In the forest around Ruidoso, officials are on a mission to fight fire with fire

BY JAMES KALVELAGE
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

Cleaning up the woods and reducing future fire dangers around Grindstone Lake, Ruidoso firefighters have been undertaking prescribed burns. And more are planned, both in the village and beyond.

"We'll do one every chance we get," said Robby Hall, department captain. "If the weather's right we'll be out here."

The village project, currently focused on brush along the south side of Grindstone reservoir, is eliminating slash piles. The village owns about 400 acres at the reservoir.

"Eventually we'll get to all the land," Hall said. "The fire department will probably do a lot of the burns this winter. The perimeter of the lake is the most important."

Ruidoso village urban forester Rick Delaco said the activities

Travis Atwell cuts branches from a tree as fellow Ruidoso firefighters Robby Hall and Paul Hart feed one of four small, attended fires in an effort to reduce the potential of an uncontrolled blaze sweeping through the Grindstone Lake area.

around Grindstone are somewhat a project. He said residents should expect to see ongoing activity on the more than 600 acres of village property that's largely a part of the wildland-urban interface.

"We want to show by example what can be done with proper guidance and supervision for people to see how to provide defensible space," Delaco said.

Just outside the village the U.S. Forest Service will step up efforts to create defensible areas. Prescribed burns are scheduled for next week, said Marianne Gould, with the Smokey Bear Ranger District.

"They'll be in the Carrizo Canyon Road area, north of Mescalero Lake," Gould said. "It will be Monday through Thursday, weather permitting."

'A wild weekend in Ruidoso'

Alcohol officers issue 73 citations

BY JAMES KALVELAGE
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

The New Mexico Public Safety Department found numerous alcohol violations in the Ruidoso area when officers worked an enforcement detail Dec. 29 to Jan. 1.

"It was a wild weekend in Ruidoso," said Todd Griffin, a Special Investigations Division officer. "We wrote quite a few citations," Griffin said. "We wrote tickets for everything in the book."

Agents from the SID were assisted by troopers from the New Mexico Mounted Patrol in looking for alcohol related criminal activity at the Ski Apache Resort and other licensed liquor establishments in the Ruidoso area.

Carried out as a "Cops-in-Shops" styled operation, Griffin said the number of misdemeanor criminal citations issued added up to 73.

On Dec. 28, at the Ski Apache Resort area, citations were issued for a minor in possession of an alcoholic beverage and a person removing open containers of alcohol from a licensed liquor establishment. And four motorists were cited for careless driving on Ski Run Road by driving eastbound in the westbound lane to avoid backed-up traffic.

Griffin said Ski Apache will be receiving an administrative citation for allowing alcohol to leave the licensed premise.

"That's what we were doing at Ski Apache, looking for people removing open containers," Griffin said. "We'll be looking at Ski Apache again and what goes on up there especially since that road is so dangerous."

Between Dec. 29 and early morning Jan. 1 the operation focused on Ruidoso and Ruidoso Downs with surveillance at as many as 14 liquor dispensing businesses. A total of 13 minors were cited for being in possession of alcoholic beverages. Providing alcohol to minors resulted in three citations. Many of those involved adults providing beer to those underage. Nine people were charged with drinking in public.

Griffin said law enforcement officers would typically check the inside of licensed liquor establishments and then camp out in the parking lot to observe. At several locations a Cops-in-Shops operation was set up to mostly watch patrons coming and going.

The most frequent violation found during the investigation was open containers of alcoholic beverages in motor vehicles. Two dozen people were cited for the infraction. Another three were ticketed for their drinks outside of bars. Eight people were cited for urinating outdoors, a public nuisance.

"I think for Ruidoso it was due to so many tourists," Griffin said. "The population swelled and they were there for skiing because the skiing was so good."

Ruidoso Downs trustees to consider input rules

Measure was deleted from Monday's council agenda

BY JAMES KALVELAGE
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

Some Ruidoso Downs residents may have plenty to say before a proposed resolution that would establish rules for public participation at governmental meetings is decided.

The resolution, which had been scheduled to be debated Monday, was deleted Thursday from the council meeting agenda.

Village clerk Gladys Dillard said with the draft nature of the resolution and the mayor out of town Monday to attend a meeting, it was decided to delay consideration of the resolution.

The clerk confirmed there had been several calls to village hall about the resolution but the calls played no role in dropping the measure from next week's council meeting.

Dillard said it would likely be rescheduled for a future meeting. The possible code would, among other things, require anyone wanting to address the village council or committees to complete a request-to-speak form and supply it to the village clerk before public participation portions of meetings.

"This is purely a draft that comes with no recommendation," village attorney Dan Bryant told trustees after the adjournment of their Dec. 29 meeting. "It's a simplified way to have a set of rules out there." Copies of the draft resolution were distributed to the four trustees.

The draft retains a three minute speaking opportunity for both items on the meeting agenda and for non-agenda issues during the part of the meeting set apart for such public participation.

The resolution states that members of the governing body, village staff, or audience shall neither debate with nor respond to the speaker during

"It's censorship, plain and simple."

Artesia man vanishes at Ruidoso Downs

A 22-year-old member of the U.S. Marine Corps — on his way back to San Diego after spending the holidays in Artesia — disappeared a New Year's Day after apparently spending some time in Ruidoso Downs.

State police said a burned car belonging to Donald Buechner was found on the Mescalero Apache reservation, but as of late Thursday, there was no trace of the missing man.

A glimpse into Lincoln County's past, compiled from local newspapers by Polly E. Chavez.

The Capitan Progress January 4, 1901

There are now ten prisoners in the county jail at Lincoln waiting trial, some for murder and some for other offences.

Alfredo Gonzales filed his official bond as sheriff of the county, and will assume the duties of his office next Monday.

Mr. Gonzales has lived in Lincoln county for years, having been here from his boyhood days, and those who know him best say that he is a sober, energetic young man of excellent habits and character and will make the county a good sheriff.

Henry Lutz has succeeded himself as county treasurer and tax collector.

The records of Mr. Lutz's office show that as a tax collector he has been unusually successful and as county treasurer he has been honest and just.

HOSPITAL: Presbyterian files motion to throw out grand jury petitions

The judge previously noted that if violations cited in the petition are not criminal in nature, the issue becomes a civil matter and would not be the business of a grand jury.

In the motion, Dixon wrote that language in the petition was too broad.

"The scope of the illegal conduct for which investigation is sought...is unlimited as demonstrated by its demand that the investigation encompass illegal activity of whatever nature, including but not limited to, misappropriation, illegal solicitation and acceptance of contracts for services from Presbyterian...for the management and operation of...the Lincoln County Medical Center," Dixon wrote.

He contended the petition is insufficient as a matter of law to initiate a grand jury because it fails to adequately identify with legal specificity the nature and scope of the investigation to prevent "a roving and arbitrary investigation based on speculation and conjecture."

Dixon also stated that the petition appeared to be based on a legally flawed assumption that if the state procurement code wasn't followed, individuals working for or on behalf of Presbyterian may have violated criminal statutes.

As a non-profit, private company, Presbyterian's employees and officials are not bound to comply with the state procurement code, which applies to elected officials, boards, public agencies and their employees, he wrote.

"Because PHS and its employees are not subject to the provisions of the only statutes referenced in the petition, the investigation sought by the petition cannot result in the indictment of PHS or its employees for violation of the procurement code," Dixon wrote.

The third point of his motion centered on the petition signatures.

Although initially about 450 signatures were contained on the petitions, many were declared invalid because the signers were not registered voters as required by law, said County Clerk Martha Proctor. However, submitters proffered the required threshold of 261 signatures equaling 2 percent of the registered voters in the county, she said. On the first batch of petition sheets submitted, 266 signatures were validated and on a second set, 19 for a total of 285 signatures, Proctor said.

Dixon wrote that Presbyterian "has reason to believe that a substantial number of the signatures on the petition were procured illegally through misrepresentation or artifice concerning the scope and nature of the investigations or through the use of misleading statements concerning the identities of the persons to be investigated."

He stated that Presbyterian is conducting its own investigation into the methods used by petitioners.

Reynaldo Valcareel, chairman of the petition committee, defended the committee's approach Thursday.

"Everyone who was contacted to sign was given the petition to read and plenty of information," he said. "It was more important for us that they understand what is going on than if they signed. A lot told us they were afraid to sign because of possible retribution."

The group followed the law to the letter and Proctor validated the signatures, he said.

"We have some questions ourselves because we put petitions in Hondo and people told us they signed and saw other signatures on the pages, but when we went to pick them up, they had disappeared," Valcareel said.

As far as specificity in allegations, he said a grand jury needs the latitude to delve into other areas it may encounter while reviewing a situation.

"Ask President Clinton about that," Valcareel said, adding that wording in the petition designates specific types of possible wrongdoing, including the handling of contracts for services.

"We felt very comfortable with the wording," he said. "It was both specific and general. That was done intentionally."

Whether Presbyterian could be considered in any criminal charges, he said. "That's not my problem. That's for the grand jury to decide."

County's representation excludes commissioner

BY DIANNE STALLINGS RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

An Albuquerque attorney hired by the Lincoln County Commission will represent only four of the five commissioners in legal proceedings connected to a petition calling for a grand jury investigation.

"I've advised Commissioner (Leo) Martinez that the county owed him a defense as well," County Attorney Alan Morel said. "Clearly, I would hire outside counsel to represent myself at this point."

A local attorney, who has represented public boards but preferred not to be identified, said that since a grand jury investigation is a criminal proceeding and multiple clients are involved, ethical rules come into play.

"Criminal complaints are against individuals, not against a board," he said. "If the interests of the clients are not identical, one attorney can't represent those multiple clients."

Morel explained to commissioners Tuesday after an closed-to-the-public executive session why he recommended hiring outside counsel.

"I told them that the petition seeks to indict any county official or other individuals," Morel said. "I've been the county attorney for eight years and have provided legal advice to the board over that time. I must assume I'm one of the 'other individuals' that the petitioners seek to indict."

"As such, it would be inappropriate for me to act as counsel to the county of Lincoln as it relates to this matter and more important, I'm not a criminal lawyer. I stand behind the legal opinions I've rendered over the previous eight years and I recommended the board hire outside counsel to represent them in matters related to the grand jury."

Petitions were filed with the 12th Judicial District Court Dec. 19 calling for a grand jury investigation of the contractual relationship of the commission with Presbyterian Healthcare Services, which manages the county-owned hospital in Ruidoso.

Martinez said Thursday he doesn't think he needs another lawyer. From the outset, he advocated following the opinion of the state attorney general to seek competitive management proposals and to submit the county's contract with Presbyterian to the state Finance Board for approval, he said.

David A. Freedman, the Albuquerque attorney representing the majority of the commission, could not be reached for comment Thursday.

Last of four suspects sentenced for role in starting forest fire

Now 21, William Smith gets two years probation, must do community service

BY JAMES KALVELAGE
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

The final of four young people connected to the origin of last year's Cree Fire has been sentenced.

William Smith, now 18, was handed a two-year probation term on a conviction of negligent arson and making a false report to law enforcement officials. Smith pleaded no contest to the children's court filed allegations.

A juvenile petition filed last summer alleged Smith "did recklessly start a fire ... on the property of the Lincoln National Forest which caused damage amounting to $3.6 million."

As a condition of his probation Smith must perform 40 hours of community service weekly, which can be reduced to 10 hours if he is employed or enrolled in school on a full time basis.

The probation may be transferred to Colorado where Smith was believed to have moved.

Smith must return to Lincoln County for eight weeks each of the next two summers to perform forest and victim restoration work, said David Ceballes, assistant district attorney who handled the juvenile case.

The forest restoration work is to be determined by officials with the Lincoln National Forest with input from the community, according to a disposition order signed by District Judge Karen L. Parsons.

Smith was taken into custody in Colorado Springs on Aug. 31 after an arrest warrant was issued by a judge in Lincoln County. He was returned to Lincoln County and released to relatives.

Earlier efforts to serve a summons in the Ruidoso area were unsuccessful, prompting the arrest warrant.

Two other juveniles were also previously sentenced to two years probation.

A fourth person, a 21-year-old, was convicted last summer of contributing to the delinquency of a minor.

Police interviews of the suspects indicated the four had gone to a cave on Lincoln National Forest land immediately east of Ruidoso on May 7, 2000. Marijuana was reported to have been used by two of the four.

Smith admitted setting a branch on fire for illumination inside the cavern, police had said.

He was accused of later tossing the burning branch on the ground outside the cave.

When the group later exited the cave flames had reportedly spread to two trees and ground cover.

The four told police they fled and later called 911 to report the fire.

The Cree Fire went on to burn more than 6,500 acres of federal, state and private lands.

Three buildings were destroyed, hundreds of residents were routed from their homes for as long as four days, and at the fire's peak 1,100 fire fighting crew members and supervisors were brought into the more than two week suppression effort.

The final cost of extinguishing the fire and post fire rehabilitation work was estimated at $6 million on a federal report.

Police search for missing man

State police were searching late Thursday for a missing Artesia man — a member of the U.S. Marine Corps — whose burned car was found on the Mescalero Apache reservation.

Donald Buechner, 22, left Artesia Sunday on his way to San Diego where he was due to report for duty on Monday, state police Agent Albert Venegas said.

"We didn't really find out he was missing until his commander called his parents," he said.

"We have evidence that he was in the Ruidoso Downs area," Venegas said. He made several credit card purchases. His vehicle was found on the reservation burned to the ground.

The vehicle was described as a dark purple 1997 Honda Accord four-door.

Venegas said credit card records indicate that Buechner ate at Denny's and later at K-Bob's. He also checked into the Day's Inn.

His last known transaction was at Allsup's at 9:30 p.m. Sunday. Authorities do not know what he purchased at the convenience store.

Venegas said there were other transactions but he declined to disclose what they were or where they were made.

Venegas said Buechner had no known associates in the Ruidoso area.

He would not say whether foul play is suspected in the case.

"It's a big question," he said. "We don't have a body. Right now there's a lot of theories."

A search and rescue team on Thursday was scouring the area where the car was found.

State Police Agent Felipe Gonzalez said there was no indication that Buechner was unhappy with the Marine Corps.

"We're still checking with the commander to see if he can provide us any information," Gonzalez said.

The agents said Buechner is 6 feet, 2 inches tall and weighs 180 pounds and wears his hair in a short, military-style cut.

Anyone with information is asked to call Venegas in Alamogordo at (505) 437-1313 or Gonzalez in Las Cruces at (505) 524-6111.

OUR OPINION

Once again, priorities become clear

Once upon a time, in the darkness of the prior millennium (a year or so ago), taxpayers took considerable umbrage at the thought of spending money for something so frivolous as a Ruidoso recreation center, and killed it at the polls.

Two months ago, our taxpaying citizens decided to go along with supporting health care in the county and approved a mill levy, at the urging of many doctors, the management of Lincoln County Health Center and this newspaper.

Last month, some individuals concerned about how the mill levy was handled put together a petition for a grand jury, raising questions about the relationship between the county and Presbyterian Healthcare Services, which has operated the facility for some three decades.

Last week, a district judge agreed to schedule a hearing to determine whether the allegations could result in criminal charges, or not.

This week, Lincoln County's commissioners set aside $50,000 from their scant reserves to defend themselves, just in case.

Anyway you look at it, the taxpayers will pay and pay, and pay...

YOUR OPINION

The terminally ill need consideration, too

To the editor:

It's time for us Americans to become a compassionate people.

Today, we sadistically keep the doomed convicts on death row for an average of 11 years and 11 months. In addition, we try to prolong as long as possible the agony of many of our nation's sick citizens. Euthanasia must be timely administered to the death row inmates, and legalized for the terminally ill!

We humans often irrationally rationalize our own behavior and beliefs.

Doctors play God every time that they save a life. The medical field must also be authorized, at the patients' requests, to humanely end the suffering of the terminally ill through euthanasia.

Readers, please contact

SCIENTIFIC RESEARCH

To heck with the diet, bring on the steak

*Some Americans, fed up with conflicting diet and nutrition messages, respond with less healthful eating habits

SEATTLE - First, butter is the enemy. Then solid margarine is on the forbidden list. Next, beta-carotene supplements are thought to prevent cancer — until they are found to increase the risk of lung cancer in smokers. Later, tomatoes are the darlings of the prostate-cancer prevention community — until broccoli, cabbage and other crucifers take center stage.

As incremental advances in scientific knowledge cause shifts and reversals in diet and health messages, what are confused, frustrated consumers to do?

Some appear to be responding by tuning out the conflicting advice and eating less healthful diets, according to a study by researchers at the Fred Hutchinson Cancer Research Center in Seattle.

The results of this National Cancer Institute-funded study, led by Ruth E. Patterson, Ph.D., R.D., an associate member of the Hutchinson Center's Public Health Sciences Division, appear in the January issue of the Journal of the American Dietetic Association.

"The more negative and confused people feel about dietary recommendations, the more likely they are to eat a fat-laden diet that skimps on fruits and vegetables," Patterson said.

"From an anecdotal perspective, it seems as if all of a sudden big steakhouses are IT, and they're not just serving steak, they're serving a 1-pound steak and everything is drenched in butter and bleu cheese," Patterson said. "We wanted to determine whether there truly is a growing rebellion against diet and nutrition messages, and if so, how it may be affecting Americans' eating habits."

While public skepticism regarding inconsistent nutrition messages appears to be growing as fast as America's appetite for steakhouses, martini menus and cigar bars, this was the first population-based study of its kind to track the existence and extent of nutrition backlash.

Patterson and collaborators from the Hutchinson Center and the University of Washington conducted a cancer-risk behavior survey that included questions regarding attitudes toward dietary recommendations. The random survey, which involved 1,751 adults in the state of Washington (60 percent women; 90 percent white; mean age 44), asked also about consumption of fat, fruits and vegetables.

The results found evidence both for and against nutrition backlash, defined as negative feelings about dietary recommendations, such as anger, skepticism, helplessness, worry and cynicism.

About 70 percent of respondents felt that Americans are obsessed with the fat in their diet and that the government should not tell people what to eat. In addition, more than a quarter agreed that eating low-fat foods takes the pleasure out of eating and more than 40 percent stated that they were tired of hearing about what foods they should or should not eat. They felt that dietary recommendations "should be taken with a grain of salt"

Those who scored highest on the backlash scale were young men (age 18 to 35), the elderly (age 60 and over) and people of lower socioeconomic status, as measured by education or income.

Consumers who reported the greatest degree of backlash had diets that were approximately 4 percentage points higher in percent energy from fat compared to those at the opposite end of the spectrum — "a substantive difference," Patterson said. "For example, if we assume that on average, Americans eat diets with 34 percent of energy from fat, we could hypothesize that individuals with high backlash chose diets with 36 to 38 percent energy from fat." Nutrition experts recommend that consumers get 30 percent or less of their daily calories from fat.

The findings of the cancer-risk behavior survey were not all bad news, however. For example, more than 90 percent of the respondents felt that nutrition research would help them live longer and three-quarters agreed that there should be warning labels on high-fat foods.

"The majority of the public still care about their diet and health, but there are definitely some subgroups that have just plain had it," said Patterson, also a research associate professor of epidemiology in the UW School of Public Health and Community Medicine.

The cycle resumes

Thanks to a cooperative calendar, the holiday season just ended was a most special one. To workers on a basic Monday-Friday schedule, the 10-day period encompassing Christmas and New Year's Day included just four work days.

Now, with all that unencumbered freedom a dimming memory, we must somehow shift gears and look at life as it really is — the regular routine of five too-long weekdays and two too-short days off. The kids are back in school, the college football bowl games are over, most of the Christmas clutter is cleared...

The blank look you get when you ask somebody what day it is no longer is a cause for a behind-the-hand smile; oh, yes, they know what day it is. They know there isn't enough time to stop at the grocery or the barber shop or the childcare center and get home before dark.

Moms know the kids will be snitty about homework waiting; they themselves agonize about unwritten thank-you letters and the demands of family and friends, and getting to work on time.

Ruidoso's retirees, memories of holiday visitors and raucous livingrooms behind them, settle down once more to thoughts of bridge games, and wonder if it's worthwhile to try to get a foursome together at Cree or the Links.

Those who went home for the holidays to Texas or Oklahoma or points east could exchange tales about the long drive back across a frozen tundra they'd rarely seen before. The holiday storm of 2000 will be talked about for years, when thoughts turn to Christmases past.

Now, as the first week of the new year runs its course, is a time when a line most delivered in Ruidoso is, "My, I'm glad the holidays are over!"

It was 10 days of crowded stores and restaurants, end-to-end vehicles with out-of-state (and out-of-country) license plates on Mechem and Suderth, a climactic race down from Ski Apache every evening as the sun slipped west of the mountain — and at last some evidence that a widened Highway 48 was easing the bottleneck.

In short, the holidays are behind us for another 12 months. Now everybody can give a sigh, settle down in front of the television set, and consider the mysteries to come in 2001.

Men plead in casino token case

RUIDOSO POLICE

JAMES KALVELAGE
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

Three Ruidoso area men have pleaded guilty in Nevada court in connection with the Las Vegas use of alleged stolen Casino Apache machine tokens.

Brian Torres, 33, Mescalero, Wealey G. Hill, 22, Ruidoso, and Michael Scott Spurlock, Ruidoso, were each charged last year with multiple counts of burglary, possession of cheating devices, unlawful use of gaming devices and conspiracy to cheat at gambling.

Torres and Guill entered guilty pleas to six counts of felony theft and conspiracy to cheat gambling in Clark County (Nev.) District Court. Spurlock pleaded guilty to a count of first degree theft, said Keith Copher, chief of enforcement for the Nevada Gaming Control Board.

Torres and Guill were originally arrested by authorities in Las Vegas in March after Casino Apache tokens began showing up at at least six Las Vegas casinos.

All three men had worked at the Mescalero casino. The tokens, which were no longer used in Casino Apache machines, disappeared from a storage area of the casino a year ago.

After their March arrest, Torres and Guill were released from the Clark County Detention Center on their own recognizance. Previous information had erroneously stated the two posted bail.

Charges against Spurlock were later filed after casino surveillance cameras indicated he was involved in the same activity, Copher said.

Among the evidence seized by Nevada gaming police were $28,350 in Casino Apache tokens in $100 and $25 denominations, $1,200 in legitimate Nevada casino tokens, and $5,580 cash.

Spurlock had originally faced four counts of burglary, four counts of possession of cheating devices, eight counts of the unlawful use of gaming devices and three counts of conspiracy to cheat at gambling.

Torres was initially accused of five burglary counts, six counts of possession of cheating devices, 15 counts of the unlawful use of gaming devices and two counts of conspiracy to cheat at gambling.

Guill's arrest warrant in late November had listed five counts of conspiracy to cheat at gambling, six counts of burglary, 11 allegations of unlawful use of gaming devices and four counts of possession of cheating devices.

Sentencing for the three has been tentatively set for Feb. 21.

Charges filed in fight

A stepfather and stepson are each facing charges after Ruidoso Downs police responded to a report of a fight in progress about 4:30 a.m. on Jan. 2.

An officer found two men rolling on the ground in the 200 block of Downs Drive. One of the men fled, but later returned.

Joe Morales, 34, Silver City, was charged with aggravated battery on a household member. Paul Cuevas, 64, Silver City, was charged with petty misdemeanor battery on a household member.

Cuevas reportedly suffered serious lacerations and bruising to his face. A police report stated that efforts to gather information about the confrontation were futile.

Man charged with assault

A Ruidoso man was charged with felony aggravated assault following a confrontation with a Texas man.

Ruidoso police were flagged down by a San Antonio, Texas, man who told an officer that he had been threatened by a lodging manager with a gun.

The man said he and his wife had misunderstood check-out time and arrived back at the cabin they had stayed at overnight at noon on Dec. 30.

The manager reportedly said check-out was 11 a.m. and the honeymooning man and his wife would have to pay an additional $100.

After the Texan began arguing with Curtis A. Kunkel, 47, the manager of the Ruidoso Lodge Cabins, Kunkel allegedly said the rate would increase by $20 per minute for the time of the arguing.

The tourist paid $100 and told police his belongings were then tossed out the door. The manager then allegedly brought out a gun, loaded the weapon with a live round and pointed it at the newlywed.

Kunkel and another woman told police that the Texan's behavior so alarmed them that they locked him out of the office as soon as his belongings were outside.

They told police the Texan began kicking the office door and swearing. At that point, they said, the manager went and got a gun and showed it to the Texan.

A Ruidoso police report stated an investigating officer found no evidence of the door being kicked.

Break-in investigated

Ruidoso police are investigating a reported breaking and entering at a Kenza Trail residence. The incident, reported Jan. 2, was believed to have occurred sometime during the previous week.

A caretaker of the seasonal residence noticed a window on the side of the house with its metal shutters pried open, a screen cut and a double pane window broken.

A screen on a door at the entrance to the residence was also cut. Damage was estimated at $300. The case is being investigated as a felony breaking and entering and a misdemeanor criminal damage to property.

Motorist cited

A Ruidoso man was cited Jan. 3 with speeding, following too closely, having expired plates on his vehicle and not wearing a seat belt after the driver's vehicle rear-ended another car.

Jeremy P. Picchi, 20, told police he came around a corner on White Mountain Drive and was blinded by the sun.

He said when he looked up he saw a vehicle stopped to make a left turn onto Jack Little Drive and was unable to stop in time.

Picchi suffered a minor head injury in the collision, but neither he nor the two occupants of the vehicle run into were transported to the hospital. The collision happened about 9:50 a.m.

Council to hear lot-split requests

The Ruidoso village council Tuesday is scheduled to decide two requests to divide private properties into smaller lots.

Both request were endorsed by the village's Planning and Zoning Commission.

In one of the splits an Innsbrook Village property would become two lots, each 1,960 square feet in size. The commission had recommended the new lots be limited to construction of one bedroom homes.

The other request would divide a Chelsea Drive property into three lots. Among the conditions established by the planning commission was an addressing of sewer needs to the property.

In other agenda items the council will be asked to:

- Approve the transfer of the old non-directional beacon equipment from the village's Sierra Blanca Regional Airport to the Taos Municipal Airport.
- Extend for a one year period an agreement with Ruidoso Shuttle, LLC. to provide service for airport patrons through the operation of a concession at Sierra Blanca Regional Airport.

• Extend for a one year period an agreement with Cox Aircraft Maintenance for the lease of airport property.

• Ratify two amendments to a Scenic Byway Program Grant agreement with the New Mexico State Highway and Transportation Department. The amendments would extend the grant agreements, which would otherwise have expired, to June 30.

• Schedule a public hearing to designate the in-village portions of commercially zoned property along U.S. Highway 70 as a C-2e zone. The renaming of the presently designated C-2 (community commercial) area would not change any uses. A public hearing would be set for the Jan. 30 council meeting.

The Ruidoso village council meets at the Ruidoso administrative offices, 313 Cree Meadows Drive. The Jan. 9 meeting begins at 6:30 p.m.

DOWNs: Trustees to consider rules for public input Resolution to cover village's open meetings

The Ruidoso Downs village council is scheduled Monday to consider a resolution pertaining to governmental meetings.

An annual Open Meetings Act resolution, which will also establish a format for conducting governmental meetings, is scheduled to be before council members.

Trustees will get a report on the status of establishing an Extraterritorial Zone Board. Village Planning and Zoning Committee member Paul Van Gulick is scheduled to provide the report.

The village council approved creation of an ETZ to address development in the county within one mile of Ruidoso Downs. While the village named its three members to the zoning panel three members are to also be appointed by the Lincoln County Commission. Village officials said this week that the village's request to the county just went into the mail.

too stringent. This is not allowing for dialogue." Those speaking during public hearings would not be required to complete the request-to-speak form however the time frame would be restricted to three minutes.

A resolution section on decorum provides for the removal of individuals who violate the procedural process for public input. Anyone who disrupts a meeting or violates the conduct at meetings code will first be asked to cease such activity. If an individual is asked to leave and refuses, a village officer will remove the individual from the building.

Ruidoso Downs includes a public input segment to their council meetings, which provides a three minute per person platform for questions or comments.

The public input time had been threatened this past summer following a shouting match during a July council meeting. The threat never materialized.

Warriors taking to the road in style

KAREN BOEHLER

Santa Claus brought Ruidoso's athletic teams a special Christmas present this year. Santa — in the guise of the Ruidoso School Board — OKed the lease of a luxury, European-style coach for transportation to out-of-town games. "It's not lacking for anything," said Lincoln County Bus Line co-owner Matt Bryant. The 52-seat bus features plush reclining seats, six video monitors, individual lighting and air vents, working heating and air conditioning and a bathroom. Although the bus is currently plain on the outside, Warrior Solomon Barnett goes sailing through the air over Bulldogs Caleb Lewis and Michael Mondragon in the second quarter of Tuesday's game in Artesia. Barnett went crashing to the floor, but got up and hit one of a pair of free throws on the foul generated by the collision.

Third time's Artesia's charm

ARTESIA — For Artesia (7-4), the third time was the charm as the Bulldogs finally got a win over the Warriors (9-3) Tuesday, edging Ruidoso 55-50 in the Bulldog Pit.

"The more times you play somebody, the harder it gets to beat them. We knew that," said Warrior coach Billy Page. "Especially when you beat them the first two times, they look at stuff they can adjust to beat your team." Artesia did adjust, allowing the game down as well as changing its defense. "We knew we couldn't get in a running game with them, so we tried to slow it down," said Bulldog coach Paul Kirkwood. "We didn't take as many shots as we normally do." But the shots they did take fell, especially from the free-throw line. At the Stu Clark Tournament, Artesia finished seventh because the Bulldogs couldn't hit anything from the line. In the first half Tuesday, that trend continued, with Artesia shooting a sub-par 22 percent. But that turned around in the second half, with the Dogs hitting 88 percent of their chances. "At halftime, we definitely had a talk about the free throws, and we worked on them probably an hour and a half the last two days, just shooting free throws," Kirkwood said. "And the second half our kids did a great job of stepping up and hitting them." The opposite was true for Ruidoso. Although the Warriors played better than they did against Taos Saturday, they had the fourth of four bad fourth quarters. Ruidoso led 11-10 after one quarter, 25-19 at the half and 40-34 after three. But only Solomon Barnett and Todd Schrader managed to get the ball in from the floor, and only Barnett got anything in from the charity strips. Artesia took its first lead since early in the first quarter midway through the fourth, when Michael Mondragon nailed a field goal and was fouled, then hit his free throw. After that, the lead bounced back and forth until the final minute. With 42 seconds left on the clock, Bulldog Tyler Deans hit a pair of free throws to put Artesia up 52-50. Ruidoso had a chance to again tie the game, but Nathan Stanaland missed the front end of a 1-and-1, and that pretty much sealed the victory for Artesia. Page said the Warriors played hard, but the lack of offense made the difference. "I felt our boys played their hearts out," he said. "We just didn't get a couple of shots, couple of free throws to go in where we really, really needed them." Kirkwood seemed relieved to finally get a win over the tenacious Warriors, and had nothing but praise for Ruidoso.

"They've got great athletes," he said. "Solomon (Barnett), J.R. (Floyd), (Sean) Sebastian — I could just go down the list. All of them are such great athletes." Barnett matched Bulldog Mateo Lopez for high scoring honors, with each tallying 20 points. Todd Schrader had 10 for the Warriors as did Mondragon for Artesia.

Ruidoso gets another rematch with a formidable opponent tonight, traveling to Tularosa to face the Wildcats. Page said Ruidoso's tough preseason is designed to get his squad ready for district. "We have to learn to win on the road," he said. "We know that. We have to go to Lovington. That's a hard place to play. Portales is definitely a hard place to play on the road. And that's why we play these games when we do, because we have to learn to win on the road."

Lady Grizzlies advance in Smokey Bear tourney

Carrizozo advanced to the winners bracket against Tatum while Hondo fell to Eunice in the opening games of the Smokey Bear Tournament in Capitan Thursday.

Carrizozo 47, Tatum 37
Once again, the Lady Grizzlies started off slow, falling behind 14-8 after one quarter and 25-18 going into the locker room. But they picked up in the second half, holding Tatum to three points in the third quarter and 10 in the final stanza, while scoring 20 of their 47 points in the second half.

"We probably played defense for about a quarter and a half, and it made the difference in the game," coach Mel Holland said. "Both teams were kind of sluggish."

Holland said it was clear Tatum was ragged from the holiday break, while the Grizzlies, who played at a tournament last weekend, had a little more playing time under their belts. Zoos will face either Dexter or Hagerman in today's second round (the first-round matchup was played after press time), and Holland said he doesn't know which opponent he'll rather face.

"It doesn't matter at this point," he said. "We've just got to get better. We've got to start playing the first round of the tournaments better. I know that."

Brooke Holland led all scorers with 23 points, including one 3-pointer, while Christa French had 13 and Cayote Petra Martinez had 12.

Eunice 50, Hondo 32
An observer at the match between Hondo and Eunice said the Eagles "were small but very scrappy and well coached," but couldn't overcome missed free throws and shots from the outside.

Hondo fell 40-32 to the bigger Cardinals, sending them into the consolation bracket against either Capitan or Mescalero today.

Thursday Eunice jumped out to an 11-5 lead and never looked back, but coach Dick Hayes said his team didn't start well.

"Our first half we played really sloppy," he said. "I think we weren't mentally prepared to play. By the time halftime came along, we started coming around real well; started rebounding like we should be. The second half we passed the ball real well. They put a press on us, and we worked on a press in practice the last couple of weeks, and it came through because we passed the ball real well to the open person and got the ball down."

Hayes also said the Cardinal shooting wasn't as good as it should have been — about 30 percent — but he also attrib-

Snow (and lack of it), horses highlight non-school sports

KAREN BOEHLER
RUIDOSO NEWS SPORTS EDITOR

While high school sports took up a lot of the time in 2000, other sporting events shared the spotlight, with snow and horses two of the main ones.

Ski Apache's Year 2000 started out rough.

The second straight El Niño/La Niña year left snow scarce on the mountain, and although there were some crowds, the skiing was limited.

The resort closed March 20 with the deepest snow depth the entire season a mere 26 inches. The resort made snow throughout the season, but only on the lower runs.

The upper mountain never opened and only six lifts operated.

Things were different as 2000 closed.

An election day snowstorm gave the resort enough fresh powder to open early — on Nov. 18 — getting the jump on the state's other ski resorts.

And the snow has to continue to pile up on Sierra Blanca.

The day-after-Christmas snowstorm added more inches to the already solid base, with all lifts open and only one run still closed as the resort saw the clock tick over to the new millennium.

Ruidoso Downs Racetrack and Casino also had some concerns as the season opened, with highway construction, area fires and higher gas prices key issues.

The construction became a non-issue very quickly, as the work on Highway 70 from the Ruidoso Y past the track was mostly done by opening day.

The fires were another concern, but although they came close milewise to the track, the aftermath was never visible. And the early-season fire restrictions didn't seem to keep the crowds away, while the track worked out a deal with the Village of Ruidoso Downs allowing designated smoking areas in the grandstand.

Fishing report

For fly fishing - Happy New Year to all and to all tight lines! The river is still flowing around 2 CFS above Carrizo creek and around 6 CFS below the Carrizo confluence. The water is clear, so remember to wear dark colored clothes when streamside. RIO RUIDOSO: The river was stocked, however the number of fish was greatly reduced. This reduction will continue through the 2001 fishing year. If you don't practice catch and release, now would be a good time to start. As stated the last few weeks, the browns are still in their annual spawn. The spawn should last a few more weeks. So if you catch a brown, please return it unharmed to the water. Not any change from last week. The best subsurface fly selections for rainbows or browns remain the head head pheasant tail nymph or head head head pheasant. Green rock worms and head head caddis larvae have fished a fair number of fish this past week. Jon Riha turned over a few rocks this past week streamside and found some very large stonefly nymphs. I guess it would go without saying, take along some large black or dark brown stonefly nymph's next time out. SOUTH FORK: No change here. Very, very little water flowing. You will need to hike a mile or so up stream before you will find fish. This is mostly pocket water fishing, so place your efforts on pools and cuts. Head head nymphs, stimulators and small hoppers are always effective on these small feisty fish. These fish are hungry and not flussy. If you do venture up Southfork, be careful as there are lots of ice patches along the way. EAGLE LAKES: Closed for the season. BONITO LAKE: Closed for the season. GRINDSTONE LAKE: We have several reports again from anglers taking rainbows with sinking tip line and using black head head flash-a-buggers. Small rainbow trout streamers continue to be effective near dark. Egg sucking leeches and large dark Matuka's have been working. Most subsurface flies should be fished quite deep with an intermediate sinking tip or full sinking tip line, with a moderate to slow strip on the return. Bubble rigs and propeller flies will do well for the spin caster fisherman. Renegade, black and olive propeller flies have been working well. Remember to squeeze the hook bars down if you are planning to catch and release. LAKE MESCALERO: The fishing late afternoon and evening remains good. Dry flies continue to be working toward evening when the wind is not blowing. Patterns that have been producing are Hendricksons, Wulf patterns, humpy's and parachute Adams. Try tying a nymph dropper on your dry fly for more action. Head head brown and black wooly flash-a-buggers have been productive fished deep and slow. Black egg sucking leeches continue working. Black, brown and olive propeller flies with a bubble rig have been doing well for the spin casters. Remember to purchase your day pass at the reception desk at the Inn. Please practice Catch and Release wherever and whenever you can. We have just moved our local shop. The new address is 2501 Sudderth Drive. Come see us for daily fishing information. Check out our improved and expanded Web site for community information. Jim Shoop, Fly's Etc.

"It's all cement and pavement," said Bob Durrett, village administrator. "There will be security there. They won't let smokers leave the area."

A computer glitch opened the track's 54th season opening by an hour — and a power outage caused a longer delay the next day — but it didn't slow the horses any and the crowds just kept coming.

The 2000 season saw a total increase in on-track attendance of 2.65 percent (198,964). The total handle for the season increased 2.73 percent ($22,866,481).

A record attendance of 15,066 — an increase of 11 percent — was on hand on Labor Day to see Eysa Special win the 42nd running of the $2.4-million All American Futurity. For the Labor Day weekend, on-track attendance was up 15 percent (7,002) on Saturday and 10 percent (10,406) on Sunday for a total increase for the entire Labor Day weekend of 12 percent (32,474) over last year.

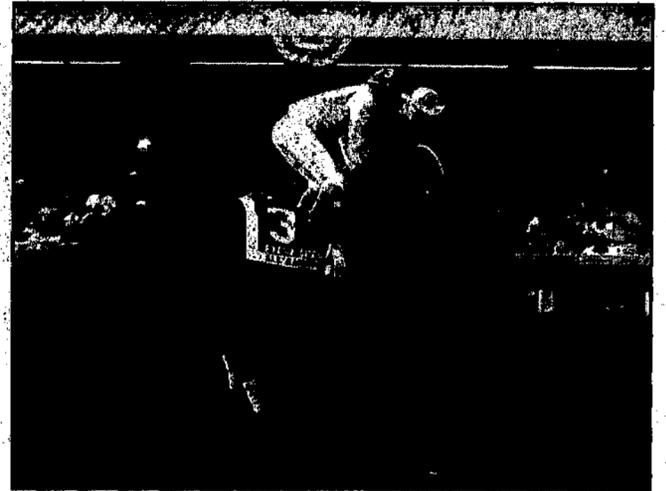

Additionally, an all-time record was wagered on a single race at the Downs — a total handle of $468,799 was wagered on the All American Futurity.

Eysa Special's win was the seventh for trainer Jacky Martin and eighth for jockey Jack Brooks.

Horses of a different color played a big part in county athletics, as the American Endurance Ride Conference national championship 50- and 100-mile rides took place Aug. 1 and 5 on Bureau of Land Management and Forest Service lands near Capitan.

Top riders from around the county competed, and Randy Eiland, AERC vice president, was pleased with the Lincoln County races.

"This year's championship was an awesome experience in every respect," he said. "We had awesome horse-and-rider teams, we had the finest group of vets in one place that I have seen, (and) we had a trail, in both distances, that could be finished but, in the words of every knowledgeable rider, exceeded (all others) in toughness."

Bicyclists also took to the roads of Lincoln County, as the Sierra Blanca Hill Climb was reinstated on an almost weather-perfect Sept. 23.

Ruidoso resident Chad Patterson was the first Lincoln County rider to cross the finish line, taking third place overall behind Zia Velo teammates Ryan Blicem and Brian Lail.

Patterson was also one of the top riders in the New Mexico Racing Series that took place on courses throughout the state.

Youth baseball put an appearance in on Memorial Day weekend, with teams from New Mexico, Texas, Arizona and Colorado competing in a USSSA tournament, while rain couldn't dampen District II Little League all-star tournament at the Ruidoso Little League fields July 7 and 9.

"We put on a great tournament," said local organizer Matt Reidy. "We had rave reviews from everybody."

Area adults also had a chance to show their stuff on the diamonds, as the Ruidoso Parks and Recreation Department hosted several local tournaments and the USSSA state women's and mixed doubles tournaments.

Rodeo riders had a chance to strut their stuff at the annual July 4 rodeos in Capitan and Mesalero, and throughout the year during Lincoln County Rodeo Club events.

Team penning also put in an appearance, at the second annual Billy the Kid Casino Classic team penning event June 2-4.

The year ended with a successful state Level IV gymnastics championship meet hosted by Mountaintop Gymnastics in Ruidoso downs — the local team took the state title — and an individual Level VI state title the next week by 13-year-old Mountaintopper Jeanette Zagone in Albuquerque.

uted that to the holiday break. "If a lot of those shots would have been scored a lot more points," he said. "That's the way this time of the year is, with the Christmas holidays and everyone traveling. We haven't had a lot of dedicated practice time in the last week or so."

Cardinal Stephanie Smith was the only player in double figures with 17 points.

Eunice will face either Capitan or Mesalero today's second round, and Hayes was pretty confident his squad would be facing the host Tigers in what he predicted would be "a really good ball game."

He said he "fully expects" to see Carrizozo in the championship, but said if Eunice does face Capitan, the Cardinals will have to find a way to offset the Tiger's speed.

"We're going to have to compensate for that in some other ways, possibly good blocking out, rebounding and aggressive play," he said. "I think it's going to be a really good game."

Thursday's remaining games were played after dead-line.

The tournament resumes today at 2 p.m. with the second round of girls play.

I like the way my buddy Pablo thinks about photography.

He doesn't care about what kind of camera to use. Anything will do. What's far more important is what's in front of his lens.

He might take a picture of trees he finds on a favorite hiking path or an old hickory sign with an ink scribble that's hard to figure out. Maybe a New Mexican sunset or a Texas state flag blowing strongly over a picket fence.

Let me introduce Pablo more formally to you. He's actually Paul Bianchi, but Pablo fits him better. Several dozen of his photographs are currently on display at the Ruidoso Public Library through the end of February.

"These are just a collection of the some of the things I've seen and places I've been," Pablo said.

"Lately, most of my work has centered around my hikes through the Lincoln National Forest and the White Mountain Wilderness areas."

A former graphic designer, Pablo has experienced a lot of living. He was in San Francisco during the flower years. He cut wood for a time in the forests of northern California.

He picked coconuts along the Caribbean. He's lived in Guatemala and the Yucatan. Even after all these travels, his favorite place on earth is Ruidoso, New Mexico.

"This just feels like home," Pablo said. "The mountains around here are so beautiful. The people are easy to get along with. New Mexico fits my style."

Pablo can talk your ear off about any subject. Get him going about hiking, and you're in for a long cup of coffee.

"Some of the best hiking trails in the world are right here," Pablo said. "I've been trying to start a hiking club around here for a while. Not for the politics of a club, but just to get some people together and go hiking."

I'll be right there, Pablo.

• And now, without further adieu, here's a great idea:

Sometimes when you're trying to explain to out-of-towners how to get around Ruidoso, it gets confusing when explaining that Sudderth sort of loops around town. First it runs north-south, then it runs east-west.

Here's the plan—change the name of the east-west part of Sudderth that runs downtown to Richard Farnsworth Drive.

We would honor the memory of one of the area's most famous residents, give the downtown a little more character and be able to explain directions a little easier.

Naming a street after a person isn't new to Ruidoso. There are at least a dozen others who have been so honored.

They include Charlie McClellan, Dan Snyder, Dan Swearingin, Ike Wingfield, Jack Little, John Christman, Jerry Shaw, Leon Farrar, Pat Thompson, Rayman Buckner, Warren Tucker and Willie Horton.

For the record, there are twice as many streets named after animals as people, including Beaver, Blue Jay, Blue Bird, Chipmunk, Coyote, Deer, Eagle, Elk, Ferret, Fox, Hummingbird, Mink, Mockingbird, Mustang, Quail, Raccoon, Reindeer, Robin, Squirrel and Wild Turkey.

Farnsworth Drive would fit in nicely with the continued development of our community.

Engineering students, artist team up and solve wind sculpture problems

Albuquerque artist Evelyn Rosenberg had a problem and seven engineering students at New Mexico State University helped her solve it, using a little ingenuity, resourcefulness and much hard work.

As part of Bernalillo County's "1 Percent for Art" public art program, Rosenberg designed a carousel-like sculpture called the "Carrusel de San Isidro," which was to be erected in Albuquerque's South Valley in November 2000.

Rosenberg knew she wanted the revolving metal sculpture to be wind powered, but had no specific ideas for translating the wind power into movement.

Having worked with NMSU's engineering technology department in 1997, when she designed the Clock of Dreams, another wind-powered sculpture which sits in front of NMSU's Engineering Complex III, she knew where to go for help.

In August 1999 she contacted Anthony Hyde, director of the Manufacturing Technology and Engineering Center (M-TEC). Hyde, in turn, tapped mechanical engineering senior Jesus Flores, and mechanical engineering technology seniors Chance Valentine, Julio Mendoza, Felipe Reyes, Adrian Rive, Jessie Nichols and Mike Greenough to design and build the mechanism for Rosenberg's wind-powered carousel.

Designing, modeling and building the wind-powered structure took the students six months, Hyde said.

Flores said he and his team mates knew their task had certain parameters.

"It had to be wind powered and it couldn't be too high, because the structure is under some power lines. We knew we could use Savonius rotors, because they operate at low wind speeds and provide a lot of torque.

"What we didn't know was how to position the rotor to transfer the power from the rotors to the carousel and still have the mechanism be aesthetically pleasing," he said.

"It wasn't just about making the thing move," Valentine said. "It was about making it move and still contribute to the artwork." After they had tried and rejected three design concepts, the breakthrough of the project came when the team decided to position the wind rotor inside the carousel.

The idea pleased Rosenberg and allowed the student engineers to proceed with building a gear reduction system needed to make the carousel spin efficiently in low wind speeds.

The team eventually used a flex plate, an automatic transmission flywheel and two smaller pinion gears as the basis for the structure's mechanism, Hyde said.

The team next decided to use four hubs from an 18-foot utility trailer to mount the structure's shafts and gears, because they knew the hubs were designed to handle both "axial" and "radial" loads, Flores and Valentine said.

"The wind blowing would create radial, or sideways, load, and the weight of the carousel coming down would create axial load," Flores said.

Designing the sculpture's mechanism is the kind of hands-on challenge that both gives engineering students real-life experience and looks good on resumes, Hyde said.

"I like knowing what the problem is and finding how to solve it," Flores said. "It's like an automobile company making a SUV and saying 'What if it's going 50 miles an hour and hits a pothole? What will break, what will go out of alignment?' I like finding the solution to that kind of problem and still having it stay aesthetic."

Valentine said, "It wasn't like looking at a table, for example, where you can just copy it," Valentine said. "This problem required something totally original. I'm someone who enjoys designing, then manufacturing the results."

Rosenberg said the team's design works perfectly, even functioning well in some recent high winds in Albuquerque.

"Their help was invaluable. I couldn't have built the carousel without Anthony and his students to design and build the insides," she said.

Junior racers getting ready

The lack of snowfall in Ruidoso hasn't been exactly great for business at local ski areas, but for Ruidoso's Junior Ski Racers, the show must go on. They've moved their headquarters from Sierra Blanca to Eagle Creek Ski Area.

"We've been working out at Eagle Creek," coach Jamie Temple said, "because of more manmade snow. I guess we've officially moved to the lower area."

New rep hosts town meeting

A small but rugged band of Ruidoso residents braved a snow storm and icy streets to attend the first town hall meeting of new state Rep. John Underwood.

Underwood, a Democrat, was elected state representative for District 56 in the November elections and he will report to Santa Fe at noon Tuesday, Jan. 15, for his first legislative session.

Health and gambling were among the variety of topics discussed during Underwood's town meeting.

Rep. Underwood said he'll maintain close contact with his constituents.

2001 offers opportunity and hope for the people of Lincoln County

A new year brings out the positive, occasionally humorous, goals of our movers and shakers

Some of the aspirations and resolutions of people in Lincoln County for 2001, compiled by Sandy Suggitt of the Ruidoso News staff:*

Ruidoso Municipal Court Judge Michael Line: To strive to live one day at a time and to take life as it comes and enjoy the privilege to be here. I head out at 8 in morning with that in mind and by 12 noon I don't know where it is.

Ugo DiDio, conductor of the Eastern New Mexico University-Ruidoso Orchestra: My aspirations would be that we develop a first-rate ensemble; an increase in the number of performers, an increase in string performers, and a greater dedication to practicing.

Betty Joiner, postmaster at the Glencoe Post Office: Buy about 10 more dogs; I've only got eight. I need 10 more dogs and four more horses; make the vegetable garden and the bread better this year (at the post office) and serve more bread. Maybe bring a cooker in.

Joan Park, county treasurer: One of my first (aspirations would be) that the county build its (cash) reserve. It's unfortunate that there's so much going on in the county doesn't have control of that saps the reserves, but my hope is that we would build some healthy reserves. Another thing, I've been looking to automate departments that are still doing (their work) manually. ... That the constituency knows that elected officials are there to serve them and we're trying our best to do that and will continue to do that.

Dick Wisner, Ruidoso River Association: I have two goals: One is to keep improving the fishery and the other is to make the downtown river trail a reality. Personally, I'm going to stop more to smell the roses. They may be contradictory goals.

Diana Billingsley, superintendent of Capitan Municipal Schools: To exercise more. For the school, to complete building projects and prepare for the new superintendent to come in July 2001.

Rafael Salas, director of Ruidoso Parks and Recreation Department: Personally, I'm looking to continue to educate and strengthen myself spiritually, physically and mentally; to set a good example to my (children) Cha-Cha doll, Esther, my beautiful baby, Cena, and my jewel, my son, Joel. Professional resolutions: To better serve my community. To develop new programs, a new, better structure of (meeting) department needs; I'm looking at development of new parks since we had some land donated — neighborhood park areas as well as looking at the Grindstone area, extension of trails, restoration of existing parks, new playground equipment; and more special events.

Sandra Ford, director, Lincoln County Humane Society: To get 1,000 members this year, more adoptions for our puppies and kitties and to convince everybody to spay or neuter their pets — or husbands or wives. I want all of our customers to be happy and nice to us.

Tom Stewart, Lincoln County manager: To be more patient, to educate myself further on the business of county government, and to have consistency of purpose and enjoy life more.

Ruidoso Mayor Robert Donaldson: Continued success for this village; onward and upward.

Martha Proctor, Lincoln County clerk: I pledge to encourage the spirit of cooperation, peace and harmony within our family of county government as well as with other entities. I've been pledging for 57 years to lose weight; I guess I'll pledge one more time.

Jim Stover, director of Emergency Medical Services for Ruidoso and Lincoln County: To get my son and daughter graduated from college and to get my daughter married off this summer and to be at the wedding. To thank an EMT every week for doing the job they do.

Joan Zagone, executive director of the Ruidoso Valley Chamber of Commerce: To remember that mortality is a kind of punctuation to life. I want to end mine with an exclamation mark!

Steve Havill, author and retired teacher: I hope a huge bookstore opens in Ruidoso. I plan to write more, but I do that every year.

Eddie Lerma, Ruidoso Downs police chief: I would like to expand the department just a little bit and reorganize in the sense that I would have two investigators. I'd like to see us go to a community policing program somehow (this is just a wish list) so we can further our partnership with our community, between police and them; and do the best we can to serve the community and continue that work ethic. Personally, I'd like to be more patient and be a better listener, be more organized — definitely be more organized.

Charles Rennick, Ruidoso assistant village attorney: I resolve to give the Shrub (G.W. Bush) a chance and respect him as president even though he wasn't elected, has no experience and precious little understanding of anything.

Tom Sullivan, Lincoln County sheriff: Quit smoking, lose weight, exercise more, and try to keep those at least through Jan. 15. For the Sheriff's Department, to try to replace our aging fleet and hire a couple more deputies so we can provide better service to our citizens. Those are the priorities right now; we'll see what comes later.

Ruidoso Downs Mayor Bob Miller: We'd like to see our water and sewer lines be upgraded, we'd like to start on a new village hall (we're slowly outgrowing the one we have) and we'd like to pay off some of the existing loans that the village has. We'd also like to have a new senior citizens center because we have outgrown this one. And we'd like to turn the current senior citizens center into a rec center for youth. We have already applied for a Community Development Block Grant for a new senior center. We'd like to complete our master plan for the All American Park. We have wonderful plans for that park, including a basketball court, volleyball court, tennis court, walking track and, maybe in a later phase, a skateboard park. The youth here waited a long time and currently we are working on the master plan and should have that completed within the next couple of months and then we can begin work on the basketball court.

Herb Brunnell, Ruidoso old-timer: Keep my car clean!

Bill Schwettman, Lincoln County commissioner: offered something for his fellow commissioners:

"These are predictions and resolutions, because in a group it's hard to resolve anything:

"Our commission chairman, Rex Wilson, will consider changing our meeting dates to better accommodate the citizens of Lincoln County. He is leaning towards meeting on Saturdays, Sundays and holidays as that is when the majority of people are not working.

"Commissioner Ray Nunley, the local Drug Czar, will not retire from politics in two years, he will maintain his public image by personally delivering prescriptions and naming Wednesdays "Double Pill Day," provided Sam Walton doesn't turn over in his grave.

"Commissioner Leo Martinez will consult with his 'aide de camp' and decide that being one of the good ol' boys isn't too bad after all.

"Commissioner Rick Simpson, the garbage king, will introduce legislation in Santa Fe to change our state motto to "Don't trash New Mexico — y'hear?"

"As to myself, I plan to be Sweet ol' Bill, as usual, and try to win the annual Lincoln County award for Mr. Nice and Mr. Congeniality for the ninth consecutive year.

"Best of everything to you and yours in 2001."

Smoking triples the risk of a common skin cancer, new research reveals LEIDEN, The Netherlands — Smoking more than triples the risk of developing squamous cell carcinoma, one of the most common forms of skin cancer, researchers from the Netherlands have shown.

A link between smoking and this common form of skin cancer has previously been made, but this is the first study to quantify a "substantial" risk, said the study's co-author, Jan Nico Bouwes Bavinck, MD, of the Leiden University Medical Center.

"Everybody realizes that sun exposure is a risk for skin cancer, but almost no one knows that smoking is also an important, and independent, risk factor," he said. "Smoking is now associated with an increasing number of cancers beyond lung cancer, such as bladder, head and neck, cervical and skin cancer."

His team of researchers compared the risk of smoking in 580 patients with different types of skin cancer, and in 396 people without skin cancer. The researchers found that smoking was only associated with development of squamous cell carcinoma, not basal cell carcinoma or melanoma.

The researchers concluded that current smokers were 3.3 times more likely to develop the cancer, and that the risk dropped to 1.9 in former smokers.

They also demonstrated a clear relationship between the number of cigarettes smoked and cancer risk. Those who smoked 1-10 cigarettes daily had a risk of 2.4; smoking 11-20 cigarettes a day increased the risk to 3.0, and those who smoked 21 or more cigarettes a day had a risk of 4.1. Pipe smokers were also at increased risk, but cigar smokers were not.

Although the researchers do not know why smoking increases the risk of that particular skin cancer, they theorize it damages DNA in skin tissue, leading to errant cell growth.

"Relation Between Smoking and Skin Cancer." J.N. Bouwes Bavinck, MD, et al.; Leiden University Medical Center, Leiden, the Netherlands. Vol. 19, No. 1, (January) 2001, pp. 231-238.

BUSINESS BRIEFS

Legislative 'business day' slated for session

It's the legislative time of the year, and Business Day in Santa Fe is Jan. 22-23, according to the Association of Commerce and Industry of New Mexico.

The ACL, Greater Albuquerque Chamber of Commerce, Economic Forum, New Mexico Chamber of Commerce Executives Association, Tourism Association of New Mexico and other business organizations are co-sponsoring the annual event.

Business Day in Santa Fe allows business people to discuss issues with members of the state Legislature and administrative leaders.

On Jan. 22 the Santa Fe County Chamber of Commerce will host a legislative reception from 5:30 p.m. to 7:30 p.m. at the Sweeney Convention Center. Legislators and members of the executive branch will attend. Local chambers of commerce from across the state will have booths that display their local communities.

On Jan. 23 the Business Day program will take place from 7 a.m. to 11 a.m. at the La Fonda Hotel. Business leaders will be briefed by Gov. Gary Johnson and legislative leaders of both parties.

Ruidoso Valley Chamber of Commerce executive director Joan Zagone will be part of the events. Zagone is the current president of the New Mexico Chamber of Commerce Executives Association.

After the presentation of elected officials, business lobbyists and government relations officials will provide updates on issues pertaining to water, economic development, education, health care, taxation and other issues. Later in the day a tour of the state capitol will take place, allowing participants to visit with their local lawmakers during and following the tour. Business Day cost is $15 for the Jan. 22 reception and $35 for Business Day itself. The cost of both events is $50.

The registration deadline is Jan. 15. Payments should be made to ACL, PO Box 9706, Albuquerque, NM, 87119-9706. For more information phone ACL at (505) 842-0644.

Dairy conference near

LAS CRUCES - An international video conference on the nutrient requirements of dairy cattle will be held Jan. 16-17 at New Mexico State University's Skeen Hall, the former Center for Sustainable Development of Arid Lands.

Presenters for the video symposium are members of the National Research Council subcommittee, which recently reviewed and updated national dairy cattle nutrient requirements.

"This is an excellent opportunity to learn about these new requirements for dairy cattle" said Mike Looper, dairy specialist with NMSU's Cooperative Extension Service. "The nutrient requirements had not been updated since 1989."

Looper said NMSU is one of the few satellite downlinks in the Southwest presenting the interactive conference, which originates from Iowa State University.

Subjects will include dry matter intake and feed management, transition cows, metabolic disorders, feed composition and other related topics.

In addition, Charles Sniffen, ruminant nutritionist and president of the Minor Institute in Chazy, N.Y., will be at the Las Cruces symposium to facilitate discussion and answer questions. Sniffen will also demonstrate ration evaluation software.

"Dr. Sniffen is an eminent dairy nutritionist and an excellent presenter," Looper said.

NMSU's Cooperative Extension Service and Monsanto Dairy Business are hosting the symposium. For more information, call the Extension animal resources department at (505) 646-3325.

Ruidoso Valley Chamber of Commerce executive director Joan Zagone (foreground) and Karon Petty, charged with conducting the Lincoln County Business Survey, confer on the survey. Among the findings: Ruidoso businesses largely said 2000 was an up year.

Not enough skilled labor and affordable housing top village's business problems

Ruidoso survey reveals major weaknesses - and some strengths

BY JAMES KALVELAGE
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

What's described as area skill and labor supply shortages are significant difficulties for half of Ruidoso businesses in hiring or retaining employees.

In addition, half of the business operators surveyed said a lack of affordable housing also makes it tough to recruit or hold workers.

These Ruidoso tabulations are the first from the Lincoln County Regional Business Survey tallied last fall.

While many said labor supplies and affordable housing were difficulties, a third of the businesses admitted wage rates were a significant problem in hiring, and another third said pay scales were somewhat significant.

The No. 1 method for finding new employees was word of mouth, followed by friends or other employees, and then newspaper ads. The last source for getting employees, out of eight categories, was job service or job training programs.

Once employees are hired, the top major problems for businesses were employee substance abuse, training, wage levels, employee motivation and employee absence.

Of the Ruidoso businesses that filled out the survey, 45 percent said they anticipated increasing the size of their work force over the next three years. Half said they would maintain their employee level.

Those anticipating more employees said business renovations or expansion, entering new markets, expanding share in existing markets, new products or service, or area growth were factors in the expected increase.

The average number of full-time employees among the Ruidoso businesses answering the survey was 6.58. Seasonal or part-time workers per business averaged 6.6.

Of non-management employees, 39 percent were paid $5 to $8 per hour. Another 41 percent received $8 to $12 hourly. For management employees just 13 percent made less than $8 an hour. About 30 percent were in the $8 to $12 hourly range. Those making $12 to $16 an hour represented 21 percent of management workers.

Better than one in four businesses said they offered employees no benefits. Almost a third said vacation and sick time were benefits for their workers. Just 19 percent provided a medical insurance plan. Retirement plans were offered by 11 percent of businesses.

Business was good in 2000. While 88 percent of Ruidoso responders said compared to the previous year business in 2000 was about the same, 41 percent said it was better. More than a third of those reporting better sales said business was up by 20 percent or more. Only 3 percent said business was off from the year before.

Reasons provided for the increase in business included not having competition, increased advertising, hiring new people, adding new products or services and increased customers.

Most believe Ruidoso is a suitable location for their businesses. Only 17 percent labeled the community as a fair or poor location to conduct business. More than half said Ruidoso was good. Better than one in four called it excellent.

On the subject of local services, airport facilities fall short, according to the business community. Nearly 75 percent classified the category as fair or poor. Other services receiving generally unfavorable assessments were cellular telephone service, public parking, sign regulations and street repair and maintenance.

The street issue found 45 percent stating repairs and maintenance as fair and 35 percent saying it was poor. Only 20 percent put street upkeep in the good-to-excellent classification.

Getting high marks on the local service front were the Ruidoso Valley Chamber of Commerce, churches, fire protection, medical services including ambulance service, and community organizations.

A vast majority of businesses said public parking in the downtown area of Ruidoso needs to be addressed. Almost three out of four agreed there was a need for a recreation/community center in Ruidoso. Most said Lincoln County needs more affordable entertainment for resident youth and families.

On the subject of government regulations, some businesses said licensing regulations and requirements were major problems. Also listed by some were zoning regulations and what was described as inconsistent regulations.

"I think the numbers speak for themselves," said Karon Petty, project manager for the survey. "I felt overall, throughout the county, businesses are thrilled to be living in Lincoln County and doing business in Lincoln County. In general, especially in Ruidoso, the business people are happy to be in business here." Nearly 1,000 of the 1,560 surveys delivered to businesses went to Ruidoso firms.

In Ruidoso, 440 businesses returned completed surveys.

"I'm really excited," Petty said of the survey. "I see lots of opportunity from this. It can be used by the chamber and lots of groups to provide information."

The Lincoln County Regional Business Survey was undertaken by the Ruidoso Valley Chamber of Commerce to get the pulse of the business community countywide. Complete survey tabulations, which will include all of Lincoln County, have been tabulated. The results will be available on a community by community basis and grouped together for the rural locations in the county. A separate information piece, a Lincoln County Business Directory, is expected to be compiled by the spring.

Coaching's pay-off

BY DEBBIE HAINES-INGALLS
FOR THE RUIDOSO NEWS

This part 3 of a 4-part series using "coaching" rather than just managing to move your employees and co-workers to make lasting changes.

because we all "have the answers in us" we discover for ourselves the avenues that create solutions that we will stick with.

The following questions, when answered honestly, will beg an answer and empower a person.

- Coaching questions:
- What would you like to have more of in your life/work life?
- What dreams/goals have you given up on?
- How would your life/work life be different if you had that or could achieve that?
- What questions should you be asking about that?
- What stops you from having it?
- How would having it affect the significant people/co-workers in your life? What's going on in your life/work life that you would like to change?
- What will it take to move forward from here?
- Where do you want to be in five years?
- What's life/work like when you get there? (A great visioning question.)
- If you go faster, will you catch up? (This asks the person to critically observe daily routine and the "clutter" in their schedule, and do what is truly important.)

Was there a time in your life/work life that was good? What worked then?

What's getting in the way? What's holding you back?

What changes would you like to make now?

What needs immediate attention?

What is the permanent solution?

Is there anything you could do to take control of your life/work life?

Have you considered...?

How would you feel differently about yourself/work life?

The answers to these questions will show you the real "why" of a situation. Who will the person become through doing this? Once the person begins to see the "who" they want to be, they will be able to set goals and action plans to meet their aspirations.

Becoming is a much stronger force than doing. Building awareness and responsibility in a person is the essence of good coaching. Awareness empowers a person.

Caution: If your coaching is advice or a command, the person may reject it, will not "buy into it," and this may lead to resentment. This empowers, gives hope and adds new possibilities to their life.

If you missed previous coaching columns or have questions about the process, call my "Coaching for Brilliance" office for copies at (505) 258-1102.

Domino's to open again

New owner takes over pizza shop franchise

A recently abandoned Domino's Pizza shop in Ruidoso is about to reopen.

The Sudderth Drive franchise closed in late August.

"We assumed the store was not going well, not making a profit," said Holly Ryan, public relations manager for Domino's. "This is relatively rare. We're a big success story," she said of the growing number of Domino's Pizza outlets.

In addition to the Ruidoso shop, a second Domino's, in Socorro, had its franchise license terminated. Both stores had been owned by the same partners.

Ryan said a new franchisee has taken over the two operations.

New franchise owner Keith Bowman said he hopes the pizza ovens at the Ruidoso franchise at 2919 Sudderth Drive will be fired up later this month.

Bowman said he has been involved with the Domino's operation for nearly seven years, running a Domino's operation in Alamogordo and supervising franchise operations largely in New Mexico.

When the Ruidoso franchise carry-out and delivery operation reopens Bowman anticipated hiring 15 to 20 employees.

He envisioned relocating the shop and perhaps eventually adding a dine-in section to the Domino's.

Sign of service

James Kalvelage/Ruidoso News

The new Ruidoso office of the Rio Hondo Chapter of the American Red Cross gets a sign donated by Signs by Smith. Sign technician Jeff Ammon bolts the sign in place. Sign company owner Don Smith, a volunteer firefighter, said he donated the sign because the Red Cross does so much for firefighters, such as providing meals and drinks when fire crews are called out.

ON THE GO WITH HANK AND ELLEN

Mammoth Lakes: California's Ruidoso

BY ELLEN AND HANK BARONE FOR THE RUIDOSO NEWS

Part 2 of 2

It's easy to associate California with endless summer, but for many who know better, it can also mean some of the country's best skiing.

With a whopping average of 383 inches of snow per year, 11,053-foot Mammoth Mountain, in a remote part of the Sierras, is a winter paradise. From its summit, it has a 3,100-foot vertical drop. "The Mountain," as the locals call it, is not the highest of North American ski resorts, but what makes it exceptional is its width.

The views are spectacular with snow-covered peaks surrounding the caldera (the whole valley is the remnant of a giant volcanic crater) on all sides. This is the land that Ansel Adams and John Muir made famous. Yosemite's granite peaks stand just a few miles to the northwest and the John Muir Wilderness Area begins immediately to the southwest.

The Barones

The town of Mammoth Lakes reminded us a lot of Ruidoso. Both are small mountain communities filled with friendly people. It's a slightly sleepy village in a pine forest with 300 sunny days a year.

Like Ruidoso, it's not easy to reach, situated three hours south of the airport in Reno, Nev. More than 90 percent of the resort's visitors come from Southern California, similar to the influx of Texans to Ruidoso. There are many fine restaurants, unique shops, expert outdoor outfitters and a public transportation system that can transport you to any part of town as well as the Mountain.

Originally called Mammoth City, it was a mid-1800s mining boomtown. Now, through the combined efforts of a British Columbia-based resort developer, Intrawest, the town of Mammoth Lakes and Mammoth Mountain it may see boom times again.

Intrawest owns 10 North American ski resorts, including Colorado's Copper Mountain and B.C.'s Whistler/Blackcomb.

They're in the third year of a 10-year plan to spend $850 million in development, including an airport to be finished by 2002. The new airport will be able to land Boeing 737s just four minutes out of town, making Mammoth skiing easily accessible for everyone.

The Sierras have some of the most precipitous elevation drops anywhere in the country. Not far away, 14,494-foot Mount Whitney, the highest mountain in the lower 48 states, plummets to 3,700 feet. The altitude also helps wring out moisture from cold fronts that blow in from the Pacific, resulting in dry, powdery snow — and a lot of it. In February of 1998, the Mountain had a resort-record 197 inches.

The beauty of skiing Mammoth Mountain — beyond the incomparable scenery, great exercise, and the opportunity to hang out with friends — is that no two days on the slopes are the same. The Mountain has 150 named runs on more than 3,500 skiable acres. Uphill capacity is 58,000 skiers per hour. In addition to alpine skiing and snowboarding, cross-country skiing, snow shoeing, snow mobiling, ice-skating and dogsledding are available.

For more information contact Mammoth Lakes at 888-GO-MAMMOTH. Lodging recommendation: Seasons 4 Mountain Resort (800-732-7664.)

The Barones are full-time travel writers and photographers operating out of their home in Alto. Their work appears in a wide variety of regional, national, and international publications.

firearm. Tam was credited for a month already spent in jail, placed on probation for 890 days, assessed fines and costs of $1,370, and ordered to attend 60 days of rehabilitation.

Sean P. Eskell, 38, Ruidoso, through a plea agreement, was convicted of third-offense DWI and a probation violation. Eskell was credited for 87 days spent at the Lincoln County Detention Center, placed on probation until March 16, 2002, and levied fines and costs totaling $949.

Avalos-Meza was credited for two days served at the Ruidoso jail, placed on probation for 178 days, assessed $526 in fines and costs and ordered held for the U.S. Border Patrol.

In Ruidoso Municipal Court with Judge Michael S. Line presiding, Lisa A. Mulrey, 33, Ruidoso, was convicted of first-offense driving under the influence of intoxicating liquor. Mulrey received a one-year suspended sentence of 30 days in jail and was assessed fines and court costs of $460.

Completion of new highway compounds problems

Downs conducting drainage survey

BY JAMES KALVELAGE RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

Ruidoso Downs officials are gathering information on drainage problems in the community.

While a recent workshop brought little in the way of resident input, officials said they have been gathering information about runoff and draining problems.

"Gladys (Dillard, village clerk) and other village officials have been going around looking, identifying spots with drainage problems," said Van Gulick, an engineer with Smith Engineering Inc. "There are a lot of problems, particularly with the new highway and with new development. I want to know from trustees, the streets department and from citizens what they think the problems are."

Van Gulick said before coming up with a plan to fix drainage problems an inventory of the problems is needed.

"Look at the 7.5 acres (village-purchased land at the east end of Ruidoso Downs). It's getting a lot more drainage," Van Gulick said at the Dec. 29 workshop.

A map of the village is helping to identify problem areas.

"The big problem, some areas miss the catch basins

Ruidoso Downs village councilor Bonnie Richardson, resident Jim Burrow, village engineer Paul Van Gulick, and code enforcement officer Tom Armstrong pinpointed drainage problems in the community during a recent workshop.

and it goes across the highway," Van Gulick said.

"They're not insurmountable problems."

Village code enforcement chief Tom Armstrong said some of the issue has involved materials going into culverts, eventually blocking the draining system.

Downs grant request refused

Ruidoso Downs has been denied consideration of a state grant for a new senior citizens center.

A letter to the mayor the New Mexico Department of Finance and Administration stated Ruidoso Downs received Community Development Block Grant funding toward a senior center in 1990. The community had received a $132,500 grant at that time toward a senior center.

"They felt 10 years was not long enough ago to fund another senior center," Gladys Dillard, village clerk, told trustees on Dec. 29. "In the meantime I'm asking them to look at the application one more time to see the needs of our community."

Dillard said use of the 10-year-old senior center has grown. A food program was begun in 1995 increasing the demand on the center.

The village had planned to construct a new center and turn the present senior building into a community/youth center.

REAL ESTATE UPDATE. BILL STROUD HOMEOWNER TAX WINNER. QUESTION: How did the homeowner fare under the latest change in the tax rules? ANSWER: May I say, Fantastic! The new law allows homeowners to avoid paying taxes on the first $250,000 of profits in a home if they are single, or on the first $500,000 of profits if they are married at the time they sell the home. Because a homeowner can use the exemption repeatedly, so long as he or she lives in each house for at least two years, most will never have to pay taxes on profits from home sales. This change exempts over 95% of home sales from capital gains taxes. Bill Stroud, Associate Broker with: S.O.P. Realtors & Co. (505) 287-5111 (505) 287-5213

With dazzling choreography by Hector Zaraspe, alluring costumes by Lucio Galano and the lush lighting of Richard Pilbrow, Tango Pasión offers two hours of virtuosity and refined sensuality where Argentina's native dance becomes a metaphor for all emotions.

The tango was born 100 years ago in the brothels of Buenos Aires and only became a socially acceptable ballroom dance at the turn of the last century. It is a mythical dance, tied to love and seduction. The tango swept the

Ruidoso choirs to perform for All-State Convention

The Ruidoso Chamber Chorale and Ruidoso Community Choir of Eastern New Mexico University-Ruidoso will perform at 8 p.m. at Pope Joy Hall on Wednesday, January 10 at New Mexico Educator's All-State Convention, an in-service for all music teachers. This is a free performance and is open to the public. The performance features 57 voices and is the choir's first at the All-State Convention and a first for the village of Ruidoso, as well as for any two-year college in New Mexico.

The ENMU-Ruidoso Community Choir began during the spring of 1992 under the direction of Danny Flores. The choir then had 14 members but grew over the years to about 65, and performances were held at the First Christian Church for many years.

Over the last nine years, the Community Choir has had more than 200 different singers from Ruidoso, Ruidoso Downs, Alto, Mescalero, Capitan, Lincoln and Carrizozo, ranging in age from 14 to 84. In 1996, Flores created a more select choir, the Ruidoso Chamber Chorale, with participation by audition only. Both choirs present a concert each fall and spring at the Spencer Theater for the Performing Arts.

Musicians from these choirs formed the basis of the choir ensemble for the Continental Harmony 2000 Project, in which Hawaiian composer Jerry Tanner provided music for "Keepers of the Land." The Ruidoso Chamber Chorale presents music for various civic organizations and activities and performed with Kurt Bestor's Orchestral Christmas on December 16 at the Spencer Theater.

The choirs recently were invited to participate in the Second Annual Christmas in South Korea Invitational Choral Festival to be held in Changwon, South Korea December 17-23.

Danny Flores, the conductor, is a native New Mexican, born and raised in Clayton where he graduated from high school in 1973. He was a choir and band student. A trained percussionist and woodwind player, Flores played and sang for four years in the Northeast District Band and Choirs in high school. He completed a bachelor of music education degree Summa Cum Laude with an instrumental emphasis in 1977 and a master of music degree in 1980, both at Eastern New Mexico University-Portales. Flores also was active in choral music in college, traveling to Mexico City to perform Beethoven's "Ninth Symphony" and the Verdi "Requiem" under Ronald Shirey. He serves as an adjudicator for many music festivals throughout the states of New Mexico, Arizona, Colorado, Texas, Florida and California.

Flores was the high school band and choir director with the Ruidoso schools through 1987. His students earned superior rating in concert, marching and solo competitions in the instrumental and choral areas. Many musicians in band and choir were selected to the New Mexico Music Educators All-State Choirs and Bands. His high school musical program traveled to Mexico City in 1980 and to Hawaii in 1984 to compete in music competitions and earned Division I, superior ratings.

Flores then became the high school band director for the Portales schools, teaching 300-plus students in grades 5 through 12 until 1989. He then served as the assistant high school principal in Portales until 1991. He was the vice principal at Ruidoso High School for five years and now serves as an elementary principal at Sierra Vista Primary in Ruidoso, teaching elementary group music to more than 400 students in his "spare time."

world in the 1920s with the songs of the legendary Carlos Gardel, and with Rudolph Valentino's smoldering tango scene in the film "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse."

Producer-director Mel Howard has created an evening peopled with characters from the different strata of Argentine society. Their interaction puts the dancing in context, builds drama and provides the subtext of the show's worldly humor. The music and dance on stage are authentic tango, while the ferocious emotions on display are clearly contemporary. The handsome young couples display intricacies of split-second timing where legs dart in and around each other with the flashing threat of so many snake tongues. They burn up the floor with their flawless variations of the tango — supremely elegant tango, passionate tango, tango to whip the blood.

"The only limit to the vocabulary of the tango, aside from certain rules of style and form, is the limits of your imagination and passion. The tango is the eternal battleground between a man and a woman, it is the definitive act of love in stylized form, of course," Howard said.

The powerful on-stage presence of the renowned Sexteto Mayor Orchestra, under the direction of Jose Libertella and Luis Stazo, is exhilarating. The musicians have been playing together for 27 years and their virtuosity is matched only by their complicity. The Sexteto Mayor alone is worth the price of admission as they perform compositions by Mores, Discepolo, Scarpino, Carlos Gardel, Jose Libertella and Astor Piazzolla.

Tango Pasión has played to standing ovations on such world famous stages as The Deutsches Opera in Berlin, the Theatre des Champs-Elysees in Paris, The Kremlin Theatre in Moscow, the Longacre Theatre on Broadway and in front of an audience of 15,000 people in honor of the 700th anniversary of the Grimaldi dynasty at the Stade Louis II in Monaco.

The Arts

Privileged to write

Story by
Sandy Suggitt

RAMONOS' EDITOR

Steve Havill's been busy with murder since he retired from teaching last spring. He finished writing BAG LIMIT — the latest Undersheriff Bill Gastner mystery — Thanksgiving weekend, and it's expected to be released in the fall. His seventh and eighth books, OUT OF SEASON and DEAD WEIGHT, were released in April 1999 and October 2000, respectively.

St. Martin's Press is the publisher of the nine hardcover books, and now the first three are in paper back by Poisoned Pen Press, and the fourth will be out this spring. Poisoned Pen Press will also bring out the fifth and sixth in paperback, and the seventh and eighth will be published by Worldwide Paperbacks.

A new element to the paperback series by Poisoned Pen Press is that Havill's gotten involved in the covers.

"My editor Robert Rosenwald at Poisoned Pen Press asked me if I had any ideas for the cover, if I had any photos that sort of represented the country as I saw it," he said. He did.

Sandy Suggitt

"I couldn't think of anything much more macabre than opening a possible grave on a starless, motionless, wind-swept December night. I gave Linda Rael a choice — the safe, warm comfort of a locked patrol car or the dark, cold, blustery pasture."

Steven F. Havill, Twice Buried

The cover for Heartshot comes from a photo Havill took looking over the Capitan Mountains, and his own radio-controlled airplane flies overhead, simulating the plane used to move drugs outside of the fictional town of Posadas in the novel.

Lincoln County is featured in all the photos used for the covers of the first six paperbacks (except that for Bitter Recoil, which was taken in Nevada). Twice Buried's cover photo includes Havill's own red-handled shovel in his own back yard in Lincoln.

The police car in the cover of Privileged to Kill is Havill's Suburban, and Rosenwald added the red police light bar by computer. Leif Ancker, from Lincoln, is shown pushing an old bike with a flat tire that belongs to another Lincoln local, Matt Borowski.

"This grama grass was just so Lincoln County and so Posadas," Havill said.

Havill appears to have a trick up his sleeve for readers of his Gastner novels — and they'll have to read Bag Limit to find out where the series is going, he said.

Meanwhile, he's been working on the next mystery series and on the medical novel that takes place in 1896. Switching from the aging undersheriff Gastner to a female physician who wants to specialize in the treatment of trauma has involved about three years of research, but Havill said he doesn't have any trouble writing a different sort of story — and it's not much different from being asked to switch from teaching sixth grade one year and eighth grade the next.

"I just started it," he said, "since I 'changed jobs,'" he said referring to his 25-year teaching career. "I've been doing lots more writing, which is why I changed jobs. ... Now I can write every day because I don't have to get up and go to Ruidoso."

Havill said he gets up at 5 to start writing and "keeps regular office hours."

"It's a much more productive way to write. It was hard to try to squeeze writing into weekends back when I was teaching."

He taught nine years in Ruidoso, 12 years in Grants and four in a Catholic School in upstate New York.

As far as being distracted by leaky faucets at home that need fixing, he said, he's not easily distracted by home repairs — or the telephone ringing.

"I have no trouble starting and stopping work. If the phone rings, I can start and stop. I'm used to eighth-graders where nothing is done for more than 30 seconds at a time, so in that respect, 25 years is wonderful training for this."

He still teaches — 50 adults students by correspondence through the Writer's Digest School of Writing novel-writing workshop, and he's considering putting together a workshop on writing locally.

The biggest surprise he's had since he began writing full time has been the extra hour and a half a day on the road between Lincoln and Ruidoso.

"To be handed that hour and a half, when you do the math, it's like being handed an eighth work day every week," he said. "That's been absolutely wonderful."

He doesn't miss the "preoccupation with paperwork and with what the State Board of Education thinks," he said, but he does miss "when kids take an idea and go with it."

"I walk to the post office every day, a point-six mile morning ritual to take a work break and sample the weather," he said. "When you're not being harassed by class bells and not wondering who's fighting or kissing with whom out in the halls, there's a lot of time. It's amazing how much time a career takes out of your day."

Perhaps because of all the extra time, Havill's latest book in the Gastner series, Bag Limit, is also the longest book, at 108,000 words. Being able to focus on the story every day helped, he said.

But he doesn't give himself a daily quota for how many pages he has to write before he can go out and do something, and his output varies from day to day.

"I don't like to sit in front of the computer for hours and hours and hours, so I'm always out of there by noon, usually before."

Until The Aspen Tree bookstore closed, Havill was the bestselling author the owners had there. Havill laments that there are no big bookstores in Ruidoso — and thus no venues for book signings. He's been busy traveling to sign books in Scottsdale, Tucson, Durango, Taos, Las Cruces, Farmington and Roswell, and will be signing books at Waldenbooks in Las Cruces January 13.

He said the Internet has helped to sell his books and that Amazon and Barnes and Noble even list his unprinted paperbacks. His out-of-print first book, Heartshot, is listed at $300 on the Internet.

"There are readers who are really on top of it," Havill said. "I had one who called me asking if he could send it to me to sign. He does it with every book."

His books are still available locally at 3 Bar D Ace Hardware and Mercantile in Capitan.

Art in Public Places deadline nears

The deadline is January 11 for the Art in Public Places Program's Purchase Only Program to purchase a statewide public art collection of the highest caliber reflecting the cultural, ethnic and artistic diversity of New Mexico's artists. This program provides an opportunity for artists to sell artwork priced up to $6,600.

About 100 sites around the state with 1-percent-for-public-art funds will purchase a variety of interior and exterior two- and three-dimensional artwork for about 100 public buildings. Regional Buying Committees seek a wide variety of quality, existing artwork in all media and styles, not theme-related or site-specific work. Each site may purchase one or more works and New Mexico Arts will pay for professional, archival framing and installation, although artists are responsible for materials, taxes and documentation of the artwork.

Artists will submit one set of slides of artwork that is available for sale. Submissions will be screened by a selection committee before being viewed by each geographic Regional Buying Committee. Send a current resume and up to 10 slides of unframed work. All information should be provided on the front of the slide: artist's full name, title of the work, price and arrow indicating the top of the image, and a red dot in the lower left corner. Slides should be numbered in the order you would like them projected. All slides must be placed in a 9x11 plastic slide sheet. Please avoid using adhesive labels on slides.

Include a one-page 8 1/2 by 11-inch slide list suitable for copying, listing the number of the slide, title, media dimensions, price and a short description of each work of art. Your name should appear at the top of the slide list. Enclose a self-addressed stamped envelope large enough for the return of your submission materials.

The selection and buying committees will review submissions from February through April and will notify artists of purchases in May. The artwork will be delivered in the summer. Submissions must be received by 5 p.m. on Jan. 11 (this is not a postmark deadline). Mail or deliver to New Mexico Arts, Art in Public Places, 228 East Palace Avenue, fourth floor, Santa Fe, NM 87504, Attn: Purchase Only. Questions may be directed to Karen Rudd, program director at (505) 890-5453 or (800) 879-4278 or (505) 827-6490.

Torres featured in magazine

Oklahoma City — An article on Jordan Torres of Mescalero is featured in the current issue of Persimmon Hill, the official publication of the National Cowboy and Western Heritage Museum in Oklahoma City, Oklahoma. The article was written by Johnny D. Boggs, a free-lance writer and photographer who resides in Santa Fe.

In his article, "Jordan Torres: Sculpting the Apache Story," Boggs writes, "The only thing Jordan Torres knows for sure is his sculptures show the Apache way of life, either bears, buffalo, horses, and eagles or medicine men, warriors, maidens. He has no idea what he'll end up creating. It all depends on the stone."

"Torres blends realism with abstraction, but his faces are almost always realistic. Torres points out there are few Apache artists. A descendant of Chiricahua leaders Cochise and Naiche, Torres finds himself still learning about his heritage. Although he works with the Hon Dah House Gallery in Tombstone, Arizona, he prefers to sell directly to customers. Humvee satisfies a man's lust for winches

Dave Barry
DAVE'S WORLD
TRIBUNE MEDIA SERVICES

It is time for our popular feature "Stuff That Guys Need." Today's topic is: The Humvee.

Most Americans became aware of the Humvee (military shorthand for Hugely Masculine VEEhicle) during the Gulf War, when U.S. troops, driving Humvees equipped with missile launchers, kicked Iraq's butt and taught Saddam Hussein a lesson that he would not forget for several weeks. After the war, a few wealthy Californians got hold of Humvees. This led to some mishaps, most notably when Arnold Schwarzenegger, attempting to open his garage door, accidentally launched a missile. Fortunately, it landed in a non-celebrity neighborhood.

But once the "bugs" were ironed out, the Humvee became available for civilian purchase. I test-drove one recently thanks to my co-worker Terry Jackson, who is the Miami Herald's automotive writer and TV critic. That's correct: This man gets paid to drive new cars AND watch television. If he ever dies and goes to heaven, it's going to be a big letdown.

When I arrived at Terry's house, there was a bright-yellow Humvee sitting in his driveway, covered with puddles of drool deposited by passing guys. In terms of styling, the Humvee is as masculine as a vehicle can get without actually growing hair in its wheel wells. It's a big, boxy thing with giant tires and many studly mechanical protuberances. It looks like something you'd buy as part of a toy action-figure set called "Sergeant Bart Groin and His Pain Platoon." Terry told me this particular Humvee model cost $101,000, which sounds like a lot of money until you consider its features. For example, it has dashboard switches that enable you to inflate or deflate your tires as you drive. Is that cool, or WHAT? In a perfect guy universe, this feature would seriously impress women.

GUY: Look! I can inflate the tires as I drive!

WOMAN: Pull over right now, so we can engage in wanton carnality!

Unfortunately, the real world doesn't work this way. I know this because when I took my wife for a ride in the Humvee, we had this conversation:

ME: Look! I can inflate the tires as I drive!

MY WIFE: Why?

Another feature that my wife did not appreciate was the winch. This Humvee had a SERIOUS winch in front ("It can pull down a house," noted Terry). There's nothing like the feeling of sitting in traffic, knowing that you have a MUCH bigger winch than any of the guys around you.

Plus, a winch can be mighty handy in an emergency. Like, suppose some jerk runs you off the road, into a ditch. After a tow truck pulls you out, you could find out where the jerk lives, then use your winch to pull down his house.

The Humvee also boasts an engine. Terry offered to show it to me, but I have a strict policy of not looking at engines, because whenever I do, a mechanic appears and says "There's your problem right there" and charges me $758. I can tell you this, however: The Humvee engine is LOUD. I picture dozens of sweating men under the hood, furiously shoveling coal as Leonardo DiCaprio and Kate Winslet run gaily past.

As for comfort: Despite the Humvee's ruggedness, when it's cruising on the highway, the "ride" is surprisingly similar to that of a full-size luxury sedan being dragged across a boulder field on its roof. But a truly masculine, big-winch-ed man does not need comfort. All he needs is the knowledge that he can take his vehicle into harsh and unforgiving terrain. And I gave the Humvee the toughest challenge you can give a car in America. That's right: I drove it to a shopping mall just before Christmas.

Perhaps you think I was foolhardy. Well, people said that the Portuguese explorer Vasco da Gama was foolhardy, too, and do you remember what he did? Neither do I. But if he had not done it, I doubt that Portugal would be what it is today: A leading producer of cork.

"It looks like something you'd buy as part of a toy action-figure set called 'Sergeant Bart Groin and His Pain Platoon.'"

And thus I found myself piloting the Humvee through the mall parking structure at roughly the speed of soybean growth, knowing that I was competing for the one available parking space with roughly 20,000 other motorists, but also knowing that ALL of them would have to stop their vehicles if they wanted to inflate or deflate their tires. The pathetic wimps! I could not help but cackle in a manly way. My wife was rolling her eyes at me, but by God I got us safely into and out of there, and I doubt that I used more than 300 gallons of fuel. So Saddam, if you're reading this, please send more.

HISTORIAN,
THE HUBBARD MUSEUM
OF THE AMERICAN WEST

1883

On the 12th of September, Socorro rancher and self-proclaimed badman, Joel Fowler, lived up to his own expectations and killed a man. It seems the fellow had the poor judgment to disagree with Fowler when Joel had been drinking.

The year 1883, in comparison to some other years in the latter half of the 19th century, was fairly tame — but not completely. There was an inordinate number of stagecoach robberies and a few other events of note, including the formation of the so-called "Dodge City Peace Commission."

In November of 1883, the United States government formally adopted Standard Time, which divided the nation into Eastern, Central, Mountain and Pacific time zones, a fact that I am sure you were all just dying to know.

WILD BILL HICKOK

January-May, 1883

On the 22nd of January, in Nevada, an express guard named Aaron Ross became something of a hero when he managed to survive repeated attempts by a group of five bandits to gain violent entrance (i.e.: guns, explosives) to the express car that he had been assigned to protect. Ross was forever after known as "Hold the Fort" Ross.

The 17th of March — St. Patrick's Day — saw the robbery of the Maricopa and Prescott mail stage near Bumble Bee, Arizona, where the Wells Fargo box was "liberated." The following month, on the 12th, the ever-industrious Black Bart robbed the stagecoach about five miles outside of Cloverdale, California.

On the first of May, Buffalo Bill Cody staged his first "Wild West" show, at Omaha, Nebraska, a place where the Wild West had, until quite recently, really been quite wild. Cody's friend, Wild Bill Hickok, had attempted the same business venture over a decade before. When Wild Bill brought his Wild West show to Niagara Falls, New York, things couldn't have gone much more wrong than they did, partially because Wild Bill was a much better gunman than a businessman. The six buffalo that Hickok had captured for the show managed to free themselves and, with the crowd romping boisterously around the arena, Wild Bill could only watch helplessly as the huge shaggy beasts headed for downtown Niagara Falls, where they eventually became specialty items at the local cafes. Hickok, disgusted with his earnings (less than $125), headed back west, where, in August of 1876, he passed into legend himself when a moronic no-account by the name of Jack McCall shot the legendary gunman from behind. To this day, the poker hand Wild Bill was holding when he was shot — aces and eights — is known as the "Dead Man's Hand."

June-July, 1883

Professional gambler/gunman Luke Short had been having some difficulty dealing with the political powers in Dodge City, Kansas. It seems that the local politicians were coming down hard on Luke's gambling and entertainment establishment, which was one thing. It was quite another when Luke discovered that similar establishments owned by the same politicians were not subject to the same laws that kept his place quiet — much more quiet than Luke would have liked. When he complained about it, he was threatened both legislatively and physically.

Well, Luke was not without friends, which was something that the politicians should have considered. Among those who felt that Luke was being treated unjustly were such noted frontier characters as Neal Brown, Shotgun Collins, Charlie Bassett, Bat Masterson and Wyatt Earp — just to name a few. And none of these fellows were noted characters because they lacked gumption ...

One by one they drifted into Dodge, all wearing appropriately sepulchral, in fact funereal, expressions on their faces. These expressions were designed to get the attention of Luke's enemies, which they did. Suddenly, all was forgiven. In her later recollections, Josephine Earp, Wyatt's wife, remembered the situation as being rather comical once everyone realized that no violence would come of it. Not all of them, but a group of these men went and had their picture taken, which they dubbed the "Dodge City Peace Commission."

Despite the fact that most of these men had been lawmen at one time or another and they really had created a peaceful situation out of a potentially violent one, the title of "Dodge City Peace Commission" was most definitely a joke. A more appropriate title would have been the "Dodge City Intimidation Commission." Whatever the case, the June 5th photo is one of the most famous pictures of a group of western lawmen ever taken.

On the 23rd of June, Black Bart, never one for laziness, robbed a stagecoach about four miles outside of Jackson, California. Bart's modus operandi was almost always the same: wearing a linen duster and a sack over his head with slits for eye holes, he would wait for a stage to top a steep grade where the horses would be tired and straining. He then stepped into the road directly in front of the oncoming vehicle, brandishing a double barreled shotgun. When he ordered the driver and guard to "Throw down the box," his command was almost instantly obeyed. No one was particularly interested in arguing with a man pointing a shotgun at them ... but time was running out for the famed stage robber.

Bart also considered himself to be something of a poet, occasionally leaving bits of doggerel for the authorities to puzzle over. Here's a sample:

"Here I lay me down to sleep
To wait the coming morrow,
Perhaps success, perhaps defeat,
And everlasting sorrow,
Yet come what will, I'll try it once,
My condition can't be worse,
And if there's money in that box,
'Tis munney (sic) in my purse,
I've labored long and hard for bread,
For honor and for riches,
But on my corns too long you've tread,
You fine-haired sons of bitches!"

When he was finally caught, he was not in the least what anyone expected. In his 50s, tall and distinguished looking, Bart prompted legendary California lawman Harry Morse to comment that "he looked anything but a stage robber."

On the 27th of June, in central Arizona, the Black Canyon stagecoach was robbed — not by Black Bart. On the first of July, the same stage was robbed again. Black Bart didn't do it that time, either.

It is no wonder that stagecoach companies had so many undercover operatives, considering the incredible number of robberies perpetrated against them. On the 10th of July, two ne'er-do-wells named Joe Tuttle and Len Redfield robbed the Florence-Globe, Arizona stagecoach, killing a guard in the process. On the 3rd of September, these two were sent to their "reward" when vigilantes "jerked them to Jesus."

On the 21st, in something of a coup for lawmen, two of the men who robbed the Black Canyon stage (twice!) were caught, with one of them being identified as the village blacksmith at nearby Gillett, Arizona.

August-October, 1883

As you have undoubtedly noticed, the year 1883 was incredibly popular with outlaws who enjoyed robbing stagecoaches, and it seems they couldn't rob enough of them. On August 12th, not one, but two stages were robbed on the same night. The Prescott-Ashfork stage was held up without violence, but the same could not be said of the Florence-Globe stage robbery. During that one, the Wells Fargo Express Messenger was gunned down by the outlaws.

On the 12th of September, Socorro rancher and self-proclaimed badman, Joel Fowler, lived up to his own expectations and killed a man. It seems the fellow had the poor judgment to disagree with Fowler when Joel had been drinking.

The 4th of October was a good day for the forces of law and order. On that day, lawmen cornered the outlaws who had robbed the Florence-Globe stagecoach and in the ensuing gun battle, two of the bad guys met their Maker.

November-December, 1883

Three miles outside of Copperopolis, California, Black Bart finally got his comeuppance. When he attempted to rob the Sonora-Milton stagecoach at a place called Funk Hill, which, incidentally, was the site of his very first robbery eight years earlier, the stage driver grabbed a Henry rifle that belonged to a young hunter who was one of the passengers, and opened fire on Bart. He missed twice before the hunter snatched the rifle out of his hands and took a shot at the fleeing outlaw. Bart stumbled, dropping some items he was carrying and then disappeared into the brush.

Later, at the site, an alert lawman found a handkerchief that the outlaw had dropped and Bart was eventually captured through the laundry mark on it.

On the 6th of November, Joel Fowler was celebrating the sale of his ranch (reportedly in excess of fifty grand!) and part of that celebration seems to have involved killing one of his drinking buddies, a fellow by the name of Jim Cale. The Authorities, who were growing ever so weary of Joel's antics, refused bail. About two months later, local citizens who were, apparently, even wearier than the Authorities of Joel's indiscretions, removed him from the calaboose and decorated a tree with him.

Black Bart was sentenced to six years in prison on the 17th of November, after pleading guilty to the stage robbery at San Andreas, California. He was a model prisoner and when he was released, the legendary bandit vanished into obscurity.

On the 8th of December, five hardcases rode into Bisbee, Arizona, and held up Goldwater and Castenada Store at that place. Things didn't go well and, after a wild gun battle that left four citizens dead (one was a pregnant woman hit by a stray bullet), the outlaws thundered out of town. It became known as the Bisbee Massacre and all of the bandits were eventually caught and hanged, which is, of course, a whole other story.
