County: Hondo 'obstructionist' label wrong

BY DIANNE STALLINGS

■ The county commission revised its resolution supporting U.S. 70 improvements to reflect the benefits of four-laning opponents.

Objections to a characterization of opponents to the U.S. 70 highway widening project as "obstructionists" prompted Lincoln County Commissioners to modify a resolution in favor of the project.

Commissioner Rick Simpson, who represents the Hondo Valley area, said he was one of the authors of the original resolution.

Commissioner Bill Schwetzmann asked for the change and his opinion was echoed by other commissioners and people in the audience during a commission meeting late last month.

"I think, in the second paragraph, the reference to 'views of obstructionists' is very strong wording," Schwetzmann said. "I think maybe they are concerned citizens, but they're not obstructionists. They're not lying in the highway and getting run over. I don't know why we would call them obstructionists. That's a horrible word to put on any people in Lincoln County."

Reginald Richey, a resident of the settlement of Lincoln, chairman of the Lincoln Historical Preservation Board and a board member of the Valley Community Preservation Commission, said the people who filed suit to stop construction until their views are heard, are "substantial landowners in the valley" and represent one of the third oldest ranches in New Mexico.

Far from obstructing, the group attempted to be constructive by hiring a highway designer to offer alternatives to four lanes, including a different route or the addition of center turn lanes and large shoulders to the existing two-lane road. Members met with state and federal highway officials two years ago, "But we were marginalized," and told to come back, but that meeting never took place.

"Our position is the valley is way too narrow for that to happen," Richey said of the plan to four-lane.

The National Trust for Historical Preservation and the Advisory Council for Historical Preservation expressed similar objections after a site visit, he said. Approval of the plan hinged on the highway agencies fulfilling several conditions, which hasn't been done, he contended, saying the area of potential effects was too restricted, the identification of historic properties was inadequate and that the Federal Highway Administration failed to consult with interested parties and the public as required.

"The lawsuit we filed was for a preliminary injunction," Richey said. "It is not a suit to stop the road. It's to reconsider the design of the road."

County wants to keep tabs on mobile-home movement

■ The number of mobile homes in Lincoln County has more than doubled in two years, according to one official.

BY DIANNE STALLINGS
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

Lincoln County officials are trying to devise a better method of tracking mobile homes as they enter, leave and moved from one site to another in the county.

County Assessor Rick Silva said he is working with County Attorney Alan Morel and County Planner Patsy Sanchez to come up with an ordinance modeled after laws in Dona Ana, Chavez and Torrance counties.

Commissioner E. Ray Nunley in a meeting last month questioned how the county kept track of mobile homes and if the state cooperated by notifying county officials of such movement.

An ordinance may be needed, he said. "Because right now we don't know what's going on."

Silva said the ordinance being proposed would require mobile-home owners to obtain a permit from the planning department before bringing a mobile home into the county. The village of Ruidoso already has that system, he said.

"But we have too many mobile homes coming in and we don't know anything about them," he said. "The state sends a list once a month and some are so outdated, the units don't ever get moved in or they miss them and we don't even know they've come into the county.

"We're doing a (reappraisal) update right now."

During the last reappraisal two years ago, 1,000 mobile home were counted.

"Now it's over 2,500," he said. "That's the growth in this county."

Nunley asked how long it takes the county to catch the questions and how much tax money is lost, but Silva said he didn't have those figures.

"We have a new appraiser. All his job is to work on mobile homes and it's kept him snowed under since he started with us," Silva said.

The proposed ordinance also would ask utility companies not to provide service until they see a county permit, Silva said.

"I know we're asking for a lot, but that's the only way we can keep track of these mobile homes moving from one school district to another," he said.

During the January session of the state Legislature, the county treasurers' affiliate group and representatives of manufactured housing intend to ask legislators to prevent further mandates from the motor vehicles division, which licenses mobile homes, when it doesn't provide sufficient information, he said.

Because of that motor vehicle licensing, counties aren't able to assess a mobile home as real estate until the MVD license is deactivated, he said.

"And our constituents are hurting because of that," Silva said.

"...We have too many mobile homes coming in and we don't know anything about them."

Ruidoso health office estimate $300,000 over budget; commissioner outraged

BY DIANNE STALLINGS

For the second time and after major cuts in square footage, the cost estimate for construction of a new building for the state Public Health office in Ruidoso came in substantially higher than available money.

The construction budget for the long-awaited project is $660,376 and the preliminary estimate hit $975,014 with another $75,799 tacked on for a stone veneer option. With 4,122 square feet in the main clinic and 1,704 square feet of unfinished basement for electrical and mechanical devices, and without the veneer, that comes to $236 per square foot of finished space.

Commissioner Leo Martinez, a builder and stucco contractor, nearly bolted from his seat during that part of the presentation late last month. Even after County Manager Tom Stewart explained only one firm is used by the state for such cost estimates and the numbers may be off on this project, Martinez wasn't mollified.

"That structure could be built for less than $300,000," he said Friday. "It started out to be just an addition. The first estimate was high at $150 a square foot. The architect went in and asked what they wanted and this is what we get."

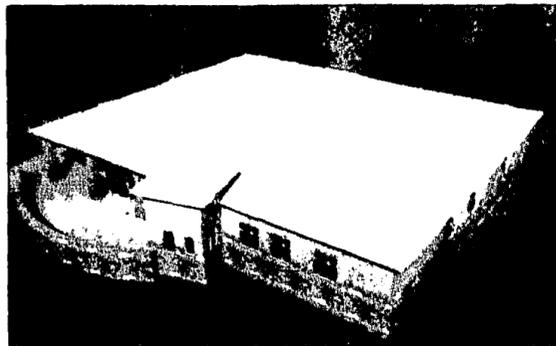

"I'd like to have a county building committee appointed to oversee these types of projects. That's over $1 million. We could use retirees with no financial stake but good background in construction and related fields."

Stewart said after the first estimate came in high, he went back with architect Jim McNamara and reduced the square footage from 5,000 square feet, taking off a computer room and some utility rooms.

"In my mind, the estimator really blew the estimate," Stewart said. "We've cut it down to the size we think it should be. Additional money would be required, maybe from the state Legislature, or the Health Department should kick in."

He reminded commissioners that $250,000 will come from a Community

County lines up legislative funding requests

BY DIANNE STALLINGS
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

County fairground improvements top the list, with a DWI detention facility and county jail renovations also mentioned.

Continuing to improve the Lincoln County fairgrounds in Capitan tops the county commission's list of requests for money from the state Legislature when it convenes later this month.

County Manager Tom Stewart submitted the list, along with requests for legislative action, during a meeting in late December.

He needed commission approval before he could forward the information to the Southeastern New Mexico Economic Development District.

Executive director Tony Elias compiles the list and helps the counties achieve their targets.

Stewart said that a balance of $5,068 remains from money appropriated by the state Legislature previously and the fair board members are trying to ensure it is spent before they return to the state to ask for more.

Next in line is housing and a counseling facility for minimum security DWI offenders at the county jail in Carrizozo, to relieve the burden on regular jail beds.

Stewart explained the state has about $7.2 million in its general fund from liquor taxes that is not being distributed to agencies and counties that are responsible for the treatment of alcoholics.

"In concert with our local Ruidoso/Lincoln County DWI program, the county is requesting $156,000 for the construction of a detention annex," he said. About 6 percent of those in the jail are convicted or waiting for trials for DWI-related offenses, he said.

A $100,000 annual allocation to the county and other counties in the state is warranted in proportionate amounts for the continued counseling and funding of alcohol-related rehabilitation projects, he said.

Third in line is the renovation of the former county jail in the courthouse annex in Carrizozo, to be turned into office space. No price tag was included.

In a request for action from the state Legislature, the county listed these priorities:

- The future of historic Fort Stanton, possibly with the formation of a special commission to coordinate the project.

- More return to the county from the Small Counties Assistance Act. Stewart noted that out of a tax of $4,413,317 designated for small counties this year, $2.7 million reverted to the general fund while eight counties out of 20 potentially eligible counties — including Lincoln County — received no money.

The formula should be updated to allow more of the small counties in the state to receive a $100,000 to $200,000 entitlement per year, as intended by the act.

- A review of the financial support counties such as Lincoln provide for state agencies, including the health department.

- The incorporation of regional water plans into a statewide plan and continued emphasis on water conservation and regulation.

- That more of the money designed to improve fire service in the state actually be returned to help fire departments, instead of 60 percent of the money paid through insurance premiums reverting to the state's general fund.

- Conveying power to county commissions to restrict fireworks during periods of extreme drought.

- Legislation to make computer programmers of municipal and county software programs partially liable for the work they perform.

- Increasing the allowed reimbursement for members of county road review committees from $5 to better reflect the actual expense.

Commission Chairman Rex Wilson said County Assessor Rick Silva also is working on a system to help with tax relief for people who lose their homes in major wildfires, such as the Kokopelli Fire in early 2002.

political pressure, he said.

Richey also challenged claims that four lanes would make the highway safer.

Charles Reed of San Patricio said the majority of accidents on U.S. 70 involve alcohol or falling asleep at the wheel.

"None of that will change if the road is widened," he said. "If anything, it will increase the flow of traffic."

He pointed out that the highway was designed for through traffic, not for 350 residents in the valley.

County planner Patsy Sanchez, her voice breaking with emotion at times, criticized the use of the word "obstructionists."

"Without their efforts (the highway would) have no turning lanes and only two-foot shoulders," she said. Construction has not slowed, much less been obstructed.

"To call these caring people obstructionists is a slap in the face and an insult," she told her bosses, accusing them of a pattern of being uncaring about preservation.

"Don't try to hide behind a false concern for safety," she admonished. "If you really had that in mind, we would hire six more deputies to do nothing but patrol the highway."

Lincoln resident James Sanchez said he found the term "obstructionists" offensive and repulsive.

"Highways don't kill people. People kill people with drinking, speeding and careless driving," he said. The road will be good economically for the communities at either end, "but burying the valley in asphalt is not the answer," Sanchez said.

But Simpson pointed that the death toll on the road is twice the national average and that attempts to pass on a narrow two-lane road have resulted in several fatal accidents.

"A large group of people want to see this project go through," he said.

Commissioner Leo Martinez said he's worried that if opponents stop too many highway projects in the area, the State Highway Commission will pull the money and use it elsewhere. The start date on another two-lane portion of U.S. 70 from Ruidoso west to the turnoff to Casino Apache was moved back a year because of environmental problems, he said.

"This highway commission put a lot of money into highways before and never looked at southern New Mexico," he said. "We pay gas taxes and should get our due. I agree we should do it right, but everyone has his opinion on how."

"I'm thankful for the positive economic impact on citizens of Lincoln County."

Susan Jimenez, a valley commission member, said, "I've been privileged enough to be part of the meetings and they've done a very good job addressing preservation, but it needs to be addressed further. The needs of local citizens and businesses along the highway are not being met. Our consultants came up with good suggestions for safety issues, but they have not been followed through on."

Jimenez said 27 percent of the accidents on the road involved animals, yet highway officials rejected suggestion by the valley commission's consultant for under-highway tunnels to allow deer to move back and forth to the river.

"The highway department said that was unfeasible, but I think the problem should be addressed," she said.

After a half hour of opinions, Schwettmann finally suggested the commission pass just the first paragraph of the resolution, saying it supports improvements to the highway because of the dangerous situation.

"How they do it, we don't care," he said. "The commission has enough to take care of without this business of getting into private disputes. We just want improvements."

The modified resolution passed unanimously. Commission Chairman Rex Wilson said the board wants historical properties handled as appropriately as possible.

"Highways don't kill people. People kill people with drinking, speeding and careless driving."

Development Block Grant and another $491,880 is federal money.

"I think the estimator is out to lunch," Stewart said. "I think he's trying to portray the situation as pessimistic as he can."

The CDBG runs out in March 2004, he said. The county should move ahead with specifications and bids. Despite the problems, commissioners voted to direct McNamara to prepare the bid documents on the Ruidoso public health office, a renovation and addition to the county Carrizozo Health Clinic and a 3,329-square-foot addition to the county hospital, plus 2,320 square feet of renovation.

McNamara said the stone veneer was added on the Ruidoso public health office as an option to match the Ruidoso Public Library and village administration building, which are next door.

Martinez said luxury homes in Alto can be built for less money.

"These are only examining rooms," he said.

"Right, there's not much to it," McNamara agreed.

Commissioner Bill Schwettmann, an engineer whose term ended Dec. 31, told the board to go out for bids.

"You don't have to accept any of them," he said. "An estimator is protecting his you-know-what when he makes these estimates from Albuquerque, which is highly unionized. He's probably using the Albuquerque building scale, which is twice what they will pay in Lincoln County. Another estimate doesn't mean anything. Go forward with the project. Have it with deductible alternates in it and you can make your choices. What I've seen in the last year or so, I think you have plenty of money to do it, you might even add to it."

Stewart agreed. The commission either should stop now and return the money or go out for bids with a cap, he said. If the bids are too high, they can be rejected.

Martinez wanted to know why a local architect wasn't picked to head the projects.

Stewart said it was a competitive, qualification-based selection and McNamara from Albuquerque was picked.

More local architects and contractors should be encouraged to bid on government construction projects to save money, he said. Too many times, the work goes to firms from larger cities that have to contend with added costs.

McNamara also reported to county commissioners that the Lincoln County Medical Center ambulatory surgery project is about $15,000 over its $662,200 budget, and the county health clinic in Carrizozo exceeded its $196,562 budget for renovation and addition by $126,634.

Money for the hospital work comes from a special, annual county property tax levy. The Carrizozo Clinic project is funded with federal dollars, Stewart said, but the county has about $700,000 in the special tax levy reserve if it doesn't want to cut the project in half.

"It sure seems like double your money on that is not double your pleasure," Commissioner L. Ray Nunley said. "This is not highly technical construction. There's no oxygen in there, no wiring in the walls."

McNamara said the project covers 1,338 square feet of new construction and 210 square feet of renovation.

"That's over $300 a square foot," an astonished Nunley replied, but Stewart corrected his mental math, saying it's more like $208 per square foot.

Martinez said, "In my past government service, I would call this a big turkey, and it's plucking us. Get a new estimator. Some would say we've got the money, spend it, but that's not my mentality. It's wrong. It's wrong."

McNamara said the numbers aren't actual bids, but Martinez said when people read about the numbers, that's how they'll bid. He said he wants to be involved in the process.

Youth ham radio

Ruidoso Hams are looking for youngsters who are interested in radio communications. Amateur radio operators in Lincoln County will participate in "Kids Day" on Jan. 4 from 11 a.m. until 5 p.m. Local hams will host youngsters at their ham radio stations, allowing the youth to see and participate in a national communications event designed to provide first-hand experience with ham radio.

This event allows kids in many communities around the country to talk with other kids on a long-range ham radio network.

The radio station will be operated by a local licensed ham radio operator, but the focus will be on kids talking to other kids and seeing how a ham radio station works. Any kids that do not want to talk on the radio may just watch and learn, or they can pick up the mike and talk.

Those interested can leave a message for Rick Sohl at (505) 354-9103 (or e-mail at k5ric@arrl.net) before 4 p.m. Friday.

Members of the Sierra Blanca Amateur Radio Club will host the event and a ham radio class may be scheduled if enough interest is shown.

County mulls limiting subdivisions

Commissioners say water studies too expensive for smaller properties

BY DIANNE STALLINGS
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

Although Lincoln County commissioners approved two new small subdivisions, they said they favor restrictions on the plats that prohibit future splits of the land.

Surveyor Tim Collins, the agent on the two applications, told commissioners last month that the Ruidoso Planning and Zoning Commission tabled both petitions to determine if hydrological studies should be required. The developments fall within a zone over which both entities have jurisdiction.

But Commissioner Bill Schwettmann, an engineer, said the cost of such a study could hit $100,000 and would be far too expensive for subdivisions with only four or five lots.

County commissioners seemed more interested in ensuring that the four lots aren't split in the future to become eight or more, each with its own well and septic system.

Commissioners approved the five-lot subdivision submitted by Ronald Nowak and Christine Poraznik on 27 acres off Eagle Creek Drive. The smallest will be four acres and the largest, eight acres.

But although the covenants on the land ban future subdividing, Commissioner Leo Martinez said he'd like something more binding, that couldn't be changed by a majority vote of lot owners and doesn't rely on other lot owners in the development to enforce. He's seen neighborhoods try to raise money to band together and fight mobile homes moving in, and it's difficult, he said.

County Attorney Alan Morel said state statutes differentiate restrictive covenants from deed restrictions. Violation of the latter could cause a title company to withhold a title policy, he said. That's not the case with covenants.

"I don't believe you can order them to put it in the deed restrictions, but you could encourage it," he said.

Collins suggested writing the restrictions on the plat officially filed with the county.

Morel pointed out that subdivision regulations already ban splits for seven years after a subdividing action.

Collins convinced commissioners to approve the plat, contingent on the notation of no future subdividing being written on the document. The process would be much more difficult if the prohibition was written into each deed as a restriction, he said.

Commissioners also approved the second application for Legacy Estates filed by Jim W. and Rosemary Peebles to create four tracts ranging from 2.4 acres to 31 acres out of a 40-acre parcel off Sierra Blanca Airport Road.

Although the couple has no plans to further divide the 31-acre lot at this time, they may in the future.

In other business, the commission: Heard a suggestion from Jerry Mulligan that it may be time to review all outstanding loans for the county and its agencies, such as volunteer fire departments, to see if refinancing for lower interest might be financially beneficial. The county also could consider acting as a lending agent to those entities for a higher rate of interest than it currently collects on its investments, he said.

Approved Earl Hobbs as the replacement for out-going commissioner Bill Schwettmann as liaison to the Southeastern New Mexico Economic Development District. The appointment was handled in December because the district's next meeting will occur before the commission gets together in January.

Commission considering role in area right-of-way regulation

Trying to define their role in controlling activities on public right of way, Lincoln County commissioners will consider a new ordinance during a public hearing later this month.

County Attorney Alan Morel reminded board members that they asked him to draft a law covering the commission's jurisdiction in regulating new roads or improving existing roads in townsites or platted county rights of way.

He searched the state and couldn't find a model ordinance, Morel said, so he came up with something new.

"Before anyone improves or alters a townsite road or subdivision right of way, they first have to come to the county to obtain permit, to let us know what it is they are going to do and get a permit from the road department," the attorney explained.

"The whole issue is that I think you need to know what's going on within your rights of way that are dedicated to the county," he said. "Whether or not you want to require someone to build a road to county standards to access one lot in back of a subdivision is a tough issue because the cost of building the road could exceed the value of that one lot. But I think we have a duty to ensure when people do access their property, that they don't cut across three or four other people's property to get to theirs. Also, if culverts are needed, you should ensure they don't cause damage to anyone else's property."

If commissioners approve the ordinance Jan. 19, Morel said, "At least before anyone starts to build or improve a road within a subdivision, or within a platted townsite right of way, we'll have opportunity to look at it and provide some guidance on how they should do it so as not to impair someone else's property rights."

Official likes fort idea, doubts financial prospect

A state property representative says New Mexico has money problems.

BY DIANNE STALLINGS
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

Although a state official said a special commission may be effective in pumping more dollars into the effort to develop historic Fort Stanton, he warned that New Mexico is looking at some major financial problems.

George Marquez, from the property control division of the state General Services Department, told county commissioners last month, "I see (a special commission) as a very good possibility."

"The largest drawback - the one that always hampered development at Fort Stanton - is funding."

The Cumbres & Toltec Railroad model, which was created by a special commission, recently disclosed it's running $90,000 in debt, he said.

"That will be one of the biggest obstacles to overcome at Fort Stanton, the self-sufficiently aspects of a commission," Marquez said. "The state is not going to want to pour money into it like they haven't in the past."

"Revenue projections by (state Department of Finance and Administration) given to the governor three weeks ago called for a $63-million shortfall for the next fiscal year and in 2005, a $240-million shortfall, if economic indicators don't pick up. So it's going to be tight."

A commission would avoid the requirement that a trust would face of having to own the property, Marquez said. "And the state can't transfer ownership for free under the anti-donation clause," he pointed out. "It would have to be some type of sale."

"A commission would alleviate that and allow them to search for funding outside the state from private and federal sources. It could help and opens up all sorts of possibilities to push this thing along and that's what we're looking for."

As much as supporters would like to see some quick resolution for the 88-building complex about 13 miles northeast of Ruidoso, that's not going to happen, he said.

"If you can just get some movement forward, especially with the new administration (of governor-elect Bill Richardson)," Marquez said. "They realize the fort is an ongoing concern in this area and that you have a plan in place and need to move forward."

OUR OPINION

A new year starts in Ruidoso, USA

Herewith, the view in a cracked crystal ball

When a new year comes around, everybody would like one particular tool at hand — a large, clear and absolutely infallible crystal ball.

But, failing such a wonderful tool, the next best thing is a most uncertain, totally fallible human brain. On this day of the year, nobody wants questions — everybody wants answers... predictions.

Herewith, some totally fallible predictions:

- New Democrat Gov. Bill Richardson's honeymoon with the Democrat-controlled Legislature will last almost until the end of the 60-day session.
- The newly constituted Lincoln County Commission will struggle with budget issues, water issues and fire-management issues, and reluctantly consider county zoning regulations — but don't hold your breath on that one.

- Ruidoso public school patrons will elect one new school board member, the board in turn will hire the first new superintendent for the municipal district in many years...and with it the possibility that some necessary changes might occur.

Meanwhile, the general public — all the rest of us — will suck up our guts, keep an anxious eye on the war-news channels, and pray for peace.

Happy new year, everyone.

In search of some slogan besides 'crescit eundo'

This is a good time to make resolutions. Not for myself. Gave up on that years ago. It is much more fun to make resolutions for others.

For instance, help me make some resolutions for our state lawmakers who are packing their toothbrushes in preparation for a 60-day session in Santa Fe under the leadership of a new governor who pledges to unify our state.

Unify New Mexico political factions? Good luck. Divided or unified, all of us have some pet issues we would like the State Legislature to resolve.

Here are just a couple basic New Year resolutions I would like to see on the New Year's list of our lawmakers:

One, do something about the state slogan.

Two, do something about education.

First, the state slogan. Here it is: "Everybody Is Somebody in New Mexico." That's dumb. We need a new one. Other states are more clever. The following are not official, but you get the idea:

Wyoming: Wynot

Vermont: Yep

Tennessee: The Educashun State

South Dakota: Closer Than North Dakota

South Carolina: We Have Never Actually Surrendered To The North

Oregon: Spotted Owl; It's What's For Dinner

Oklahoma: It's Like The Play, Only No Singing

California: As Seen On TV

Arkansas: Literacy Ain't Everything.

But, as they say, seriously folks. The State Legislature needs to get TV stations and all New Mexico newspapers on board to promote a contest to come up with a dandy state slogan. Give the winner five thousand bucks.

Let's start right here. E-mail me your suggestions for a clever New Mexico state slogan, humorous or otherwise, and we will get the ball rolling. Forget "Lizards Make Excellent Pets." That one is taken.

Now, about education. Here is something the State Legislature can do without raising taxes or requiring more standardized tests. It can bring order and decorum back to the classroom. Here's how.

Pass a law making school uniforms mandatory as a requirement to obtain state funding. Few school districts will take the step unless forced. Administrators and school boards are terrified of the notion. They are afraid of the parents and afraid of the kids.

School uniforms. You let kids dress like punks, they act like punks.

Get rid of the baggy pants, bare midriffs, backward baseball caps, and watch what happens. Before you know it, students might start calling their teachers "sir" or "mam." Wouldn't that be something?

While they are at it, legislators need to amend the school uniform bill to outlaw face jewelry. A kid shows up with a nose ring, he gets chained to the flagpole.

No purple hair, either. Young lady, the hair color God gave you is good enough. Be proud of it.

I know, Mr. and Mrs. Legislator. You are going to hear all kinds of bull about civil rights and how a kid can wear what he wants, look how he wants. But remember, all of us folks out here paying for these kids' education want them to know their schooling is a privilege and that it should be linked to behavioral standards.

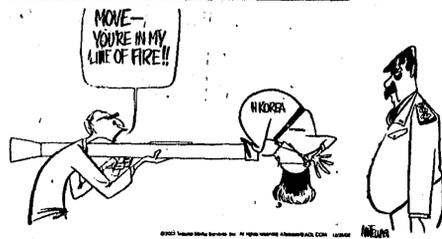

Hey, how about a new state slogan: "New Mexico: Uniform Respect."

A plea for tolerance in language here at home

To the editor:

What's in a word? Every powerful emotion known to humankind. Some words evoke beauty, compassion, understanding, love. Others foster ugliness, malevolence, misunderstanding, hate. The choice begins with each one of us, and mushrooms into either caring or thoughtless communication among individuals, nations, and perhaps someday even planets. If we claim to be in favor of healing the prejudices and ignorance which led to the ... 9/11 disaster, then we need to be sure we are not contributing to intolerance in any form.

This includes myself. When I hear an uneducated person repeatedly and purposely using the nasty N-word, it appears to be from wanton disregard for the rights of others, not from ignorance. In the past, I would confront such offenses in public, not a nice thing to do. Besides, if I continued to do that in this small town, I would alienate some of the people with whom I come in daily contact. This time, I chose to write an open letter, knowing the offender will read it.

Meanwhile, I continue my personal struggle to become more tolerant of the intolerant, in the wake of my dismay at how often local citizens voice their racial and religious prejudices. Folks, I'm not doing well with it. All you churchgoers out there who purport to follow Christ's teachings, please pray for me, and ask yourselves if Jesus would use the N-word.

GUEST COMMENTARY

Clarifying the area's waste-water treatment issues

BY DICK WISNER
RUIDOSO RIVER ASSOCIATION

Given the rumors, innuendoes, and misunderstandings swirling around the impending upgrade of the regional waste-water treatment plant at Biscuit Hill, the issue screams for clarification. I hope the following provides some.

The treatment plant, located approximately three miles east of Ruidoso Downs, was built 25 years ago (with an estimated life of 20 years) to treat waste-water from Ruidoso and Ruidoso Downs. After this waste-water is treated to remove pollutants, it is discharged into the Rio Ruidoso (just east of the bridge on Highway 70 at Seeping Springs).

Under its Clean Water Act mandate to protect the quality of water in our rivers and streams, the federal EPA requires a permit (called a NPDES permit) for anything discharged into a stream. This permit gives the holder the right to discharge into the stream so long as certain predetermined limits are met with respect to the amount of residue pollutants that can be in the discharge. The plant is currently working under a permit renewed by EPA in January 2001.

Separately, the New Mexico Water Quality Act mandates the N.M. Water Quality Control Commission to designate the potential uses for each stream and the specific water quality standards that are necessary to sustain those uses. The designated uses for the Rio Ruidoso are domestic water supply, irrigation, livestock watering, wildlife habitat, municipal and industrial water supply, and secondary contact (wading, fishing, etc.). In addition to these, the Rio Ruidoso is designated as a high-quality cold water fishery from the Mescalero Reservation to Seeping Springs Lake just past the bridge on Highway 70, and downstream of that as a cold water fishery. Once a stream's uses are designated, it is thereafter classified as either "supporting," "partially supporting," or "non-supporting" those uses based on the specific standards set for it. The high-quality stretch of the Rio Ruidoso is currently listed as non-supporting its designated use because of temperature, turbidity (sediment), and stream bottom deposits. The stretch of the Rio Ruidoso that has a designation as a cold water fishery is listed as non-supporting on the basis of plant nutrients (which show up as algae growth).

In addition to those specific standards set up to support designated uses, the state also sets general standards for water quality for all streams in the state, regardless of use designations. These standards cover such things as stream bottom deposits (sediment), floating solids, color, odor and taste of fish, plant nutrients (which shows up as nuisance algae), and toxic substances. Again, these standards are applicable to all waters at all times and are independent of designated uses.

The current imbroglio finds its source in the fact that the permit issued for the Biscuit Hill plant in January 2001 included — for the first time ever at this plant — a limit on the amount of phosphorus that can be in the plant's discharge after January 2004. What triggered the addition of the phosphorus limit was not the fact that one of the Rio Ruidoso's designated uses is a high-quality fishery, but rather the presence of an ever-increasing amount of nuisance algae in the Rio Ruidoso, both above and below the treatment plant.

Since the presence of nuisance algae is in itself a violation of the state's general standards, regardless of the stream's standards for a designated use, the state is required by law to limit the amount of additional such pollutants that may be discharged into the already polluted receiving waters.

The fact of the matter is that the water in the Rio Ruidoso, both above and below the plant, for reasons now under intense study, already contains a chemical composition (too much phosphorus and/or nitrogen) that is a veritable incubator for algae growth. The addition of any more of these pollutants from the treatment plant compounds the problem downstream of the plant.

The problem, therefore, is the very opposite of what it may at first appear. Fixing the plant will do very little to improve the quality of the receiving water. See WATER, page 5A

Nunley worried about future of dumping site

BY DANNE STALLINGS
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

State environmental officials are satisfied that an illegal septic dumping site in Glencoe was cleaned up by the violator, but Lincoln County Commissioner L. Ray Nunley said no home should be built on the land until it is deemed safe.

"I wanted to be sure that some test wells were dug," said Commissioner L. Ray Nunley. "That's human waste that was dumped."

Commissioner Rick Simpson, who visited the site, said he recommended to the John Van Winkle family that the well on the land be tested. Eleven other wells in the area were picked by the state for tests and two showed elevated bacteria levels. State officials said the source of contamination most likely was septic leech fields in the area, not the material illegally left by Van Winkle.

"That land isn't habitable right now and I don't know what the time frame is on that," Nunley said. "You can't build a house there."

Simpson said a trailer already sits on the tract, although it is not being used.

"I don't think you can place a dwelling on a waste site," Nunley said. County Manager Tom Stewart said the waste site is about 15 feet wide by 100 feet long and it's in the bottom of a valley. "I don't think anyone would want to build there," he said.

"That's a maybe," Nunley said. "I wanted to bring that out to make it a matter of public record. I think we ought to look into it. I don't want somebody to move in there and get sick because they have a house on a dump site."

County Attorney Alan Morel said the county's litter ordinance prohibits the dumping of waste within three miles of the Rio Ruidoso and the Van Winkle site is about one mile away.

"Our ordinance was applicable to this instance and it's my understanding that a citation was issued to Mr. Van Winkle, who I believe is the owner of Circle B Septic," Morel said. "I believe he's already gone to court and was already fined $300 and placed on 90 days probation for having violated that ordinance... As far as the county goes, I think we've done what we can do."

"But that has nothing to do with a house being placed out there with children playing around that," Nunley said. "I think if there is a federal or state law, that house should not be occupied."

Morel said the tract contains 80 acres and the trailer is about a half mile away from the disposal site. It would be up to the state to take a stand on that issue.

Nunley said he would like the state to be alerted to possible future problems if someone wanted to live there.

Stewart said he would write a letter to the state ED to remind them.

In other action, the commission:
 • Approved the purchase of 20 Bendix King radio portable sets for the Bonito Fire Department from Advance Communication of Las Cruces, which bid $16,300. Three other companies bid, ranging from $10,877 (for a type considered not equal to Bendix) to $20,000.
 • Approved a bid of $168,044 from American LaFrance Transwest of Commerce City, Colo., for a 500-gallon wildland/urban interface fire truck. Two other bids came in at $169,641 and $176,400.

WATER: An explanation

waters of the Rio Ruidoso upstream, although it will improve water quality downstream of the plant. Improving the quality of the water in the Rio Ruidoso, on the other hand, may ameliorate the need for even more stringent limits at the plant in the future.

To recap, the phosphorus limit scheduled to go into effect in January 2004 has nothing to do with the Rio Ruidoso's designation as a high quality cold-water fishery. Lobbying to lower that designation is, therefore, a non-starter. Nor, as has been suggested on these pages, are the villages contemplating spending millions of dollars on the treatment plant to improve the fishery. The plant is old and needs to be expanded and upgraded irrespective of the river or the fishery. Sixty percent of the $21-million price tag being tossed about for refurbishing the plant was already planned before the phosphorus issue ever cropped up. Unfortunately, the Rio Ruidoso has become a breeding ground for nuisance algae in the meantime and state laws now demand that the WWTP be improved so as not to compound that problem. Village officials have little choice.

The bottom line is that we all have to pull together to help clean up two very different streams of water - both the Rio Ruidoso and the sewerage input going into the WWTP. The first can be achieved by identifying and then mitigating the sources of the phosphorus and/or nitrogen pollutants entering the river over its entire run from the Sierra Blanca Peak to Riverside. The second is a community-wide problem that we all can help with, which is reducing the amount of phosphorus and nitrogen that we feed into the WWTP via the sewer system (soaps, fertilizers, etc.). The less phosphorus the WWTP takes in, the more efficiently it can remove it.

Following a meeting with the State Environment Department officials on Dec. 7, it was agreed that village officials would put together a comprehensive, watershed-wide proposal to do just that.

ENMU-Ruidoso director hands diploma to daughter

BY WENDEL SLOAN
ENMU COMMUNICATION SERVICES

Among the 228 students who graduated Saturday, Dec. 17, from Eastern New Mexico University was Shannon A. Miller, daughter of Jim Miller, director of ENMU-Ruidoso.

Miller handed his daughter her diploma as she walked across the stage in Greyhound Arena on the Portales campus. Shannon earned an associate's degree at Ruidoso, then transferred to Portales for her bachelor's degree.

Of the graduates, 21 were from ENMU-Roswell and 21 were from ENMU-Ruidoso. According to Miller, the graduates from the branch campuses either received their associate degrees from Roswell and Ruidoso and transferred to Portales to finish their bachelor's degrees, or earned bachelor's degrees through Instructional TV courses on the Roswell and Ruidoso campuses.

"I think that is showing a good trend for Eastern,"

Blaine Hess, president of ENMU's board of regents, said of the 18 percent that the branches contributed to the 228 total.

Dr. John Humphreys, assistant professor of management, began a new tradition of professors, giving the fall commencement address.

Dr. Humphreys told the graduates that he envied their stage of life because their canvases do not yet contain too much paint, giving them the opportunity and power to paint their canvases into whatever they wish.

A 'sleeping beauty' is about to wake up

Sleeping Beauty is about to wake up: The dream theater at Ruidoso High School is almost finished.

Snow storms delayed the final walk-through at the Ruidoso Schools Performing Arts Center scheduled for Dec. 22, but that should happen next week. Administrators still hope to showcase the new theater with performances by bands, choirs and drama groups from all the schools before the end of January, said Mike Gladden, superintendent of schools.

If the architects do the final punch list and walk-through next week, they're expected to make any final changes and then turn the theater over to the school district in mid-January, Gladden said.

The sound and lighting systems were tested the week before Christmas, and staff members were trained in their use, including band director Robbie Stephens, maintenance superintendent Danny Sanchez, and theater production manager Ben White, said theater project superintendent David Malett.

Last year White was hired half-time to assist with elementary level band, and this year he's full-time with the district, expanding his role with the band and becoming production manager of the new theater, according to Gladden.

A policies and procedures committee, comprised of White, Gladden, associate superintendent Paul Wirth and activities director Ron Wall, is working on draft policies for the school board to review at its Jan. 14 meeting.

These will include a fee schedule, policies for student and school staff use and procedures for who else can use the theater, said Caron Snow, business manager for the district.

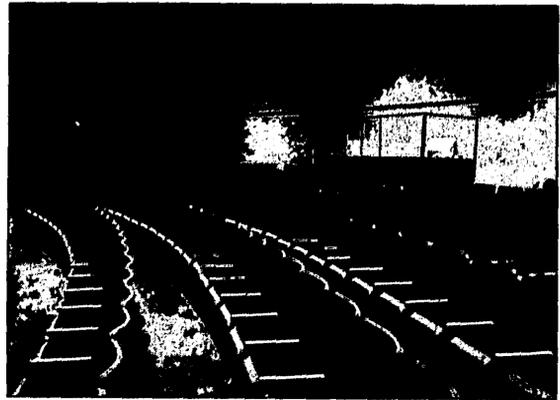

Ruidoso Community Concerts had scheduled the winter 2003 concerts at the new school theater, but at least the Jan. 23 concert will take place at the First Christian Church on Hull Road, where the concerts have been performed previously, Snow said.

"We're not going to schedule a lot of outside groups this spring," she said.

Meanwhile the theater addition to the Fine Arts Center includes 345 seats with some removable handicapped seating, a stage 32 feet deep by 45 feet wide, acoustical curtains to absorb sound, and a portable audio system that can be rolled into storage and secured after every performance.

Outside, at the front of the theater, a patio area and sidewalks connect to existing sidewalks leading to the parking area, and cutouts have been left to plant trees or shrubs in the late winter or next spring.

"It's a pet project we watched grow," Snow said, surveying the theater.

Theater seating is provided for up to 345 persons in the auditorium.

ENMU student a twin lottery game winner

PORTALES - An Eastern New Mexico University computer science major has found two ways to benefit from the New Mexico Lottery. Joshua Jowers not only receives a Lottery Success Scholarship for his undergraduate tuition, but has been picked to represent New Mexico on the nationally-syndicated lottery television game show, "Powerball Instant Millionaire."

Jowers, 22, has returned to Portales from a game-show taping in Las Vegas, Nev., where host Todd Newton noted that Jowers attends ENMU with a scholarship provided by New Mexico Lottery players.

"Powerball Instant Millionaire" is produced by the Multi-State Lottery Association, which operates the Powerball lotto game played in New Mexico and two dozen other U.S. lotteries.

Thirteen U.S. lotteries participate in the "Powerball Instant Millionaire" game show. New Mexico contestants are selected in random drawings from non-winning tickets submitted as entries of a companion scratcher ticket, "Fame & Fortune."

Jowers explained that the game show was a "luck"-based game in which contestants win by chance. There were contestants from the 13 states that participate in the Powerball Lottery.

Jowers' taped program is scheduled to air on Jan. 11 on KRQE (CBS) and its sister stations.

Building under way

LAS CRUCES - New Mexico State University's College of Health and Social Services broke ground for its 59,520-square-foot building in December.

Construction for the building, designed to incorporate the existing Memorial Tower, near the northern edge of campus, is expected to begin this month and be completed in 2004.

The building will house the college dean's office, the Department of Health Science, the Department of Nursing and the School of Social Work.

Funding includes $2 million in university funds, $5 million in general obligation bond revenues approved by voters in 2000 and about $1.9 million from the United States Department of Health and Human Services.

Study reveals smaller high schools achieve big results in a very large city

WASHINGTON - New, smaller high schools, created as part of a network of reform, achieve better academic performance and higher graduation rates among disadvantaged urban youth, according to a recent seven-year, longitudinal study in New York City. The analysis, published by the American Educational Research Association in the fall issue of the American Educational Research Journal, also considers intentional strategies for improving schools instead of relying on charismatic leadership.

Researchers Linda Darling-

Hammond, Stanford University; and Jacqueline ACESS and Susanna Wichterle Ort, Teachers College, Columbia University, describe the Coalition Campus Schools Project, an effort that replaces troubled high schools with smaller, more communal schools. Working with a student body that included a high proportion of low-income, low-achieving and limited English-proficient youth, the new schools developed structures such as smaller pupil loads, advisory groups, and interdisciplinary curriculum to build strong student-teacher relationships and to support student learning.

Despite initial difficulties with school facilities and student motivation, "the study found that five new schools that were created to replace a failing comprehensive high school produced, as a group, substantially better attendance, lower incident rates, better performance on reading and writing assessments, higher graduation rates, and higher college-going rates, despite serving a more educationally disadvantaged population of students."

The new schools, primarily modeled on the International High School and Deborah Meier's Central Park East philosophy, emphasize "habits of mind" that foster commitment to achievement and to school. The researchers identify specific characteristics that contribute to the success of the smaller high schools:

- Small size resulting in schools where students felt safe.
- Structures designed for personalization and strong relationships, where students perceived their teachers' commitment to student success.
- Carefully constructed curriculum with extensive reading and writing requirements and an explicit goal to send all graduates to college.
- Teachers' explicit teaching of academic skills, an ability to adapt instruction to students' needs (e.g., how to approach academic tasks, how to evaluate their own work), and incorporation of internship experiences and community service.

- School-wide performance assessment system, requiring seven or more portfolios for graduation and covering science and social studies, literature, art, mathematics, and an internship experience.
- Creation of flexible supports, such as before and after-school assistance and peer tutoring, to ensure student learning.
- Strong teachers, supported by collaboration in planning and problem-solving, and professional development opportunities, often in partnership with local schools of education.

Even though the new schools' approach demonstrates potential to help youth achieve academically, educational philosophies change with time and administrations, the researchers warned.

Raising the bar

Corona graduate not slowing down at NMSU

BY JULIE CARTER
FOR THE RUIDOSO NEWS

His high school annual names him as biggest flirt, most likely to succeed, most optimistic, class favorite, most outgoing and friendliest. Those traits sum up the easy-going, easy-smiling Dal Frost. Lincoln County raises some fine youth to send out in the world and Frost is no exception.

Moving to Lincoln County in 1990 from the far west side of the state, the Frost family took up residence on a ranch in the sparsely populated portion of the county at Ramon. The joke was often that they were the entire town council, fire department and country club set of downtown Ramon. In fact, Frost has listed "member of the Ramon Volunteer Fire Department" in his achievements.

The first years in the county, the Frost brothers, Rankin and Dal, were homeschooled. In 1997 they began the daily odyssey for an education in the Corona School system, 48 miles away. Proving that rural living and small schools are no hindrance to academic excellence, Dal graduated in May 2002 class valedictorian. Among other accolades, he received the NMSU Alumni Association Honor Scholar Academic Achievement Award. He was a class officer, basketball team captain, honor society vice president, and active as a member and officer on a local and state level in FFA.

Frost is currently enrolled at NMSU and majoring in agriculture communications, he has completed his first semester with a 4.0 average. Frost hopes to find his place in the agriculture industry in public relations or some aspect of promoting the beef industry.

Tackling the academics is just "part of the job" for this homegrown New Mexico cowboy. He believes that whatever a person's job is, it should be done with pride and passion. Frost spent his senior year in high school serving as the state FFA Vice President. When he retired from the position he chose Alan Jackson's song "It's Alright to be a Redneck" to epitomize his thoughts. Dressed for the formal event in his work hat, chinks, tall top boots and spurs, he spoke about doing what you can where you are with what you've got, and doing it well.

With FFA and 4-H being a big part of his life, Frost progressed through the years showing several categories of livestock, including sheep, pigs and cattle. He competed not only at the county level, but went on to the state fair to win his divisions. In 2001 he showed the state Grand Champion Angus and the reserve grand champion Hereford steers. In the parade of champions held in the coliseum, Frost walked proudly with a winning animal leashed to each arm.

Frost's parents, Duane and Shelly, now pay closer attention at the fair sales. During the 2001 State Fair sale, a nice looking ewe lamb went for a price they thought a bit high. They were pleased for the owner though, the daughter of an ag teacher with whom they were acquainted. Not long after, they realized the buyer was none other than their son, Dal, who was intent on improving his own herd.

In his years of raising and showing sheep, Frost's herd has become a source of lambs for other youth to show. He and his brother, Rankin, had begun Frost Club Lambs, and the fruit of that goal was showing up in the sale ring. This past summer, his last year to be able to show at the county fair because of his age, Frost showed the heaviest lamb, which was mutton cross and also won the champion of the breed.

Ask Frost who was the biggest influence in his life, and he quickly and simply answers, "My Mom and Dad. They helped me get started with the animals, they shared their knowledge, they taught me about money limits and money management."

Physical activity makes for a better work day

The workplace can be a great place to make some positive adjustments to your lifestyle.

Eating breakfast can help to improve attitudes toward work and increase productivity. If you have trouble concentrating and energy is low, breakfast may be just what you need.

If you skip breakfast due to time being short in the morning, here are some quick one-minute breakfast ideas:

- Cold cereal with sliced banana
- Muffin and yogurt
- Peanut butter toast with glass of milk
- Smoothie made with fruit, yogurt and juice
- Pizza slice and vegetable juice

Breakfast need not be a large meal, but enough to provide some needed fuel in the morning.

Lunch:

A great time to think about lunch is when you are planning the evening meal. Plan to prepare enough food to use for lunch the next day.

Snacking:

Many people eat without being conscious of what and how much is going into their mouth. Eating can be a result of boredom, stress or other emotional issues. Try to be aware of this and take steps to avoid eating if you are not hungry.

Thirsty:

Many people drink soda as if it's water, but each 12 oz. can provide about 150 empty calories and around 10 teaspoons of sugar. To keep hydrated, drink six to eight glasses of water daily.

Keeping a glass of water at your desk will remind you to drink plenty throughout the day.

Physical Activity:

Plan 30 minutes of physical activity into your workday. The benefits can be stress reduction, and reduce risk for disease such as heart disease and diabetes. Take the stairs, park farther away from your building, use break time as an opportunity to get outside and walk with co-workers.

All activity that adds up to 30 minutes in a day can be beneficial to your health. The benefits to improving your fitness include increased energy and greater productivity.

'Zozo names lighting winners

After delaying the competition three days due to inclement weather, the Christmas Lighting Contest sponsored by the Carrizozo Chamber of Commerce has named the 2002 winners.

In the commercial division, winners of the traveling plaque are Steve and Gwen Dunne of The Sands Motel.

Residential winners are: 1. Virginia and Manual Carbajal at 6th Street and F Avenue; 2. Joe Ortiz at 1105 Lava Loop; 3.

Willie Swift at 12th Street and C Avenue. Honorable mention went to Margo and Wes Lindsay on 17th Street, Rose and Steve Wheeler of Casa de Rosa on Lava Loop and Judy and Guy Terry at 206 11th St.

The residential winners received gift certificates of $75, $50 and $25 redeemable at chamber member businesses.

2003 Lincoln County Fair books getting ready to roll

BY JULIE CARTER
FOR THE RUIDOSO NEWS

The 2003 Lincoln County Fair plans are starting to roll from the presses as the new year breaks through on calendars. This year's fair runs Aug. 6 through 9. The 2003 fair book, one of the early projects, will be available in May.

The book outlines the rules, regulations and guidelines of all the fair categories for entrants. Fair participants are FFA, 4-H and the general public in open categories. Fair organizers are hoping to educate and encourage all Lincoln County residents regarding the opportunities for everyone, not just the youth, to compete at the fair.

Selling advertising to help cover printing costs of the fair book allows fair coordinators to make them more available to more people and not siphon from funds needed in other fair areas.

The fair board is currently pursuing donated artwork for the book covers from Lincoln County artists. This will enhance the value of the book and make it a collector's item as well as a functional guide. Approximately 2,000 copies will be printed, giving the advertiser good exposure in the county.

Ad sizes and prices available vary from 1/8 page for $20 to full-page ads for $75. A half-page ad sells for $50 and a quarter-page for $30. Buyers have the option of the ad being either horizontal or vertical. Camera-ready artwork is appreciated but if not available, the ad will be created for a $10 charge. Business cards, ads and artwork will be kept in the files of the fair book coordinator unless a return is specifically requested.

Deadline for the ad orders is April 1, 2003. Payment in full must accompany the ad. Please make checks payable to the Lincoln County Fair Association (LCFA) and mail both the ad and payment to Box 217, Carrizozo, NM 88301.

For more information, contact Kathleen Phillips-Hellman, fair book coordinator, at 648-2311.

Ruidoso girls, boys each finish sixth

Lady Warriors sporadic at Goddard Tourney

BY TODD FUQUA
RUIDOSO NEWS SPORTS EDITOR

ROSSELL — For two days anyway, the Ruidoso girls looked as though they had finally figured out their offense.

They had played a hard-fought loss in the opening round of the Goddard Holiday Tournament Thursday, then won convincingly in the consolation round to earn a shot at fifth place.

But Moriarty proved to be too much, as the Lady Pintos won 54-35 in the Saturday game.

Still, Ruidoso coach Greg Marez is looking at the positives.

"The girls have a better understanding of what it takes to be the winner in every game," Marez said. "This gets them prepared for district."

The Lady Warriors (3-7) opened the tournament against Espanola in the first round, and actually had a 9-0 lead in the first quarter.

But Espanola began their comeback, going on a 9-0 run of their own to tie it with 56 seconds left in the first and eventually took the lead for good with 4:37 left in the second on a layup by Jaime Madrid.

"The girls laxed after they got ahead, and we could never catch up," Marez said. "There were a lot of turnovers, and it really hurt us."

He's not kidding. The Lady Warriors had 28 giveaways in the game, compared to just 19 for Espanola.

Still, Ruidoso was able to make it close at the end, going on a 7-3 run in the final minutes. In the end, however, it just wasn't enough.

Clarissa Silva had 17 points to lead the Lady Warriors, while Dusti Franklin had 8 points and led the team in rebounds with nine. As a team, Ruidoso outrebounded the Lady Sundevils 30-28.

On Saturday, the Lady Warriors came back with a 63-41 victory over West Las Vegas.

"We played a much better game," Marez said. "We took better shots and were a little upset after losing the first game. We felt we should have won it and came back to play better."

Silva again led the team with 14 points, followed by Christine Brown with 11. Marez pointed out the play of Beth Robinson and Samantha Serna, who led Ruidoso in rebounds.

Turnovers, however, were still a problem. That became obvious in the final game against Moriarty.

"It was 2-2 for the first seven minutes of the game, then they (Moriarty) went on a hellacious run," Marez said. "It was turnovers that hurt us."

The Lady Pintos pressed Ruidoso hard and were up 26-9 at halftime.

TODD FUQUA/STAFF

Dusti Franklin, left, makes a pass as Espanola's Anna Ortiz guards Thursday in the opening round of the Goddard Holiday Tournament in Roswell.

Marez said the first and last games of the tournament were typical of the kind of pressure his team will face in district play.

"Those two teams knew how to control the game, and we took something from that," Marez said. "They're quality teams and gave us an idea what we need to do to win."

The Lady Warriors get another chance to win next Tuesday, when they host Tularosa in a 7:30 p.m. game.

High-scoring Warriors can't score enough

BY TODD FUQUA
RUIDOSO NEWS SPORTS EDITOR

Of the 12 quarters the Ruidoso Warriors played at the St. Johns Tournament in Arizona over the weekend, coach Billy Page felt his team played 10 very good ones.

Unfortunately for Ruidoso, the two bad quarters came at the end of two games, games the Warriors lost. "We blew a 10-point lead to St. Johns and lost that one," Page said. "We had another lead against Valley and just couldn't hold on in that one."

Ruidoso fell to tournament host St. Johns the first night, 71-63, blew out Rough Rock in the consolation bracket, 101-66, then fell to Valley High, 81-74.

As a team, the Warriors (4-6) averaged 79.3 points in the three games and are scoring 71.3 points per game on the season.

"It's the highest-scoring team I've ever coached," Page said. "However, our defense is giving up a lot of points also."

Transition defense is Page's biggest concern. It's the style of play they score most of their points on, and the

Plenty of highlights, lowlights in 2002

BY TODD FUQUA
RUIDOSO NEWS SPORTS EDITOR

Before I begin this retrospective, allow me to explain my intentions.

This isn't a "Top 10" list of things that happened in the past year. I hate those kinds of stories. Inevitably, I'll leave something out or (even more dangerous) will intimate that one event may have been more important than another.

Also, those kinds of stories are usually arrived at by a committee, so if anyone has any complaints, they have to fire at a whole panel of writers.

I'm flying solo here, so I'd rather not face that kind of criticism alone. So, here's a simple rundown — in no particular order — of the good, bad and ugly (many apologies to Sergio Leone) of the year that was 2002:

Gale gets gold

Tristan Gale — who spent her salad days at White Mountain Elementary in Ruidoso — made national headlines when she was first picked to represent the United States as a member of the skeleton team in January, then made international headlines by winning gold at the 2002 Winter Olympics Games in Salt Lake City in February.

Her combined time of 1 minute, 45.11 seconds while screaming head first down the course in Salt Lake was just 10 hundredths of a second faster than teammate Lea Ann Parsley of Granville, Ohio. Alex Coomber of Great Britain took the bronze.

Gale lived in Ruidoso until she was 8, when her mother was transferred by the United States Forest Service to Utah. In previous interviews, Gale said she still considers Ruidoso her home.

She later returned home in October when she served as Grand Marshal for the Aspenfest parade.

Wrestling Warriors

Near the end of February, The Ruidoso High wrestling team was able to win the District 4-3A title and saw seven individuals place at state. Patrick Hodges had a chance to defend his state title in the heavy-weight division, but lost to Robertson's Armando Montoya in the final. Hodges' runner-up finish was the best for the Warriors at the individual tourney.

At the team tournament in Rio Rancho, the Warriors placed third in Class 3A. They beat Wingate in the first round, then fell to West Las Vegas in the semifinals. They later rebounded with a 42-30 victory over Shiprock in the third-place dual.

It was the highest finish ever for Ruidoso in the State Team Duals tournament, and the most individuals (7) the school had ever had place.

No state for you!

It was a dry year for basketball fans in the area. Not one team from Lincoln County got to make the trip to the state tournament this year — a tournament made all the more exciting by the combination of the boys and girls brackets into one weekend at the Pit in Albuquerque.

The teams that got the closest were the Carrizozo and Mescalero girls teams, which each lost in the regionals.

The Lady Grizzlies dropped a 68-28 decision to Des Moines, while the Lady Chiefs lost 58-36 to Logan.

Rah, rah, rah!

One team that did make some noise in March was the Ruidoso High cheerleader squad, which took the Class 3A title at the Pit, finishing first in all classes: Best Performance Cheer, Best Cheer with Music and Best Stunting Performance.

The state title came a few months after the Lady Warriors made the trip to Orlando, Fla., site of the Universal Cheerleader Association National High School Cheerleading Championship. Ruidoso finished 28th out of 58 teams in the small varsity division.

A quintet of Ruidoso cheerleaders — Stephanie Leland, Kayci Brunell, Sarah Wirth, Meghan Gabalony and Heather Jackson — were later lucky enough to be chosen to go to New York to lead the Macy's Thanksgiving Day Parade along with about 900 other girls from around the nation in November.

Another future Olympian?

If you're like me, you probably don't pay much attention to gymnastics until the Olympics, if even then.

But one local gymnast made some people sit up and take notice with her performance at a regional competition in Kansas.

Striesand Webb, now a sophomore at Ruidoso High, took 17th out of 49 girls at the meet, and was the best New Mexico girl out of five that represented the state. Webb's 17th-place finish was a major accomplishment against a field made up of competitors from seven states, including Oklahoma and Texas.

Big doings on the track

By track, I mean high school track, not Ruidoso Downs. We'll get to that story later.

For the area runners (and jumpers, and throwers), it was a successful season, particularly if you were a member of the Carrizozo girls team.

The Lady Grizzlies went into the 2002 Class 1A meet in Albuquerque as the defending state champion. They left after the May meet as the defending state champion. They also boasted the individual high-point winner in Ariel Burr.

Burr had 31 points, winning the 100, 200 and 400-meter dashes and added a top finish in the triple jump competition. Teammate Ariel Vallejos added first-place finishes in the 100 and 300-meter hurdles, while the Lady Grizzlies won the 4x400 relay.

In Class 2A, the Capitan boys and girls each won a District 5-2A title, but didn't fare as well at state. The boys finished in the middle of the pack, while the girls trailed the field.

One particularly scary moment for the Lady Tigers came when senior Jessica Neal — seemingly on her way to a first-place finish in the 100-meter hurdles — clipped the eighth hurdle, hit the next one and fell. She got back up, but hit the final hurdle and went down with a dislocated ankle.

She was transported to the hospital by ambulance, but later recovered and is now a freshman track hopeful at New Mexico State University.

The high point for Capitan came when senior Ryan Kimbrell, already a winner in the pole-vault competition, closed out his high school career with a height of 14-3 1/2 — a state record for Class 2A.

In Class 3A, the Ruidoso Lady Warriors saw Rachel Loya take the state title in the javelin, and finished third behind teammate Tamara Grant in the shot put event. Phillip Darley won a state title in the pole vault, topping the field with a height of 14 feet.

Broken links

The Ruidoso boys golf team was the three-time defending state champion in Class 1A-3A, but found it difficult to get its fourth straight title, finishing in second behind New Mexico Military Institute. The girls started strong, but were unable to withstand a Shiprock charge and were third overall.

The Lady Warriors have already secured a spot in next year's state tournament, having achieved five qualifying legs in five tournaments in September and October.

Release the Downs!

Ruidoso Downs had another successful season, as the promise of big payoffs and a new Triple Crown bonus brought in owners by the hundreds to try for the biggest purse in quarter horse racing. The meet began over Memorial Day, as 23 trials were run for the Ruidoso Futurity — the first jewel in the Quarter Horse Triple Crown. Zip First ended up winning that race, and was in the running for the $4 million bonus that would go to the winner of all three races — the Ruidoso, Rainbow and All-American futurities.

But while everyone was looking to see if Zip First could do what only one horse had ever done — that was Special Effort back in 1981 — they forgot about a trainer named John Bassett.

Bassett — who won the All American Futurity in 2000 and 2001 — was again at the top of the heap after the Rainbow Futurity, as First To Flash and jockey Jose Badilla finished well in front of Zip First and won with the second-fastest time in the race's history.

Now the duo of Bassett and Badilla seemed the team to beat, and did well for their connections in the trials for the All American Futurity, they just weren't the fastest.

The headlines were stolen by AB What A Runner, a gray filly out of Idaho trained by Bret Vickery and ridden Jay Conklin. AB What A Runner ran the 440-yard distance in 20.99 seconds — not only the fastest time of the trials, but also the fastest time in the track's history at that distance. The previous 440-yard mark was 21.01 seconds, set by Truckle Feature in 1973.

That set up what was one of the closest All American Futurities in memory. When the final horse crossed the finish line, there was still some doubt as to who had won. In the end, AB What A Runner again came out on top, securing a $1,025,000 top prize.

Hubbard hullabaloo

Horse racing wasn't the only thing making headlines at Ruidoso Downs. For a while, track owner R.D. Hubbard was facing the prospect of not even having a license to operate either the track or the Billy the Kid Casino.

Hubbard had already renounced his gaming license in Indiana following a decision by the Indiana Gaming Commission in July. The decision was made in light of incidents surrounding the Hubbard Golf Classic at Belterra Casino and Resort.

At the time, Hubbard was Chairman of the Board for Pinnacle, the company which hosted the tournament. According to the Gaming Commission, several women — referred to as "hookers" — were brought into the casino and hotel for the entertainment of guests.

Hubbard voluntarily gave up his license, but the decision haunted him when his gaming license in New Mexico was up for review.

He and track president Bruce Rimbo were in Albuquerque about to learn the fate of their application to run a track near Hobbs, when the New Mexico Racing Commission voted to postpone a vote on the subject at the recommendation of the commission's staff.

Hubbard did have his gaming license renewed, but any decision on a new track was deep-sixed when Governor Gary Johnson either fired or forced out three members of the Racing Commission — thereby keeping it from making any decision on a new Hobbs track until at least this January, when Governor-elect Bill Richardson would take office and be able to name new members to the commission.

Ride 'em, cowboy (and cowgirl)

A pair of Nogal teenagers put the little Lincoln County community on the map, as Doug and Shayla Smith represented the town in the cutting competition at the National High School Rodeo Association National Finals at Farmington in July.

Doug finished second behind Drew Turner of Ripley, Okla., but sister Shayla outdid everybody with a first-place finish, besting defending champion Ashley Smith of Hailey, Idaho, by just 1 1/2 points.

As a team, the New Mexico girls finished third overall behind Texas and Utah, while the combined team finished fifth in the nation.

Special runner

Ernest Trujillo was already a winning athlete, having won the gold medal in the 100-meter run at the New Mexico Special Olympic games near the end of May.

TODD FUQUA/STAFF

But he exceeded that with a selection to the U.S. team.

Trujillo beat out 45 other similarly qualified runners to represent his country at the World Games, to be held in Ireland in June 2003.

On the gridiron

Corona and Hondo returned to the field with football programs this year, but Corona found the going rough with a diminished number of athletes. So did Vaughn, for that matter, so the two schools — traditionally rivals — combined their programs into a single entity, the Wings. They weren't able to win any games, but their consolidation got other small school systems throughout the state thinking about doing something similar.

The Capitan Tigers, who had started 1-6, surprised a few people by defeating Cloudford and Hagerman for the District 4-1A title. The winning was short-lived, however, as the Tigers lost 50-0 to Springer in the Class 1A quarterfinals.

One team which didn't lose in the post-season was Ruidoso. The Warriors — who began the season with a new head coach in Ridge Bowden — sputtered and stuttered their way to a 3-4 pre-District 4-3A record, then shocked the state with a 38-24 defeat of defending champion Lovington.

The win got the Warriors into the playoffs, but not the district title — that honor went to Portales, who beat Ruidoso in the teams' final game of the regular season.

But then the Warriors got hot, defeating St. Michael's in a thrilling, four-overtime game in the quarterfinals and beating Hot Springs 56-42 in the semis to set up a state title rematch with Portales.

The game, played at Greyhound Stadium, turned out to be a classic. The Warriors scored 14 points in the fourth quarter and had to survive a last-second pass into the endzone by the Rams to earn the Class 3A crown.

Girls got game

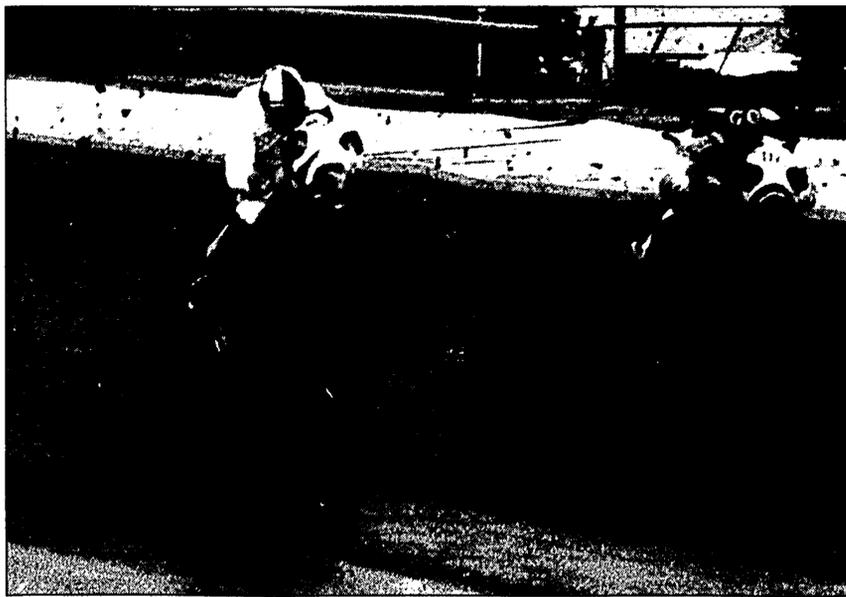

The Carrizozo volleyball

team had the talent to win their region and get to the state tournament, but found Tatum was too strong an opponent, falling to the Coyotes in four games in the first round.

That same night, Capitan beat Cimarron to move on.

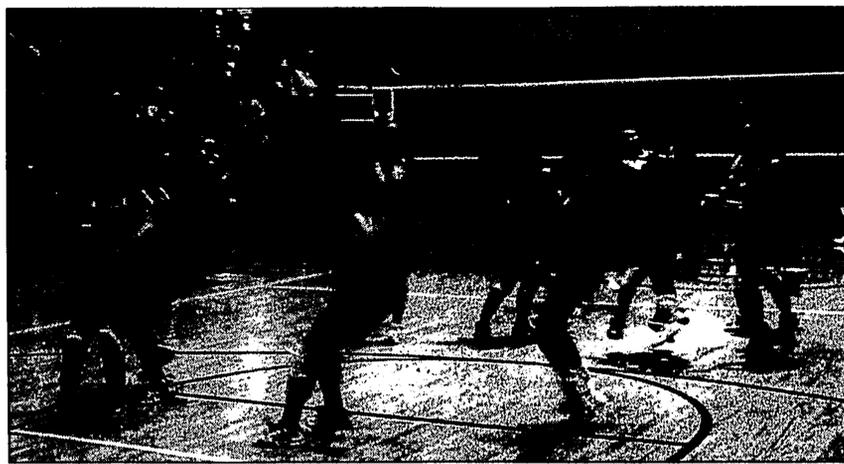

The Lady Tigers kept moving on, all the way to the Class 2A title match against Laguna-Acoma, and defeated the Hawks in a five-game thriller.

It was the first state championship for Capitan in volleyball since 1988, when the Lady Tigers — featuring now-coach Sherry Gowen — won a Class 1A title with a win over Floyd.

WARRIORS: Ruidoso loses two leads late in game after falling prey to technicals

Ruidoso coach is stressing defense almost to the exclusion of everything else.

Against St. Johns, the Warriors had a slim 36-34 lead at halftime, and were still within three points after three quarters.

But the Redskins had already begun their comeback and put up 20 points in the final period to run away with the game.

Chance Hooper had 20 points to lead Ruidoso and was the only Warrior in double figures. He had to sit on the bench shortly into the fourth quarter after receiving a technical foul for his fifth of the game.

Technicals seemed to be the bane not just of Ruidoso, but of everyone in this tournament.

"There were probably 10 technicals in the games I saw," Page said. "It was a different style of officiating, but it wasn't anything ugly. We've just got to learn to overcome that."

Ruidoso's game against Rough Rock on Saturday morning was a much better affair. The Warriors easily outdistanced their opponent with even scoring — four players were in double figures and two more had nine points.

Rough Rock's Arvisto Dan led the game with an astounding 32 points, but no one else did much of anything. The Warriors were able to withstand Dan's onslaught and ran the Sun Devils into the ground.

"Our shooting percentage was very good," Page said. "80 percent of the shots were layups on transitions."

Ruidoso shot an even 50 percent from the floor, as Patrick Valliant had 22 points and nine rebounds to lead the way. Cody Small led the team in boards with 12 and added 12 points.

Fouls of a technical nature again became a problem for the Warriors against Valley in the fifth-place game. They had a 61-54 lead after three quarters, but then allowed Valley High to score 27 points in the final period.

Garrett Born had 18 points to lead Ruidoso, followed by Hooper with 11 and Small with 10. Small also had eight rebounds to lead the team.

The Warriors travel to Tularosa Friday for a 7:30 p.m. game against the Wildcats. Ruidoso beat Tularosa 70-61 on Dec. 10.
