Dick Weber and Harvey Twite were beaming as they conducted a quick tour of the headquarters of KEDU Community Radio in the Gazebo Plaza off Sudderth drive.

Just a few months ago, the interior was indistinguishable from a dozen other small office spaces in Ruidoso. Today, the sound-proof broadcasting booth is ready to fire up, while in the corridor outside, photographs of radio greats hang along the Memory Lane wall, across from a small display of Elmer "E.J." Cunningham's spin-off of Edison vacuum tubes. Cunningham eventually was absorbed by RCA and became that company's marketing director.

The Juke Box Place, a wall display in the station's entry, focuses on the relationship among radio, music and juke boxes

In the entry, visitors will find the Juke Box Place with a sample of a 1937 menu from Eleanor's Lunch Stop in Tacoma, Wash., where the most expensive fare was a T-bone steak with all the trimmings for 60 cents and the top two songs were "Marie," by Tommy Dorsey and "Sweet Leilani" by Bing Crosby.

A small history of juke boxes explains their relationship with radio.

"Juke boxes, soda fountains and cafes were all related," said Weber, who serves on the KEDU board and has worked for more than two years to push the community radio concept to reality for Fort Stanton Inc., a booster group promoting the development of the historic

Guardian sues U.S. over boy's injuries

Murray Chico was attacked by a dog after being removed from his foster home.

BY DIANNE STALLINGS
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

The legal guardian of a Mescalero boy, who was attacked by a dog after being removed from the care of a foster family in Ruidoso, is suing the United States government and village resident Doris Husky.

Sandra Shanta, a member of the Mescalero Apache Tribe, is seeking compensatory and punitive damages from the Bureau of Indian Affairs under the U.S. Department of the Interior in a suit filed in U.S. District Court in Albuquerque.

The suit states that on Oct. 9, 1998, Murray Chico and his younger brother, Jarod Chico, were taken into the custody of the United States. Jarod was placed with Sandra and Charles Shanta. Murray's special needs required he be placed in a treatment foster care home, that of Leon and Cindy Eggleston. Mrs. Eggleston was his special education teacher and licensed as a treatment foster parent to care for Murray.

At the time, Mary Kihega was employed by the Interior Department as a social worker and assigned Murray's case, according to the suit.

Cedar Creek getting facelift

BY DIANNE STALLINGS
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

Visitors who planned to celebrate the Fourth of July at the popular Cedar Creek picnic pavilion were disappointed to find the road closed and reconstruction underway at the site.

The work will continue through the summer, with a planned reopening of an improved picnic area by September.

Richard Carlson, recreation land staff for the Smokey Bear District of the Lincoln National Forest, said the timing is based on when money is available.

"We needed to move on the project to ensure we didn't lose the money," he said. "The whole area was redesigned and configured with new tables, toilets and handicapped accessible points.

"But the old picnic shelter will stay, improved with a new grilling section and parking pad."

Other improvements will include a kiosk with information about the forest, a new group picnic area, a site for a host, a drinking fountain and the restrooms will be modern with flush facilities, faucets and sinks.

"We're always interested in hearing from people who would like to serve as campground, an in this case, picnic ground, hosts," Carlson said.

The closure of the Cedar Creek Picnic Ground was announced last month by Joe Garcia, U.S. Forest Service public affairs officer in Alamogordo. The upgrade is part of the district's plan to ensure accessibility for all public users.

For more information, call the district office at (505) 257-4095.

Testimony under way in Hedin appeal case

Different witnesses to testify is second hearing

BY SANDY SUGGITT
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

The administration of the Ruidoso Municipal School District presented testimony in arbitration Tuesday about the reasons for the discharge of coach and teacher Eddie Hedin in early May.

Hedin appealed the school board's vote to uphold the superintendent of school's recommendation to discharge Hedin for being "partially clothed in the school therapy tub with a partially nude minor student," among other reasons.

Rozier E. Sanchez of Albuquerque was appointed arbitrator for the appeal by District Court Judge Karen Parsons. Additional witnesses have been and are scheduled to testify at the appeal, including activities director Ron Wall, who conducted the original investigation of charges against Hedin, but who did not testify at the first hearing. He did testify Tuesday, however.

Attorney Frank Albetta, representing the school board, said Sanchez could make a decision at the close of the hearing today, or he may want to review the case and make a written decision later.

"The idea is that the independent arbitrator will hear the testimony fresh and direct from each of the witnesses, and what they say depends on what they're asked," Albetta said. "There may be questions posed to witnesses this time that weren't posed last time. Usually the hearing before an arbitrator is more extensive than that before a (school) board."

Hedin was served with a notice of intent to discharge him on March 6 after cheer-fort northeast of Ruidoso.

"Radio would introduce the new titles and their popularity ranking was derived from a count of play time on juke boxes tallied and reported by Billboard Magazine for its top 10. Wurlitzer was the big name in juke boxes."

Glass cases also will be set up with displays of old microphones, headgear and even the first hearing aid.

But Weber and Twite, station general manager, are excited about more than the interior improvements, which include carpeting to be installed today. They're happy to see a new sign go up at the corner on the Gazebo center announcing the location of the radio station. They soon hope to erect a radio-tower shaped gauge to reflect the fund-raising effort aimed at getting the station on air, Twite said.

KEDU, a FM stereo 100 watts station, will be found at 102.3 on the radio dial. The concept, beside community involvement and service, will include listening options from the heyday of radio series and sounds.

"The Sixties saw many changes occur in commercial radio and the most prominent was the evolvement into formats to 'distinguish' one station from another and to carve out a niche in the marketplace to pull higher ratings," said Weber. Today's formats seem to come from a major production company as opposed to "local' uniqueness, he said. Across the country, one station sounds like another.

"KEDU-LP will be formatless, choosing to be a smorgasbord of local information and striving to represent the educational and entertainment needs of the whole community, not just a segment," he said.

Volunteer positions are plentiful, he said.

"We need a volunteer coordinator, an office manager, a museum curator, a membership specialist, a grant writer and a radio equipment restorer." Weber said. "After we are in a financial position to order equipment, much of our time will be spent wiring and playing records...Then we will begin the program phase by producing special shows such as Teen Talk, To Your Good Health, Take Time for Kids and The Community Calendar."

For more information or to donate to the nonprofit radio station, which is shooting for $75,000 to finish all needed building and equipment needs, and $36,000 for the first four months of operation, call the office at (505) 630-5338, reach Twite at (505) 937-0581 or write the radio station at 2117 Sudderth- Suite 16, Ruidoso, NM 883435.

duty to place foster children in responsible, appropriate and safe environments since they are acting in place of the biological parents of the child," the suit states.

In October 2000, Murray temporarily was sent to Alliance Psychiatric in Santa Teresa. At that time, Sandra and Charles Shanta asked that Murray be placed in their home with his brother on his discharge. Mescalero Chief Judge Steve Wall approved the request, the suit states.

Kihega was made aware of the decision, the suit contends, but instead when Murray was discharged, "without permission or justification" Kihega placed the boy with Doris Husky, an unlicensed foster parent.

"Mary Kihega did not have any reasonable cause or excuse to place Murray with Doris Husky and was negligent in doing so," the suit states. She did not have approval from the court and did not notify the Shantas, according to the suit.

"The United States failed to conduct any appropriate home visits or study the nature and disposition of the Husky home, including the presence of violent dogs," the suit states.

On March 18, 2001, the day after being placed with Husky, the boy was attacked while feeding treats to the dogs, an action encouraged by Husky, the suit states. During the attack, Murray's larynx was ripped into two pieces, his vocal chords were ripped apart and he suffered gashes to his scalp.

The boy was airlifted to the University of New Mexico Hospital in critical condition, was placed on life support, intubated and eventually underwent a tracheotomy. He remained in the hospital four weeks, according to the suit.

As a result of the attack, Murray suffered permanent damage to his vocal chords, preventing him from speaking in a normal voice.

The suit claims the United States is vicariously liable for the acts or omissions of its agents or employees and that Kihega placed the boy without any investigation into the safety of the Husky home.

"In causing Murray's injuries, Mary Kihega acted either intentionally, recklessly, wantonly with gross negligence or was negligent" by placing the boy in an unlicensed foster care home, by placing the boy in a home not thoroughly investigated, placing the boy without permission and without adequate reason, failing to comply with the Indian Child Welfare Act and failing to place Murray in the least restrictive setting, most approximating a family.

Murray is entitled to damages for past and future medical expenses, pain and suffering, permanent impairment, lost future earning capacity and loss of quality of life, according to the suit.

Husky acted negligently and recklessly and also should be held responsible, the suit states.

Spokesmen for the BIA were out of town this week and could not be reached for comment.

leading coach Gayla Stanaland walked into the training room and found Hedin and a female high school student standing in the therapy tub. The reasons for discharge given were:

- Insubordination in that Hedin allegedly disregarded directions by his supervisor, principal Paul Wirth, to avoid being alone with that student;
- Misconduct in that he was found "partially clothed in a school therapy tub with a partially nude minor student";
- Misconduct in that Hedin allegedly gave a false account of the facts to Wirth in the investigation;
- Misconduct in that his alleged improper relationship with the minor female student had become known among students, "precluding your continued status as a credible role model for students"; and
- Insubordination in that Hedin allegedly disregarded specific direction of Wirth not to come to the campus and not to contact any Ruidoso High School students.

The student in question testified at the hearing May 2, as did her mother, stating that they were friends of the Hedin family and that they considered it normal for Hedin to take the student home from school from time to time.

Wirth's testimony began in the morning Tuesday and continued through most of the afternoon.

Stream board schedules state water plan meets

BY JULIE CARTER
FOR THE RUIDOSO NEWS

The Interstate Stream Commission and the Office of the State Engineer has scheduled a series of public meetings to be held around the state regarding the State Water Plan. Times for the meetings will range in all locations from 7-9 p.m.

During the period of mid-July through mid-September, the ISC Planning Staff will be conducting a series of 29 public meetings seeking input regarding the policy issues of the plan. This past legislative session enacted State Water Plan legislation that Governor Bill Richardson has directed the Interstate Stream Commission (ISC) to complete by the end of calendar year 2003.

Upcoming regional meetings include one in Tularosa July 17, one in Socorro July 28 and another in Roswell Sept. 10.

The legislation enables the formulation of a statewide policy and recommendation document to assist lawmakers as to management and resource allocation concerns and choices regarding the future of our finite water supply. A key part of this legislation is integrating public participation and public input throughout the planning process.

For additional information, please contact Tim Murrell, State Water Planner, at (505) 827-4029 or by email at tmurrell@ose.state.nm.us.

Cell tower draws neighbors' ire

DIANNE STALLINGS
DOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

A new and higher cellular tower oposed for the village's mainteance yard behind the water partment off Wingfield Drive genated waves of objecons from five neighrs.

They told members the Ruidoso anning and Zoning ommission last week at they opposed the plication by T-obile because it ould lower property alues, ruin their enery, may interfere ith reception on her appliances and uld be a health risk.

The commission bled the application to give agent cot Dunham a chance to bring ack a photograph of the proposed wer model and a map of the tended coverage area.

Dunham said an existing 165-ot tower owned by the village at he site would be torn down and eplaced with a 199-foot tower. All the village's antennae for police, he fire department, emergency edical services and the water epartment would be resituated on he new tower at the company's xpense, he said.

"We tried to seek out an existing lace near downtown and where the opulation coverage was needed," unham said. "Rather than do nother tower, we thought this ould be a win-win situation for the illage."

The company would lease the aw land for $500 a month on a five-ear contract, renewable for five more terms at an increasing amount of money per month, he said.

For the best line-of-sight reception, T-Mobile's units would be placed on top of the tower. The village's antennae would be moved higher than their current elevation. To improve the appearance of the storage yard, the company would build a 30x100-foot storage shed for pipes, he said.

> "Rather than do another tower, we thought this would be a win-win situation for the village."
> Scot Dunham
> T-Mobile agent

Commission chairman Glen Barrow asked village deputy manager Cleatus Richards if the village tower will remain in service if T-Mobile's application is denied. Richards said the existing tower serves the village's needs and raising the height of the antennae 20 feet won't make much difference.

"It probably will require some maintenance in the future because of its age, but nothing is planned at this moment," he said.

Opposition was registered by Jake Ross of Spring Road, who said he "objects strenuously to looking out the back of my deck at Sierra Blanca though flashing red lights."

Dunham said the tower does not require lights as long as it is lower than 200 feet. A taller tower was planned at one time to allow more companies to co-locate, but village officials objected and the structure was scaled down, he aid.

Several neighbors said they received no notification of the proposed tower, but planning secretary Tim Vega confirmed they either lived more than 200 feet away from the affected property or the notice was mailed to an out-of-area address based on records from the county assessor's office.

Shirley Elliott, who owns an adjoining piece of property with a second home, said she drove from Seminole, Texas, with one day's notice of the meeting. She contended her property will be devalued if a larger tower is built.

Barrow asked her if she sees the existing tower now from her dining room and she agreed she does but it is camouflaged by trees. The new tower would be taller, she said.

Ross said he didn't understand why a tower has to be built in a neighborhood when there's plenty of other available property, but Dunham responded that with a line-of-sight required, valleys don't work and much of the village is settled in valleys.

He also shot down suggestions of health risks and interference problems.

"We're regulated by the Federal Communications Commission and our frequency is licensed," Dunham said. "There's no way any product in your home operates on that frequency or it is violating the law.

"We're also very low power, about 12 to 15 watts. That's hardly the 75,000 to 150,000 watts of a radio station."

He explained that health can't be a basis for a legal objection to the tower. Studies resulted in that stipulation being written into federal law, he said.

"The federal government granted us the right to operate here and there will be an antennae somewhere in these mountains," Dunham said. "The question is do we stay with an existing tower location or do we build elsewhere."

Humane Society director says animal numbers are high for population

Y DIANNE STALLINGS
IDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

The unusually high number f animals that move through he shelter operated by the Humane Society of Lincoln County point to a local problem vith the attitude toward animal ontrol and sterilization, says he shelter executive director.

"We're almost double the national average (for the size of he community)," Keith Adkins said Tuesday. "It goes back to he owner's behavior and attiude. Obviously, something different is going on, which affects he costs and consequences."

In 2001, the shelter handled 2,129 animals in a county with ewer than 20,000 residents. Last year, that dropped slightly, for a first-time reverse of a climbing trend, to 1,818 animals.

"I think the board is trying to shift its emphasis because everyone knows the county is beginning to grow and more families mean more animals. The census shows that 60 percent of the families in this country own at least one pet," he said.

The society board wants to focus on an aggressive spay and neuter program and education, but reality dictates that the shelter occupies most of its attention, he said.

However, Adkins has applied to be part of the Kids in Defense of Nature program and is hoping a grant will pay for the participation which will send information every month to each classroom grades first through sixth. The aim is to educate children about how to behave with pets and with wildlife.

The society also anticipates working with the Spay/Neuter Assistance Program, called SNAP, which will send a van into an area for prescheduled surgeries all over the county.

"We're going to need funding for that," he said. "Spay and neuter is the only way to solve the overpopulation problem."

Since joining the shelter, Adkins has brought in a new power spray cleaning system, recently augmented with hot water through a donation. A new exchange system that circulates air through ultraviolet lights that kill pathogens also was added recently.

"I think the veterinarians will tell you they're seeing healthy animals coming out of the shelter today," he said. "We have well trained staff."

Some people think that the contracts the society holds with three municipalities and formerly with the county cover the cost of operation. Adkins said. They actually cover only about 45 percent of expenses, Adkins said. The society through donations and dipping into its building fund reserves covers the deficit, he said. With no increase this year, the group will need an additional $32,000 if its spay and neutering program also is to be continued.

The board's latest pitch to county commissioners to unfreeze their $25,000 funding level and boost it up to $40,000 was an attempt to at least bring some more parity to the contract prices based on the number of animals brought to the shelter from different areas, Adkins said. To date, commissioners haven't budged off the $25,000 figure. The society's contract ended June 30, but Adkins said the shelter will continue to provide services until definite arrangements for sheltering are completed elsewhere by county officials.

Ruidoso officials have responded each time figures were presented showing a growth in animal numbers for their village and recently, Ruidoso Downs city councilors expressed similar support, Adkins said.

Through May of this year, the shelter received 198 animals from unincorporated portions of the county, 28 percent of the total cared for at the facility. Eighty-two were stray, some from the county impounding officer and others brought in by people who picked them up, Adkins said.

"Annualize that figure and there will be 400 animals with no place to go now," Adkins said. "My recommendation to the society board will be to continue to take stray and owner releases (from the county area), but to require some sort of a donation to offset the cost. The more we can get this out to the public, the less of a surprise it will be when they come into the shelter. Otherwise the deficit will keep climbing and that can't happen if we want to be a viable organization in the long term."

Some county officials contend only the narrowest interpretation of state requirements should be funded with public money. That includes nuisance or dangerous animals and strays picked up as a result of complaints. They have proposed animals without identification be killed after two days and those unclaimed with identification after five days.

"It bothers me to hear we're putting all the animals down at the shelter," Adkins said, noting that the euthanasia rate dropped from 65 percent to about 45 percent, the majority sick when they arrived, feral or with severe behavior problems. "The ones we euthanized are done for humane reasons.

"Our objective by 2006 is not to euthanize any adoptable animals. But I believe if a group says they won't euthanize at all, they must be selective which animals they take. And what do they do if the animal is sick. It's not humane to just let it die."

OUR OPINION

A drop in the bucket makes a big splash

Stray animal control is unclear, thanks to a $15,000 dispute

With budgets seeming to grow every year, a matter of $15,000 seldom causes a big fuss – even in a place as sparsely populated as Lincoln County.

Yet that's the case now, as the county commission is refusing to increase the Lincoln County Humane Society's budget from $25,000 – the level it's been frozen at for the last three years – to $40,000.

There are other options, including going out for bids to see if another facility can do the job for less money. But experience should count for something, and the humane society has been taking in the county's stray animals for years.

Care for strays picked up by the county is required by the state, and some officials may feel that following the minimum requisites in this instance is enough.

Of course, according to the humane society, the $15,000 more would be just enough to keep the facility operational. And after being locked into the same amount for the last three years, that seems reasonable.

The county certainly should keep a close eye on where its money goes, but this is one drop in the bucket that could turn into a flood of discontent.

This isn't a column, it's an 'expanded opinion'

Words. Merriam-Webster brought out is first Collegiate Dictionary back in 1898. It was a very thin book, because people did not need many words back then. There was much more grunting and pointing in those days.

LOOKING ASKANCE
NED CANTWELL

The first dictionary primarily concerned itself with the definitions of "yes," "no," and "I'm hungry."

Early editions, too, gave special attention to a phrase that was popular among frontier wives who would wait until their husbands just about nodded off before asking, "Did you lock the barn?"

In these modern times, when talk TV itself uses up millions of words each hour, Merriam-Webster has grown fat. Its 11th edition, announced last week, includes 10,000 new words and more than 100,000 new meanings in a book that ballooned to 225,000 definitions.

The reasons we have so many new words is that Americans don't like certain words so they make up new ones to take their place.

For example, the car dealer did not want to sell me a "used" truck, so he sold me one that was "pre-owned." Not only that, it was a "program" vehicle, apparently programmed so that the brakes would wear out quickly.

There is one company in southern New Mexico that found it distasteful to lay off people, so, instead, it announced a "temporary inventory outage." Another company had a hard time admitting it was "selling" part of its business that might result in job loss. So, instead, it explained it had "monetized an asset."

Monetizing assets. That's good. We had a "Garage Extravaganza" last weekend where we "monetized" a lot of "pre-owned household treasures" many might call "junk."

There is one state association that refuses to join the modern trend of substituting pretty words for ugly ones. I refer, of course, to the New Mexico Dental Association whose members do not employ euphemisms.

"Drilling," for instance, is a horrible word unless you are an oilman and have part of the action. It's not something you want to happen inside your mouth.

Worse than that is "root canal." The phrase sends shivers down the spine. I have been a patient of Bob Murray enough years to buy him a second home in Santa Fe. The good doctor has one of those easy-going natures designed to relax the patient.

"So, how's the newspaper business" he'll ask, his arm down my throat to his elbow.

"Glogg, pflewf, ylef, glap," I'll answer, none of those words having yet found its way into the Collegiate.

"Well, now, let me tell you where we stand here. This doesn't look too good. We can either do a root canal or just let it alone, in which case the infection will probably spread through your entire body and kill you within three weeks."

"Well, OK, umm, root canal, let me think on it a few days, Dr. Bob."

If my car dealer can sell me a "program vehicle," a company can "monetize an asset," I don't see why my dentist can't perform a "smile enhancement procedure" instead of a "root canal."

Such observations, of course, are par for the course if you are stuck with my McJob (according to the new dictionary, low-paying and dead-end work.)

Humane Society is worth the extra cost

To the editor:

Lincoln County has had an arrangement with the Humane Society of Lincoln County that has been of benefit to the entire county. To discontinue this arrangement for the sake of a $15,000 increase of costs is so ludicrous it simply defies comprehension.

With almost 20,000 residents in Lincoln County the cost of the increase the Lincoln County Humane Society are requesting, and deserve, would be less than $1 per resident, per year. The total funding of the entire $40,000 cost would be $2 per resident, per year.

The Humane Society of Lincoln County gives unparalleled service. It is run by volunteers who are caring, compassionate individuals who donate their time, effort and interest into this charity. And the animals have a second chance to be placed into a loving, caring home. Or to be returned to their owners. It is the most successful, tried and tested, method of humanely handling the animal population.

If you total up the sum of the volunteer hours spent, it would amount to a considerable sum above and beyond the $40,000 requested. For a minimal cost Lincoln County has acquired this service. This county has tapped into a service they could not acquire by any other means. To lose it would be a disgrace to this community as a whole.

I would like to see the budget of every single government office within Lincoln County. I would like to see how much $15,000 buys the average tax payer these days.

Shame on those in power who want to change a program that has done away with the kill type shelters.

This is going backwards, not forwards.

In a kill shelter, beloved pets are destroyed before owners can locate them. Visitors to this region who lose their dogs while on vacation have no opportunity to track them down. Elderly people going into care facilities do not have the opportunity to have assistance locating new owners for the animals they cherished.

This is simply not an issue about the county feeling "responsible." This is exchanging a method that has proved worthy and workable, for one that has simply never worked.

For $15,000 we are going to have mayhem on our hands – and that IS our responsibility.

Don't wait until it's broken

To the editor:

It took a dozen squared years from the founding of this nation for the rich, white men who ran it to grant its citizens universal suffrage.

All women could finally cast a legal vote only since 1920. The last industrialized nation to do so.

I'm wondering how long it will take the rich, white (corporate) men who run it now, and the politicians who are so deeply in their pockets (Steve Pearce comes to mind) to grant its citizens universal health care. Once again, the last industrialized nation to do so.

Sadly, I'm afraid the answer is not until the current system is irreparably broken.

Oddly enough, according to an informal poll I've been conducting, the only people who are against it are those very same politicians.

Smoke-free policy doesn't hurt business, study says

ITHACA, N.Y. – Restaurants and hotels that go smoke free will not lose dollars by doing so – contrary to popular beliefs – and some may even gain revenues, according to a new study published in a Cornell University journal this month. State taxpayers and hospitality industry employees may also be beneficiaries, the study reveals.

The study, "New York's Smoke-free Regulations: Effects on Employment and Sales in the Hospitality Industry," shows that smoke-free regulations were not associated with adverse economic outcomes in New York restaurants and hotels. Published in the June 2003 issue of the Cornell Hotel and Restaurant Administration Quarterly, the study's summary is a featured article at this Web site: http://www.hotelschool.cornell.edu/publications/hraq/feature .

The study's lead author, cancer research scientist Andrew Hyland, said: "This study demonstrates that business managers need not fear loss of patronage by going smoke free and should welcome the opportunity to protect the health of their workers and patrons."

Hyland is associated with the Department of Cancer Prevention and Population Sciences at Roswell Park Cancer Institute (RPCI) in Buffalo, N.Y., and two co-authors are also Roswell affiliates.

Hyland and his co-authors assessed changes in taxable sales and employment in restaurants and hotels in five locations in New York state that have implemented smoke-free dining regulations since 1995. They evaluated data from jurisdictions that represent 63 percent of the state's population: Erie, Monroe, Suffolk and Westchester counties and New York City's five boroughs, which the researchers treated as a single jurisdiction.

The most positive finding, for restaurateurs, the state and taxpayers: The smoke-free regulations were associated with statistically significant increases in eating and drinking and hotel taxable sales in the counties.

Court costs are going up to comply with state rules

BY DIANNE STALLINGS
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

Offenders who end up in magistrate court will pay higher fees under a new set of court charges approved by the state Legislature.

"These are court cost fees that went up, and some fines," said Magistrate Judge William Butts, citing the example of someone caught driving with an expired license. To renew the license that person will pay $75 compared to the previous charge of $59.

The penalty assessments on speeding tickets have jumped and the cost of filing a civil case was increased to $67 to impose an additional $5 mediator fee.

"We'll be like district court," the judge said. "We will have a designated mediator trying to mediate a case before it goes into the courtroom.

"Legislators also added $5 on every ticket, every criminal case for a domestic violence offenders treatment program."

Other fees pointed out by Butts include:

• An increase from $10 to $20 for corrections

• An increase from $1 to $2 for judicial education

• An increase from $62 to $67 to file a civil suit

• An increase from $59 to $75 to appear in traffic court

• An increase from $199 to $215 for DWI (driving while under the influence) cases

• An increase from $126 to $142 for drug cases

• An increase from $51 to $67 on each criminal case filed.

The breakdown of charges will be posted in each court, also a requirement, along with official receipts that will itemize all money paid to the court.

Those who end up in magistrate court may not realize some of the extra costs they are assessed for being there include a $25 jury fee if a jury trial is demanded, a $20 docket fee for civil cases, a $3 Traffic Safety fee and a $5 brain injury services fee collected from anyone convicted of violating any provision of the Motor Vehicle Code involving the operation of a vehicle.

Dorn hopes for semester at sea

Holland Dorn opens a grab bag given by Jan Butchofsky-Houser to be taken aboard the Semester-at-Sea ship in the fall. Hershey bars will be worth a lot more by the 50th day at sea, she said.

Holland Dorn wants to spend a semester at sea through the University of Pittsburgh's program, and seeks help with the tuition.

Dorn, a 2000 graduate of Ruidoso High School, has been accepted for the fall Semester-at-Sea program — 100 days in five continents, 55 of them aboard the boat with 500 other students and 45 in port cities or on safaris. She will take classes on board the ship and visit Kobe, Japan; Ho Chi Minh City, Vietnam; Chennai, India; Monbasa, Kenya; Capt Tow, South Africa; Salvador, Brazil; and Havana, Cuba.

The boat leaves Vancouver, B.C., in August and Dorn's family and friends held an art auction Monday. The cost is $14,200 plus the more port cities for other experiences, such as a safari.

"I did it in 1972 and it changed my life," Jan Butchofsky-Houser said. "I knew I wanted to travel and be a travel photographer and it opened my life to the entire world. I attended again in 1975 as a journalist and I found the college community aboard to be the most articulate, intelligent and motivated youth I've ever had the good fortune to be around. The program is superb and a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity."

Dorn just finished her second year of college at Northwest Christian College in Eugene, Ore., is a recipient of several scholarships, and is majoring in music industry with a minor in business administration and possibly photography. Like her mother, Denise Dorn, she creates beautiful batiks, and while at Ruidoso High School, was involved in theater.

"I heard about Semester at Sea when I was still in middle school, and again while working at the Housers," she said. "I had always wanted to do this but never thought it was feasible because I knew it was expensive. Jan and I started working on it over a year ago because she was an alumni."

Dorn has chosen an itinerary full of places "that are hard to go to sometimes and are amazing," she said.

She plans to take courses in international business, media and consumer culture, a television-and-society class that looks at how television affects each country and society and will have students do videotaping a broad range of people, cultures and generations.

Anyone who would like to contribute a money donation can send a check or money order directly to the Institute of Shipboard Education, University of Pittsburgh, 811 William Pitt Union, Pittsburgh, PA 15260, with a note stating that this endorsement is to help fund Holland F. Dorn on her voyage for the semester of fall 2003, and should go into her account towards her tuition. Dorn's contact person is Malina at (412) 648-7490.

Pool to be closed on Sundays

Starting July 13, the Ruidoso Public Swimming Pool will close on Sundays because of a shortage of certified lifeguards and scheduling problems.

The new hours for open swim time will be from noon to 4:45 p.m., Monday through Saturday.

Rafael Salas, director of Ruidoso Parks and Recreation, said Monday the lack of certified life guards is the major problem, complicated by swimming lessons, which demands two lifeguards.

"We are working on getting a certification class for the beginning of next season," Salas said. "We do have a Guard Start class set for July 21 through Aug. 1 for 12 to 14 year-old swimmers who want to become to become lifeguard when they are older and eligible.

Magician to shock and awe audience

The Swami Salami and Houdini put on shows for kids, adults as part of summer reading program

Bill Martin will perform as the Great and Magnificent Swami Salami, above, and Houdini in magic shows at the Ruidoso and Capitan public libraries.

RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

Houdini and the Great and Magnificent Swami Salami will be at the Capitan and Ruidoso public libraries this week as part of the Magical Mystery Tour-themed summer reading program of the New Mexico State Library.

Rio Rancho Chataqua performer Bill Martin has been a full-time magician and escape artist for some time, and performs every other Thursday night in the summer at the Albuquerque Bio Park.

"We're using magic to encourage children to read, to discover the mystery of discovery," Martin said.

In a performance geared for children at 2 p.m. Thursday at the Capitan Public Library, and at 2:30 p.m. Friday at the Ruidoso Public Library, Martin will perform his magic act as the Great and Magnificent Swami Salami. In a performance as Houdini for a more general audience in the evenings at the libraries, 7 p.m. Thursday in Capitan and 6:30 p.m. Friday in Ruidoso, he will inform audiences about Houdini's background and life.

Having researched Houdini for many years and learned his most famous escape tricks, Martin will perform some of these.

"I offer $100 for anyone who can defeat me in any of the restraints: handcuffs, ropes, locks, a 25-foot chain and straight jacket," Martin said. "The purpose of the show is to really reveal the character of Harry Houdini as he really was, the guy who became an American icon, most famous entertainer, magician and escape artist of the era."

A feature of the performance that will appeal to the young is the star of the show — Charlie Brown, a live rabbit he hypnotizes to perform various feats.

Martin began his education as an escape artist by studying locksmithing by mail order before his tour of duty in Vietnam — in the event that he might be captured, he said. He learned that Houdini was an apprentice locksmith in Milwaukee when he was 15, and this renewed an earlier interest on Martin's part in the magician.

"I began learning some escape work, especially with ropes," he said. "In the Delta in-between fire fights I would land in various villages in my area and pull out a folding top hat, folding table and bag of tricks."

He learned all his magic tricks and his history of Houdini through books, so his performances are proofs of the magical power of reading. His escape tricks may have saved his life, too: In the middle of a show, an 8-year-old girl approached him with fear in her eyes and told him to go because Viet Cong had arrived. He performed a disappearing act and, from the safety of his helicopter, saw the armed Viet Cong where he had been standing. On another occasion, two Viet Cong stepped into the village and tied his hands behind his back.

"It was a Houdini escape, and I demonstrate that in my show," Martin said. "I slipped my bonds immediately and escaped. They were so stunned they didn't chase me."

Another famous Houdini escape act he performs is the milk can escape, which he performed for a television special on the Travel Channel. For this, he is handcuffed and locked inside a milk can filled with water, straight-jacketed upside down and hanging by his feet from a crane 40 feet in the air.

Martin is a full-time Chataqua performer, and this is his first summer to perform for the New Mexico State Library's summer reading program, visiting 18 libraries in central New Mexico. In addition, he's booking Houdini shows for the public through New Mexico Endowment for the Humanities.

The performances at the Capitan and Ruidoso libraries are free to the public.

Erika Rae Dunn, daughter of Diane Thorgeson of Ruidoso and Charles Dunn of Las Cruces, was named to the dean's honor list of the College of Arts and Sciences at New Mexico State University for the spring 2003 semester, with a 4.0 grade point average.

She also has been accepted for membership in the National Society of Collegiate Scholars and will be honored during a campus ceremony this fall at New Mexico State University.

Kids' gardens grow an interest in science

COLLEGE STATION, Texas – Ah, it's summer. A perfect time to belly up to some Fragaria ananassa shortcake, hold a Citrullus lanatus seed spitting contest, or have some homemade Prunus persica ice cream.

Clueless? No need for a scientific thesaurus. Ask a child who gardens.

One minute they're knee deep in dirt. Next thing, they're up to their genu in soil – and loving every minute.

Kids who participate in gardening programs generally develop a greater interest in science, according to educators responding to a recent study by Texas Cooperative Extension.

"Our mission is to use horticulture to grow good kids," said Lisa Whittlesey, coordinator for Extension's Junior Master Gardener program. "We hope they also learn a lot about gardening."

In the national poll of more than 440 JMG leaders, about 85 percent believed that the program increases a child's interest in science, Whittlesey said.

That's good, she said, because schools in the state have increased accountability for academic achievement with the introduction of a new Texas Assessment of Knowledge and Skills test for science.

"The role of the JMG program to ignite a passion for learning can be a significant tool for schools to use to meet these new demands," Whittlesey said.

JMG is a gardening program that began through Extension's Texas 4-H program in 1999. It since has spread to all 50 states and Washington, D.C., and the curriculum has been sold to 10 other countries and been translated in Spanish and Korean.

The JMG survey revealed even more than the science interest, Whittlesey noted. Almost 64 percent of the educators said JMG leads to a child being more willing to try new fruits and vegetables. Previous studies with children have found the connection between gardening and science, but this survey found that JMG educators - those responsible for choosing what is taught – perceive that increased interest in science can be accomplished through gardening. That means they may be more likely to teach horticulture to students than educators who do not perceive the connection.

Proper nutrition is vital for children because it impacts their growth, development and ability to learn. A child who does not receive proper nutrition will not achieve maximum physical and mental potential, according to the U.S. Department of Agriculture. Food and exercise habits are formed in the first 10-15 years of life, so it is important to introduce positive nutritional messages early, USDA nutritionists note.

Less than half of the nation's children are consuming the recommended number of servings suggested on the Food Guide Pyramid, and their intakes of discretionary fat and added sugars are much higher than recommended, according to a USDA-Agriculture Research Service study published this year in the Family Economics and Nutrition Review.

The study showed that less than one-fourth of the children ate the recommended number of fruit servings.

Whittlesey believes the JMG program can help change that. The JMG Web site, http://jmgkids.com/ tells how to get a program started, or one can e-mail the National JMG office atprograminfo@jmgkids .org, or phone (979) 845-8565.

The end result is that gardening has a twofold benefit for kids – an increased interested in both science and nutrition. Or, in the words of a Junior Master Gardener, a Malus pumila a day keeps the doctor away.

College-educated Americans have better diets, according to researchers

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. – Americans are eating healthier diets than they did in 1965, but college-educated people are doing better than high school dropouts, new research indicates.

That may seem obvious, but it wasn't the case in 1965. Then, people who had not finished high school, those who were high school graduates and those who went to college all had about the same level of diet quality. But a more recent survey by Barry Popkin, Ph.D., and colleagues from the Department of Nutrition at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill found that while dietary quality has improved overall, those with more education now have much healthier diets.

"In fact, the gap in diet between higher educated persons and lower educated persons may explain the large disparity in health between higher and lower socioeconomic groups in the United States," Popkin says.

The research is published in the July issue of the American Journal of Preventive Medicine. Popkin emphasized that this study examined the composition of the diet, not energy intake or obesity.

Comparing dietary habits from 1965 and 1994-96, Popkin and colleagues measured the overall healthfulness of the diets of 6,475 respondents in 1965 and 9,241 in 1994-96. In two telephone calls on different days, respondents were asked to recall what they had eaten in the previous 24 hours. They tabulated results using the Revised Dietary Quality Index, a rating of a diet's overall healthfulness.

The effects of income and education were rarely significant in 1965, Popkin says. There were a few differences back then: College-educated people took in more calcium, iron and servings of fresh fruit than less-educated people did, but they also ate more saturated fats, which decreased their Dietary Quality Index.

Between 1965 and the mid-1990s, the overall Dietary Quality Index improved for all education groups. But better-educated people not only have better diets today compared to their counterparts 30 years ago, they also eat better than today's high school dropouts.

Thirty years later, the effects of education are more pronounced. For instance, white men with no high school diploma scored 61.9 on the Dietary Quality Index, while their college-educated peers scored 68.3. A similar gap separated black men in the same educational categories. Income variations produced smaller differences, said Popkin.

An exception to the general dietary improvement was a drop in calcium intake, which Popkin blames on reduced milk consumption. Other researchers have noticed the same pattern with calcium, which is needed to build and maintain strong bones.

Besides calcium, the most striking dietary shortcoming in the 1994-96 survey came with a disappointingly small shift downward in the use of added sugar, discretionary fat, salt and alcohol.

The Dietary Quality Index research model reflects proportion, variety and moderation in diet, but does not account for total energy intake, Popkin said. So while it showed a lower percentage of calories coming from fat (a sign of dietary improvement) because the consumption of fats remained constant, total calories increased, leading to a net weight gain.

Exactly why more education is linked to better diets wasn't clear, Popkin says. Previous research showed that, more than income or occupation, lower levels of education were associated with higher disease risk.

"It may be caused by a diffusion of knowledge, skills, attitudes and beliefs that occur while individuals are participating in the educational system," he says. Better-educated people may get better nutritional information or are more likely to act on it than those with less schooling.

"Improving the education system in the United States may help to eliminate disadvantages in diet quality," Popkin concludes.

Gun used to kill Kid found

Weapon had belonged to cohort of outlaw's

BY LIONEL W. LIPPMANN

COURTESY PHOTO

The Colt revolver used to kill Billy the Kid now belongs to Texan James H. Earle.

When Sheriff Tom Sullivan and Capitan Mayor Steve Sederwall opened their official police investigation into the events surrounding the death of Billy the Kid, the primary purpose was to bring forensic science to to bear on the deaths of Deputy Sheriff J. W. Bell and Deputy U. S. Marshall Robert Ollinger.

According to the complaint, there was only one eyewitness to the escape of Billy the Kid, and that witness, Godfrey Gauss, as quoted in the Lincoln County Leader on Jan. 15, 1890, only heard a shot inside the Lincoln County Courthouse, and a "tussle upstairs, somebody hurrying downstairs and deputy sheriff Bell emerging from the door running towards me.

"He ran right into my arms, expired the same moment. When I arrived at the garden gate leading to the street, in front of the courthouse I saw the other deputy sheriff Ollinger coming out of the hotel opposite, with the four or five other county prisoners, where they had taken their dinner. I called to him to come quick. He did so, leaving his prisoners in front of the hotel. When he had come close up to me, and while standing not more that yard apart, I told him that I had just laid Bell dead on the ground in the yard behind. Before he could reply, he was struck by a well-directed shot fired from a window above us, and fell dead at my feet. [sic]"

Gauss was the only eyewitness to Ollinger's death and was the only person present when Bell died.

When news of the Sullivan/Sederwall investigation was picked up by the media it caused an influx of information concerning the last days of Billy the Kid. Needless to say, this information was often of dubious authenticity, consisting of family legends and speculation.

One of the best pieces of information concerning the death of Billy the Kid and deputy sheriff Ollinger came from James H. Earle, a retired professor of engineering at Texas A&M University in College Station, Texas. Earle is both an amateur historian and a gun collector. His contribution to the criminal investigation took the form of photographs of guns and extensive research into their provenance.

Among the photographs is one of a single-action army Colt 44-40 pistol, serial number 55093, that was shipped from the Colt factory in Hartford, Conn., on April 22, 1880, as part of a shipment to a retailer in Cincinnati, Ohio.

By Nov. 23, 1881, the pistol in question had made its way to New Mexico and was being carried by a member of Billy the Kid's gang that had forted up at Stinking Springs.

In an affidavit dated April 15, 1905, Pat Garrett attests to the fact that the colt pistol he habitually wore and the Winchester rifle he carried were his "private souviners (sic)" and had been taken from one of Billy's men (possibly Billy Wilson) after the battle of Stinking Springs. Garrett also notes in the affidavit the serial numbers of the pistol and the rifle and says that the reason he preferred these guns was because they fired the same caliber ammunition, 44-40. The affidavit was made in El Paso, Texas, and was attested to by the El Paso County Clerk.

Garrett says that he had "been asked to exhibit these guns many times, but ... was always fearful that they might be lost or stolen." Despite these fears he loaned them to his friend Tom Power, who owned the Coney Island Saloon in El Paso.

Garrett also noted the irony of the fact that a pistol he took from a member of Billy the Kid's gang was used to end Billy's life.

After Pat Garrett's death, his wife sued to regain the ownership of the gun that killed Billy the Kid. After a court battle, she was given the gun in 1933. According to an affidavit, Jarvis Garrett attests that he retained ownership of the pistol until July 24, 1978, when he sold it to Calvin Moerbe of Round Rock, Texas. Jarvis Garrett further stated that he understood that Calvin Moerbe sold the pistol to James H. Earle on July 14, the 102nd anniversary of the killing of Billy the Kid.

To be continued with an article on Robert Ollinger's shotgun, also owned by James H. Earle.

Pearce answers questions from Carrizozo residents

BY JULIE CARTER
FOR THE RUIDOSO NEWS

For an hour or so last Thursday afternoon, a pre-holiday crowd gathered at City Hall in Carrizozo to express concerns and get questions answered during a brief visit by 2nd District Congressman Steve Pearce.

Pearce

Pearce was accompanied by his district representatives, Ron Morsbach and Cindy Willard, chief of staff Jim Richards and district outreach coordinator Bob Carter.

In an informal, circle-the-chairs kind of visit, Pearce outlined current issues being passed or worked on in Congress. To the 50 or so people present, the congressman discussed IRA taxation penalties, forest health by thinning, the endangered species act in reference to the Rio Grande and silvery minnow issues and various energy policies .

As a freshman congressman, Pearce, 55, described the frustration of watching the careless spending in Washington, D.C., by our country's caretakers. He said it is difficult to break in and get a handle on changing things in the bureaucracy. He felt too many people in Washington get their job and then can't or won't do it, but won't leave.

Carrizozo resident Barbara Ward quizzed the congressman on the burden of increased costs for senior health care. He responded by saying that, currently, congress is working on a making a number of alternatives available to senior citizens.

Residents asked and listened to responses from Pearce on alternate energy sources and tax credits, military pay raises, world "policing," and the BIA's advantages as a sovereign nation.

Pearce advised residents to watch closely over the concerns about the California version of the rewritten textbooks and the impact on New Mexico education if accepted in the state. He also agreed that more local power in the school government was preferable to the current state control, but the need for funding from a state level kept the power there.

Individual situations and problems with Medicare and FHA were directed to Cindy Willard and the aid offered to pursue the problems through Pearce's office.

Capitan opens new wetlands with bird-watching platform

BY LIONEL W. LIPPMANN

Capitan's new wetlands and bird-watching area is dedicated to the memory long-time resident Helen Hinch.

Thanks to the hard work and persistence of the Lincoln County Bird Club and a group of Capitan and area citizens led by Capitan Municipal Judge Jack Johnson and his wife, the village now has the only wetlands bird watching facility between the Bosque del Apache National Wildlife Refuge near San Antonio, N.M., and the Bitter Lakes National Wildlife Refuge east of Roswell.

The new facility, which features a viewing platform, benches and a parking lot, has been named and dedicated to the memory of "birder" and long-time Capitan resident, Helen Hinch.

The fact that Capitan has a wetlands at all is due to the vision and scientific knowledge of Dr. Bernhard E. F. Reimann. Reimann is also a long time Capitan resident who received his scientific training in Germany as a microbiologist and has worked and taught at universities and research facilities from California to Texas. Reimann also worked on and developed methods for the use of the electron microscope.

Upon his retirement he and his wife moved to Capitan, where they had owned property for many years. Reimann's expertise is the reason Capitan has wetland cells that take the place of traditional sewage plants.

The wetlands is surrounded by bull rushes and its water contains fish to feed on mosquito larvae. The cells also provide an ideal nesting place for many native and transient birds. To date 47 species of birds have been logged at the wetlands. They range from hummingbirds to swallows to numerous species of waterfowl, as well as native blackbirds and hawks.

Johnson said that the sport of "birding" is a growing one and the Helen Hinch Bird Watching Facility gives Capitan another visitor attraction that, as it becomes better known, and visitors spend time shopping and dining in the village, will become a source of gross receipts tax for the village.

The bird watching platform is located just east of the business area of Capitan on U.S. Highway 380. It is on the south side of the road and is clearly marked. Admission is free and the hours are from early morning until dark.

Bird to serve another term as fair queen

BY JULIE CARTER
FOR THE RUIDOSO NEWS

Beauty and brains are found packaged in one soft spoken Capitan girl. Amanda Bird will reign another term as Lincoln County Fair Queen, stepping into the 2004-2005 term to follow this one.

The 22-year-old equestrienne is the daughter of Bill and Sharon Bird of Roswell and Debbie Anderson of Capitan. She is a 1999 graduate of Capitan High School, where she participated in FFA, 4-H, track and was a cheerleader.

Amanda will graduate from NMSU this December with a B.S. in biochemistry. She will apply to UNM School of Pharmacy following graduation. Bird currently works on the NMSU campus in the physical science lab, specifically in the genetic testing lab.

As a NMSU Student Ambassador, Amanda works with new student orientation and various NMSU public relations projects. She is the president of the Golden Key National Honor Society and a member of the National Society of Collegiate Scholars. She also belongs to Alpha Lambda Delta honor society and Phi Eta Sigma. She has been a qualified Crimson Scholar throughout her college years.

When Amanda was a little girl, she saw a float in the Smokey Bear Parade that was dedicated to the Lincoln County Fair Queens throughout the years.

"Those women represented people that I wanted my life to be like. So I grew up dreaming I too would be a fair queen," Amanda said.

She describes her job as fair queen as, "introducing the West to the parts of Lincoln County and beyond that don't know about it." She sees herself as an ambassador representing a way a life she grew up knowing. "I love the people and most of all I love the smiles; the smiles I give and the smiles I receive."

As the daughter of a rancher, Amanda is very in tune to the cowboy life, the challenges of agriculture and rural living. As a kid, she lived 45 miles from town. Her mother was the school bus driver, so they spent many hours a week going down the road to and from school.

Listing God and her Christian walk top on her list of what shapes her life, she also gives much credit to her parents for her drive for excellence in whatever she does.

Amanda hopes next year to represent Lincoln County a little further beyond its borders than she was able to this year. With impending graduation and the time restrictions of college ending in December, she sees a road to a bigger world both as a young adult and as Lincoln County's representative in the saddle.

Proposed used car lot tabled

■ Planners ask for more details before deciding on the idea.

BY DIANNE STALLINGS
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

A proposal to create a used car sales lot on the site of a former miniature golf course was tabled by the Ruidoso Planning and Zoning Commission for more information.

Planners want to see more detail on lot lines, parking spaces, landscaping and driveway access, they said last week.

Applicant George Taulbee Jr., who also owns the carpet company next door but considers cars "my love," assured village staff and board members his operation would be "clean and pretty," as well as consistently staffed.

"It won't be just parking cars," he said, although some spaces will be considered for consignment by people trying to sell their own cars. That may result in a reduction of cars for sale spotted throughout the village, he said.

The half-acre property at 236 Sudderth Drive is zoned community commercial and contains a 560-square-foot building. A conditional use permit is required to allow the building and lot to be converted to used car sales. The area is designated in the village's comprehensive plan for business.

Charles Rennick, acting village planning director, said the drawn plan lacked property line definitions and dimensions, all the front spaces protrude over the property line several feet and violate village setback requirements, and the plan contains no information about customer or employee parking.

Taulbee would lease the land, which is part of a 1967 subdivision of a larger tract.

Action also was postponed on Taulbee's amended commercial site development plan.

In other action, the planning and zoning commission:

• Approved a variance on Lot 27A, Block 14, Black Forest Unit 2 at the end of Flume Canyon requested by Mark D. Rutledge with a condition that the slope be stabilized.

• Tabled a sketch plan review for Tract 2 of the Wingfield Homestead Subdivision submitted by William Morrison.

• Approved a variance on Lot 15, Block 12 of Ponderosa Heights Subdivision requested by J.E. and Vicki Carmichael; a variance on the east one half of Lot 29, Block E, Singing Pines Subdivision, requested by Max E. Cowan; and a variance on Lots 168 and 169 in Skyland Subdivision requested by Austin Downing, although some neighbors objected to a manufactured home in the area.

• Approved an amended commercial site development plan for Lots 15 and 16 in Block 1 of Forest Heights Subdivision requested by Wayne Usrey; an amended commercial site development plan for Lot 9, Block 5 in Forest Heights Subdivision requested by Brian Mirau and an amended commercial site development plan for Lot 1, Block 4 of the Hamilton Terrace Subdivision requested by William R. Querin.

Querin proposes to build a 1,400 square foot addition and an open deck to the existing four commercial buildings as part of the new Apple Tree Bed and Breakfast. That use is permitted in neighborhood commercial districts.

Planet Holland sets track record

BY TODD FUQUA
RUIDOSO NEWS SPORTS EDITOR

For those wondering, yes, The A List qualified for this year's Rainbow Futurity, and the dreams of a Quarter Horse Triple Crown are still intact.

But the real story coming out of the Rainbow Futurity trials Thursday at Ruidoso Downs was a performance by Planet Holland.

The colt turned on the speed in the 12th race, crossing the finish line in 19.302 — Almost two-tenths of a second faster than second-fastest Royal Delphias Chick and better than the previous track record of 19.37, set by Brigand Silk in 1985.

The A List finished with the third-fastest time overall, crossing the line in 19.511.

"I was really surprised at the speed, but I'm not surprised by the horse," said Paul Jones, trainer for Planet Holland. "He's a good horse and I've liked him all along.

"Any time you run a horse, you're not expecting to break the track record," he added. "That record has been there for 18 years, and a lot of horses have run at it. But he ran awesome and I was really pleased."

Planet Holland — owned by Ruidoso Downs owner R.D. Hubbard — was the second horse Jones had in the race, also getting in Lady Jayne Cee with a time of 19.663 in the fourth trial.

The 12th trial was the race to be in if you wanted a horse in the Rainbow. All three of the top three finishers, including Dashair and First To Shake Six, were fast enough to qualify.

"It was a tough race, but he's a great horse and he ran super," Jones said. "Right now, it seems like it was a pretty good decision to come down here. The first races we ran here were pretty tough on us, but our horses are getting acclimated, and our percentages are pretty good for the horses we've run."

The 14th race was also a good one, as Royal Delphias Chick and Sir Chickaroid each qualified out of that trial.

Royal Delphias Chick and first-time starter Dashair are both trained by John Bassett, who won last year's Rainbow Futurity with First To Flash.

Trainer Dwayne Gilbreath also had a pair of horses qualify in Sir Chickaroid and Executive Menace.

The finals for the Ruidoso Futurity and Ruidoso Juvenile will be run July 20 at Ruidoso Downs.

Meteoric, with jockey G.R. Carter aboard, races to a decisive victory in the sixth race at Ruidoso Downs Saturday during trials for the Rainbow Derby. Meteoric turned in the fastest time of the 52 horses entered on the day. He was also the only horse in the sixth race to earn a qualifying time.

Meteoric streaks to fastest time for derby

Qualifying for the Rainbow Derby got underway on Saturday with a loaded first trial.

In what many considered to be the toughest race to pick all year, Silvered Eyes easily outdistanced such tough contenders as Eye Opening Episode, First Place Queen and Southern Cartel in that first trial.

But the fastest time of the day belonged to Meteoric, who streaked across the finish line for trainer Lin Melton and jockey G.R. Carter in a time of 21.067 — not that far off of the track record for 440 yards.

"I'm glad I didn't have to run in that first trial, but it didn't seem to matter," Melton said. "He loves to run. The way the rest of them were running, I figured he could run 21.15 or something, but I didn't think he could run that fast.

"We can't take a lot of credit for it, though," he added. "He just loves to run."

Meteoric, Silvered Eyes, First Place Queen and Southern Cartel all qualified for the Derby with their times, as did Andthebeatgoeson and last year's Rainbow Futurity winner, First To Flash.

Ruidoso Downs action on 2B

Of those six horses, all but Southern Cartel qualified to last year's All American Futurity, and each have won a great deal of money already in their short careers.

Counting Saturday's winnings, the combined lifetime earnings for the 10 derby finalists add up to well more than $2 million. The winnings range from First Place Queen's $872,898 all the way down to $6,812 earned by Sing And Pray, who was making only her fifth start on Saturday.

Of course, the men guiding those horses likely have something to do with it. Trainer John Bassett and jockey Joe Badilla were responsible for First Place Queen and First To Flash, while trainer Jack Brooks and jockey Jacky Martin are the proud handlers of Silvered Eyes.

Dwayne Gilbreath trains both Andthebeatgoeson and Sing And Pray, while Eddie Willis leads Southern Cartel — winner of the Ruidoso Derby earlier in the year.

Another trainer-jockey pair to qualify two horses to the July 19 final were trainer Blane Wood and jockey Carlos Madiera. The two helped lead Fast First Call and One Famous Lady to times of 21.236 and 21.251, respectively.

Snow Skier — a winner in the Bayer Legend Derby in June — qualified for trainer Robert Cappelucci.

A scary spill

The big Fourth of July crowd had a fright during the fourth race, when Heza Streak 276 went down just after crossing the finish line, hitting the dividing rail and throwing jockey Mark Villa.

It turns out the horse bled as a result of the heat, and was unable to continue running. After having the chance to cool off, the gelding was able to get up and has since made a full recovery. Villa was a little sore but able to walk off the track — even running in a jockey footrace the following day in celebration of Jockeys Across America.

Salvo, Studdard take trophy saddles

BY JULIE CARTER
FOR THE RUIDOSO NEWS

The final roping came down to a rope off, one tie down calf to rope during the youth timed events in the Smokey Bear Stampede rodeo on the Fourth of July.

Johnny Salvo of Datil roped against Cutter Whipple of Capitan in the 13-15 age division. Ky Studdard of Roswell roped against Gary Herrera of Tatum in the 16-17 division. Although Herrera rounded up $900 in winnings over the two days in events and averages, he was unable to nail the title after a miss with his first loop in the rope-off. Salvo and Studdard claimed the 2003 championships.

Earning the chance to compete, the young ropers in two divisions competed on Wednesday and Thursday against 10 ropers in each division each day. Champions of each age group moved to the Friday night roping and the chance at the trophy saddles.

Staci Stanbrough of Capitan was the only girl to compete in the two day event. She made her mark among the cowboys by winning the heading event on Thursday.

Push The Pace wins Higheasterjet Handicap over older sister

BY KRISTIAN LOVELACE
FOR THE RUIDOSO NEWS .com

A race that looked to be won by the older sister and post time favorite, Significant Speed, was taken by Push The Pace.

Push The Pace broke sharply and took the lead through the stretch to put in a big finish at the wire to win the Higheasterjet Handicap Saturday at Ruidoso Downs by half a length over second place finisher Friday 123. Push The Pace was sent to the starting gates for owner Western Livestock and trainer Michael K. Barber.

Push The Pace piloted by Mark Villa posted a speed index of 102 and was only two hundredths off of the track record set by Deceptively in 1992.

"We bought this horse in The Heritage Sale and the only reason we looked at him was because Raylene saw him," Steve Rohrbaugh said of his wife.

After carefully studying Push The Pace's sisters past performance, the Rohrbaugh's thought it would be a good investment if they were able to purchase him for the correct amount and then turn the colt out.

"We were fortunate enough to buy this horse and decided after studying the sister that he needed some time to grow and just be a horse. We started training him at the house this Spring and then gave him to Mike to bring to the track," Rohrbaugh said.

Significant Speed, whose lifetime stakes wins include the Rainbow Derby, the All American Gold Cup, the 6666 Ranch Handicap and the Refrigerator Handicap and was third in the 1999 All American Futurity behind A Delightful Dasher and Chicks Call Me, ended up fourth in today's race. While her daughter, So Significant, won the second race earlier today.

Coming in second was Friday 123 for trainer Jack Brooks and jockey Juan Vasquez. Friday 123 is owned by T Bill Stables and posted a speed index of 100.

Finishing third by a neck was Dashin Prince Henry. Dashin Prince Henry a finalist in the Ruidoso Derby, Rainbow Derby and the All American Derby in 2002 was trained and piloted by the legendary trainer and jockey combination of Jack Brooks and Jacky Martin.

Saturday's earnings of $18,900 in the $31,500 Higheasterjet Handicap brings Push The Pace's lifetime earnings to $141,424.

Push The Pace paid $14, $6 and $4. The exacta paid $42, quinella $17.60 and the trifecta paid $116.10.

Runawayfun wins Fern Sawyer

Runawayfun posted another stakes win after winning the Fern Sawyer Handicap Sunday.

Runawayfun won the First Lady Handicap June 14 after entering it as a prep-race for the Fern Sawyer.

Runawayfun piloted by Mark Villa stalked the pace until coming out of the final turn where Runawayfun moved to the middle of the track where she pressured Hava Peer and jockey Carlos Rivas, who set the pace throughout the race.

Runawayfun, conditioned by Henry Dominguez and owned by Michelle Anderson, posted a time of 1:38.20 in Sunday's race.

"We used the Fern Sawyer as a prep race and she ran the race just as we thought she would today," Dominguez said.

Runawayfun, whose future was uncertain at the beginning of the year, is getting a new chance here in New Mexico after being shipped in from California.

"Michelle was about to give up on this horse in April but now she will probably keep her forever," Dominguez said.

Hava Peer lead the field throughout the race until coming into the home stretch where she had to dig in to maintain the second place finish for trainer Ralph Black and owner John H. Williams.

Sunday's earnings of $15,840 in the $26,400 Fern Sawyer Handicap brings Runawayfun's lifetime earnings to $112,742.

Runawayfun paid $3.40, $3 & $2.30. The exacta paid $15.20, quinella $9.20 and the trifecta paid $14.20.

Trujillo returns home to a hero's welcome

BY TODD FUQUA
RUIDOSO NEWS SPORTS EDITOR .com

His travel to Ireland was easily the longest and most rewarding trip he's ever made in his short lifetime, but it's likely the short drive Ernest Trujillo made Tuesday through Ruidoso was just as exciting.

Trujillo, who returned recently from the Special Olympic World Games in Dublin, Ireland, was honored by the mayors of Ruidoso and Ruidoso Downs, and cheered by friends and family in School House Park.

The 18-year old, who graduated from Ruidoso High School in May but lives in Ruidoso Downs, captured a bronze medal in the 50-meter run June 24 with a time of 9.5 seconds. He also competed in the 100-meter run, finishing fifth.

Trujillo's mother Sylvia said he could have done better in the 100-meter run, but was a little confused as to where to stop running.

"He got to the first line he saw and stopped running," Sylvia said. "He was leading all the way until that point.

"He was a little nervous. At state, there were only four or five runners, but in Ireland, he was racing against eight others," she added.

But Trujillo's performance in that race doesn't change the fact that he was selected to represent Ruidoso and the United States at the World Games, making him a hero to many in the area.

At School House Park, he was presented with mayoral proclamations from Ruidoso mayor Leon Eggleston and Ruidoso Downs mayor Bob Miller.

RODEO: Another win for Turkey Track ranch rodeo. The solid team in the white Wrangler shirts have become an icon in ranch rodeo in New Mexico.

Friday and Saturday afternoons during the Smokey Bear Stampede festivities, more 150 cowboys with horses and families in tow descended on the Lincoln County Fair Grounds. It was ranch rodeo time and the stands filled to watch 20 teams of cowboys compete in five events.

The ranch rodeo events simulate actual work done on a ranch giving the cowboys an opportunity to show their skills with a rope and horse. The clock ticks while each team makes their best effort to complete the tasks in under three minutes. The buzzer at three minutes indicates times up and a no-time "score" for the team. The goal is to get a good time in each event but to qualify in all five events for a chance in the average.

Individual event winners were paid $500 for the team. The average winners were paid $3,000 for first, $1,000 for second, $750 for third and $500 for fourth.

POOP SCOOP

BY DIANNE STALLINGS
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

Boston Terriers seem to be a favorite around Ruidoso.

In her book, "Raising Rover," Judith Halliburton writes that they were bred solely to be companions.

She contends the breed is easy to housetrain, because if the nose goes down, an owner knows that the pet is searching for a place to go.

He wasn't bred to hunt or find lost hikers. Bostons are clean and quick learners. They love children and kids should be involved in their training from the outset, she said. They love children.

"This is one of the breeds at the top of my list when I'm asked about a small dog that's good with kids," she writes.

The major downside is that Bostons snore - loudly and freely.

"Don't be a Boston terrier owner if you can't stand snoring," she writes.

Bostons also are good with the elderly, she says.

"He doesn't require much exercise and he loves his master with all of his heart," she writes. "Rover will move gently around a walker, cane or wheelchair."

He likes air conditioning and is well suited for apartment living. He might need a little work for car trips, but once he knows they mean he will be sitting next to his human, things should go smoothly, she writes.

The little fellows think they're giants and will protect property ferociously, Halliburton writes.

They can chill easily and should not stay outside long in the winter, she writes. If your pal doesn't sleep with you, she recommends buying a sheepskin bed for him to curl up in at night.

Halliburton says Bostons rarely need discipline and don't forget when they are criticized.

She cautions not to overwork them to the point they are breathing fast. They like to learn tricks and enjoy performing, she says.

I have a friend who swears by Boxers, the next breed we'll examine.

They were excellent bullbaiters and dogfighters, where the breed was known for putting its paws in the air to start a fight.

They are susceptible to tumors in the mouth and rheumatism, Halliburton writes. Their teeth need frequent cleaning during their relatively short lifespan, about nine years.

The nose down warning seen in Bostons works well with boxers because they also were not trained for exploratory behavior, she says.

Because the younger members of the breed appear to be in perpetual motion, keeping track of them can be a problem, especially during training, she says. But persistence will pay off.

"These dogs are as close to being clinically hyperactive as one can get without actually being clinically hyperactive," she writes. "Don't get a Boxer if you're not prepared for the amount of exercise this breed demands."

Described as incredibly loving and loyal, and very smart by Halliburton, boxers are not recommended with young children because they could be mowed down if they are standing in the way, she says.

They can jump many fences and shouldn't be left alone for long periods.

She doesn't recommend jogging with Boxers. A brisk walk is better for both of you. Wrestling will be a favorite game and they like tug of war, she insists. The pecking order gets lost in play.

Training should start early and with firmness and kindness. If you don't handle problems early, you'll have problems from that point on, she warns.

"This dog doesn't have a patient bone in his body," Halliburton said. "You're going to have to be the patient one."

But all and all they're very trainable, she says.

PSYCHIC PREDICTIONS

Judith L. Christopher

Week of July 9 - 15

CANCER: (Jun 21 - Jul 22)
Your job situation is in question. Either you need a new start, or start a new job, either way this is a good time to make up your mind for something new.

LEO: (Jul 23 - Aug 22)
Others will wonder what you're up to. Good. It's about time they look in their own back yard and try to clean it up, instead of telling you what to do.

SCORPIO: (Oct 23 - Nov 21)
Your temper could get you in hot water. Don't let little things get to you. Get out and do something different, that you haven't done in a long time.

SAGITTARIUS: (Nov 22 - Dec 21)
Ask for help if you really need it. It won't make you less of a person, but it will save you time and money. This is not a good time to be hard-headed.

PISCES: (Feb 19 - Mar 20)
Don't get too many irons in the fire, or you'll forget what is in order, and not be able to do the right thing in the right order. Take time to plan it out.

ARIES: (Mar 21 - Apr 19)
"Yes." That's the answer. Now what's the question? You've been so busy, you might have forgotten why you're doing what you're doing now.

VIRGO: (Aug 23 - Sep 22)
Money doesn't matter, when you know that you have enough to get you through the tough times. Put a pen to the paper, and find out what you need.

CAPRICORN: (Dec 22 - Jan 19)
The question on your mind can mean only one thing. When in doubt, don't. Look at everything twice. Ask more questions. This could change your life.

TAURUS: (Apr 20 - May 20)
If you move too slow, they're going to catch up with you sooner or later. Find out just who you want in your life, and shut the door on the rest.

LIBRA: (Sept 23 - Oct 22)
Your health can help or hurt you. Don't ignore the fact that not enough good sleep and food, can make you feel less than you really are. Take time for you.

AQUARIUS: (Jan 20 - Feb 18)
You're trying to take one step forwards, but your fear is making you take two steps backwards. Have faith, so you can move mountains. Go forth.

GEMINI: (May 21 - Jun 20)
If you don't take time out for loved ones, then one of these days, you're going to look up and they'll be gone. Don't assume you have enough time.
