Development fees move ahead

Councilors to vote on parts of old ordinance in September, pursue new study later

BY DIANNE STALLINGS
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

To start generating money as quickly as possible after losing out on five years of potential revenue, Ruidoso village councilors voted Tuesday to move toward the re-adoption of a development fee ordinance.

That means a $4,000 impact fee may soon be charged by the village on construction of each single-family home.

Instead of delaying adoption until a new study is performed and then going through a series of hearings, councilors were told they can approve with some modifications the law passed and later rescinded by a previous board. They can apply the fees that were in place at the time.

After that, the council can advertise for a consultant and commission a new study — which could take up to eight months — then raise the fees. The work can't be done in-house. A consultant must be hired, said Cleatus Richards, deputy director of operations for the village.

If the fees had not been rescinded after six months, the timing would be right to comply with a five-year requirement to update data connected to impact fees, he said.

Councilor Bob Sterchi said he doesn't like the idea of setting the fees and possibly coming back in less than a year to raise them. Richards said once the new information is gathered, the fees must relate to the actual cost of updating and expanding the village's infrastructure to meet growth demands.

However, he clarified that the money collected from a lot or subdivision doesn't have to be spent exactly where it was collected. The entire village is considered the impact area and money can be spent to improve the infrastructure anywhere within its boundaries, Richards said.

"I believe the infrastructure needs of the village are such that every available revenue source needs to be touched," said Charles Rennick, assistant village attorney and acting planning director. "Even then, I'm not sure we can meet the needs."

Explaining why a previous council rescinded the fees, Councilors Ron Anderson and Frank Cummins said they were told at that time the money had to be spent exactly where it was collected. By allowing the fees to be amortized over 15 years, the paperwork became a nightmare and no significant money was collected. They also thought the fees only would apply to new subdivisions, not the 4,000 already existing lots.

If they had been left in place and not amortized, the impact fees would have generated $3.95 million by now," said Mayor Leon Eggleston.

Rennick said part of the problem was that five years ago, the advisory committee on impact fees never came up with a

Phase 3 water limits looming

Water levels in storage tanks and Grindstone Reservoir are dropping, but overall consumption of treated water is down slightly from last year, allowing Ruidoso village councilors to delay jumping into tougher restrictions.

Larry Grasmick, director of the village water and wastewater operations, recommended Tuesday moving into Phase 3 of restrictions, which would ban all lawn irrigation. Watering would be restricted to hand held hoses between 3 p.m. and 10 a.m.

But Councilor L. Ray Nunley said Grasmick's figures, showing usage significantly higher than last year last month at 148 percent, didn't add up. He asked the director to take another look.

Wednesday, Grasmick said Nunley was right.

"We found a wrong number and Councilor Nunley was correct," he said. "We're still less than last year (for production), about 97 percent to 98 percent."

That means the village probably will stay in Phase 2, which allows lawn irrigation only on Tuesdays during the same cooler hours. However, Mayor Leon Eggleston called a special meeting for 1 p.m. today to discuss possible action on water restrictions.

The good news doesn't mean things couldn't flip-flop overnight, Grasmick said. A weekend of heavy use could tilt the numbers. He urged residents and visitors to conserve water in all of their activities.

Before discovering the error, Grasmick had reported to councilors a "staggering" increase in use, coupled with a lack of rain.

"This is a day I've been dreading," he said, referring to his recommendation for Phase 3. "The extended drought has reduced the water available from the Eagle Creek drainage. The monsoons have failed to materialize, so we are relying too heavily upon the Rio Ruidoso water rights. We have used about half of our water rights in about a third of the five-year accounting period."

Several councilors seemed ready to take the unpopular step of banning all irrigation to conserve.

Nunley asked Grasmick if the village was "out of water."

Grasmick replied, "No," but with some qualifiers. Councilor Ron Hardeman interjected, "We don't ever want to hear Larry say that. We don't want to wait until then."

Until it rains, Phase 3 may be inevitable, he said.

"I don't want to scare everyone who lives out of town," Nunley said. "Revenues in the water department are down and that indicates that people are doing a great job (of conserving)."

Councilor Ron Anderson said he spoke with State Rep. Dub Williams, a Republican from Glencoe and long-time Lincoln County resident.

"He said in the early 1960s, they made it to July 28 with no monsoon, so this is a record," Anderson said. "It's not Larry's fault. I don't think we should be swayed if the figures are right."

"You're the one looking at the tanks," he told Grasmick.

Mayor Leon Eggleston agreed that if tank levels drop dramatically, tougher restrictions should be triggered.

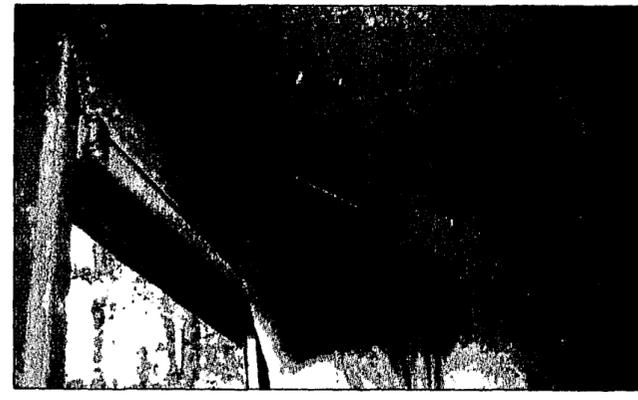

But even with the new and more optimistic production figures Wednesday, Grasmick said Grindstone Reservoir, one of the main sources of water for the village, is dropping one-tenth of a foot per day and now stands at about 104.5 feet, which is 14 feet below the spillway.

"The goal of the program is to cross denominational walls to build unity among all followers of Jesus Christ," he said.

Participants under the ministers' guidance are enrolled in junior and senior high school, Duncan said.

Council questions county's take on humane society

■ Village officials say care for stray or unwanted animals should be a joint effort.

BY DIANNE STALLINGS
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

Some Lincoln County officials want to push the problem of hundreds of stray and unwanted animals on other government entities, say Ruidoso village councilors.

Animals don't recognize municipal boundaries and those dogs and cats dumped in the county may either end up wandering into Ruidoso or impregnate animals in the village and across the county, increasing the problem of pet overpopulation, said Councilor Ron Hardeman.

Care for those animals and encouragement of spaying and neutering should be a "shared responsibility" of all county and municipal governments, he said Tuesday.

Under a proposal being considered by county manager Tom Stewart, the county would accept responsibility for animals reported as nuisances or dangerous and picked up by the Sheriff's animal control officer. They would be brought to a facility to be built next to the county jail, where inmates would care for them for a minimum of three days, if they have no identification, before they are killed.

Residents living in unincorporated portions of the county, and possibly the village of Carrizozo and Capitan, if they join the county in the plan, would have to figure out some other way of disposing of unwanted pets.

"A civilization is judged by the way it treats its children, its elderly and its animals," Councilor Bob Sterchi said, referring to a quote by the Hindu national leader Mohandas Gandhi. "I don't think many would rank the county very high if this is the route they choose.” Keith Adkins, executive director of the animal shelter operated by the Humane Society of Lincoln County, told councilors Tuesday that residents of areas without contracts with the shelter would no longer be eligible for the reduce cost spay and neuter vouchers, which would further increase the number of unwanted litters.

Adkins cleared up a few points for the council, including that the society is not required to accept animals from areas not under contract.

To date, the majority of the county commission says $40,000 is too much to pay for the care of the 677 animals the shelter staff claims were either picked up in the county or were released by owners who live in the county last year. The contract also includes other services, such as the reduced cost sterilization, that all animals receive their first round of immunizations, owners actively are sought if a dog comes in with identification and that pets are held much longer, if they are adoptable.

For three years, commissioners froze the allocation to the shelter at $25,000. This year, Adkins said the society, which already supplements the cost of spay and neuter certificates and part of the shelter operation by 55 percent, can no longer afford to pick up the slack for the county. Without an increase in the annual allocation, the society didn't renew its contract, which expired June 30. Adkins continued to provide services until county officials could come up with a new plan.

Despite a $600,000 budget surplus, the majority of the commission wasn't willing to increase the contract by $15,000, which amounts to $5,000 for each of the past three years, Commissioner Leo Martinez told councilors.

Ruidoso, Capitan and Ruidoso Downs pay their fair share based on the number of animals brought to the shelter from their areas, Adkins said. People bringing pets to the facility fill out paperwork, which includes the point of origin for the animals.

Sterchi pointed out that commissioners are elected to represent the people in their districts, who apparently need the service provided by the shelter based on the numbers. He questioned if politics may be behind the negative attitude toward the humane society and the animals.

Martinez is a champion of the society and has urged full funding, but he also is a consistent critic of the management arrangement of the county-owned hospital in Ruidoso and

Humane society ceases taking county's animals

BY DIANNE STALLINGS
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

Effective today, stray animals picked up by the Lincoln County Sheriff's impounding officer will no longer be transported to the shelter operated by the Humane Society of Lincoln County.

They will be confined to a building near the railroad overpass on land owned by the town of Carrizozo. The structure, which previously was used for impound by the town and at some point by the county, has been "cleaned up," said county manager Tom Stewart.

But his long-range plan is to enlist the partnership of Carrizozo and Capitan, whose governing boards have agreed "in concept" to the idea of building kennels next to an annex being constructed for trustees at the county jail.

Nonviolent inmates living at the annex instead of in jail would care for the animals for the short time of their confinement. Sticking to state minimum requirements, those without identification will be killed after three days and those with, whose owners haven't responded, in five days.

"I've always thought it would be neat to pair the inmates and animals," Stewart said.

Other unwanted animals in unincorporated portions of the county aren't the commission's problem, he said.

Stewart said he has placed the kennel item on the Aug. 19 agenda for the County Commission meeting and would take any counter offer from the humane society to the board.

"Keith (Adkins, executive director of the shelter) emphatically stated that if we didn't give them $40,000, they would stop service," Stewart said. "What was I to do?"

Commissioners nixed $40,000 on his recommendation during annual budget workshops.

"Every single department was cut 5 percent by the commission," he said. "How can I turn around and in good conscience recommend a 60 percent increase for the humane society? I take no joy in this. I think the humane society is a worthwhile group. Frankly, I hope there is a counter offer."

Stewart said he was "extremely dismayed" by remarks from Ruidoso Councilor Bob Sterchi and County Commissioner Leo Martinez at and following the Ruidoso Village Council meeting Tuesday.

"I'm not a vindictive person," he said, "I'm acting on what I perceive to be the directive of the county commission as a body."

"Naturally, if the board reconsiders and wants to do something else, I will salute the flag and do it. I don't get personal in anything I do. I've got my directions."

advocates competitive proposals. Sterchi said Wednesday while he disagrees with Martinez's position on the hospital, Stewart "should not hold the animals hostage for that."

Eggleston was directed by the council to send a letter to the commission expressing members' disagreement with the proposed change and the potential impacts on the village.

Martinez contended that Stewart has a vendetta against the humane society and was "thrilled" at beating the group. "He's proud of that," Martinez said. "That's insane," especially in light of Stewart's apparent willingness to pay $200,000 more than budgeted for three construction projects that Martinez later convinced the board to reject, he said.

"I think it is irresponsible for the county to behave this way," the commissioner said. "This will come back to bite them in the ass." Councilor Ron Anderson said the village is only asking the commission for some of the money its taxpayers already gave the county.

"Most of the money comes from Ruidoso and Ruidoso Downs," he said.

"They don't want to hear that," said Martinez, who represents about half of Ruidoso. "They don't understand that as Ruidoso's economy goes, so goes the county. It's the tail wagging the dog."

Adkins said he also found it strange that Stewart is considering spending the money to send people to Santa Fe for training in operating a kennel, instead of using the local society.

During the school year, the group meets about once a month. The last time, about 350 young people attended. The summer creates time for the Outreach Camp.

Last Thursday through Saturday, about 40 participants zeroed in on a half dozen elderly residents in need of help. They performed yard work, hauled trash to the dump, even tore down a deck and tool shed and hauled off the debris, Duncan said.

"They also helped at My Child First and Tender Tots day care centers, and Fort Lone Tree," he said. "Part of what we do is help individuals and other organizations that are helping people. We support those who help our community."

Meet a Member of the Lincoln County Medical Center Board - Dr. Jim Miller, Dean of Eastern New Mexico University, Ruidoso Campus.

A five-year member of the Board of Trustees, Dr. Jim Miller knows what it takes to successfully guide Lincoln County Medical Center and the clinic system. He believes board members should have a passion for the unique healthcare issues that affect rural communities, while keeping a watchful eye on large-scale changes in health care across New Mexico and the nation.

Dr. Miller says that board members must be independent thinkers who understand that their job is to put their expertise to work for the good of the hospital and the community. As the dean of Eastern New Mexico University's Ruidoso campus, Dr. Miller brings first-hand knowledge of operations, finance and management to his board position at Lincoln County Medical Center.

Dr. Miller believes that board members should strive to be good listeners and be sensitive to the needs of Lincoln County's richly diverse community. "Tourists, students, new families and longtime residents all rely on Lincoln County Medical Center to provide excellent healthcare services," says Dr. Miller. "Our job is to make sure that this community asset is meeting the community's needs."

Ruidoso to check into metering recently drilled wells

BY DAVID STALLINS
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

Privately-owned wells drilled after 1996 may soon fall under the same water restriction rules as customers hooked up to the Ruidoso community water system.

In a motion by Councilor Ron Hardeman, passed unanimously Tuesday, the village council directed its staff to look at the legal steps necessary to accomplish that goal in line with recommendations submitted in April from a water task force. If private wells can be metered, they could be restricted in their use, he said.

The council also asked the staff to review water rates and come back with suggested changes to encourage water conservation. Councilors said the new rates should not threaten water department revenues, however.

Residential water users might be very upset to see the commercial rates that are considered "too big a bargain," Hardeman said.

Councilor L. Ray Nunley said he would support increases if the money was flagged for real water acquisition, development and delivery. Councilor Ron Anderson said he'd like to see a system in place that would target and punish high users who can afford to pay for excessive water and refuse to limit their consumption. Possibly the village could cut off their water delivery, he said.

Hardeman said the task force considered publishing the names of the top 10 users each month.

The third element of the motion proposed that the staff work with the Ruidoso Valley Chamber of Commerce to design a notice to be placed in each room of area hotels, motels, lodges and cabins. They would explain the drought and urge visitors to shorten their shower time and not to request daily linen changes if they are staying more than one night.

The village would pay for the cost of printing the notices, which would be placed year-round, not just during the summer.

Councilor Bob Sterchi suggested using lodgers tax money as an appropriate source, but Hardeman said at this point a source for payment doesn't need to be identified. Nunley said lodgers tax may not be appropriate because the notices have nothing to do with promoting the area.

Brad Treptow, new chamber executive director, told councilors his organization is focusing on a water conservation marketing program, working with the local newspaper and starting with local radio stations, the cable service supplier and a local advertising firm to educate residents and visitors about conservation tips. He's already handed out some door-hangers printed by the village two or three years ago, he said.

Local lodging groups seemed receptive to the approach, he said, but suggested the chamber deliver the news about the mandatory placement of notices, instead of hearing about it from the council. He added that the chamber welcomes a partnership with the council on the issue.

Colorado Springs, Colo., went beyond notices, Treptow said. Conservation kits are being handed out that include aeration filters, inflatable toilet bags to reduce the amount of water for flushing, low-flow shower heads and a shower coach, which is a foam sand timer to help limit bathing to five minutes or less.

Hardeman pointed out that several recommendations in the task force report already were accomplished or are underway, such as the proposal to use "gray" water for lawn irrigation. A change in state environment law now allows separate gray water systems for non-home consumption uses. Village building codes also require low water flow fixtures.

Councilor Debra Marcum-

Byars said in Albuquerque, any remodel of a house requires that new low-flow fixtures be installed, not just those involving a kitchen, bathrooms or laundry rooms.

She asked village manager Lorri McKnight to bring the rest of the task force's recommendations back up for discussion in six months to determine if more should be adopted. She's interested in storm harvesting and in establishing a working relationship with the National Resource Conservation Service.

"The village could become a member and have their services on riparian rehabilitation" and other related activities, she said.

She's also like the council to consider forming a water resource management committee and Hardeman said the village should consider replacing existing water meters with state of the art types that are more accurate.

IMPACT: Village wants area growth to pay for itself

capital improvement plan and was never "politically or philosophically" in favor of fees of any kind.

"It was frustrating to the staff at the time," he said.

The council doesn't have to adopt everything in the old ordinance when it comes up for a vote in September, he said.

Glen Barrow, chairman of the village planning and zoning commission, said his board asked the council to reconsider impact fees because of the "staggering" growth in the village.

"I think our greatest fear is that we will outgrow all the infrastructure faster than we think," he said. "And then we're going to have to say, 'stop!'"

People often ask him why the council doesn't impose a building moratorium, Barrow said.

"I explain that you need a time frame, goal and result," he said. "Many bedroom communities refuse to expand their water facilities and stop the growth. I don't think that's what we want to do here."

On the flip side, Sterchi pointed out that in a recent survey of residents about revamping the village comprehensive plan, most people wanted no more growth in the village.

Anderson said the village could require each new home owner to find and buy their own water and water rights as a means of controlling growth and keeping down infrastructure costs.

Councilor L. Ray Nunley, a pharmacist, said in his business he sees many people in the military stationed at Fort Bliss in El Paso, Texas, and Holloman Air Fort Base in Alamogordo, who retired, sold their homes in the Northeast and now are building in the county.

With so many new motels being built in the last few years, the impact isn't confined to residential construction, Barrow said.

Five years ago impact fees were perceived as growth inhibitors, Anderson said, "but it's a cost of growth, period."

Barrow said he believes not imposing impact fees ultimately could stop growth because the village would reach the point that it could not serve more residents with water and sewer service.

Renick said if someone owning land in the Camelot subdivision at the southwest corner of the village wanted to put in multi-family units and the head of the water department said the village couldn't supply the water, he would not issue a building permit "whether we were on solid ground or not."

"Everyone wants to be the last one here," Councilor Ron Hardeman said. "This won't stop growth, but it will make it pay for itself. We can start with (the old ordinance) and then restudy the numbers."

Some places like Park City, Utah, charge a $25,000 impact fee, Sterchi said.

Councilor Debra Marcum-Byars said a study by the American Planning Commission found that impact fees attracted lot buyers and didn't push buyers into the countryside to avoid the fees.

"More felt secure building in the municipalities for the guarantee of basic services," she said. Property values were higher and investments protected because of those guarantees, she said. Owners were sure when they turned on a faucet, water would pour.

PREPARE YOUR BODY FOR EXERCISE

Before a strenuous activity, stretching exercises will make the body more limber and relaxed. Stretching, however, will not cure maladjustments or subluxations in the spinal chord. Chiropractors often see people who complain that, even though they religiously exercise, they still experience pain in their backs, necks, legs and shoulders. They do not realize that they also need regular chiropractic adjustments to keep fit.

Subluxations in the spine can begin at birth and worsen over the years. This can lead to underlying degenerative changes in the joints. The joints may start to dry out, break down and become difficult to move. Before long, an individual has problems just walking, let alone participating in a sport or a heavy workout.

Regular adjustments by a Doctor of Chiropractic can help joints regain their health and arrest further deterioration. If you suffer from chronic aches and pains, make an appointment with a chiropractor as soon as possible. This will maximize exercise benefits and make you feel better than ever, both physically and mentally.

Ruidoso and Downs near EPA faceoff

Answers expected on sewage violations this month

Wastewater, sewage, and getting rid of both has been a struggle for Ruidoso and neighboring Ruidoso Downs for years. They together own a treatment plant east of the Downs, and from there the effluent — presumably clean — goes back into the Rio Ruidoso.

But the area's growth has overwhelmed that plant, and now what goes into the river isn't so pristine. The federal Environmental Protection Agency wants some changes — millions of dollars in changes.

The communities got a small boost last week when Gov. Bill Richardson handed out some money for water projects in southern and southeastern New Mexico — courtesy President George Bush's tax cut. The neighboring municipalities will share $1 million, adding to the kitty for mitigating the treatment plant's problems.

Neither has seen any money yet, but it will be a small added argument when representatives head for Dallas this month to explain to EPA how they are attempting to meet the required standards.

Ruidoso's manager, Lorri McKnight, was delighted to know the money was coming, and that the governor was aware of the problem: A 21-year-old treatment plant operating at capacity, with growth and expansion of the population continuing.

Meanwhile, Downs administrator John Waters is looking for an edge for that Dallas meeting to prove they're trying, by getting some adjacent property served by septic tanks into the city, and connecting the homes to the sewer system.

Waters summed up the problem for both towns at a city council meeting: Fines from EPA of up to $25,000 a day per incident beginning in January 2004.

"Even if they reduce the fine to $1,000 per day ... that equals $365,000 per year ... and all that does is go to pay for bureaucrats in Dallas. It doesn't improve the situation in the river."

Rural residents connected by more than power lines

People who live in Capitan and Carrizozo and in the rural back roads of Lincoln and Otero counties have their own connection, part of a statewide connection — sort of an electric network — that knits them together like nothing else.

The name is appropriate: "Enchantment."

It's a monthly newspaper, now in its 55th year, that arrives in the mailbox of every REA customer in the state. And every rural electric cooperative has its own tailor-made edition.

MOUNTAIN ASIDES
KEITH GREEN

Until we moved to Ruidoso, we were regular readers in small-town New Mexico. We read the the Kit Carson Co-Op edition in Taos, the Socorro Electric Co-Op edition in Socorro, the Lea County Co-Op edition in Hobbs. Some inlaws in northeastern New Mexico were in Springer Electric Co-Op territory, so we read that one, too, on visits; I still remember stories by Cee Savvy, which provided an ongoing history of a sparsely settled part of the state that has stood the test of time.

So I know Enchantment, and when the August issue of the Otero County Electric edition fell into my hands the other day, it was a pleasure — like meeting an old friend I hadn't seen in years.

Here was a classified section where you could buy tractor parts or windmills, Siberian husky puppies, corral panels, and a 1,500-pound, 3-year-old bull with a "good disposition," among other things.

And rural real estate, from Hobbs to Jemez. In Springer, a 3.5 -acre tract is offered for $25,000, "with electricity easily accessible." Five acres in the Belen area for $10,000. More than 21 acres in the Mora County mountains, $42,600. You can pretty well track the state's rural economy in Enchantment's classifieds.

Another feature I've been enjoying from almost the beginning is a page of cartoons drawn by co-op kids around the state. In the current issue, children — including 8-year-old Alex Hess of Capitan — gave an idea of the kinds of foods they like to eat. Looks like Alex loves doughnuts.

Enchantment, in many respects, is rural New Mexico, even if its obvious mission is to tout the value of electric cooperatives and to keep them growing. After all, over most of the 20th century, the co-ops built power lines to places no commercial power supplier would even consider.

And now Enchantment is firmly rooted along the state's back roads, as rooted as those tall wooden poles carrying power over the hill and up the next creek to a ranch somewhere back of beyond.

It seems to me that the 124,660 mail recipients of the New Mexico Rural Electric Cooperative Association's monthly newspaper are well connected, indeed.

Give Lincoln, Billy, their day in the sun

To the editor:

The saga of the "Last Escape of Billy the Kid" will soon be re-enacted and the main street of Lincoln will once again reverberate with the sound of (blank) gunfire, and once again a salvo or two will be fired by those who object to the glorification of this outlaw.

These detractors feel they have a point in that celebrating this event sends the wrong message to our youth, but considering what's available to the young on today's market, anything about the Kid is pretty tame by comparison.

The Hollywood of yesteryear always presented Billy in a favorable light. As a front row kid at the Saturday matinee, I was weaned on movies about him and I've never rustled cattle, robbed a bank or shot anyone in the back.

Some residents of Ruidoso are less than pleased by the invasion of 25,000 bikers twice a year, but the bottom line is that it's good for the merchants and what's good for them is good for our local economy. The same can be said for the town of Lincoln, so let's allow them their day in the sun without carping about what's right and what's wrong.

Aquafria is not to blame for Downs' sewage dilemma

To the editor:

Annex or not? We recently went to a meeting at the village hall of the City of Ruidoso Downs. We can't believe what we heard. Mr. Waters is blaming Aquafria for polluting the river, when it's their own fault. They continue to let all this building go on and the sewage plant can't handle it. They just want to annex us, so they can tell the Environmental Protection Agency that they are going to annex us, to get out of paying that big fat fine. It's your error, not ours. If Ruidoso and the Downs would get it through their heads: Stop building, and get the sewage plant up and running to handle all this extra building, instead of seeing the almighty dollar signs.

Whose bright idea was it to put a motel between Denny's and M. Waldrop? Duh! Where's the sewage and water coming for that? And there is no parking? Real smart thinking. Whose bright idea was it to build a huge condo complex on DiPaolo Hill? Duh! Where is the sewage and water coming for that? Smart planning?

Mr. Waters, put the blame where it is supposed to be, don't use us as your scapegoat. Mr. Waters, where do you get off telling us that you are doing us a service by giving us water, water that was Aquafria's in the first place. The Davises sold the water rights to the village.

You are telling the citizens that they are going to get sewer service, but it will be many years before anyone gets it, because the sewer plant has to be up and running before any of us do get it. You can't even take care of the village, yet you want to annex us? What about the potholes in front of the village hall? What about those dumpy looking places along the highway and some of the back streets within the village? Clean up your act before you annex us.

We won't see sewer services in our lifetime. You say we need police service, well, we have been without this long and no problems. And ... we have a great fire department and a great bunch of people on it, giving us the best service ever. Politics and politicians sure like to use folks and use them as scapegoats when it's their problem.

Writer pleased to remember his planning deposit

To the editor:

Re: Terry McMaster's letter in the News Wednesday, July 23. I want to thank Mr. McMaster for reminding me that I have a deposit of a hundred bucks at the Village Planning and Zoning Office. My manners were found wanting by the office manager there when I tried to expedite a replat. I classified as rude, too.

I have consulted Miss Mahners about rudeness. If persistence and insistence are rude, there are quite a few potentially rude people in Ruidoso. Maybe we would mind our manners if P & Z got those checks to us.

However, Mr. McMaster brightened my day reminding me about my forgotten fortune. Now I just have to survive long enough to get that hundred bucks and spend it before my heirs do.

Visitor plans to make noise about barking dogs

To the editor:

I enjoy coming to Ruidoso, spring, summer and fall, to spend a few restful days and enjoy the mountains.

However, my recent trip was a total disaster. Two nights in a row, dogs barked from 11 p.m. to 6 a.m., and I could not sleep. I inquired around the neighborhood and was told (where) the dogs were located on Jann Lane. Several had complained about the barking dogs and had even gone to municipal court over them, but nothing had been done to correct the situation. There must be an ordinance for this situation in your fair town.

On my next visit to lovely Ruidoso, if this happens again, I will personally call the police department and complain. Please see if this deplorable condition can be rectified. Apparently, it has gone on for a long time.

High pressure keeping moisture from falling

■ The village had a very dry July, seeing about a tenth of the normal amount of rainfall.

BY DIANNE STALLINGS
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

A high pressure ridge is sitting on the West "like an 800-pound gorilla," preventing moisture in the atmosphere from reaching the parched ground in Lincoln County, a weather expert says.

Charles Liles, chief meteorologist with the Albuquerque office of the National Weather Service, said Thursday that although official figures aren't yet available, data shows that for the month of July, Ruidoso received less than half an inch of rain compared to the average of 4.02 inches.

Liles said the area registered .41 of an inch, about one-tenth of normal.

Asked why residents see storm clouds gather each afternoon, hear thunder and see rain in the sky but feel little hit the ground, Liles said, "There's a lot of discussion all over the West trying to figure out why that is."

Data collected from weather balloons and other sources suggest that a normal amount of moisture exists in the atmosphere, but it's not raining out, he said.

Liles said a high pressure system that usually meanders over Nevada and then through Kansas and Nebraska, this year established residency over the West.

"We're not getting a continuous supply of moisture from the tropics," he said. "We've been cut off."

Even when the remnants of Hurricane Claudette, a low-intensity ranking storm, hit Texas and moved inland, southern New Mexico was hurt because the moisture was bound up in the storm's circulation, Liles said.

"So it's like everything is working against us and that includes most of the state, except for Gallup and the Taos/Red River areas, which have above normal precipitation," he said.

Weather balloons sent up daily show the precipitation water values at normal levels, sometimes higher, he said. But about 20,000 to 30,000 feet up, the stable atmosphere is not allowing an explosive growth of thunderstorms, Liles said, adding, "We're not getting any deep surge of moisture."

Woman's remains found near Alto

BY LIONEL W. LEPPMANN
FOR THE RUIDOSO NEWS

In a remote, steep and heavily wooded area a few miles from the old Alto Post Office, Lincoln County Sheriff's deputies found the body of a Caucasian woman Wednesday after a search that lasted several days.

The woman had been reported missing when she failed to return from an evening hike in the heavily wooded terrain in the vicinity of her home. The woman had been reported as missing on Saturday, July 26, when she failed to return from an evening hike in the heavily wooded terrain in the vicinity of her home. Upon receiving the report, a posse consisting of Lincoln County Sheriff's deputies and volunteers from the Bonito Fire Department began a search, but due to the ruggedness of the terrain, the body was not found until Wednesday around noon.

The New Mexico State Police Search and Rescue squad joined the search Tuesday but failed to discover the body.

On Wednesday a Sheriff's deputy discovered the body in a heavily wooded ravine in the search area.

The scene where the body was found was searched by the Lincoln County Sheriff's Office and the New Mexico State Police Crime Team.

The body was sent to the Office of the Medical Examiner in Albuquerque to determine the cause of death, though initial speculation is that the death occurred as the result of an accident.

The name of the individual is being withheld pending notification of next of kin and a report from the Medical Examiner's office revealing the cause of death.

Lodgers tax details sought

BY DIANNE STALLINGS
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

Before approving the distribution of Lincoln County lodgers tax money, County Commissioner Earl Hobbs said he'd like more details.

Commissioners at their meeting earlier this month approved $4,500 for the radio promotion of the county through the Drew Gomer history series and $500 to help advertise the Smokey Bear Stampede, one of the major July 4th weekend events in Capitan.

But Hobbs said he'd like to see more details about how the money is used when applications are submitted.

County manager Tom Stewart said organizations when submitting the initial information to the lodgers tax committee include more details, but he presents the basics to commissioners.

"This is simply a renewal (of an existing contract)," he said of the Gomer series.

A spectator asked if county or state laws set a limit on what can be spent on a nonprofit event compared to a private individual.

County Attorney Alan Morel said the lodgers tax ordinance doesn't address whether someone or a group makes a profit.

"The goal is, does it bring anyone to town to spend money," he said.

BUSINESS BRIEFS

State business group plan roundtable series

A business and community roundtable, sponsored by the Association of Commerce and Industry of New Mexico and local business advocates, is planned for 11:45 a.m. to 1:15 p.m. Tuesday, Aug. 26, at Cree Meadows Country Club.

ACI will be traveling to 24 communities across New Mexico to gather input from entrepreneurs and community leaders on the issues they feel need to be addressed in the 2004 legislative session. The association planners will use the feedback received as guidance in forming its 2004 legislative agenda.

ACI, a statewide chamber of commerce and manufacturer's group, lobbies the legislature and governor on behalf of the business community.

Forums will also be held in Roswell (11:30 a.m. Wednesday, Aug. 27, in Bassett Auditorium) and Alamogordo (noon Thursday, Sept. 25, at the Alamogordo Elks Lodge).

For reservations, contact the Ruidoso Valley Chamber of Commerce.

Development pro to head ACI board

The Association of Commerce and Industry of New Mexico has named Carol Radosevich as chairman of its board of directors for 2003-2004. Radosevich's appointment was confirmed by the ACI board of directors at its annual retreat, held June 12 and 13 in Ruidoso.

ACI is the statewide business advocate dedicated to improving the business climate in New Mexico. ACI is the state's affiliate of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce and the National Association of Manufacturers.

An active member of ACI for 20 years, Radosevich has served on its board for the last decade. She is the director of economic development for Public Service Company of New Mexico, which provides a wide range of services looking to relocate or expand in New Mexico. These services include assistance with gas and electric utility issues, financing, business planning and technology transfer.

Radosevich

She has served as president of the Enchantment Land Certified Development Corporation and sits on numerous boards, including Rio Rancho Economic Development Corporation, the National Association of industrial and Office Parks and the New Mexico Rural Development Response Council.

Other ACI officers for 2003-2004 include: Michelle Coons, chair-elect; Tony Trujillo, Phelps Dodge Mining, second vice chair; Perry Bendixsen, Brownstein, Hyatt & Farber, secretary; Noel Behne, First State Bank, treasurer; Don Kawal, Klinger Constructors Inc., immediate past chair; and John Carey, president.

For more information, call the association at 505-842-0644.

Development open

A number of realtors got a sneak preview of the new model homes at White Mountain Meadows by American Pride Homes July 17 and had nothing but praise afterward.

The patio home development can be seen daily from noon to 5:30 p.m. by calling Mary Jo Riddle at (505) 937-1083 or 258-4450, or by calling a realtor to take advantage of the lockbox entry. The principles of American Pride Homes are 15-year residents of Ruidoso.

Small business help is on the way, through federal SBDC offices

One of the most useful business resources in this area is the Small Business Development Center in Roswell. The director, Eugene Simmons, has several years of experience advising and consulting businesses in this area. This column will be the first of a three-part series highlighting some of the opportunities the SBDC offers to area businesses.

The SBDC at ENMU Roswell is one of 18 centers throughout New Mexico with the state's lead center located in Santa Fe. It is also one of 1,100 centers located throughout the U.S. as well as Guam, Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, Washington D.C. and American Samoa. The Small Business Administration started the SBDC program in 1976 to provide entrepreneurs with local access to the SBA's programs. The program became law in 1980.

Some of the assistance a business owner can receive is types of loans available and distinguishing the difference between each type as well as business expansion and start up resources. A "Request for Assistance" card can be completed to initiate the process. Information on the card is kept in the strictest of confidence while it offers a demographic profile on the business as well as all types of work and time spent on the client's needs. When a business is started or expanded, the number of jobs and capital created loans are recorded too.

This assistance can be very helpful for those individuals that are considering starting a business or businesses contemplating expansion before any investments in capital, products or long term agreements are made.

Simmons visits Ruidoso weekly, usually on Fridays, and can be reached either through the Ruidoso branch of ENMU or any local bank.

Next week's column: "SBDC: More Than Four Letters, part 2."

Ready to build

Local restorer Mike Lamb has been featured in hot rod magazines.

BY WES SCHWENGELS
RUIDOSO NEWS EDITOR

Mike Lamb knows cars. Especially how to restore them.

Lamb's work has appeared in hot rod magazines, including a 1941 Wheelie that appeared on the cover of Street Rodder in August 1990. The specialty auto shop he was working for at the time in Mesa, Ariz., was also featured in the magazine in December of that year.

Now he's brought his talents to Lincoln County, where he, along with Tony Gonzalez, owns Lincoln County Collision Center in Ruidoso Downs. The shop, which has been open for about a month, specializes in insurance body repair and framework. They also do custom paintwork.

"We got together to open the shop ... to try to get work done in a timely manner," Lamb, 38, said. "We're trying to be here for people and to get people to know we're here."

Originally from Kansas,

Lamb moved to Phoenix, Ariz., in the mid-'80s and then back to Kansas in 1992. He's been in Lincoln County for more than five years now.

And he's been working on cars for 25 years.

"There's a lot of experience between me and Tony, about 50 years," Lamb said.

And with Lamb's wife, Lisa, running the office, it's a family affair too.

While there aren't any shiny hot rods outside the shop right now, that could change.

"I'd love to start building cars for the shop," he said.

The hot rod magazines might not be far behind.

Job prospects and business confidence improve

BY SUNG WON SOHN
WELLS FARGO & CO.

Joblessness and weak business spending have been the Achilles' heel of the economy. Fortunately, there is hope on both fronts.

Sohn

While the payroll data have shown job losses, the household statistics, which typically leads the payroll numbers at economic turning points, have shown healthy increases in employment. Initial claims for unemployment insurance, another leading indicator of jobs, have been trending in the right direction. Hiring intentions by Manpower Survey, the layoff statistics compiled by Challenger, Gray and Christmas as well as demand for temporary help show stabilizing employment trend. To be sure, current job openings are low, but the economic growth rate of around 4 percent at an annual rate should revive hiring plans later in the year.

Business confidence is improving as well. After the war, the business confidence index by the Conference Board has improved. A survey of small businesses by the National Federation of Independent Businesses says that it is a good time to expand and sales expectations have increased. Deflation scares have diminished. Inflation in Asia including China will rise. Since many of the Asian currencies move with the dollar, import prices will continue to rise. Domestic producers should regain some pricing power. Thanks to massive buying from export-driven China, industrial commodity prices have been trending up as well.

Bonds: Yields Go Higher

The deflation of the bond bubble is not complete. The correction process was delayed by the deflation scare. Now that the economy is expected to percolate and the budget deficit is ballooning, the 10-year Treasury yield has jumped from the low of 3.11 percent in June to 4.10 percent today. Our bond valuation model points to the 10-year rate to approach 5 percent in coming months. One of the beneficiaries of the Federal Reserve's policy of "leaving rates low for a sustained period" is TIPS (Treasury Inflation Protection Security). The policy should eventually increase inflation expectations making TIPS more valuable.

Agencies (Freddie and Fannie) are more attractive than Treasuries. Recently, they have taken a beating from accounting problems creating buying opportunities. Better oversight and transparency for the housing-related agencies should be good for bond holders by enhancing the safety and soundness of the agencies. Corporate spreads over Treasuries have narrowed dramatically.

Corporates have benefited from balance sheet repair, improved cash flows and a better economic outlook. But Corporates have become relatively expensive so that another alternative investment such as agencies should be looked at.

Stocks: Tug-of-War

The transition from an interest-rate driven to earnings-driven rally is taking place. For much of 2001 and 2002, analysts were revising earnings estimates down every month. Now the opposite is true. Earnings for both second and third quarter of 2003 as well as 2004 have been revised upward. So far for the second quarter, two-thirds of the reports have been positive including utilities (29%), financials (22%), energy (22%) and consumer staples (21). In a rising interest-rate environment, technology and consumer goods tend to perform well as investors are willing to pay for future growth.

Rising Treasury yields and energy prices could cast doubts on the rosy earnings scenario. What the market needs is a stronger economy accompanied by higher earnings and stable interest rates. If the economy grows at an annual rate of 4 percent for the next six quarters and interest rates rise, market advances will be limited. It will turn out to be a tug-of-war between earnings and the interest rate. The good news is that the massive economic stimulus augers well for the continuation of the rising trend in equities.

Plants could cool hot summer in the city

BY STEWART TRULSEN
AMERICAN FARM BUREAU

Grower sales of floriculture and nursery crops have been relatively flat the last two years because of the weak U.S. economy, but the industry could get a big boost in the future from sales in an unlikely spot, the core of America's largest cities.

City planners and mayors are starting to realize that there is too much concrete and too many barren, tarred roofs in the nation's concrete jungles. From an aesthetic point of view it would be nice to have a little more greenery, but that's not what this is all about. It has more to do with summer's heat.

Cornell University researchers discovered that U.S. cities have 10 more very warm nights a year on average than they did 40 years ago. In rural areas, there was an increase of only three very warm nights a year.

A few years ago, NASA studied the heat from city surfaces by mounting a thermal camera to aircraft. The researchers found ample proof of urban heat islands, bubble-like accumulations of hot air that developed over areas of the city where there was little vegetative cover. Newer research funded by NASA indicates the warm air from these heat islands in big coastal cities like Houston is rising to interact with ocean breezes. The result is heavier and more frequent rainfall in and downwind of the cities.

This summer the first ever North American Green Roof Conference was held in Chicago. It drew more than 500 participants from 10 countries. Chicago Mayor Richard M. Daley is a proponent of cooling off the cities by planting rooftop gardens. Daley first became acquainted with green roofs while touring Chicago sister cities in Europe. One of the countries with a thriving green roof industry is Germany.

Chicago's city hall now has approximately 20,000 plants on its roof thanks to the mayor's interest. The plants include sedum, forbs, grasses, shrubs, vines and two trees. There's a restaurant in Door County, Wis. that has goats grazing on its grass roof, but so far no one is seriously considering livestock on rooftops.

In Germany, most cities have incentives for building owners to install green roofs. In Chicago, a city ordinance will soon require all new and refurbished roofs to have rooftop gardens or reflective roofing in order to save energy. Reflective roofing may help with the heat, but isn't as effective as gardens in reducing storm runoff.

Greening America's cities with rooftop gardens would be costly but worth it. Planting more trees, shrubs, grasses, vegetables and flowers on the ground and on roofs will save the cities billions of dollars a year on air conditioning bills, while reducing pollution and smog. The cities need to cool down and green up, and American agriculture is certainly up to the task of providing the plant material, labor and expertise.

Rennick to head P&Z full time

BY DANNE STALLINS
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

The transition couldn't be smoother. All Charles Rennick needs to do is drop the word "acting" from his planning director's title on Aug. 10.

Ruidoso village manager Lorri McKnight announced Tuesday that she will no longer advertise for a replacement for Mike Runnels, who resigned in May from the position. Rennick, who also serves as assistant village attorney, took over as acting director while McKnight searched for someone new.

But a few weeks ago, they sat down and talked about the job, she said. "He'd like to do this full-time and I'm thrilled to death he's willing," McKnight told councilors. Because it's an upper management position, she is not required to follow the standard advertising and job interview route, she said.

"I propose to move him to planning director with additional duties to see if he can do it all," she said. He will continue to assume the routine legal duties connected to planning and zoning, the extraterritorial zone around the village and for special projects such as the regional wastewater treatment plant, she said.

Councilor Bob Sterchi said the choice is up to McKnight and Rennick probably knows the code better than anyone else. But he questioned if a conflict might arise with Rennick as director and also offering legal advice to the department and to the planning and zoning commission.

McKnight said she will rely on Rennick to cue her when a controversial issue or one demanding an independent legal eye is needed and then village attorney H. John Underwood can be called. Rennick said he essentially has filled both positions off and on for several years as the village moved through different people being hired and then resigning as planning director.

Rennick

"It's not necessary for me to call John on those small items," he said. "This (arrangement) is more efficient. When appeals come in, it would be appropriate for the village attorney to handle them. I would continue to do the day-to-day stuff I've been called on (to do) for years."

McKnight said she trusts Rennick's judgment on possible conflicts.

Councilor Debra Marcum-Byars said she's worked with Rennick on several projects, including problems at the regional wastewater sewage treatment plant the village shares with Ruidoso Downs.

"He was most instrumental in putting the document together that the state Environment Department is so happy with," she said of a compilation of action steps as an alternative to expensive and immediate changes at the plant. The plan proposed by the village aims at tracking the source of phosphorus contamination in the Ruidoso River.

The effective date of the new arrangement will coincide with the renewal of Underwood's contract under which Rennick was working as assistant village attorney.

As interim director working three hours a day, Rennick is being paid per hour a figure roughly equivalent to Runnel's annualized pay of $65,000, McKnight has said. She didn't have a final figure on Rennick's new salary Thursday.

Capitan lecture focuses on mental health

BY MAMIE MACINE
FOR THE RUIDOSO NEWS

Depression. It doesn't have to be a depressing subject. Many suffer from it, but the vast majority can be cured.

That's one of the points licensed professional counselor James Martin will convey tonight in a talk at the Capitan Public Library.

Martin's presentation, "Dealing with Depression in the Elderly," is part of the First Friday lecture series. It begins at 7 o'clock in the library, 101 E. 2nd St.

"I'll try to keep it light," he said. "You've got to keep your sense of humor."

Martin, 50, moved here recently from Abilene, Texas, to become program manager at the Heritage/Program for Senior Adults at the Lincoln County Medical Center.

Heritage, headquartered in Houston, Texas, contracts with medium-sized hospitals in three states to provide outpatient mental health treatment for those 55 and older who suffer psychiatric, emotional or behavior disorders. Martin's staff includes a medical director/psychiatrist, two licensed therapists, two mental health techs and a registered nurse.

A Methodist minister, Martin was clinical director of a non-profit agency in Abilene working with delinquent youth when his program was discontinued. Mulling his options, he found Heritage on the Internet and discovered there were opportunities in Ruidoso.

"I thought I would work as a therapist here for a while to get a feel of the place and see if that fit me. I'm very enthusiastic about what they do."

Development grants to pay for Downs improvements

■ After success with the grants last year, city administrator John Waters says Ruidoso Downs continues to be aggressive.

BY MARTY RACINE
FOR THE RUIDOSO NEWS

An ambitious effort to secure grant money is expected to help fund infrastructure improvements in Ruidoso Downs.

Last year the city received more money, $1.025 million, from the federal Community Block Development Grant program than any small municipality in the state, according to City Administrator John Waters. The addition of other grants helped raise money for projects targeting drainage, water supplies, the comprehensive master plan and the sewer master plan.

"I'll be darned if we didn't go out and get grants in nearly every one of those areas," Waters told a CBDG public hearing last week.

The city continues to be aggressive, he says. "We're out getting grants, trying to fix the city up. We have some serious improvement to do in our water system and our drainage system. There are a lot of things that need to be done."

To qualify for the CBDG program, municipalities of less than 50,000 people must have at least a 50 percent low-to-moderate income population. In the latest census Ruidoso Downs is at 64 percent.

In preparation for applying for next year's CBDG funds the city is hosting a series of public hearings in the Hubbard Room of City Hall, 122 Downs Drive. The fifth and final hearing is set for Aug. 14 at 5 p.m.

Public comments from the sessions and staff recommendations will be considered by the council, which will prioritize city needs in submitting its 2004 CBDG application.

Among those needs water, or lack thereof, remains a serious priority, Waters said. "Our spring is dropping significantly. We're right now somewhere in the neighborhood of 260 gallons per minute. Four years ago we were at a constant 450.

"There have been issues raised in the prior three (CBDG) hearings about the need for some type of excess reservoir storage so that we have a firefighting reserve, and so that we can store water ... for the time when all these tourists show up. We see this depletion from our system during the racing season and during the holidays."

Water storage has been a political issue in the Downs. At last week's hearing, Bassett Bryant, who lives in the Agua Fria subdivision, told Mayor Bob Miller he voted for him in the last election because of Miller's pledge to increase water storage.

The mayor replied that a site has been designated for a new 2.5-million-gallon storage tank to replace a 100,000-gallon tank. That project still needs funding, however.

"If that's a priority of the Council - and several members have indicated that that is a very high priority - we will go forward," Waters said. "We'll seek $1 million in grant money for that through both the CBDG program and another source that we're looking at."

Money has been allocated for water system improvements on Allison Lane for the installation of fire hydrants and six-inch lines replacing two-inch lines. As additional money is received, other areas with inadequate systems should get upgrades.

"We're going to be replacing water lines all over town," Waters said. "We're going to be having a lot of orange barrels floating around. Anywhere that needs new hydrants, we're going to put fire hydrants in."

Water system problems have been a long time in the making, he explained.

"Ruidoso Downs' entire system was cobbled together from a group of cooperative water systems. Since 1947 they've been putting them together. A lot of them were sub-standard lines when they were put in, put in by private contractors, and the city inherited them. Some of them are in pretty bad shape now."

Drainage is another major concern, and a drainage master plan has identified several areas with serious problems. The city has a $500,000 grant for a Phase I project to redo streets and drainage in the River Park subdivision. That project should be completed within 18 months.

Spaghetti Flats is among areas designated in the drainage master plan for Phase II improvements. "The drainage is so bad down there, the streets are being washed away," resident Barbara Green said at the hearing.

Grant money has yet to be collected for Phase II.

"We are trying to address that," Waters said. "That is on the priority list. If that's the council's wish, we're going to proceed with another (grant application) for that area."

Sewers are yet another issue. The wastewater treatment facility sometimes exceeds peak design usage, and significant areas of the city's sewer system reportedly contain inadequate lines.

"When you get down to some of the flatter areas, some of those lines were installed quite a long time ago," Waters said. "I think when we complete our sewer master plan we'll have a much better idea of what needs to be replaced."

Village P&Z approves new church

BY DIANNE STALLINGS
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

The Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses plans to build a new church on Eagle Creek off Gavilan Canyon Road.

The building will go up during a four-day period, representatives said last week, but site preparation may take months.

The Ruidoso-Lincoln County Extraterritorial Zoning Commission approved the congregation's application for a commercial site development on Lot 20 in Gavilan Subdivision. The five-acre property is zoned single-family residential, but churches are a specifically allowed use for the land.

The 75-member group proposes to build a 5,000-square-foot church with 780-square-foot portico and graveled parking area. The congregation sold its building on Alpine Village Road.

Commission members wanted assurances that a steep slope behind the church would be handled properly to prevent erosion and asked that an acceptable plan be submitted to the village planning staff as a condition of approval.

Only one neighboring property owner submitted a comment. His concern centered around additional traffic that may be generated.

A congregation representative told the board that the church, under a formula that has been used several other places, will build the church from "slab up" in four days with preassembled material being brought in from west Texas. They will operate under the contractor's license of Mike Martines of Quality Homes Company.

Theories abound over records set at Ruidoso Downs

BY TODD FUQUA
RUIDOSO NEWS SPORTS EDITOR

Race horses are fast. That's quite an understatement, but it's even more of one when you consider what the race horses have done this summer at Ruidoso Downs.

In a year that has already gone down in history, 10 different horses — monitored by 10 different trainers — have set or reset track records at every conceivable distance. Some of these were records that had stood for a decade or more.

Not only have these horses made track history, one has made world history. AB What A Runner — competing in her first race for trainer Brett Vickery since winning last year's All American Futurity — ran 350 yards in 17.057 on July 19 in an allowance race.

That time was more than enough to give her the track record at that distance — set just one week before by Blackgold Chips in the Zia Futurity — but it also gave the 3-year-old filly a world record at that distance.

Ten records set, almost all within a two-week period. So what's going on?

"I don't know, I don't know if anybody does," said Robert Cappellucci, whose thoroughbred charge Star Smasher set the record at 7 1/2 furlongs with a time of 1:29.80 on July 13, only to see the record broken one week later by Caliban in the running of the Governor's Handicap on July 19.

"You could talk to 50 guys and get 30 different answers," he added. "It could be the track, could be the clock, I just don't know." Among the theories floated about the remarkable speeds: The track is fast — almost too fast, as it might be too hard for the horses; the horses were wind-aided; the high heat and low humidity makes for fast conditions; or maybe just the fact that all these horses are just that good.

"He's a legitimate horse, he's a stakes winner," said Joel Marr, referring to 5 furlong-record holder Urlacher. "But he's five years old, and has won many times here before. It's possible all those horses could do it anyway."

That brings up an interesting point, these were all kinds of horses at all kinds of lengths — Thoroughbred and quarter horse alike — breaking these records.

The question of wind can only be applied to the quarter horses, who usually only run in one direction on the quarter horse track. So far, no new records have been set for the 870 or 1,000 yard races, the only distances which see quarter horses running on the thoroughbred track.

However, wind does come into play on some of the records, according to Carl Draper.

"Blackgold Chips was a 2-year-old, and did it with no tailwind," Draper said of his charge, who ran a 17.144 in the 350-yard Zia Futurity July 13. "She just ran an atrocious race, and the second and third place horses did too."

"It was no disgrace to lose that record to AB What A Runner, that's a great horse," he added. "But she only beat us by 3/4 of a length. Without that tailwind, she'd have been a lot closer to us. It's still amazing for a New

TODD FUQUA/STAFF

Silvered Eyes, center, is ridden to victory in the Rainbow Derby July 19 by jockey Jacky Martin. Silvered Eyes' time of 20.96 in the 440-yard race broke the mark set by AB What A Runner in last year's All American Futurity, and was one of 10 records set this year at Ruidoso Downs.

Mexico-bred 2-year-old to do that."

Draper said he is most convinced the track — which has received trace amounts of rain this year — is the biggest reason there are such fast times.

"It's the racing surface, period," Draper said. "It's faster than it's ever been. There are pros and cons, and those with horses that are racing bad might say the track is too hard and they're breaking down."

"I know what's happening with my horses, so I don't run them hurt and then blame the track."

The official authority on the track's condition is Rick Baugh, general manager at Ruidoso Downs.

He quickly affirms the track is in superb shape, but points to one other factor that he feels is the key.

"Heat and the thin air has a lot to do with it," Baugh said. "It makes for less air resistance and more speed."

Baugh likened the phenomenon to planes grounded in places like Arizona, where the air can heat so much that air molecules spread out enough to remove any lift for the jets.

That expansion works in the horses' favor, as they have less air resistance to contend with.

Of course, those horses have to be pretty good to truly take advantage of these conditions, and the track they're running on has to be in pretty good shape.

"This track crew has been together for a while, and I give them a lot of credit," Baugh said. "The potential is there with these horses, but the grid (beneath the tracks), the breeds, the track stabilizer and track crew are just all coming together at the right time."

In other words, the convergence of factors is rare, and that means those who were present at the track for those two weeks in July witnessed the kind of performances that may not surpassed for some time.

They are consistently good and they don't make mistakes. Their skills and their strategies pay off for the Turkey Track Ranch rodeo team over and over again. They are the only ranch rodeo team to be sponsored by Wrangler. On July 26 they claimed another title, winning the 6th Annual Corona FFA Ranch Rodeo.

The Artesia-based team just came off a win of the Old West Ranch Rodeo at the Smokey Bear Stampede over the 4th of July weekend. Besting 19 other teams there, they arrived in Corona and worked the plan again. This time they out-cowboyed 15 other teams to be the only team with a qualified time in all five events. Regular team member Mike Wilson was not able to compete in Corona and was replaced by Buck Blackwell.

Local teams won second and third place and were only one point apart. The Chupadera Mesa Bunch of Carrizozo was second with qualified times in four events. Black Hills Ranch of Carrizozo placed the close third. Both teams had taken a no time in the Team Penning event.

Special Effort still only triple crown winner at Ruidoso Downs

Handicapper's Corner

Special Effort by Kristain Lovelace

(I asked Kristain to share this great story with you).

It all begins with a dream of owning the perfect horse, whether it be a quarter horse or Thoroughbred. Everyone involved in the Thoroughbred industry wants to have the next Triple Crown winner, the one horse to win the Kentucky Derby, the Preakness and the Belmont. Also, everyone in the quarter horse industry wants the perfect record in the quarter horse Triple Crown, where the horse wins the Ruidoso Futurity, the Rainbow Futurity and the world's richest quarter horse race, the All American Futurity.

Horse breeders try to find the perfect pedigree to win the quarter horse Triple Crown. As of today, it has only been done once with a horse called Special Effort.

The general public might think that horse racing is a rich man's game. In this story it is not all that true.

Special Effort came about by a husband and wife working their way through the Depression. Allen and Jeanette Moehrig had to leave their farm and move into town where they leased a service station.

Little by little, Allen and Jeanette Moehrig expanded the service station as things in the United States got better. The Moehrigs were able to add a tire dealership and a freight trucking business.

However, the Moehrigs were never far from the farm, in the mid-1960s, they were racing quarter horses and taking a hands on approach to the breeding of horses.

In 1979, the Moehrigs came into the picture for the first time. They traded a yearling for Go Effortlessly, who was then bred to Raise Your Glass, a Thoroughbred, to produce Special Effort.

Special Effort was sold to Allen Taylor for $19,000. Allen Willis took interest in the colt and bought half of him. However, bad luck seemed in the air. Two weeks after the deal was finalized, Willis died of a heart attack leaving the 50 percent interest to his wife.

Special Effort won his maiden race at La Bahia Downs for trainer Johnnie Goodman with jockey Billy Hunt aboard.

Special Effort was then on his way to Ruidoso Downs to run in the Kansas Futurity (currently known as the Ruidoso Quarter Horse Futurity) where Special Effort clocked in the time of :17.90 for 350 yards and won the trial race by 4 1/2 lengths.

After Special Effort's amazing run in the trials, he was bought by Dan & Jolene Urschel for $1 million. Dan and Jolene Urschel had owned 1979 All American Winner Pie In The Sky.

Special Effort went on to win the Kansas Futurity, and turn in the fastest qualifying times for both the Rainbow Futurity and All American Futurity.

In the Rainbow Futurity, Special Effort made a wire-to-wire win after a bad break at the starting gates.

The All American Futurity seemed like no contest for the colt, as Special Effort went on to win by four lengths ahead of long shot Go For Buds.

After such an impressive year, Special Effort went on to be named 1981 World Champion, Champion two-year-old and two-year-old stallion.

The next year seemed just as promising as the year before, Special Effort won the Kansas Derby. Then he went on to the Rainbow Derby trials where he won his trial but was later scratched from the race. As of that day the horse was undefeated.

The next challenge was the All American Derby. In the Derby race, Special Effort had a bad break from the gates and was unable to make up the mistake in the stretch and suffered his first and last defeat by a filly named Justanoldlove. Special Effort placed third in the race behind Dashingly.

Special Effort was retired from the racing industry after the defeat. He will always be remembered as the first, and so far only, horse to win the quarter horse Triple Crown. Special Effort published 14 starts with 13 of those wins and one show with career earnings of $1.2 million.

Special Effort at the age of 22 now stands at the 6666 Ranch in Guthrie, Texas. In the May edition of the Quarter Racing Journal, Special Effort is currently ranked No. 1 for leading broodmare sires by two-year-old earnings and second in 2001 leading broodmare sires by earnings. One thing on everyone's mind is who will win the next Triple Crown, and will they have the "special effort?" Only one horse has been able to accomplish the feat and at that time it did take a Special Effort.

Memorial service, new headstone honor former deputy

BY LIONEL W. LIPPMANN
FOR THE RUIDOSO NEWS

Mourners, friends and the public gathered at the Cedarvale Cemetery in White Oaks Saturday, July 19, for a memorial service for James W. Bell, one of the deputy sheriffs killed by Billy the Kid when he escaped from the Lincoln County Courthouse on April 28, 1881. Ruth Birdsong, who portrayed Madame Varnish, otherwise known as Bell Starr, commented "she and her girls were in her Little Casino when Bell passed."

Father Dave Bergs, Pastor of the Santa Rita Catholic Church in Carrizozo read from the Book of Common Prayer, while a hand-cranked organ played "Rock of Ages."

Dick Ness, former sheriff of Torrance County and currently the executive director of the New Mexico Sheriffs and Police Association, remarked: "We have been remiss in providing a proper headstone for this courageous frontier lawman. This tombstone is our contribution to his parting." The circumstances of who buried Bell and whether or not his grave was at one time marked are lost in history.

Paying their respects with Ness were Lincoln County Sheriff Tom Sullivan, Lincoln County Undersheriff Rick Virden, DeBaca County (Fort Sumner) Sheriff Gary Graves, Deputy Sheriff and Mayor of Capitan Steve Sederwall, as well as members of the Carrizozo Women's Club, members of the Lincoln County Historical Society, representatives of the Historical Museum in Carrizozo, and members of the fledgling Capitan Women's Club.

Respectfully mounted on horseback at a distance were members of the Lincoln County Regulators and the Lincoln County Sheriff's Posse. Horse-drawn carriages, under the supervision of Kern Mattei and Mack Davis, had transported the dignitaries from the business district of White Oaks to the cemetery.

In his final resting place, Bell keeps perpetual company with Civil War soldiers, Susan McSween Barber, the widow of Alexander McSween of Lincoln County War fame and subsequently "the Cattle Queen of New Mexico," and William O. McDonald, the first governor of the state of New Mexico.

After the ceremony, many that attended retired to the No Scum Allowed Saloon in White Oaks. The wake for Bell lasted throughout the afternoon and evening and was interrupted by a mock gunfight between lawmen and drunken cowboys.

Ruth Birdsong, aka Madam Varnish, mourns with two of her girls at the gravesite.

Congress introduces new drought legislation

Bipartisan legislation aimed at providing relief for drought victims and establishing a more coordinated policy for dealing with future droughts was introduced Tuesday by U.S. Sen. Pete Domenici.

The Republican from New Mexico said The National Drought Preparedness Act of 2003 will create a National Drought Council within the Department of Agriculture to improve drought preparedness, mitigation and response efforts. Members will formulate strategies to alleviate the effects of drought by fostering a greater understanding of what triggers wide spread drought conditions.

"We cannot afford another year without a national drought policy," the senator said. "Drought is a unique emergency situation. It creeps in unlike other abrupt weather disasters. Without a national drought policy, we constantly live not knowing what the next year will bring."

Droughts affects crops, livestock and livelihoods across the nation, he said.

"Current drought planning has been chaotic," he said.

The Drought Council would assist efforts between state, local governments, tribes and other entities to develop and implement drought preparedness plans, he said.

U.S. Sen. Max Baucus, D-Mont., is the lead Democratic sponsor. New Mexico's Democratic senator Jeff Bingaman also has signed on. He wants to see more done to help farmers, ranchers and communities prepare by improving monitoring and forecasting of future dry periods, he said.

A House companion to the Domenici bill is sponsored by U.S. Reps. Alcee Hastings, a Democrat from Florida, and Dennis Rehberg, a Republican from Montana.

Gov. exorcises 'Devil's Highway'

■ But physical improvements are needed to make the road safer, Richardson says.

BY JIM SNYDER
FOR THE RUIDOSO NEWS

SHIPROCK — Gov. Bill Richardson proclaimed the newly named U.S. 491 free of satanic connotations now that the former U.S. 666 number, nicknamed "The Devil's Highway," was a thing of the past.

He made his remarks during a ceremony Wednesday attended by approximately 200 people at a tiny rest stop along the highway 10 miles south of Shiprock.

Richardson quickly added while changing the name of the highway was long overdue, it wasn't enough.

"It's one of the most dangerous rural highways in New Mexico. Just changing the name is not going to make it safe," he said. "This highway needs to be made into four lanes. This highway needs safety initiatives."

State Transportation Secretary Rhonda Faught said she expected the state to begin $140 million — which they don't have budgeted yet — in construction in 2005 to widen a 69-mile portion of the highway. The state has already spent $7.5 million to study the proposal and to conduct environmental studies.

Faught agreed with Richardson that negative connotations of U.S. 666 were automatically exorcised with the name change to U.S. 491. "Forget about the past. The devil's out of here and we say goodbye and good riddance," she said to the crowd.

The two-lane highway has a reputation for fatal head-on collisions due primarily to DWI, sleepy drivers, speeding drivers, side-traffic and drivers who simply slip over the double-yellow lines, Navajo Police say.

Shiprock Police call the 90-mile stretch between Shiprock and Gallup "The Indianapolis 500" because of the high number of motorists and truckers who ignore the posted 65 mph speed limit. Drivers must pass slower motorists in opposing traffic, often without a clear view of what is ahead due to hills and curves. The highway has no turn lanes and no street lights at night.

There were 11 fatalities in 2002. This year there have been six fatalities — including five family members in a single accident.

The ceremony was hosted by Shiprock Chapter President Duane "Chili" Yazzie, who sat next to Richardson. Navajo President Joe Shirley Jr. and Vice President Frank Dayish Jr. were unable to attend because of other commitments. Shirley's Chief of Staff Patrick Sandoval represented the president's office.

Richardson and Sandoval both said they hoped the name change would spur economic development along the highway, which sits on the Navajo reservation and is federal trust land.

Also sitting next to Richardson was Navajo Council Delegate Mark Maryboy, who chairs the Council's Transportation Committee and Gilbert Badoni, Shiprock Agency Road Committee chairman.

Other dignitaries on the stage included state Transportation Commissioner Gregory Ortiz, Colorado Transportation Commissioner Steve Parker, Utah Transportation Regional Director Dal

Hawks and state DOT district engineers John McElroy and Larry Manard.

Richardson and Faught praised the cooperation between the three states in quickly getting the name change done with the American Association of State Highway and Transportation.

"Nothing in government works really fast, but this one did," Faught said.

The negative connotation was positive, however, for souvenir hunters who stole posted U.S. 666 signs shortly after the name change was announced in May.

"We found the change was helped by local citizens. We went out to make the change and found all the old signs were gone," Hawks said. The Utah portion of U.S. 491 is approximately 20 miles. Signs were also gone in New Mexico and Colorado.

The state officially changed the highway's name May 26. Utah followed suit. Colorado changed their portion of the highway to U.S. 491 July 1. The highway begins in Gallup, heads north through Shiprock and to the Colorado state line. It continues through Cortez, Colo., before turning northwest and ending in Monticello, Utah.

The highway was named U.S. 666 in 1926 by the American Association of State Highway Officials. It received its name because it was the sixth major route off historic U.S. 66.

"What we're doing has been a long-time coming," Richardson said about the name change. "For 77 years the Navajo people were stuck with U.S. 666."

Man arrested after allegedly 'boxing' with woman

BY DAWN BOWEN
FOR THE RUIDOSO NEWS

CARLSBAD — A Carlsbad man who allegedly put on a pair of boxing gloves Tuesday and severely beat a woman in his home is behind bars and facing a number of felony charges.

Michael Thompson, 22, is charged with aggravated battery against a household member and kidnapping — all felonies — and unlawful possession of a switchblade, a petty misdemeanor. He is being held in the Eddy County Detention Center in lieu of a $25,000 cash-only bond set by Magistrate Judge Henry Castañeda.

According to police records, Thompson was arrested at 5:50 p.m. outside his home at 211 W. Fiesta Drive, No. 5, after someone called 911 to report a domestic fight was taking place inside the home.

Cpl. Tommy Barnett and Officer Blaine Rennie of the Carlsbad Police Department responded to the call, knocked on the door of the home and met with Thompson when he stepped outside. According to a criminal complaint, the officers took a black switchblade knife from Thompson after patting him down to search for weapons.

According to the complaint, Thompson told police he and the woman had been arguing earlier in the day but they had worked it out now and everything was fine.

Inside the home, they found a woman who had "severe bruising and swelling on her entire facial and head area" and bruises on her arms and legs, the complaint states. Rennie called for an ambulance after finding the woman inside the home.

One of the police officers recovered two pairs of red boxing gloves from a bedroom. He asked Thompson if he had worn them during a fight with the woman, the complaint states.

According to the complaint,

Thompson admitted that he and the woman had both been wearing boxing gloves during a physical fight.

Thompson was arrested and taken to the Eddy County Detention Center. The woman was taken to the emergency room at Carlsbad Medical Center where she was treated for her injuries, the complaint states.

Thompson remains jailed pending a preliminary hearing in Magistrate Court.

Visiting the lesser-seen side of beautiful Puerto Rico

BY HANK BARONE
TRAVEL WRITER AND PHOTOGRAPHER

As the toe of my hiking boot caught on the sharp edge of the volcanic rock at the perilous lip of the summit, my forward momentum nearly carried me over the edge. It was a long way down to the churning sea and craggy rocks below.

Our trail guide, Jessica, had led us up the steep ascent and now stood precariously on the brink despite a strong ocean wind that threatened our balance. Tall and slim, she swayed a little, but looked as at ease there on the precipice as she did in the saddle, where she floated effortlessly on the back of her horse.

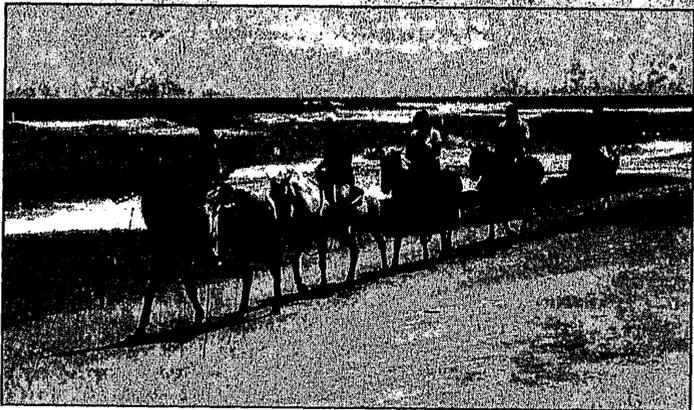

We were midway through a guided trail ride that carried us along empty beaches, past black lava coves and through almond, mangrove and pine forests on the northwest tip of Puerto Rico near Isabela. Leaving the horses lashed to a shady cluster of trees, we walked to the end of an isolated stretch of beach (aptly named "Survival") to struggle up the towering pinnacle that reared up some 400-feet out of sand and sea.

The climb provided a welcome break from already developing saddle sores, but for the vertigo-inclined among us aching rear ends were the least of their worries. "Now I understand why we signed a waiver form," someone nervously joked. "Lose a tourist? No worries, there's always more where those came from," quipped another. But nerves didn't stop us from reveling in the impressive vista of endless sea and sky.

Many visitors to Puerto Rico arrive by cruise ships (San Juan has the second largest port in the Western Hemisphere), or hole-up in bustling, self-contained resorts that do little to reveal the unique character and flavor of the island. But there's another Puerto Rico that lies beyond the glitz and crowds — Porta del Sol, a wind-swept, laid-back stretch of coast tucked away on the less-visited western side of the island.

Along Porta del Sol Mother Nature takes center stage, replacing the new-fangled glitter and flash that light up San Juan with sweeping expanses of undulating dunes, secluded bays and rocky ridges. The region is a natural amusement park jam-packed with just about every known activity — snorkeling and scuba diving, sea kayaking, windsurfing, surfing, horseback riding, kite surfing, mountain biking and rock climbing — and without the crowds!

COURTESY THE BARONES

With fewer tourists on Porta del Sol, it's easier to relax and enjoy the country, be it from horseback or on foot.

With a diversity to fit any lifestyle or mood, Porta del Sol begins in the northwest at Isabela with its pure white dunes. Then continues down the coast past the surfer-enclave of Rincon, the port city of Mayaguez, the quirky beach community of Boqueron, the Bioluminescent Bay at La Parquera and ending at the dry-forests of Guanica in the southwest.

Located just west of Isabela, Tropical Trail Rides was the inspiration of Craig and Michelle Barker (Jessica's bosses), who had come to Puerto Rico for the surfing at Rincon and, like many, decided to stay. Rincon held its first World Amateur Surfing Competition in 1968, starting an evolution that hasn't stopped. Blue-eyed blondes have been part of the town's ethnic mix ever since.

But Rincon is about more than boards, bikinis and babes. It's where green mountains spill into the sea and where (from January to March) breeding humpback whales come to make love just offshore. It also has one of the crown jewels of the west coast, the fully restored Rincon Lighthouse.

A pointed peninsula located at the far-western corner of Puerto Rico, Rincon is a world apart. The huge triangular peninsula ends at Rincon's Punta Higuero where two distinct oceans come together. Around the point and to the north, the Atlantic Ocean pounds on beaches with names like Domes and Pools. Surf is rough, waves are huge (up to 20 feet in winter months) and often perfectly formed. To the south of Punta Higuero, the Caribbean Sea is calm and waves of any size are rare. The beaches are lined with coconut palms and Australian pines. Families go there to lounge, build sandcastles, play in the water and stroll on the beach.

Over the years, experienced surfers from around the world have journeyed to Rincon. Many of them stayed and have added to the nonconformist charm of the town by opening guesthouses and restaurants with a friendly, beachy charm and inventive Creole cuisine. From beach huts and surf cabanas to the five-star Horned Dorset Primavera hotel, this languorous town has matured into an attractive destination without sacrificing its laid-back appeal.

To be continued next week...

Taking steps to curb teen drinking

BY GENEVIEVE PHELAN
FOR THE RUIDOSO NEWS

The reality of teen drinking continues, in spite of prevention efforts by parents, churches, schools, law enforcement and professionals from many different agencies.

According to statistics obtained from the Juvenile Probation Office of Lincoln County, of the 487 juvenile crimes submitted for prosecution in the county between August of 2001 and February of 2003, alcohol or other drugs were involved in 153, or 31 percent.

Alcohol is frequently a factor in the three leading causes of teen deaths — unintentional injuries, homicides and suicides. According to the American Academy of Pediatrics, youth who drink are 7.5 times more likely to use illegal drugs and 50 times more likely to use cocaine than young people who never drink. A recent study indicated that 43 percent of teens who began drinking before age 14 later became alcoholics.

Until a person is 21 or 22, the internal organs of the body are not fully developed. The liver of a 15 year-old cannot process alcohol as efficiently as that of an adult. The brain is another organ that continues development until adulthood and is particularly vulnerable to the effects of alcohol. Drinking is simply more damaging to a minor than it is to an adult—physically, mentally and emotionally.

The parents who are relieved that their child is only drinking beer instead of doing "drugs" is misinformed. Alcohol is a legal drug and, as such, is more socially acceptable than the illegal or "street" drugs. But it is, none-the-less, a drug.

Parents can help their children make healthy decisions about drug use by discussing it with them throughout their childhood, by clearly stating their expectations and values, by establishing and consistently following through with previously agreed-to consequences for breaking family rules.

To help parents navigate the often stormy seas of establishing rules and consequences for teens, in July The Counseling Center started a new series of parenting classes approximately every six weeks during the next year. The curriculum is Guiding Good Choices, and has been given the highest ratings by the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration and the Office of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention.

Making alcohol less accessible to teens is another effective means of reducing its use/abuse. It is illegal for those under 21 to purchase or allow themselves to be served any alcoholic beverage. For the first offense of an adult selling or giving alcohol to a minor, they — as well as the minor — are subject to a fine of not more than $1,000 and "30 hours of community service related to reducing the incidence of driving while under the influence of intoxicating liquor."

Subsequent offenses carry heavier penalties, including the suspension of a merchant's liquor license or a minor's driver's license. An exception to the law is parents or guardians giving an alcoholic beverage to their own children or wards on private property. However, depending on the circumstances, the adult can be charged with "contributing to the delinquency of a minor" which is a 4th degree felony and subject to up to a $5,000 fine and/or up to 18 months in the penitentiary.

For more information on the negative effects of alcohol or other drug use by teens or adults, or registration information about Guiding Good Decisions, call Genevieve Phelan at The Counseling Center prevention office at 257-0520.

Gores take over stores

Family purchases block in Carrizozo, opens three separate businesses

BY JULIE CARTER
FOR THE RUIDOSO NEWS

The entire 500 block on Central that was once the Napa store and auto service is now housing three enterprises owned and operated by two Gore families.

Steve and Cissy Gore of Carrizozo purchased the buildings when the Napa business closed. The automotive service is now called Carrizozo Service and is open Monday-Friday from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. and until noon on Saturday. A mechanic is on duty and the business offers repairs, auto servicing including oil changes, and tire repair.

Next door in the big blue building, the Gores have joined Steve's parents, Bob and Jeane Gore in separate businesses.

The elder Gores have officially opened "Shoe String Arts and Crafts" offering ceramics, in all states of production as well as other crafts and gifts. Bob and Jeane recently relocated to Carrizozo from San Jon. Jeane Gore has been a ceramic artist since the 1970s. Her shop is offering finished and green ware ceramics, paint brushes and supplies as well as classes to learn how to do ceramics start to finish.

Jeane has been doing gold detail ceramics for 12 years and sells her work to several wholesalers and retailers. She said what started as a hobby 30 years ago became a job.

The first round of classes has just completed with another series of classes to begin this Saturday. She can take up to eight students in a class and has several openings for the new one. This series of classes will be held Saturday afternoons from 1 to 4 p.m. for three consecutive weeks. For options on pricing for the class, call the shop at 648-2440.

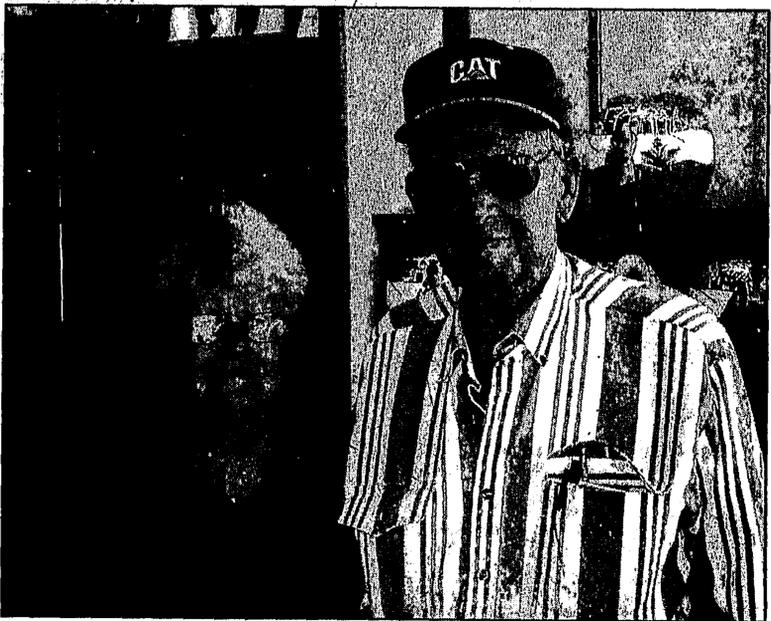

"Steve and Cissy's Mercantile" is what the younger Gores are calling the other half of the store.

The store is selling quality used furniture and appliances as well as clothing, and an assortment of miscellaneous items. They take items on consignment and purchase most of their inventory at estate sales. They are also offering Hi-Pro feeds including cat and dog food.

Steve is the Transportation Director for the Carrizozo School District, and he and Sissy take turns driving a school bus route for Carrizozo Schools.

They have three sons, Kevin 13, Sergio 9, and Gene 6. Cissy is an aide in the Carrizozo Headstart program and will also be going to college two days a week this fall in pursuit of a teaching degree.

Cissy and Steve's is open Monday-Saturday from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. The store phone number is 648-2972.

Bob and Jeane Gore of Carrizozo stand in their new shop, Shoestring Arts and Crafts, located in the 500 block of Central.

Deadline for Lincoln County Fair entries just around corner

BY JULIE CARTER
FOR THE RUIDOSO NEWS

Last call for all those trophy size zucchinis, perfect photos and exquisite afghans that were crocheted last winter. All county residents of all ages are eligible to enter items in the Lincoln County Fair indoor exhibits.

Indoor exhibits will be accepted on Monday, Aug. 4 from 4 to 7 p.m. and Tuesday, Aug. 5 from 9 a.m. until noon. Judging will take place from 1-4 p.m. on Tuesday and the building will be closed during that time.

It's not too late for county residents to take stock of their possibilities for fair entries. The open division includes a horticulture division with fruits and nuts and garden produce and a flower show that includes annuals, perennials, bulbs, roses, and dahlias. Commercial arrangements and house-type flower plants also have a category.

In the home economics division, breads of yeast and quick variety are open. Cakes, pies, cookies and candy are a popular contest. The canned goods division and the clothing department are options for homemakers to show their skills.

The household department has open classes for knitting, embroidery or cross stitch, needlepoint, crochet, wool weaving and crewel embroidery. Wearable art, wood carving and ceramics are a few more divisions of opportunity. The art division is always a popular class for those working in every medium from oil to pen and ink.

Scrapbooking is a new division this year with guidelines set by the rules that will be used at the New Mexico State Fair.

The county fair is celebrating its 50th anniversary this year. It's a banner opportunity for many to make it their first year of competition.

For indoor entry information, call Kortney Hall at 336-7868.

4-H'ers wanted for fair cleanup

Saturday, Aug. 2, at 8 a.m. is the fair grounds cleanup day. All 4-H'ers are expected to help.

Come prepared to work and bring tools such as shovels, rakes, lawn mowers, etc.

Plan on staying until the work is done. The more hands, the sooner the cleanup will be completed.

There is also a cleanup scheduled on Tuesday, Aug. 12, after the Fair.

Corona's Lueras named FFA district head

BY JULIE CARTER
FOR THE RUIDOSO NEWS

The Corona schools FFA program is creating leaders and the proof lies in the State FFA officer roster. For the third consecutive year, the District 7 President appointment has gone to a Corona FFA member.

Following on the heels of Dal Frost in 2001 and Shaline Lopez in 2002, Rachel Lueras is the new FFA District 7 President, which also makes her a state vice-president. Lueras received the appointment in June during the FFA State Convention. She is the daughter of Danny Lueras of Corona and Sherry Evans of Dalhart, Texas.

Meeting qualifications to apply, which included a Supervised Agriculture Experience Project, Rachel was required to write two essays. At the state convention she was interviewed daily by a committee headed by Chairman Codi Montes of Hondo and a representative from each of the state's seven FFA districts.

Rachel will be senior at Corona High School this fall, but her schedule will make it a busier than normal senior year. From the time of the appointment until she hands over the reins next June to her successor, her calendar is full of trainings, events and chapter responsibilities. She began immediately after receiving the appointment with a state officer training in Moriarty. Following that was FFA Leadership Camp here in New Mexico and a National Leadership Conference for state officers in Colorado Springs, Colorado.

The NM State Fair will be a fulltime job for Rachel with responsibilities covering all phases of FFA's commitment to promote agriculture. She will also be making chapter visits to all 11 schools in District 7 sometime during the fall.

"I've learned so much just since I started all this," says Lueras. "I've learned a lot about leadership I never realized. The thing that sticks with me most is that 'leadership is influence.'"

Rachel will be showing animals at the Lincoln County Fair. A relative newcomer to the show ring, in her third year she'll be competing with four goats, two lambs and four pigs. Last year was encouraging to her as she won a first and second with her goats and second with her pig. She received a Reserved Grand Champion with her Spot Pig in the Other Pure Bred division. The animals are taking up four to five hours of her day with feeding, grooming, training and caring for them.

Somewhere in her busy schedule Rachel plans to continue with another activity that is very important to her: high school sports. She will play volleyball and basketball while maintaining her academic levels. After high school Rachel intends to pursue a career in medicine, either as a veterinarian or a pediatrician.

You might be a redneck if you can laugh at yourself

Jeff Foxworthy set the bar pretty high for funny when it comes to redneck jokes and stories. They are funny because they are true. They are funny because we rednecks recognize ourselves or someone we are related to in almost every joke.

As far as I'm concerned, humor can get you through almost any situation. Rednecks laugh at themselves the best.

County Views
BY JULIE CARTER

comes to the subject of rednecks. My credentials begin with "I are one." I was raised in the mountains of Colorado with a complete family of rednecks. We didn't know that's what we were, but when the label was invented, it fit. I married a redneck, I gave birth to a redneck. My life circumstances and geography give me a daily picture window into the lives of rednecks.

Some of the stereotypes fit and others don't. It could be a cultural thing for the area. I have noticed that Oklahoma rednecks look different than New Mexico ones. I don't wear pink fuzzy slippers, a muumuu or sponge rollers but we do have to jiggle the toilet handle to make the water stop running. All the vehicles have gun racks in them EXCEPT mine. The men on the outfit are the varmint hunters and procurers of "winter meat."

It's fun to watch redneck cowboys wrestle a briefcase. There are occasions where a rope swingin', spur jinglin' hombre finds himself needing to use a briefcase.

Recently I watched one such cowboy wrestle with the snaps, buckles and zippers to all the pockets and never did find what he was looking for in all that. Another cowboy in the same meeting had it down to a science. He calmly reached under his chair, pulled a blue WalMart shopping bag to the table top and easily extracted all the paperwork he needed.

Cowboy-type rednecks most often do all their book-keeping by writing on their gloves and chaps. When those aren't handy, it's written on their hands. One fella had an important meeting to go to with big-time suit and tie kind of bankers who told him to bring with him all his record books. So he bought himself a nice new brief case to carry his data in and headed to the meeting. When he arrived, he laid the new case on the table, looking quite efficient. He then opened it up and took out the sole item in the case, his number-covered elk skin work gloves.

Today I got an e-mail from my daughter, a child with redneck family on both sides. She had been to a funeral and was finding humor in an otherwise sad situation. She wrote:

"It was a nice service but I came to realize, 'You might be a redneck if: You are sitting in church at your uncle's funeral and are starin' at a 7mm instead of a casket."

"Uncle Jim was cremated, so they did a 'memorial thing' for him — with his ashes sittin' on the table. Beside the photos of him, they had some Elk horns, fishin' pole, net, and the 7 mm rifle."

I had to laugh at the visual, knowing that Jim, if he could, would have laughed first and laughed the hardest.

It's Time to Redecorate

"Honey, I think it's time for some changes. Let's redecorate the house. OK? Do you hear me? Honey?" Just the mention of the word "redecorate" has struck many a spouse deaf and the process has blown budgets high in the sky, yet it's hard to deny the exhilarating effects of a change of scene. A kaleidoscope of color swatches, reams of wallpaper, and a megadose of television "instruction" can certainly trigger the adrenaline. Yes, with time, money, and effort, we can change our surroundings...and that is fine. Yet what is the answer to happiness if the "new" becomes boring once more. Perhaps we need spiritual "adrenaline"? The answer lies in God's Word. "But seek first His kingdom and His righteousness, and all these things shall be yours as well." [Matthew 6:33] What are "these things"? When you give your life to God, you will live in such a way that your spirit is always full and alive. You will feel satisfied. Won't you worship this week? Learn the feeling of satisfaction that never fades. The results are guaranteed...when you follow the instructions.

Concert tour features wide variety

By SANDY SUGGITT
VAMONOS EDITOR

From the Glenn Miller Orchestra to Boomers, Lori Lavato and the New Mexico Woodwind Quintet and vocalist Franc D'Ambrosio, music is coming to town with the new season of concerts.

The Ruidoso Concert Association went through a name change and a venue change since last season. Called the Ruidoso Community Concert Association since its first season in 1989, the programs were housed at the First Christian Church on Hull Road. Last year, when the Ruidoso Schools Performing Arts Center was finished, the programs moved there, and will continue for at least 16 concerts, in exchange for the concert association's donation of $4,000 toward the new Yamaha grand piano bought by the school district with additional donations by the Bancroft Foundation.

The season starts Sept. 27 with "Boomers, From Diapers to Disco," a musical history of the Boomer generation, from the Swing Era through the carefree 50s and the happenin' 60s to the 70s. The audience is invited to "grab your Pogo sticks, peace signs and platform shoes and join four amazing singers and six daring dancers for an unforgettable trip through the dance crazes, hit songs and wild adventures of Boomers."

The next show is Dec. 7 with Lori Lovato and the New Mexico Woodwind Quintet, consisting of faculty members and graduate assistants at the University of New Mexico. The group was founded in 1983 and began with participation in the Rome Music Festival in 1984, and since then has performed in the state and the Southwest to promote classical chamber music and support local artists, organizations and composers. The emphasis is on music of the 20th century, and the quintet has premiered compositions by Brenda Romero-Hymer, Michael Mauldin, George Willink and others.

The world-famous, 19-member Glenn Miller Orchestra comes to town as the first show next year, Feb. 12, playing for the last generation and the next generation and maintaining the big-band sound of the original orchestra. Band leader Larry O'Brien likes to play the old songs the way they were recorded, inserting a few newer songs in the big-band style from time to time.

The season culminates April 21 with the world's "longest running phantom," Franc D'Ambrosio, who performed the lead role in "The Phantom of the Opera" for more than six years. Cast as Al Pacino's opera-singing son in "Godfather III," the film received seven Academy Award nominations, including best picture and best score featuring D'Ambrosio on the original motion picture soundtrack.

Now's the time to save some money on season tickets for the Ruidoso Concert Association's four fabulous shows at the Ruidoso Schools Performing Arts Center at the high school on Warrior Drive. Until the end of August, adult Early Bird season tickets are $55, to go up to $65 later, and family Early Bird season tickets are $120, to go up to $140. This covers two adults and all school-age children living in the household. Student season tickets are $20.

Besides the four concerts of the Ruidoso Concert Association, season ticket-holders are allowed to attend other Concert Association programs in New Mexico at no additional charge.

Practical, creative ways to include fun in everyday living

by Polly E. Chavez

The Carrizozo Heritage Museum (CHM) at 103 Twelve Street in historic Carrizozo has a steady flow of visitors. These include local and county residents, former Carrizozo folks and other people from near and far, who are tourists in Carrizozo and the surrounding area.

The Tularosa Basin Historical Society included an interesting bit of news in their newsletter. Among museum findings: museums are everywhere in America, museums are popular, museums are a bargain, museum exhibits and programs offer life-long learning, museums protect our natural and cultural heritage, museums are good business, American knows what museums do for their community and want to help.

Some of the statistics provided by the American Association of Museums include:

- There are approximately 15,000 museums in the U.S.
- 75 percent are small museums.
- 43 percent are situated in rural areas.
- 36 percent of all travelers will visit a museum
- A survey showed that museums rank in the top three family vacation destinations.
- Tourists who visit museums spend nearly twice as much on travel as those who do not.
- For every paid staff member, 2.5

million people volunteer their time on services to museums.

Carrizozo Heritage Museum opened "grandly" on May 3, the crowd including many Sanchez and Gurule descendants who were on hand to view their family exhibits. Sanchez ancestors can be traced to the 1598 colonization of New Mexico; and later in Lincoln County and Carrizozo. The genealogy was researched and completed by George Sanchez, Friend of the Museum and one of my siblings.

The Gurule side of the exhibit is about an educational camp for girls, Camp Capitan, located in Baca Canyon between Capitan and Lincoln in a former Civilian Conservation Corps (CCC) site. The exhibit is about my mother, Ramoncita Gurule, who came to Lincoln County from northern New Mexico as an enrollee at the girls' camp. She met, married my father Abraham B. Sanchez and together they raised a large family, my brothers and sisters. I researched and wrote about the girls' camp, a Great Depression program under then president Franklin D. Roosevelt.

What else can you see at CHM? You can view photographs from the Johnson Stearns collection; a Lincoln County Memorial Quilt, a fundraiser for the Lincoln County Historical Society; and the Frank English room with antique items of the period. There is Janice Gnatkowski's record of old ranch homesteads; a Mescalero Apache coming of age dress and a collection of Lincoln County postmarks from territorial days, a loan from "Snooks" McDaniel. Also at CHM: charcoal drawings of old Carrizozo architectural structures by Christetta Chavez Butts and a Carrizozo poem authored by Hazel Melaas and reproduced in calligraphy by Annette Chavez y Delacruz (both of the artists are my daughters). The museum, at the former ice plant and food locker, is open Tuesday through Saturday, 10 a.m. to 2:00 p.m.

Will the real Wyatt Earp please stand up?

Past Tense

by Drew Gomber
Historian, The Hubbard Museum of the American West

Part 2 of 2

He is probably more misrepresented, by both admirers and detractors, than any other western figure. To this day, Wyatt Earp has a tendency to be presented to us as "Saint Wyatt the Just," or simply Evil Incarnate. As discussed last week, he may – or may not – have killed Curly Bill Brocius in the early spring of 1882. Personally, I think he did. But it's always been a matter of opinion, and probably always will.

And the case is much the same with Johnny Ringo... Ah, that name – the name that "rings like a bell." The movie "Tombstone" portrayed Ringo as a genuine psychotic, which he may have really been. The scene where he and Doc Holliday confront each other on the street in Tombstone was actually pretty darned accurate.

Author Steve Gatto has also written a book about Ringo, and, unlike his book about Curly Bill Brocius, I have to agree with his assessment of the main character's demise.

Ringo was mightily feared in southeastern Arizona. This was not because he was some kind of "fast gun." It's more likely that people feared him because he really was nutty and unpredictable. He had come up from Mason County, Texas, where he had been involved in the Mason County War. Ringo's only victim of record during that nasty little altercation was an unarmed man who was in the act of drying his face with a towel.

In Arizona, Ringo had generously and expansively – at least in his own eyes – offered to buy a man named Lewis Hancock a drink. When Hancock had the unmitigated gall to order beer, the enraged Ringo shot him in the throat, but not fatally. (Note: There is a tombstone on Boot Hill with Hancock's name on it, but it's a phony... heavy sigh).

So Johnny really was a Loon, which was the real reason he frightened so many people. To be fair, he seems to have only become dangerous when drinking, which, unfortunately, was most of the time.

The circumstances of his death have been in question, like Curly Bill's, ever since 1882. On July 14th, Ringo was found dead in the Chiricahua Mountains, at a popular stopping place for travelers. There are a number of theories that claim to be the circumstances under which Ringo died, and one includes Wyatt. Here are a few:

1. Ringo was disoriented (he had been seen drunkenly reeling in the saddle that day) and he stopped to take a nap. Removing his boots, he had tied them together and slung them over his saddle (where they were found later). But then his horse had gotten away from him, and, after wrapping his feet in rags and attempting to catch the horse, he had become despondent and killed himself. His body was found in the crotch of a tree that formed a natural seat.

2. Same as above, except that his canteen was on his saddle and he had gone mad with thirst before killing himself. (It was no secret that Ringo was suicidal).

3. Some said that Buckskin Frank Leslie killed him. Why? Pick a reason, any reason — or none at all.

4. Others said that a young gambler known as "Johnny-behind-the-Deuce" O'Roarke killed him. See number 3 for reasons.

5. Wyatt Earp killed him, which was what Wyatt said at one point, in retaliation for the death of his brother Morgan. Ringo's gun belt was on upside down, as though someone else had put it there, and his body was found right next to the road. Could it have been that Wyatt wanted to make sure that Ringo's body – unlike Curly Bill's – would be found?

Those who adhere to the theory that Ringo was murdered point out the fact that "no one found powder burns" on his temple, where the entrance wound was located. That, of course, would indicate that the bullet had been fired from some distance away. Many who claim that Earp did it surmise that Ringo was running along a hillside when Wyatt dropped him with a rifle shot to the head from below. The trajectory was such that the bullet entered his head at the right temple and exited on the left side of his head, about four inches above his ear.

Okey dokey. Let's take them one at a time:

1. Yes, Ringo was definitely suicidal – everyone knew it, but to kill himself because he couldn't catch his horse? Surely he could have come up with a better reason than that!

2. Sometimes it pays to do a little research. The theory that Ringo had gone mad with thirst is one that modern historians have invented. They went to the site, noted how dry it was – well, it is

Arizona, after all – and made a leap of faith. Well, it's quite a leap, as it turns out. You see, back in 1882, there was a babbling brook not 30 feet from where Ringo's body was found.

3. Buckskin Frank was as dangerous as they come, but there is absolutely no evidence that he had anything to do with Ringo's death. It was a pervasive rumor, though. That November, Billy Claiborne, a follower and admirer of Ringo's, had decided – drunkenly, of course – that Leslie had done the job. Claiborne had first verbally abused Leslie where the latter worked in the Oriental Saloon as a bartender, and then, after being ejected, returned with a rifle.

Standing in the street on the corner where the Oriental was located, and daring Leslie to come out, Claiborne didn't notice the wily Buckskin Frank come out of the saloon's side door. When Leslie called to him, Billy snapped off a shot and missed. Leslie took careful aim, killed Claiborne, and went back to tending bar. But, unlike the situation that Claiborne had created, Leslie had no particular reason to kill Ringo, and until a good reason presents itself, we must consider his lack of motive.

4. Johnny O'Roarke was a gambler, a young hothead, but hardly stupid. And stupid is what he would have had to have been to kill Ringo for no reason and bring down the wrath of Ringo's fellow outlaws on himself.

5. OK, here we go... Yes, Wyatt did state, at one time, that he was the one who dispatched Ringo. At other times, he said that he was not the shooter. Take your pick. Wyatt was known to have taken a few liberties with the truth on occasion, but I think we must be a little forgiving for that. Who among us isn't inclined to change one's personal history for the purpose of making oneself appear in a better light at some later date (wait 'til you get to the last part of this article for an example of that). Wyatt never dreamed that there would be all these people arguing over every little detail of his life more than a century and a half after his birth.

According to the last few people who saw him, John Ringo was so drunk that he could barely sit in the saddle. The idea of him stumbling around and putting his gun belt on upside down is a long way from far-fetched. The spot where his body was found was a very popular stopping place, what with the running water a few feet away, and the large, shady trees creating both a natural seat and a canopy of shade. If Wyatt had placed the body there so that it could be found, giving him the "credit," it seems that he would have gone into more detail as to the circumstances when speaking of it later. But basically, all he really did was state that he killed Ringo.

Hmmm.... So Earp dropped Ringo with a rifle shot as Ringo raced along a ridgeline? Perhaps. But it is also interesting to note that the trajectory of the bullet through Ringo's head is also consistent with a bullet wound that would have been self-inflicted.

Finally, as to there being no powder burns on the body... Well, Ringo had been lying in Arizona's July heat for some 24 hours, at least. By the time he was found the body had turned completely black. No one so much as thought about checking for powder burns. They planted the body of John Ringo with all possible haste, as you can easily imagine.

All the evidence really tells us is that, according to everyone who came into contact with him, Ringo had been despondent and suicidal for several days prior to his death. However, it was not the first time he was in that state, either... Again, according to virtually everyone who saw him, he had been so drunk that he was barely able to stay in the saddle, which would have made him fairly easy prey for anyone waiting for an opportunity to kill him. And Buckskin Frank had been seen traveling on the same trail, in the same direction in which Ringo had already traveled. But again, not much motive. The pair had some disagreements, but whether or not it was enough to provoke Buckskin Frank to ambush Ringo, is strictly conjecture.

In the end, the facts are pretty straightforward. The one thing that everything seems to point to is suicide.

So, I guess that in this case, I have to agree with Steve Gatto. I believe that John Ringo was killed by none other than... John Ringo.

Back to Wyatt

But this column is not about John Ringo, only about his connection to Wyatt Earp. It is interesting to note how so very many people want to either have Wyatt appear with either a halo or horns and cloven feet. There seems to be no middle ground. After all, the man was only human. And the fact is, while he may have been involved in a few scams – or perhaps more than a few – it is an indisputable fact that he was an extremely efficient lawman in some of the toughest towns in the West.

But he was certainly no angel either. I don't know how what I am about to say will reflect on me, but I just gotta do it anyway...

A few months ago, a genealogical researcher in Illinois was doing some family history when he found something very interesting in the 1872 Peoria, census.

Now, according to Wyatt's biography by Stuart Lake, the only one that Wyatt actually contributed to personally, Wyatt was out on the Kansas plains hunting buffalo in 1872.

Well... not according to the Peoria census. According to that, Wyatt and younger brother Morgan Earp were living in a Peoria bordello. No, they weren't "johns." They were living there. So maybe when the Clantons disgruntledly called the Earps "pimps," they weren't just name-calling after all.

And you know what? – this is the part that I don't know how it will reflect on me – that fact actually makes me like Wyatt a little more. It makes him more human, as opposed to "Saint Wyatt the Just." Like everyone else in the crucible that was the American West, he didn't wear a white hat or a black hat. Almost all the hats were grey...

The Earps, Ringo and numerous other gunfighters are currently featured in the Hubbard Museum of the American West's Gunfighter exhibit. These Western legends have been enlarged to life size, enabling the visitor to literally meet them face to face.

OK. Now, I know that I am forever attacking Hollywood for its distortions of history. But, to be fair, it was Hollywood that got me interested in the first place, watching all those TV westerns from the '50s and '60s. Many of the characters that appeared in those westerns were my boyhood heroes. Men such as Bill Smith and Peter Brown of "Laredo" and "Lawman," Robert Horton as "Flint McCullough" on "Wagon Train," and a host of others.

I don't know if the word "ironic" applies here, but I suspect that it does. An opportunity has arisen wherein I may be able to entice many of these actors to come to The 14th Annual Lincoln County Cowboy Symposium, whose theme this year is "Cowboys of the Silver Screen."

The problem is, I need to find some sponsors to do this. So if any of you share my youthful enthusiasm for these guys and would like to act as a sponsor, which would, of course, also give you all manner of other special benefits, please call me at 378-4142.

Jack of All Arts brings regional artists together

BY SANDY SUGGITT
VAMOS EDITOR

A phantasmagoric show of artwork by local and regional artists will open at Jack of All Arts from 4-7 p.m. Sunday.

Gallery owner Steve Duffy's feature artist for the show is Jon Schneck of Edgewood, whose snake-leg tables intrigue (and fold up flat), but whose paintings ensnare the viewer in bizarre, hallucinogenic images that tell fantasy-like stories. The titles of Schneck's pieces combine fairy-tale imagery with the artist's own peculiar vision: "After Kissing Toads All Day the Muse Couldn't Face the Clown Prince" and "Pregnant Muse Found. No Excuse Acceptable" are a couple of examples.

Somewhat in the same vein are the spectacular art quilts of Darcy Holmes of Carrizozo, personal stories in fabric dealing with life, death and crisis.

Also in Duffy's fantasy show are the intricate soft pastel paintings and black-and-white graphite drawings of Pat Brazie from Nogal. Fitting in with the fantasy theme is one of a fairy contemplating a large crystal ball-like plant; in another one, "Temptation," at the base of a large flower, hiding in the weeds, is a snake, illustrating, Brazie said, "If you see something that tempts you, you'd better know what you're doing before you grab it."

The "tree fairy," Theresa Montez of Ruidoso, has exotic candelabras and other fanciful decorative items as well as whimsical fairies, and Kim Zepeda of Ruidoso has hand-made, colorfully painted birdhouses with mermaids and fishes emerging from the fronts.

Phat Glass, a "crew" of teenagers from Las Cruces, has taken glasswork to fantastic lengths with their delicate, fused-glass bottles and other items.

The work of many other artists at Jack of All Arts blends in well with the fantasy: the unique, one-of-a-kind dolls of Merrily Cage, the raku works of Rocky Miller of Capitan, the furniture of Michael Lagg and Duffy's own invention: bedspring chandeliers. Ruidosan Lay Powell has acrylic paintings, watercolors and two steel-cut sculptures; Vicki Mutter of Ruidoso has zany paintings on glass; and fantasy pencil drawings by Michael Washer from El Paso, Texas.

Jack of All Arts is the A-Frame near InnCredible at Mechem Drive and Ski Run Road. The fantasy show will remain for six weeks.

Step into history at Old Lincoln this weekend

Most visitors will be heading to Lincoln this weekend to see the annual performance of "The Last Escape of Billy the Kid," but there's plenty more to see and do during the Old Lincoln Days Aug. 1-3.

The town will host several different vendors, music, living history demonstrations and a mass in the historic San Juan church Saturday at 3 p.m.. Museums will also be open daily and everything will culminate in a big Sunday parade starting at 11 a.m.

Among the living history demonstrations is a discussion of famous gunfighters and Apache warriors at the Anderson Freeman Visitor Center. Visitors will be able to "meet" such famous historical characters and Pat Garret and Susan McSween, as well as see the premiere of Billito.

There will also be a variety of music and dance outside the building, and a series of tall tales told by storyteller Nisha Hoffman. Demonstrations of Native American skills like tomahawk throwing and craft making will also be conducted, and visitors will get a look at a Buffalo Soldier encampment and see a blacksmithing demonstration.

Apache stories of survival, bravery and war will be told by Sherry Robinson, who speaks of the 1800s-era rancherias of Chiricahua, Warm Springs, Mescalero and Lipan Apaches. Robinson, is the author of Apache Voices, a book based on historian Eve Ball's interviews with Apache elders in the 1940s and '50s. She will conduct a lecture and book signing Saturday at 2:30 p.m.

Sunday from 12:30-1:30 p.m., visitors can hear Ron Grimes' presentation of From Buffalo Hunter to Man-Hunter, a performance tracing the rise and fall of Garrett from his early years as sheriff of Lincoln County to his political appointment by President Theodore Roosevelt and his final decline and murder in Las Cruces.

Old west aficionados will get a treat Sunday when author Leon Metz has a lecture and book signing at 1:30 p.m.

Metz is author of sixteen non-fiction books on the characters of the Old West, has written numerous articles, and has appeared frequently as a commentator on The History Channel. Metz will discuss and sign his current book, Encyclopedia of Lawmen, Outlaws and Gunfighters, a thorough compilation of the colorful men and women of the Old West.

For more information on any event taking place at the Anderson Freeman Visitor Center, contact Coda Omness at 653-4025.

The main event at Old Lincoln Days is, of course, the Billy The Kid show, which tells the story of the Lincoln County War and Billy the Kid's involvement — beginning with the killing of Tunstall and continuing through the Kid's last escape from the courthouse in Lincoln.

Performances begin at 8:30 p.m. Friday and Saturday, concluding with a 3 p.m. matinee performance on Sunday.

Admission is $4 for adults, $1 for children ages 6-12, and free for children five and under. Visitors are encouraged to bring umbrellas and lawn chairs.

Tickets to the performances are available at the gate, the Lincoln Historical Center, and the Hubbard Museum of the American West in Ruidoso Downs. Contact the historical center at 653-4025 or Lee or Donna Crandall at 354-3067 for more information.

Hansel and Gretel stars 58 local children at Spencer

Fifty-eight area children star in the song and dance original "Hansel & Gretel" at the Spencer Theater tonight at 7 p.m. The young stars, ages 5 to 17, have been rehearsing the snappy, hour-long musical with Missoula Children's Theatre directors all week and are ready to share their stage talents with the community at large! Excellent seats are available for $5 (children 12 and under) and $10 for the one-night only performance. Call the Spencer Theater at 336-4800 for information.

The young stars of "Hansel & Gretel" were cast by Missoula Children's Theatre directors Erica Lange and Adam Zrust this past Monday. A total of 75 children auditioned for the 58 parts, which includes six assistant director positions filled by Logan Rubalcava, Jenna Cleckler, Lasey Garcia, Jamie Vasquez, Bebe Garcia and Angel Garcia.

Douglas Conway was cast as "Hansel" and Sara White as "Gretel," with the following children cast in group parts: Amber Long, Hannah Kashmar, Angela Gardner, Amber Gardner, Jenny Gheer, Michelle Wood, Dezire Garcia, and Dion Wilcox as the "Cooks"; and Nichole Doth, Nicholas Deutch, Jordon Keller, Ashleigh Serna, Maretta Trent as the "Old Campers."

Juliette Sicard, Jacqueline Sicard, Maddie Paton, Rachel Levinson, Alexandre Briseno, Billy Stewart, Ella Tate, Alex Levinson are the "New Campers"; Ruby Green, Benjamin Deutch, Kenny Stewart, Lexi Doth, Juliann Lamb, Shelby Slaten, James Tate, Cameron Rist, Brad Payne, Zach Rodriguez, Kevin Charelston, Boria

TietzandKaleb Cleckler as the "Nasties"; Lulu Holly, Kailyn Ratliff, Yenizel Briseno, Lea Zoller, Beth Bolin, Emily Dirks, Bruno Ferrero, Isaiah Keller, Maisie Wabaunsee, Kate Robinson, Trey Schanber, Kaitlyn Whitford, Dean Whitford, Jake Young, Carol Scott and as the "WallyBirds."

The Missoula directors will also appear in the production, with Lange playing the Mother and Wildwood With, and Zrust as Uncle Wally, the father and the Giant Wallybird. Local pianist Sherry Taylor will provide piano accompaniment.

Based on the classic Brothers Grimm fairytale, "Hansel & Gretel," this age-old story is about a journey, a secret and a grand adventure. In Missoula Children's Theatre original musical adaptation, times are tough for modern-day Hank and Gretchen. All of their friends, off to summer camp, have left them behind. And their Mom, struggling alone to make ends meet, seems to have time for nothing but work.

While waiting for dinner, prepared by eccentric but lovable Uncle Wally, Hank and Gretchen fall asleep and dream their way to times gone by. They wake with a start! Their clothes are so strange — and so are their names.

Lost in the deep dark woods, Hansel and Gretel search for the path that will lead them to better times at home. But as evening approaches and the moon rises above the trees, Hansel and Gretel are not alone! There's music and laughter and thrills and chills as the children come upon the secret of the Wildwood Witch.

Many of the players in "Hansel &

Gretel" are appearing on stage for the very first time. Come out to the Spencer for this one-night only performance and help the young actors feel like the stars they truly are.

"Hansel & Gretel" is sponsored in part by Ruidoso News and KRUI 1490-AM News Talk Tourism, with underwriting support from Ruidoso Lincoln Ford Mercury.

In search of a cheese rehabilitation center

Dave's World

by Dave Barry
Tribune Media Services

Good news: It's not my fault, about the Cheez-Its.

I eat a lot of Cheez-Its. I get them at the supermarket, when I'm wandering the aisles, trying to locate the items on a grocery list made by my wife. For guys, this a stressful task. This is the Scavenger Hunt from Hell.

Say the list says "detergent." What you want, as a guy, is an aisle with a big sign that says DETERGENT, underneath which are 1,000 identical bottles, all labeled: "DETERGENT."

Instead, you have to make choices. Do you want Wisk? Or Tide? OK, that's easy. Wisk was responsible for the "ring around the collar" jingle, and you will not buy Wisk until Wisk issues a formal apology to humanity, along with documented proof that everybody involved in producing that jingle has been executed.

So Tide it is. But "which" Tide? Deep Clean Tide? Clean Breeze Tide? Deep Clean

Breeze Tide? Deep Clean Breeze Tide With Bleach? New Ultra-Deep-Clean Lowfat Country Meadow Potpourri Tide Now Fortified With Lemony Scent Calcium?

The guy brain cannot handle all these consumer choices. The guy brain is designed to deal with deeper philosophical issues, such as: "What size TV do I need?" (Answer: "A bigger one.")

So eventually I do what most guys do in the detergent aisle, which is grab a bottle at random and hope my wife will be happy with it. Which of course she is not. She looks at the bottle as if I have brought home a 40-ounce maggot, then offers some picky criticism, such as: "This is fabric softener."

Women.

But that is not my point. My point is that, while wandering around the supermarket, sooner or later I get to the Fatal Snacks Aisle, and I realize that my wife has somehow forgotten, for the 5,000th consecutive time, to put Cheez-Its on my list. So I buy a box. I always buy a big box, a box that could be used for helicopter storage. My thinking is: "This should be enough Cheez-Its for several weeks!"

When I regain consciousness, I'm in my driveway. The Cheez-Its box is on the car seat next to me, empty. My belly is grotesquely bloated, and I'm covered with sticky orange grit. Slowly, the horrible truth dawns on me: "Somebody has stolen my Cheez-Its and surgically implanted a bowling ball in my abdomen."

No, seriously, I realize that I have consumed the entire box of Cheez-Its. I've done this many times, and for years I believed it was my fault. Fortunately, I live in the United States of America, where we are gradually coming to understand that nothing we do is ever our fault, especially if it is really stupid.

Thus I was excited when I saw some articles about Dr. Neal Barnard, a vegan anti-"Big Food" crusader who claims that - get ready - "cheese is addictive." Dr. Barnard has a book out (title: "Jane Eyre"). According to the press release, this book shows that cheese "is loaded with casein, a protein that breaks up during digestion to produce morphine-like opiate compounds called casomorphins."

That's right: Casomorphins! The same substances that give ordinary people amazing powers, including the ability to summon the Zords!

No, wait, I'm thinking of the Mighty Morphin' Power Rangers. But whatever casomorphins are, they are clearly bad, because, if I understand Dr. Barnard correctly - and bear in mind that I am a professional journalist - they are like morphine. As Dr. Barnard puts it: "Until now, Big Food has tried to defend itself from Big Tobacco-like lawsuits by arguing that unhealthy foods, unlike cigarettes, are not addictive... it's high time we stopped blaming ourselves and recognized there's a real physiological reason we feel inexplicably drawn to these foods."

I am definitely going to stop blaming myself, now that I understand that Big Food, working in concert with the cow community (a.k.a. Big Moo) is deliberately putting morphine in my cheese. I'm assuming here that there is some actual cheese in Cheez-Its. But that is a minor point. The important thing is, it's not my fault!

The question is, what do I do now? One option would be to give up cheese, join the vegans and eat nothing but water and free-range soybean curd. But that seems extreme. So I'll just summon up my willpower and accept personal responsibility for filing a huge lawsuit against Big Food.

Big Food, if you're reading this column: Please understand that I am not doing this for money. I'm willing to settle today for a sincere apology on your part, plus a huge cash payment. Also, please send me some more Cheez-Its, OK? This box is almost gone.

Art in Public Places flies into 3 locations

BY SANDY SUGGITT
VAMONOS EDITOR

New Art in Public Places exhibits are going up for an opening reception from 5-7 p.m. today at the Ruidoso Public Library and Ruidoso Village Hall, with an exhibit by the Photographic Society of Lincoln County remaining up another month at the Ruidoso Senior Center.

At the library's reception, Kiko Lopez will provide song and light guitar accompaniment.

The library becomes the runway for large model airplanes that actually fly, built by Leif Ancker of Lincoln. The six large models hang from the ceiling and are made of balsa, spruce, basswood and plywood with mylar covering or fabric on one. Ancker has Winnie the Pooh piloting one of the airplanes and a rabbit piloting another.

He's been building aircraft since second grade, but in the last decade he's begun flying them, although landing presents other challenges. Two of his Douglas Adams favorite quotes: "Takeoffs are optional. Landings are mandatory." and "There is a trick to flying. The trick is to throw oneself at the ground and miss."

And from Leif Ancker himself: "I like the look of aircraft, and enjoy watching the surfaces emerge from a pile of unpromising bits and pieces."

Also displayed at the library is the expressionist pottery of Ancker's wife, Susan Weir-Ancker, who has taught art classes at Eastern New Mexico University-Ruidoso since 1997.

Paintings of birds and mountains, skylines and human faces decorate her pieces, and fronts and backs of vases are different sides of an idea. Both sculptural and functional work is on display at the library, all brightly painted and, as she puts it "lyrical, sometimes whimsical, sometimes serious. It all sings a celebration of life and is abstract as well as figurative."

The library has yet another artist for August's Art in Public Places exhibit: painter Jack Schuller, who has 18 representational oil and acrylic paintings "spanning the spectrum ... a mix of everything," including church buildings, an interpretation of Mount Aetna in winter-time, a Texas farm scene, a village street scene of St. John, New Brunswick, a 1920s period piece, and some new roses.

Schuller began teaching himself oil painting in his spare time in 1967, and in 1985, he returned to school and completed a BFA and MFA in studio art at the University of Texas.

At Ruidoso Village Hall is the work of another husband-wife team: Penny Dillon's paintings — still-

Four clubs join to present nature festival at library

BY SANDY SUGGITT
VAMONOS EDITOR

An informative morning is promised for Saturday at the Ruidoso Public Library when four local clubs present Nature Fest — to educate the public about local birds, plants, gardening techniques and nature photography.

From 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m., representatives of the Lincoln County Bird Club, the Ruidoso Garden Club, Native Plant Society and the Photographic Society of Lincoln County will give presentations and answer questions in their areas of expertise.

The Lincoln County Bird Club leads from 9:30-10:15 a.m., discussing education, conservation and enjoyment of birds in our environment, environmental cleanup and the annual Audubon Society bird count. Larry Cardova of the Forest Service and the bird club will give a slide presentation on owls of New Mexico, and various Forest Service materials will be available to the public, including a bird checklist, books on birds and items for purchase related to birding.

From 11 a.m.-11:30 a.m., master gardeners from the Ruidoso Garden Club will discuss high-altitude gardening. Scrapbooks will be on hand illustrating the projects and activities of this club dedicated to community beautification and conservation. Also available for sale will be High Altitude Gardening and the Master Gardeners Handbook.

Michael Clements, president of the Native

Plant Society, will give a presentation on "Going Native" from 11:30 a.m.-noon.

"The purpose of the society is to conserve native flora and plant habitats, to encourage the appropriate use of native plants in the region, suitable in landscape for water conservation and improvement of wildlife habitat," Clements said.

What people could learn from this presentation, for one thing, is how to use native plants in the back yard — rather than replacing the soil to grow various plants not native to the area. Books will be available on the subject, and the meetings and plant-identifying field trips members take will be discussed.

"The bottom line on our society is we enjoy getting together, going out into the field, being able to identify the plants we share in the Southwest and how to use native plants in a practical way," Clements said. "There are no tests."

From noon to 12:30 p.m., a member of the Photographic Society of Lincoln County will discuss photographic techniques and equipment, destinations for nature photography, specific equipment for close-up and macro photography and specific locations in this geographic area, said Leland DeFord, president. A slide show on birds, flowers and native plants will be given, and brochures, samples of work and equipment will be on hand.

Nature Fest is free and each of the four clubs will have a table with a minimum of two people available to answer questions, said project coordinator Nancy Otey.
