Drought may force zoning changes

Planning and zoning commission to take a look at undeveloped high-density lots, water availability

BY DIANNE STALLINGS
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

Availability of water may dictate lower densities in some Ruidoso subdivisions already approved for multi-family development.

But before the Ruidoso Planning and Zoning Commission debates the issue, members asked the staff last week to compile a map and list showing all of the undeveloped lots in the village zoned for multi-family use. The information may be available at the board's next meeting Sept. 17.

The lack of water to serve the Camelot subdivision area was raised by Larry Grasmick, head of the village water and wastewater department, when a developer asked to rezone some single-family residential lots to multi-family. Grasmick suggested instead that the board move in the opposite direction and reduce density by converting existing multi-family lots to single-family because of the inadequacy of the village's Cherokee Well.

Commission Chairman Glen Barrow said the board might as well review other unbuilt multi-family areas too.

Mike Runnels, head of the village planning and zoning department, said last week, "I can't tell you if we do or don't have enough water to provide at full build-out."

To change the original zoning, the board would have to show that the designation was a mistake based on assumptions that were erroneous or on conditions that had changed, he said.

Assistant village attorney Charles Rennick said when the village was rezoned in 1987, he doubts a water study was done. That could provide evidence some rezoning was completed in error and might justify new designations.

He suggested a two-step process:

- The planning department should identify all R3 and R4 (multi-family) zones in town and project the number of units at build-out.

- Then the water staff can determine if the village could supply each of the areas.

After that, the board could decide whether any or all of the areas should be downsized to single-family designations.

Planners like Rainmakers' new proposal

Revision cuts number of lots by 70 percent, has water conservation plan

BY DIANNE STALLINGS
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

Water remains a key issue in considering the future of a proposed development off Sierra Blanca Airport Road in Lincoln County.

Members of the county planning commission received their first look at a scaled-down version of Rainmakers subdivision last week in Carrizozo. The new plan reduces the total number of lots by 70 percent from 770 to 230 lots, increases the open space to 110 acres and includes a water conservation, reclamation and re-use plan.

"It was an informational meeting for us," said commission chairman Wayne Negley. "We had to tell them if the plat was sufficient at this point, and the vote was unanimous that it was."

"If they meet all the requirements, we don't have too much to say."

The developer's next step is to send details to various state agencies for review and opinions. Those must be submitted before the public hearing on the plans, possibly in November.

The session was the first for three new members of the board, engineer Bill Midkiff, Shamie Mills, who worked with the Lincoln County Commission to remedy drainage problems on Janet Drive, and builder Terry Westerman. Other board members are Van Patton, Jim Crouse and Maury St. John.

Negley, who has served on the board for about 10 years, said he was impressed with the questions asked by the new members, especially dealing with water.

"The water discussion was pretty heavy," Negley said Monday. "I think water will be the crux of it. The rest fell into place."

The huge package of documents submitted by the developer was a bit daunting, he said.

"John Underwood (project attorney) and Tim Collins (surveyor) gave a good presentation. "We had a pretty good crowd and I expect a bigger one at the public hearing."

Injecting some new blood into the water discussion, the Utah-based developer hired Mary Ann Wasiolek as a consulting hydrologist on the project.

Underwood pointed out that the thesis for her master's degree focused on the hydrology of the Hondo Basin, which lies primarily in Lincoln County.

According to county planner Patsy Sanchez, the proposal for Rainmakers shows 42 single-

Cell tower vote delayed by ETZ with member out

The proposed tower on Squaw Trail should see a resolution on Sept. 23

BY DIANNE STALLINGS
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

Amid groans from the audience and after two hours of review, members of the Ruidoso-Lincoln County Extraterritorial Zoning Authority Monday postponed a decision on a petition for a cellular tower on Squaw Trail.

Last month, the ETZ Commission, with some members absent, split 2-2 on the application from Verizon Wireless, kicking an appeal to the ETZ Authority, which is composed of two county commissioners and one village councilor.

However, Commissioner William Schwettmann was out of town Monday, leaving Councilor Ron Hardeman and Chairman L. Ray Nunley, who serves in the unusual position of being a county commissioner and a village councilor.

Nunley said because the decision could again end up in a split if a vote was taken Monday and may end up being challenged in court, he would prefer that the full authority act on the application. A meeting was set for 6:30 p.m. Sept. 23 at village hall.

That action follows a wait of more than a year for the two boards to come up with a revised ETZ ordinance that dealt with cellular towers, previously restricted to industrial sites. None of those sites fit the height and location criteria for conveying and receiving signals, company officials said.

ETZ Attorney Charles Rennick and Mike Runnels, who heads the village planning and zoning department that oversees the ETZ, assured the two board members that the application met all of the requirements to approve the tower. Aesthetics and a reluctance to see more towers go up at the site or to increase the height of the proposed tower to accommodate the antennae of other companies remained the two major points of debate.

Representatives of Verizon walked Nunley and 'Secret admirer' indicted on 31 counts of harassing phone calls

BY DIANNE STALLINGS
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

A Lincoln County grand jury Monday indicted a Mescalero man on 31 counts of telephone harassment, one count of stalking and one count of impersonating a police officer.

Darwin Kinzhuma, 37, was arrested in April after being caught in a sting operation by the Ruidoso Police Department. District Attorney Scot Key of the 12th Judicial District and Assistant District Attorney Shauna Hill presented evidence to the grand jury Monday morning.

The telephone harassment charges are 4th-degree felonies, each punishable on conviction by up to two years in prison and a $5,000 fine. The other two charges are misdemeanors and each carries a maximum sentence of less than one year in jail and a fine of not more than $1,000.

Kinzhuma is being held in the Lincoln County Detention Center in Carrizozo on $150,000 cash-only bail.

Ruidoso police officer Dyke Sullins coordinated the investigation of reports of telephone harassment since January and led the sting that resulted in the arrest four months ago.

According to the National Crime Information Center, Kinzhuma was incarcerated from 1983 to 1991 for rape and spent a year at the detention center in 1996 for telephone harassment. He was released March 11, pending trial in Alamogordo for use of a telephone to harass.

FORTY REASONS WHY YOU SHOULD BANK WITH City Bank

Sept. 11 hits home for some New Mexicans

BY CHRISTOPHER SCHURTZ FOR THE RUIDOSO NEWS

In some ways, Las Cruces Marie Khan isn't much different than most Americans who have struggled to make sense of the Sept. 11 attacks.

She has collected every magazine and publication she could find in the weeks following 9-11, when the media and the public were focused on little else.

But for her, Sept. 11 is also the day she lost her eldest brother, Jack Connolly, the patriarch of a large, tightly-knit, Irish Catholic family.

A native New Yorker, Khan is like her fellow New Yorkers — tough, resilient and defiant — who now nevertheless seem to be forever changed and somewhat shell-shocked by that terrible day.

There is a hint of confusion and pain in her voice when she grapples with the idea of the New York skyline she grew up seeing from her home on Staten Island being forever and irrevocably changed.

But her pain is evident when she recalls her brother, a man who loved life, his family and New York.

"I will never get over it. Ever," Khan said.

Fateful morning

On the morning of Sept. 11, Khan was awakened by a call from a friend, who told her to turn on the television, that a plane had just crashed into the World Trade Center.

Within moments of turning on the television, Khan saw the second plane crash into the second tower. She immediately recognized the tower as being the one her brother worked in. The airplane, she realized, had crashed into the area where his office was located.

"His office had 500 people. 52 were lost, so a lot of people did get out," Khan said. Witnesses who survived told the family he was seen helping others escape.

"I believe when it's your time to die, it's your time," Khan said, even as she struggles with her brother's death. "Why is Jack gone when the person who sat next to him is still alive?"

In an ironic twist, Khan said her brother had a fear of being killed in a plane crash.

Though thinking of how her brother died is still too painful to address, she said in some ways it's comforting to know he died doing what he loved, in a place that made him feel on top of the world.

"My brother Jack loved his office. He'd always say 'Look how lucky I am, to be working here,'" Khan recalled.

Her brother was working with the London-based company Eurobrokers on the 84th floor of the second World Trade Center tower to be struck.

Khan said her mother died five years ago, something which she said she is grateful for in some ways because the death of her eldest son would have been too much for her.

Letting go of hope

Khan said she has been back to New York five times since Sept. 11, the first time within a week of the attacks. She flew out of El Paso with about six other people on the first plane available when flights resumed.

In those early days when rescue workers were still looking for survivors, she and Connolly's family in New York had hoped they would find him somewhere in the mountain of twisted metal and pulverized concrete.

When she got to her brother's home in New Jersey, Khan said a makeshift communications station had been set up to take calls from anyone with information about Connolly.

"We really did have hope at that time," Khan said.

Her heart sank as she walked from the nearest train station to Ground Zero.

"Passing all of the firehouses, it was just awful. There were just billboards and billboards with thousands and thousands of pictures of missing people," Khan said.

"When I saw (Ground Zero) I just couldn't believe anyone survived it," Khan said. "I got there less than a week later and part of the Trade Center was still standing. Twenty blocks away there were cars with their windows blown out. I don't know how anybody survived anything."

Khan's brother Kevin, a New York City firefighter, was stationed at the firehouse nearest to the World Trade Center up until a month before the attacks.

The firefighters in that firehouse were the first on the scene the morning of the attacks and many firefighters from the station were among hundreds killed when the towers collapsed.

Kevin Connolly would spend the next several months at Ground Zero searching for his brother, and joined rescue workers in searching for others. He would also spend the rest of the year attending funeral after funeral for fallen firefighters.

A little over a month ago, Connolly's wallet was found, but Khan said it was probably in his car, as he rarely carried in his pocket.

'Too big to bury'

It wasn't until early October that Connolly's wife, Dawn, decided to let her husband go, reconciling herself and her family to the terrible realization he would not be found.

"We all said it's up to her. And she really didn't want to. She finally decided that's what had to be done. It was very difficult," Khan said.

Like many victim's families who never recovered a body of a loved one, Connolly's family had a funeral for him using an empty casket — Khan's husband Khalid said the 46-year-old Jack Connolly was "too big to bury."

She said she couldn't believe the thousands of people who came to his wake, particularly at a time when there were at least 10 funerals a day.

Khan remembers her brother, an avid Yankees and Mets fan, as extroverted and bigger than life, a confident and personable man who left an indelible mark on those who met and knew him.

"He was so outgoing. The minute he walked into a room, you only had to be there for a minute and you'd never forget him. He'd immediately put his hand out, 'Jack Connolly here,'" Khan remembered.

"He was hysterical. He made you smile every minute you were with him," she said. "But he was very serious about his work. He was a vice president, so he always wanted to make sure the work got done."

Khan said Connolly's employees called him "the nicest grouch you ever did meet."

'Daddy's little girl'

Father's Day was particularly difficult this year; Khan said the loss of her brother has been hardest on his three young children, ages 11, 9 and 7.

At first, they didn't want to go back to school. Connolly's son Patrick wouldn't play baseball anymore, particularly because his dad was his coach.

Now, Patrick has switched to soccer and his mother has stepped in to coach, Khan said.

Khan said one of the hardest moments came when Connolly's only daughter told her that "I'll never be Daddy's little girl."

"I just told her 'you'll always be Daddy's little girl,'" Khan said.

Thanks in part to a Sun-News story last September featuring Khalid and Danial Khan, more than $6,000 was raised for a fund benefiting Connolly's children.

In February, the family held a huge fund-raiser in New York, raising more than $65,000 for the kids. The family has received some money from the Sept. 11 fund, but Dawn Connolly is now working out of her house as a CPA to support her family.

"It's still very real in New York, really that whole tri-state area," Khan said. "I guess the whole world is talking about it again. We never stopped."

Raised on Staten Island, Khan said New York has changed since the attacks. "The whole world has changed." New Yorkers are now a bit more aware of each other, she said, with more "hellos" being exchanged.

"Part of the charm of New York was that you could be anonymous in a city of 8 million," Khan said. Now, that has changed a little.

Though New York has changed since Sept. 11, Khan said she doesn't fear for her family living there, though in the first weeks following the attacks, she did feel some anxiety wondering if and when the next attack would come.

"I definitely think something else is going to happen. I just don't know when," Khan said.

The attacks had some positive effects, with a renewed awareness of the rest of the world, even in areas as far away as Las Cruces, she said. Despite her fears for her son Danial's safety during the weeks following Sept. 11 — she asked him to shave off his beard — nothing happened to him.

Khan met her husband Khalid, a thoracic and vascular surgeon with an office in Las Cruces, in 1971 after he moved here from his home country of Pakistan. The two soon fell in love and were married, despite some cultural differences that were initially hard for her parents and her future husband's family.

"At first, they didn't take it well. My father took it worse. He used to say the worst thing I could do as an Irish Catholic girl was to marry an Italian," Khan said laughing, adding Khalid was quickly embraced by the close-knit Connolly clan.

She even took a trip back to Pakistan in 1990 with her husband. However, given the logistical difficulties and potential danger in traveling to Pakistan, she doubts she'll do it again anytime soon.

No animosity

Striking back at those who committed the attacks wasn't high on Khan's list.

"I just wanted it to stop. I have no animosity," Khan said, struggling for the right words. "I just can't comprehend how three suicide (bombers) dying in the name of God! How they can (do that), they have mothers and they're putting their mothers through such anguish." Khan said she probably won't return to New York for Sept. 11, because she was just there three weeks ago for a happy occasion, her sister's birthday.

Her husband Khalid will close his Las Cruces office on Sept. 11 in observance of the anniversary and the family will have a pizza party, after attending Bishop Ricardo Ramirez's sunrise service.

"My brother Jack loved pizza; they called him 'Slice.'" One time he ate 17 pieces of pizza. That's how much he loved it," Khan said.

As for what should be done at the Ground Zero site, Khan said she knows there will be new buildings erected there as well as a memorial.

Khan said Sept. 11 will always be a part of America's collective conscience and will be marked across the country by numerous anniversary events and memorials.

With the anniversary, Khan said she is bracing for the inevitable wave of 9-11 related events and the wall-to-wall coverage in the media, as well as the pain inside her that seems to simmer at the surface.

"It will never end. I think that's what is so difficult. There will always be reminders, forever. People shouldn't forget."

Christopher Schurtz is a reporter for the Las Cruces Sun-News, a sister paper of the Ruidoso News.

"Twenty blocks away, there were cars with their windows blown out. I don't know how anybody survived anything."

No confirmed local West Nile cases, but tests being done

Area veterinarians say they've vaccinated thousands of horses recently.

MANE STALLIONS
KOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

Although blood samples from several horses are being analyzed at laboratories, as of Tuesday, no cases of the West Nile virus were confirmed in Colusa County.

Infected horses were identified last month in the eastern New Mexico counties of Quay, Curry, Roosevelt and Lea.

Dr. Michael Greenlee of the state office of the U.S.

Department of Agriculture, said five cases have been confirmed, but that his office is not the first to be notified of new cases if the testing is performed in Texas.

"If it goes to the laboratory we use in Ames, Iowa, we would know first," he said. "But we're not in the pipeline to hear from Texas, although I have asked to be notified."

A spokesman for the office of veterinarian Becky Washburn said tests are being run on several horses under her care, but none have been confirmed with the virus.

Dr. Warren Franklin said his practice was swamped with requests for equine vaccinations against the infection.

"I've vaccinated more than 2,000 horses in the last month or so," he said.

The owners of many of those animals may have been protecting the horses against the next stop on the racing circuit or a return home. Mosquitoes don't appear to be a problem in Ruidoso, although any standing water is a potential breeding ground, according to the state Department of Health.

The virus is spread by the bite of infected mosquitoes and is named after the West Nile district of Uganda in Africa where the virus first was isolated in 1937.

Humans can become infected from the bite of mosquitoes, which receive the virus from infected birds. The disease is not spread by person-to-person contact or directly from birds to humans.

According to the health department, most people who are infected experience no symptoms or a mild illness such as fever and headache before fully recovering.

In less than 1 percent of infected persons, particularly the elderly, the virus can cause serious disease that affects the central nervous system. In the most severe cases, brain damage or death may occur.

Symptoms generally show up five to 15 days after a bite of an infected mosquito and range from a slight fever, headache, rash and swollen glands to the rapid onset of severe headache, high fever, stiff neck, disorientation, muscle weakness, coma and death.

Although domesticated animals can become infected, the only type that appears to be harmed are horses and a vaccine has been developed. Wild birds also can develop severe symptoms and die. No vaccine exists for dogs or cats.

The virus commonly is found in Africa, Eastern Europe, West Asia and the Middle East. It first was detected in the United States in 1999 in New York. Since then, it spread west and was found in Texas in mid-June and in New Mexico on Aug. 22 when two horses in Curry and Quay counties were diagnosed, making it the 40th state with confirmed cases.

On Aug. 27 and Aug. 30, tests sent to the Texas Veterinary Diagnostic Laboratory in Amarillo, Texas, confirmed the virus in horses from Roosevelt and Lea County.

ZONING: Planners say redone Rainmakers' development plan more appealing ms, Rennick said. Barrow said the information also could be useful in the revamping of a village's comprehensive plan.

Runnels warned that rezoning to lower densities could spark litigation by people who bought property with the aim of building apartments. Rennick said one application already was tabled because of the water question.

"Just because the water is not there doesn't mean it couldn't be brought through an increase in infrastructure, storage and delivery capacity, all of which takes us back into the realm of impact fees for the developers of R3 or 4 property if they want to build to use (higher) densities," Rennick said.

Barrow pointed out that if left alone, a builder could buy up all of the higher density property, bring in a crew to build and the village would be obligated to supply the water because the zoning already existed.

Rennick said changes can be made in the ordinance and zoning map until someone "has reliance on what's there, like coming in and building the whole thing out. Until then, you still have the option of changing the map, the rules and the water regulations," he said.

Building inspector Larry Hill said the ordinance only requires that the city deliver a certain water pressure at the point of connection, not that it provides enough water or pressure to serve a development. He noted that the developer of a Best Western hotel behind Camelot faces that situation and may have to provide storage tanks and additional pumps.

If a developer doesn't have the money needed for those types of essential improvements, he may not be able to build, Runnels said.

Planning secretary Tim Vega said another option would be to leave the zoning designation in place, but change the maximum density allowed under that classification. Anything over the maximum could be considered a conditional use.

"The new figure could be based on studies to 'show what is sustainable,'" Rennick agreed.

Barrow said without action, Ruidoso could find itself mirroring the community of Prescott, Ariz., which he said used to have a population similar to the village, but in 10 years grew to 110,000 people.

Hill said any future applications, decisions and studies should involve the water department from the outset. That might help developers with decisions before they spend too much money.

Runnels said he is reviving a previous practice of meeting with the heads of all village departments when a new development plan is submitted to ensure better coordination and to head off problems early.

The director told commissioners that the village received a $25,000 planning grant that will be coupled with $100,000 set aside by the council to revise the comprehensive plan.

"That means the planning commission and the village council will have to help the planning department come up with a steering committee to come back with a new comprehensive plan" covering infrastructure funding, transportation, housing rehabilitation and other needs, Runnels said.

In other issues, the commission: • Heard from Barrow that he would like regulations developed to require control of erosion during construction. Runnels said new federal Environmental Protection Agency rules will govern run off on tracts of five acres or more under Phase II of the Clean Water Act.

Barrow suggested that silt screens, used on highway projects, would be a good step.

• After a lengthy discussion, granted a variance to Ron Bergeron to allow him to complete work on a garage and addition started without a proper permit. The board specified that a building inspector must certify past work was completed correctly and meets code, and that an engineer certify the same in a written statement.

Barrow and other members said they were disturbed by a pattern of construction at the site without permits. The owner contended some of the work was in response to an emergency when retaining walls collapsed from runoff after four houses were built above him.

wardman through the steps taken to check out public land locations and co-locations on existing or planned towers as preferred options. They then explained why the knoll on the mountain would fill the service gap with a 70-foot tower and would result in the removal of a less effective 125-foot tower behind Radio Shack off Sudderth Drive.

One neighbor spoke in support of the petition, but Barbara Willard, who has said she plans to create a residential development in the area, and a third neighbor objected.

She urged the board to finally put the issue to rest, asking, "How many times does this have to be denied, postponed or put off?"

She recalled that the site first was debated in June of 2000, although no official application was filed. Verizon subsequently received approval of a tower in town on Whitlock Street as a temporary measure from the village planning and zoning commission. The Squaw Trail site falls within the one-mile ETZ area of transition around the village, but lies in the unincorporated portion of the county.

Willard disagreed that anyone in the downtown area needed a cellular telephone for emergencies because land lines are plentiful. She pointed to the requirement to first try to use public land and existing structures or towers before approving new towers on private land. A residential district is the least desirable option, as outlined in the ordinance, she said.

Nunley pointed out that the area, because it falls within the county, which has no zoning, is not designated as residential. Although Verizon intends to use less than an acre, the company is leasing an entire tract and therefore, would not be considered to be subdividing, he said.

Richard Parkinson, who owns the land, said in his opinion, one tower visible above the tree line would be less offensive and constitute less of an environmental impact than new homes, "a bunch of people and barking dogs" or disabled cars he claimed another neighbor keeps on nearby property.

If approved, Verizon will sign a 40-year lease, specifying a time period for removal if the tower is no longer in use, he said.

HARASS: Kinzhuma indicted on 33 counts

ullins credited the result to the cooperation of law enforcement personnel at police departments in Ruidoso and Mescalero, Bureau of Indian Affairs Police Chief Troy Jolen, tribal attorney Richard Locha and the district attorney's office.

The sting was set up when one of the women who received calls asked for the subject's telephone number so she could all him back. He gave it to her, which allowed the police to track the source. A tape recording device was hooked up to her telephone when she called the suspect back. The suspect gave his name and spelled his last name to another victim, police said.

On April 8, six victims listened to the recording and positively identified Kinzhuma as the harasser, according to the police. Identifying features included using the woman's first name, saying he didn't want trouble and just wanted someone to talk to and identifying himself as a "secret admirer."

During the last conversation, the woman set up a meeting with the caller April 9 at a convenience store and described her vehicle. A Ruidoso police communications officer drove the victim's car to the appointed place.

Kinzhuma was arrested as he came around to the passenger side of the car, reports said.

OUR OPINION

Positive proposals would improve juries

A judicial steering committee has some good ideas

The thing about the judiciary, at least in New Mexico, is that it tends to be most conservative. Top to bottom, at district, appellate and Supreme Court level, jurists look at precedents in applying the law.

That, perhaps, is why the courts have been so slow in changing their own rules. And that is why a judicial steering committee, on which 12th Judicial District Judge Karen Parson served, deserves praise for proposing a batch of rules changes that should speed up the wheels of justice, and certainly assure better jurors.

As applied to juries, the committee would like to see jurors paid every two weeks or at the end of a trial. (Something higher than a bare-minimum wage would be nice, too, but we doubt that will happen.) Jury selection would be expanded to include the handicapped and not be limited to a pool of registered voters and licensed drivers.

Particularly, the idea that all jurors be allowed, and encouraged, to take notes during a trial would speed up the process immeasurably. Trial-watchers know that one of the biggest hang-ups is the sometimes endless requests for transcripts and explanations during deliberation.

Let jurors argue behind closed doors, but let them do it quicker by using their own notes.

We hope that change, at least, is adopted immediately.

Making it through a blurry day in Room 17

BY NEB CANTWELL

Cathy Roberson is a superb teacher of first graders. That is the assessment of a proud father, yes. But it is the assessment, too, of her peers. Cathy is also a talented writer of Christian lyrics and thoughtful essays. In remarks dedicated to her students, she captures the essence of Sept. 11, 2001. I cannot do better.

Cathy Roberson

bubbly and caring. Your beauty captured my heart like never before. I wanted time to stand still. I guess it's because I knew that our lives would never be the same. Not yours or mine. Today would be a date in history all would remember.

I wiped a tear from my eye as we said goodbye for the afternoon. The tear represented many things: your fear and my fear, your innocence and my grip on reality, your vulnerability and my lack of power to change anything for you. A prayer and the hope of the Lord got me through the day but I couldn't share this with you at school.

Needless to say, today was a tough day. I went through the motion of my lesson plans but my heart was far from the task. In fact, I'm not really sure that we accomplished much. But the important thing is we did make it through the blurry day, and tomorrow is a new day in Room 17 and a new day in America.

I love you more than you will ever know.

YOUR OPINION

The price of vigilance for individuals

To the editor:

On this Sept. 11, let us all take time to remember those who passed on a year ago. The death toll was set at a certain number, but it cannot take into consideration the collateral deaths and destruction that have occurred since that event.

People are dying daily in a conflict that could last for a long time. We need to pay our respects to those who died on 9-11 while remembering the millions who have given the ultimate sacrifice for their country. This sacrifice is the reason that we as citizens ... need to be vigilant as individuals. This vigilance will allow our children to enjoy the fruits of the labor and sacrifice our ancestors gave to build this great nation.

One way that we can be vigilant is knowing this enemy known as Al Qaeda is operating in the same social strata as the Weathermen of the 1960s and 1970s, or the drug culture.

The drug culture is their favorite illicit activity, because they know that people who partake of drugs are hesitant to talk about what they have seen for fear of incriminating themselves. It is also known that when people who are members of Al Qaeda cells are called together for a meeting, they frequently don't know the person they are going to meet. That is why they will sit in the woods or next to a busy highway waiting to see if someone will show up. In the mid 1990s, an alert was issued in Colorado by police to be on the lookout for individuals or small groups of two or three people remaining in one place for hours at a time.

Being vigilant also includes watching for suspicious characters and alerting the local authorities if there is possible suspicious activity occurring.

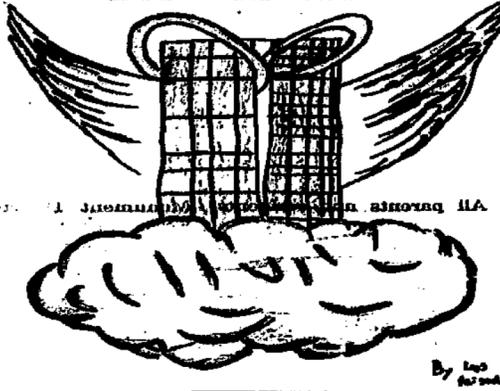

We should recognize that all members of Al Qaeda are murderers even if they claim to have had no foreknowledge of the attacks of 9-11. It is also equally important to accept the fact that if you know Al Qaeda members and do not share this information with the appropriate authorities, then the blood of 2,823 people, plus all those that have died in the war, or will die, is in your hands.

Stepping forward is difficult, especially when it means the death of a lifestyle, and the loss of many dear friends. In my case, they have been gentle to me, but if my revelations should cause me to suffer jail time, or worse, I am ready. It is a means of showing respect for those who have given the ultimate sacrifice.

Let's work together to preserve our children's future. Let's and let's opportunity by watching

Thanks from the seniors

To the editor:

Ruidoso is so fortunate to have such loyal and supporting merchants in our area. The Village of Ruidoso Senior Center/RSVP has for many years been a part of the All American Festival with a party bridge tournament, barbecue and dance for seniors.

We have never failed in getting many merchants to donate all the prizes for the bridge tournament: Coyote Cantina, Deck House Restaurant, El Paraiso Restaurant, K-Bob's Restaurant, KFC Restaurant, Long's Drug and Season's Nursery.

We wish to thank all of these merchants and wish them well...

LETTERS POLICY

The Ruidoso News encourages letters to the editor, especially about local topics and issues. Each letter must be signed and must include the writer's daytime telephone number and mail address. The phone number and mailing address will not be printed; the hometown will be. The telephone number will be used to verify authenticity. No letter will be printed without the writer's name.

Letters should be no more than 300 words in length, of public interest, and free of libel, editing will be for length, grammar or spelling. Excessive letters are preferred and generally receive greater readership. The Ruidoso News reserves the right to reject any letter. Longest by-lined "Guest Commentary" articles will be considered; call the editor at (505) 257-4001.

Letters may be delivered to the Ruidoso News office at 104 Park Avenue, mailed to P.O. Box 125, Ruidoso, N.M. 88301, or faxed to (505) 257-4001.

RAINMAKERS: Water is the big question for proposed development family lots, 40 multi-family units and 48 patio home lots in Unit One, a 62.2-acre tract near the Spencer Theater for the Performing Arts. It also contains a water facilities site and a portion of a golf course that spans Units 1 through 5.

Unit 2 would contain 42 single-family lots; Unit 3, 17 patio home lots;

Unit 4, 25 single-family lots; and Unit 5, 16 single-family lots for a total of 125 single-family lots, 65 patio and 40 multi-family units. Lot sizes range from .0115 of an acre for the patio homes to 1.562 acres.

The plans note that the developer owns 784 acres, which includes a 286-acre golf course and 498 acres held for possible future development, depending on economic conditions. No com-

Underwood explained that Rainmakers acquired Rancho Ruidoso Water Company through a separate corporation called Rainmakers Utilities. As a result of that purchase, it owns all water rights — the sale and transfer was approved earlier this year by the Public Regulatory Commission. The application proposed delegating the unused portion of the water rights for the new subdivision.

The rights, about 252 acre feet date back to 1857. One acre foot equates to 325,851 gallons of water.

Wasiólek explained that Rainmakers' new well punches into the deeper hydro-geological formation known as the San Andreas formation. She said the water in that aquifer does not affect the water available in the shallow aquifer that primarily serves domestic wells in the area.

Ms. Wasiólek stated that in her opinion there was sufficient water in the aquifer to supply Rainmakers' existing water rights. Underwood said Tuesday.

St. John said currently the company only has enough water rights to serve the lower number of lots being proposed.

RUIDOSO POLICE

Criminal trespass

Ruidoso police arrested Susan Spall, 52, of Ruidoso Sept. 4 in the 100 block of Bishop Road, charging her with criminal trespass.

Tools taken

Tools were reported missing from the laundry room of Travel Lodge, 159 Highway 70 between 5:30 a.m. Sept. 3 and 1:30 p.m. Sept. 4. A green weed-eater valued at $45, a cordless drill valued at $180 and a vacuum cleaner valued at $140 were reported taken. The investigating officer found no evidence of forced entry to the room.

Ring stolen

A 1969 Ruidoso High School class ring was reported missing Sept. 4. The reporting party had left it in the restroom of the Ruidoso Valley Chamber of Commerce, 720 Sudderth Drive on Sept. 4, and returned shortly thereafter to find it gone. The ring has the initials MMB inside. If anyone finds the ring, please take it to the Ruidoso Police Department.

Child abuse arrest

Police arrested Thomas Bowling Snider, 33, of El Paso, Texas, Sept. 5, charging him with abuse of a child, a third-degree felony, contributing to the delinquency of a minor, a fourth-degree felony, third-offense DWI, not yielding the right of way, driving when his license was suspended or revoked, having an open container of alcohol in the vehicle, possession of less than one ounce of marijuana and possession of drug paraphernalia.

According to the police report, when driving onto Sudderth Drive from a private driveway, Snider pulled in front of a police officer. The officer stopped him for failing to yield the right of way and tested the driver for sobriety. Also in the vehicle was a 16-year-old male who told police that he had been in the skating park when Snider offered to take him to supper and allegedly made other offers. The boy was released to his father and Snider was booked and transported to Lincoln County Detention Center.

Windows shot

Two store windows were shot out of Rita's Aveda, 1209 Sudderth Drive between 6:30 p.m. Sept. 3 and 9 a.m. Sept. 4. The police report states that the windows, valued at $500 each, appeared to have been shot by a BB, pellet or paint ball gun. Remains of pink paint were found on the lower portion of one window.

Car damaged

An apparent attempt to steal a car Sept. 7 from the parking lot of Mountain Arts Gallery, 2030 Sudderth Drive, failed, damaging the ignition so that the owner of the vehicle could not start it. He had parked the car there about midnight and returned to it about 2 a.m. to find heavy damage to the driver's side door. Officers saw extensive damage also to the window, according to the report, and it appeared as if a crowbar or pry tool had been used to gain entry. Nothing was missing and the vehicle was towed away for repairs.

Concealing identity

On Sept. 5 police arrested Lesley L. Evans, 19, of Mescalero, charging her with concealing her identity to avoid being served an arrest warrant for failure to appear. Evans's vehicle was stopped because of an expired registration sticker on her license plate at Sudderth and Navajo drives. She was also cited for operating a vehicle without a driver's license and insurance, and for having an expired registration sticker on her license plate.

Resisting an officer

Police arrested Angela Lynn Wright, 40, of Ruidoso on Sept. 4 at 723 Mechem Drive, charging her with resisting and obstructing an officer. Police had been dispatched to the Allsup's Convenience Store, 721 Mechem Drive to investigate a battery and met with Wright, who refused to provide information regarding the battery, saying she didn't want to file charges and just wanted custody of her vehicle. She was transported to the Ruidoso Police Department and during booking, complained of back pain, the report states. EMS transported her to Lincoln County Medical Center, which treated and released her, and she was then transported to Lincoln County Detention Center.

Baseball break-in Police report that someone broke a window of the concession stand at the Sierra Blanca Little League Ball Field on Aug. 30 and entered, taking an empty cash box valued at $15 and two baseball bats valued at $75 each. The top of the window frame was also bent, the report states.

LOCAL MEMORIALS

Carrizozo ceremony

Students at Carrizozo schools will honor those who lost their lives in the events a year ago with a flag display, courtesy of the Carrizozo Rotary, this morning.

Asked to dress in patriotic colors, the students will watch the ceremony in front of the school. At 8:55 bugler Bart McDonough of Capitan will play taps as the flag is raised. After pledging the flag, Student Council President Anthony Beltran will introduce attending veterans.

Colonel Tom Stewart will deliver a message to the students followed by patriotic songs by the elementary led by Mrs. Jamie Gieb.

All parents and grandparents are welcome to attend and take part in event.

Lincoln remembers

Historic Lincoln is remembering Sept. 11, 2001, with special displays. In addition, all Monument and Museum buildings will be open to the public without charge. You are encouraged to visit and remember our history. Monument Director DeAnn Kessler asks that you pass this message along.

Library event

The Village of Ruidoso will sound the emergency notification sirens at 6:11 p.m. today during a Sept. 11 memorial ceremony at the Ruidoso Public Library. Since the sounding of the siren is not during its usual test time, the village would like to remind residents that it is a part of the ceremony and not an actual emergency.

FUNERALS DEATHS

Douglas Houseton

Funeral services were Sept. 7 for Douglas Wayne Houseton, 79, of San Antonio, Texas, in Double Mountain Cemetery.

Mr. Houseton died Sept. 2, 2002, at his residence.

He was a World War II marine veteran and saw action in Spain, Iwo Jima well as other places. He was retired from the San Antonio Police Department after 30 years of service.

He worked security at the Ruidoso Downs Race Track for about 15 years.

He married Bill Craft Jan. 7, 1958, and she preceded him in death.

Survivors include a son, Jim Lester, of San Antonio; a daughter, Vivian Lee Davis of Irvine, Texas; three grandchildren; and two great-grandchildren.

Ana Ragan

Memorial services are pending for Ana Ragan, 66, at the Midway Assembly of God Church in Roswell. Flowers and food will be accepted at 1709 North Washington in Roswell.

Mrs. Ragan died Tuesday, Sept. 3, 2002, in Albuquerque. She was a longtime resident of Roswell, Ruidoso, Alamogordo and Cloudercroft.

She was a member of the Midway Assembly of God Church.

She was preceded in death by her husband, Elvis S. "Red" Ragan.

Mescalero winner

Felicia Frizzell, of Mescalero, was awarded one of $0 Morris K. Udall scholarships, on the basis of academic merit and nominations by faculties of colleges and universities nationwide. Frizzell attends Stanford University and is majoring in human biology and anthropology.

The one-year scholarship will help to cover the cost of tuition, fees, books and room and board up to a maximum of $5,000. As part of the scholarship, all 50 students were obligated to attend the Udall Scholar Orientation in August in Tucson, Ariz.

The scholarship is open to undergraduate sophomores and juniors studying fields related to the environment and to Native Americans and Alaska Natives in fields related to health care or tribal public policy. Students must have at least a 3.0 GPA and be U.S. citizens.

Interested students should visit the Udall Foundation's Web site at www.udall.gov or contact program manager Kristin Kelling at kelling@udall.gov for more information.

Scholarship available

The deadline to apply for the annual scholarship awarded by Purina Mills and the New Mexico Cattle Growers Association's Young Cattlemen's Committee is Nov. 1.

The $1,000 scholarship is awarded to a New Mexico student who is a member of the NMCGA, the New Mexico Junior Cattle Growers Association, or the child of an NMCGA member. High school juniors and seniors and college freshmen, sophomores and juniors in good academic standing are eligible to apply for the award. Previous winners are eligible to apply, but will not be given preference. For more information or scholarship applications: (505) 247-0584.

Students listed

Three area students are included in the 2001-2002 Who's Who Among American High School Students — Sports Edition.

Local student-athletes include Ariel Burr of Carrizozo, Ashley Fry of Capitan, and Christina Sanchez of San Patricio.

Parenting course

The Counseling Center, in conjunction with Region IX, is offering a six-session parenting course scheduled for 6:30-8:30 p.m. on six consecutive Tuesday evenings beginning Sept. 24.

Classes will be held at the Counseling Center annex at 127 Horton Circle, and is open to all Lincoln County parents. The focus will be on parents and their elementary school children; however, parents with children of other ages are welcome and will find the concepts useful.

Although there is no fee for the course, prior registration is required. For registration or more information, call Genevieve Phelan or Misti Rel at the Counseling Center, 257-5088.

Essay contest open

The Humanist Society of New Mexico's second annual essay contest offers a $1,000 prize for New Mexico juniors and seniors choosing to write about one of the following four subjects: The purpose of education and how it is best achieved in a democracy; ethical questions raised by modern advances in bioengineering; the importance of church-state separation in maintaining religious freedom; a reaction to the statement "Society will abandon religion by the end of this millennium."

Essays are due Dec. 20. For details, students should see their high school English department chair or check <http://newmexico.humanists.net>

Getting a career head start at Ruidoso High

BY SANDY SUGGITT
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

Digital technology made the old photography darkroom obsolete at Ruidoso High School, and Career Pathways made a Career Center necessary, so out of the dark and into the light comes the new Career Center — or the Blue Room, as Cathy Campbell, who presides over it, calls it.

Collaborating with the New Mexico Department of Labor, the high school helps students search for jobs and provides career and college information, military options, as well as national tests, Advanced Placement classes and online classes students need that a school as small as Ruidoso's cannot provide.

The career counselor position was created in 1996, when Campbell also was a secretary in the counseling office. Now she does the full time and has her own space to work with students.

Campbell has consulted with students for years on everything related to post-secondary careers, entering the workforce, applying to colleges and applying for scholarships and financial aid. Now that Career Pathways is in its second year in Ruidoso, eighth graders are getting exposed to the various career paths, on top of their traditional Job Shadow Day, and high school students take overview classes in each area, refining their career search.

This year, 74 students have used the services of the Career Center from Aug. 20, when school started, until Sept. 6.

Campbell said the Career Center provides information on national tests — PSAT, SAT and ACT, the TOEFL test for foreign students — and has shelves of catalogs and resource materials on colleges.

"A lot of juniors and seniors come in now because they're giving the SAT test three times a year instead of twice a year," Campbell said.

She helps freshmen and sophomores look at their high school courses with an eye to making them coincide with their career interests. Students sign up to go to the Career Center, and Campbell calls them out of class.

"I bug them on deadlines for testing and if they have problems — such as, they need to find out if their transcripts have been received or if they've been accepted. I call the schools. I also work with parents on financial aid, or with students who are low income who may not be able to pay an application fee," she said.

Once a week the Department of Labor has a job bank, a data base students can use, and staff helps students on resumes, interviewing techniques.

College recruiters meet with students, usually in the library or the cafeteria, depending on how many of them there are. Sometimes, after giving a presentation, a college recruiter will conduct interviews with students for scholarships, Campbell said. The Career Center also sponsors college days, when recruiters set up booths in the cafeteria. Other times, recruiters come from technical schools to give presentations to students who sign up.

The school counselor, Joy Taylor, said the reason for setting up a career center is to "meet kids where they're at, helping them define and follow through on what excites them about learning and how that interfaces with life, their future goals, post-graduate plans. We're looking at the whole student, and how that interfaces with Career Pathways."

Besides helping students with college and career planning, the four new computers in the Career Center are used by students for online Advanced Placement classes and Intelligent Education, out of the State Department of Education office, through New Mexico Virtual School.

Taylor said right now, about a dozen students are taking six different classes in anatomy and physiology, French, macroeconomics, physics and statistics.

"Students may have a course need for their Career Pathway, but we don't have the class in small Ruidoso," Taylor said.

"We can't be all things for all people," she said. "We have kids coming from the big city, and this is how we're trying to be more than we can actually physically offer ... It's exciting to be able to offer these classes and have them do them online."

Truancy isn't a prank; it's illegal under the law

Few exceptions are provided under New Mexico's compulsory school attendance law.

Scot D. Key, district attorney of the Twelfth Judicial District, has reminded parents of the Compulsory School Attendance Law in New Mexico, which applies to any child under age 18, with certain exceptions.

Key's office and the various school systems and the Juvenile Probation Office have partnered to ensure enforcement of the school attendance law.

If a student is absent from a class or classes for three or more days without an acceptable excuse, the parents will receive a notice from the school. If absences continue, the matter can be referred to the district attorney's office and the parents summoned into Magistrate Court, where they could face a possible fine of up to $100 for a first offense. Subsequent offenses can result in fines of up to $500 and six months in jail.

Once in court, the cases are frequently resolved by an agreement for truancy interventions with the schools, Key said.

The agreements can include shadowing for a number of days (parent going to class with child), parent delivering child to the principal's office in the morning, eating lunch with the child, taking the child to the school nurse to determine whether the child is sick enough to stay home and sending home weekly reports for parental signature.

Studies show that children who do not regularly attend school are more likely to commit delinquent offenses and enter the juvenile justice system. The goal of the district attorney's office is not to file charges against any parent, Key said, but to assure that all children go to school pursuant to state law.

Tribe gets agriculture dollars

$30,000 federal grant to be used for screening foreign animals for diseases

BY DEANNE STILLINGS
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

The Mescalero Apache Tribe is one of three Native American groups in New Mexico selected to receive money to bolster food and agriculture homeland security protections on tribal lands.

In addition to $30,000 for the Mescalero, the Jicarilla Apache were awarded $20,000 and the Navajo Nation for $50,000 as part of a $328 million appropriation approved earlier this year by the Congress to strengthen the U.S. Department of Agriculture's homeland security preparedness.

"It is crucial that we not forget Native American communities as we continue on the path of increased homeland security efforts," said U.S. Rep. Tom Udall, D-N.M. "The USDA will work closely with tribal land officials to develop plans for these funds. As we near the conclusion of the annual appropriation process, I remain determined to steer more funding back to New Mexico for similar efforts."

The money can be used to expand tribal members' ability to conduct foreign animal disease surveillance on tribal land, to enhance foreign animal disease preparedness and response, to develop emergency management plans, to communicate effectively with stakeholders as well as state and federal counterparts and to conduct test exercises for training and development purposes.

The disbursement of the money was based on livestock value and risk factors of each tribal land. Livestock value was determined by census figures applied by the intertribal Agricultural Coalition, the Montana/Wyoming Indian Stock-Growers Association and Land Grant Extension Service input. Risk factors considered included the proximity to a port of entry into the United States, the size of the tribal lands and the tribal lands commerce activity level at ports of entry and borders.

Udall serves on the Native American Caucus of the U.S. House of Representatives and is a member of the House Committee on Resources.

Woman's Club to mark 70th year with meeting

New board members will be presented at the 1:30 p.m. gathering.

Kicking off the group's 70th year, members of the Ruidoso Federated Woman's Club will meet today at the clubhouse on Evergreen Street.

President Sue Brooks will present new board members at the session that begins at 1:30 p.m. Each person will give a brief sketch of her background, her previous home base and the duties of her office.

Plans for the District IV convention in Alamogordo next month are on the agenda for discussion, as well as the election of delegates.

The club's numbers were enhanced this summer by visitor memberships from residents of Texas, Arkansas, Arizona and other towns in New Mexico. Club spokesman Genevieve Duncan said they will be missed this winter for their contributions to the fellowship of the club.

Bacon tries to lead Greens to political prominence in New Mexico

BY STEVE JAHRLING
FOR THE RUIDOSO NEWS

Somewhere amid the heat and noise of a governor's race that has largely focused on Democrat Bill Richardson and Republican John Sanchez is the quiet presence of David Bacon, the Green Party candidate from Santa Fe.

Bacon

Bacon, 53, is an adviser on energy and president of the Southwest Energy Institute, a nonprofit group that promotes solar, geothermal and other renewable energy sources. His running mate for lieutenant governor is Kathy Sanchez, a community activist from San defonso Pueblo. He pulls few punches, and describes Richardson and Sanchez as "corporate politicians" whose financial backers get their money's worth. "It's absurd for these guys to act like they're clean," he said in a recent telephone interview. "We've clearly lost control of democracy — it's pretty much determined by how much money they get."

Bacon said he doesn't see much difference between the two.

"It seems like it's hard to tell who's who," he said. "Both are espousing Republican ideas — Richardson sometimes more than Sanchez."

He bristles when he is reminded of Richardson's statement about Bacon at a recent campaign stop at a meeting of the American Association for Retired Persons. The Democrat called him "a decent guy ... but he's only there to take votes from me."

"That strikes me as an absurd and anti-Democratic statement that indicates a lack of respect for voters and the electoral process," Bacon said. "It's a very demeaning thing to say, but really it demeans Richardson."

During a campaign where labels such as "liberal" and "conservative" are slung around like water balloons in a February cold snap, Bacon said he prefers to be called a "progressive" rather than liberal.

"We base our politics on values, and there's a real need now for value-oriented politics," he said.

Green grow the issues

The Greens' Web site platform contains a list of issues as long as Shaquille O'Neal's arm, including areas deemed important by Bacon: water, jobs, education, health care, energy and political reform. In fact, the official platform statement printed out on a typical computer printer is almost 40 pages long.

Bacon advocates universal, single-payer health care coverage for New Mexicans that would be paid by taxes and employer payroll contributions.

"We have 500,000 uninsured New Mexicans — that right there ought to be a state of emergency," he said. "Sanchez and Richardson are saying that they don't care about 25 percent of the population because they don't give them money."

Bacon also favors an election concept called Instant Runoff Voting, an idea he said works well in Ireland and Australia. Under the system, voters can select their candidates under a 1-2-3 ranking that gives their vote to an alternate choice if their No. 1 pick fails to win.

For example, had a voter cast his or her lot for Green presidential candidate Ralph Nader in 2000, the vote would have slid over to Al Gore's column if the voter ranked Gore as the No. 2 choice, or to George W. Bush if it were vice-versa.

Still, Bacon admitted the Greens, which represent about 2 percent of registered New Mexican voters, have a way to go.

"We're not a fund-raising party," he said. "We need to contact our voter base and work on organizing."

The Greens' efforts are now directed toward getting out their message and being included in the upcoming gubernatorial debates, he said.

The Greens stepped into the spotlight in early July when Republican Party Chairman John Dendahl, on behalf of an unnamed third party, offered to give them a six-figure cash donation if they would field congressional candidates in Districts 1 and 2. The reasoning was that, ostensibly, the Democrats would draw off Democratic votes, thereby improving the GOP's chances of retaining a slim majority in the U.S. House of Representatives.

Green Party Chair Xubi Wilson, who claimed that Richardson offered future support if the Greens promised not to enter a candidate for governor, later resigned when fellow party members criticized Wilson for considering Dendahl's offer. Richardson and fellow Greens have since denied Wilson's claim of a deal offer to Richardson.

Demos, GOP eye Greens

Jamie Koch, state Democratic Party chair, said that the Greens' impact on the race will be minimal, and believes that Richardson will win by getting more votes from Republicans than the Greens will take from Democrats.

"There's no question in my mind that (the Greens) only concern is getting that 5 percent," he said. "But I think they'll have a difficult time getting it this year."

Gaining 5 percent or more of the total votes cast would gain the Green Party major party status in New Mexico, allowing them to field primary candidates along with the Democrats and Republicans.

The Greens briefly enjoyed that position after Roberto Mondragon's 1994 run for governor, when he captured 10 percent of the votes, but lost it when Ralph Nader failed to carry 5 percent in the 2000 presidential election. They sued the Secretary of State's office to regain it, claiming that other Green candidates met the criteria, but lost their case in the state Supreme Court in 2001.

Koch said the Greens are, at heart, very liberal Democrats.

"They decided that the Democrats weren't liberal enough so they founded their own party," he said.

As far as the notion of Instant Runoff Voting goes, Koch said he likes it.

"That's fine with us," he said. "We'd get the (Green) vote anyway."

Dendahl believes that the Green Party appeals to those whose sensibilities are offended by the rough-and-tumble, and sometimes nasty, side of politics.

"They'll get favor from a small group of people who think politics are dirty — but that's the way American electoral politics have always been," he said. "Politics has always been a dirty game and people who play it will sometimes do something illegal."

When Dendahl was approached by the still-unnamed third party about the cash deal, he said he told them he wasn't sure it would work, but agreed to make the offer anyway.

"I told them I doubted that the Greens would automatically siphon votes from the Democrats," he said. "I think they represent people who are mad at both parties for being too corporate — they (look at a ballot and) vote 'none of the above.'"

Dendahl said that Bacon's presence won't hurt Richardson.

"Bill Richardson is in the fight of his political life with John Sanchez," he said.

Ruidoso takes no prisoners in rout of Socorro

BY TODD FUQUA

RUIDOSO NEWS SPORTS EDITOR

If Ruidoso head coach Ridge Bowden had any questions about his special teams going into Friday's game against Socorro, a very big one was answered in the fourth quarter.

Socorro punted the ball, a 35-yard boomer by Kevin Haley, which was taken by Josh Adams and run back 50 yards for a touchdown.

It would have been considered the play of the game, if Ruidoso hadn't had a 42-6 lead already.

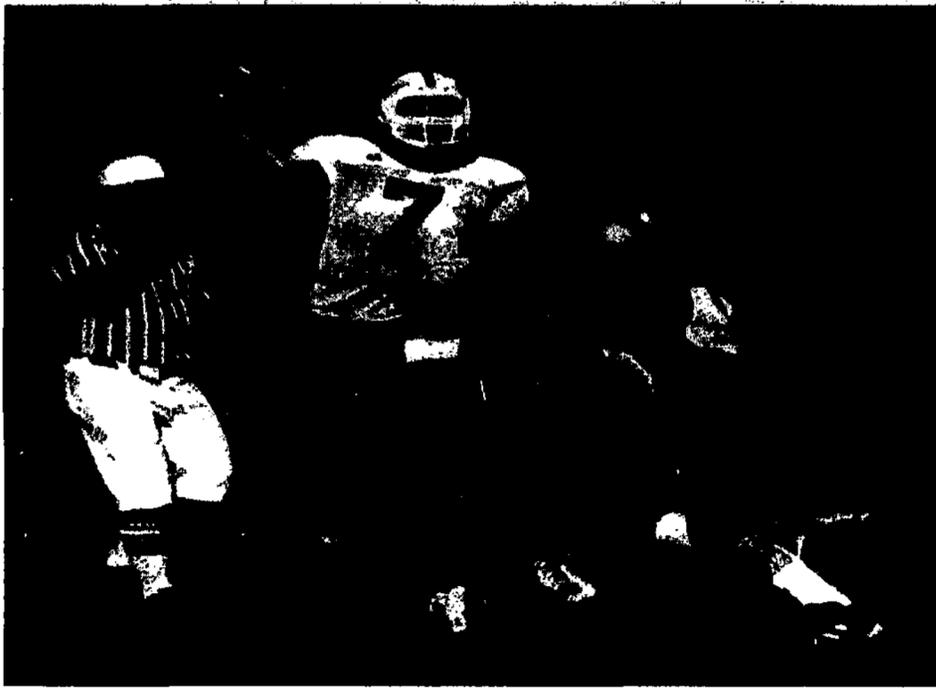

With the final play, Ruidoso put the final touches on a 49-6 victory and showed they might be a team to be reckoned with in this year's playoffs.

"This game was similar to last year, but with a new coach and a new system, we had some high expectations," Bowden said. "We got better, and had a lot of good plays from everybody, not just one or two kids."

Ruidoso (1-1) wasted little time in getting on the board first, recovering a Socorro fumble on the fourth play of the game, then marching 44 yards and scoring on a 16-yard run by quarterback Josh Adams.

After kicking off to Socorro (0-2), Ruidoso again scored when — just two plays later — Steven Stroup picked a fumble by Socorro's Kenny Gonzales out of the air and rumbled 22 yards for the Warriors' second touchdown.

That pretty much set the tone for the rest of the half, as Ruidoso seemed to be able to score at will, with Adams scoring a second touchdown on a 41-yard run in the second quarter and connecting twice with Casey Mirau for two more scores.

Mirau also had a 23-yard rush for a score, as he consistently victimized Socorro cornerback Caleb Gonzales for big yardage — including a 53-yard gain in the second quarter which set up Adams' second score of the game.

Ruidoso threw quite a bit into the contest. Adams had 156 yards in the air, connecting with Mirau just four times for a whopping 120 yards. As a team, the Warriors had 189

Lady Tigers win season opener on the road

BY TODD FUQUA

RUIDOSO NEWS SPORTS EDITOR

MESCALERO — It took Capitan just three games to dispose of Mescalero in each team's first match of the season.

But Lady Tiger coach Sherry Gowen is still hoping to see more improvement in her team.

"There were problems on transition. When we were serving, they were sending it right back over on the first touch, and they got some points off of that," Gowen said. "Little things on basic coverage and fine tuning is what it boils down to."

Capitan's performance echoed Gowen's sentiment, alternating strong net play by Jessica Tully-Mitchell and Candle Turner with errors which can only be attributed to a lack of court awareness.

Capitan won the match 15-7, 15-7, 15-3, but it was those mistakes which kept Mescalero just one point back well into the first game.

Indeed, the Lady Chiefs opened up the scoring on a Capitan error, and took a 3-0 lead, seemingly ready to christen their brand new gym

Rough start to season for area runners

BY TODD FUQUA

RUIDOSO NEWS SPORTS EDITOR

It may not have been the way Ruidoso cross-country coach Ronny Maskew wanted to start the season, but he believes the Warriors will get better following their first meet at Alamogordo.

Ruidoso's boys finished 12th out of 13 teams at the Tross Invitational Saturday, while the girls took eighth.

"We didn't do very well, the sun got to us," Maskew said. "The girls did better, but we were a little off on our pace."

Maskew knows his team can be better. "The girls were flat and we were slow," he said. "We need to be better in the future."

while Page placed 69th at 18:54. The winning runner came in with a time of 15:48. Gus Fajardo finished 85th for Ruidoso, running at 20:52.

While the official results stand, Maskew said there was one runner who accidentally cut the course short, taking about 30 runners with him. That mistake caused the results to be skewed, as Cory Small, Jesus Linares, A.J. Richardson and John Reynolds had official times, but could not be placed among the finishers.

But whatever the reason, Maskew knows his team can be better.

"The girls were flat and we were slow," he said. "We need to be better in the future."

that, so we'll have to get used to it. We're going to do better, we just have to get with it."

As for the Lady Warriors, Maskew was pleased with the effort, but still saw a brighter future ahead for the girls.

"They finished better than the boys, but were still in the middle of the pack," Maskew said. "I had a couple of freshmen and an eighth-grader run well. There are a couple of girls that will be fine and help us improve a bit."

All in all, Maskew said the Warriors will be better in the future.

Ruidoso Netters beat Carlsbad, face Moriarty

BY TODD FUQUA

RUIDOSO NEWS SPORTS EDITOR

After a week which saw the Ruidoso volleyball team play inconsistently at best, coach Maria Bennett spent three solid days of practice working on the basics — passing, setting and hitting.

That work paid off with a win Saturday at Carlsbad, as the Lady Warriors were able to take home a three game, 15-5, 15-6, 15-10 victory.

"In the first game, we came out like we usually do," Bennett said of the opening frame. "Our serving was on and they (Carlsbad) made a lot of errors. The same thing happened in the second game."

The fact that Saturday was Carlsbad's first match of the season obviously had something to do with it, but that Ruidoso (3-4) played a more consistent game helped a great deal as well.

The Lady Warriors let down a bit in the third game, as their play dipped slightly. "We relaxed a bit and played down to their level," Bennett said.

But Ruidoso was able to overcome that drop in intensity to win the match in advance of Tuesday's game against Moriarty.

Coming into that game, Bennett was hoping for improvements in a number of the team's facets, not the least of which is passing.

"I'd like to see the serve reception be a little better," Bennett said. "Once we get that better, then we can work on different plays when setting the ball."

"We want to speed up our offense, especially in the middle," she added. "With a shorter set, we need to be able to attack. We need to be better in the future."

The results from the Carlsbad match were good, but Bennett said the team needs to be better in the future.

WARRIORS: Big night for Ruidoso gridders yards passing and 278 yards in total offense, compared to Socorro's 124.

"We probably threw more in the first half than all last week," Bowden said. "I was pleased with the kids coming out and executing."

Indeed, the team executed so well that, with a 42-0 lead at the half, Bowden put in his second team the rest of the way — trying to get the younger kids more experience at the varsity level.

It's obvious the experience was needed, as Ruidoso was unable to get any kind of consistent drive going, and allowed Socorro their only score in the fourth quarter, when Byrom Rico connected with Joseph Riechenbach on a 42-yard pass with 8:18 left in the game.

After another Ruidoso drive stalled, Socorro found themselves pinned on their own 15 and had to punt. It was that punt that Adams took back for his third touchdown of the game.

"Special teams was one of our concerns, so it's evident we did better," said Bowden, whose team suffered from bad field position in last week's game against Robertson. "Some organization was still lacking at times, but this is only the second game. We had a lot of substitution problems, but I guess having a lot of players to substitute is a good problem to have."

Now that they've got that first win under their belt, Ruidoso must now prepare for a big contest on the road against 4A school Moriarty, a team which attacked the state by defeating District 4-4A opponents Roswell and Goddard to get to the postseason last year.

"I just hope we can continue improving," Bowden said. "The players have really responded positively to everything we've put on them."

Notes: While Ruidoso did dominate Socorro in just about every offensive category, the S.Warriors actually had just two fewer first downs in the game, even though they didn't get their first one until midway through the second quarter. Ruidoso did have a scare in the first quarter, when Socorro punted and the ball skipped about. A Ruidoso player touched it, but was unable to secure the ball before the Socorro defenders pounced and regained possessions at the Ruidoso 24. After four plays and a 16-yard penalty, however, the S.Warriors had to punt. Another glaring problem for the local Warriors was penalties. Ruidoso committed 11 infractions for 102 total yards, including an off-side and unsportsmanlike double-penalty which backed them up 25 yards following their fifth touchdown in the second quarter. Now attempting what was actually a 40-yard field goal, the Warriors were forced to attempt a pass when Adams muffed the snap. The 2-point conversion was no good.

"We had a lot of substitution problems, but I guess having a lot of players to substitute is a good problem to have."

HARRIERS: Mescalero, Ruidoso get bumped at Alamo

Melody LaBrosse (22:07, 36th), Amanda Montes (22:37, 49th) and Jennifer Lewicki (23:31, 63rd).

In the junior varsity ranks, Elizabeth Duffy paced the Lady Warriors with a time of 29:54, while Eleanor Ordeles turned in a 31:05. For the JV boys, Sean Lany ran the course in 21:38, Austin Kirk followed with a 25:41 and Chase Harris had a 26:50. Jeffery Quamada ran the two-mile C-team course in 25:08. Ruidoso heads to Roswell this coming Saturday for another experience in hot, dry and flat running.

Mescalero

The Mescalero harriers were also at the Alamogordo meet, and Warren Sago paced his team with a time of 19:21 and a 49th-place finish. Delmar Morgan finished 83rd with a time of 19:22, followed by Gifford Valdez (20:52, 86th) and Freeman Cochise (22:09, 90th). Also scheduled to be in Roswell this Saturday coach Thurman Sanchez instead decided to take the Chiefs to Coles, hoping to get them more used to mountainous courses.

"That's what we run in, and that's pretty much what the state meet will be like," Sanchez said, referring to Red Rocks State Park in Gallup, site for state this year. "Plus, the kids just find it more interesting to run that kind of course."

Locally owned horse places in G2 Mile High Derby

AURORA, Colo. — Shady Lady Eo, a 3-year-old brown mare owned by Rudy Ramirez and Larry Rice of Ruidoso Downs, took third place in the $79,615 Mile High Derby Sept. 1 at Arapahoe Park.

Shady Lady Eo, ridden by Bonifacio Perez and trained by Rudy Ramirez, covered the 400-yard race in a time of 20.018. The top finishers for the race were Corona Music, The Works, Shady Lady Eo, Notorious Gunslinger and Harbor Beach.

Corona Music paid $3.60 to win, $2.80 to place and $2.50 to show, while The Works paid $3.20 to place and $2.80 to show. Shady Lady Eo paid $3.20 to show. The exacta paid $11.20 with the quinella paying $7.80 and $31.00 paid out for the trifecta.

with a decisive win.

After a brief timeout by Gowen, however, the Lady Tigers (1-0) got down to business. They scored three straight points to tie the game, then began getting kill after kill by Tully-Mitchell to score the next nine points in succession.

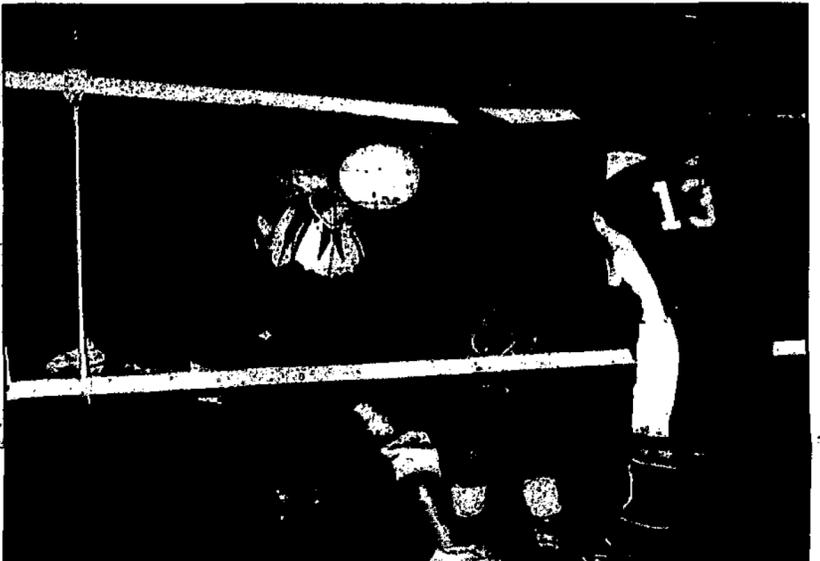

Mescalero (0-1) again took advantage of Capitan errors to score four more points of their own, as Lady Chief Augusta Lang began blocking a few balls meant to fall on Mescalero's side of the net.

The Lady Chiefs also showed their serving prowess, as Sheriene Davis and Yvette Martinez sent some wicked shots just over the net, but by that point, the lead was too great to overcome.

The Lady Tigers wasted no time in the second game, starting tied 1-1, but then using momentum to take an 11-1 lead before a Capitan error allowed the Lady Chiefs to bite into the lead.

Mescalero refused to go quietly after that, denying the Lady Tigers on four game point serves while steadily climbing their way closer.

Capitan eventually took the game on a net call on Lang, putting Capitan up 2-0. After taking her team to the locker

'Zozo pulls double whammy on gridiron

BY TODD FLOQUA
RUIDOSO NEWS SPORTS EDITOR

Opening a season with 54-6 win is always a good way to start any season. For the Carrizozo football team, this was no exception.

The Grizzlies defeated Magdalena by the above score Friday in their home opener, a feat which Carrizozo coach Pat Ventura said was a very good thing, given his team hadn't seen any action on the field since a scrimmage two weeks ago at Melrose.

"We did some good things," Ventura said. "We gelled well on offense, and the defense didn't have many mistakes. They executed well."

Jack Green led the Grizzlies with close to 400 yards and six touchdowns — accounting for almost all of Carrizozo's points in the game. Ventura was also pleased with Joe Samora at quarterback and defensive ends Trevor Douglas and Sam Green.

The Grizzlies (1-0) move on to play at Reserve Saturday, a game Ventura views with a bit more trepidation.

"I know they're better than Magdalena," Ventura said. "They've got a good running back and good coaches that will make them work. We'll have to be ready mentally."

Carrizozo JV

On Saturday, the Carrizozo junior varsity played a brand new Corona squad 45-0 that Ventura said was more like a scrimmage.

"They (Corona) was really green, and they were learning," Ventura said. "But they did good, they're tough and could take some hits."

"Our kids looked good, but they had a lot more experience," he added.

The Grizzly JV take on Mescalero today, while Corona takes on Hondo at home this Saturday at 2 p.m.

Ruidoso booters still on the road

Neither the boys nor girls soccer teams will play at home until a double-header Sept. 21 against Santa Teresa at Horton Stadium.

BY TODD FLOQUA
RUIDOSO NEWS SPORTS EDITOR

It's been a long road trip for the Ruidoso soccer teams, and it will be just a bit longer before either one hosts a game at Horton Stadium.

Until then, the Warriors and Lady Warriors will continue to battle on the road, as they did this past weekend.

The Ruidoso girls lost three games in the Lady Rocket Invitational at Roswell, while the boys dropped a 10-0 decision to former district foe Santa Teresa.

"We didn't play as well as the last time," said boys coach Wally Murillo of his team's loss to Santa Teresa, in contrast with a 2-0 victory over the Desert Warriors in the Alamogordo tournament. "Being in El Paso and the heat, it kind of wore them out."

Murillo said the team is still young, and most of the squads they face are larger in numbers.

"But that helps us, playing a more skilled team gets us ready for district," Murillo added. "We're all learning, trying to get into a situation where we can use our players to the best of their abilities."

As for the girls, the Lady Warriors dropped all three of their contests, although coach Sigurd Schmitz was much happier about the way the team had improved over last year.

"We played better against Goddard," Schmitz said of his team's 7-0 loss. "We gave up a couple of goals we could have saved. Then we played Taos, one of the best teams we've seen."

Taos beat Ruidoso 9-0, but Schmitz pointed out that the score was 7-0 at the half.

"After I talked to them at half, we held them to just two goals," Schmitz said. "I got a lot of the girls to play as a team and hustle."

The Lady Warriors closed out the tournament with a 4-0 loss to Roswell.

"We had our chances in that one," Schmitz said. "But the heat and fatigue got to us."

The Lady Warriors played Las Cruces junior varsity Tuesday in Las Cruces, while the boys face a talented Moriarty team on the road Thursday at 4 p.m.

Greyhounds open season with close win

What looked like another rout of cross-state rival WNMU turned out to be somewhat of a struggle for Eastern.

BLACKWATER DRAW — A game-opening 50-yard rush by quarterback Heath Ridenour Saturday seemed to portend another big win by Eastern New Mexico over perennial foe Western New Mexico.

But for most of the 27-20 win, it wasn't to be that way.

Western (1-1) startled the Portales crowd by taking a 14-7 lead with just over four minutes left in the first half, and the Hounds (1-0) played from behind after that until tying the score midway through the fourth quarter.

The Mustangs kept Eastern spread out defensively, at times going with an empty backfield. Damien Ocampo, who transferred from New Mexico State before last season, was sacked on consecutive plays on WNMU's first possession but was able to cause Eastern problems throughout the game with his mobility.

The Hounds moved the ball well, rolling up 446 yards, but were plagued by three lost fumbles. Also, freshman kicker Joe Barnes missed two field goals and an extra point.

Sophomore free safety Ty Touchstone, starting because of an injury to senior Jonathan Solis, was in on a team-high 10 tackles and picked off a pair of second-half passes. In the final minute, he broke up a pass intended for Angulo in the end zone, then two plays later made a game-clinching interception.

On Sunday, Ridenour and Touchstone were named the Lone Star Conference South Division players of the week on offense and defense, respectively.

Aggie coaches look back on tragic day

BY BRONKH STUCKENBERGER FOR THE RUIDOSO NEWS

With the morning came music. New Mexico State coaches Nikita Lowry (women's basketball) and Mike Jordan (volleyball), commonly start each day with their respective stereos putting forth whatever tunes strike their fancy. Their televisions sit silent. That was the scene on Sept. 11, 2001.

But as the coaches geared up for another day of work in the world of athletics — Jordan's thoughts were on a trip with his team to Texas and Lowry looked forward to more work to prepare for her first season on the Aggie bench — their phones began to ring as the assistant coaches spread the news.

"Tricia called and told me to turn on the television," Jordan said in reference to his assistant Tricia Wright. The volleyball coach tuned in in time to watch the collapse of the towers of the World Trade Center.

"I turned it on just as the first tower was ready to go down," he said. "I was in total shock and amazement."

The Aggies were scheduled to leave that day for games with Texas-Corpus Christi and Texas-Pan American.

"It didn't even dawn on me that we might have to cancel our trip," Jordan remembered. "It was going on on the other side (of the country) and at first you weren't even sure it was a terrorist act or if it was an accident. It was Tricia who first said, 'We're probably not going.'"

With the status of games in doubt, the volleyball team gathered for practice.

"From the players' perspective, everybody was nervous," he said. "We met briefly."

By that time, more information was known about what was happening in America and talk turned to travel. The Aggies were, after all, in the midst of the season and if and when the airports were reopened, the team would have to once again take to the air.

"A couple of people were a little apprehensive," Jordan said. "But we said, 'What are we going to do, take a bus to Miami?'"

Lowry's basketball team would not have to travel right away. The season did not start for another two months. The coach met with her team at the school's track.

"We were at the track running, but we were getting updates on what was happening," Lowry said.

The basketball coach had received news of the attacks the same way as her colleague.

"In the morning I like to listen to my music," she said. "(Assistant) coach (Marlene) Stollings called and told me I'd better turn on the TV. She said 'The World Trade Centers have been knocked down, coach you've got to turn it on.'"

"I turn it on and I see the replay and I was like, 'What is going on?'"

The effects of that day were felt as the teams returned to the skies. The volleyball team was never able to reschedule the Corpus Christi game but was able to shuffle Pan American back onto its slate.

The extra security at the airports became a trial for the athletics teams on the road. Both teams missed flights at one time or another thanks to the extra time taken with security.

Lobos drop conference opener to Air Force in overtime

In the first overtime game involving two Mountain West Conference teams, Air Force took a 38-31 victory Saturday at the Academy, snapping a three-game losing streak to the Lobos in the process.

Air Force fullback Steve Massie scored on a 4-yard touchdown run on the Falcons' first overtime possession. New Mexico (1-2, 0-1 in the Mountain West Conference) advanced to the Air Force 11 on its ensuing possession, but three straight incomplete passes by quarterback Casey Kelly ended the Lobos' scoring chance.

The Falcons jumped out to a 24-10 lead midway through the second quarter before New Mexico surged back with a furious rally over the final minutes of the half. Similar to its last game versus Weber State, the UNM defense and special teams sparked the comeback. After the defense forced the Falcons to go three-and-out, senior Brandon Gregory blocked the punt at the Falcon 6-yard-line. Three plays later, Kelly lunged into the endzone to cut the deficit to 24-17.

New Mexico regained possession with less than 30 seconds remaining in the half, which proved to be just enough time for a big play by senior running back Quincy Wright. On first-and-10 from the Air Force 48, Kelly hit Wright with a short screen pass on the right-sideline. Following solid blocking by the Lobo offensive linemen, Wright burst through several arm tackles, then cut back across the grain and sprinted for the touchdown to knot the game at 24 going into the half.

Air Force controlled the tempo early in the second half, running 22 of the first 25 plays of the third quarter. QB Chance Harridge capped a 14-play, 80-yard drive on the Falcons' second possession with a 1-yard sneak to put the Air Force ahead 31-24.

The New Mexico offense responded as Kelly completed 5 of 6 passes on the Lobos' next possession to lead the team to the tying score. UNM converted all three third-down plays on the drive, including an impressive 20-yard strike from Kelly to WR Terrance Thomas on a 3rd-and-12 play from the Lobo 39. Three plays later, Wright pulled in a screen pass and scampered 20 yards down to the Air Force 13. UNM came right back with another screen to WR Joe Manning, who followed a convoy of blockers for the score to tie the game at 31 apiece with 11:03 remaining in regulation.

Both offenses sputtered down the stretch. New Mexico advanced to its own 38-yard line with a minute left in regulation before being forced to punt, while Air Force's final drive of the second half ended when Harridge was intercepted by UNM linebacker Nick Speegle just inside Lobo territory.
