Highway work on after judge denies motion

Injunction case referred to N.M. court

BY DIANNE STALLINGS
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

Construction on U.S. 70 east of Ruidoso Downs started up again Friday after a federal judge denied a request for a temporary restraining order on the 38-mile highway widening project.

U.S. District Judge Reggie B. Walton in the District of Columbia federal court also deferred ruling on a request by the Valley Community Preservation Commission and several private land owners for a preliminary injunction. He referred the motion filed by the New Mexico Environmental Law Center on behalf of the commission back to the U.S. District Court in New Mexico.

In his order issued Thursday, Walton wrote that "the Court is not prepared to agree that the preservation of historic resources outweighs the preservation of human lives."

Since Labor Day weekend, five people have died in vehicle accidents on the stretch of U.S. 70 scheduled to be widened to four lanes. The scenic route through the Hondo Valley already has the reputation as one of the deadliest roads in the state.

The judge also ruled that the commission and other plaintiffs failed to demonstrate a likelihood of success on the claim that the U.S. Department of Transportation violated federal regulations by using an engineering firm with a conflict of interest.

Heather Green, an attorney with the law center, said Tuesday that the people she represents in the valley were disappointed by the ruling.

"There are a lot of historical properties and a lot of cultural issues at stake here," she said. "The judge's denial of the preliminary injunction makes it really difficult for the group to address those issues and makes it difficult for the highway department to adequately address those issues before they begin construction."

"As far as where we go from here, we'll be meeting with the group as to whether they want to fight the motion for change of venue, or take other possible options like file something in New Mexico, but we haven't decided yet."

The referral of the motion for a preliminary injunction to a New Mexico federal district court causes more delay for the

When Shirley Mirau, a resident of Ruidoso Care Center, climbed on a Harley Davidson motorcycle behind driver Steve Shultzaberger Friday, she waved off a waiting helmet.

Part of the fun, the 69-year-old said, is feeling the wind blowing through her hair.

Mirau and about a dozen of her friends at the center lined up for cycle rides provided by members of the Local Bikers of Lincoln County, a 20-member group that eagerly responded to a request from care center official Vaunda King-Stenzel.

Tammy Mattingly and Ann Shultzaberger, members of the local bikers and of Santa Helpers, quickly rounded up four drivers to provide the rides.

Probably the oldest person to slip on board was 99-year-old Anita Valesquez.

Mike Stenzel, Phil Mattingly and others joined Shultzaberger to give rides to all comers, including one elderly blind resident, who reveled in the experience and wants a second trip.

"I hope when I'm that age, I have the desire to do something like this and there's someone around to help me do it," said King-Stenzel.

Tribal council member will fight to overturn election, get on ballot

BY DIANNE STALLINGS
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

Although results from Tuesday's primary election in Mescalero weren't available late Tuesday, one member of the tribal council is fighting to overturn the outcome and to schedule a new vote with his name on the ballot.

That may require filing in U.S. District Court, if the Mescalero Apache Tribal Council won't hear his appeal of an election board decision not to qualify him as a candidate, said Oliver Enjady, an artist and tribal council member who wanted to run for re-election.

"I decided I had to talk about this because a lot of people were asking if I submitted my name (as a candidate)," Enjady said Tuesday. "I know some tribal members don't want this out in public, but I believe it is my only way of reaching out to the people of Mescalero to let them know I was a candidate and I am still fighting to get my name on the ballot.

"I don't want this happening to other people who follow me into elective office. We have rights guaranteed to us by the 1968 Civil Rights Act and by both the tribal and United States constitutions that we take an oath on. We should be protected by such laws."

Enjady served as vice president in 1998-99, but when then-president Paul Ortega was replaced by Misquez, Enjady also was removed.

The election board's decision seems to fly in the face of a council 5-2 vote in May 1999 that allowed Enjady to run for president and then for the council in 2000, where he serves today, the council member pointed out.

Enjady responded to the election board with the minutes from that council meeting in which that board agreed that any charges against him "are not sufficient to preclude him from running for office in the future."

He was notified Sept. 22 by election board chairman Carmen Mendez that her board rejected his appeal. The next day, he filed with the tribal council asking them to intervene and reinstate his name on the ballot.

On Sept. 24, he received a letter from Tribal President Sara Misquez, not the tribal council as a whole, advising him the tribal court had jurisdiction and he

Slight tax break on the way for most county homeowners

Property values are up, but the break won't be enough to retire on.

BY DIANNE STALLINGS
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

A $15.4 million increase in property values throughout Lincoln County means many homeowners may see their tax bills go down this year by about 1 percent.

Not enough for a trip to the Bahamas, but some relief may be in store if a homeowner hasn't renovated or added onto a house, says County Assessor Rick Silva.

For example, last year, the owner of a $300,000 home in Alto, was taxed 16.279 mills on $100,000, one third of the house's market value, for a bill of $1,628. If nothing has changed, this year, that owner will pay $1,540. One mill equates to $1 for each $1,000 of taxable value.

In Ruidoso, the same homeowner was taxed $2,798 last year and will pay $2,769 this year, based on tax rates certified by the County Commission in Ruidoso Monday.

One tax area that dipped was the commercial side, Silva said, but he was unsure why. The drop possibly was tied to a slump in the telecommunication industry, he said. The number of building contractors working in the county also decreased, he said, but added that should change when the East U.S. 70 widening project starts.

Because property was not reappraised this year, the $15 million increase in the tax base represents new construction, additions, renovations and other taxable goods, such as livestock. Silva said most of the building action occurred in and around Alto, which falls within the Capitan school taxing district, and in the unincorporated portion of the county.

The residential taxable property in Alto, Ranches of Sonterra and related areas was placed at $126,079,606 for the 2002 tax roll, an increase of $6.67 million or 5.3 percent over last year. That's slightly down from the 7.5 percent increase from 2000 to 2001 of $8.34 million.

In Ruidoso, the new residential value hit $196,282,456, a $5.2

Councilors looking to help urban forester with department

The money for the new department would come from an airport fund.

BY DIANNE STALLINGS
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

Despite some reservations about the price tag and about the effect on other village operations, Ruidoso councilors Saturday leaned toward creating a new Urban Forester department.

They told acting village manager Lorri McKnight and the village attorney to start the process by which a portion of money in an airport fund could be redirected to other uses such as the urban forestry effort.

McKnight pointed out that creating a department would require a new job description and higher salary for urban forester Rick Delaco. All expenses now absorbed by the planning and zoning department would have to be budgeted and paid for by the new department.

Even if a new department isn't created, hiring an assistant to help Delaco would violate a hiring freeze put in place months ago amid dire warnings from former village manager Alan Briley that next year either taxes would have to go up or services and staff would have to be cut.

"Please remember the trauma we went through with the budget," she said. "We're still under a hiring freeze. There are departments out there working one or two people short because we're not replacing them. None of the things you're talking about are in the budget."

"But Alan admitted to me that some departments were over-staffed and that by attrition, they would get back to where they should be," said Mayor Leon Eggleston.

McKnight had asked for direction from the council, because she wasn't sure what they wanted after a meeting last week.

She explained that Delaco is operating on two grants. The collaborative Forest Restoration Grant is large enough to have its own fund for audit purposes, but the other, for $185,000 to reduce trees along Eagle Creek, is managed through the general fund, she said. To facilitate the operation, the urban forester was placed under the planning and zoning department and the village collects 10 percent for administration of the grant, about $8,500, she said.

Councilor Ron Anderson said Delaco already is overloaded doing forest health assessments on lots and related projects, and the work will continue to increase over the next few years. He said he wanted to see an assistant hired and a new department created.

But Mike Runnels, director of village planning and zoning, assured councilors that what Delaco most needs is an assistant and that the department could come later.

"We're not there yet," he said. "Rick got a raise and I'm recommending another in November. What he really needs is an assistant and I have that job description."

Three seasonal employees also will be added in March, Runnels said.

But Anderson said planning and zoning also is smashed with work and that situation will only get worse as the community grows. Projects would move faster if they went straight to Delaco and not through another department first, he said.

Councilor Deborah Marcum-Byars said Briley had suggested possibly moving the urban forester under the solid waste department, but McKnight said she saw financial accounting problems with that approach.

Councilor L. Ray Nunley said Delaco should aim at some large grants to boost his department and to generate more administration money. Byars said he's already going for grants in the half a million to $700,000 range and that he'd received positive feedback from U.S. Forest Service officials about the prospects for approval.

"So the money isn't in our pocket, but it's out there," she said.

McKnight said she will be ready with an update on costs and procedures at the council's meeting Oct. 8.

ELECTION: Enjady fighting president's ruling

could file for an interpretation of the tribal constitution.

Enjady disputed that response, pointing to a written opinion from a Bureau of Indian Affairs official in 2001 that the "The Tribe, represented by the Tribal Council, has the ultimate authority to interpret their own constitution." He contended the council was the body to make the decision, but at the same time, filed in tribal court, asking that his name be added to the ballot.

He picked up the court's decision Tuesday morning and at first was disappointed to see the case was dismissed.

"But then I read the basis for the dismissal, which states that the tribal court has no jurisdiction," Enjady said.

"The request for an emergency intervention does not raise any constitutional issues for the court to address," stated Chief Judge Sharon M. Begay.

Tuesday, Enjady also received a letter from Misquez saying she would not call a special meeting to cover his situation and three other issues proposed for discussion.

She wrote that Enjady had failed to provide court documents. She also wrote that five members of the council would have conflicts of interest if they voted on his case. Member Raymond Kirgan is a brother-in-law, she pointed out, and Enjady shouldn't vote on his own situation. Three other members of the council are running for re-election and also shouldn't vote, she contended.

But Enjady said if those three members voted for a new election, they may be voting against their own financial self-interest and would not be in conflict.

"I see little difference between my situation and what happened last year," Enjady said, referring to a tribal council decision to nullify an election in which Misquez was defeated for the presidency by Mark Chino. As grounds for the action, the council cited the use of voting machines instead of paper ballots, required under the tribe's election code. Misquez was elected in the new vote.

Tribal spokesman Ed Moreno said Tuesday that Enjady knew well ahead of time that there were questions about his candidacy and had an opportunity to prepare a case, should the election board's decision go against him.

Moreno said when Enjady filed his complaint, the chief judge was out of the office and didn't hear of the petition until Monday. Moreno also said that Enjady requested Misquez to call a special council meeting, but that she refused since one day's notice is required, which would have put the meeting after the election.

"There wasn't any deliberate attempt to keep Mr. Enjady off the ballot," Moreno said.

The delay in his appeal occurred when he was directed to the tribal court by the president, Enjady contended. His initial appeal was filed with the tribal council in plenty of time to put his name on the ballot.

In her letter, Misquez wrote that because of the conflict of interest, "it is best to leave this matter in the hands of the independent tribal and federal courts."

Because the president refused to call a special meeting, Enjady said his next effort will be to gather support from at least two other members of the tribal council - as required by tribal rules - to call for a special session on overturning the election. He may also file an action in federal court.

million or 2.6 percent increase from last year, which is down from the $13.35 million or 7.46 percent increase from 2000 to 2001.

Ruidoso Downs taxable property value only inched up $235,623 from last year at $11,414,905.

"This was a tough tax roll to finalize," Silva said. "The first figures from the state (Department of Finance and Administration) showed rates we knew were wrong. This is the third set we've received and they just arrived this morning."

Silva said the addition of an appraiser to his staff who picked up more livestock value also helped the figures in the non-appraisal year. Cattle value increased by 11 percent, horses and mules by 30 percent and an entirely new value was posted for pigs, buffalo and ratites (ostrich and emu).

County Manager Tom Stewart said the county treasurer's office projected income of $2,910,000 in property taxes for the county's 2002-2003 budget, but has revised that figure to $2,958,517.

Silva said only one tax protest remains to be settled and shouldn't affect totals significantly.

Increased tax rates occurred in the Corona Sanitation District and Hondo was up about 1 percent on the residential side, he said. The decrease in tax rates for towns of Capitan and Corona were connected in part to those entities becoming debt free this year, he said.

Next year, property across the county will be reappraised and the tax rolls will pick up the large Windmill Ranches property east of Carrizozo, he said.

"So values should go up and taxes go down," said Chairman Rex Wilson.

Council, mayor to speak with manager candidates

BY DIANNE STALLINGS
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

Three local applicants for Ruidoso village manager and four from out of town were picked for personal interviews by the full council Saturday.

The original list of 62 applications was narrowed to 12 by members of a selection committee composed of Mayor Leon Eggleston and Councilors Ron Anderson and Ron Hardeman. They eliminated names using a rating system based on input from the full council.

Last week, Eggleston reported that two more dropped off because they took other jobs. Saturday, during a closed personnel session as part of a special meeting, two more were eliminated, the mayor said. He hopes to complete interviews with local candidates during the next week and then talk to those from other areas on Oct. 12 during a closed session, he said Tuesday.

Although it is up to the mayor to select a village manager, Eggleston said, "I feel the whole council should be part of this when it comes down to interviewing. The manager doesn't just work for the mayor. The person works for the whole governing body and if one or two councilors don't like a candidate, that should be considered."

Before he left in August, Alan Briley was earning $70,000 a year as village manager. He received a $20,000 a year pay boost at his new manager job in a town of similar size in Colorado.

Mescalero man jailed after standoff

BIA and NMSP officials worked together to resolve the situation.

BY DIANNE STALLINGS
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

A 36-year-old man was arrested on an outstanding warrant early Sunday in Mescalero after he barricaded himself in the home of a former companion.

Troy Bolin, Bureau of Indian Affairs police chief in Mescalero, said his department received a call at 10:42 p.m. Saturday from Jackie Baca, 32, that a man was trying to pull the bars off of the windows of her home.

When officers arrived they learned that Fabian Aguilar, 36, who had been living with Baca, was intoxicated and became involved in a domestic fight with her. When officers attempted to approach the residence, Aguilar came to the porch carrying a rifle or shotgun, Bolin said. He refused to put the gun down, saying he wouldn't be taken in by the officers. He then entered the house, which was empty.

A check through the National Criminal Information Computer came up with an active warrant on Aguilar from Eddy County.

Bolin called the New Mexico State Police and, while waiting for that agency's tactical team, established a perimeter around the house and evacuated other residences.

Attempts by Bolin and an FBI agent to contact Aguilar by telephone were unsuccessful and he did not respond to requests over a public address system.

By 4 a.m. Sunday, the tactical team members arrived, but they also couldn't raise Aguilar. They fired a respiratory and eye irritant into the house and when Aguilar poked his head out of a second-floor window, told him to come outside. He was taken into custody without further protest.

A medical examination showed that his leg, cut a few days earlier with a chainsaw, was severely infected and in need of immediate treatment. He was taken by the state police to the Lincoln County Medical Center in Ruidoso and then to jail.

Bolin thanked participating agencies for their help in controlling a potentially violent situation.

One dead, one hurt in U.S. 54 wreck

BY DIANNE STALLINGS
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

A 29-year-old man was treated for injuries in a roll-over on U.S. 54 early Friday, but officers with the New Mexico State Police didn't find out until hours later that another person was riding in the car.

They returned to the scene about six miles south of Corona late Friday and some time early Saturday found the body of Gena Cisneros, who was ejected about 80 feet from where the four-door Mercury flipped end-over-end at least three times, according to Lt. William Bower.

No age or place of residence was listed for Cisneros, he said.

Based on details from investigating officer Antonio Gutierrez, Bower said the department received a call about the accident at 12:21 a.m. Friday. When he arrived, the officer found David Anaya, 29, from Hobbs, who was drifting in and out of consciousness. The injured man was flown by medical helicopter to the University of New Mexico Hospital in Albuquerque.

He eventually was able to tell officer that a woman was riding in the 2000-model car with him. Bower said the Mercury was heading north on the highway when the driver crossed the centerline, over-corrected and left the road, flipping the vehicle.

The investigation is continuing, he said, adding that the officer is not sure who was driving or why the car drifted and then flipped. The report doesn't reflect if seat belts were in use. Anaya was tested for the level of alcohol in his blood, but the results were not available, Bower said.

Rotary enchilada dinner slated for Oct. 15

Ruidoso's Rotarians will host a semi-annual benefit enchilada dinner on Tuesday, Oct. 15, at the Ruidoso High School cafeteria.

Barbara Crane, the "head enchilada" for the long-running benefit dinner, said Rotary Club members can provide meal tickets - $6 for adults, $3 for children - and that tickets also will be available at the door. Enchiladas with all the trimmings will be served from 4 p.m. to 8 p.m. Dessert, provided by members and spouses, is optional.

Rotary uses proceeds of the dinner to finance scholarships for college-bound high school students, Crane said. The twice-yearly dinner, with club members doing everything from rolling enchiladas to carrying out the garbage, is the club's primary annual fund-raising project.

commission to receive documents and information it needs to prove its case, Green said. That type of delay can be difficult to overcome as construction gets underway, she said.

The lawsuit named Norman Mineta, secretary of the U.S. Department of Transportation, as defendant because the project is funded by federal dollars and Federal Highway Administration officials approved the plans and procedures.

Kathie Leyendecker, public information spokesman for the state Highway and Transportation Department, said groundbreaking for the project, which was postponed after the lawsuit was filed, is scheduled for 2 p.m. Oct. 9 at the project office.

"We're delighted we can move forward on this project," she said. "The groundbreaking coincides with the second annual National Put the Brakes on Fatalities Day, Oct. 10."

State Transportation Secretary Peter Rahn, in a scheduled press conference on the national recognition day, will point out that more than 41,000 people die in traffic accidents every year, about 114 each day. Traffic crashes are the leading cause of death in the United States for people ages 6 to 33.

Dumpsite count was 80 bags of trash delivered and 73 truck/trailer loads. All city employees were present to donate their day to the project.

Surpassing all expectations, the Trek for Trash Cleanup Day in Carrizozo Saturday was a "trashing" success. Check-in lists showed 114 people signed in and teamed up to make a clean sweep of the Carrizozo streets and assorted byways.

The four 40-yard roll-off trash containers were fully loaded by 11 a.m., and by 11:30, the cleanup was called to a halt. Any filled sacks along roads and streets were left to be gathered by the city and state highway employees.

Volunteers came walking, driving and hauling. There were trucks and trailers of all sizes and shapes, cars pulling trailers or offering an empty trunk or back seat. People were ready to haul trash, and haul they did.

George Fiddler, who moved to Nogal from New York recently, hauled load after load of filled trash sacks in his very small station wagon. Trustee Eileen Lovelace, who was overseeing the dumpsite, said Fiddler hauled in six or more loads of trash.

Trustee Eileen Lovelace hoists Toots, the official trash dog, who seems to hope he's not headed for the inside of the dumpster.

OUR OPINION

Little things make a historical difference

Lincoln County's past now is being preserved

History is the foundation of tomorrow, and that is the best reason in the world to preserve the records of our past.

Even the oldest living old-timer's memory isn't adequate to record and relate the details of life in Lincoln County in the 19th Century.

For that, written records of the most mundane kind are better and more accurate than tales handed down from generation to generation — valuable though oral history is for the "local color" it adds.

Lincoln County's bloody past has been a magnet for historians (some of them not particularly concerned with documentation), and that has made for a spectacular historic legacy.

Fortunately, the succession of county clerks in Carrizozo (and before that, Lincoln) had the appreciation and the willingness to preserve those mundane records, even prior to the county's creation in 1869.

Thanks to a grant from the New Mexico Historical Records and Archives to set the stage, the county now has a warehouse for records (and voting machines), and an employee whose responsibility is to preserve everything from tax deeds to jail records for posterity. For Karen Mills, on board since July 1, every work day is an adventure of discovery.

A few of Lincoln County's historical records have been lost, but most survive. They will be a tremendous resource to the historians of tomorrow as they retell and amplify the life of one of New Mexico's most colorful counties.

A salute, then, to Martha Proctor, Joan Park, the Lincoln County Commission and all the others who over the years have made a devoted effort to save the records of Lincoln County's past.

What a cartoonish campaign...

Now he's gone and done it. Bill Richardson has introduced a whole new dimension to New Mexico politics. In fact, one of my favorite politicians of all time, former governor Bruce King, would say Bill has opened a box of pandoras.

LOOKING ASKANCE
NED CANTWELL

What Bill has done is this: he has blended cartoon characters with political campaigning. Richardson, the Democratic nominee for the governor's chair, has depicted his Republican rival, John Sanchez, as Pinocchio.

It is the Land of Enchantment version of down and dirty campaign skulduggery. The television ad features the handsome Sanchez, and as the voice-over intones a list of reported distortions, John's nose grows and grows and grows.

John's honker becomes so large you just want to reach out right there from your couch and grab it, shake that nose until the Republican's ears fall off.

Motivation for the ad is supposedly to take issue with statements made about Bill Richardson by the Sanchez campaign. Maybe. But I've got a hunch the Democrats see John as the prettier of the two candidates and are deliberately mounting a campaign of uglification so Bill can capture the chick vote.

New Mexico voters will decide who is better looking and who is more honest. Meanwhile, it is just a matter of time until we see these TV commercials.

Bill Richardson's face appears on an animated Winnie-the-Pooh, with, before your very eyes, metamorphoses into Donnie the Dumpster Bear. "Sure," the announcer solemnly intones, "he looks innocent enough, but do you really want this political garbage mess roasting around in your state government?"

Wise Old Owl, hanging by his claws from the Senate rafters, beady little eyes, bemused expression, surveying the political landscape below. "If Pete Domenici is so smart, why is he reluctant to debate Gloria Tristani — does Senator Domenici really give a hoot about New Mexico?"

The camera pans in on the Wicked Witch of the West. It is Gloria Tristani. "Vote for meee, vote for meee, or I will turn your ballot boxes into mishy-mashy mush." The announcer's voice drips with concern: "Gloria Tristani, she wants to undo 30 years of solid progress by Senator Pete Domenici. Don't let her cast a spell on New Mexico." A winged Domenici, adorned with a halo, is seen floating in the background.

The conservative, demure Heather Wilson is dolled up to look like Betty Boop while opponent Richard Romero questions her mindless allegiance to administration hawks leading us to war. For her part, Heather pictures Richard as a certain well-known duck, and says, "If this duck thinks he can beat me, he is Daddy!"

Wile E. Coyote, better known as John Arthur Smith, and the Road Runner, clearly shown as Steve Pearce, dart around the 2nd Congressional District. It becomes evident that both are honorable men who have mostly stayed away from negative campaigns. They represent different parties but similar conservative views dear to the hearts of the constituents. "John or Steve," the upbeat announcer proclaims, "finally, no matter who wins, the voter wins."

For the record, any of the aforementioned candidates picking a cartoon character to portray your humble correspondent in a TV commercial would be torn between Gooey and Porky Pig. "It-It-That's All, Folks!"

Ned Cantwell spent way too much time at Saturday matinee when he was a kid. He can be reached at ncantwell@charter.net.

YOUR OPINION

Taking a uniform logo to another level

To the editor:

I want to respond to Mr. Alan Hatch's letter. Let me say, Mr. Hatch, that you are a one-sided individual who is taking the Billy the Kid logo to another level that does not pertain to your son, who is interacting with kids and enjoying a weekend playing soccer and enjoying the fresh mountain air.

What gives you the right to take a legal right away from your son? Whatever happened to parents sitting down with children and talking about right from wrong? Mr. Hatch, both of my children play in the LCYSL and enjoy meeting new kids. That is what our society is all about. Let me say to you ... were you around when Billy the Kid roamed the Lincoln County area? Or are you an individual who believes in everything you read about Billy the Kid and how they portray him in the media and the movies. I'm not saying that Billy was right from what I read about him, but he is a historic icon in these parts, so accept it and press on to the greater achievements of the future.

Give the whole story

To the editor:

Mr. (Glenn) Remington, why don't you get a life and give the whole story? The reason for now and who (Saddam) is because the Democrats would not let George Sr. take him out. Why didn't your President Clinton take out Osama when he had the chance and proof of his actions?

He even had (Sen. Tom) Daschle's support, something that the real president, George W. Bush, doesn't have. Why can't Daschle put the bills before congress that the President sends? The answer is simple. Daschle knows that there are enough Dems to pass these bills. That would not look good for the other Dems who don't care about our country.

So before you spew anymore venom, make sure that you tell the whole story, not just the Democratic story.

Feelings expressed

To the editor:

I would like to thank Judy Van Winkle for her comments regarding the widening of U.S. 70. She has expressed my feeling exactly.

I travel that road every other week in my job and cannot understand how four selfish people, some of whom are not even residents of our state, can dictate to the vast majority. I am sure that with all of the money allotted to this project that it will be better, safer, and more beautiful than now.

This is the 21st century. We need our state to move forward and progress.

I say "build it now" before many more people have to die needlessly.

No meeting notice

To the editor:

We would like to know why we were not notified of a meeting of the Planning and Zoning Commission on Sept. 17. This meeting pertained to a very controversial issue regarding the erection of ham radio tower/antennae on property that adjoins our property and is less than 200 feet from our house. It is hard to believe this was an oversight.

We did receive notice of the first meeting on Aug. 6, concerning this same issue. In fact, we attended that meeting; however, the matter was tabled until Mr. Ed Juge could get his survey and site plan completed and submitted to the commission. At the Sept. 17 meeting, the commission approved Mr. Juge's request. This is really something, considering 56 percent of the property owners in Juniper Hills (the subdivision where Mr. Juge plans to erect the antennae) objected in writing. Also, the Architectural Committee that presides over the CC&R's (covenants) for Juniper Hills refused to grant permission for these antennae.

Is this the way Texans are treated because we do not live in Ruidoso on a full-time basis? These antennae will certainly spoil our views, which is why we bought property in Ruidoso in the first place — as so many of our Texas friends have done. It is a shame that one person's hobby can prevail over the majority of the neighborhood's wishes.

Now we say to anyone purchasing property in Ruidoso for their dream home or retirement home: "Beware where you build or buy a home; your neighbor could put some unsightly structure right in front of your view of the mountains or beautiful landscape."

GUEST COMMENTARY

Rebutting criticism of the Ruidoso fire ordinances

BY NINE HAWKELS

PLANNING DIRECTOR, VILLAGE OF RUIDOSO

This is the first of two articles explaining the reasoning behind the village council's ordinance decision.

To understand the recently enacted fire ordinances, one needs a little background. These ordinances did not evolve in a vacuum. The process was orderly and open. They are the product of genuine community involvement. The Task Force that recommended the ordinances involved scores of community leaders from varied business and professional backgrounds, members of the Planning Department, Fire Department and emergency services as well as forestry professionals and research scientists. They met openly for six weeks in both large and small groups in well-publicized meetings.

The Fire Management Standards underwent peer review by U.S. Forest Service personnel, N.M. State Forestry staff and the Ecological Research Institute at Northern Arizona University. The Task Force presented their recommendations to the Village Council. There were two public hearings on the ordinance package itself, one before Planning and Zoning and one before the Village Council.

Both bodies passed the package unanimously. It would not be reasonable to revoke these ordinances simply because some people have misgivings, misunderstandings or misconceptions about what they actually do and how they do it. This is even more so when those criticizing the ordinances never attended a single one of the meetings.

Before we start calling into question these ordinances, we need to make sure we have all our facts straight. Misconceptions, misunderstanding and just plain misinformation are not a sound basis for useful debate. Unfortunately, most attacks on the ordinances are rife with all of the above.

Critics rely on a number of general observations and assertions, the most serious being that somehow because the surrounding "forest" isn't completely flame-free, we should hold off on or revoke any ordinance that sets local ordinances, even in the face of repealing them. This just doesn't make sense, the work already done. It ignores the fact that we are part of a broader ecosystem and a larger regional context. In November 2000, the Ruidoso Woodland Urban Interface Group (RWUIG) was formed to create a wildland/urban interface (WUI) fire prevention plan on public and private lands. Two objectives of this plan are to maximize the distance between a crown fire and the community (buffer zones) and to minimize the effects of a spot fire or fire originating within the village (defensible space). Approximately 40 percent of more of the village perimeter outside our corporate limits has already been thinned. More is done every year. The missing link in reducing the wildfire hazard to our community has been our own lack of a plan and ordinance to implement it. The Forest Task Force recommended a Community Forest Management Plan (CFMP). The ordinances implement one element of the plan.

Neither the Forest Task Force Report or the Community Forest Management Plan were ever publicly debated. The ordinances, if not, have been presented to the council as a set of "done deals."

FIRE: New ordinances need support, time in order to be effective, planner says

...ations. The CFMP is a guide to action. Once developed, additional elements of the plan such as a public awareness and promotional campaign, volunteer programs, collaboration with financial institutions and the business community will be implemented. All of these will be presented to the Village Council for consideration. Let's not confuse ordinances with recommendations.

Like all laws these ordinances are dependent upon voluntary compliance and public acceptance to be effective. Active enforcement is only required for violations. Those in compliance need no enforcement and none occurs. Not one person has complained of oppressive enforcement and it is speculative and alarmist to suppose that such would occur. There is no capability to aggressively enforce these ordinances at present. There will be no need to do so except in cases where it is necessary as a last resort. This is no different than existing policy with all other village ordinances. Concerns about "phasing in" of enforcement is misperceived. The Task Force itself contemplated phasing in of the ordinances. This was emphasized in the public hearings. The implementation of the ordinances is proceeding on a timetable that makes sense for this village and this environment. During our "phase-in" period, compliance with Sec. 42-70 is being interpreted as beginning the process of fuel reduction. Completing fuels reduction treatment can take months. In some cases it may take longer, especially where forest health considerations and/or species manipulation is in the individual lot management plan. Additionally, the ordinances prioritize the implementation of the plan in a simple and credible order (Ord. Sec. 42-72). All of the criticism seems to pass lightly over the basic fact of our situation: we live in the most fire-threatened community in New Mexico and one of the more at risk communities in the nation. Talk about what has been needed has been floating around for years (at least). We could talk about it forever and do nothing. The time came for action based on the best practices, confirmed science and experiences elsewhere. We did not import a made-in-California blueprint. We listened to the community and then adapted as needed from national, state and local experience similar to ours. We first decided what we needed to do and then went in search of answers. If no answers were found from the outside, we did not hesitate to craft our own. The "Fuels Management Standards" (Ord. 42-80) is a perfect example. They deserve a chance to work.

Glencoe fire chief honored by department

Glencoe Palo Verde Fire Department Chief Walter Wilson was recently recognized for his service during 2001 and 2002.

During this time, the department improved its ability to serve the fire district by adding two brush trucks and ordering a 4,000-gallon water tanker. The department has also grown to 22 members.

Wilson has since assumed the position of Chief for Wildland Fires. Don Smith is the new department chief.

ENMU receives grant for disabled students

Eastern New Mexico University has been awarded $204,854 in a federal grant to help fund the Eastern Academic and Curriculum Excellence program for students with disabilities.

The program will determine what kind of information faculty and staff would like regarding students with disabilities. It will also develop training for faculty and staff and establish a resource council on students with disabilities.

The grant will provide training for faculty and staff at all three ENMU campuses. The grant is expected to be for three years, which would amount to as much as $614,562.

"Since I've been at ENMU the program for disabled students has increased the number of students it serves by over 1,500 percent," Bernita Nutt, coordinator of ENMU's Services for Students with Disabilities Office said. She added that at least 10 percent of the student population at ENMU has disabilities.

U.S. Representative Tom Udall confirmed the grant, which was awarded by the U.S. Department of Education.

Eastern New Mexico University will offer a workshop on the Portales campus and at the ITV sites of Ruidoso, Roswell, Clovis and Hobbs campuses, "Militant Islam and the United States," Phil. 268/Hist. 468, presented by Donald C. Elder III and Gerald Gies.

The workshop is an effort to identify the character and historical courses of militant Islam from the seventh century AD to the rise of the Taliban and Osama bin Laden's role in the radicalization of Islam. The ways in which the United States has come into conflict with Islam will be explored. Particular attention will be paid to the Islamic view of America's support for Israel.

The workshop will be from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 5 with a one-hour lunch break, and from 8 a.m. to noon Saturdays Oct. 12 and 19.

ADD

BY SANDY SUGGITT
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

The majority of children on Ritalin may not need it, claim educational and medical professionals in a conference Oct. 11-13 at the Ruidoso Convention Center titled "Beyond Designer Drugs: Solving the Riddle of ADD."

Keynote speaker Thom Hartmann, a psychotherapist, educator and author of seven books on the subject, first came across ADD when it was called hyperactivity and hyperkinesis in 1978 when he was the executive director of a residential treatment facility for emotionally disturbed and abused children. After reading Ben Feingold's book Why Your Child is Hyperactive, Hartmann and Feingold collaborated on a five-year study of the effects of nutrition on hyperactivity and Hartmann published the study in 1980 in the "Journal of Orthomolecular Psychiatry."

"We found that for a very small subset of children, it did seem to make a difference, and for the larger majority, it didn't seem to make a difference," Hartmann said in a telephone interview.

"I had reached a point where it seemed that the science wasn't really solid in any direction, but I did understand and agree that there was this collection of behaviors that included distractibility, impulsivity and a need for high levels of stimulation or arousal."

In 1990, his son was diagnosed with ADD — and told that he had a brain disease and that it was probably hereditary. That led Hartmann to revisit all the literature and studies done in the intervening 10 years — and to his eventual rejection of the then-prevailing theory that children with ADD or attention deficit hyperactive disorder "were diseased, disabled, defective and/or disordered. It was clear to me that they were different, but I didn't think giving that difference a pejorative label or context was particularly useful, because that would tend to cause people to give up."

Hartmann said he knew that people with healthy self esteem tell themselves stories about the circumstances of their failures or the abuse they suffered, saying they haven't learned a skill they need or it was the abusive person's fault, rather than blaming themselves.

"I was looking for a story, an understanding of ADHD that I could have for myself because it would color the way I viewed and interacted with my son, and that he could have for himself," Hartmann said.

"In the midst of this research, one night I read an article in Scientific American about the agricultural revolution ... and as I was drifting off to sleep I was thinking about my northern European ancestors and what life must have been like before agriculture," he said.

"It occurred to me that in a hunting-gathering world, the ability to constantly and continuously scan your environment with great vigilance and open focus would be a survival skill because it would enable you to notice that flash of light over there that's going to be your lunch or to notice the flash of light over here that's a bear that wants to make you his lunch. In a classroom we call that type of scanning and open focus 'distractibility'."

He went on to see other ADD symptoms as characteristic of survival in the hunting-gathering world: Impulsivity would be useful for acting without thinking — changing gears while chasing a rabbit to chase the deer running nearby — but not very useful in the classroom.

Hartmann's workshop begins with reframing ADD in a positive way, and goes on to share strategies which teachers and parents can use to more effectively communicate with people with ADD.

"The reality is that children in today's schools who are diagnosed with ADHD are more often than not wounded by that process," he said. "When children are identified with ADHD in our schools, the message they get is that they're academic failures, which then leads also to their social failures, and they're at fault."

Dr. Ron Minson, a Denver, Colo., psychiatrist and director of a clinic that treats children and adults with various attention and behavior problems, as well as depression, anxiety and head injury, will describe a sound-based therapy he has used to help children diagnosed with ADD get off their medication, in most cases. Minson discovered the therapy when he was a family practice physician and his daughter had severe dyslexia and learning disabilities and became extremely depressed. After trying many other therapies without success, he tried one developed by Dr. Alfred Tomatis, a French ear, nose and throat physician who invented equipment to filter certain sound frequencies and enhance others to work with neurological problems in young children.

COURTESY THOM HARTMANN

Thom Hartmann, author of seven books on attention deficit disorder, will be the keynote speaker and lead a three-hour workshop for parents and teachers on strategies for effective communications and relationships with children.

The procedure helped with his daughter's dyslexia and depression, and Minson then studied with Tomatis for several years, returning to the U.S., where he eventually upgraded the delivery system, calling it Dynamic Listening Systems, which now trains neuropsychologists, audiologists, occupational and speech therapists, osteopaths, language therapists and special education teachers.

Minson said about 50 percent of those who go to him with the ADD diagnosis and on Ritalin do not have it, since "you only need to have a few symptoms to qualify for diagnosis: inattention, difficulty focusing and distractibility."

But other things cause people to be unable to sit still, such as auditory processing problems, "particularly with more television and people not reading to their children, who are then getting a lot of visual stimulation at the expense of auditory stimulation. Our program is based on using the ear as a battery to the brain; it charges the brain with stimulation for proper functioning," he said.

Besides Hartmann and Minson, the conference on ADD includes four other approaches to treating ADD — including an integrative medical approach by physician Madeleine Randall — an educational approach by Karl David Johnson, an instructor at Santa Fe's Waldorf school, who will present an alternative educational system that addresses all the child's needs and capacities through integrating the arts and academics.

The conference is from 9:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Friday and Saturday (registration 8:30 to 9:30 a.m.), Oct. 11 and 12, and 9:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Sunday, Oct. 13.

This is one of three conferences on education sponsored by Sierra Dove Center for Healing and is open to parents, educators and anyone concerned with the welfare of children. The fee is $175. Commission OKs hospital payment

The move means the county will have to pay more in the future.

BY DANNE SWILLINGS
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

Despite misgivings that capital outlay money for Lincoln County Medical Center might be compromised in the future, county commissioners last week approved a supplemental payment that will increase Medicaid dollars locally.

County Manager Tom Stewart initially recommended against the move, saying it would decrease discretionary funding next year.

Although Presbyterian Healthcare Services, the firm that manages the county-owned hospital in Ruidoso, will pay the supplemental sole community provider payment of $63,502 this year to receive a 3.7-to-one match, the action will add dollars to the county's contribution the following year.

"It becomes a recurring requirement," Stewart wrote in a memorandum. He suggested instead that Presbyterian agree to pay future supplements because the firm benefits from the increased federal payments.

"The county can't continue to keep up with the recurring payment requirements and, should management change hands, the county will be left with the increased amount once elevated," Stewart wrote.

The alternative would be to severely reduce construction programs at the hospital, he said.

Hospital Administrator James Gibson, chairman of the board Gary Mitchell and Dan Weeks of the New Mexico Hospital Association disagreed with Stewart's recommendation. By the time they were finished with rebuttal, commissioners voted to approve the supplemental payment. Commissioner William Schwettmann voted with the other three commissioners at the meeting, although he criticized the hospital representatives for too much information too late to be understood. Commissioner Leo Martinez was ill and did not attend the meeting.

Tony Seno, policy analyst for the county Libertarian Party, said, "The whole situation reeks of socialized medicine."

Weeks said his association "probably has done more to see to it that New Mexico has gotten money it has deserved but not received in the past."

He explained that in 1994, the hospital association and the state Association of Counties looked at ways to leverage Medicaid money and ways to draw more money into the state through county indigent funds. Some county indigent funds were under so much pressure, they would be depleted before the end of the year, leaving it up to hospitals to absorb the cost of uncompensated care.

New legislation changed that, he said.

Mitchell told commissioners the real issue is how much longer proceeds from a voter-approved special property tax levy can be used to pay the sole community provider, payment that generates the extra federal dollars, when that money is needed for capital outlay construction at the hospital.

He asked the board to approve this supplement and then, appoint someone to sit down with the hospital board and plan for the future. He projected that the supplemental payments would continue only for a few more years and then level off. He pointed to the recent accomplishments of the local board, ensuring that money contributed to the hospital foundation comes back to the county and that the board has control over how money raised by the hospital auxiliary or generated in excess of a yearly benchmark is spent.

"The county can't continue to keep up with the recurring payment requirements..."

Tom Stewart
county manager

trust us."

Commissioners asked Stewart and County Attorney Alan Morel to represent the county in meetings with the hospital board.

Chairman Rex Wilson said Stewart's recommendation was not meant to degrade the commission's relationship with the hospital, "but we don't want to diminish our capital outlay money. Tom is concerned about the erosion of (special tax) levy capital outlay money. This grays that line. We want to maximize our dollars, but we don't want to jerk the rug out from under the other foot while we're doing it. If Presbyterian will keep paying the difference as it accumulates in the future, I don't think you'd find any resistance from the commission."

Stewart pointed out that 60 percent of annual tax levy goes toward "these types of programs."

Stewart also said he's worried that a federal auditor might object because the county last year validated sole community provider payments of $457,012 for the hospital, but that with the federal money, the Lincoln County Medical Center received $1,124,000 from the program. Mitchell, Weeks and Gibson assured commissioners that's not a problem.

"There is no issue regarding the difference," Weeks said. "The federal government really doesn't care about that."

Gibson and Mitchell said without the federal help, the hospital would have to raise its rates by 20 percent, impacting patients who self-pay or are insured, to cover the care given to either the indigent or working class residents who can pay part, but not all of their medical bills.

The collection rate for the hospital is 64 cents on the dollar, Gibson said. While that's considered good for a hospital, it wouldn't be good for most businesses, he said.

Patric Pearson, executive director of the Ruidoso Valley Chamber of Commerce, said the strength of the area's medical center is one of the major drawing cards for future residents.

In other hospital business, Gibson reported:

The architect has finished plans for Phase II construction, the ambulatory surgery suite, and the hospital board approved them. He will present the plans at the next commission meeting.

The strategic planning committee has been meeting to come up with a new five-year capital plan focusing on the future of health care delivery system. He will bring the results to the hospital board in October and to the commission in November.

Council OKs capital requests despite concerns

BY DANNIE STILLINGS
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

Although she ended up voting for the village's Capital Improvement Plan as presented Saturday, Ruidoso Village Councilor Deborah Marcum-Byars said next year, she wants the council to meet with department heads before the list is compiled.

And she wants the plan to more accurately reflect the new direction of the council, such as including the purchase of land for "green space" for special events and parks and a project under the village's parks and recreation department.

"I want a system so every year the council meets with department heads so when we are no longer here, we have a good plan," she said. "I think it's important to reflect the policies and goals of the council and I don't see that in this document."

Action was needed Saturday to meet a Sept. 30 deadline for submission to the state. That will ensure the plan can be reviewed for possible funding of the top priorities by the state Legislature in its 2003 session.

The council, which unanimously approved the CIP, appointed Byars to act as liaison in putting together the plan for 2004, especially because she is a proponent of the need for a revised master plan for the village. A capital outlay projects list is a component of a master plan.

At a meeting earlier last week, Cleatus Richards, who handles special projects for the village, pointed out the list can be changed every year and priorities are established by going to each village department. Assistant village attorney Charles Rennick said a new fire station should remain a priority, followed by water and sewer improvements because both have a good chance of being funded by the legislature.

Acting village manager Lorri McKnight said if the village has another source for the money to pay for a project, the legislature won't approve it.

"We're asking for areas where we don't have another money source," she said.

A project summary submitted by Richards showed needs totaling $13.8 million for 2003 and a five-year total of about $69 million.

The fire department led the 2003 list with a $1.5 million request for a new main fire station, followed in priority by $8.3 million for the waste water treatment plant, then 308,350 for parks and recreation for several projects including new playground equipment, walkway lighting and a bike and skate park.

Byars asked why the amount of money for the fire station jumped from $450,000 to $1.5 million. Richards said the village doesn't expect the full amount in one year and may have to phase construction of a new station to replace the old one on Eagle Drive. That building may later be used as a cultural center by the village Arts Council.

Other requests for 2003 were:

- $160,000 for the recarpeting, painting and refurbishing moveable walls at the convention center
 - $13,757 to replace carpet with tile at the senior center
 - $197,500 for equipment in the street department
 - $27,000 for more parking and some remodeling at village hall
 - $30,000 for a connection to statewide Internet at the library
 - $1.2 million for several water distribution projects
 - $559,500 for Phase 3 at the solid waste department transfer station
 - $1.3 million for a series of improvements at the airport.
- In other business, the council:
- Directed an item be placed on the agenda of the next council meeting to discuss the creation of a department to deal with forest health, fire prevention and related activities in conjunction with urban forester Rick Delaco. Councilors said they want to see the projected cost of that move.

• Announced that Kids Konection playground will be closed from Oct. 9 to Oct. 11 for scheduled maintenance. Public restrooms are scheduled to be finished at the playground Oct. 2.

• Heard a request from Councilor Ron Anderson to examine the possibility of constructing public restrooms on the three-mile walking/jogging path around The Links golf course.

"They don't have to be large, but we need something," he said. "It's not just for me. I've heard comments many times."

• Approved the transfer of the location and ownership of a liquor license from the defunct Furr's on U.S. 70 to Allsup's at 723 Mechem Drive.

Program says it could bring county federal money for prisoners

BY DANNIE STILLINGS
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

Saying the program sounds too good to be true, Lincoln County commissioners took no action in their September meeting on a proposal from a company that promises to return previously lost federal money to local coffers.

Representing Justice Benefits Inc. of Dallas, Texas, Todd Murphy told commissioners the county is eligible for federal reimbursements from social security collected by inmates while in jail and for housing illegal aliens. The county doesn't pay anything up front, but supplies information about prisoners. In exchange, the company requires a 22 percent fee on all money it collects for the county, Murphy said.

He said the company was founded 1996 in Texas and went nationwide four years ago. The company already represents all but six or seven counties in New Mexico, he said.

"Basically, we get you money through federally mandated programs," he explained. "Many of the programs have been around for years. One of the biggest is the state Criminal Alien Assistance Program that was mandated in 1995 for incarcerating illegal aliens."

The money recovered will be dollars the county never saw returned before, he said.

"We do 99 percent of the work for you," Murphy said.

Under the social security reimbursement program, the county supplies basic information about inmates. Many of those inmates do not notify the government when they go to jail and they have monthly social security checks waiting for them when they return, although the government should withhold those checks.

With his company's help, the county will report to the government when someone is jailed and will receive as much as $400 per inmate if the social security administration is notified within 30 days. To collect on aliens who are in jail, they must stay at least 72 hours, he said. The exact reimbursement for aliens depends on several variables, he said.

"The money comes straight to your general fund and we bill later for the 22 percent," Murphy said. "This is strictly your money."

Another program, the Southwest Border Prosecution, is tied to felony cases through the district attorney's office involving drugs and juveniles, he said. Four states are eligible to collect against the $50 million allocation - Texas, New Mexico, Arizona and California. Details still are not available because the program won't start until mid-October, he said.

"We will not charge a dime unless we get you some money," he said. "There's no risk here."

He claimed the New Mexico Association of Counties will sign a contract to endorse the program in exchange for 2.5 percent of all contracts signed after the endorsement.

In response to questions from County Attorney Alan Morel, Murphy said the county doesn't pay gross receipt taxes on the 22 percent paid to his company, even though it is a service; the collection fee is non-negotiable, although all of the other terms, including the length of the contract, are open to change; and the county can pay the 22 percent fee out of the money brought back to the county by the company.

"We're the only company that does it," Murphy said. "You can do the program on your own, but you would have to hire someone. It's a full time job. We have a team of 25 to 35 people who will work your county."

Murphy said the contract would not affect payments the county now receives for housing federal prisoners at its 129-bed, 2 1/2-year-old detention center in Carrizozo managed by Correctional Systems Inc.

But commissioners and County Manager Tom Stewart said they want to check first with CSI because that company would have to supply Murphy's company with the information on inmates.

"I'd like CSI's endorsement," Stewart said. "And I'm going to beat them up for not doing this in the past."

"I'm a little concerned about 22 percent - that's an awful lot. We'd be taking federal money and turning 22 percent over to a private company."

Chairman Rex Wilson agreed that, "We owe it to at least hear out CSI and see if they could do it for us."

Murphy said his company collected about $32,000 for Eddy County last year and $38,000 for Otero County.

Capitan, 'Zozo take it to five games

BY TODD FUQUA
RUIDOSO NEWS SPORTS EDITOR

CAPTAN — There might not have been a local team in the championship of this year's Capitan Classic, but local volleyball fans were still treated to quite a show.

Carrizozo and Capitan were playing for fifth and third place, respectively, and each team got caught in a five-game thriller Saturday.

But only half the hometown crowd went away happy. Capitan won their match against Aztec, while Carrizozo dropped their match to Magdalena.

Lady Tigers

After finishing third in their pool, Capitan found themselves against Magdalena on Friday, and fell behind two games to none before pulling out the victory, 8-15, 10-15, 15-7, 15-13, 15-11.

Capitan later faced Elida and, after splitting the first two games, eventually fell in four games, 15-9, 5-15, 15-9, 15-9.

That set up their third-place match with Aztec — a battle of the Tigers.

"Aztec, look how huge they are," Gowen said. "These are all pretty good teams in this tournament."

Aztec had a formidable front line, led by Jessica Ford, Brittney Gillespie, Nika Jantz and Cassidy Lee, all approaching six feet and presenting a solid wall at the net.

But Capitan (7-3) refused to be intimidated early, even when Aztec took a 6-1 lead.

Capitan got to within two at 6-4 on a long ball by Dianna Lee and hung in throughout until finally clawing their way to a tie at 10-all.

From there, the local Tigers scored the final five points to win the first game, 15-10.

Capitan never fell behind as far in game two, but it was still a struggle against an Aztec team that refused to quit. There were three ties and three lead changes, as Aztec tied up the match on a final block by Gillespie of Jessica Tully-Mitchell. Aztec took the second game, 15-9.

Gillespie had four blocks and contributed to a team total of 22 for Aztec. Lee and Jantz each had six blocks to lead the Lady Tigers.

"We had to get past the mental part of their front row," Gowen said. "They're intimidating all on their own. They had some good blocks, and they're going to get theirs — we just need to find the holes and serve well."

Despite being stymied many times at the net, Tully-Mitchell continued to pound away, and had a match-high total of nine kills. Aztec won the third game, 15-11, but Capitan's constant hitting began to wear down their namesakes from the north.

The two teams battled back and forth throughout the fourth game, before a pair of kills by Jessica Becker tied the game a 12-all. Two more kills by Candle Turner and Stephanie Kelsey and a final Aztec error gave Capitan the 15-12 win and forced a fifth game.

Now into rally scoring, Capitan was ready to play their kind of game, having gone into five games four times in the last five matches.

"They love rally scoring," Gowen said. "For some reason, they have more confidence going into that fifth game than they do going into the first game. They serve better, and it's amazing how different it is."

Capitan roared out of the gate, taking an early 5-1 lead and never looking back. They took advantage of numerous Aztec errors and won the final game going away, 15-7.

"I'm pleased with this," Gowen said. "We're going to be where we need to be for our district, and should be really clicking by the time of the district championship."

Lady Grizzlies

Carrizozo did even worse in pool play, finishing fourth out of four teams and taking on Animas in the first round.

"They're tough, just regularly good," said Carrizozo coach Bill McVeigh. "They had two excellent hitters who handled the ball well."

Ruidoso boys win first district soccer match

Warriors, Lady Warriors face Artesia Tuesday

BY TODD FUQUA
RUIDOSO NEWS SPORTS EDITOR

Both the boys and girls soccer teams from Ruidoso High fell to Artesia last weekend, but the Warriors were able to rebound with a District 4-1A/3A win over Hatch Saturday, and the two were headed to a rematch with Artesia on Tuesday.

The Lady Warriors fell to Artesia 3-0, and while the loss was a definite letdown, coach Sigurd Schmitz said the girls were ready to redeem themselves Tuesday.

"They know they could play better, so they'll work harder in the future," Schmitz said. "I know they're resilient, and they're fired up about Artesia."

The match against the Lady Bulldogs was the final one for Ruidoso (1-8) before their two district games against Socorro, one on the road and one at home.

The teams match up Oct. 15 in Socorro at 6 p.m., then come to Horton Stadium Oct. 22 for another 6 p.m. matchup.

Schmitz said his team needs to start playing more consistently after losing to both Artesia and Las Cruces in a junior varsity game.

"We just have to get over those two games," Schmitz said. "They're capable of much more."

Boys soccer

The Ruidoso boys have also had a long season, coming into Saturday's game against Hatch with a 1-9 record overall, 0-1 in district following a 10-1 loss to New Mexico Military Institute Sept. 19.

The Warriors, however, came out on the offensive immediately, scoring the first two goals of the match, including a penalty kick by Yamil Salazar, before Hatch was able to get on the board with a penalty kick of their own.

By halftime, Ruidoso (2-9, 1-1 in District 4-1A/3A) had a 4-1 lead and didn't look back. Salazar led the team with three goals and the Warriors were able to hold off a charge by Hatch (2-3, 0-2) to win the game 5-3.

After their game against Artesia, Ruidoso takes on NMMI at Horton Stadium Oct. 12 at 1 p.m.

Warriors hold off Cobre

BY TODD FUQUA
RUIDOSO NEWS SPORTS EDITOR

No last-second scores were going to sting the Ruidoso Warriors this time.

One year after losing to Cobre on a kickoff return for a touchdown with less than a minute in the game, the Warriors beat the same team Friday, holding off a late Indian charge to win 33-31.

"We came out early in the game and scored on our second play from scrimmage," said coach Ridge Bowden. "The defense kept holding them, but then we fumbled and they scored off the great field position."

Ruidoso (2-3) entered half-time leading, however, by the score of 21-17, on the strength of quarterback Josh Adams' two touchdowns — one on a 40-yard run, the other on a 28-yard scamper.

Sandwiched in between was a one-yard run by Jess Shendo. Adams finished the game leading Ruidoso with 119 yards on 13 carries, and was 6-13 passing for 108 yards.

But for all of Adams' heroics, Cobre (3-2) began their second-half comeback with a scoring drive capped by a pass from J.J. Vega to Dylan Schultz. Following another Warrior turnover — this time an interception by Johnny Valencia — the Indians again scored on a pass from Vega to Buddy Baca to extend their lead to 31-21 in the fourth quarter.

But then the Warriors got down to business.

"We had to make some things happen," Bowden said. "We made some big plays when we needed to."

The first big play came on a third-and-long situation, in which Adams connected on a slant pass to Chance Hooper for a 64-yard touchdown, cutting the Indian lead to just four points.

It was one of only two receptions for Hooper in the game, but he led his team with 74 yards.

From there, the defense kept Cobre from coming back.

Mescalero cross-country no place for boots

BY LESTER HAYES
FOR THE RUIDOSO NEWS

Common sense should have told me never to wear cowboy boots to a cross-country event. It's not that I have anything against boots in general. I wear them all the time. But, when you've been pressed, unexpectedly, to walk Mescalero's new course with Chiefs coach Doug Byers, boots make it difficult to keep up.

On Sept. 20, Mescalero hosted a scrimmage run for Cloudercroft, Capitan, and themselves, and it was during the pre-run walk of the course that I began to realize just how talented his young runners really are.

I ran cross-country back when I was in high school, but Indiana had nothing like what these kids have to contend with. This course meanders through three miles of high mountain country. We had flat land; they have hills, and mountains. We had sea level elevation; these kids have to dodge clouds.

And I was called a halt to the trek at the halfway point where he explained that his team did not "really come out to get a first, second, and third" for this race. As long as we finish close — the group staying together — that's what we were looking for.

As the competitors began to run past, it was plain to see there was little reason for Byers to have been so modest in his aspirations. Four members of the six-man team whizzed on by, every one of them placing in the top five. These kids make it look easy, and this no easy feat.

Mescalero's meal ticket to state competition this year, Warren Sago, outshined everyone again, including his teammates. Running this three-mile course like a flow of liquid silver in 21:50, he firmly grasped another spectacular first-place finish.

The Mescalero runners are looking good, and turning good times consistently. Byers sees his team making it to higher-level competition — district then state. In fact, he's got enough confidence in this team that he is "gonna try to take the whole team to state."

Their next run will be Oct. 12 at Roswell, 10 a.m. Oh, and you can look for me there. I'll be the guy with the camera wearing sneakers.

Mescalero wins homecoming game

BY LESTER HAYES
FOR THE RUIDOSO NEWS

MESCALERO — The Mescalero homecoming royalty — King Ronald Blalock, Queen Penny Chimal and their loyal subjects — couldn't have been in higher spirits. They were hoping for a big win, and the Chiefs seemed ready for action.

Mescalero delivered Saturday, winning the opening game on their new field, defeating Tularosa's junior varsity 20-14 on a Randy Sulson touchdown with just 50 seconds left in the game.

Tularosa came out looking strong during the first half, and by halftime were leading the Chiefs 14-7. Mescalero's defense just couldn't hold off the opposing team's charge, and their offense was plagued by ball-handling problems.

Judging by the way they were playing in the first half, it seemed doubtful that Mescalero (1-3) would win. The halftime whistle was a blessing.

While the crowd witnessed the crowning of the king and queen, the Chiefs were in the locker room, apparently rethinking their game plan.

When they came out for the second half, it seemed nothing had changed. But, late in the fourth quarter, they pulled up out of their roll, as Sulson scored the first of his two touchdowns, putting the score at 14-13.

After the two-point conversion was no good, it looked as though the Chiefs would go down in defeat, but Sulson's last touchdown with 50 seconds left secured the win.

Mescalero travels to Artesia Oct. 5 to take on the Bulldog JV at 2 p.m.

Capitan wins first game against a strong opponent

BY TODD FUQUA
RUIDOSO NEWS SPORTS EDITOR

Maybe some Capitan football fans were getting a bit fed up at their winless record following four weeks of play, but coach Ed Davis never gave up on them.

Thursday, his perseverance paid off, as the Tigers won their first game of the year, defeating a tough Artesia junior varsity team 39-36.

"The main thing is, we were successful throwing the football," Davis said. "The kids have developed a lot of confidence. They're not at the top yet, but they've learned we can win."

Artesia came out strong in the beginning, taking a 14-0 lead in the first quarter before Capitan quarterback Bo Sparks got his arm limbered up for a comeback.

Sparks was 15-26 passing with 235 yards for the Tigers (1-4), and connected most often with Sheldon Moor, who caught nine passes for 168 yards and three touchdowns.

Moor also added an 85-yard interception return to the night's accomplishments.

Capitan also had 207 yards rushing, with Sparks leading the way with 103 yards and one touchdown and Andrew Armendariz adding 91 yards and a touchdown.

By contrast, the Bulldogs were 12-30 passing with 168 yards, almost all of it in the first half.

"We were able to tie them, but they had a 26-20 lead at halftime," Davis said. "They (Artesia) just had too many yards on the ground."

The Bulldogs had 134 yards rushing, but Capitan was able to offset that by shutting down their passing game and taking a 39-29 lead heading into the fourth quarter.

Now playing for once in the lead, the Tigers had to hold off an Artesia rally, as the Bulldogs were able to score once more to pull within three.

But Artesia simply ran out of time, and Capitan had their first win of the season.

Davis said this win means a lot to this team, mainly because it gives his players the confidence they needed in themselves — confidence he's had in them from the beginning.

"We being well enough to win two other games, we just didn't get the breaks," Davis said. "But now the kids should have confidence now, and that makes our job of turning this team into a family easier."

The Capitan family makes the long haul to Estancia Saturday for a 1 p.m. start, then returns home the following week for a game against Loving.

CLASSIC: Carrizozo falls to Magdalena

Panthers in three, 15-5, 15-11, 15-4.

In their next contest, the Lady Grizzlies met up with Cloudcroft, a team they had defeated in five just before the beginning of the Capitan Classic.

Carrizozo again pulled out a win in five, although they could have made it a sweep, squandering a big lead in the third game.

"We were evenly matched, that's why these games went long," McVeigh said of the two contests. "When we broke down, it was because of serving."

The Lady Grizzlies got past their serving woes and got the win, 15-8, 15-9, 11-15, 11-15, 18-16.

Then it was on to face Magdalena in the fifth-place game, and Carrizozo fell behind early 3-0 on three unforced errors.

McVeigh got his girls back on track, and the Lady Grizzlies scored the game's next eight points to take an 8-3 lead.

Magdalena was able to fight back and tie the game at 13-all, but Carrizozo never relinquished their lead and won, 15-13, ending with a kill by Ariel Burr, who led the Lady Grizzlies with 10 kills in the game.

The Steers then got a power surge from Kelly Armstrong, who led her team with 11 kills and nine blocks. Armstrong had four kills in the game, including two to end the contest at 15-8.

Armstrong continued her dominance in game three, as Magdalena won 15-9 to take a 2-1 lead in the match.

But Carrizozo dug deep in the fourth game and got some crucial blocks from Whitney Whittaker, who led the Lady Grizzlies with five steps to compliment hitting by Burr and Ariel Vallejos.

After falling behind, Carrizozo tied the game at 7-all and went on to win, 15-11, forcing the final game.

Rally scoring meant Armstrong and Burr traded hit after hit, and the match threatened to never end, as the teams traded 10 match-point serves before Armstrong was able to

WARRIORS: Football team holds lead over Indians

"Our defense had to play a lot, probably 90 plays in the game," Bowden said. "There were a couple of times we had them on third or fourth down and they converted, so that was disappointing, but we played well in the fourth. Our defense shut them out and came through when we needed them."

The Indians were unable to get across the 50 and were forced to punt, which Ruidoso returned to the Cobre 45-yard line.

Using that advantageous field position, the Warriors scored the go-ahead score when Adams got in from two yards out with about two minutes left.

"They had enough time to drive a bit, but they had a fourth and nine, and they only got about 8 1/2," Bowden said. "Then we just ran out the clock."

Ruidoso actually had few rushing yards, 273 to Cobre's 306, and had three turnovers. Those are two things Bowden would obviously like to eliminate before the Warriors' homecoming game against Saint Michael's.

"You can always look at eliminating mistakes, and we didn't play our best football," Bowden said. "The players were sluggish at times, but it's our goal this week to be dominant in every quarter, not just the first and fourth."

Junior Varsity

The Ruidoso JV traveled to Roswell Saturday to take on Goddard, falling 38-29 in what Bowden called "a well-balanced game."

"They (Goddard) scored on the last play to win," Bowden said. "But the kids played with heart and excitement. We're looking to that bunch for the future."

The annual "Mountain Annie Exchange" between the Alto and Cree Meadows lady golfers was held Sept. 17-18 at the two courses, drawing a field of just over 50 competitors. The Alto Ladies' Club took the two-day victory, shooting a team aggregate of 855, compared to Cree Meadows' 868.

Hole-in-one at the Links

Golfer Byron Highfill got the thrill of his life Thursday at the Links when he shot a hole-in-one on the par 3, 118-yard 8 hole. Using a nine iron, Highfill got his first-ever ace with witnesses Mark Simpson and Ferry O'Donnell in attendance.

Mercy rule invoked on Wings against Clovis Christian

BY MELODY HAYES
FOR THE RUIDOSO NEWS

Corona/Vaughn's co-op team, the Wings, suffered a miserable defeat on Saturday at Clovis Christian, losing the game 72-0.

"We got killed," said coach Tommy Mulkey. You can hear the sadness in his voice as he relates the events of the last game, but Mulkey is still a good sport about it. "They're a pretty good football team. They're well disciplined and their coach has a good program."

These older, more experienced high school teams were a major concern of Mulkey's when they changed over to Vaughn's schedule. He said, "We changed over with the understanding we were going to be playing high school teams, but we are not at that level. We have one senior and one junior. So, even with the combination (Corona and Vaughn) we just don't have the experience we need to play these high school teams right now."

This was a devastating defeat for the Wings as it involved the loss of a couple of their key players, one permanently. Chris Matson went out with a head injury, and a possible concussion. Randy Warren, a junior on the team, was lost to a knee injury. "He limped out... and he'll never play football again."

Chaaaaaannnnnyyy! The Corona/Vaughn defensive line attacks Clovis Christian Saturday at Corona during the teams' six-man football game.

This game reminded Mulkey of the House fiasco when he was "there with (his) eighth graders trying to play a football game. My four 8th-graders have never played football before, and they're gonna come into hard times against a team that's experienced like that team was. They've got to have some help somewhere." He sees that the mistakes the team is making are due totally to their inexperience, but he's not making excuses for them. "We should have beat 'em no matter what, but they didn't ever pull out their studs to give us an opportunity to move the football," Mulkey said. "We were intimidated. And as soon as you're intimidated on offense it's really tough to move the football."

It's difficult for Mulkey to put a finger on an exact reason for their loss.

"It's hard to say there's this, this, and this happened and we lost a football game," Mulkey said. "We're looking at a very, very young team, even with the Vaughn players."

Mulkey knows his team is in for a tough time, playing enough seasons to gain experience. The Matson kid is "very fast, and he's gonna be a tough football player in a couple of years. So is J.R. Schafer, Ross Davis and my 8th-graders are gonna be tough in a couple of years. But, it's gonna be a couple of years of getting beat like we got beat Saturday before we're playing to that potential."

Surely no one could blame the Wings for feeling a little bit down with the outlandish scores and the loss of key players. Mulkey said, "These defeats are tough on the kids. Nobody likes to get beat like that."

When asked if there were any other really tough teams they had play for this season Mulkey replied, "We're going to play at Roy this weekend at 2 p.m. Roy is gonna be tough. Historically, they hit harder than anyone in the state."

Ruidoso netters win two in a row

BY TODD FUQUA
RUIDOSO NEWS SPORTS EDITOR

Winning two matches in a row is usually the way you want to enter district play, and the Ruidoso Lady Warriors did just that this past week, rebounding from a poor showing against Santa Teresa to defeat Socorro and Las Vegas Robertson in succession.

The Socorro match came two days after Ruidoso's sweep at the hands of Santa Teresa, and it was the kind of game the Lady Warriors (10-5) needed. This time, Ruidoso did the sweeping, defeating Socorro in three games, 15-5, 15-10, 16-14.

The Lady Warriors then went on the road Saturday to face Robertson, a team they had seen earlier in the Roswell Zia Classic.

"They (Robertson) had really made some progress," said Ruidoso coach Maria Bennett. "They had two players that could hit the ball consistently and hard."

The Lady Cardinals made it more of a match, taking Ruidoso to four games before bowing out 16-10, 8-15, 16-14, 15-5.

Now the Lady Warriors have a week to prepare for their first District 4-3A contest against Portales this Saturday. Ruidoso is still without a few key players due to injuries, but Bennett said the other girls are filling in well.

With front-row blocker/hitter Tamara Grant still out with a sprained ankle and hitter Jessica Gibson still recovering from illness, Charli Krause and Dusti Franklin have been getting the call more and more often.

"The young players are working hard, the whole team is," Bennett said. "They're all doing what I'm asking of them."

Having a week to prepare for Saturday's 4 p.m. game against Portales at Ruidoso High could actually work against the Lady Warriors if they're not careful.

"A good match on Tuesday wouldn't have hurt us," Bennett said. "We've just got to keep the girls peaking and have some competitive practice."

Lobos lose in big fashion to Texas Tech

ALBUQUERQUE — In front of an ESPN2 national audience and 35,111 in attendance at University Stadium, Texas Tech quarterback Kliff Kingsbury threw for six touchdowns before being replaced by backup B.J. Symons in the fourth quarter and led the Red Raiders to a 49-0 spanking of New Mexico Friday.

The Lobos (2-4) fell behind Tech 28-0 at halftime, and were shut out for the first time since the 1992 season when it lost 35-0 at BYU.

The score wasn't the only thing that went wrong for the Lobos; as UNM quarterback Casey Kelly fractured the ulna bone in his left arm late in the first quarter on a run up the middle. Kelly continued to play in the second quarter, but x-rays taken at halftime revealed the break. He is expected to miss at least four weeks and could possibly be out for the season.

Tech (3-2), led by Kingsbury's 407 yards on 41 of 59 in passing, mounted consecutive drives of 68, 73, 82 and 27 yards in the first half, the final coming with 43 seconds to play.

ENMU 35, East Central 29
ADA, Okla. — The Eastern New Mexico University Greyhounds were able to run their record to 4-0 Saturday with a 35-29 win over East Central University.

The Hounds got on the board first when Dwayne Davis uncorked a 67-yard run with 14:35 left in the first quarter. East Central responded with a 42-yard pass from Pete Darnell to Lionel Wrenn with 10:52 left in the first.

The teams traded scores and, when Davis got his second touchdown of the game on a 29-yard scamper, Eastern had a 21-10 lead with 10:06 left in the first half.

But then East Central got on a roll, scoring 19 points on a Jerome Castlebe three-yard run and another touchdown pass from Darnell to Castlebe. Two Cody Finney field goals made it 29-21 with 13:28 left in the game.

Eastern responded with a 2-yard run by Davis to bring the Hounds within two, and retook the lead for good on a 1-yard rush by Taryll Boxton with 6:22 left in the game.
