Capitan player critical

Raymond Zamora, a Capitan High junior, underwent brain surgery at El Paso's Thomason Hospital.

RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

Capitan High School football player Raymond Zamora was critically injured after taking a hit during his team's game against El Paso-Anthony Friday-night.

Zamora, a junior, was taken to Thomason Hospital in El Paso, where he had a blood clot removed from his brain. Capitan head coach Ed Davis said Monday. He was still unconscious and listed in critical condition in the intensive care unit Tuesday, according to Bernie Nevarez, administrator on duty at Thomason.

Davis said Zamora had also had emergency surgery Monday to relieve pressure on his brain.

Zamora was returning a punt near the end of the first quarter when he was tackled by an Anthony defender. Davis said Zamora was hit around the waist and that no one saw a blow to the head.

Davis said he looked at game film after the contest, but that the film quality at the time of the hit was poor and that he could not see anything that appeared to cause the injury.

"This is part of life," Davis said, "this is a game. We're suppose to be playing for fun. We're not suppose to have one of our comrades fighting for his life."

The coach said that all of Zamora's teammates had visited him in El Paso since the injury.

For those who would like to help out the Zamora family, an account has been set up at First National Bank called Benefit for Raymond Zamora.

"They're just shook up," he said. Capitan lost the game 34-0.

A similar injury occurred Friday in Tularosa when Dexter High School player Julian Chavez was hurt during a game between the two teams. Chavez was also taken to Thomason, where he had a blood clot removed from his brain.

Red, white and blue cast a different glow on Aspenfest during the annual parade Saturday, with nearly every float, fire truck (including a smoky old American LaFrance from Fort Stanton) and marching unit making their feelings known about their country. At left, drums kept the beat for the Ruidoso High School 24 Karat Gold band.

No dropouts in Corona, Hondo

BY SANDY SUGGITT
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

Corona and Hondo school districts were among only 11 in New Mexico to report no dropouts in grades 9-12 for the 1999-2000 school year.

Travis Lightfoot, superintendent of the Corona School District, said this has been the case for a couple of years. He attributes it to students, parents and staff members who are dedicated to education.

"We only have about 80 students, K through 12, and last year graduated six seniors and all six are attending a four-year university," Lightfoot said. "In the event that we ever do have a dropout, it looks negative, even if we have one, the dropout percentage is dramatically increased."

Hondo has had a low dropout rate since 1988 or 1989, said John MacCallum, superintendent of schools there.

"We can pay a lot more attention to kids than a larger school does, where they kind of get lost in the mix," he said. "When we do lose a kid, it's almost always to another district ... Smaller schools have the ability to work more with kids that are looking at dropping out, and we know their parents and grandparents, and just have more contact with them."

Ruidoso's dropout rate was 4.9 percent, with 36 dropouts; Capitan's was 3.6 percent with seven dropouts; and Carrizozo's was 6.1 percent with five dropouts. Statewide, the dropout rate was 6 percent, down from 7 percent in 1998-99 and 10.4 percent in 1988-89.

According to the National Center for Education Statistics, dropout rates have decreased 5 to 6.1 percent over the last two decades.

"We can pay a lot more attention to kids than a larger school does, where they kind of get lost in the mix."

Former Ruidoso Downs police chief takes parting shots at village

Eddie Lerma said it was better to resign than to wait to be fired.

BY SANDY SUGGITT
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

The Ruidoso Downs police chief resigned effective Oct. 5, saying he didn't feel wanted by the village administration and would "rather leave now than get terminated for poor performance."

Former Police Chief Eddie Lerma stated in his resignation letter to Mayor Bob Miller that he felt it was a "slap in the face" when the 30 years of experience of the then-prospective village clerk was taken into consideration for her salary, and his experience and considerably more training were not given similar consideration.

Lerma also said he was the only department head not approved for overtime, even though at least 40 percent of his time is doing the work of the force.

Ruidoso Downs Mayor Bob Miller referred questions to village attorney Daniel Bryant, who did not immediately return a telephone call seeking comment.

"Counsel for the village, in a workshop, even informed our trustees that all department heads were working supervisors' and entitled to overtime," he wrote. "This, as it relates to me, has been ignored."

"I have had to tolerate the constant, meaningless, frivolous and always without merit complaining of the Village of Ruidoso Downs municipal judge," the letter concludes.

Lerma said in an interview that Judge Harold Mansell was displeased with two of the police officers and, in Lerma's opinion, was always singling them out for violations of policy that turned out not to be violations.

Another complaint was that the police department did not write enough tickets.

Lerma, who accepted a position with the Tularosa Police Department, said his first goal when he replaced David Hightower as Ruidoso Downs police chief in January of 2000 was to reduce the number of traffic accidents.

He said he beefed up traffic enforcement, wrote a lot of tickets and reduced the accidents by 50 percent.

Lerma said there had not been one tort claim served on the village under his administration because he dealt with the liability issues he had inherited.

Lerma came to Ruidoso Downs after serving as undersheriff in Doña Ana County.

In 1997, the county paid $233,000 to settle a lawsuit brought by two United Parcel Service employees who were injured when Lerma's patrol car rear-ended their delivery van on Interstate 10 north of Las Cruces.

Criminal charges against Lerma were dismissed.

Lerma, who suffered a broken pelvis and a broken arm in the wreck, claimed he was in a high-speed pursuit at the time, but witnesses told investigators they never saw the vehicle Lerma said he was pursuing.

Flu vaccine running late again

BY DIANNE STALLINGS
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

For the second consecutive year, flu vaccine will be arriving later than usual.

In the past, Lincoln County residents lined up for their shots in October, but last year, the vaccine didn't arrive until mid-November and it looks like this year will repeat that schedule, according to the New Mexico Department of Health.

Dr. Suzanne Westman, department spokesman, said state officials learned through the U.S. Centers for Disease Control that because of a difficulty in culturing one of the three strains of influenza found in this year's virus, delivery will be delayed nationwide for the 2001-2002 flu season.

"We're not anticipating a shortage of flu shots, just a delay," she said. "Some providers already have a small percentage of their flu shots and are notifying their patients. Most providers, including the DOH expect to receive the bulk of their flu shots in November."

Theresa Luna, who heads the public health department in Lincoln County, said she doesn't expect the vaccine before Oct. 30.

"We'll schedule a health fair after the vaccine arrives," Luna said. "As usual, we'll work in cooperation with other health agencies in the community so that residents can stop at one place to receive their vaccinations, test their blood pressure and measure their glucose and sugar levels, as well as other services that may be offered."

If she's notified that the vaccine will arrive later than planned, she will alert the public, Luna said.

Although the severity of this year's flu season can't be predicted, nothing indicates a season more severe than normal, Westman said.

New Mexico's flu season starts later in the year than most states, sometime from late January through early February, she said.

"Even if you get a flu shot as late as December, you will be protected," she said.

The most vulnerable population of the state will have access first, Westman said.

"We are recommending that the first individuals to receive the flu shots are those with chronic diseases, those older than 65 and healthcare providers.

"The next group to be immunized will be family members or those people in close contact with high risk individuals."

This is the second year of a cooperative public-private effort to ensure that high risk patients receive the vaccine first, she said.

In the United States, an estimated 10 percent to 20 percent of people develop influenza each year with about 20,000 dying. Ninety percent of those are 65 or older. More than 130,000 are hospitalized. In New Mexico, complications from influenza and pneumonia are the sixth leading cause of deaths for adults.

"Even if you get a flu shot as late as December, you will be protected."

Rancher: Plan ahead for water

BY DIANNE STALLINGS
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

Lincoln County officials should heed symptoms of possible water problems and not wait until the county or portions of it are pronounced dead for future growth.

Sally Canning, a Capitan rancher, noxious weed specialist and water activist, reported to county commissioners last week on a water conference in Santa Fe.

Choices must be made, preferably by the average resident and not people with financial control in the community or by professionals with no feel for the area, she said.

People, as represented by commissioners, have to decide what uses deserve water and would best serve the county - subdivisions, golf courses, agriculture or others, she said.

"I would like to see water rights transfers go through the county commissioners," Canning said. "Right now, major developers are in charge of planning for our counties. We need to set limits for growth. How many golf courses and motels do we want, and do we want ranches and agricultural land? Do we want rural or urban growth?"

"I think you should pass an ordinance or at least a resolution that you have a right to look at all transfers and if they don't meet your criteria, you have a right to object to the State Engineer."

Currently, the State Engineer decides what transfers will be approved based on impacts to other water rights owners and the community.

"Water is being sold to the highest bidder," Canning said. "It should go to the most beneficial use."

If a community doesn't plan on how its water will be used, it could end up with a lack of water that limits its growth, she said.

When water rights are transferred from one community such as Lincoln, and moved to another area, the result is that growth is constricted in Lincoln by the water rights lost, she asserted.

Already people in that community complain there isn't enough water to provide for the 70,000 tourists who visit annually, and to meet the needs of the few year-around residents, she pointed out.

At the conference in Santa Fe, Bill Travis, Ph.D. from the University of Colorado predicted that the majority of growth in the next 40 years will be around streams and river bottoms.

In some cases, the federal Endangered Species Act becomes the resource planner, dictating what areas may or may not be developed, Canning said.

An issue sure to end up in federal court is the assertion by the former Clinton administration that all Native American tribal waters belong to the federal government, she said.

Some of the most alarming news was that shallow water areas like Lincoln County have higher depletion rates, she said. Constant monitoring is needed in different areas of the county to determine water usage.

One of her recommendations was not to wait for the U.S. Geological Survey team to develop a hydrological model for the county because it could take three years before any usable data is available.

County Manager Tom Stewart said the commission has set aside $60,000 for a water study, but has not committed to the USGS.

"We may go out for RFPs (requests for proposals) and see who else is interested," he said.

But Canning said that still will take a long time.

MAGISTRATE COURT

Robert Duane Boyle, 43, of Ruidoso Downs, was found guilty of aggravated battery, a misdemeanor, and a felony charge of kidnapping and aggravated battery was dismissed Sept. 19 by Magistrate Court Judge William R. Butts.

Boyle was sentenced to 364 days in jail with credit for time served and shall remain incarcerated until Oct. 19, for a total of 36 days at Lincoln County Detention Center, probation to expire Sept. 13, 2002, and shall report to The Counseling Center on Oct. 20 for anger management and substance abuse counseling and follow recommendations.

On Sept. 18, Richard Dean, 40, of Ruidoso was found guilty of first-offense driving while intoxicated and given a 90-day suspended jail sentence, 90 days of probation, and charged a $300 fine and $199 in costs.

Traci D. Bice, 27, of Ruidoso, was found guilty on Sept. 17 of attempting to issue a worthless check for more than $25, a misdemeanor.

She was sentenced to 90 days jail, deferred, 90 days probation with a conditional discharge, restitution of $139.52 made to Thriftway and $51 in costs.

Magistrate Court Judge William R. Butts found William B. Moody, 47, of Ruidoso, guilty of second-offense driving while intoxicated on Sept. 17.

Butts sentenced him to 364 days in jail, suspended, 361 days probation, credit for three days served at Lincoln County Detention Center, a $500 fine and $199 costs, $100 for the bench warrant fee and 48 hours of community service.

Francis Blake, 20, of Mescalero was found guilty of a minor consuming or possessing alcohol and failure to appear in court.

Blake was given credit for six days jail served at Lincoln County Detention Center and was sentenced a $100 fine, $51 in costs, $100 for the bench warrant fee and 30 hours of community service.

Kevin L. Perrin, 39, of Breckenridge, Texas, was found guilty of first-offense driving while intoxicated, and one count of speeding, driving 47 mph in a 35-mph zone.

He was sentenced for the first count to 90 days with 90 days suspended, 90 days probation, a $200 fine and $199 costs; for the second count, he was fined $25 and $89 in costs.

IDENTIFYING VISUAL IMPAIRMENT
DIABETIC RETINOPATHY

Diabetic retinopathy is caused when the small blood vessels that nourish the eye's light sensitive retina become weakened or damaged due to diabetes. Since the disease can cause blindness if untreated, early diagnosis and treatment is essential. If you are diabetic or have a family history of diabetes, it is important that you receive a comprehensive eye examination annually. To detect diabetic retinopathy, your doctor uses a special instrument called an ophthalmoscope to look inside your eyes. This instrument lights and magnifies the blood vessels in your eyes. The interior of our eyes may also be photographed to provide additional information.

The beginning stages of diabetic retinopathy may cause blurring in the central field of vision or it may be in your side vision depending on the areas affected by weakened blood vessels. As diabetic retinopathy progresses, you may notice a cloudiness in your vision, blind spots or floaters. In more advanced stages, scar tissue may form causing additional distortion. Over time this scar tissue can shrink and detach the retina by pulling it toward the center of the eye. Once diabetic retinopathy has been detected, your optometrist may recommend laser or other surgery to reduce the progression of the disease.

As a diabetic, or a person at risk, it is important to take steps to prevent the development of diabetic retinopathy. Take your prescribed medication as instructed, follow a proper diet, exercise regularly and have your eyes examined annually. We invite you to stop by Family Vision Center, 159 Mescalero Trail, if you have questions concerning diabetes and your eyes, cataracts, glaucoma or macular degeneration. Take care of your eyes, they're the only ones you'll ever have.

ETZ board out to revamp regulations

BY DIANNE STALLINGS
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

When Kai Brown looks out from her deck on Timberline Drive within Ruidoso's village limits, her view covers mountain ridges to the east, and, directly below, Gavilan Canyon Road.

Kai Brown takes in the view from her deck on Timberline Drive. Below are white roofs of metal buildings built on Gavilan Canyon Road that neighbors would like to see painted a non-reflective color.

But the otherwise attractive and forested vista is marred by white reflective roofs atop a series of metal buildings built along the road that lies in an unincorporated portion of Lincoln County.

"We're growing up ugly," is the way Glen Barrow, chairman of the Lincoln County-Ruidoso Extraterritorial Zoning Commission described the situation Monday. Although county and village officials agreed years ago to create a one-mile zone around the village to control growth in the transition area that someday might be annexed into Ruidoso, "control" hasn't been achieved. Members of the ETZ Commission and residents who have appeared before the board asking for help say they are frustrated by the limits and lapses of a 25-year-old ordinance that never foresaw RV Parks, metal buildings and the need for landscaping and erosion control standards.

But Monday, members of the ETZ Authority, a three-person board that must approve changes in rules before they can be implemented, said they're ready to move ahead. "I think it's time we begin the process of updating a 25-year-old ordinance," said chairman L. Ray Nunley, a county commissioner. "I'd like (ETZ attorney Charles Rennick) to get with (county attorney) Alan Morel and bring us little pieces each month. I want something that's good for the county and approving amendments, an entire new ordinance will be drafted.

"Let's repeal the old ordinance when we're ready with a new ordinance - one that is clean and easy to read - rather than keep amending," Schwettmann said.

"As long as it doesn't take a year to do it," Flack said, adding that she hears constant complaints about the lack of guidelines for development of commercial property.

"We're ruining everything around Ruidoso and Gavilan," she said, pointing to a recent cut into the mountain for a sand and gravel operation that was approved years earlier.

Rennick pointed out that when the ETZ commission tried a few years ago to bring a drastically changed ordinance to the authority, which had different members then, it was rejected and the effort stalled.

Nunley said previous members were good people, but were headed in a different direction.

With better planning, serious drainage problems that occurred could have been avoided, Barrow said.

"Once a hillside is devastated, you can't put it back," he said.

After Brown complained about the reflective roofs, authority members said many others feel the same way, but until recently, developers couldn't be required to install colored, non reflective types.

"We meet every month with issues that are just agonizing," Barrow said. "We want to go by the ordinance, but it has so many gaps."

Nunley said he wants to see a clear-cut ordinance, but one that still provides for variances when they are in the interests of the community.

for the village. "If we let it sit here for another 25 years, we'll have some big problems."

Big problems already exist, said member Linda Flack, a village councilor.

"Right now, everything on Gavilan is zoned commercial and people can do anything they want because there is no distinction between types of commercial uses up and down the road," she said. Barrow said he was excited to hear support from ETZA members for updating the ordinance. The original reason for the zone was to ensure compatibility with village development, because the population is moving from Ruidoso outward, he said.

"It won't be easy," Nunley said, adding that board members and residents will have differing opinions. "But we must remember, we're doing this for the public now and in the future, not for ourselves."

"Future is the key word," Barrow agreed.

"The lack of site development standards is a real problem. People are unsure what they can do on their property. We need a road map that shows where we want to be in 25 or 50 years."

Rennick and authority members agreed the ETZ Commission should look first at setting development standards, then at the broader issues of zoning use and designation.

Following a suggestion by authority member William Schwettmann, a county commissioner, the board voted that instead of looking at different sections of the ordinance and

"Let's repeal the old ordinance when we're ready with a new ordinance - one that is clean and easy to read - rather than keep amending."

Court denies appeal in 1998 murder case

State high court upholds killer's conviction

BY DIANNE STALLINGS
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

The New Mexico Supreme Court denied an appeal of a first-degree murder conviction filed by Charles Martinez in connection with the March 1998 strangulation death of Elizabeth Lankhorst-Ballard in Ruidoso.

The decision became final Friday.

Canon Stevens, assistant district attorney for the 12th Judicial District and prosecutor on the Martinez case in Otero County, said the prosecution owes a special thanks to the Ruidoso Police Department and the sheriff's departments in the counties of Otero and Lincoln.

"They kept plugging away," she said Monday. "If not for their good police work and finding the body, we would not have had such a strong case."

The 27-year-old woman's body was found in a shallow grave in the desert north of Tularosa about one month after she disappeared. She had reported to police that she was being stalked by Christopher Faviel, a former boyfriend, who also lived with Martinez.

In the appeal, Trace L. Rabem, assistant appellate defender, argued that Martinez received ineffective assistance from his trial attorney, that District Judge Karen Parsons erred in her handling of instructions to jurors and that the prosecution failed to prove its case.

A first-degree murder conviction is appealed directly to the state Supreme Court.

Martinez was convicted of first-degree murder, conspiracy to commit murder and tampering with evidence in June, 1999. He was sentenced to life plus 10 1/2 years. He is imprisoned in Las Cruces.

Faviel, his long-time lover and partner in the murder, was tried in Lincoln County, where a jury split between a conviction on second-degree murder and manslaughter. The jury acquitted Faviel on conspiracy and convicted on tampering with evidence.

Instead of facing a second trial and with a guarantee of no more than a seven-year prison sentence, Faviel pleaded guilty to second-degree murder.

He is serving his sentence in Hobbs, where he was transferred in January of last year. If he serves his maximum sentence, he will be released in October, 2010, according to the state Department of Corrections.

In Martinez's appeal, Rabem and chief public defender Phyllis H. Subin argued that their client was denied due process because he wasn't tried by a fair and impartial jury.

Specifically, the attorneys claimed one juror was biased because the juror wanted the defense to account for Martinez being at the house on Evergreen Street where Ballard was murdered and to explain how he was involved.

Finding a balance in a changed world

A tough economic winter might be ahead for Ruidoso

Anxiety spreads on many levels, when the world feels the shock of terrorism and its aftermath — counterattack, and a large dose of uncertainty.

No surprise, then, that some economic players in Ruidoso were looking for answers to the unknowable in a meeting last week, and for some way to counter what might turn out to be a less-than-ideal Ruidoso winter season.

They were concerned that heavy promotion by such "destination resorts" as Las Vegas, Nevada, and by airlines looking for passengers at any price, will undercut Ruidoso's winter business.

Among the ideas: Get some national television exposure, paint the village red, white and blue for Christmas, pick up on the street fair concept used earlier this year in Midtown, with an added winter twist.

But that meeting came before this week's attacks in Afghanistan and anthrax reported in Florida.

Tightened security blanketing the nation right now — at airports, sports venues, power plants, water treatment plants, international border crossings — almost certainly will cut into travel. And that also could impact the number of visitors from Mexico, who traditionally make up a large part of winter tourism in Ruidoso.

In this fast-changing environment, maybe we'd better concentrate on our familiar winter sports friends in El Paso, Midland-Odessa, Lubbock and points east.

The not-so-brutish Neanderthal

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — If your image of a Neanderthal is of a crude, uncaring, brute, think again. Teeth and jaw fossils found last year in southeastern France not only reinforce perceptions about how our Neanderthal ancestors developed physically, but also suggest that their social and technological development was much more advanced than previously documented.

An international team of scientists, including Erik Trinkaus, Ph.D., professor of anthropology in Arts & Sciences at Washington University in St. Louis, studied two ancient teeth and a large segment of a lower jaw.

The team's findings, which appeared in the Sept. 25 issue of the journal Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences, extend the record of early people taking care of other community members as far back as 175,000 years ago.

The fossils, from three different humans estimated to be about 175,000 years old (from the Middle Pleistocene period), show a stage of evolutionary development that led to the Neanderthals that appeared in Europe between 50,000 to 100,000 years ago.

As humans spread across the Old World, they acquired regional patterns of anatomy, and the fossil jaw — one of the few found from this period — shows evidence of the gradual accumulation of Neanderthal features in this group of humans, say the researchers from Canada, the United States, France and Germany.

From the shape of the jaw fragment, scientists can see that the cheek was beginning to sweep back, demonstrating that the face was losing strength.

Because of the changing patterns of food preparation, less forceful mastication was needed. That finding reinforces concepts derived from examining the otherwise limited fossil record.

But the jaw also has changed perceptions about early human behavior, specifically when the early humans began to care for, and support, people within their groups who had difficulty caring for themselves.

Previous fossils have shown evidence of caring for infants with congenital problems in the Middle Pleistocene, but the jaw provides the first evidence of long-term survival of someone without effective chewing.

"This is the oldest example of someone surviving for some period of time without an effective set of choppers," Trinkaus said. "There had to have been extensive preparation of food — a combination of cutting and cooking — before this person could eat. They had good cutting tools and controlled fire, but the absence of real hearths and tools that would have done more than dice the food suggests that this individual was being given softer food items by other members of the social group."

"Although commonplace among later Neanderthals and recent humans, such survival of toothless humans is unknown for earlier time periods," Trinkaus added.

LETTERS POLICY

The Ruidoso News encourages letters to the editor, especially about local topics and issues. Each letter must be signed and must include the writer's daytime telephone number and mail address. The phone number and mailing address will not be printed; the hometown will be. The telephone number will be used to verify authorship. No letter will be printed without the writer's name.

Letters should be no more than 300 words in length, of public interest, and free of libel; editing will be for length, grammar or spelling. Shorter letters are preferred and generally receive greater readership.

The Ruidoso News reserves the right to reject any letter. Longer by-lined "Guest Commentary" articles will be considered; call the editor at (505) 257-4001.

Letters may be delivered to the Ruidoso News office at 104 Park Avenue, mailed to P.O. Box 128, Ruidoso, NM 88355; faxed to 257-7053; or sent by e-mail to ruidosonews@zianet.com.

YOUR OPINION

'Outraged in Ruidoso' responds

To the editor:

The urge to laugh at the ridiculous responses to our recent letter was tempered by a sense of sadness that so much ignorance abounds in our community. We meant every word stated in that letter, but will clarify it slightly, as we should have done to begin with. First, we would like to call attention to the fact that we said quite clearly "so many of our young people are..." We most certainly did not say all of our young people! That would have been very much in error. We have two lovely, successful granddaughters who have gone on to college after growing up and attending school in Ruidoso. And they had some wonderful friends who were, and are, quite responsible, good students, and honorable citizens, who had nothing to do with either alcohol or drugs or the type of behavior we first described! And they are a credit to our community and our nation!

The problem lies in the fact that groups such as this clearly appear to be in the minority! And we do not believe the problem exists solely in Ruidoso; unfortunately, it is a national problem and getting worse. If you will take the time to listen to many national commentators who are deeply concerned about the type of youth we are raising in this country, and take the time to really find out what kind of people your teens are hanging around with and what they are doing, you would probably be astounded!

But it is time now to address the indecency of having football games just three days following the most tragic and evil event ever to take place in our nation. If professional teams are willing to forfeit millions of dollars by cancelling games in respect for the thousands who died in the wake of the Sept. 11 horror, then surely the leaders of our schools should have taken the opportunity to set an appropriate example of what to do during a period of great national mourning. It is all fine and good that they held a 15-minute display of patriotism before their game, but the evening should have ended there. It was not the time or the place to hold a sporting event; and we have had several calls, calls we deeply appreciate, in support of our statements.

We had intended to let this commotion die off, until another letter appeared in your paper on Friday from a woman who, trying to justify the playing of that football game, stated that our president had urged people, last week, to return to their normal routines, their jobs, their other activities so that our nation can move forward.

And we support that most heartily! But in the days immediately following this national tragedy there was only prayer, displays of patriotism, grief and remembrance of those now gone to another life, another place.

At that time, during those days, there was no mention of returning immediately to our everyday lives; such a pronouncement would have been preposterous.

We are finished with this at last and can only say, in closing, God bless America, and help us all to reclaim our values, our morality and our sense of right and wrong.

Quality is critical in child care

COLUMBUS, Ohio — New research sheds light on the cruel fate that awaited official scribes for Maya kings who had been conquered by rivals.

These scribes — the rough equivalent of today's public relations writers — would have their fingers broken and then be executed after their kings were defeated in battle.

"The conquering Mayas were not interested as much in the executions as they were in this seemingly bizarre practice of destroying the scribes' fingers," said Kevin Johnston, assistant professor of anthropology at Ohio State University.

"By breaking the fingers of scribes, what they were really doing was muting the ability of scribes to write politically powerful texts for their defeated king."

Johnston discussed his findings in a recent issue of the journal Antiquity.

The Maya civilization, which reached its height from about A.D. 600 to 900, occupied parts of present-day southern Mexico, northern Guatemala, Belize, and western Honduras.

Johnston made his findings by examining new, computer-enhanced photographs of murals painted in Maya buildings. While the paintings have been studied for many years, he said these new photographs showed details of the paintings that were not visible earlier. "I first saw the new photographs of murals in an issue of National Geographic," Johnston explained. "I saw some things that I wanted to investigate further."

For example, one mural found in the Maya site of Bonampak, in the Chiapas state of southern Mexico, shows nine captives crouched at the feet of the site's victorious king and his supporters.

In the mural, red paint signifies blood dripping from the broken fingers of some captives. The murals depicted some of the scribes having their fingers twisted and their fingernails removed. But the new photographs also showed a detail that had not been visible before: one captive is holding up a quill pen, as if recording his capture and execution.

"We've long known that these people in the mural were captives, but no one had thought much about their status — who they were in Maya society," Johnston said. "The new photographs clearly suggest that these men were scribes." Johnston also found five other works of Maya art that support his thesis that scribes were tortured and killed for their politically powerful role supporting conquered kings.

The fact that these king's scribes were specifically targeted for torture and execution showed the importance they played in Maya society, according to Johnston.

Maya city-states were only weakly centralized, and kings had to use persuasion as much as direct power to exercise control over their kingdoms. Scribes played a key role by producing texts to both threaten and cajole citizens into supporting their king. These texts would extol the virtues of the king and promise material rewards to those who supported him. Texts would also describe the terrible consequences for those who were insubordinate.

"Texts were a way that kings asserted and displayed power, and so the scribes who produced them were targeted during warfare for destruction," he said. "The captors emphasized through finger mutilation the destruction of their rivals' ability to produce politically persuasive texts."

Hospital gets boost under federal program

BY DIANNE STALLINGS
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

The county-owned Lincoln County Medical Center in Ruidoso received a tidy bonus last month from Presbyterian HealthCare Services.

When some supplemental money became available for the hospital under the federal sole community provider program, Presbyterian, which manages the complex, paid the required match to capture the extra money.

Usually, matching money for that program would be pulled from a special property tax authorized by voters to help support the hospital or, as is proposed for the future, from the county's medically indigent fund.

But Presbyterian officials instead agreed to provide the match for all of the hospitals the company owns or manages in New Mexico.

That translated to a match of $30,097 to generate an additional $114,000 for LCMC.

Explaining the program, hospital administrator James Gibson said Monday the federal government recognizes that in a community with only one hospital, a disproportionate share of unpaid medical bills falls on that institution.

The unpaid bills come from those who cannot pay, people who are underinsured and from patients on Medicare and Medicaid, programs that only pay a percentage of the total charges for medical procedures and services.

The state receives an allocation annually from the federal government and doles out grant payments to counties that qualify for the sole community provider program based on the experience of the previous year.

"County-owned or public hospitals get a higher ratio than privately owned hospitals," Gibson said, Lincoln County's hospital receives $3 for each dollar of matching money.

"It's a good business decision to participate," Gibson said. "The money comes in four quarterly payments to the hospital and we use it to offset contractual discounts and allowances — to offset the part that the government doesn't cover in Medicaid and Medicare."

Over the last few years, the government recognized that New Mexico was not receiving its fair share of federal dollars for the program, Gibson said. The government also found abuses in other states, where the money was used improperly.

As a result, New Mexico and some other areas benefitted from money left over at the end of the year, which was given out in the form of supplemental sole community provider payments, Gibson said.

Presbyterian officials recognized that some of its hospitals were having difficulty coming up with the supplemental match and devised an arrangement by which the company was allowed to pay all of the matches, he said.

The opportunity arose during a period after the August county commission meeting and before the September meeting, the administrator said. Rather than chance losing the match, he agreed for Presbyterian to pay LCMC's match.

"I wasn't going to give up the money," he said.

Transmitter glitch silences radio station KRUI briefly

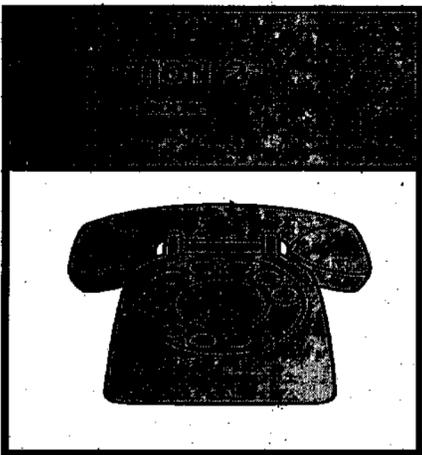

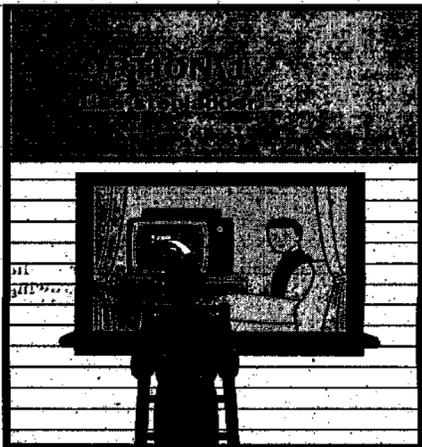

A problem with a component in a transmitter shut down KRUI radio in Ruidoso and Ruidoso Downs for about four hours early Monday.

Station announcer Harvey T. said a small electronic module that senses problems, such as voltage that may not be going to the right place, automatically shut down the operation to prevent damage.

"It ran five years non-stop, so that's a pretty good performance," he said. "An engineer worked on it for about an hour and then we were back on the air."

County pares down proposed animal control measure

Among initial cuts by county commissioners is a provision for licensing and program fees.

BY DIANNE STALLINGS
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

The scope of a proposed animal control ordinance, drafted to replace an outdated one-page version, is being narrowed by the Lincoln County Commission.

The board took no action at its meetings last month, but will revisit the proposed new law with suggested changes at its session Oct. 18.

Wanda Muhlke, sitting in for County Attorney Alan Morel, explained that the version presented contained many progressive issues and one revenue-generating measure used by some entities to offset the cost of sheltering lost or abandoned animals.

Initial cuts by commissioners included removing a provision for licensing program and fees.

"I don't want us to get into county-wide licensing," said Commissioner

Rick Simpson. Susan Moeller of Nogal told commissioners she would like to see licensing requirements to enhance chances of recovering lost animals.

County Manager Tom Stewart said the staff of the shelter operated by the Humane Society of Lincoln County offered to handle license procedures, if the county approved a system.

Commissioner William Schwetzmann said the idea is "ridiculous" and could not be enforced in this county.

Commissioner L. Ray Nunley said licensing probably will have to wait until the county's population increases.

Even if pets aren't licensed, an owner could register them with the shelter in case they are lost. Vaccination tags also bear the name of the veterinarian as a point of contact, said county animal control officer Pat Montes with the county sheriff's office.

Oscura resident Jerry Carroll objected to a provision giving the control officer authorization to enter private property to retrieve an animal.

"Anyone goes on my property and it's trespassing," he said. "If he takes an animal, it's theft."

If an owner objects, a warrant can be obtained, Chairman Rex Wilson said. He suggested wording that if permission is not granted, the officer can't go on private property without a warrant. That would cover an owner who is not home, he said.

Carroll said an exception should be emergencies such as witnessing a dog attack on a child.

Although Wilson acknowledged that state law requires pet vaccinations for rabies, he said it's not possible when a rancher may have "barn cats" that are "untouchable."

Nunley emphasized that particular section is written for the protection of the public. Carroll suggested exempting feral cats, which by definition are wild.

But Moeller said even if the situation is difficult, a person has a responsibility under state law to protect animals on their property and any humans who may interact with them.

"There are too many feral cats in Lincoln County," she said. "You can't excuse those who house untamed cats from trying. The danger from rabies is a high risk that can't be ignored."

Sally Canning, a Capitan resident, said the commission should consider an incentive program, because vaccinations and neutering can become expensive. A public education program also might help, she said.

Wilson said the animal control officer could cite a person under state law for lack of pet vaccination, instead of county law.

"You can't treat Ramon the same way you treat Alto," Wilson said, referring to an isolated rural community in the northeast corner of the county.

But Nunley stressed it's a matter of public safety. He pointed out that the definition of a domesticated cat is one tamed, conditioned or maintained as a pet. "That excludes your barn cats," he told Wilson.

But Moeller said by state law cats are considered domesticated animals.

Under the leash section, Montes pointed out that off the property of an owner, a dog or cat must either be on a leash or under direct control of the owner, which could include voice control.

"I can't get my kids to do that," Wilson quipped.

Canning said she'd like to see provisions dealing with livestock damage caused by dogs running loose strengthened, but was told that all sections dealing with livestock probably will be struck. That oversight is better left to the state livestock inspector, including situations such as starving horses, Wilson said.

Simpson noted, however, that if a dog attacks livestock, it can be shot under state law.

"Most people I know prefer impounding the animal to shooting it," Canning replied.

Commissioners wanted guidance on how to determine if an animal is being abused, which is a felony in New Mexico, and how to define what constitutes transporting an animal in an unsafe manner.

FUNERALS DEATHS

Sue Burk James

Visitation for Sue Burk James, 91, of Ruidoso, will be from 3 to 4 p.m. today at LaGrone Funeral Chapel where the funeral will be at 4 p.m. today. Burial will be on Thursday at Sunset Memorial Gardens Cemetery in Odessa, Texas, with the Rev. Jim Smith officiating.

Mrs. James died Monday, Oct. 8, 2001, in Ruidoso.

She was born Sept. 2, 1910, in San Saba County, Texas. She attended nursing school in Brady, Texas, and was a retired nurse. She moved to Ruidoso 18 months ago from Dallas, Texas, and also had lived in Odessa and Lubbock, Texas. She was a member of the Pentecostal Church.

Survivors include sons Wayland Burk of Ruidoso and David Burk of Dallas; three grandchildren; and three great-grandchildren. Mrs. James was preceded in death by a son, Wiley Burk, in 1956.

Arrangements are under the direction of LaGrone Funeral Chapel of Ruidoso.

County won't maintain search, rescue vehicles

BY DIANNE STALLINGS
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

Lincoln County can't help maintain vehicles owned by White Mountain Search and Rescue, but it may be able to find some newer models for the volunteer group.

County Manager Tom Stewart recommended against the request for maintenance because the county doesn't have a maintenance garage, except for the road department. The one mechanic there is overworked, he said.

But Commissioner Leo Martinez suggested the sheriff's office may have some older vehicles it could declare as surplus.

"We rely on these people and I'd hate to see them stuck with a non-operational vehicle during an emergency," he said.

Commissioner L. Ray Nunley added that if the county has surplus vehicles, they first should be offered to other government entities within its borders or groups that benefit the local public, before selling them to other counties.

"It's a good idea to keep them in the county for the few dollars we could make selling them," he said.

When County Attorney Alan Morel said the state may require either an auction or a sale to another government entity, Martinez pointed out that the county previously gave the rescue group the two 20-year-old models they're using now.

Morel said a contract for services with the group could be drafted for commission approval.

Jim Marion, president of White Mountain, said his group participated in five searches since the start of the fiscal year, three of them local.

Commissioner Rick Simpson said the county owns enough vehicles to consider starting its own garage, but Stewart said he's looked into the issue before and concluded the expense may not offset the benefit.

One employee costs $28,000 or more and a garage would have to be outfitted, he said.

"Small businesses in the community also appreciate the business," Chairman Rex Wilson said.

In other action, commissioners:

• Pending written confirmation that there are no objections from the U.S. Department of Agriculture, approved a four-year lease of the Glencoe Rural Events Center to Sherry Barrow strategies as WUD Inc.

The building and grounds will be used for the production of articles made from small diameter trees cleared as part of the wild fire hazard reduction program in the county.

Barrow also will manage the Joe Skeen Memorial Arena. If it becomes too expensive to remain active, Barrow can decide to close the arena.

• Approved $2,000 for advertising and promotion of the 20th Open Chili Cook-Off during Aspenfest.

Village continues its effort to upgrade the water supply

BY DIANNE STALLINGS RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

As many as 12 phases may be required to totally replace old undersized water lines in Ruidoso.

The village tries to finish at least one phase each year and it could take from five to eight years to complete the work, said Larry Grasmick, director of the village's water and wastewater department.

The phased projects are aimed at improving the village's ability to store, treat and deliver water.

Grasmick and Dennis Brand of Wilson and Co., the firm that designed the last few replacement phases, reported last month that Phase IV of the water line program is finished and Phase V was started in early August.

"We're nearly through the Grindstone and Resort Drive area," Grasmick said Tuesday. Replacement of old water lines has drastically cut leakage and water loss to users, he said.

One of the more exciting moves is the installation of a wireless Supervisory Control and Data Acquisition system that allows the department to remotely monitor and control functions of the water operation, he said.

"It's wireless technology that can turn pumps on and off, monitor the elevation of water in storage tanks, turn valves on and off and see if wells are working properly," Grasmick said. "The first round is almost done. We're fine-tuning the controls now and will expand the remote system. It's good when you can save a 10-mile trip to check (manually)."

Reporting to village councilors last month, Grasmick said he was surprised to see a reduction in water loss from leakage at the Grindstone Reservoir dam after the lake level was raised through diversions from the Rio Ruidoso during times of high flow.

"It surprised us," he said Tuesday. "You have higher pressures as the elevation of the water rises. It possibly compresses the fillings in the joints."

But the village still needs to seal the dam at a cost of $50,000 to $100,000 a year, he said.

"We're starting a program to reseal the vertical joints, for how long I don't know," Grasmick said. "I hope, no more than two to three years."

The reservoir was brought up to the spillway this year, Village Councilor Bill Chance said last month. Usually, the highest water is about 12 feet below the spillway, he said.

"We hear about water concerns daily — people saying we don't have any water. We do have water."

Hydrological studies aren't just guess work, he said. The problem lies in how to access, treat and deliver the water. Without that ability, the town can't grow.

"If we don't grow, we'll turn into one of those towns you don't want to visit," he said.

Vice Mayor Bob Sterchi said the village has tracked water issues since the mid-1990s and has put forth an effort never seen with previous administrations. Because of those efforts, the council can ensure residents of a water supply for the next 20 years, he said.

Other projects under way include installation of a headgate at the Alto reservoir to control intake, and installation of new valves to ensure the village will meet new federal standards for turbidity when they take effect Jan. 1, Grasmick said.

"We already meet those standards about 99 percent of the time," he said Tuesday. "We just want that one percent."

Turbidity relates to the number of suspended particles in water, too small to be detected visually.

"If the number is high, it's an indicator that some bacteria could be present," he said.

Brand reported last month he is working on the second draft of the village's 40-year water plan, which deals with validating the legal need for the rights.

He also is looking at how to treat the hard water from the Hollywood and Cherokee wells used by the village.

"The well water is extremely hard and causes spots on dishes and silverware, so he's looking at a way to reduce the hardness," Grasmick said. "I suggested blending, but Dennis said no, it's not good to blend. He's looking at other avenues."

The Cherokee well on the south side of U.S. 70 near Cherokee Village Mobile Home Park is used constantly, he said. The Hollywood well, east of the State Highway 48 intersection with U.S. 70 is used when the water supply from Eagle Creek is running low, Grasmick said.

He's also going to deepen North Fork well No. 4 along Eagle Creek from 600 feet to 1,100 feet, hoping for additional flow.

RUIDOSO POLICE

Vehicle gone

Ruidoso police are seeking Jim Donuhue, age 20 to 24, residence unknown, for stealing a vehicle from Jim Spence Autoplex, 1098 Highway 70, Oct. 5.

The report states that the manager allowed Donuhue to test drive the vehicle, and didn't advise him when to return it or request any identification.

Animal bites

On a home visit Oct. 4, Anthony Woodards, 49, an employee of the Juvenile Probation Office was bit on the upper right part of his thigh by a pit bull when he entered a residence in the 200 block of Sky Lane.

The bite caused bleeding. Animal Control Officer Tammy Matthews took the dog and put it in quarantine for 10 days at the Humane Society of Lincoln County.

Cat scratches

Ann Hyner Cowan, 55, from El Paso, Texas, reported to police that she was scratched on the right forearm while playing with a cat that had been in the area of the 800 block of Main Road for 1 1/2 weeks that she let in the house to feed.

The animal control officer was informed of the incident.

Break-in reported

Ruidoso police investigated a break-in on Fern Trail off Navajo Drive that occurred between Sept. 20 and Oct. 4. A window was broken to enter the cabin. No property was missing.

Chainsaw stolen

An orange and white Stihl chainsaw valued at $500 was taken from a residence in the 100 block of De Baca Circle between Aug. 4 and Oct. 4.

The residence had been locked and unlatched windows were the only means of ingress, according to the police reports. The residence was placed on close patrol.

Tigers struggle after teammate critically injured

BY WES SCHWENGELS
RUIDOSO NEWS SPORTS EDITOR

The Capitan High School football team lost to the El Paso-Anthony (Texas) Wildcats Friday night, 34-0, but that was the least of their concerns.

Tiger junior Raymond Zamora was critically injured during the game and had to be taken to Thomason Hospital in El Paso, where a blood clot was removed from his brain.

Zamora also had emergency surgery Monday to relieve pressure on the brain, Capitan head coach Ed Davis said.

He was still unconscious and listed in critical condition in the intensive care unit, according to Bernis Nevarez, administrator on duty at Thomason.

The injury occurred late in the first quarter while Zamora was returning a punt. Davis said Zamora was hit at the waist. The coach said he didn't see Zamora take a blow to the head.

Davis said the Tigers weren't able to fully concentrate on the game after that.

"Not once did (Anthony) take the ball and drive it," Davis said. "... We weren't there mentally."

"We strive on trying to be a family. We're hurting."

Ed Davis,
Capitan football coach

The Tigers did have a chance to score early after Zamora's injury Friday, but missed a field goal and did not threaten much after that.

The loss comes at a critical point in the Tigers' season, as they are scheduled to begin district Friday by playing host to Cloudfcroft. Davis said it was hard to put much importance on the upcoming contest.

"One of the biggest games of the year is coming up, but it doesn't even matter," he said.

Capitan did not hold practice Monday. When asked how he would try to prepare the boys for Friday's game, Davis said, "I wish I could answer that. We strive on trying to be a family. We're hurting."

The Cloudfcroft game is scheduled to be Parents' Night. Davis said he was not sure whether there would be any kind of pre-game ceremony to honor Zamora.

The game will start at 7:30 p.m. Friday.

A Mescalero runner tries to avoid the tackle by a Gateway Christian defender. The Chiefs had a rough go of it in Friday night's 55-6 loss.

Chiefs start flat in district

Mescalero struggles in opener, nailed by Gateway, 55-6

BY WES SCHWENGELS
RUIDOSO NEWS SPORTS EDITOR

Going in, Mescalero football coach Rodney Wright thought his team could match up well with the Gateway Christian Warriors.

But that's not how it looked, as the Warriors (5-2) dominated every aspect of the game in route to a 55-6 victory over the Chiefs (2-4).

Things looked good early on for Mescalero, as it fought through cold and breezy conditions to score first.

The Chiefs were moving the ball well in the first period, but the turning point came early, as the Chiefs were threatening to tie the score.

Down 12-6, Mescalero started at their own 28 with five minutes left in the first quarter. But back-to-back big passes from freshman quarterback Randy Fulsom to freshman Darron Valdez and senior Talrick Enjady put Mescalero on the Gateway 3-yard line.

Two plays later, sophomore back Fred Chee walked into the end zone for an apparent touchdown, but the score was called back because of an illegal procedure penalty on the Chiefs. That made it second and goal on the Gateway. Mescalero was unable to cash in and turned the ball over on downs on the Warrior 4.

It looked like things would even out, though, as a 48-yard touchdown pass from Gateway quarterback Westin Rhoads to Arie Breedyk was called back for an illegal forward pass. But the Warriors answered back, converting a fourth-and-5 and later getting a 10-yard TD run from Erik Marquez with 19 seconds left in the first. The missed two-point kick made the score 18-6.

Gateway rolled from there, forcing two Mescalero turnovers and allowing the Chiefs to get just one first down. The Warriors outgained Mescalero, racking up 395 yards of total offense, compared to the Chiefs' 189. Mescalero actually had more passing yards, compiling 150 to Gateway's 125.

The game ended on a 19-yard TD pass from Rhoads to Chase Odom with about eight minutes left in the third quarter, enacting six-man football's 45-point mercy rule. "I thought we were more prepared," Wright said after the game. "... We beat ourselves."

On top of Mescalero's flat play after the first quarter, injuries also hurt the Chiefs. Chee went down early in the second quarter after getting hit in the head. Wright didn't call it a concussion, but Chee did not return.

Mescalero was already missing offensive powers Raymond Bigmouth and Gerald Blake.

"If we could get Gerald and Raymond back, it would add stability to what we're doing," the coach said.

Wright said that his team had looked much better in practices leading up to the game and that he wasn't sure what caused it to play so poorly when it counted.

"I do not feel that we got beat by a better team," he said.

Fulsom was a bright spot for Mescalero, as he passed for 150 yards and rushed for 10 more. The Chief running game was stifled by Gateway's defense, as it picked up only 39 yards on the ground on 19 attempts.

The Chiefs now will likely have to win their last two games to make the state playoffs. Remaining are Carrizozo and Lake Arthur, both on the road.

"We have to start Monday focusing on Carrizozo," Wright said. "We're going to focus on ourselves."

Chiefs back Fred Chee is wrapped up in his team's 55-6 loss to Gateway Christian Friday.

Warriors get district win over Lovington Saturday

The Lady Warriors have overcome early season struggles to post a quick winning record in District 4AAA.

BY TODD BUTTS
FOR THE RUIDOSO NEWS

The Ruidoso Lady Warriors volleyball team (7-9) has worked hard to turn its season around and it is paying off. After struggling early, the Warriors are now (2-1) in district play.

Ruidoso played host to the Lovington Wildcats (5-11) Saturday in an important district match.

A much improved Warrior team jumped out to a 7-0 lead in the first game of the match. Good teamwork let the Warriors win the first game, 15-8. Punctuating the victory was Warrior Jenna Carrasco closing out with a kill the Wildcats could not handle.

Lovington came back with a 3-1 lead in the second game. But the Warriors fought and tied the game at 8-8. Defense by the Warriors and the transition into offense was the key to victory in the second game as the Warriors won 15-9 and took a 2-0 lead in the match.

It looked like the Warriors were going to sweep the Wildcats with a 6-3 lead to start the third game of the match. But Lovington mounted a comeback and saw the lead change several times before taking the third game, 15-8.

"I thought the officiating was horrible, both sides," said Wildcat coach Christy Hill. "He's (the offi-

Grizzlies can't stop losing streak

BY TODD BUTTS
FOR THE RUIDOSO NEWS

The Carrizozo Grizzlies (1-6) were put to the test Friday night against the Lake Arthur Panthers (5-1) in a district game. Lack of depth and mental errors continued to hinder the Grizzlies as they fell to the Panthers on a cold and windy night.

The Panthers traveled to Carrizozo with revenge on their minds. The previously undefeated Panthers suffered their first loss the week before against Floyd.

The defense of the Grizzlies looked like it was going to stop the Panthers' first drive of the game, forcing the Panthers into a fourth down and short. The Grizzlies nearly held, but a measurement of the chains gave the Panthers a first down by inches.

A sweep around the right side by Lake Arthur's Michael Porras put the Panthers up 8-0 with seven minutes left in the first quarter.

Not to be deterred, the Grizzlies began their drive with Lane Dixon gaining 10 yards on his first two carries. But they then hit the wall of the Panther defense and turned the ball over on downs.

Lake Arthur took advantage right away with a pass to David Denton in the end zone, making it 14-0 with just under five minutes left in the first quarter.

cial) not breaking any rules but he just stretches them very far. Our crowd was ticked off. I told my girls to be more mentally tough."

Ruidoso once again tried to close out the match, serving up a 7-1 lead to start the fourth game. Great defense at the net by Ruidoso's Rachel Loya, Tamara Grant and Jessica Gibson contributed to the 15-4 win in the third, taking the match, 3-1.

"We played extremely well," said Warrior coach Albert Ronquillo. "We played with a lot of determination and a lot of heart. We tried to run some different hitting combinations and we threw them off guard. We passed the ball extremely well. We played defense."

The Warriors only missed 10 serves in the match. Warrior Tania Sanchez set up the offense with 35 assists. Carrie Line led the match with 20 kills, followed by Jenna Carrasco and Jessica Gibson with seven kills apiece. Carrasco also recorded 28 digs.

In the two previous matches against Moriarty and Santa Teresa. The Warriors played well. Against Moriarty Thursday, the Warriors went down 2-1, but great conditioning allowed them to comeback and win in five.

The match against Santa Teresa Oct. 2 also went to five, with the Warriors just coming up short in the rally, losing 15-11 for their only loss in district play.

The Warriors also defeated the Portales Rams in four Sept. 29. They will host the Rams again Saturday at 2 p.m.

The Grizzlies were not able to produce offense and turned the ball over too much.

A lack of pass defense allowed the Panthers to score 26 points in less than five minutes. They led 40-0 at the end of the first quarter.

The Grizzlies highlight came with three minutes left in the second quarter where they managed a first down. But they still were unable to put the ball in the end zone. Two more Lake Arthur scores ended the game at halftime with the final score 52-0.

The Grizzlies will host the Mescalero Chiefs Friday at 7 p.m. in another district matchup.

Carrizozo quarterback Lane Dixon follows his blockers down field during Friday night's loss to the Lake Arthur Panthers. The Grizzlies were overpowered by the Panthers, falling 52-0.

Local horse nominated for award

AMARILLO, Texas - Of more than 150 nominations, the top three finalists were recently announced in the 2001 MD Barns Silver Spur Award program administered by the American Quarter Horse Association.

The MD Barns Silver Spur Award honors American Quarter Horses who have made a significant impact in the lives of others or who have been cast into the public spotlight through prominent accomplishments to help create a favorable public perception of the breed.

Those nominated must be registered American Quarter Horses and must have enriched the life of a human being through outstanding training, contribution or accomplishment.

AQHA Members voted online through AQHA's Web site. The top three finalist positions will determine final placing. The winner and first and second runners-up will be announced, as decided by AQHA's membership, at the AQHA World Championship Show, Nov. 16 in Oklahoma City, Okla.

The top three finalists are:

- Heza Exclusive Man (aka Duke), a 1989 Sorrel Gelding owned by Jerry and Glenda Long of Capitan.
- Duke has helped his owner cope with diabetes and its effects, including losing his sight. The duo have bonded so closely that Jerry is now competing again and heading up a youth program focusing on helping at-risk youth.
- Silvers Two Face (aka

Two Face), a 1980 Sorrel Gelding owned by the Collins Family of Salado, Texas.

A finalist in the 2000 MD Barns Silver Spur contest, Silvers Two Face has made a remarkable comeback returning to work at Peaceable Kingdom, the summer camp for chronically ill children near Youngsport, Texas, after a 10-month bout with EPM.

- Stars Parr Money (aka Bullet), a 1983 Brown Gelding owned by Oklahoma State University.

The Oklahoma State University Cowboys have many symbols of their western heritage, including their mascot Bullet. With his traditional sprint across the football field following every Cowboy touchdown, Bullet has made appearances at schools, parades, rodeos and the opening ceremonies of the Oklahoma State Special Olympics.

The winner of the 2001 MD Barns Silver Spur Award will receive a $20,000 MD Barns gift certificate and a custom designed Montana Silversmiths belt buckle.

A $5,000 MD Barns gift certificate will be awarded to the first and second runners-up.

MD Enterprises Inc., manufacturer of MD Barns and Buildings, is America's leader in pre-engineered barns.

For more information on the MD Barns Silver Spur Award, please contact AQHA at (806) 376-4811 or visit AQHA's Web site at www.aqha.com. Footage of the presentation will be available on AQHA's Web site Nov. 16.

Fishing report for Ruidoso area, Oct. 10, 2001

Ruidoso River - With fall finally here, the hoppers are fat and the fish are hungry. Tie on a hopper as a lead fly with a nymph trailer about 12 to 16 inches behind. This combination is hard to beat in October anywhere in the Western states. Large Stoneflies are abundant in the river now. Rock Worms are declining in size and quantity, and Scuds are on the increase in the waters.

South fork - One still needs to hike a ways up the stream to find fish. A ways is two or three miles upstream. Once found the fish are healthy and hungry. The fish here are not lousy. Caddis fly nymphs and small nymphs of just about any pattern will work here. Several local fishermen have hiked 2 to 3 miles up the Southfork to be rewarded with several nice Rainbows and Brookies.

Bonito Lake: Bonito got a nice stocking of fresh Rainbows this past week. If driving to the Bonito area, be aware there is road construction going on, be alert and expect delays. The lake has taken on a green coloration due to a large algae bloom. The fly patterns that have been working are Humbugs, Dark Hendricksons, and Parachute Adams flies have been consistent producers before dark on the main lake body. A damsel fly nymph tied as a dropper behind your dry fly offering continues to bring an unexpected take. For the spin cast fishermen, try a hot pink, renegade pattern propeller fly or a black with grizzly hackle propeller fly behind a bubble rig.

Eagle Lakes: Eagle Lakes are closed for the season.

Grindstone: The fall evenings have helped drop the surface temperature of Grindstone Lake. That one fact will help the fishing quality pick up fast on the lake. Float tubers continue reporting doing well by tossing a sinking tip-line and stripping a dark wooly bugger with some flash or a streamer 8 to 10 feet deep. Float tubing will end Oct. 31, so plan your last few trips now. Damsel and Dragon fly imitations continue working well. For spin casters, tie on an Olive or Black propeller fly behind a bubble rig and enjoy catching fish. Please remember to squeeze the barbs down on all hooks; this will reduce injury to any fish caught and returned to the water.

Lake Mascaero: The lake level is quite low, but is fishing well. Dark wooly buggers continue to take fish late in the day. A few folks have been successful with Parachute Adams, Mosquito, or Hendrickson patterns and casting to rising fish. Remember to get your day pass at the front desk.

Please practice Catch and Release whenever and whenever you can.

We have moved our local shop - New address is 2501 Sudderth Drive - Come see us for daily fishing information. Check out our improved and expanded website for community information.

RHS x-country girls third; Romero absent

Coach Ronny Maskew was impressed with the girls, while the boys were missing their top runner.

BY WES SCHWENGLS
RUIDOSO NEWS SPORTS EDITOR

A week after competing against dozens of schools, the Ruidoso cross country teams continued to run well Saturday at the smaller New Mexico Military Institute Invitational.

The girls team finished third out of the nine schools present, and coach Ronny Maskew said it was one of the best races he's seen the Lady Warriors run all year.

"The girls did real well," he said. "The boys that were there did well also. We were pleased with everybody."

The boys team was missing its top runner, Josh Romero. The Warriors placed second out of 53 teams Sept. 29 at the Lubbock Invitational with Romero, but managed just a fifth place at the NMMI meet.

Romero, a senior, was visiting an east coast college Saturday.

The girls put in a strong all-around performance, with all five scorers finishing in the top 25.

Amanda Montes led the way individually, coming in fifth with a time of 20:43. Samantha Bigmouth was 11th with a time of 21:09.

For the boys, Nick Fajardo was the first Warrior across the line, finishing 19th in a time of 18:04. Willie Comanche was 25th in 18:33.

The Warriors will not run in an organized meet again until

Oct. 18, when they put on the Ruidoso Invitational. They were scheduled to travel to the Hobbs Invitational Saturday, but when the start time changed from 1 p.m. to 9 a.m., Maskew decided to opt out.

Instead, the teams will run an intrasquad meet in town in order to keep from rusting. That race will start Thursday at 8:30 p.m.

"We're going to do something that's going to be positive for our team. Getting up at 3 a.m. would be negative," Maskew said.

The coach said he didn't think a lack of outside competition this week would hurt the Warriors.

"If we thought it would be a detriment, we wouldn't be doing it," he said.

A complete list of Ruidoso results from the NMMI

Invitational follows.

Local golf pro heads to regional tournament

Inn pro Daniel Nunez will have a chance at some big money this week.

Inn of the Mountain Gods golf pro Daniel Nunez will participate in the Wester PGA Club Professional Championship Thursday through Sunday.

Nunez qualified for the tournament earlier this year.

The championship has a 110-player field with golfers from the western United States.

After 36 holes, the field will be cut and those remaining will compete for a total purse of $150,000. First place prize money is $20,000.

The lowest 26 scorers at the tournament will join the lowest 36 from the eastern tournament, the lowest 31 from the southern tournament and the lowest 34 from the northern tournament to advance to the 35th PGA Club Professional Championship. That will be held in June 2002 at Valhalla Golf Club in Louisville, Ky.

EDUCATION BRIEFS

Parent-Student Night

Al eighth, ninth and 10th graders and their parents and guardians are invited to a special workshop at 6 p.m. on Tuesday, Oct. 23 at the Ruidoso High School Cafeteria. The workshop, "Preparing for the Future," will discuss the proposed Ruidoso High School Career Pathways Model, which involves significant changes in graduation requirements and course offerings starting next year. The workshop will also provide information on preparing for higher education and careers.

Fellowships offered

Fellowships for master's and doctoral degrees in special education and educational administration are available at Penn State University through the U.S. Department of Education and Penn State's American Indian Leadership Program.

The program prepares American Indian/Alaska Natives to provide services to American Indian students with disabilities and work with classroom teachers serving these students, to be leaders in special education and to be effective principals in schools serving significant numbers of Indian students.

The fellowships include monthly stipends of about $1,000-1,200 per month, tuition, textbooks, relocation allowances and more.

The deadline for submitting applications is Nov. 1 for the spring semester 2002. For more information, contact Anna Gajar, professor of special education, 227 Cedar Building, University Park, PA 16802, telephone (814) 863-2284, axg3@psu.edu; or John Tippecanick III, professor of education, American Indian Leadership Program, 207

Rackely Building, University Park, PA 16802, telephone (814) 863-1626, jwt7@psu.edu.

Up for tenure?

Former Eastern New Mexico University professor Natividad Macaranas, Ph.D., has just released a new book, "Up for Tenure." The murder-drama is about five professors in a small university in the Southwest who vie for tenure, each experiencing unexpected and unique twists of fate.

The book is available at the ENMU Bookstore in Portales, Southwest Book & More; also in Portales, Clovis Community College Bookstore and Brown Literary Enterprises, 1115 W. University Drive, (505) 356-5916. The price is $11.95; half the price will be donated either to the Council of Professors Emeriti Scholarship Fund or to the American Association of University Women Educational Foundation.

National awards

Dubbed the "Oscars of Teaching" by Teacher Magazine, the Milken National Educator Awards were created in 1985 to reward, retain and attract the highest caliber professionals to our nation's schools.

From Oct. 8 to 19, more than 100 unsuspecting educators across America - and two from New Mexico - will be surprised with the news of their $25,000 awards, which can be used any way they choose.

"Outstanding educators are the essential ingredient in student achievement, encouraging children to perform to their fullest abilities and to develop a love of learning," Lowell Milken said.

"Each and every day, these educators provide students with the confidence and tools to succeed."

■ A new library at Capitan Elementary School is at the end of all hallways, and the students love it.

Making books the center of learning

CAPTAN - All halls lead to the new library at Capitan Elementary School.

No longer do kindergarten students have to walk across campus to the elementary corner of the high school library, a situation that was more of a warehousing of elementary books than a place for library classes and easy checking out of books, said elementary principal Dick Clevenger.

The first week of school this year, books were stacked all over the new library because the shelf units hadn't arrived as scheduled, but the library was operational and children were checking out books, said Jennifer Barnwell, the instructional aide who serves as elementary librarian.

The new library, built as part of the bond issue voted in May of 1999 that included six new classrooms and a band room, is about 2,400 square feet and contains about 6,380 books, of which some 5,000 were bought through a grant from the Hubbard Foundation.

"The library should be the instructional hub of your school," Clevenger said. "All hallways should lead to the library. That wasn't the case when we were located in the high school. That room could not accommodate a full class at one time."

Whenever the high school closed its library, such as to host competitions, the elementary children could not have access. In addition, the kindergarten students, along with the rest of the elementary students, had to cross campus by themselves, sometimes in inclement weather.

In the new library, Barnwell reads to classes of kindergarten students who sit comfortably on cushions on the floor in the story-time area. (The cushions were donated by Wal-Mart, she said).

The books were shelved the week after Labor Day, Barnwell said. Before that, children checked out books from stacks on the floor, and went to the classrooms during their scheduled library times (one per week) to read to them and establish the routine.

An open house was held Oct. 4 to show off the new facility to the public.

"Each class has 30 minutes at the library every week and we do a library lesson and then they come in daily to check in and out. Some kids come in three and four times a day, read a book, take a test and then turn the book in," she said.

The computer area is in the center of the library and was donated by the PTA, Barnwell said. The students use the computers for research and to take tests for the Accelerated Reader Program and accumulate points toward prizes and awards throughout the year.

Clevenger said that a five-year grant for $8,000 a year from the R. D. and Joan Dale Hubbard Foundation provided the funds for most of the about 6,400 books in the library, and most of those are Accelerated Reader books. This is the fifth year of the grant, he said.

"The PTA will furnish the patio as an additional reading area, with tables and benches - all portable - to seat about 40 kids. It'll be an extension of the library. We may have the only outdoor library in the community," Clevenger said.

The fourth- and fifth-grade wings open directly onto the courtyard and the other grades enter through the corridor by the entrance - making all roads lead to the library, as Clevenger wished. Having easy access has resulted in a difference in the attitudes of the students, he said.

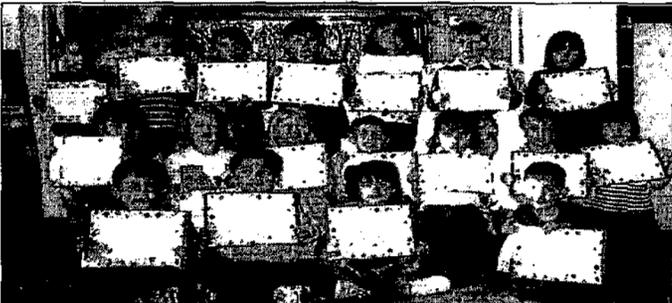

"They feel it's theirs and that makes them much more comfortable and actively looking forward to using the library," Clevenger said. "The teachers are really excited."

Barnwell was an instructional aide last year and likes working in the library full-time this year, she said. She organized the library with the help of the high school librarian, Patricia Sanchez.

"This library and the band room and the six class rooms is the best money this community's ever spent," Clevenger said. "It's been terrific."

POOP SCOOP

BY DIANNE STALLINGS
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

A growing consensus of experts contend that the wild animal kingdom is under the greatest threat in 65 million years, say the editors of "The State of Animals 2001."

In the Humane Society Press publication, Deborah J. Salem and Andrew N. Rowan look at gains and losses in animal welfare from zoos to factory farms to pets and wildlife.

They contend that not since dinosaurs were pushed to extinction have so many species faced the possibility of disappearing forever.

"Every day an estimated 100 species of animals are being pushed into extinction," they wrote. No exact estimate is available because no global effort has been funded to find out how many species share the planet.

"This deficiency can be explained by human beings' lack of appreciation for the interdependence of all living things and for the importance of other life-forms to human survival," they wrote.

The increasing human population results in escalating demands on the resources of the planet. Animal habitats routinely are modified, degraded and often destroyed, they wrote.

Attempts to preserve species usually concentrate on the biggest, most spectacular species such as elephants, leopards, tigers, rhinoceros, eagles, cranes and gorilla.

"These species all require large areas of relatively unspoiled habitat, and, as a result, existing small populations of such 'keystone' species require human decision makers to protect areas where large numbers of other species have a chance to survive," they wrote.
