIANNE STALLINGS RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

Mescalero voters elected two incumbents and four new faces to the reservation's school board Tuesday.

Helen Little and Alma Morgan will return to the seven-member board. Michaelene Ahidley, Norbert Via, Albert Platta Sr. and Ellen Sago will join them. The seventh member is Harry Wheeler, whose term has one more year, said School Superintendent Ray Swinney.

This is the first school board election in three years. The new members are scheduled to be sworn into office before the next board meeting, Sept. 30.

Morgan led the pack with 141 votes, followed by Ahidley with 140, Via with 133, Platta with 111 and Sago with 97, according to a school district clerk. Although Helen Little received 86 votes, less than the totals for Christopher L. Little, Miralene Blaylock and incumbent Hazel Botella, she will take a place on the board to fulfill a requirement that two members are not Mescalero, the clerk said.

Blaylock and Botella each racked up 95 votes and Christopher Little received 90 votes.

Other vote totals in the race were 82 for incumbent Karen Moreno, 70 for June N. Shaw, 65 for Rema P. Spitty and 47 for Manisha Shaeffer.

LULAC looks at its past, future

The next meeting of the League of United Latin American Citizens (LULAC) will be at 7 p.m. Sept. 24 at the Texas New Mexico Power Company.

The meeting will feature the regional director of the national organization, Ursulo Castillo from Carlsbad, who will speak on the origins of LULAC and discuss what's happening in the state and nationwide, said Leo Martinez, the local chapter president.

About 25 people attended the Sept. 9 meeting of the organization to discuss sewer problems and the membership for the new chapter.

Ruidoso Village Councilor Leon Eggleston was the speaker at that meeting and fielded some questions on the sewer situation, Martinez said.

Martinez said one of the functions of the local LULAC chapter is to address some of the issues that are only being discussed in village council meetings.

"We'll encourage people to run (for public office), although we're not going to support anybody, but being involved creates a climate for people to get involved with politics," he said.

Capitan schools set community meeting for 'Success'

BY SANDY SUGGITT RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

Capitan, School will hold a community meeting at 5:30 p.m. Tuesday, in the board room of the district's administration building to discuss progress made meeting its goal for the "Educational Plan for Student Success."

The state Board of Education requires this public meeting, said superintendent of the Capitan school district Diana Billingsley.

The district sets a district-wide goal, and ours is writing-across-the-curriculum," Billingsley said. This means making sure that stu-dents are writing full sentences in all subject areas. Even the physical education teacher has students write answers in full sentences to essay questions.

At the 30-minute meeting, Billingsley will explain to the community that the district met last year's goal of having at least half the student body reach a certain goal in terms of writing proficiency by showing their writing scores. She also will explain methods teachers used to encourage writing among the students.

Last year's goal was for 50 percent of the students to score in the new parking lot behind writing test with a range from 1 to 6 - and more than half scored 3, she said. This year's goal is for at least 50 percent of the students to score a 4 or better.

Architectural update

Third-grade students Chase Williams and Audrey Romero gave the Capitan School Board an update on construction projects around the campus at the board meeting. Sept. 9.

The children, from Betsy Peralta's class, interviewed the "project boss," Parker Hobson and two people operating equipment who were Capitan graduates, Shawn Wilson, class of '99 and Tim McGarvey, class

The children reported that the crew was having trouble because of rain and weather and redesigning the drainage system," Billingsley said.

"They told them the student body has been the best student body as far as staying out of the way, observing the no-walking areas, staying out of the equipment's way and safety issues," she said.

Billingsley expanded on the students' update by adding that curbs have been installed at least 3 - a holistic score on a. the school and the crew is preparing the foundation to put the base course on the lot before paving. The drainage project is about 75 percent completed, she said, and is expected to be completed toward the end of October. The state Highway and Transportation Department provided $15,000 for a culvert pipe that will go underneath Highway 380 to dump half of the runoff from the parking lot into Salado Creek. The other half of the water will continue onto Forest Road as before. Billingslev said. The basic floor plan for six new classrooms, the library and the music room has been drawn up but the construction documents detailing electrical, plumbing, heating and cooling systems have not been completed yet, she said.

Accreditation visit

The state Board of Education's on-site accreditation visit will be Monday through Thursday, Sept. 20-23.

Seven state Board of Education officials will arrive for an entry meeting at 2 p.m. Monday to give the agenda of their visit and to meet with principals, the maintenance director, the cafeteria director. the bus manager and the special programs director, Billingsley said.

They try to visit every class in small districts like ours," she said.

Every three years a state Board of Education team comes to approve the school for accreditation and gives recommendations, commendations and/or citations, following up with a written report later.

The committee will look at the curriculum to make sure the district is meeting the content standards established by the state Board of Education and special programs to ensure the district is meeting the needs of the students, Billingsley said. They will also look at financial records to make sure the district is following state guidelines and personnel records to make sure the staff is appropriately licensed.

Billingsley said the schools are prepared for the visit with materials and documentation to support their programs.

"We don't get citations, we usually get recommendations and commendations. We have not had a citation in the last six years I've been here." Billingsley said. "And our teachers are looking forward to showing off the great things they do in the classroom."

Organization continues to plan for area youth activities

BY SANDY SUGGITT

RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

Not many youth showed up for the planning session for youth activities Monday at the Senior Center, but attendees said it was a good meeting anyway.

Genevieve Phelan, a preventionist from The Counseling Center, said 21 people were present, but only five of these were students.

The purpose of the meeting was to plan an event at Funtrackers sponsored by the DWI program Sept. 27 and to choose a name for the parent-youth group that began forming to fill the vacuum created gotten from teens. by the closure of That Place teen center

Those present discussed doing more publicity for events to increase youth participation, such as flyers in homercoms at the middle and high schools and giving two-minute talks during assemblies.

"One of the kids said they want a safe place to go and yet be community-involved to have activities at an affordable price as well as eats," said Rifle Salas, director of the Parks and Recreation Department

Salas said those present at the meeting discussed the purpose of the committee, but "they wanted the teens to come out and brainsform also," so the purpose was put on hold until more input could be

Salas said they discussed creating a monthly activity that young people could look forward to and expect as a regular event. Maddy Hartman said they decided to form a block party or street party for Halloween and would investigate places to

The event at Funtrackers is scheduled for 6:30-9:30 p.m. Sept. 27, and some of the events are planned to raise awareness of drinking and driving.

Anyone interested in volunteering to help out with getting donations for food and drinks for the Funtrackers event or helping supervise can call Wanda Gielow de Figueroa at 878-7197 or Genevieve Phelan at 257-5038...

Hod Rod Show features creative classics

• Now in its 12th year in Ruidoso, the Rod Run at Schoolhouse Park Saturday will show off 300 street road classic automobiles.

BY TONI K. LAXSON RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

No matter how many hours, amenities or paint jobs - the automobiles categorized as "street rods" are rarely finished to the complete satisfaction of their owners, Ron Duscha said.

"We always joke that they are never really finished - there is always something else that is going to be done ... I think that's part of the fun of it," Duscha, a member of the Early Times Street Rod Association in El Paso, said.

On Oct. 2, 300 of the shiny, colorful and sometimes flamboyantly modified street rods will fill Ruidoso's Schoolhouse Park on Sudderth Drive, next to the tennis courts. This will be the 12th year for the Rod Run to be held in Ruidoso. The show, sponsored by both Duscha's club and the Rod Runners out of Las Cruces, features street rods from as far as California, though most hail from New Mexico, Texas and Arizona.

"There will probably be a little over 300. We had to put a cap on it two years ago because of the size of the park," he said.

Every year, the show attracts thousands of spectators, with the biggest crowds appearing after the finish of the Aspenfest parade, Duscha said.

Entries in the show are automobiles made before 1969. Duscha said past entries have dated back as far as 1918 models.

"And probably about 50 percent of our cars are what we call street rods, and street rods were basically made before 1949," Duscha said.

The cars are immaculately maintained and refurbished - though not necessarily to resemble the car's appearance when it rolled off the assembly line. Flames shooting down a side panel are almost a trademark theme on street rods, as well as bright yellow or red paint jobs, Duscha said. Modifications such as new engines, air conditioning and new stereo systems are common as well as other frills not available when the cars were new.

"So, in a lot of ways, it's as good as a new car, but with the flavor of a classic," he said. "One of the nice things about hot rodding - it is up to the vehicle's owner what it looks like.

"I think part of the attraction to it is - it's something they can do and finish off to their own tastes."

The investment of time and money in the cars by owners is obvious. Duscha said most would have a cost range of $18,000-$20,000.

"But it is not unusual to see a street rod that is valued at over $30,000," he added.

This year, entries in the show may participate in a rally called a "poker run" on Saturday afternoon. Duscha expects 150-200 of the car owners to play. They will drive a set route through the area, stopping at designated sites to collect a playing card from an event coordinator at each stop. When the cars get back to the park, the motorist with the best card hand wins a cash prize, Duscha said.

Other prizes are handed out at the show, but they are both made and awarded by members of the car club rather than a panel of judges who rank cars by their class. And the trophies can be awarded for any type of attribute: "Like there could be one for Best Flames," Duscha offered. The trophies are all different and nice - club members spend a lot of time creating them, he said.

Duscha himself will not have a car at this year's show. However, "My wife and I are working on a truck. But, it's not quite there, yet."

Carter returns to familiar territory

BY LAURA CLYMER RUIDOSO NEWS SPORTS EDITOR

The last coach to lead the Los Lunas Tigers to the football playoffs returns to his old stomping grounds

But it's the Tigers' homecoming not Les Carter's.

Carter, who guided the Tigers to the Class AAAA playoffs in 1992 and their best record ever, takes his No. 3-ranked Ruidoso Warriors (8-0) to Los Lunas (2-

1) for a 7 p.m. non-district contest.
Ruidoso will aim for its fourth straight win without the services of its leading rusher, Frank Dorame. Dorame, who ran 22 times for 103 yards in the Warriors' 18 12 win over Socorro Sept. 10, was injured in practice Wednesday when he took a helmet on the side of his knee. X-rays were negative but Dorame still has to be evaluated by an orthopedic physician, offensive coordinator John Roberts said. Carter said junior T.J. Montoya will start in place of Dorame, a senior who could miss next week's game as well.

The injury affects the Warrior defense more than the offense. Carter will move cornerback Ryan Rossiter to safety, Montoya's usual starting spot, and bring in Jerrod Pritchett to cornerback. Los Lunas, on the other hand, welcomes back its leading rusher from 1998, senior Anthony Perea. Perea injured the cartilage in his knee during the Tigers' second game of the season, a 10-7 win over West Mesa. Perea was cleared to practice Wednesday and is expected to play today. The Tigers are coming off a 52-0 spanking at the hands of Class AAAA's No. 1-ranked Las Cruces Bulldawgs. Los Lunas managed only 52 yards of offense and four first downs in that game and never penetrated into Bulldawgs' territory.

With just three touch-downs in three games, second-year coach Avilio Chavez will switch quarterbacks in hopes of igniting an ineffective offense. Chavez will move senior Dale Montoya to receiver and bring in sophomore transfer from Tucson, Ariz. Bryan Stearley at QB.

"It's not so much because Dale hasn't been doing the job," Chavez said. "He's been playing receiver and we want-look at somebody we're going to have here for three years.' Los Lunas opened the season with victories over Deming, 17-6, and West

"We don't want to get field goals every time," Carter said. Roberts said as long as the Warrior offensive line continues to protect quarterback Todd Schrader, Ruidoso should find success through the airways in Los Lunas.

"I don't think their secondary has really been tested to take a look at him at ed," Roberts said of Los that position. We also want to take a Lunas. "Nobody's really lined up and thrown against them."

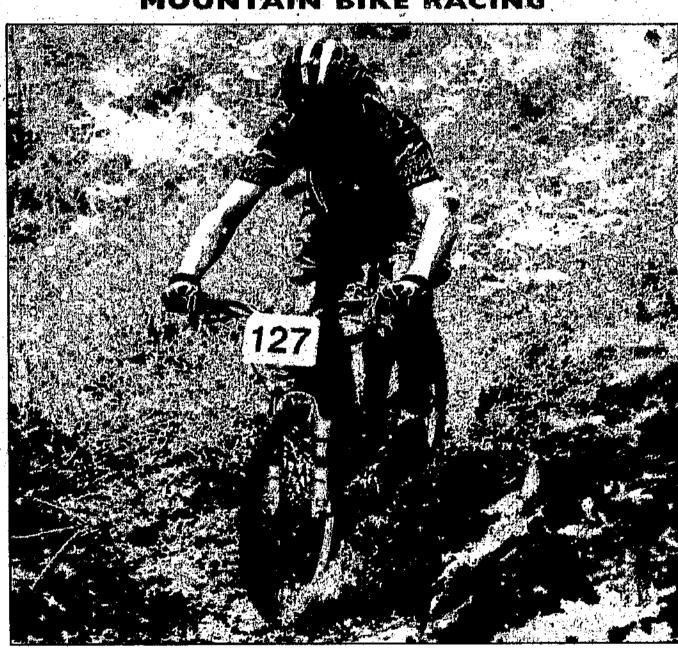

The Ruidoso defense, anchored by Grant Brumlow and Nathan Stanaland, will try to use its speed and aggressiveness to stop Los Lunas.

"They want to power the ball at you," Carter said of the Tigers.

Unfortunately, he was consistently second.

Fresh off a 1998 race series title in the junior beginner men's class, Wierwille moved up a class — to junior men's sport — and attacked

this year's series with the intent of winning the NMOR

Wierwille tallied four second-place finished and a third heading into the series' final race, the Chili Challenge at Angel Fire. The Chili Challenge course covers 16-miles at altitude ranging from 8,500 to 11,000 feet.

"I was feeling strong," Wierwille said in retrospect. "I had it physically, not mentally."

Wierwille finished second for the fifth time this season. and because the Chile Challenge awards double points for those racers who place, Wierwille was edged out in the final standings.

Wierwille's classmate at Ruidoso Adam Boehm finished third overall in the point series.

The narrow loss hasn't discouraged Wierwille.

Tm more anxious to race again," he said.

emotional lift face each other in backseat, Ward said. today's 7:30 p.m. football game between Capitan and Cloudcroft at Tiger Stadium.

In the past, these teams fought for bragging rights and often the case, a playoff berth. But since the New Mexico Activities Association realigned the football districts a couple of years ago and put the teams in different districts, the rivalry kept the intensity high.

"We still have a rivalry with Capitan. It's a game we want to win every year," Cloud-croft coach Danny Ward said. "Old rivalries don't die.'

The teams share similar records, 1-2. Both beat up on Hatch Valley for their only victories of the season. Both teams are on shaky emotional ground as well.

Capitan coach Ed Davis said his Tigers are in need of a shot of confidence after a 34-0 loss at Lordsburg Sept. 10.

"We need an uplift. We need to learn that we can win," Davis said. "It's just a mental going to go and play four quarthing. We've just got to learn to ters of football?" That's what it believe in ourselves."

Cloudcroft's Bears were busy installing a new offense, the run-oriented double wing. Two teams in need of an Work on defense has taken a

James Robinson of Capitan is averaging 160 yards in rushing. Cloudcroft counters with a pair of big backs in Graham Gilbreath (6-2, 195) and Michael Bowen (6-3, 200). Together, they have rushed 52 times for 496 yards.

"They just try to line up and run over you," Davis said of Cloudcroft.

With the teams matching up pretty even on paper, the outcome could come down who's most consistent and who doesn't give the ball away.

For the Tigers, Davis said, "It all boils down to: 'Are we comes down to."

Lincoln County senior athletes clean up at state olympics

Forty-two Lincoln County residents, ages 50 and above, participated in the 21st edition of the New Mexico Senior Olympics played in Las Vegas and Roswell.

The 24 men and 18 women won 17 gold medals, 17 silver, 18 bronze, four fourth-place finishes and eight fifth-place finishes to bring home 64 awards during the games, played in late July and concluded in mid-August.

Competition in the county is conducted each year in April and May to determine the state qualifiers. This year, 65 senior athletes participated in 11 sports at the county level.

Doyle Rentfrow killed by lightning

Mr. Doyle Rentfrow, 50-year-old rancher near Carrizo-zo, was struck by lightning and killed instantly as he was riding his horse to the pasture to check on a new water tank following the very heavy rain of Tuesday afternoon, Sept. 6. ...

During the afternoon and after the worst of the rain seemed to be over he told his wife where he was going. At 8 o'clock that night he had not come home and his wife started searching for him, to discover her husband and his horse where they had been struck by lightning.

Many friends from all over the Southwestern area were in Carrizozo for the funeral and burial services ...

Blonde Donna Rose Surginer named queen

Blonde and petite Donna Rose Surginer, a graduate last spring of Ruidoso High School, has been chosen to reign as Queen of the 1959 Aspencade to be held here Oct. 10-11.

The lovely young Queen has deep blue eyes and natural honey blonde hair. During her junior year in high school she was named "Most Beautiful Girl." ... At the present time she is employed at Ruidoso State Bank.

Around the Downs by Barbara DiPaolo

Seems it is too quiet here for many residents. Have reports that many traveled to the big city for the many exciting activities of the New Mexico State Fair.

Those reported attending are Alton Gray, Mr. and Mrs. George Hancock, Sue Kelley, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Day and family, and Johnnie Burke.

The Dreamer by Dannie Storm

On the twelfth of September I met Mr. and Mrs. James Riales uptown, and was delighted to see how well these good folks looked. James had been under the weather a little bit, and now he has come smiling through in great shape. Mr. and Mrs. Riales are great friends of birds and other creatures of the wild.

And word has spread among creatures of the sky and the hills and forests that the Riales' home in Pinecliff is a place of great kindness and hospitality. The home of these kind-hearted people has had wolves, coyotes, bobcats and many other forest creatures as visi-tors. Jim used to tell me that wolves would come up close to the house out of the nearby for-est and visit unafraid.

So I asked him: "How are your wolves? He said that he had not seen them for a long time. "Too many people," he eaid.

Democrats campaign

In Lincoln County

Former Gov. Bruce King was the main attraction at the Lincoln County Democrats free barbecue Saturday in Hondo. King was among more than a dozen candidates, who traveled to Lincoln County for the barbecue that was delicated to the memory of lifelong Democrat Lincoln McTeigue, who died recently. The groom-to-be is the son of Terri Button of Alamogordo and Brent and Gail Fullerton of Amarillo, Texas, and the grandson of Howard and Arvada Hassell of Ruidoso.

The Shrecengosts have lived in Lincoln County since the 19th Century, but the generation heading for the 21st Century has had to accommodate to different times...sort of.

A lazy Sunday afternoon in Lincoln town were $5 a bushel. When we gave up the apple business (decades later) they were still $5 a bushel.

"Used to be good apple country. It wasn't that good toward the end. Labor went up. Environmentalists got busy. And ruthless competition from Col-Xan (pronounced Zan) was born in Hobbs and spent 10 years in Austin, Texas, running an antique store and handling computer work for a nonprofit organization.

She returned to Hobbs to help care for her ailing grandmother. At the funeral after her passing she met Betty Shrecengost, who turned out to be her mother's cousin.

Duck Lips, Stupid and Lazy; and also a few cats and dogs including this mangy-looking half-coyote canine with "Oh, I have a really wild son, you'll love him, come and meet him," Betty

> This is how Bill remembers it: "Her and her mom rented a room (in the Bonito Inn). Looked like a good idea to me to chase this girl. So I did."
> They've been married about five

> The couple peddled antiques and other tourist trap items. Three years ago, needing more items to sell, they turned to woodworking. It wasn't a stretch. "Granddad built a lot of real pretty furniture," Bill says. "Dad dabbled a little bit.'

> That didn't mean they knew what they were doing. They approached those in the know and asked, "We want to do this, what do we need?"

"We bought some saws and just started," Bill says. "I bet I built a million birdhouses. It was on-the-job training. Nobody taught us anything. We had no idea how any of the machinery worked. We had the band saw for six months before we figured out what to do with it."

Yeah, says Xan, "We have pictures of our stuff when we first started. Man, it's embarrassing."

They cleared out a garage in back for their woodshop, throwing out 30 years of good junk, and graduated to benches and rockers. In a town with virtually no commercial activity, it's a business that is difficult to ignore.

A warm sun, a cool drink, and friends to talk to makes a fine day off for Bill Shrecengost

"We keep the town annoyed," Bill says with a twinkle. "I don't mind. Out here at 4 o'clock in the morning running that planer, well, they should be up working, not sleeping."

It's a wonder much work gets done at all, with all the tourists who drop by to chat. "You end up talking to them for hours," Bill says. "Right across the street is the museum, why don't you go over there and talk to them? We really like you a lot, but buy something."

Much of their wood is salvaged. "In the big towns it's 'recycled wood.' Out here it's barn wood," Bill says.

"Make up your own story. Billy the Kid may have hitched his horse to that post."

Thus, their wood comes from barnwood trees."

Barnwood is so much fun. It's everything from oak to cedar to redwood. It's hard work, you don't know when you're pulling nails whether the board is going to be solid or rotten, what it's going to look like."

The transformation is remarkable.

"We just make sawdust. All we do all day is sand. I like it when we finish something. Polyurethane it, it just gets beautiful. I like to look at the wood grain."

Except for benches they painted in ghastly pink. "Took two of them to Texas, a little old lady bought one," Xan says. "Said it matched her house just perfectly, and I believed her."

When the Shrecengosts get over-stocked and undersold – usually in winter - they hit the road. Like Ma and Pa Kettle going to town, they drive an old jalopy Dodge pickup with a plat-form and a trailer, piled high and low with furniture.

The rig is a virtual traveling workshop containing a duplicate set of tools. With the use of a generator or a power outlet, they can make furniture at shows. They tend to sell more that

But they learned to take more than furniture. "If nobody buys furniture we don't have gas money," Bill says. "If we take some trinkets, you know you can sell some junk."

On trips to Arizona and Nevada they've hauled everything from cherry cider to ristras to Christmas wreaths.

It helps that Bill can work a crowd. "He's great when we're on the road," Xan says. "When we went to Quartzite (Arizona), one day it was boring, it was hot, everybody was blah, so he went and got a new roping rope.

"He went out there and started doing rope tricks. It was a brand-new rope, so he couldn't do anything with it. He'd make a loop and throw it a lit-tle ways, then he'd coil it back up and he started telling stories. Cowboy stories. And he had a huge crowd, and the only place to sit was on our benches. Sales were great."

But Lincoln always beckons. "It's not even a town, just a bunch of houses stuck together," Bill says. "We like it that way."

He couldn't imagine living in a city. "Can't hear crickets in town. Can't see stars in town. Could make money there, but you'd spend all your money coming back here. Why don't I just be here and go broke?"

Bill's brother John has played Billy the Kid in the annual Lincoln Days pageant for the past six years.

And on a Sunday at the end of the summer season it's time to kick back. And here comes a buddy on the way to a gem and mineral snow in Denver. They have a few beers, and Bill winds up buying some Kachina dolls and arrowheads.

"We traded a few goods," he says later. "We try and cheat them, they try and cheat us. It works out."

Meanwhile, the stories are flying. "I jumped out of a jeep going 50, not one of my better nights," one guy is saying. "Goldang, saw the tail lights going down the road. Had to walk to Capitan."

On Monday morning, Bill was back in his shop, making wooden motorcycles for the upcoming rallythe kind of piecework he normally does on Sunday.

"My weekend projects didn't get finished."

August construction values drop; year up

Construction values declined in August for the second month in a row for the Ruidoso area, according building permits filed at the Ruidoso Planning Department.

Overall construction values were down 14.5 percent from the same month last year, from $3.4 million to $2.9 mil-

But for the year, overall construction values are up by almost 17 percent at $25.6 million compared to $21.9 million at the same time last year. The number of building permits is-sued, which reflects the number of projects started, also is up for the year - 20 percent more than the same time last

Single family housing construction values in August were down 17 percent, from $2.2 million in August of 1998 to $1.8 million this August. Also down were new commercial construction values, from $550,000 to $213,783; commercial alterations and additions, from $50,500 to $14,500; manufactured homes, from $97,600 to $55,000, and other construction values, from $200,932 to $106,039.

The only category of construction values to increase in August was in residential alterations and additions, from $304,127 to $382,750.

In single-home construction, the largest category of construction values, building permits for 11 homes were filed with the Ruidoso Planning Department in August. The finished homes will range in value from $68,498 to $270,889.

Among the new commercial construction permits filed with department was one for initial work on the $7.5 million Hawthorn Suites Golf and Convention Resort to be built next to the Ruidoso Convention Center. The work, which is to stabilize the ground at the hotel's foundation prior to construction, was estimated to cost $190,000. The contractor is Arroyo Development.

The village, which has a lease contract with the hotel's developer, will pay for that portion of the construction, as agreed to in the lease. The department's building permit fee was deferred for the work.

Disaster loans available for certain businesses

Lincoln County businesses depending on farmers and ranchers can now apply for low-interest Económic Injury Disaster Loans from the U.S. Small Business Administra-

These loans are available to help businesses meet normal operating expenses that cannot be met due to the effects of a disaster.

High velocity winds, a cool spring with cool nights, combined with excessive moisture, hail and excessive rains that occurred on various dates from March 1 through July 19 and continuing, caused many farmers and ranchers to experience reduced incomes, which may have had an adverse economic effect on businesses depending on these producers. Farmers and ranchers are not eligible for this loan program but may be eligible for disaster assis-tance through other federal agencies.

To obtain an application or more information, call (800) 336-6303 or (817) 267-4688 for

The deadline for filing an application is April 19, 2000.

Furr's gets new CEO

Furr's Supermarkets Inc., with two stores in Ruidoso, recently announced Thomas "Tom" Dahlen as the company's new president and chief executive officer.

Dahlen most recently was executive vice president of sales and marketing for the Ralph's Grocery Company, a subsidiary of the Kroger Company, according to a press re-lease from Furr's. He is a 30year veteran of the food indus-

"All of us welcome Tom to Furr's. We are gratified to have someone of this caliber to join the Furr's family. His leadership will enable Furr's to continue to build upon its position as the leading grocery retailer in New Mexico and El Paso," Jan Friederich, chairman of Furr's, said.

"I am tremendously excited by this opportunity," Dahlen said. "The Furr's organization has a rich tradition in the southwest. Given Furr's recent move to self-distribution, it is poised to expand its position in the marketplace. Our immediate focus will be to continue with Furr's capital expenditure and store with provement program. I'm looking forward to learning from the Furr's team and blending knowledge to optimize the in-dustry's best practices."

Furr's Supermarkets Inc., headquartered in Albuquerque, is the largest privately held business in New Mexico with about $1 billion in annual sales. Furr's operates 70 stores in 30 communities in New Mexico and West Texas.

Unlike most bed and breakfasts, guests at the Apple Tree Bed, Breakfast and Spa have their own outside entrances to their rooms, of which they have 12 to pick from.

Located at 100 Lower Terrace behind the Thriftway grocery store, the bed and breakfast has had former lives — first, as a small apartment complex and then as a health center called the Centre for Healing Arts.

Davis, a chiropractor, had hou her practice at the center until the fall of 1998. It was then that she and Querin decided to convert the health center into a bed and breakfast, for financial reasons.

"We always wanted to make it into a bed and breakfast," said Davis, who bought the property in 1994 with Querin. "We began remodeling in March. We started from the floor up. Everything is new."

Querin, a contractor, did most of the extensive renovation, which cost the couple more than $200,000 to com-

Open since June, the bed and breakfast has done very well in its first season, and has been booked every weekend since July 4, the couple said. Already, they have seen much return business and referrals. And wedding parties seem to have found out about the Apple Tree — the lodging has hosted one party and has more on "The other lodging people have been real supportive," she said. "When they are booked, they send people to us. The lodging industry here has a really good in-house referral system."

Though located in the heart of Ruidoso a few minutes walk from the midtown shopping area, the lodging is relatively quiet. It is set in a hollow, so village traffic noise passes over the bed and breakfast, Davis said.

None of the rooms at the Apple Tree is the same, including a nearby two-bedroom house, called the rock house. However, all have overhead fans, television and private baths. Most feature fireplaces, Jacuzzi tubs and plantation shutters as well. Half have kitchenettes.

Davis has named each of the rooms after a different city, such as New Orleans, Santa Fe and, of course.

Besides renovated rooms, the bed and breakfast features a large and airy spa pavilion and a dining room where guests come for complimentary continental breakfasts. Whenever pos-sible, the couple serves only organically grown or raised food, such as eggs from free-range chickens.

The spa pavilion is an obvious source of pride for Davis, who shows it off first to visitors. A brand new building, the 1,150-square-foot pavilion has a massage room, sauna, bathroom and shower area just off of the main room. Two large hot tubs are in the main room along with exercise equipment, a television set and a few tables and benches. Two walls of the main room are all glass and overlook a for-

Not quite time to celebrate Japan's comeback

BY SUNG WON SOHN CHIEF ECONOMIST, WELLS FARGO

Japanese consumers have begun to spend money and the economy is coming out of a recession. But, it is too early to celebrate because intravenous feeding from the government is the main source of strength.
For example, massive public works projects are everywhere.
A tiny island with 350 fishermen in southern Japan re-ceived a bridge to the mainland costing $125 million. There is manna from heaven in Japan.

Not surprisingly govern-ment debts are skyrocketing, exceeding 100 percent of GDP Italy used to be the laughing stock of Europe for its high gov-erument debt. Now Italy is laughing at Japan.

The IMF predicts that Japan's debt to GDP ratio will reach 138 percent by 2003. If potential ballouts of banks, postal system loans, etc., are excluded, the ratio could approach 180 percent. That would be three times the United States' level during the height of the MARKET GLANCE banking crisis in the 1980s.

Prime Minister Obuchi is under pressure to produce another supplementary budget to stimulate the economy since most of the money in the pipeline is gone. However, additional deficit spending could raise interest rates, hoost the value of the yen and hurt the economy,

What is alling consumers?

Unlike the profligate gov-ernment, parsimonious con-sumers have amassed $6.4 trillion in savings. The persontrillion in savings. The personal savings rate is about 18 percent, compared to minus 2 percent in the United States. Ongoing corporate restructuring and increasing layoffs worry consumers. For example, in the banking system, as ted loans are liquidated and deadbeat borrowers are forced into bankrupfry, job prospects in Japan dim. All told, there are over 4 million excess workeers whose jobs are to count ers whose jobs are to count their fingers. Pensions are another major concern: America

graying, but Japan is aging even faster. Japan's working age population (ages 16-64) is declining. By 2010, three workers will support one retiree.

The Japanese missed the stock market boom of the 1990s; robust gains are not 1990s; robust gains are not likely in coming years. The ballooning budget deficit undermines the credibility of Japan's pension system. Households expect future cuts in social security benefits. Furthermore, the underfunded corporate pension liability is in excess of $700 billion, putting the pension problem on roughly the same scale as the asset quality problem in the banking system. the banking system.

Pros, cons of a stronger yen

A stronger ven is a vote of confidence that Japan is finally grappling with its many problems. The years strength, however, creates more problems for Japan. The last thing a country structure to the part of a recommendation. struggling to come out of a re-cession needs is a stronger cur-rency, which could intensify the deflationary spiral. Exports comprise 9 percent of Japan's GDP. A 10 percent appreciation in the yen reduces economic growth by 0.5 percent, enough to wipe out the modest recovery projected for this year. Any benefit the rest of the world might gain from a stronger yen would be erased by a weaker Japanese economy. A survey by Japan's Economic Planning Agency says that the breakeven level for Japanese businesses is about 112 yen to a dollar vs. 108 today. dollar vs. 109 today.

Already, Japanese ex-porters, including Mitsubishi to Bridgestone, are complain-ing about the stronger yen. On a purchasing power parity basis, the correct level is 180 yen to a dollar.

However, a stronger yen benefits banks balance sheets. The value of overseas assets translated tinto the yen shrinks, reducing the leverage ratio, enticing banks to lend more money Every one yen appreciation against the dollar could produce additional bank assets of 1,000; billion yen among the top 19 banks.

Carrizozo state 4-H officers share views on violence and prevention

BY PHYLLIS SCHLEGEL RUIDOSO NEWS CORRESPONDENT

CARRIZOZO - MalPais Colts 4-H'ers Mary Beth Bond and Mollie Hightower have attained the honor of State 4-H president and secretary, respectively.

The two participated in a day-long seminar in Santa Fe last month, hosted by the National Conference of State Legislatures and the New Mexico Legislative Council.

The main thrust of the conference was to consider origins of and prevention of youth violence. Attending were some 40 state lawmakers, plus many specialists in the field of child care and others.

To the surprise of attendees, State 4-H officers gave out "sack lunches" that were furnished through the 4-H Foundation.

Bond, seen on Channel 7 TV news as part of a panel, contributed this thought, regarding youth violence: "The mouse might become the lion in people, so be aware of signs."

She also advocated kindness, and the practice of prayer in her spontaneous remarks.

Hightower gave a speech called "Living the 4-H Creed: Lessons from Littleton."

At the State 4-H Conference in Las Cruces, she placed fourth with her presentation.

Featured speaker at the Santa Fe seminar was Robin Kerr-Morse, an Oregon family therapist and co-author of "Ghosts from the Nursery: Tracing the Roots of Violence".

She said that the first two years of life is a critical time, when the brain is most impressionable. What children learn or do not learn then can determine if they will develop antisocial behaviors as they

At birth 25 percent of a baby's brain is developed, and by age two, it is 90 percent developed.

"Our ambivalence as a nation is putting growing numbers of children and toddlers at risk. We are not getting the importance of emotional connectedness early in life," said Kerr-Morse. "Imagine the Hightower remined attenimpact on our schools, child welfare and juvenile justice system if every baby born was the focus of early nurturing and early stimulation."

Her remarks piqued the interest of lawmakers and others present, because violent youth of today are from affluent areas as well as the nonaffluent. Finger pointing and saying "it is their problem" is no longer true.

Hightower began her speech by asking those present if they were "longing for a vaca-

"I have the perfect place for you in the pristine Rocky Mountains," Hightower said. Richard Little, a civil engineer blessed with insight, proceeded to found (this) small agricultural community along the South Platte River in the 1860s. By the 1920s, they had earned the nickname Purebred Livestock Center of dees that on April 20 "the worst recent act of school violence occurred.'

"How could this. be the setting of such unthinkable events?" she asked.

Hightower said the answer is complex and currently under heated debate.

Some feel that parental and/or school negligence is to blame," Hightower said. "...In May, 1998, (the government) launched an 'early warning guide' to help....identify the telltale signs of possibly violent students.

Unless these youth are carefully guided, many incidents such as Littleton will inevitable continue to plague the country." Hightower said an emerging pattern is that the killers have been able to acquire high-powered guns easily.

Often, she said, the media is blamed, exposing young children to violent criminal behavior. A study found homicide rates in the United States, Canada, and South Africa rose steeply about 10 to 15 years after the introduction of television in each nation. Hightower said young American male (often)...had imitated crime techniques seen on TV...and it is commonly accepted there is a direct association.

Many have suggested the blame for recent acts of school violence should fall squarely on the parents' shoulders," Hightower said. "By continually viewing violence....the school killers have become numb to the most basic human emotions of pain, empathy, and, perhaps most sadly of all, love. Hightower said "as guardians of these troubled teens, the parents, who have seemingly left their children unsupervised, have been held accountable by society. Is this fair?"

She said schools, gun availability, violence in the media, and a lack of parental guidance were all factors that contributed to the killings within the schools.

But, Hightower countered, none of these were the primary

"Let me repeat," Hightower emphasized, "it was all a matter of choice. Each individual who created chaos in his community had to make a personal, deliberate decision to destruct and destroy precious human life."

Hightower said, however, that in the midst of every tragedy, there's always a glimmer of hope.

"Ladies and gentlemen, we can be that glimmer," Hightower said, "(many) suffered...the loss of life and innocence...Most in this room...have gotten goose bumps hearing the chilling news reports, and our hearts have ached for those students at Columbine High. This illustrates our compassion for them, even though they are strangers."

FCE Achievement Day set for today

CARRIZOZO – The Annual Lincoln County Family and Community Education Achievement Day is today at the Carrizozo Woman's Club building.

Members will exhibit achievements in various arts, crafts and homemaking skills. The items will not be judged.

Prior to a Mexican Stack lunch prepared by the Carrizozo FCE, Johnson Stearns will be guest speaker at 11:00 a.m.

Stearns will share both serious and humorous history of the area regarding "Depression, Droughts, Railroad, Mining and Ranching in the Tularosa Basin.'

The afternoon workshops will be preparations for the state meeting of the FCE at Bonita Park, October 5,6,7. Otero and Lincoln County FCEs are hostesses for this 3-day event.

Pre-school story hour begins Sept. 23

Update on FCE

The Carrizozo Family & Community Education (FCE) club raffle came to a close at the Centennial Street Fair, Aug. 28, when magic man Jamie O'Hara conducted drawings for the five FCE prizes on display.

Especially lucky was local resident Mrs. Jack (Chris) Harkey, who won first prize, a hand knit sweater, and fifth prize, a woolen lap robe.

Second prize, a red, white and blue crocheted afghan, was won by Rosemary Shafer, Carrizozo; third, a handmade Victorian doll, was won by Lisa Shivers, Carrizozo, and fourth prize, a basket of gourmet foods, was won by Sue Croskell of Arabella.

Proceeds assist with club and community programming and help support 4-H needs.

"Diabetes and Hypoglycemia" was the program topic for the county FCE Council Meeting hosted by Carrizozo FCE, on July 28. This was a public meeting sponsored by FCE and some 35 persons attended.

Dianne Stallings

SHE FAMILIAR SOUND of a chain saw biting through wood signals the proximity of the James Brazeal's work site.

He's not cutting down trees to stack wood for the winter. Brazeal is one of Ruidoso's many chain saw wood carvers found along the major roads into town.

See ARTIST, page 4D

Aithough Brazeal, 49; creates the familiar bears that visitors take home to remind them of their time in the Sacramento Mountains, the artist is branching out into a new genre he hopes will take him to the next step on his ladder of personal and professional growth.

Using alligator bark juniper, single seed juniper or the rarer purple heart juniper, he creates eagles, angels and dolphins, subjects to which he attaches mystical qualities.

"They just came to me," he said. Some of his carvings symbolized a personal philosophy based on seven directions of his spiritual search.

That search hasn't been confined to wood carving. Much of his time away from the chain-saw is used studying Native American religion.

"I guess I'm looking for a better way for me to live," he said. "I've been an outlaw most of my life."

Without drawings or photographs, he tries new approaches, such as "Two Bears," a dual-sided carving with two bears visible from one angle and the face of an Indian warrior from another.

"I'm just a street artist, but I want to be a fine chain saw artist more than anything else," Brazeal said.

However, bears help pay the bills, he said, especially since now in his second year, he understands the market and seasons better and knows what will sell and when.

"I plum starved to death the first year," he said.

The first angel soon will be on its way to Austin, Texas. Brazeal plans to take some of his work to the state fair in Albuquerque, when he has been invited to carve near his close friend Jane Terrell, a Capitan stone and wood carver, who he said inspired him to try carving.

"We're outlaws," he said. "We work on the 'why not' theory. People say something won't work and we try it anyway."

One day, Terrell rode by the home in Capitan where Brazeal moved to recuperate after an accident with a horse. She promised to bring him some stone to carve.

His first attempt was "a cartoonish looking bear, but I got excited," he said. "I got to watching chain saws carvers and said that's how I'm starting my new life."

His first piece of wood stood in his front yard for a month. Then one began carving.

"I carved the damedest little pig - my first bear," he said.

That was one year and 10 months ago and he's been carving ever since.

But because his optical nerve was injured when a horse kicked him in the back eight years ago, splitting his chest and nearly paralyzing him, Brazeal wears stacked glasses to allow him to see his subjects.

He works with five sizes of chain saws and two high speed grinders that can cut off a finger with the slightest error.

"I don't work from a pattern," Brazeal said. "I just start. It's all free hand. Each piece of wood or stone dictates part of the carving. A really crooked or distorted piece can be beautiful, if you can master them. You get something special out of them, because no one else will touch them."

Brazeal's connection to the area goes back to 1906, when his family homesteaded Bell Canyon and Sixteen Springs near Cloudcroft. His grandfather was a blacksmith and with his father, operated a logging camp.

His parents moved to Carlsbad, and depth of color in the wood. The where he was born in 1950. He worked as a contractor in New Mexico and El Paso, Texas, rode bucking stock in rodeos and generally was a rounder until a horse nearly killed him. His construction companies folded. He and former wife, Patty, returned to Capitan.

Brazeal finds satisfaction in his day he sat down in the snow and work, he said The process starts with chain saws, then moves to sanding first with 60 grit and progressing to the finer 210 grit. Steel wool follows, then resanding final touch is varnish to harden the wood. One large bear named "Gone Fishing," will be given a permanent home at the new Motel 6 on U.S. 70, Brazeal said.

Wood sculptures left outside but not directly in the elements will last a human lifetime, he said. Those exposed to the worst conditions can be treated with marine varnish to prolong their lives. Brazeal said now is the time to put in special orders for Christmas, before

Gathering the windfall of art and apples

by Sandy Suggitt VAMONOS STAFF WRITER

Soft sunshine and warm fall air made for a beautiful day in La Finca Orchard near San Patricio Sunday. Complementing the day were 15 to 20 Lincoln County artists displaying their work and workmanship for visitors.

The orchard of Bob and Jade Boebinger offered a wide-open space for all the exhibits as well as eats from the Ellis Store in Lincoln and Rustic Roots' chuckwagon entrees. The rain stayed away and potter ly Heymann of White Oaks said organizers need to create more shade: "White girl hits the beach; I had a huge hat but it wasn't enough."

Heymann said the artists showed up at 10 in the morning but the crowds didn't show until around noon. The artists took advantage of the slow morning by catching up with one another.

"There were a lot of interested people (later on), and a lot of people showed up, for as far out of town as it was. There were visitors and locals and a lot of artists," Heymann said.

Sales weren't so great, she said, but that gave the artists time to visit with one another, and besides, Heymann said, it was a "community thing." People came to see the demonstrations and feel the materials raw, before they're worked, Heymann said.

This was the second year for "Art in the Orchard" and the number of participants more than doubled, but there was still plenty of room for more exhibitors and visitors.

"I think the idea is real good," Heymann said. "Maybe invite more artists in different media, and maybe a little bit more publicity earlier."

The Lincoln County Task Force of the Rural Economic Development Through Tourism (REDIT) created and sponsored Arts in the Orchard, and funds were provide in part by the Department of Agriculture.

HECTOR PIMENTEL

behind Hector

Pimentel's guitar music.

But when he's performing live along with his group

Leyenda complete with a flamenco dancer, one inspiration stands out above the rest: the mood of the audience.

"It's nuevo flamenco," Hector Pimentel said about his music, "I do a variety of music, from classical to popular music to romantic Mexican music, as well as flamenco.

"The audience doesn't want to hear just one particular style of music," he said. "We even do some jazz in the show, a fusion thing. If you don't ... the audience gets bored."

The Spencer Theater's winter season opens with Pimentel performing at 8 p.m. Saturday. Tickets, priced at $20 and $25, are available for the show by calling ProTix (800) 905-3315, or by calling the box office at 336-4800.

Because Pimentel listens to his audience, he does not preannounce a formal concert program. "I do things that I think the audience is going to like, and I view the audience's reaction, their enthusiasm for the music, and I then have the option to go different directions with my music based on that. Great artists don't limit themselves unless its classical...straight classical," he said.

Pimentel's group, Leyenda (Legend), is on the stage throughout the performance, supplying background rhythm to his concert.

"I've got a bass player, a violinist, a congero who plays all the different ethnic drums, including the congas," he said.

The group will be joined by one of New Mexico's most noted flamenco dancers, Lili del Castillo. Del Castillo's sultry and dramatic style has graced States. She has trained in Spain with the Antonio Alonso Troupe. and at present directs her own American Troupe, Rincon Flamenco. She has received recognition for her extensive Spanish classical work with opera and zarzuela companies throughout the United States, including Orlando Opera, New Orleans Opera, Michigan Opera Theatre, Atlanta Opera. Florentine Opera, University of New Mexico Opera Theatre and Opera Southwest, among others. She is a touring artist and artist-in-the-schools with the New Mexico Arts Division, and is on the board of the Albuquerque Arts Alliance.

Hector comes from a noted family of guitar makers. Rhythm is in his blood and even that of his 2 1/2-year-old daughter.

"Seriously," he said, "my baby girl is already developing an interest in music.

"I've been married to my wife for five years and she comes to hear me play just about every day and every night. Even when she was pregnant she came, wherever I was playing, When the baby was born we had my music on in the delivery room.

"And now you can tell, as she grows older and older, she's developing that rhythm inside of her, and she loves music. And now she kind of mimics the flamenco dancer when she hears us."

Pimentel would encourage his children to pursue music careers if they were so inclined.

"But you have to understand that classical guitar music, classical music in general, is not that popular. Traditional flamenco is not that popular," he said. "But if you play a variety of converging music, then you're going to have a great audience every time. Young people, old people, middle aged people and very wealthy people.

"I've been playing classical since I was 8 years old and I studied classical music for 20 years. But within that period of time I was exposed to popular arrangements, popular music, instrumental music, Chet Atkins, Earl Klugh, Joe Swenson — artists had taken a much more commercial route, and I liked it.

"I saw Segovia for the first time in concert at Popejoy Hall. He was very old, and I think it was right before he died. I was 10 years old when I saw him. I saw Chet Atkins a year after that and I said, 'that's for me, that's the kind of work that I want to do."

His audiences have included such dignitaries as presidents Carter and Clinton and Vice President Al Gore.

He remains on Gore's Christmas card list. "Very nice man," he said, "and also a very funny man, and I liked his take on life."

Pimentel's concert appearances have taken him around the U.S., and the world, opening for Jose Feliciano and Rita Moreno and playing to an audience of 30,000 in Japan last year.

"It was a big show," he said.
"They had five musicians who played different styles of music, japanese entertainers too ... beautiful popular romantic music. And that's what they were playing, basically, in Japan."

Pimentel plays an amplified classical guitar.

"It's very difficult, as far as the sound is concerned, because the classical guitar is a small instrument. It's not a piano, and you can hear it, but you really have to pay very close attention.

"My father hates the amplified guitar. I use an amplified classical guitar for concerts because you can hear the music a lot better ... pure sound. You can, in essence, amplify the subtlety of the guitar. Otherwise you've got to go for volume and you can't use just a little pick to be heard.

Bonifacio's mother was a flamenco dancer which introduced him to flamenco and Latin rhythms. On stage as a religious vocalist since his youth, Bonifacio has performed for audiences numbering 13,000 to 128,000 in Pasadena, Calif. In 1968 he began guitar studies in blues and rock styles which led to opening performances with Abrackas for the rock-and-roll group WAR.

Amina Lozada - Percussion

Amina's degree in dance therapy led to studies of Middle Eastern dance, flamenco and the use of percussion instruments. She complements these talents yet further, applying them to world rhythms and song. An active student, teacher and performer since the 1970s, Amina has studied with several Middle Eastern instructors in New York. Since living in New Mexico, Amina has performed and taught in El Paso, Las Cruces, Silver City, Albuquerque and surrounding areas. "I believe that Middle Eastern dance is a form of selfexpression because it is ritualistic and sensual in nature. Naturally, my studies have influenced. restructured and opened new pathways to the Lacho Drom experience," she said. "It is where Middle Eastern dance and the Spanish Gypsy meet."

Carlos Garcia - Percussion

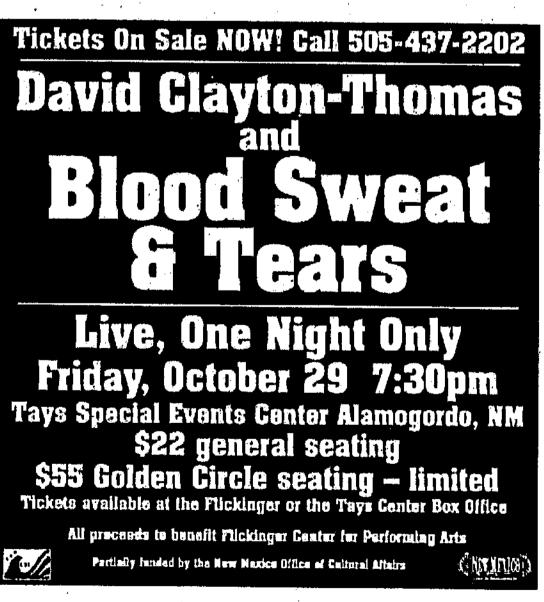

Carlos began drumming as a young boy in Belize, Central America, where he was born and raised. Learning to make one's own drum was a prerequisite to drumming while studying in Belize. Since that time Garcia has mastered many rhythms and drumming styles from various countries and tribes, extending this knowledge to fortunate students and interested audiences.

Ignacio Nash Flores - Percussion

Native New Mexican Nash Flores is a self-taught musician and has performed for more than 30 years. Timbales, congas, bongos and various hand percussion instruments are this musician's forte. Having performed with internationally recognized Mexican guitarist, Gilberto Puente, with members of the Tito Puente Band, and with Ralphael and Mark Quinones of the Allman Brothers Band, Flores brings the talent of many masters to the stage in a state of very high energy.

Your modem — Chille world

The word modem is an acronym for modulator-demodulator. A modem is a device or program that enables a computer to transmit data over telephone lines. Computer information is stored digitally, but information transmitted over telephone lines is in the form of analog waves. A modem converts between these two forms.

When considering modems, here are some things to look at:

How fast the modem can transmit and receive data. At slow rates, modems are measured in terms of baud rates. Today's modems are measured in terms of bits per second (bps). The fastest modems run at 57,600 bps (56K for short), although they can achieve even higher transfer rates by compressing the data. Obviously, the. faster the transmission rate, the faster you can send and receive data. However, you cannot receive data any faster than it is being sent. If, for example, the device sending data to your computer is sending it at 14,400 bps, you must receive it at 14,400 bps. This would be the case if you were receiving a fax to your voice/data - Many modems support a switch to change between voice and data modes. In data mode, the modem acts like a regular modem. In voice mode, the modem acts like a regular telephone. Modems that support a voice/data switch have a built-in speaker and microphone for voice communication. With the right software. you can use this type of modem as an answering machine/voice mail box.

auto-answer - An auto-answer modem enables your computer to receive calls/faxes in your absence.

data compression - Some modems perform data compression, which enables them to send data at faster rates. However, the modem at the receiving end must be able to decompress the data using the same compressio technique.

fax capability - Most modern modems are fax modems, which means that they can send and receive faxes.

V.90 - The newest standard for 56-Kbps modems approved by the International Telecommunication Union in February of 1998. The V.90 standard resolved the battle between the two competing 56K technologies — X2 and K56flex. If you're looking to buy a new modem, make sure it has this latest technology.

Internal vs. External

Internal modems come as an expansion board that you can insert into a vacant expansion slot and use your PC's power supply. External modems are normally self-contained in their own case and have their own power supply, and connect to your computer via a serial cable to one of the serial ports on the back of your PC. Whether you get an internal modem or an external one depends on personal preference.

Here are a couple advantages of each

Internal modems are easy to install, generally less expensive, no cables to get knocked loose and consume no desktop space.

External modems usually feature a panel of lights to display information about the current connection. Can be powered on and off to reset independently from your computer.

If you've been complaining about your slow internet connection, maybe it's time to take a look at your modem and see if you need to updgrade!

JOHN TUNSTALL made the 'terminal mistake' of trying to reason with 'The Boys.'

Vell, seeing as how I've spent the last six weeks profiling the warriors for the Tunstall/McSween faction (aka The Regulators), it seems only fair that I do something similar for the men that fought for the Murphy/Dolan faction (aka "The House").

These men are frequently painted as the "bad guys" of the Lincoln County War. This is primarily because everybody's favorite legend, that youthful character of sunny disposition and deadly trigger finger, Billy the Kid, usually takes center stage in any scenario involving the war.

The fact is, at least in the opinion of this writer, that the real villains of the Lincoln County War were the men who ran the thing – on both sides. Yes, Murphy, and later Dolan held a financial stranglehold on the citizens of Lincoln County. And consequently, it seemed to the local populace that John Tunstall, with his more reasonable prices, was a breath of financial fresh air. They felt that Tunstall (and his partner, McSween) were the men who would save the populace from the ruthless business practices of The House.

We know now, from his letters home to his parents, that Tunstall intended, just as soon as he ousted The House, to raise his prices right up to where those of The House had been. At one point, Tunstall told his father that he intended to get hold of "half of every dollar" that was made by anyone in Lincoln County. This means that Tunstall and McSween were no better, and

This means that Tunstall and McSween were no better, and possibly even worse, than their competition. It also means that just like in every other war, the real victims were the soldiers.

Now, there were some men who fought for The House who were known outlaws, and they were working specifically as hired guns. Their presence cannot be denied, but were they any different than any hired guns – we call them mercenaries nowadays – that tend to be found in any war zone? No.

lesse Evans

There have been at least two biographies of Jesse Evans, but he still remains shrouded in mystery. According to Jesse's own ever-questionable account, he was born in Missouri in 1853. which would have made him about 25 years of age at the time of the Lincoln County War. Also according to Jesse, he was, in the early 1870s, employed by John Chisum to steal horses from the Mescalero Apaches.

Lily Casey Klasner's book "My Girlhood Among Outlaws" has Jesse arriving in Lincoln County with another noted local badman lim McDaniels. Even before the outbreak of the Lincoln County War, Evans, McDaniels, Frank Baker and others, possibly even Billy the Kid (then known as Kid Antrim), formed a loosely knit group of outlaws known locally as "The Boys."

Despite their rather amiable moniker, these men were no one with whom to fool. "The Boys" sounded good, but "The Thugs" would have been more accurate.

Evans and Baker were both, depending on which account one chooses to believe, among the sub-posse that killed John Tunstall on February 18, 1878.

Previous dealings

John Tunstall had dealings with "The Boys" almost from the outset of his time in Lincoln County. They seemed to delight in helping themselves to Tunstall's stock, much to the Englishman's consternation.

At one point, Tunstall's foreman, the brave-but-doomed Dick Brewer, went after Evans and his cohorts for stealing Tunstall's stock, capturing them and returning to Lincoln with them. On the road, the little group bumped into Tunstall himself, who apparently, was a trifle confused about the details of the situation, prompting one of the outlaws to mockingly exclaim, has got us or we've got him.

And that was about the size of it. Once Tunstall realized that The Boys were, in fact, in Brewer's custody, his confidence returned and he began bantering with them. When one of them. an almost neanderthal creature by the name of Tom Hill, asked Tunstall for some liquor, the Englishman replied that if they would meet him in Lincoln, he would "soak" them.

Tunstall didn't rush to them with booze, but he did ultimately make good on his promise. Near the end of October of 1877, Tunstall, carrying a bottle, visited The Boys in Lincoln's infamous underground jail: the pit carcel. He later wrote to his parents that. "They found that I could joke as well as they could & we laughed a good deal. Some time after that I sent them a bottle of whiskey. I went to see them in gaol (jail) after that and joked them a good deal."

 About a week later, Tunstall visited them again, and a few days after that, The Boys escaped. According to Tunstall, they later sent word to him that they would not bother any of his stock again.

The question is, was Tunstall actually taken in by such obviously insincere promises? Apparently. But now, over a century later, it is almost impossible to imagine these merciless gunmen laughing with Tunstall. On the contrary, it is far easier to imagine them laughing at him. Tunstall had absolutely nothing in common with these outlaws in fact, they were literally worlds apart. If Tunstall was really so naive that he believed that he was on friendly terms with Jesse and The Boys, it was a terminal mistake – one that would cost him his life.

The sub-posse

There was a large posse in pursuit of John Tunstall and the men who were shortly to become the Regulators on February 18, 1878. When the posse came in sight of Tunstall and his men, a smaller sub-posse broke off from the main group and rode to intercept Tunstall, the only one of his group who had not taken cover. According to many accounts, this sub-posse consisted of Jesse Evans, Tom Hill, Frank Baker and Murphy's foreman, Billy "Buck" Morton. Evans, Hill and Baker were all well-known members of The Boys, and it is a good bet that Billy Morton was rather well-acquainted with

No one will ever know for "By Jovel He don't know if Dick sure what happened in othat remote canyon about 5:30 in the afternoon. But Tunstall, apparently, was still convinced that he could settle the matter with words. As he advanced on the four men, Hill cautioned Morton, who had his rifle in his hands, to wait until Tunstall was closer. When they felt he was close enough, Morton blasted him out of the saddle with a rifle shot. Then, another man, quite possibly Jesse Evans, dismounted and administered the coup-de-grace, Englishman shooting the through the head.

> Then, just to show what scum they really were, they shot his poor horse.

War's end

Jesse Evans was also present a year (to the day) later, when the two factions met in the street in Lincoln to discuss peace. He was still present a few hours later, when his cohort, a gunman named Billy Campbell, killed Susan McSween's lawyer, Huston Chapman. This happened in the street approximately where the entrance to the Historic Lincoln's Visitor Center is now.

The end of the Lincoln County War most definitely did not signal the end of Jesse Evans' indiscriminate use of firearms. Three months after the death of Chapman, Evans, reportedly still in the company of Billy Campbell, was seen at John Slaughter's cattle camp on the Pecos River. A month after that he was seen near Tucson, and then he appears to drop out of sight for nearly a year.

However, on May 19, 1880, he was a member of a gang of miscreants that stuck up a store at Fort Davis, Texas. The Texas Rangers were sent for, and on July 3 of the same year the Rangers caught up with Evans and the other "bad guys."

After a running gun battle that took the lives of a Ranger and one of the outlaws, Evans was captured.

He was indicted in October and entered the dreaded Rusk Prison at Huntsville on December 1, 1880, as prisoner 9078. A year and a half later, in May of 1882, Evans was on a work detail outside of the confines of the prison. Details are lacking, but he seems to have simply walked away and vanished.

To this day, no one is quite sure what became of Jesse Evans. There are people that feel they are related to him (if Evans was even his real name), and among these folks it is a family tradition that Jesse died of complications (namely blood poisoning) from a bullet wound and is buried in La Luz Canyon near Tularosa, New Mexico.

But is he? The ultimate fate of Jesse Evans is one of the most tantalizing mysteries of the Lincoln County War.

Incredible Journey: Return of the Galloping Goose No. 5

Incredible Journey: Return of the Galloping Goose No. 5 is the story of a historic railroading relic from the Great Depression of the 1930s.

The Geese were introduced by the Rio Grande Southern Narrow Gauge Railroad as a more economical means of transporting freight, mail, and passengers along the line from Ridgeway, Colorado, to Durango, Colorado, when their regular steam operation went into receivership.

The Galloping Geese added an extra twenty years to the life of the railroad, but in 1952, the Rio Grande Southern abandoned its railroad forever. For the next forty-six years, Goose No. 5 stood in Dolores, Colorado, deteriorating in the state's harsh winters. Incredible Journey tells the history of the Rio Grande Southern Goose No. 5 and how the Galloping Goose Historical Society saved and fully restored it back to its original condition. By 1998, Goose No. 5 was again flying down the rails of the Cumbres & Toltec Scenic Railroad. Today, passengers can experience this piece of history from bygone days of the Rio Grande South Narrow Gauge Railroad.

Incredible Journey: Return of the Galloping Goose No. 5 airs Monday, September 20th at 8:00 p.m. It repeats Sunday, September 26th at 10:00 p.m.

The River that Harms

On July 16th, 1979, a small Navajo Indian community in New Mexico was awakened by the sound of a dam crack. Upon investigating, Navajo ranchers found that 94 million gallons of radioactive water and wastes spilled into their water supply, the Rio Puerco. The accident was and still is the largest release, by volume, of radioactive waste in the United States.

The little-known story of the United Nuclear Corporation (UNC) spill and how it affected the Navajo people unfolds in the documentary, The River that Harms. The program follows the trail of the spill and various investigations by state and federal agents who were seemingly indifferent about the dangers associated with radioactivity and uranium mining operations.

The River that Harms blends ancient beliefs, technological mishaps, and official indifference with personal tragedy experienced by the Navajo people who live up and down the banks of the Rio Puerco.

The program also includes an update on current developments in the Navajo community of Church Rock. Another uranium mining company plans to move into the Church Rock community, but this time, the company plans to invade ground water that serves more than 15,000 Navajo people. To protest this development and to safeguard their water, the Navajo people have formed an organization that is activating community, legal, interfaith, and environmental support.

The River that Harms will be broadcast Tuesday, September 21st at 10:00 p.m. It repeats Sunday, September 26th at 11:00 p.m.
