Master plan zones in on density

■ 'In-fill' to handle growth

BY DIANNE STALLINGS
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

Trying to accommodate projected population growth over the next 20 years in Ruidoso will require either annexation or in-fill, or a combination of the two approaches, says the village planning director.

After reviewing potential areas for annexation listed in a proposed Comprehensive Plan being developed by Design Workshop of Santa Fe, members of the village Planning and Zoning Commission directed head planner Charles Rennick to recommend compressing the time period for all annexation to under five years and to include U.S. 70 in the initial thrust.

Next they turned their attention to redevelopment of existing portions of the village, but postponed any recommendations until they have time to absorb details. They continued the hearing until their meeting Nov. 16.

Rennick explained that the plan separates the village into two parts. The northeastern section covers areas such as White Mountain, Indian Hills and Country Club subdivisions.

"That's all platted into single-family residential lots, many built on high price tags and the area will continue to fill in with more of the same," he said. "It's not suitable for getting rid of houses and putting in something else. We should take that area out of the mix."

The southern portion of the village presents an opportunity for some change, Rennick said. That section includes Ponderosa Heights, Brady Canyon, Town and Country and

Although Lincoln County Republicans flexed their political muscle and ensured wins for their local candidates, a few races Tuesday showed some tough competition.

Democrat Patsy Sanchez, county planner and an advocate of zoning for controlled growth, won 42.7 percent of the vote for the District 1 County Commission position (822 votes) that includes Carrizozo, a portion of Capitan and the ranching community to the north.

But that wasn't enough to win over Republican Eileen Lovelace, a long-time Carrizozo town council member, who pulled 53.7 percent, 1,033 votes.

While Republican Tom Battin easily took the District 3 County Commission seat, primarily centered in Ruidoso, with 76.8 percent of the vote (1,441 votes), Libertarian Tony Seno received 23.2 percent (436 votes), a surprising number for a minority party candidate to pull.

Seno, a frequent speaker at commission meetings and sessions on other community issues, heads the local Libertarian Party and is regional representative.

Lovelace said Thursday she was pleased with the solid voter turnout.

"I look forward to working with the other commissioners and learning about how county government functions," she said. "Even if you have lived here all of your life, (being elected county commissioner) is a chance to really get to know your county."

Sanchez said the vote brought home how

Gov. Richardson: New Mexico was big winner nationally

BY WALTER RUBEL
SANTA FE BUREAU CHIEF

Gov. Bill Richardson said both Sen. Kerry and President Bush ran strong races, and declined to speculate on what he could have done differently to help the challenger.

"I worked very hard," he said. "I attended rallies. I was in TV ads. I campaigned very vigorously in every county for him. I did everything I could. I'm exhausted."

Richardson brushed aside questions about his own national political ambitions.

"I am interested in two things," he said. "One is the legislative session. This is going to be the most important one we've ever had. It'll be the last 60-day session before my re-election. The second event that I'm interested in is running for re-election. That's my whole interest."

Richardson said New Mexico was the "big winner" in the election Tuesday.

"We got unprecedented publicity," he said. "We established ourselves as major players in the presidential contest. We had over 70 visits by presidential hopefuls. We had unprecedented attention. Hundreds of New Mexicans were hired to work in this campaign, and this brought major economic impact."

He said New Mexico had the highest turnout ever, including tens of thousands of new voters. Those new voters included Native Americans, who Richardson said for the first time participated fully in the election.

And, he said, both President Bush and Sen. Kerry now have a better grasp of the issues that are important to New Mexico and the West.

Mescalero rejects protest candidates

Voters turnout on the Mescalero Apache Reservation adjoining Ruidoso jumped significantly from the primary election Tuesday with 868 tribal members casting their ballots for four contested seats on the tribal council.

"I'm impressed that the people are getting involved with their right to vote..."

Oliver Enjady
tribal councilor

Emerging with the highest number of votes was Raymond Kirgan, a former tribal council member and an elder of the tribe, with 583 votes.

He was followed by incumbent Alfred La Paz, who is with security at the Inn of the Mountain Gods. La Paz garneered 498 votes.

Incumbent Larry Shay, an artist, received 458 votes and former tribal vice president and council member, artist Oliver Enjady, won a seat on the council with 455 votes.

"Based on the number of voters who showed up, I'm impressed that the people are getting involved with their right to vote for their choices," Enjady said Thursday.

"I'm honored and grateful that I again have been chosen to represent them."

Shay said he wanted to thank voters for their confidence in him.

"Hopefully, I will continue to address and uphold their interests to their satisfaction," he said.

"I will strive to give fair judgments on major issues that concern the tribe and will continue to be at their service."

La Paz and Kirgan could not be reached for comment.

Protest fallout

Failing in their attempts to win a seat on the council were former council member Sandra Platero with 396 votes, incumbent Albert Platta Sr. with 336 votes, Christopher Little with 415 votes and Hazel Botella-Spottedbird with 361 votes.

The same four protested a change in background checking procedures initiated by the election board shortly before the general election.

Although they refused to authorize the additional check, their names remained on the ballot in line with a decision by the tribal council.

Village may purchase Web site

■ Council to consider

BY DIANNE STALLINGS
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

Following months of review and information gathering, Chuck Duncan said he concluded the best course for the village of Ruidoso would be to purchase the Web site called Ruidoso.net for $75,000.

That recommendation, funneled through the Lodgers Tax Committee, goes to the Village Council later this month for possible action.

"I've been working on this practically single-handedly for the past five months," said Duncan, owner of Whispering Pines Cabins in Upper Canyon and a Ruidoso Valley Chamber of Commerce board member.

Ruidoso.net was established nine years ago by some well-intentioned individuals, who recognized that the village needed a Web site at a time when village officials, the chamber of commerce, and a lot of other people didn't."

The Web site was built to be the official site of the village, Duncan said.

Dave Shultz said he started the site in 1995 and later brought in Dick Weber and Bruce Kernodle.

All three worked the site at no charge to the village for several years until health and family issues prompted Weber and Kernodle to step out, Shultz said Thursday. He assumed full responsibility.

"About two years ago when Dick and Bruce stepped down, I went to the lodgers tax committee and requested money because it was a full time job," Shultz said.

During the last village budget preparation process, Shultz requested $50,000 to run the Web site,

"My contract with the village ran out in July and the Village Council extended it for six months at the previous amount ($40,000 annually) through December," Shultz said.

The Ruidoso Valley Chamber of Commerce was used as the funding vehicle.

Duncan said Shultz and the lodgers tax group had different visions for the site.

"We wanted some changes and he dug in his heels and wanted to go another way," Duncan said.

The proposed $75,000 purchase "would be a one-time fee for the name and all of the features and Dave would then no longer be associated," Duncan said.

"When people look for things on the Internet, more than 80 percent of the hits are delivered through search engines."

Chuck Duncan
Ruidoso Valley C Of C

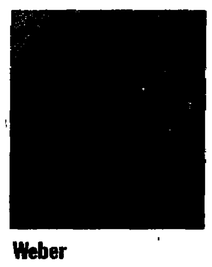
Lodgers Tax Committee member Bob Moroney, owner of West Winds, worked with assistant village attorney Zack Cook to create specifications for a request for proposals to hire someone to redesign and manage the Web site under a separate annual fee once it is owned by the village.

Duncan explained that buying another existing Ruidoso Web site or coming up with a new name could put the village at a disadvantage on Internet search engines for years.

"When people look for things on the Internet, more than 80 percent of the hits are delivered through search engines (such as Google or Yahoo)," Duncan said.

"Ninety-three percent of the people never get pass page two (of the dozens or even hundreds of pages that may be listed), so position is critical."

Duncan said the village could start a new site and pay to "spider up" the list on search engines, but it would be costly and take time. Another option is to buy sponsor spots, he said.



Weber

"It could be very expensive – two times the purchase price, and that's why I recommend buying a site already with a spidered spot," he said.

Ruidoso.net pops up on top of most search engines, and maintains that position based on the number of hits, he said. "It receives more than 400,000 clicks per month," he said.

Shultz said he also pays a fee for placement on search engines, but luckily is grandfathered under a system that is no longer used but still is honored. The cost is $55 a year and would be well worth that expense to the village, if it buys the site, he said.

"It's a minor expense when you consider the number of hits we receive," he said. People not under the old program may pay 30-cents for each click on a site and that could cost $50,000 a month.

The site needs a complete redesign, Duncan said. "Then the maintenance kicks in, updating what's happening each month and when new businesses come into the area," he said.

Duncan said his work is aimed simply at taking positive steps and moving forward.

Shultz said he hadn't intended to sell the site, but saw that some village councilors were preoccupied with the site being privately owned.

"Even though it served the community for more than nine years without any problems, they felt there could potentially be a problem," he said. "They wanted to purchase and I agreed to sell it to them with two stipulations. When we received the domain name from some guys in Utah, they said the site has to be a community Web site and that it couldn't be commercial with commercial advertising.

"We have links to businesses, but no advertising. It's a community Web site and serves all of Lincoln County. We have no restrictions on listings and no charge for listing. It's a free service."

PLAN: Village may 'densify' in some sections

Airport West subdivisions.

The future could bring a new zoning designation and type of development with mixed uses that include houses, townhouses, duplexes and commercial.

"It could lead to a more densely populated land use to accommodate growth," he said.

The proposed comprehensive plan deals with every neighborhood in the village, Rennick said, citing as an example Paradise Canyon with its steep slopes.

The plan proposes redevelopment into single-family housing, allowing guest houses, sometimes referred to as "granny flats."

But he emphasize that the plan is not designed to eliminate the current development as laid out.

"It's transitional," he said.

The village now has strict rules against two living structures on a single lot.

The Midtown area shows commercial spread two blocks wide from the Ruidoso River across Sudderth to Wingfield that would include commercial buildings with second and third floors for living quarters to "densify" the area, Rennick said.

The Gateway section of town is targeted for multi-family and commercial redevelopment. A heavily-used part of town, it includes the U.S 70 entry and is not suitable for single-family, he said. The highway corridor would remain commercial.

Camelot subdivision might entail trading multi-family development rights on steep slopes, not conducive for that type of construction, for more density in townhouses and duplexes on the flatter top portion of the terrain, Rennick said. The steep areas might be replatted into large single-family lots, confining construction to a smaller buildable portion.

Richards

Orville McAllister, president and co-owner of Homestead Development Co., told planning commission members he and his wife, Judith, own 62 acres on the flat portion of Camelot, mostly single-family lots.

He hoped to develop them into multi-family units just before the village council approved a moratorium in that subdivision because of the potentially high density and the village's inability to provide water.

During a hearing attended by McAllister two years ago, former village planning director Mike Runnels said when Camelot was planned and approved, village officials didn't anticipate the effects of drought and the growing demand for water that the village would face years later.

McAllister explained that Camelot Crown Estates Unit I is not part of his 62 acres and is starting to build out now. Unit II never went beyond a preliminary plat.

However, Units I and II were proposed and engineered at the same time, so water and sewer lines coming to the border of Unit II and roads were cut, but not built.

The zoning on most of his 62 acres is single-family residential with some multi-family on steep slopes down the mountain.

According to the proposed Comprehensive Plan, that pattern should be reversed. Rennick said three-story townhouses could be built on ridges, leaving slopes undisturbed, or as previously suggested, the multifamily tracts could be broken into large single-family lots with construction confined to flat areas and slopes undisturbed.

McAllister said many single family lots remain for the market to absorb and the need is for more moderately priced multi-family housing, He has proposed six units per building.

Planning commission chairman Glen Barrow said a rezoning to residential planned unit development might be the right approach.

But he noted that the power to approve a new development appears to lie with the director of the village water department.

Deputy village manager Cleatus Richards said, "It's not a matter of power, it's a matter of reality, if we can serve an area."

Camelot exceeds the village' ability to provide water "now and for a long time," he said.

Impact fees paid by developers don't necessarily go to their subdivisions.

The money is used community wide on priorities, such a buying more water rights, Richards said. The fees would not necessarily be used to extend lines to a developer's project. That cost probably would be left up to the developer independently.

However, if a six-inch extension was all a developer needed, the village might pay the difference and upgrade to an 8-inch water line to serve an extended are, Richards said.

Superintendent: District ski program will stay, if...

BY DIANNE STALLINGS
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

A local tradition, the annual ski program for Ruidoso School District students at Ski Apache Resort will remain intact this year.

District superintendent Chuck Harrison, said he's received a few calls from people who heard about the program being discussed during a recent brainstorming session with principals.

This particular weekly meeting focused on ways to allot more time for reading and mathematics at the elementary level, he said Wednesday.

Suggested approaches to garnering more time in the classroom included starting school earlier or extending the day 20 to 30 minutes before dismissal.

"One thing that came up was ski day," said Harrison, who joined the district last July. "I said, 'What is that?'"

The special discount program open to students runs four consecutive Tuesdays usually from mid-January into February as an excused absence.

> "We'll go through the whole year and calendar and look at it all."
> Chuck Harrison
> school superintendent

Ski shops rent equipment at discounted rates and students can buy discounted lift tickets.

After hearing about the program, Harrison said he told principals as long as student scores aren't negatively affected and everything runs smoothly, the program probably wouldn't be disturbed.

"We're not doing anything this year," he said Wednesday. "We'll go through the whole year and calendar and look at it all. We discussed how we could modify the day."

The educators would like to see 90 more minutes devoted to reading and 60 more minutes to mathematics at the elementary level, he said.

He never approached the school board about the ski program, Harrison said, although he did receive some telephone calls.

A decade ago, the late Wendell Chino, then president of the Mescalero Apache Tribe, which operates the resort north of Ruidoso, shut down the program in a dispute with the Ruidoso school district. The program was reinstated after several years.

Stan Cape of A-Frame Ski Shop said he looks upon the 35-year-old program as a community service local ski shops do for the students.

"If the schools decide to get rid of it, that would be a real shame," he said.

"I grew up in this program, learned to ski in it and it's tremendous boost to the kids."

OUR OPINION

A longer view for Ski Apache

Meanwhile, a new season is about to start

With the World Series, Halloween and the presidential election behind us, it seems quite feasible to think about what's next on Ruidoso's horizon.

Like a brand new season for winter sports at Ski Apache ... They're making snow on the mountain after a post-Halloween storm and a dip into below-freezing temperatures.

They've spent time and effort at the end of Ski Run Road to build a large, paved parking area. They've spruced up and painted the public spaces, adding a skylight to bring in the New Mexico sunshine, revamped restrooms, and added a coffee bar — something essential for those just off the slopes.

Now, they're waiting for the first batch of skiers — a traditional Thanksgiving opening seems likely, with a modicum of cooperation from Mother Nature.

But resort officials are looking ahead. Michael French, who runs the resort along with other hospitality enterprises of the Mescalero Apache Tribe, already has initiated talks with the U.S. Forest Service about developing Ski Apache as a summer vacation destination.

Because the ski area sits mostly on Forest Service land, a months-long environmental impact study and statement will be required.

French would like to see food service available during the summer for recreational mountain bikers and hikers and such.

That, from where we sit, would be good for the Apaches and Ruidoso.

Ruminations on what crowding is about

MOUNTAIN ASIDES
KEITH GREEN

So things do get a bit scrunched up in Midtown during the height of the summer season — and your typical Ruidoso permanent resident (like me) sometimes gets a bit testy with all the crowding.

Yes, crowding in huge and almost empty Lincoln County.

That's because crowding develops when too many people deliberately put themselves in close proximity to too many other people.

Incidentally, the most crowded I ever felt was on a Sunday afternoon in the Santa Fe Plaza when the Don Diego DeVargas "entrada" parade was about to come by and the crowd pressed in, and I wondered for about 10 seconds if me and mine were going to be trampled in the mass of pressing bodies.

No...I don't remember any crowding like that in Ruidoso. But that thought did turn me onto "population," and a little research reminded me that we in the American West have no idea what crowding is about.

Forget your "teeming masses yearning to be free." Europe in the 19th century had some masses, but nothing like 21st century China, where almost 1.3 billion people are awakening from centuries of rural squalor and yearning for cars and fast food and movie houses and travel and space to move around in.

A scary thought.

And just over the Himalayan hump sits India, itself with more than 1 billion more people, many of them highly educated and all of them part of a waiting labor pool for those jobs the Democrats insist the Bush Administration has been shipping out of the U.S. in order to make its corporate supporters richer. But the odd thing is, the American working population voted for more of the same on Tuesday.

Go figure.

Compared to India and China, the rest of the nations of the world are relatively empty.

It's a long slide down the numbers pile from the billion-member club to the next largest — that's us, U.S., at a svelte 286 million.

Pile up all the Euro countries and you get about 300 million French and Poles and Italians and Swedes and such.

The little ol' United Kingdom on its tight little island is a bit cozy at 59 million, but you can get thoroughly alone without too trouble on a Yorkshire moor...

But as noted at the start of these ruminations, crowding is a creature of our own making.

The best crowding comes about when you're where you want to be, with people you know — like a crowded Ruidoso in July.

YOUR OPINION

Lincoln's second-class 'Zone B' residents

To the editor:

When the desire of many Lincoln Historical Zone B residents to opt out of the Historical District came out at the Oct. 19 County Commission meeting, Historical Board member Cille Dickenson wanted the whole district to be "Zone A." She contended that "allowing mobile homes next to historic buildings ruins the ambiance of the historical district." (Ruidoso News, Oct. 22, p. 10A)

There are two fallacies here: 1) There are absolutely no Zone B properties or sites listed within the Historic Ordinance as being historic landmarks or even as possessing any historical significance whatsoever. And 2) the mobile homes are already here in Zone B.

The 14th Amendment provides that "No State shall deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws." In the historical district, one property owner, at great cost to himself, must adhere to the district's historical standards while another owner, simply because his property is less visible from the highway, is free to do with his property anything he wants — including placing a mobile home there. This is not equal protection under the law.

As John Thomas pointed out at the same Commissioners meeting, the 5th Amendment provides that no "private property [shall] be taken for public use without just compensation." Though the recent arduous revision process has produced many improvements for the district, it remains an indisputable fact that Zone B properties are forced to serve the interests of Zone A shops and museums, and not one penny of compensation has ever been paid.

In fact, Zone B residents have paid dearly for the "privilege" of supporting Zone A owners and proprietors. Zone B properties are comparatively and significantly less valuable on the real estate market. Finding a job in Lincoln is virtually impossible and one must commute to Capitan, Ruidoso, Roswell or even farther to find steady work. This economic cost does not even begin to include the loss of Constitutional rights and liberties which have occurred in the past when various Board members were overzealous for "historicity" (read "control") and have tried to use the Ordinance to keep out the "riffraff."

What the Ruidoso News did not report was that in one single afternoon of personal canvassing, two Lincoln residents, John Thomas and James Taylor, secured some 65 Zone B property owners' signatures requesting release from the district. This is a very significant portion of Zone B residents.

If Zone B residents are to be held to the stricter standards of Zone A, let the form and amount of compensation to Zone B property owners be clearly spelled out, at the least, clearly demonstrate that Zone B owners reap some tangible benefit from their sacrifices for the district! Let there also be only one standard of building requirements for all properties within the one-mile Zone B corridor along U.S. 380 and not the unfair requirement that adversely affects too many Zone B owners while giving benefit only to Zone A owners.

If this cannot be done, then Zone B must be released from its union with Zone A. Anything else is just plain wrong and yet another legal "train wreck" for the County just waiting to happen.

I was somewhat taken aback by a couple of your recommendations in Wednesday's News. You were very supportive of Bond A which gives senior citizens $6,063,000 for state-wide facilities, for which I am grateful.

However, it seems contradictory that you would deny some of the same seniors a small tax exemption (Constitutional Amendment No. 4)! Evidently, you were not there!

The story on 4 in full

To the editor:

Upon reading your recommendations to vote "NO" on Constitutional Amendment No. 4 (property tax exemptions to all honorably discharged Veterans) I was very surprised and concerned.

As a veteran who has served during a time of armed conflict, I feel compelled to stick up for my fellow soldiers, sailors, airmen and marines, and to set the record straight. You as a media outlet have misinformed your reader on a very important issue. Unfortunately by the time you have the opportunity to fix the mistake it will be too late for voters.

As stated in your recommendation you defined the amendment as "applying property tax exemptions to all honorably discharged veterans, whether or not they were in combat." However, this amendment has nothing to do with whether or not a veteran was ever "in combat." If you would have done any research on the subject at all you would know that the way the constitution is written right now, all you have to do is serve in a time of armed conflict.

It doesn't matter whether you sat behind a desk in Florida or fought on the front lines, as long as there was a conflict you are covered. There have been U.S. forces all over the world putting their lives on the line 24/7 for the past 100 years and many of them are not covered simply because there was no "conflict." Does that make them less brave or less deserving than the rest of us?

It has also been forecast that this amendment will decrease the residential property tax base by no more than one percent, not "a major hit" as described in your column.

We as veterans are not asking for a hand out, nor do we expect one. Either get rid of the exemption or get rid of the discrimination.

Trashing the Scenic Byways

To the editor:

The Scenic Byways are being trashed more each day. If you do not believe me just drive up Cedar Creek Road, Ski Run Road, Highway 48, Highway 37 or Highway 70.

Most of the people who live near these roads are fine, responsible people who take pride in their property and their community. But a few irresponsible people seem hellbent on spreading their litter of old cars, trucks, used appliances, construction material and general junk just as close to the road as possible.

Don't they understand that they are killing the "golden goose"? In this case the golden goose is the awesome beauty of our land.

Consider this: On an average weekend there are (thousands of) visitors in town. A few thousand go to the track or the casinos while the majority are here to enjoy the beautiful scenery. It is their money that allows all of us to work here and enjoy this mountain lifestyle.

The real problem is the County Commissioners who refuse to do anything to clean up the mess — a mess that gets worse each day and includes huge billboards that dominate the landscape. The County Commissioners are afraid of the word "zoning." The word means to protect, which is the sole job of the commissioners. Other people who are afraid of the word are the irresponsible people who hide behind their "rights as a landowner." In truth, they are just too damn lazy to clean up their mess.

The current County Commission should put this issue out on the table so we can talk about it. I do not want to take anyone's "rights" away from them but I am sick at heart to see our beautiful forest all junked up. If the current County Commissioners are not willing to face this issue then we need to get someone who will.

COUNTY: Candidates thank voters for support tough it is for a non-Republican to win in Lincoln County.

"I realize now how heavily weighted a Republican County it is," said Sanchez, who plans to retire from county government some time next year.

As for a future run for public office, she said "never ever again."

"Like they say, thank heavens for unanswered prayers and be careful what you ask for," she said. "The Lord has taken good care of me."

Battin said he's grateful to the many people around the county who supported and encouraged him throughout the campaign, especially those in District 3 who "gave me their vote of confidence in both the primary and the general election."

"We are faced with many challenges, but none that we cannot face successfully by working together as a Lincoln County community," he said.

"I pledge my best effort to live up to their confidence in me and want to be available to anyone who has comments or concerns.

"I realize now how heavily weighted a Republican County it is."

Patsy Sanchez
County Commission candidate

"I am also looking forward to working with the commission, elected officials and the outstanding people on the staff of Lincoln County."

Seno thanked voters and said, "It was a very good experience" running for office and witnessing the process.

"I appreciate my opponent running a slam-free race," he said.

He will continue to head the Libertarian Party and will ensure that no one "gets a free ride into office or a free ride while in office," he said.

The party's goal over the next two years is to be ready to field a slate of qualified and viable candidates so that the state will not see a repeat of dozens of unopposed state representatives, or other offices, he said.

Republican Ricky Virden, county undersheriff who took 67.1 percent of the vote for county sheriff (5,852 votes), said he was happy to see a good voter turnout.

"There are a lot of challenges facing the county in the next four years," he said.

"It's one of the fastest growing counties in the state.

I certainly appreciate the voters' support and confidence in my ability."

He beat Democrat David Hightower, who received 29.2 percent of the vote, 2,545 votes, and Libertarian Weslie B. Owen with 3.8 percent, 330 votes.

In other contested races, county voters also helped reelect Republican State Rep. Dub Williams in District 56 with 87.5 percent of the vote, compared to Libertarian Richard Obergfell's 12.5 percent, and Republican Dan Foley in District 57 with 67.6 percent of the vote to Democrat Stephanie DuBois' 32.4 percent.

They also picked Steve Pearce almost three to one for a second term as U.S. Representative from the 2nd Congressional District, in line with other voters in the southeastern New Mexico region.

"(I will ensure) that no one gets a free ride while in office."

Tony Seno
County Commission candidate

He defeated Democrat Gary King.

They also selected President George W. Bush with a margin of more than two to one over U.S. Sen. John Kerry, a Democrat. Four other presidential candidates finished with a handful of votes, topped by Ralph Nader's 47.

They chose Carrie Spencer, a Republican, as county probate judge with 68.5 percent of the vote over Democrat Charles Lane, and returned County Assessor Rick Silva to office with 84 percent of the vote compared to Libertarian challenger Gregory K. Young's 16 percent.

Simply keeping your job

This column usually addresses issues concerning business owners and organization managers. This week we will include an additional population — the employee. I'll focus on tips to retain your job. Most individuals in the labor pool invest a great deal of time getting a job. They may conduct research, get a new outfit for the interview and practice answering specific questions as well as polishing their resume. These efforts usually land a job. Then very little effort is spent on retaining that job; many employees want to collect their paycheck instead of actually earning their money.

Chamber Chatter
BY BRAD TREPTOW
EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR
RUIDOSO VALLEY
CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

Employees, read, absorb and practice these daily. Employers, pass these tips on to new employees when they are hired and recognize them when they adhere to them as a means of positive reinforcement. The following tips should help.

Remember that you are getting paid to perform a job. Listen carefully during any training and take notes to shorten the learning curve. Don't be afraid to ask questions. Open dialogue between employee and employer provides clarification.

Take pride in everything you do, including your work, by illustrating a willingness to learn. Strive for the best and you will become the best. Be dependable. Do what you say you are going to do without procrastination. Show up at least five minutes before your shift begins and always communicate with other employees and your supervisor. Practice good grooming tips. Wear clean clothes appropriate to your work environment and make sure they have been pressed. Hair and make-up should be neat and presentable. There is a time to look trendy and a time to dress professionally. As long as you are getting paid to perform a job for a business, you should always be professional.

Also, create work rather than waiting for work to be assigned to you. If you finish a designated task, don't sit idle until it is time to go home or stretch the task out until the end of your shift. Seek out additional work or ask other employees if they need assistance. The more you learn the more valuable an employee you'll become.

Finally, smile and be glad you're doing what you do A positive attitude will always prove superior.

The Realtors Association of New Mexico, sponsor of the LeadershipRANM program, is one of the state's largest trade associations, representing more than 6,500 members involved in all aspects of the residential and commercial real estate market throughout New Mexico.

A way to stretch out the supply of flu vaccine

- Researchers test low doses and find it effective for the young, but more study is needed.

ST. LOUIS – New research demonstrates a possible way to more than double the available supply of influenza vaccine for adults between the ages of 18 and 60, according to a study led by Saint Louis University's Center for Vaccine Development and appearing this week in the New England Journal of Medicine.

When it comes to flu vaccinations, the conventional "one size fits all" approach for adults is coming under question, according to lead researcher Robert Belshe, M.D., director of the Center for Vaccine Development at Saint Louis University.

"We found that we can give lower doses of vaccine, 40 percent of the full dose, if we gave the vaccine not as a shot into the muscle, but if we gave the shot 'intradermally' between the layers of the skin," Belshe said. "This lower-dose intradermal vaccine worked well in adults 18 to 60 years of age."

Intradermal vaccination is an injection between the layers of the skin using a tiny needle, such as is used for a tuberculosis skin test. Administration of the vaccine in this way involves injecting a small bleb of vaccine into the skin, much like a mosquito bite or allergy skin test, using a very small needle.

Belshe said the lower-dose intradermal vaccine did not, however, work as well in an older population.

A total of 238 volunteers were enrolled at Saint Louis University and the University of Rochester in the study. This included 130 people between 18-60 and 108 older than 60. Some people received a currently licensed influenza shot in the traditional way – full dose, using a shot directly into the muscle. A second group received an investigational vaccine by GlaxoSmithKline Biologicals intradermally and with a dose that was 40 percent of the standard dose.

Belshe said when compared with the full dose of vaccine given as the traditional shot, antibody responses to a lower dose vaccine given under the skin were as vigorous in younger persons but not in people older than 60 years.

"We are learning that the same size dose doesn't seem to fit all ages," Belshe said. "Younger people may need less vaccine, and older people may need more vaccine."

The nation's vaccine supply for younger healthy persons conceivably could be stretched 2.5 times using the scheme published in this study. People in this age group for whom the CDC recommends vaccinations (even with this year's shortages) include health care workers and all people who have contact with babies under 6 months.

The publication of the research was put on a fast track by the New England Journal of Medicine following this fall's serious influenza vaccine shortages.

Among the other study findings:

- There was significantly less pain with intradermal administration versus the traditional "intramuscular" shot.
- There was more inflammation at the injection site using the intradermal approach. Belshe said this could be a good thing, as redness and swelling probably means that the vaccine is doing its job in producing an antibody response.
- More and larger studies are needed to confirm these options so that agencies such as the CDC can make recommendations to physicians, Belshe said.

ECONOMY AND THE MARKETS

Reasons for hope

BY WELLS FARGO ECONOMICS
DR. SOHN.COM WEB SITE

The news on the trade balance is expected to improve substantially over the next two years. This will be a significant reversal of recent trends, and will provide a welcome boost to GDP growth next year.

The worsening of the trade deficit has cut GDP growth by about 0.6 percentage points per year on average since 1996, and the trade deficit shaved another 0.62 percent off of GDP growth in the third quarter. Next year we expect the improvement in the trade balance to boost annual GDP growth by about 0.5 percent. The global economy's growth is expected to hit 5.0 percent this year, according to the IMF, the best growth in 20 years. Foreign incomes are higher and expanding at one of the fastest rates in a generation.

Combine this with a U.S. dollar that is expected to weaken further in 2005 and 2006 and we have all the necessary ingredients for an improving trade deficit. In fact, the Fed has been uncharacteristically vocal about their belief that the dollar will continue to weaken, with recent Fed research citing the looming current account deficit.

China's move to raise interest rates has the U.S. Treasury department talking that this clears the way for a more flexible exchange rate in China, i.e. an appreciation against the dollar. While this may still be wishful thinking, the odds remain good that over the next two years, the U.S. trade story will become a positive one.

Bonds: Rates pressured

Another round of refi activity, spurred on by mortgage rates hitting a six-month low, is once again raising the possibility that mortgage bond holders may have to either hedge against prepayment risk or rebalance their current portfolios by purchasing long-dated Treasuries. This demand for Treasuries can cause rates to fall further, potentially fueling more refi activity.

Consequently, there is still prepayment risk embedding in MBSs even after the unprecedented period of refi activity over the past two years. The rapid appreciation of the yen versus the dollar has led to speculation that Japan may once again start to purchase U.S. debt to prop up the dollar. Back during Q1, the dollar slipped to Y105 and the BOJ spent $137 billion to avoid further depreciation. And by the end of March, the yield on the 10-year Treasury fell to 3.75 percent. The exchange rate is currently Y 106 and Japanese officials have been quoted as saying they are prepared to intervene if needed.

Stocks: Mixed review

The Conference Board released the latest consumer confidence survey, and the results present a rather mixed picture for consumer stocks over the coming months. The expectations component of the survey reveals fewer consumers believe jobs will be plentiful and there was a slight increase in the number who felt their income would actually decrease over the next six months.

Fewer consumers expect to buy major appliances so this could weigh on consumer durables. However, the outlook for the leisure sector is upbeat and the outlook for the autos and component sector is surprisingly bright considering gasoline prices were up 26 percent from year ago levels at $1.99 per gallon during October. The percentage of consumers expecting to buy a car rose to its highest level since April 2003.

FOCUS ON REAL ESTATE

Market conditions still good for home buyers

WASHINGTON – General housing affordability conditions remained favorable during the third quarter, even with a decline that resulted largely from higher home prices, according to the National Association of Realtors.

NAR's composite Housing Affordability Index was 128.6 during the third quarter of 2004, down 3.7 percentage points from 132.3 in the second quarter; it was 7.6 points below the same period a year earlier when it stood at 136.2.*

David Lereah, NAR's chief economist, said current market conditions are keeping the door to homeownership open. "Any index reading over 100 is considered sufficient for the nation as a whole and we remain in pretty good shape," he said.

"When you look at the monthly costs of housing, the typical family who bought a median-priced home last quarter is spending only 19.4 percent of their income for mortgage principal and interest, which is well within lender guidelines. If you look back to the early 1980s, monthly costs were as high as 36 percent and in the early 1990s they were over 20 percent, so in historic terms housing affordability is healthy," said Lereah. The NAR index assumes a buyer should spend no more than 25 percent of monthly income for mortgage principal and interest.

The index measures affordability factors for all homebuyers making a 20 percent downpayment, with an index of 100 defined as the point where a median-income family has the exact amount of income needed to purchase a median-priced existing home. The third-quarter median family income was projected to be $54,761. The index shows the nation's typical household could afford to buy a home costing $242,400, well above the national median existing-home price in the third quarter, which was $188,500.

NAR President Walt McDonald, broker-owner of Walt McDonald Real Estate in Riverside, Calif., said some of the findings are seasonal. "The third quarter traditionally has a higher ratio of more expensive homes being sold to families with children," he said. "With a steady decline in mortgage interest rates, the affordability index is likely to improve in the fourth quarter."

According to the Federal Housing Finance Board, the average effective mortgage interest rate for loans closed on existing homes was 5.82 percent during the third quarter, up from 5.73 percent in the second quarter; the rate was 5.66 percent in the third quarter of 2003. This is a weighted average interest rate between fixed and adjustable loans, including the cost of points, and represents a bottom-line mortgage cost. This series differs from the widely quoted Freddie Mac series, which reflects commitment rates for 30-year fixed-rate loans.

Affordability for first-time homebuyers also was lower in the third quarter, down 2.4 percentage points to 74.7 from a reading of 77.1 in the second quarter; the index was 6.3 points below the third quarter 2003 index.

The association's First-Time Homebuyer Affordability Index shows a typical first-time buyer household, aged 25 to 44, with an income of $31,225, had 74.7 percent of the income needed to purchase a typical starter home with a 10 percent downpayment. The median starter home price was $160,200 during the third quarter.

The index shows the typical first-time buyer could afford a home costing $119,700. However, many buyers are making smaller downpayments than assumed by the index, and are using loans that give them more buying power.

"It's important to note the first-time buyer index has never reach 100 in the history of the series, which dates to 1977," McDonald said. "Ironically, four out of ten homes are purchased by entry-level buyers. They consult with real estate professionals about loan programs targeted to first-time buyers and about the resources to help them find a starter home that meets their needs."

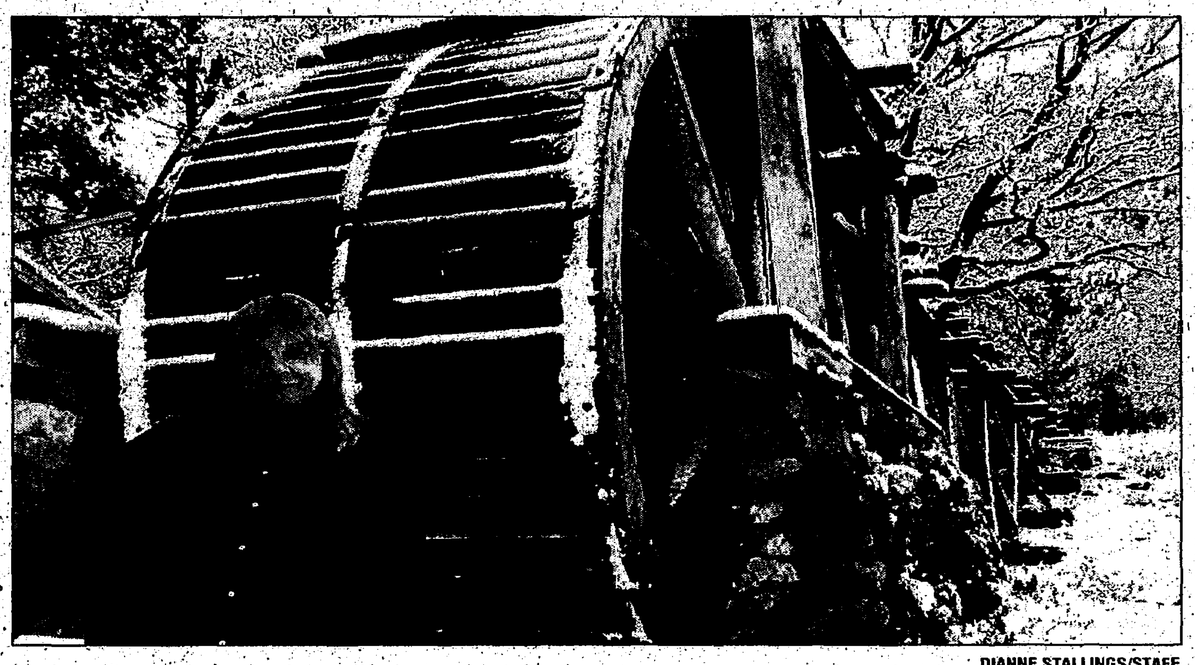
A new life for Ruidoso's Old Mill?

BY DIANNE STALLINGS
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER



DIANNE STALLINGS/STAFF

Old Mill owner Delana Clements may see her local landmark transformed into a museum of area history.

The oldest building in Ruidoso and a frequent haunt of the outlaw Billy the Kid, the Old Mill on Sudderth Drive could be transformed into the village's first local museum with a little help.

Owner Delana Clements pointed out that the smaller towns of Corona, Carrizozo and Capitan in Lincoln County support museums.

"This is perfect and it would have pleased my parents to see all their work saved," she said. "It's surprising how many locals are not really familiar with it. I invite them to come down and take a look. We tell everyone who comes in about the history of the town and the mill. Eastern New Mexico University brings history classes here. Several groups have come down and I've talked to them."

During the summer, the water wheel once fed by a ditch running through the settlement from the Wingfield area still turns. A major reconstruction and shoring up of the wheel and trough started in August 2003 is nearly complete.

"We had quite a crew working on it," she said. "One contractor got to a certain point and then disappeared."

A neighbor who is a carpenter helped finish the work. Clements ran the wheel over the Aspenfest weekend, but when she turned it on the following week, "It acted up."

She discovered that the entire mechanism was not bolted down and it shifted and jammed. She's in the process of pulling it back into position to be secured.

"We're hoping to start it up in May again and have a big celebration," Clements said. When running in the summer, the water wheel is one of the few remaining large-scale wheels in the Southwest that still grinds flour and corn meal on premise. The state hasn't helped with needed repairs because the mill is not yet on the National Historical Registry, she said.

Built in 1868 by Captain Paul Dowlin, who moved to New Mexico to serve at Fort Stanton during the Civil War, and his brother, Will, the mill's function over the years changed from a grist mill, bean thrasher, blacksmith shop and general store to a gift shop.

Clements, daughter of the late Carmon Phillips, who rescued the building from ruin, said rumors also circulated about the mill serving as a place to buy "moonshine" from 1868 to the turn of the 20th Century.

Many local residents may not be aware that before incorporation, the community was called Dowlin's Mill, she said.

Captain Paul was murdered in a dispute with an employee, but that's only part of the mill's colorful history.

Billy the Kid, who rose to infamy during the Lincoln County War, was a family friend of the Dowlins and of Frank Lesnet, who became the first postmaster of the settlement.

Perhaps the best known tale involved Annie Lesnet supposedly hiding The Kid in a flour barrel while he was on the run from a posse of lawmen.

Frequent dances and suppers were staged at the mill, Clements said.

Well-known visitors to the mill include Sheriff Pat Garrett, who put an end to The Kid's career with a well-placed bullet, Gen. "Black Jack" Pershing, who was stationed at Fort Stanton and Douglas MacArthur, who later became the general commanding the Pacific Theater in World War II.

As the community changed around it, the mill and its water wheel deteriorated until Carmon and Leona Mae Phillips renovated the building, saving a historic New Mexico landmark and opening a gift shop in 1950.

"They bought it in the late 1940s from the White Mountain Development Co.," which was headed by Charlie McCarty and Joe Palmer, she said. "They first repaired the wheel and trough, than concentrated on the building. In 1950, they moved the business into the structure and ran it for more than 50 years."

Clements would like to see the mill become the town's first local museum.

To help toward that goal, the Lincoln County Historical Society created a poster with a photograph of the mill and some of its history. The posters sell for $10 each with part of the proceeds going toward the museum effort.

Clements has discussed the museum idea with a few influential people in town, but would welcome help from anyone interested in the project.

"I'm willing to work with whatever entity might be able to accomplish this," she said. "With all of the thousands of photographs my father took and collected over the years" the museum would have a base from which to start, and she's sure other families have items they would be willing to donate.

Meanwhile, Clements said she will continue as the "curator" of the unofficial historical site and welcomes visitors who would like to see the inside of a building from the era of the Lincoln County War.

The mill at 641 Sudderth Drive offers a glimpse into construction of the period, and a wide selection of gifts including jewelry, moccasins, books and unique decorative items. Call Clements for more information at 257-2811.

Separate trial request in sex case

BY DIANNE STALLINGS
RUIDOSO NEWS STAFF WRITER

Attorneys for two Capitan men charged with multiple sex crimes asked that the cases of the two men be severed Wednesday, allowing them to be tried separately.

Judge Karen Parsons of the 12th Judicial District in Carrizozo, heard their motions, but postponed any decision until she has a chance to review backup material scheduled to be submitted, a court spokesman said.

Bayward Stone, 42, and Atman Kostendenous, 19, were indicted by a grand jury in February. Stone faces 28 counts of sex crimes ranging from 2nd-degree criminal sexual penetration to tampering with evidence, a 4th-degree felony, and including false imprisonment.

Kostendenous was charged with 22 counts covering similar ground and including one count of distributing marijuana to a minor, a 3rd-degree felony. Both men were charged with several counts of conspiracy.

The investigation was spurred by a complaint from the parents of a 14-year-old girl related to an incident Jan. 30, County Undersheriff Ricky Virden said in February.

He said Stone moved to the area from Florida.

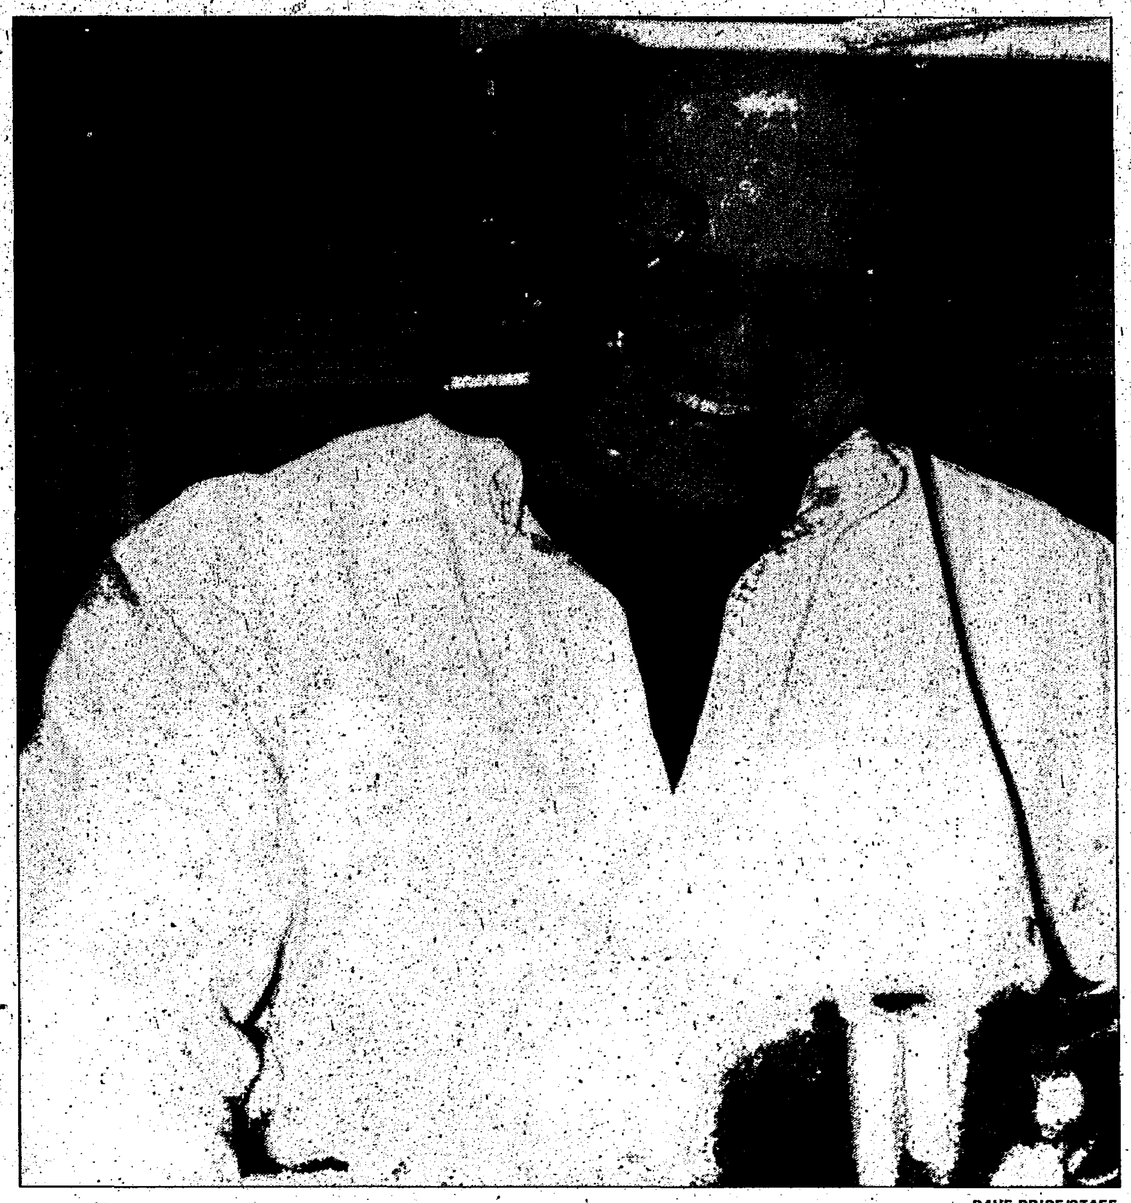
EARLY RETURNS



DAVE PRICE/STAFF

MTD Radio general manager Tim Keithley was busy late into the night on Nov. 2, election night. Here, the local radio personality interviews Congressman Steve Pearce on the air at about 10 p.m. Pearce had just been declared the victor in his bid for reelection against Gary King.

Correction

An opinion piece in the Friday, Oct. 29 edition of the Ruidoso News contained an error. To clarify; at a recent candidates forum, Tom Battin said he would abstain from discussions of issues that could possibly involve his employer, State National Bank, if elected to the Lincoln County Commission.

As he stated at a Republican candidates' forum before the primary election, Battin resigned his post as a member of the Lincoln County Medical Center board to avoid conflicts of interest when the commission deliberates on matters concerning the hospital.

The Ruidoso News regrets the error.

Thank you, Midtown merchants!

I would like to take this time to sincerely thank the Midtown merchants for their generosity in providing candy to our children on Halloween. Being a small-town business owner myself, I know that this can sometimes be a hardship on their pocket book to provide candy to 300-400 children who participate in this event during the off-season.

Being the mother of a senior and a fifth-grader, we have enjoyed this exciting and fun event for many years, trick-or-treating through Midtown.

Again, thank you to all the participating Midtown merchants.

Goal is simple for Warriors: Win

■ A playoff spot awaits for the team that can take care of business tonight.

BY TODD FUQUA
RUIDOSO NEWS SPORTS EDITOR

Legendary football coach Vince Lombardi's competitive spirit is perhaps best embodied by his most famous quote, "winning isn't everything, it's the only thing."

Long-time Oakland Raiders owner Al Davis said pretty much the same thing in four fewer words — "Just win, baby."

In tonight's District 4-3A smack-down in Roswell, both Ruidoso and New Mexico Military Institute are taking both quotations to heart. Both need a win if they want to see post-season play.

Oh, there's a possibility that Portales, playing at Lovington, could win that game and make things a little easier on both the Colts and Warriors. NMMI could conceivably lose but still make it, Ruidoso could actually have a shot at the district title.

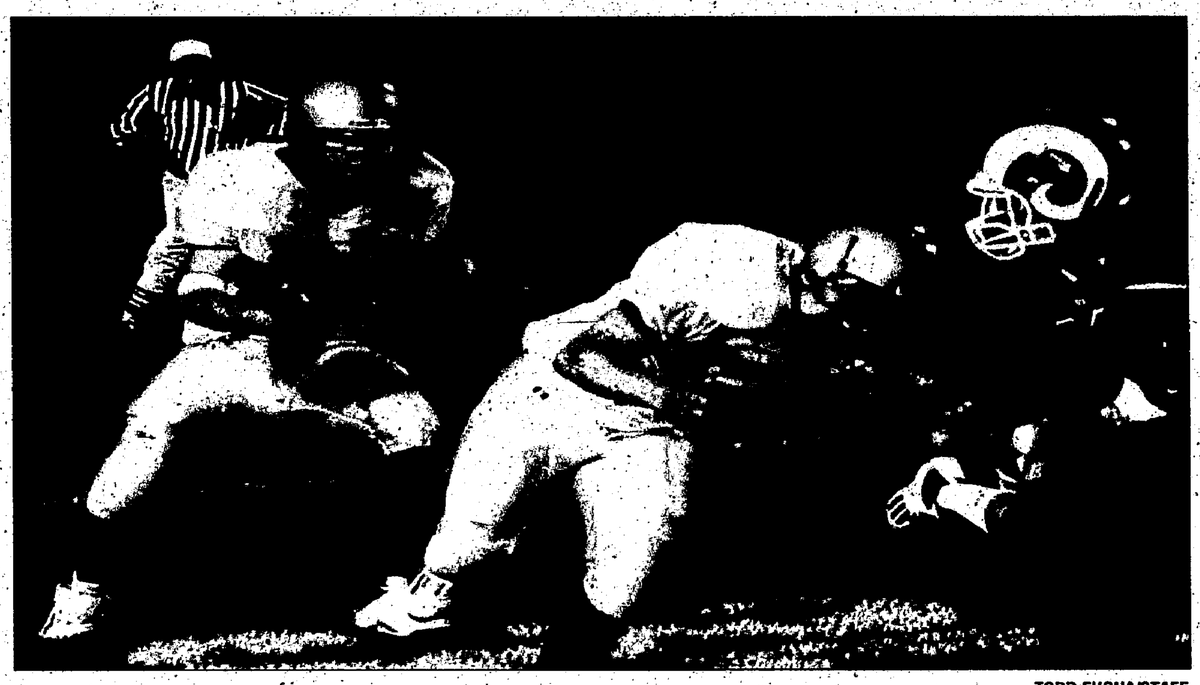
But the Rams haven't defeated Lovington in over 12 years, so those prospects are slim at best. NMMI needs a win, Ruidoso needs a win by 11 points or more, end of story.

Well, not really the end of the story, the game still has to be played at 7 p.m. at the quadrangle on NMMI's campus.

"We have to stop their running game," said Ruidoso coach Ridge Bowden of the Colt offense. "They've only thrown the ball 11 times in the last two games."

While NMMI (8-1, 2-0 district) may seem like a one-dimensional team, it's been playing that dimension very, very well. The Colts have averaged 42 points a game, their only loss a rare 40-0 shutout to Santa Rosa.

NMMI's offense, as well as its pre-district schedule, are direct by-products of the fact that, as a military school, coach Dwight Burns is a bit limited in what he can implement.



TODD FUQUA/STAFF

Ruidoso running back Teddy Sowell, left, gets a block from Mark Blair during the Warriors' 45-13 win over Portales last Friday. If Ruidoso can beat NMMI tonight by 11 points or more, it will earn its third playoff spot in as many years.

"This is the same offense that all military schools play — Air Force, Army, Navy," Burns said. "We don't play summer ball, and I sometimes don't even know the kids' names at the beginning of the year. We usually aren't that good at the beginning of the season because we're so far behind.

"The passing game takes a lot of time to work on and refine," he added. "Everyone else in high school can go to the shotgun formation, but it doesn't fit into our situation."

It's not that the Colts don't have the talent to pass, it's just that they don't have the time. But running has been very good to NMMI, as it has four players among the leaders in state in rushing yards.

Jason Thomas leads the quartet — and is second in Class 3A — with 1,031 yards on just 99 carries, while Bryson Carl checks in with 906 yards.

Further down the list are Nic Sabellico and Justin Richter with 499 and 494 yards each. They may not have high numbers, but Sabellico averages 13.86 yards every time he touches the ball.

With all this running, just about every opponent knows the Colts will stay on the ground, so how do they keep teams from stopping them?

"They expect us to know that, so they'll try to hurt us with play action," said Ruidoso coach Ridge Bowden. "We still have to go pass defense, but to stop their running game, we've got to attack their running backs."

The Warriors (6-3, 1-1) counter with the duo of Teddy Sowell and Michael Sanchez, who have gained 929 yards between them. That may not seem like a whole lot of yards compared to NMMI runners, but keep in mind they didn't really start running full time for Ruidoso until the middle of the season.

Ruidoso can also rely on the pass play every once in a while, with quarterback Marcus Williams having thrown for 982 yards this season. Brad Lacy and Elisha Hedin have caught the majority of those passes for a combined 464 yards receiving.

With the exception of passing, the two teams' offenses are fairly similar, making preparing their defenses a bit easier.

"It's the same as our offense, it's just run out of a different set," Bowden said. "We just have to learn how to stop ourselves."

Bowden was speaking metaphorically when he said

Chief harriers hope to finish well at state

BY TODD FUQUA
RUIDOSO NEWS SPORTS EDITOR

The Mescalero runners at this year's Class 1A/2A state meet may not have enough participants to qualify for a boys or girls team score, but the individuals headed to Red Rock State Park in Gallup Saturday have coach Ardena Orosco excited.

"I think they can all finish pretty high at state," Orosco said. "They've all been pushing themselves."

The Chiefs are coming off a District 4-1A/2A meet at Cloudcroft which saw Samantha Bigmouth finish second behind Lady Bear Jill Alcorn and a 3-4-5 finish for Gifford Valdez, Julian Wheeler and Delano Ortega for the boys.

Nadine Bigmouth also ran well, placing sixth overall in her first return to running after spending two weeks on the sidelines with a sprained ankle.

"She was still a little testy on that ankle, but she pushed forward and did a real good job," Orosco said of Nadine's performance "But she pushed forward and did a really good job."

That Bigmouth was returning to running at Cloudcroft was interesting, as Orosco considers that course to be a particularly challenging one, being run on a narrow, trail-like path.

That also makes Samantha's performance a good one, as well. Orosco is hoping the elder Bigmouth can improve on her speed when she runs at Gallup.

"She has great endurance, she just needs to get faster," Orosco said. "The course at Gallup is all flat, and that's to her advantage. If she can speed up, she's pretty optimistic about how she's going to do."

Outside of Nadine's ankle, none of the Chiefs have had an injury bug, something with which Orosco is taking no chances.

"We practiced our last day today, and did it all in the pool," Orosco said. "I don't want any of them hurt before we leave."

Tigers face toughest test all year in Class 1A quarterfinals

BY TODD FUQUA
RUIDOSO NEWS SPORTS EDITOR

Any way you look at Capitan's Class 1A quarterfinal game Saturday, you come away with the impression that the Tigers will be very hard-pressed to earn a win.

Capitan got to the playoffs by going 2-1 in District 4-1A, but have a 3-6 record overall after having gone on a six-game losing streak in the middle of the season.

The Tigers won their final regular-season game against Mescalero last Friday, but did so at the expense of star running back Andrew Silva, who suffered a broken ankle after earning 161 yards total offense against the Chiefs.

But the biggest obstacle standing in the way of a Capitan win Saturday at 2 p.m. is the opponent. The Texico Wolverines are the defending Class 1A champions, have won 23 games in a row — including a 9-0 record this season — and the closest any opponent has come is seven points — a 21-14 victory over Santa Rosa.

With so much going against the Tigers this weekend, what is their motivation?

"I won't lie to the kids, this will be one tough game," said Capitan coach Ed Davis. "But we don't want to lay down for them. We will go out and play the best football we can."

Davis said he and his coaching staff are working on a plan that can best utilize the talent they have. Still, the order will be a tall one — of 11 starters for Saturday, nine will be underclassmen.

One positive is the Tigers' performance at Mescalero last week. In that game, Capitan had a 48-8 lead going into the final quarter, which is when Davis emptied the bench to give his younger players some time on the field.

The Chiefs began a major comeback, and ran out of time before they were able to get the go-ahead score, eventually falling 48-35.

But the Tigers' ability to hold off the Mescalero charge isn't what made Davis happy, rather it was the way his team played.

"We cut down on our mistakes," Davis said. "Against Carrizozo, we had 105 yards in penalties, but had only 20 yards at Mescalero. We didn't make any stupid penalties, even with the young kids in there.

"That, to me, was the highlight of the game."

If Capitan can repeat that performance and play mistake-free ball, it will be up to Texico to simply play better than the Tigers to win.

There aren't many who doubt the Wolverines' ability to do that, but Davis is being optimistic.

"I never go into any game without the thought that we can win, there wouldn't be any point," Davis said. "I know we're the underdog, but we're hoping they'll take us lightly, and that could give us some surprise.

"We want to go up there and do the best job we can."

Capitan netters confident as they head to regional playoffs

"These girls are ready for it and are excited...we'll be ready to get after it."

Sherry Gowen
Capitan volleyball coach

BY TODD FUQUA
RUIDOSO NEWS SPORTS EDITOR

After charging their way through the District 7-1A volleyball tournament, the Capitan Lady Tigers found themselves in a match at Eunice for the district title and the right to host the regional tournament.

The match went five close games, but Capitan found itself on the losing end, which is why the Lady Tigers are at Eunice again today at 4 for a Region C match against Hatch.

Hatch — a former Lady Tiger rival in District 5-2A — is once again a tough team to beat, having returned every player from last year's squad.

Despite this, Capitan coach Sherry Gowen is confident her team will face Eunice once more Saturday, this time for the regional championship.

"We had some service errors and a few shanked balls on serve receive, and those added up (last Saturday)," Gowen said. "Those are little things based on luck. If you have the ball go your way, you'll win.

"Those were just things that didn't work for us, and it's nothing we can really prepare for," Gowen said. "We won't change anything we do against Hatch."

The Lady Bears are the District 5-2A champions against this year, but Gowen feels her team — young though it may be — is better prepared for Saturday's match.

"Hatch is pretty good in their district, but our new district has been a real test for us," Gowen said. "The games we've had to play here will help us out in the long run.

"These girls are ready for it and are excited," she added. "Hatch will be pretty confident coming in, but we'll be ready to get after it."

All around titles just keep coming for Muncy

BY JULIE CARTER
FOR THE RUIDOSO NEWS

One rodeo at a time. It's the philosophy that works for most consistent winning rodeo hands and 17 year old Taos Muncy is no different.

The 2004-05 New Mexico High School Rodeo season had six fall rodeos scheduled around the state. One rodeo at a time, the All Around Cowboy titles landed in Muncy's hands.

Muncy won his titles this fall at the Capitan, Grants, Portales, Truth or Consequences, Bosque Farms and Artesia rodeos. He finished the fall run sitting first in the All Around, bareback, and tie down roping standings.

The athletic Corona cowboy enters four events at every rodeo and he does it at both ends of the arena—that's rodeo talk for entering both the rough stock bucking and the roping events.

Muncy consistently picks up checks in the bareback riding, saddle bronc riding, tie down roping and team roping. He's been known to get on a bull every now and then but hasn't cracked out on them this season—yet.

A contingency of "Taos fans" are mentally making plans for his future.

There are those that think perhaps he is a new "Phil Lyne" in the making here in Lincoln County. Lyne, from Cotulla, Texas, has the distinction of being the only cowboy to win the National Finals Rodeo average titles in three events: bull riding, calf roping and steer roping.

Others think there is a Bill Linderman award in Muncy's future. This award is given annually to the PRCA cowboy winning the most money, nationwide, in three events, with at least one of those being a timed event and one in the rough stock.

But Taos isn't spending much time looking that far ahead. He's entered in the Junior World Team Roping in Eden, Oklahoma over the Thanksgiving holiday. He is entered five times and will rope with Kory Bramwell, Kodi Armitage, Calvin Brevik, Brooks Dahozy, and Johnny Salvo.

Other than that, he has new basketball shoes and has begun basketball practice at Corona High School. He's giving his all for that. The eight or so spring high school rodeos lie out there somewhere, but he's not too concerned about them right now.

Corona's Taos Muncy, shown riding broncs during a June rodeo, won his sixth consecutive all around title at the Artesia youth rodeo, having completed the feat at every high school rodeo held throughout the state this season.

WIN: Ruidoso's objective tonight couldn't be much simpler

TODD FUQUA/STAFF

Ruidoso receiver Elisha Hedin, right, fights with Portales' Chris Mosier for a pass Oct. 29 at Portales. The Warriors' passing ability could make the difference in tonight's showdown at New Mexico Military Institute.

they need to "stop themselves," of course. The Warriors aren't interested in committing penalties or turnovers that could literally stop their offensive or defensive plans.

Burns believes the Warriors have cut down on the mistakes, making a win for his Colts anything but a sure thing.

"They've evolved into a running team, but have that ability to pass that makes it tough on us," Burns said. "They're a double-edged sword. They execute very well and don't make many mistakes."

Mistake-free football will be a premium for either team, but especially for the Warriors, who will likely be playing before a capacity crowd of NMMI cadets eager to see their team earn its first Class 3A state playoff spot in many, many years.

Bowden said his team is up to the challenge and ready go after its own playoff spot.

"If we can control the line of scrimmage and make them pass when they don't want to, then we've done what we can," Bowden said. "We want to score as many points as we can, and keep them from scoring.

"The way these kids played last week, it encourages to do the same this week," he added. "I feel real good about what we can do against this team."

Capitan orators honored

BY JULIE CARTER
FOR THE RUIDOSO NEWS

Sixteen fourth and fifth graders, each one the top speaker of his or her class, competed in the Capitan Elementary School oratorical finals.

The students wrote and delivered 2 to 3 minute speeches on "Freedom in America: What it means and how do we preserve it."

Kade Haynes came in first in the fourth grade, followed by Kirsten Creighten, second, and Forrest Sweat, third.

Garret Schulz was first among fifth graders. Chris Olmstead was second and Aurora Hart was third.

This project has become an annual event for the Capitan elementary community.

Judges for the finals were Dr. Larry Miller, Linda Fuchs, Rebecca Judd, Jason Hightower and Diane Billingsly.

Public hearing at Capitan council

BY JULIE CARTER
FOR THE RUIDOSO NEWS

A public hearing on amendments to the Cemetery Ordinance will be held in conjunction with the regular Village of Capitan council meeting, set for 7:30 p.m. Nov. 9.

The tentative VOC meeting agenda includes resignations of Bobbi Shearer and Cliff Smith from the Capitan/Carrizozo Gas Company.

Other items are the humane society contract, bird park and memorial park maintenance contract, municipal court and reports from the planning commission and the water board.

County Views
BY JULIE CARTER

It happens every now and then.

You walk out the door and you see an assortment of cattle in places they shouldn't be. Shouldn't be — in terms of that is not where you last put them.

At first it takes you off guard. You blink repeatedly to make sure what you see is really those just-weaned steer calves that are munching the last of the green grass around the yard fence.

Why aren't they in the corral with the other 250 head, eating really good stuff to get to steak weight?

The next reaction, just before the panic, is to look toward the corral gate, only to see it standing wide open with nothing but air between you and all those calves who have not yet found the escape hatch.

Reality begins to take form quickly as you realize someone left the gate open. Not intentionally, just one of those brain-cramped-vapor-lock moments when you think you did but you didn't.

It happens. Happens to the best of us and the not so best of us. We may even try to blame it on the Gate Gremlins. Those are those unseen beings that lie in wait to open gates that are supposed to be closed and wreak havoc on the sanity and stability of a tired cowboy.

Every rural child in America is versed from birth on some basic rules in life. A very clear, never-to-be-questioned directive that is universal is, "Always shut the gate." That mandate is echoed through the formative years in a simple "shut the gate, shut the gate, shut the gate."

I've yet to meet a cowman, cowboy, or cow-wife who hasn't at one time or another made that inevitable mistake of leaving the gate open. Disaster doesn't always follow, but extra unnecessary work usually does.

If you happen to be the wife that left open gate, the level of the severity of the misdeed is heightened to what we would call today, Orange Alert.

First to follow the muffled cussing is a complete mathematical rundown of the cost per pound per minute per animal that is walking around the pasture instead of standing and gaining weight at the corn trough.

That is to be followed by the same calculations of financial loss when that animal gets out of walk to escape being recaptured.

The statistical data can be never ending and often is. With elephant-like memory the error bears revisiting on more than one occasion for at least a year or until a bigger error occurs, which ever comes first.

Contrary to the beliefs established by the amount of discussion on the subject, the open gate is not always the fault of the little woman.

That lends itself to a completely different set of assessment criteria.

Usually a shrug and an, "I don't know what I was thinking but it's a nice day for ride so we'll just put them back in the pens."

The "who" in "who left the gate open" is most definitely the determining factor for establishing the level of severity of the mishap.

Celebrating School Lunch Week

BY JULIE CARTER
FOR THE RUIDOSO NEWS

In October, school lunchrooms across the country took the time to recognize their accomplishments and make plans for better service to the students they feed.

National School Lunch Week was established in 1963 by a proclamation from President John F. Kennedy. It is designed to help raise awareness of and garner support for the role that nutrition programs play in the lives of America's children.

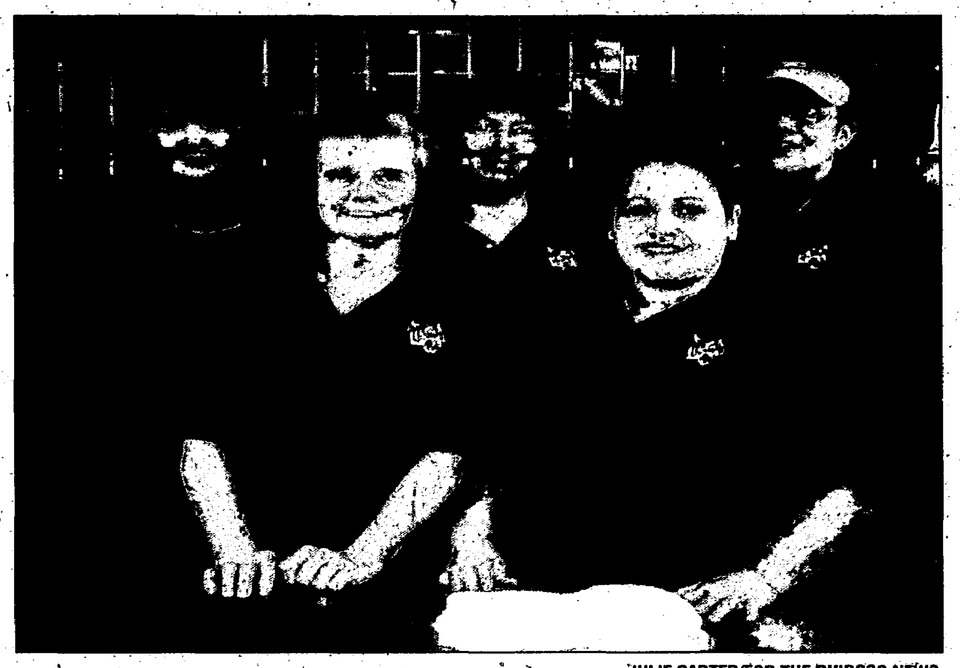
The lunchroom business is an industry that Capitan Schools food service director Martha Hawk says is the most challenging she has ever faced.

With 30 years' experience in the food industry, Hawk spent 12 years processing food for the space shuttle.

"It's a bigger challenge to get the kids to eat than it was to figure out ways to send food into outer space," she said.

In her efforts to entice the middle and high school students, they are offered two entrees daily.

"Of course, pizza is still their favorite, with hamburgers being their second favorite," said Hawk. "So we alternate them and serve one or the other every Friday."



JULIE CARTER/FOR THE RUIDOSO NEWS

Hawk said she and her staff are constantly searching for ways to meet state dietetic regulations and yet serve appetizing food to the students. Hawk believes that quality ingredients are a must.

Cathy Ventura has been on the lunchroom staff for six years and this year took over as head cook.

"She is doing an excellent job," Hawk said. "She is demonstrating outstanding leadership skills and dependability."

Another six-year kitchen veteran is Lisa Zamora, who has just become bakery cook. She makes all the cinnamon rolls, corn bread, dinner rolls and desserts from scratch. Hawk pointed out they don't serve a lot of desserts, as it quickly puts them over their allowed calorie count for the meal.

Karen Payton is the cashier, with two years on staff, while Marena Padilla just began with the crew four years ago.

"We all work very hard together. I can't say enough good things about these women. They do a wonderful job," said Hawk.

Realizing they face social and cultural barriers in regard to food wants and tastes in the children, Hawk said they do a lot of creative cooking. Like every good cook, they want to feed the child, not the trash can.

Last year about 28 million school lunches were served each school day.

Over 6 billion school meals are served annually and over 99,500 schools and childcare facilities participated in the National School Lunch program.

NEWS BRIEFS

Winners announced

Organizers have announced the winners of the second annual Historic Lincoln Halloween Carnival Costume Contest.

Seth Rabke, "The Pumpkin," and Colt Mitchell, "Cowboy on Horse," tied for the Infant-4-year-old category.

Among 5- to 8-year-olds, Brandon Engle was the winner in his "Red Power Ranger" disguise.

Shianne Winn, with her homemade "Devil" costume, won the 9- to 12-year-old category.

"Thanks to all the families that came to the carnival," said the contest's planner, Coda Omness.

Veterans service

Effective Nov. 9, Veterans Service Officer Tony Woodards, based in Alamogordo, will be at the Ruidoso Senior Citizens Center from 9 a.m.-3 p.m. the second Tuesday of each month.

Woodards can assist veterans, spouses and dependents on V.A. claims, benefits and other related matters.

Optimists unite

The Optimist Club (Friend of Youth) has scheduled a special membership meeting for noon on Wednesday, Nov. 10, at K-Bob's Restaurant.

The program will introduce potential members to the many projects sponsored by the club, two of which, Calls from Santa and Warm Coats for Kids, will begin this month.

Additional projects which serve thousands of kids throughout the community include bicycle safety, Earth Day river cleanup, oratorical and essay contests, and Head Start picnic.

The club also funds two $500 ENMU scholarships and two $1,000 scholarships for Ruidoso High School graduating seniors.

It contributes to Santa's Helpers, and Young Americans scholarships, as well as to other youth-oriented projects on an as-needed basis.

The club raises funds by obtaining hole sponsors for its annual Sierra Blanca Golf Scramble in May. All funds raised go to youth projects in the community.

For more information, call Jim or Vera Wood at 258-9218.

County meeting

A special meeting of the Lincoln County Board of Commissioners will be held at 2 p.m. today at 300 Central Ave. in Carrizozo.

Agenda

1. Call to order and roll call of commission members
2. Pledge of allegiance
3. Canvassing the votes of the November 2004 general election
4. Announcement of the next commission meeting: 8:30 a.m. Tuesday, Nov. 16.
5. Commission adjourns as the board of county commissioners.

Highway 48 update

From Ski Run Road to the top of Angus Hill:

Guardrail is being installed. There are barrels keeping traffic to one lane in each direction.

Because there is no signage yet, the new road is not completely opened. The second coat of paint on the stripes should happen next week depending on weather. The guardrail and the permanent signs should be in. At that point, all lanes will be open.

From the top of Angus Hill to Bonito Lake turnoff:

The subgrade is being prepared, then base course will be placed.

Angus Hill could be paved next week, depending on weather, followed by pipe installation, erosion protection and the guardrail.

Reception reminder

There will be a separate community reception for each of the three final candidates for the Eastern New Mexico University-Ruidoso dean's position, which will be vacated by Jim Miller when he retires in early 2005.

Each reception will be at the Hawthorn Suites and will be from 5:30-6:30 p.m. on Monday, Nov. 8; Tuesday, Nov. 9; and Thursday, Nov. 11.

POLICE BRIEFS

Chilly reception

Late on Monday evening, Ruidoso Police officers on foot patrol in Midtown went into The Quarters, where they heard complaints about an intoxicated man who had been recently ejected for acting rude and boisterous. A man fitting that description was soon located in the Coyote Cantina; police spoke with Michael Forte, 38, of Mescalero, and found him unsteady on his feet, with watery eyes, and smelling of alcohol, according to reports. Forte told police he would walk home, and left the building.

About 30 minutes later, officers were dispatched to a residence on Grant Drive, on the report that someone was trying to break in. They found Forte on the porch of the home; when they asked him where he lived, he was unable to give them a location. Forte, who knew the house's occupant, said was trying to get a ride home. With the temperature dipping to 24 degrees Fahrenheit, officers decided to bring Forte in from the cold. He was arrested and charged with disorderly conduct (public intoxication).

Cocaine charges

A Ruidoso woman was arrested Friday on a Grand Jury warrant from the State of New Mexico. Heather McMillian, 30, was found at the Cattle Baron restaurant in Ruidoso, and is charged with cocaine trafficking, a second-degree felony, and trafficking of a controlled substance-conspiracy, a third-degree felony. Bond was set at $10,000.

Warrant arrest

On Oct. 30, local officers arrested Jose A. Frias of Ruidoso on an outstanding warrant for failure to appear and contempt of court.

Easy pickings

Police reports say that Ronald J. McCann, 34, of Ruidoso, walked into the Ruidoso police station Oct. 29 with another person to discuss a traffic altercation. A check of records found that he was wanted in Portales for failure to appear or pay fines for a traffic violation in August. He was originally charged with driving 74 mph in a 40 zone; the warrant was served and McCann was released on bond.

No ducking

A Ruidoso Police officer on patrol early Saturday reportedly saw a white Ford Probe heading eastbound on Sudderth Drive. When the driver saw the police car, the report states, it made an abrupt turn onto Country Club and parked in a lot, "as if it were trying to avoid me." The car then drove back to Sudderth, and headed west.

The officer then reports a slow chase through town, as the car drove onto Mechem, went over the center line, and failed to stop even though the officer turned on emergency lights and sirens. Eventually, the Probe pulled into a home on Birch, and the driver got out. Charles A. Niederstadt of Ruidoso failed field sobriety tests, and was transported to the police station. The reporting officer also found an open beer can, with contents partially removed, sitting in a straw hat between seats. Breathalyzer tests showed his blood alcohol level at .13; Neiderstadt was charged with driving while intoxicated and having an open container of alcohol in the vehicle.

Repeat offender

Late on Sunday night, officers were dispatched to The Quarters parking lot on Sudderth Drive regarding a non-injury accident. There, they found the owner of a Volkswagon, who said his car had been struck by a gray Ford van, and supplied the license plate number.

Police found the van just up the hill, and spoke with the driver, David James LaFleur, 40, of El Paso. During the conversation, officers reported, LaFleur smelled of alcohol and appeared to lack normal motor skills. He was also unable to produce a driver's license or proof of insurance, then failed field sobriety tests, the report states. LaFleur was transported to the Ruidoso Police Department, where he refused to consent to a breathalyzer test. A check of his records, however, showed that because the defendant had at least three prior arrests for driving while intoxicated, a blood draw was mandatory. The department obtained a warrant, and the test was taken.

LaFleur was charged with DWI/Fourth Offense, a fourth-degree felony, and two misdemeanors: driving without a license and failure to carry proof of insurance.

He was also served with an outstanding warrant for failure to appear in Dona Ana County. Bond was set at $5,835.

PSYCHIC PREDICTIONS

Judith L. Christopher

Week of Nov. 5 - 11, 2004

SCORPIO: (Oct 23 - Nov 21)
It's not the who, what, where, when, or even how that is making you feel the way you have been feeling. It's Why are you putting up with all of this? It's time to stop the madness and get a life. Take charge now.

SAGITTARIUS: (Nov 22 - Dec 21)
The truth as you see it, is not always black and white. One plus one isn't always as simple as it seems. Count all the feeling you are having. Your instincts are right on track. If in doubt then don't. Look then see.

CAPRICORN: (Dec 22 - Jan 19)
A different road taken is just what you need. You'll ask yourself why it took so long to take it. You'll also ask yourself why you feel different. As strong as you are doesn't mean you don't need love too.

AQUARIUS: (Jan 20 - Feb 18)
The stars and moon are begging you to come out and play. What are you waiting for? It's your time to shine and have fun like a child again. Take only the ones that share the joy you have in your heart. Leave the rest behind.

PISCES: (Feb 19 - Mar 20)
"You'll know it when you see it" attitude will only get you into bad water. Make your own luck by having faith in the unknown. Faith in you. You have been here before, so get out there and show them who's boss.

ARIES: (Mar 21 - Apr 19)
Excuses are like ears; you have two of them. The right and the wrong of the answer. Quit questioning yourself just do it. Have fun doing it, or don't start it at all. Stay away from negative people that pull you down.

TAURUS: (Apr 20 - May 20)
One for the money. Two for the show. Three to get ready and four to know what your doing before you start. Regroup and start from the beginning. This will save you time and money. You'll be happier too.

GEMINI: (May 21 - Jun 20)
Think again if you think this'll be the same old same old. There's something or someone around the bend that has you in it's scopes. You could be the next target. Question: Do you want this to change your life?

CANCER: (Jun 21 - Jul 22)
Your feeling could be a little touchy, so surround yourself with loved ones and friends that understand what you're going through. Get away and be by yourself, and feel the feelings that only you know. Time heals.

LEO: (Jul 23 - Aug 22)
Your health is in question. You are not taking care of yourself as you should. This will only slow you down and take a toll on your Mind, Body and Soul. Take in only what is good for you. Keep true friends beside you.

VIRGO: (Aug 23 - Sep 22)
Someone from your past may need your help. Don't assume this is a good thing. Your good heart and not counting your time, could be spent on needless things. Think about who you want to spend your time with.

LIBRA: (Sept 23 - Oct 22)
Try something new. Try trusting you. Try to explain the way you feel. Try listening to something or someone that hasn't said a thing. Try to feel what you haven't seen yet so far. Try to understand what isn't there. Faith?

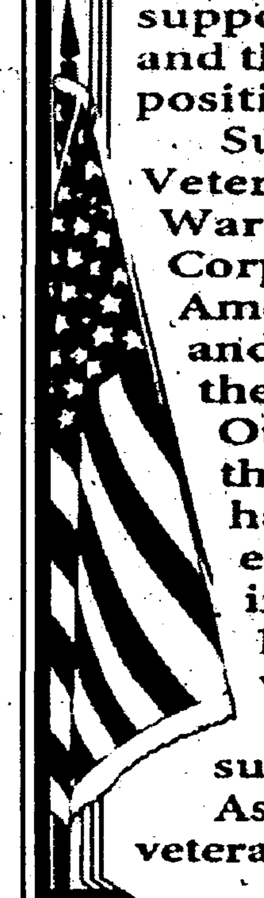
Veterans for Veterans



On Veterans' Day, we honor our veterans for the sacrifices they have made in the name of our freedom. We also remember their loss of time with growing families, as well as physical pain and loss for many. These veterans have also bonded to support each other and their families in positive ways.

Such groups as Veterans of Foreign Wars, the Marine Corps League, the American Legion, and numerous others, offer invaluable support and opportunities for their members and their loved ones.

Our government has provided a network of medical care devoted to the acute and ongoing physical and emotional needs of those who have served our country. Veterans, many of whom still suffer the ill effects of their injuries, regularly offer volunteer support and inspiration throughout these facilities. Though, in 1 Corinthians: 12: 25-26, Paul is speaking about the body of believers, our body of veterans share this connection as well... "that the members may have the same care for one another. If one member suffers, all suffer together; if one member is honored, all rejoice together."

As we worship during this time of reflection, may we pray for our veteran's continued camaraderie and support. Have a blessed Veterans' Day.

Do Christians own the truth?

Q: Why do Christians keep claiming that they alone have the truth about God? What is true for you isn't necessarily true for someone else. It just depends on the way we each look at things. The whole idea of "truth" is out of date. – W.S.

Billy Graham
MY ANSWER
TRIBUNE MEDIA SERVICES

A: Do you really believe there is no such thing as truth?

I doubt it. We all believe some things are truth and some things are false. Our experience proves it, and our lives depend on it.

For example, have you ever realized how many times you act in a certain way because you believe something is true? You'd never drink from a bottle that was marked "poison"; you know it might kill you. Poison is always dangerous, and you avoid it because you know this is true. In other words, you act in a certain way because you believe in truth - the truth that poison kills.

What does this have to do with God? Simply this: God is the source of all truth – and He has revealed the truth about Himself to us. Christians believe God did this in a way that staggers our imagination: He became a human being. Do you want to know what God is like? Look at Jesus Christ, for He was God in human flesh! As the Bible says, "The Word became flesh and made his dwelling among us." (John 1:14).

This is why I invite you to look at Jesus Christ as He is revealed in the pages of the Gospels. When you do, you will realize how much God loves you and why Jesus alone could say, "I am the way and the truth and the life. No one comes to the Father except through me." (John 14:6).

Negative campaigning divides us

Controversial, contested, and conflictive elections come and go in the DSA –Divided States of America, and we are still in the throes of this presidential election of 2004.

Clary-fications
BY CHARLES CLARY
RUIDOSO PASTOR

Accusations of wrongdoing are still being hurled about. Court cases will go on for months. The gap between liberal and conservative groups in our nation widens with every issue.

In their own mind, each group is better, smarter, and more capable to lead America than the other.

Each group damns the other for mistakes, messes, and misunderstandings.

It seems as though political races are based on the mistaken moral and ethical belief that "the more we put the other side down, the better we will look."

Personally, I'm tired of the negative political ads in the media.

I'm ready to say that we should limit the campaign between the candidates to 30 days prior to the election. I'm ready to limit the campaign funding to a fixed amount provided by the federal government with no other funding allowed.

I can already hear the media heads screaming at the thought. They make hundreds of millions off the campaigns and they don't have to "make" news for months.

And there ought to be accountability for false news reports. I guess the old adage "there is no honor among thieves" is correct.

But the greatest danger we face is that the "United" States of America is now the "Divided" States of America.

There seems to be nothing around which we can rally and be united again.

It seems as though we are not interested in uniting for the common good. We are divided in that everyone wants his own way.

One of our founding fathers told the truth when he said, "United we stand, divided we fall."

And the United States is in danger of falling – falling for "pie in the sky" promises, for "lie on the fly" premises, and for "by the sly" packaging of candidates and parties.

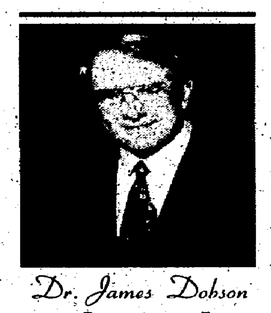
We are in need of a change, a change of principles, procedures and politics. God help us today or we have no hope for tomorrow.

Remember, Jesus is our help for today and our hope for tomorrow.

Denial is the mind's attempt to protect itself from pain

QUESTION: Can boys and girls be taught to treat each other with respect? That seems like a tough assignment.

DR. DOBSON: They certainly can! Young people are naturally more sensitive and empathetic than adults. Their viciousness is a learned response, resulting from the highly competitive and hostile world in which they live – a world we have allowed to develop. They are destructive to the weak and lowly because we adults haven't bothered to teach them to "feel" for one another.



Dr. James Dobson
FOCUS ON THE FAMILY
UNIVERSAL PRESS SYNDICATE

One of the values children cherish most is justice. They are, on the other hand, uneasy in a world of injustice and abuse.

Therefore, when we teach children respect for others by insisting on civility in our classrooms, we're laying a foundation for human kindness in the world of adulthood to come. It is a fundamental attitude that should be taught in every classroom and every home.

QUESTION: Do you feel that there is a kind of "blindness" that can occur when a victim of an affair denies the truth? I seemed to experience this when my husband was fooling around with my best friend. The affair went on for two years before I could acknowledge it to myself. Why would I deny the truth? Why do victims "choose" to be blind?

DR. DOBSON: That psychological process is called denial, and it is designed to protect the mind from an unacceptable thought or reality. Once a person admits to himself or herself that a beloved spouse has been unfaithful, then he or she is obligated to deal with that circumstance. The painful experiences of grief, anxiety and insomnia become inevitable once the truth has been faced. Furthermore, the injured person fears that a confrontation with the unfaithful partner might drive the spouse into the arms of the new lover.

Given these concerns, the person consciously or unconsciously chooses not to notice the affair in the hope that it will blow over and be forgotten. There is motivation for a vulnerable person to deny what the eyes are seeing.

When the evidence of unfaithfulness becomes overwhelming, a person will sometimes "ask" the guilty spouse to assist with the denial. This is done by making accusations in the hope of being proven wrong. For example, a wife will say, "Are you and Donna seeing each other?"

"No, I've told you a thousand times that nothing is going on," he lies.

"But where were you until 2 o'clock this morning?"

"I had car trouble. Now will you get off my back?"

This wife knows her husband's story is phony, but she continually asks him to lie to her. She does not feel obligated to "blow the whistle" on him until he admits his involvement .., which may never happen. These tacit agreements help her maintain the illusion that all is well, and provides a permissive environment in which the husband can play around.

Denial has many applications and uses in human experience. It will permit a woman to ignore a suspicious lump in her breast, or the drugs in her son's bedroom, or the debt that the family is accumulating. Through this process the mind is protected for a time, but it often permits even greater disasters to gain a foothold in our lives.

FUNERALS DEATHS

Margueritte Cook

A graveside service for Margueritte Cook, 82, of Fort Sumner, was held Thursday, Nov. 4, at the Cook Family plot in the Fort Sumner Cemetery. The Rev. Coy Brewer presided.

Mrs. Cook died Monday, Nov. 1, 2004, at the Retirement Ranch Care Center in Clovis.

She was born March 7, 1922, in Fort Sumner to the home of Joe and Liccie Bowlin. She was reared and attended schools in Fort Sumner, where she also married R.J. Cook on Dec. 16, 1939.

In Fort Sumner, the Cooks worked together in the family businesses and were members of the First Baptist Church.

She was preceded in death by her husband in 2002; her parents; and a brother, Joe Bowlin.

Survivors include daughter Brenda J. Stockton (and husband Ben) of Portales; son Gary W. Cook (and wife Jeri) of Clovis; five grandchildren, Dr. Seth W. Cook (and wife Katrina) of Waco, Texas, Zachery J. Cook (and wife Angie) of Ruidoso, Amber C. Brooks (and husband Brandon) of Albuquerque, Paige N. Cook of Amarillo, Texas, and Kasey R. Stockton of Las Cruces; brother-in-law Kenneth Cook (and wife Frances) of Moriarty; and two great-granddaughters, Sydney Brooks of Albuquerque and Julia Montgomery of Ruidoso.

Pallbearers for Thursday's service were Rusty Cook, Russell Crownover, Alan Crownover, Henry Saiz, Paul Horney, Buddy Cortese, Nick Cortese and Kenny Cook. Honorary bearers included F.B. Willis and E.J. Crownover.

Contributions in Mrs. Cook's name may be made to the NM Boys & Girls Ranches 6209 Hendrix NE; Albuquerque, NM 87110.

Chavez Funeral Home in Fort Sumner handled the arrangements.

Opal Crenshaw Mills

A memorial service for Opal Juanita Crenshaw Mills, 85, formerly of Ruidoso, will be held at 11 a.m. on Saturday, Nov. 20, at the Nogal Presbyterian Church.

Mrs. Mills died Nov. 1, 2004.

She was born on Oct. 8, 1919, in White Oaks to Robert A. and Bertha Starkey Crenshaw.

She was raised at the family ranch on the north side of the Patos Mountains, and attended school in Carrizozo, graduating from CHS in 1935.

After graduation, she attended Oklahoma University and Eastern New Mexico College in Portales, where she was a member of Sigma Iota Chi and competed in the 1941 ENMC Rodeo.

In July 1962, The Western Horseman mentioned her in an article about that 1941 event, reporting that not only did she compete in the steer riding event, but won and "humbled" her male competitors. She graduated from the University of New Mexico with a degree in education in 1942, and later received her master's degree in library science from Texas Tech.

She married W.H. Mills in 1942. They lived in New Mexico, Texas and several other states, as well as overseas in Venezuela, South Africa and Saudi Arabia before retiring to Ruidoso in 1980.

In 1994 she moved to Las Cruces, and spent her final days in El Paso.

Mrs. Mills was a member of the League of Women Voters, the American Association of University Women, Eastern Star, Amaranth, Lincoln County Sheriff's Posse, Lincoln County Historical Society, Ruidoso Garden Club, Lincoln County Republican Party and Lincoln County Pony Express Committee.

Mrs. Mills was preceded in death by her husband, parents, five siblings, an infant son and her longtime friend, Jay Frasheur.

Survivors include her daughters, Karen Mills of White Oaks and Donna Gore of Midland, Texas; son Michael Mills of El Paso; three grandchildren and one great-granddaughter; as well as her caregivers, Daniel E. Gilpatrick and Richard E. McKinnon Jr.

Donations in Mrs. Mills' name may be made to agencies that provide hospice care.

SAVE TIME! SAVE MONEY! PROTECT YOUR PRIVACY!

Should you and your loved ones have a
LIVING TRUST?
A FREE one-hour, easy to understand public information event.

- A Will is merely a ticket for your family to spend unnecessary time, energy and money with the Probate Court and attorneys.
- 6 out of 10 people over the age of 65 have absolutely no financial or estate plan in place.
- The Wall Street Journal™ says, "... if you own Real Estate, whether paid for or not, you should have a Revocable Living Trust."
- Forbes Magazine™ says, "No middle class family should be without a Living Trust..."
- Wills DO NOT keep your privacy and may not help in the event you or your loved ones are disabled, incapacitated or in need of long-term care.
- Estate Plans are easy to establish, affordable and include Power(s) of Attorney for health care and asset management, Medical Directive(s), Living Will(s), the Abstract of Trust as well as funding documents and complete instructions for your loved ones on how to settle the estate.

In 2005, the USDA Forest Service will celebrate its 100th birthday. Capitan elementary librarian Denise Briggs has invited Woodsy Owl and Smokey Bear to help teach Capitan grades K-5 what they stand for and what their slogans mean. Pictured here are the third-grade classes of Mrs. Susan Owings and Mrs. Betsy Peralta. Lynn Lovelace(next to Smokey) of New Mexico State Forestry, and Maryann Gould, of the National Forest Service, show students the poster they will be coloring as they learn about Woodsy and Smokey.

Art awards

Carrizozo Woman's Club hosted an art exhibit Oct. 21. Madeleine Sabo, pictured at left, won a blue ribbon in the Professional Category I for a hand-turned wooden juniper vase. Peggy Pinson and Ruth Birdsong received blue ribbons for their artwork in Category II-Homecrafts. Art judges were Katherine Phillips-Hellman, Capitan, Susie Komora, Ruidoso, District IV Arts Chairman Alisa Estrada, Silver City, and Jeannie Adams, Capitan. COURTESY PHOTO

SANDY SUGGITT/VAMONOS

A deadly occupation: murder

When the rehearsal begins for the TV quiz show, "It's a Living!", who would suspect that before the telecast is over, the hardest problem to solve would be, "Who killed Tony Fabrizi, the show's sponsor?"

And why was he murdered? Was it for the diamond bracelet he had bought for the commercial, or was he shot for personal reasons?

Find out this weekend in "Occupation Murder!", the first production of this year's advanced drama class at Ruidoso High School.

Performances are set for this Friday and Saturday, Nov. 5 and 6.

Homicide detective Lt. Jim Slate (Connor Reveley) discovers that most of the TV show's cast had motives to murder Tony Fabrizi (Ben Mullins) – or could it have been his Italian wife with the fiery temper (Sheridan Wheat)?

Perhaps he knew about her husband's involvement with Marilyn (Mackenzie Mobley), a girl with knockout looks and a horrible voice?

Rounds of the fictional game show are actually played during the performance, using members of the audience on stage as contestants.

With the help of Amanda Maxwell (Suzanna Lester), a little old lady and amateur sleuth, Lt. Slate solves the case at the conclusion to "Occupation: Murder!"

The show begins at 7 p.m. both nights at the RHS performing arts center. Admission is $8 for adults and $5 for seniors and students.

On Friday night, the high school's Teepee Lounge will provide dinner starting at 6 p.m.

Tickets for dinner and the play are $15. For tickets, contact Cathi McIntosh at 258-4910.

ARTS BRIEFS

Artist reception

The Southwest Book Roundup, 123 E. Smokey Bear Blvd. in Capitan will host an exhibit by local artist Sandra Smith through the month of November. There will be a reception with Smith from 7 to 9 p.m. Friday, Nov. 5.

Sandra Smith is a fine art photographer and computer graphic artist. She photographs works of art for giclee reproduction and for Web sites, which she helps maintain for galleries and artists in the area. She is also known for her photo restoration using advanced digital art technology.

Smith's art includes scenes from historic Lincoln and other unique Lincoln County locales, as well as book illustration.

She has had exhibits in the Hubbard Museum's juried photography show and in the Lincoln School Art Gallery. Her exhibit will include watercolors and prints digitally derived from her photographs, as well as her reconstruction of the tintype of Billy the Kid.

The Southwest Book Roundup opened in July. It focuses on books about the Southwest, including regional and local history, fire management, cowboys, Native Americans, southwest mysteries, Westerns, travelogues, cookbooks and children's books.

The store also carries a selection of turquoise jewelry and other Southwest gifts. It is a licensed Smokey Bear retailer, with a wide selection of Smokey Bear gifts including exclusive designs.

The store's business hours are 6-9 p.m. Thursdays and Fridays, 10 a.m.-6 p.m. Saturdays and 11 a.m.-4 p.m. Sundays.

The store is owned by the husband and wife team of Bill Martin and Carolyn Schrader, and can be reached at swbr@zianet.com

Gyotaku: A fish that's fit to print

Art, Craft and Such

Practical, creative ways to include fun in everyday living
by Polly E. Chavez

In Japan, sportsmen preserve records of their catches with 'gyotaku.' Gyotaku (fish printing) is a Japanese art form from the 1800s which is an unusual way to appreciate the beauty and variety of nature. (A fish print never lies.)

In the United States, it has been practiced as an art form for about 25 years; Janet Canning was an American pioneer in gyotaku.

Fishing clinic specialist Josephine J. Graf showed Carrizozo students how to do gyotaku fish prints. As an employee of the New Mexico Department of Game and Fish, Graf travels all over the state promoting participation and education in fishing and educating children in the protection of aquatic resources. Recently, she was at Carrizozo Schools, where she held interacting, hands-on activities for kindergarten through fifth grade students. The older students were involved in aquatic invertebrate investigations; life cycles and identification of bugs and water quality.

It was the gyotaku fish printing session for the younger students that caught my attention. In gyotaku the fish is used as a relief printing block, similar to a woodblock or linocut.

The fish is the traditional subject used for gyotaku, but the art form can include frogs, lizards, snakes, feathers and such. You can also use this technique for making prints of shells, rocks, flowers, and other objects of nature. Nature printing is at least 800 years old and was described by Leonardo da Vinci.

Graf had the Carrizozo students use life-like rubber fish replicas for their fish prints. Gyotaku can be a very involved process that begins with a very fresh trout or salmon. You can buy one from the supermarket. If you catch the fish yourself, keep it cold and print it within 24 hours. Linoleum block print ink, speedball, or any thick water soluble ink can be used.

When a Japanese fisherman catches a large fish worthy of record, he hires an artist to make a print of the fish. The paint is water-based and nontoxic, so the fish can be rinsed off and sold in the market. Each year the Japanese hold contests and use gyotaku as the proof of a trophy catch. This technique has become popular in the United States. Artists in San Francisco and other parts of the country wait along the docks for the sport fishing boats to bring their catch back from the ocean. Many tourists on these boats choose to have prints made of their fish, rather than having it stuffed and mounted by a taxidermist.

This Week's Movies

The following films are scheduled to play this weekend at Sierra Cinema in Ruidoso.

The Incredibles

Action/Adventure, Comedy, Kids/Family, Science Fiction/Fantasy and Animation
1 hr. 45 min. 'The Incredibles' follows the adventures of a family of former superheroes rediscovering the true source of their powers - in one another. Once one of the world's top masked crimefighters, Bob Parr (AKA Mr. Incredible) fought evil and saved lives on a daily basis. But 15 years later, he and his wife Helen (a famous former superhero in her own right) have been forced to take on civilian identities and retreat to the suburbs. Today they live as mere mortals and lead all-too-ordinary lives with their children... who go out of their way to appear "normal." As a clock-punching insurance man, the only thing Bob fights these days is boredom and a bulging waistline. Itching for action, the sidelined superhero gets his chance when a mysterious communication summons him to a remote island for a topsecret assignment. Now, with the fate of the world hanging in the balance, the family must come together and once again find the fantastic in their family life.
Rated PG for action violence.
Starring: Craig T. Nelson, Holly Hunter, Samuel L Jackson, Jason Lee, Elizabeth Peña
Directed by: Brad Bird
Showtimes: Daily 4:50, 7:25, 10:00 Friday 2:20; Saturday and Sunday11:45.

The Grudge

Suspense/Horror
"The Grudge" is the curse of one who dies in the grip of a powerful rage. Those who encounter this murderous supernatural curse die and a new one is born, passed from victim to victim in an endless, growing chain of horror.
Rated PG-13 for mature thematic material, disturbing images/terror/violence, and some sensuality.
Starring: Sarah Michelle Gellar, Jason Behr, Clea DuVall, Bill Pullman, Kadee Strickland
Directed by: Takashi Shimizu
Showtimes: Daily 5:05, 7:40, 10:00: Friday 2:15; Saturday and Sunday 11:45.

Friday Night Lights

Drama
1 hr. 57 min. Based on the book about high school football by H.G. Bissinger, "Friday Night Lights" chronicles the entire 1988 season of the Permian High Panthers of Odessa, Texas, with football players, coaches, mothers, fathers, boosters, fans and families struggling with ongoing personal conflicts while the team fights for a state championship. In depicting the daily grind of coach Gary Gaines' (Billy Bob Thornton) winning team and the potential destinies of its individual players, the story paints a vivid portrait of Odessa (and places like it all across America) where, once a week during the fall, the town and its dreams come alive beneath the dazzling and disorienting Friday night lights...when the Panthers take to the field. "Friday Night Lights" illuminates the hopes and dreams of Odessa's townsfolk, who ardently fill Ratliff Stadium's 20,000 seats every Friday night. For the young men of the team, every moment, every play is a chance to transcend their small town and the fleeting fulfillment of a gridiron stardom whose pinnacle may be reached by the time they turn 18.
Rated PG-13 for thematic issues, sexual content, language, some teen drinking and rough sports action.
Starring: Billy Bob Thornton, Derek Luke, Garrett Hedlund, Jay Hernandez, Lucas Black
Directed by: Peter Berg
Showtimes: Daily 4: 50, 7:25, 10:00; Friday 2:15; Saturday and Sunday 11:45.

One of the title characters from Pixar's "The Incredibles."

Coming Wednesday, Nov. 11: Polar Express.

Production help sought for 'Carol'

The Lincoln County Community Theater production of "A Christmas Carol" is under way, with production set to take place Dec. 3, 4 and 5.

But it's not too late to get involved with this holiday theatrical production. The cast of 60 children and adults will give four performances in the week after Thanksgiving, including two Sunday matinees.

Don Madera, a veteran of many musical theater and church productions, has been cast as Scrooge, with local favorite Bj Williams serving as the on-stage author, Charles Dickens. Other adult cast members include Roger Sowder, Devin Marshall and Steve Stigall.

Sandy Kashmar is leading the children's chorus, which will perform throughout the show.

The director is still looking for technical and set construction crew volunteers, as well as donations of appropriate costumes and props.

If you have experience or just a desire to help, call director Cathi McIntosh at 258-4910 or stage manager Niki Price at 258-4490.

HUMOR

Kindergarten for the gifted

Dave's World

By Dave Barry
Tribue Media Services

So my wife and I went to this meeting at our daughter's preschool. The purpose was to give us helpful information about our kindergarten options.

Let me just say, as a parent: AIEEEEEEEEEE.

Centuries ago, when I was a small hairless preschool child in Armonk, N.Y., kindergarten was simple. When you turned 5, you enrolled in Wampus Elementary and attended Miss Gregory's kindergarten class, where you made hideous refrigerator art from construction paper and paste. There were no other curriculum options, unless you count the option of, when Miss Gregory was not looking, eating the paste.

I honestly thought it would be pretty much the same thing for our daughter. I mean, we live near an elementary school. It has a kindergarten. I figured Sophie would attend kindergarten there. I was an idiot.

It turns out that this is not about kindergarten at all. This is about LIFE. And when I say "life," I of course mean, "Harvard."

You need to get your child into the right kindergarten program, so that she can get into the right elementary-school program, without which she cannot get into the right middle-school program, without which she can't get into the right high-school program, which means SHE WILL NOT GET INTO HARVARD BECAUSE YOU FLUSHED HER LIFE DOWN THE TOILET BY PICKING THE WRONG KINDERGARTEN WHEN SHE WAS 5 YEARS OLD YOU WORTHLESS UNCARING PARENTAL SCUM.

I know what you're thinking. You're thinking: "That's ridiculous! You can't wait until your child is 5 years old to start thinking about Harvard! You have to start MUCH sooner!"

This is true. In certain places, by which I mean Manhattan Island, serious parents start obsessing about Harvard before their child is, technically, born. They spend their evenings shouting the algebraic equations in the general direction of the womb so the child will have an edge during the intensely competitive process of applying for New York City's exclusive private preschools –yes, PREschools –where tuition can run –and I am not making this figure up – well over $15,000 a year. If you're wondering how on earth a preschool can get away with charging that kind of money, the answer is three words: really delicious paste.

But seriously, the question is: Why are these parents willing to go to such extremes, and spend so much money, to get a child into a certain nursery school? The answer is: They're insane.

No, that's unfair. They're simply people who want their children to have every possible academic advantage so they can get into Harvard, which admits only extremely high achievers, which a lot of the time means students whose parents have driven themselves insane.

But it's not their fault! It's Harvard's fault! Harvard could do this nation a great service by changing its admission policies. Imagine if, instead of accepting a typical applicant who is class president AND valedictorian AND star athlete AND active in community affairs, Harvard started selecting applicants based on, say, their ability to burp the theme song from "Gilligan's Island."

Wouldn't that be wonderful? Wouldn't that cause these Harvard-crazed hyper-parents to chill out and allow their kids to just be kids?

No, it would not. It would create a huge demand for burping tutors. But getting back to our kindergarten meeting: We went in there naively thinking we were going to find out how to enroll our daughter in our local kindergarten.

Instead, we spent 90 minutes finding out that we had all these options: Did we want our daughter to be in a magnet program? What kind? International studies? Math and science? Performing arts? How about a charter school? Or maybe a gifted program?

And should it be integrated gifted? Or pullout gifted? Or learning disabled? Or learning disabled-gifted? And what about private school?

These options, and many more, were explained to us by two nice, knowledgeable, thoughtful people with long experience in the local schools. They urged us to visit different schools and ask many questions before making our kindergarten decision.

They stressed that every child is different and there is no right answer. I think I speak for every parent in the room when I say that I came out of there truly believing that, whatever choice we ended up making for our daughter, it would somehow be wrong and she would NOT GET INTO HARVARD.

After the meeting, we went home and relieved the babysitter. Our daughter was wearing her Ariel the Mermaid outfit.

She is deeply into being a mermaid. If there were a gifted mermaid magnet kindergarten program, that would be her first choice. And, for that matter, mine. Assuming they have decent paste.

Crafts at Hubbard

November is Family Art Workshop Month at the Hubbard Museum of the American West.

The first three Saturdays in November the museum will host three fun and educational workshops. Nov. 6 is all about leathercraft. On Nov. 13, learn the history of the Christmas ornament, and take home a tree design. Nov. 20, learn the art of outdoor photography, for the teens in the house.

All workshops are at the Hubbard Museum. For registration information call Coda at 378-4142 or coda@hubbardmuseum.org.

Applications open

The 44th Annual New Mexico Arts & Crafts Fair is accepting applications from artists and craftspeople residing in New Mexico.

The fair will run from Friday, June 24, through Sunday, June 26, 2005. Deadline for submissions is January 21, 2005.

A complete prospectus can be downloaded from NMACF's site at nmartsandcraftsfair.org or by calling (505) 884-9043.

The New Mexico Arts & Crafts Fair is the only show open exclusively to artists and craftspeople from New Mexico. Over 220 artists vie for prizes totaling more than $4,500 in this juried show. The Fair presents established artists as well as emerging artists.

All artwork displayed is original and each artist must be present for the entire fair. Tents are provided for the participants.

There will be an entry workshop at 1 p.m. Dec. 4 at the NMACF office. The workshop is geared to answer artists' questions about how to enter, how to prepare slides, or what category work should be entered in. The office is located at 5500 San Mateo NE, Suite 106, Albuquerque, NM 87109.

Jurors include Cecily Colbert for ceramics, Anne Cooper for sculpture, Luis Demitrio for jewelry, Georgia de Katona for museum, Suzy Smith for painting, and Katy Widger for fiber.

The fair will be held outdoors at EXPO New Mexico State Fairgrounds, at the corner of San Pedro and Central in Albuquerque.

Main Street of the fairgrounds provides a shady tree-lined backdrop to enjoy the artwork.

In the loop?

Art Loop's 10th Annual Tour of Working Artist Studios is designed to highlight the work of professional artists living in Carrizozo, Nogal, Capitan, Lincoln, Hondo, San Patricio and points in between.

Professional artists in all media are encouraged to apply. This year, 20 locations will be chosen to be included in Art Loop by three impartial jurors.

Applicants must be permanent residents of Lincoln County and fall within the Art Loop boundaries as mentioned in the description.

Also required: applicants' studio space must be a permanent, full time working studio; accepted artists may display only their original work and may not invite other artists to display their

Comedy in Roswell

"The Maginot Line," a comedy written by Emmet Loverde, will be presented by the Roswell Community Little Theatre as its second production of the new season. The director of the play is Patti Stacy.

The plot revolves around a young woman who is obsessed with arranging a perfect dinner party, then realizes she is becoming unlike her idea of perfection as a person.

Evening peformances are scheduled for 7 p.m. Nov. 12, 13, 19 and 20. Two Sunday matinees are set for 2 p.m. Nov. 14 and 21.

Reservations for nighttime shows can be made by calling 505-622-1982; no reservations are needed for Sunday performances.

Admission is $7 for adults and $3.50 for fulltime students. Groups of 10 or more attending together may receive the group rate of $5 per person.

The theater is located at 12th and Virginia Streets in Roswell.

"Forever New Mexico"

Newly released, "Forever New Mexico" draws upon a treasure trove of photographs from the archives of New Mexico Magazine, the Museum of New Mexico and the Works Progress Administration.

A total of 128 photographs are presented that depict not only authentic, mostly unscathed landscapes but also genuine New Mexicans engulfed in their humble everyday lives before World War II and its aftermath altered the state forever.

For lovers of history, nostalgia, the arts, archaeology, anthropology, people and a whole slew of other subjects, the many photographers of the early 1900s through the Great Depression captured intriguing slices of by-gone New Mexico, which remained relatively unchanged for centuries.

On the cover, two farm boys ride the

HISTORY

The Beck-Proctor feud

Back in the 1870s, these two Oklahoma familes ran terminally afoul of each other

Past Tense

by Drew Gomber
Historian, The Hubbard Museum of the American West

The Cherokee Indians were called "civilized" – whatever that means, as far back as before the Civil War. Nevertheless, like virtually everyone else on the frontier, they resorted to violence at the drop of a hat.

Beginnings

Both the Proctors and the Becks were prominent Cherokee families, and in what is now Adair County, Oklahoma, they ran terminally afoul of each other in 1872.

Jim Kesterson was a white man living with "Aunt" Polly Beck Hildebrand and it was Kesterson who initially got on the "wrong side" of Zeke Proctor, a man about whom more legends than facts are known.

In fact, no one really even knows what started all the violence. It is thought that Kesterson may have accused Zeke of stealing his stock.

Whatever the case, on February 13, 1872, Proctor rode up to the Hildebrand Mill and dismounting, drunkenly announced that "I'm going to kill me a white man!" Which was not how it worked out, as it developed...

When Zeke dismounted and drew down on Kesterson, Polly jumped in front of her man just as Zeke pulled the trigger. The bullet slammed into Polly Beck Hildebrand's chest, and she collapsed, dying.

Jim Kesterson took off like a jackrabbit, with Proctor sending two more rounds screaming after him that only succeeded in perforating his coat. But the damage was done.

"Aunt" Polly Beck Hildebrand lay dying on the ground and as her maiden name had been Beck, everyone knew there would be hell to pay. And there was.

The trial

The following month, in March, the case went to trial. Because both the Proctor and Beck families were so large, it was almost impossible to find a judge and jury that wasn't related to either side. So delay followed delay, into April.

The Becks were not pleased with the way things were going, and on April 11th, Jim Kesterson and a number of the Becks rode into Fort Smith, Arkansas, to swear out a federal warrant.

The trial finally began on April 15th, and according to many, virtually everyone in the courtroom, including Zeke Proctor himself, was armed.

About 11 a.m., a large group of horsemen arrived. It was a group of the Becks, in the company of two Deputy U.S. Marshals, J.G. Peavy and J.G. Owens.

The Becks dismounted and pushing past the two lawmen, headed for the courtroom doors. In case there was any doubt as to their intentions, they were cocking their weapons as they came. As they pushed past the Indian policeman at the door, one of the Becks fired a shot and the proverbial horse apples hit the fan.

As one of the Becks leveled his shotgun at Zeke, Johnson Proctor, Zeke's brother grabbed the barrels, taking one of them full in the chest.

Although mortally wounded, Johnson managed to push the weapon down toward the floor before it discharged. Zeke caught a couple of buckshot in the foot, the only wounds he would suffer that bloody day.

Zeke Proctor then produced a pistol and at point-blank range, opened fire. Men were dropping on both sides. Muzzle flashes and gunsmoke filled the air as the moaning and screaming of the wounded reached fever pitch.

The gunfight spilled outside as the Becks began to realize that there were far more Proctors present than they had anticipated and that they were heavily out-gunned.

Finally, mounting their horses, the Becks galloped away amidst a hail of gunfire.

To this day, no one is entirely sure of the casualties. But it appears that a total of 11 died and even more were wounded. Seven of the dead were named Beck.

The trial continues

Even after all this, the wheels of justice continued to grind. The very next day, the court was reconvened with only one jury member being replaced because of wounds received the previous day.

The jury deliberated just long enough to acquit Zeke before departing the area for healthier climes at about Mach I. They knew that either more Becks, or more U.S. Marshals – Deputy Marshal Owens had died in the shootout – would be along soon and no one wanted to be there to greet them.

Zeke was no fool, either. With a guard force that may have been as many as 50 men, he headed for the most inaccessible parts of the Cherokee Nation, where he remained for quite some time.

Zeke

Zeke Proctor, after all this, became something of a hero to many Cherokees. Because Kesterson had been the white lover of a Cherokee woman, there was little sympathy for him, despite the fact that he had been adopted into the nation.

Additionally, Zeke was a member of a group called the Keetoowahs, a group that stood for tribal tradition, and against the encroachment of the white man. Many Cherokees felt that Zeke had divine protection, as his altercations with Kesterson and the Becks were not his first brushes with violence.

It was rumored that Zeke may have killed as many as 20 men and most people felt that there were at least a half dozen dead men down his back trail.

Then again, maybe that metal breastplate he reportedly wore under his shirt may have had something to do with his longevity...

Five years later, in 1877, Zeke became the Cherokee Senator from his district and then, in 1894, he was elected Sheriff. Curiously, Zeke also became a Deputy U.S. Marshal in 1891, a fact that can only be called ironic when one considers his prior relationship with the Marshals.

Nevertheless, he seems to have liked it, as his contract was renewed in 1895. Of course, Zeke would be a valuable man to have on any manhunt in the Indian Nations, as he knew every back trail and every hideout – he had, after all, used them all himself.

During this period, Zeke rode with Heck Bruner, a tough U.S. Marshal forgotten by popular history, although he shouldn't be.

The feud

And the feud? Well, the Becks were not about to forgive and forget and Zeke had to be cautious - very cautious - for most of his life. He never left home unarmed and if he came to town by one route, you could bet he would leave by another.

One of the leaders among the Becks had been a man called "White Sut" and as time passed, the feud seemed to boil down to a more personal feud between White Sut and Zeke. Finally, they came face to face in the Tahlequah Land Office. The meeting may have been arranged, or may have been an accident.

The date is uncertain, but according to witnesses, the two ancient enemies came face to face at last and both just stood looking at each other. Both men were heavily armed.

Finally, it was White Sut who spoke. "We're too old to fight," he said, "but I'm game and I know you are, too. I'll walk away if you will."

They were two tough, proud old men at this point, and they just stared at each other for long moments. Finally, almost as if they had pre-arranged a signal, both men turned and walked away. As a kind of tribute to each other, neither ever looked back.

In 1907, Zeke Proctor finally died, not of bullet wounds, as one might have expected, but of pneumonia.

The feud was finally over and in the words of historian Robert Barr Smith, "Nobody had backed down. Nobody had won. Nobody had lost. Which was how it should have been."

Amen to that.

Blasdell in Artist's Corner

Expressionist painter Patsy Blasdell is the featured artist in the Hubbard Museum of the American West's Artist's Corner, from Nov. 4 through Dec. 19.

Blasdell is a lighthearted soul who thrives on color applied in any medium on any surface.

She labels her art as expressionism, whether it's a cat with orange eyes and blue hair or an orchard of purple apple trees.

Intuition is a major ingredient in the making of a piece regarding color, however design and composition are the most crucial factors.

Studying with noted artists such as Bill Herring, Sidney Hermel, Ann Templeton, Frank Federico and Ted Robertson have influenced Blasdell's vision of her art.

She has been accepted into numerous national and international exhibitions, including the Pastel Society of America in New York City, and has received awards, as well.

She is an elected associate member of the Pastel Society of America, a member of New Mexico Watercolor Society, Southern Chapter in Las Cruces, the Pastel Society of New Mexico and Las Cruces Art Society. Galleries representing her work are Lundeen's Gallery in Las Cruces and The Schoolhouse Gallery in Lincoln.

For more information, contact Cheryl Knobel at the Hubbard Museum of the American West at 378-4142 or e-mail cherylk@hubbardmuseum.org.

Pottery show

Five of the best potters in the area — including three from Lincoln County — are coming together for an exclusive show the month of November at Eagle Ranch.

Roy Brown, Ivy Heymann, Don Ellis, Alan Miner and Janet Bruneau will have their formidable talents on display at the gallery.

Janet Bruneau was born and raised in Alamogordo, and discovered her love of ceramics at an early age.

Her mother and grandmother were involved in the family business, Whaleys Ceramics, and taught Janet the intricacies of the art.

A natural student, she went on to study at Montclair State College and New Mexico State University, and traveled around the country to special workshops to increase her skills.

She currently teaches at NMSU, works at her studio in Boles Acres and partners with Pat Brumm at Un Toque de Luz Studio in Alamogordo.

Alan Miner, another native New Mexican, resides in Ruidoso. He graduated from McMurry College in Abilene, Texas, where he earned his bachelor of fine arts degree, studying under George Holland and Don Ellis.

He has been a production potter, working with ceramic artists from all over the world.

He now owns and operates "Earth-N-Stone" in Midtown Ruidoso, where he features his functional, high fire stoneware and porcelain pottery. The studio is an attraction where people can come to watch Alan create on the potters wheel.

Ivy Heymann lives in a serene setting in White Oaks, where the scene from her windows echos the colors and simplicity of her work.

Focused on form and function, the result is a simple, elegant beauty. She got hooked on pottery in high school, and continued her education at Miami Dade Junior College, the University of Miami, and the University of Tennessee.

Like the other potters, her continuing education included many workshops, with Asian and American folk pottery influencing her work.

Don Ellis is a lifelong potter and educator from Cloudcroft. He taught for many years at McMurry University in Abilene and at NMSU in Alamogordo.

Presently, he owns and operates Cloudcroft Pottery and does numerous workshops throughout the U.S. and Canada. He holds both a bachelor of science in education and a master's degree in ceramics.

He creates everything from high-fire, functional stoneware to decorative vessels in copper matt raku, horsehair raku, and saggar-fired raku. He is one of four artists featured in the recently released book, Alternative Kilns & Firing Techniques.

Roy Brown is a renowned potter who has returned to New Mexico, and is living in Glencoe. Known for his intricate designs, his pieces are collector's items.

A reception for the artists will be held on Nov. 5 at the gallery from 7-9 p.m. Eagle Ranch is located at 7288 Highway 54/70, between Alamogordo and Tularosa.

Gallery hours are 8 a.m.-6 p.m. Monday through Saturday, and 9 a.m.-6 p.m. on Sundays. Call (505) 434-0035 for additional information.

Beach condo

Artists wanted to share a two bedroom condo close to the beach with studio in San Carlos, Mexico, Dec. 1-15. The cost is $600 or less and includes transportation. Paint, draw, tour. Call Garrett Trent, M.F.A., at (505) 808-1428.

Apprenticeships

Folk artist apprenticeships are available from New Mexico Arts, a division of the Department of Cultural Affairs, for fiscal year 2006 funding.

The purpose of the program is to maintain the traditional folk arts practiced in New Mexico by contracting with master folk artists to teach their art forms to dedicated apprentices who already have some skill in the art form to be studied.

Applications must be postmarked no later than Dec. 10. Apprenticeship funding includes a $1,000 or $2,000 honorarium plus limited funding for supplies, materials and travel necessary to successfully complete the apprenticeship. Apprenticeships may begin in June 2005 and must conclude by April 30, 2006.

For eligibility information and application forms, call Claude Stephenson at (800) 879-4278 or download the forms from www.nmarts.org/online grants application.

Holiday letter

Hand-write a one-page Christmas letter and bring a favorite photo (no copyrighted photos) to this creative holiday computer class, 9 a.m.-noon Dec. 3 at the Ruidoso Instruction Center college lab.

Scan pictures, insert clip art and create holiday backgrounds for festive letters, printing finishing product (25 copy limit) and mail them.

Bring special holiday paper if preferred. Basic computer knowledge needed. Senior discount does not apply. Instructor Sandy Stambaugh is Microsoft certified and has been the computer lab technician at Eastern New Mexico University-Ruidoso for five years.

Cost of the workshop is $25. To register, call 257-2120 or stop by the college office at 709 Mechem Drive in the Sierra Mall.

CONCERT

"The only music we're interested in playing is music we want to hear. And our only hope is that the joy we feel in the music translates to the audience."

Violist Miles Hoffman

Voyage of discovery

American Chamber Players plan surprises for Ruidoso

by Niki Price • staff writer

The only compositions the American Chamber Players like to perform, according to founder Miles Hoffman, are those they find intriguing, new and different. Few standards grace their programs; instead, they prefer to discover the little-known pieces that will offer these musicians — and their audiences — an adventure.

A prelude for flute, viola and piano by Maurice Durufle, set for performance at the group's Nov. 15 performance in Ruidoso, is a good example.

"Most people only know his Requiem, and, as an organist, he only wrote a dozen pieces," Hoffman said. "But this piece is always a surprise to audiences. They don't know what to expect, then they hear this gorgeous piece."

Audiences couldn't ask for a better guide to the unexplored in classical music than Hoffman, a music commentator for "Morning Edition" and "Performance Today" on National Public Radio. He's also the author of "The NPR Classical Music Companion: Terms and Concepts from A to Z," now in its sixth printing with Houghton Mifflin Company.

The ensemble, an ever-changing configuration of piano, viola, violin, cello and flute, was formed in 1985 from a core group of artists of The Library of Congress Summer Music Festival. In the last two decades, ACP has performed throughout the world and recorded music from throughout the canon on the Koch International Classics label. In June 2004, the musicians inaugurated their own summer festival, at the Kreeger Museum in Washington, D.C.

Today, the American Chamber Players are artistic director and violist Hoffman, pianist Jean-Louis Haguenauer, violinist Joanna Maurer, cellist Alberto Parrini and flutist Sara Stern. Each comes with a hefty resume of education, international solo work and recordings.

As a group, they endeavor to discover, Hoffman said.

"We like to introduce audiences to neglected gems of the repertoire. These are pieces they may not have heard, but once they hear them, they wonder why not. It's a delightful surprise," he said.

Lincoln County classical fans will no doubt remember the last time these musicians came to town in 1998. Then, as in 2004, they were sponsored by the Ruidoso Concert Association. Bob Rowe, an association founder who still helps to book each season, said he received an e-mail from Hoffman, asking for a return engagement.

"I thought about it for about 10 seconds before saying yes," Rowe said.

The Ruidoso concert will feature a varied program featuring the "London" Trio No. 3 by Joseph Haydn, as well as the work of three French composers: Durufle, Francis Poulenc and Gabriel Faure. Hoffman is anxious to introduce Frank Bridge's "Phantasie Piano Quartet in F-sharp (1910)" to the audience: "That's going to be a fabulous discovery."

"And (they'll love) the Faure (Quartet No. 2 in G Minor for piano and strings). The first one is much better known. This one is less well known, but we're crazy about it. It's a remarkable piece that will knock people's socks off, frankly," Hoffman said.

The concert will begin at 7:30 p.m. Monday, Nov. 15, at the Ruidoso Schools Performing Arts Center, 125 Warrior Drive.

The American Chamber Players are featured as part of the RCA season, but tickets for this show only are $30 each, available at the door.

"This really is a typical ACP program, the kind we enjoy a lot and our audiences enjoy too, because of the variety," added the artistic director.

"The only music we're interested in playing is music we want to hear. And our only hope is that the joy we feel in the music translates to the audience."

Joys, toys: Charity run is Sunday

BY SANDY SUGGITT
VAMONOS EDITOR

Local bikers are back at it with the fifth annual Joy for Kids Toy Run scheduled for Sunday, Nov. 7.

The Toy Run is a creation of the Local Bikers of Lincoln County to raise money for Santa's Helpers, which delivers toys, clothes and food to families at Christmas time. Besides being a cockles-of-the-heart warmer, the Toy Run is a fun parade followed by a fundraiser at The Quarters, 2535 Sudderth Drive — all between noon and 5 p.m.

The parade starts at noon at Checker Auto Supply parking lot (near Walgreen's), goes to the entrance of Upper Canyon, and returns to The Quarters for the party, with music by The 24/7 Band. Admission to the party is a donation of $3 and a new, unwrapped toy valued at $5 or more, which goes to Santa's Helpers. Prizes donated by about 300 individuals and merchants will be awarded at the party for winning tickets — costing $2 each or six for $10; and 50/50 tickets $3 or two for $5. A silent auction will dispense with the rest of the donated items. The prizes range from gift certificates for tanning or haircuts to two nights' stay in a local hotel or cabin to art items.

Tammy Mattingly, a member of Local Bikers of Lincoln County, said the event has grown in its five years and is now the only fundraiser for Santa's Helpers.

The first year, the club raised $3,600, and last year it raised more than $10,000.

"About 30 people make the Toy Run," she said. "We turn the money over to Santa's Helpers, even the admission to The Quarters.

"Santa's Helpers aids families in all of Lincoln County with clothing, toys and food at Christmas time. Last year it helped about 350 families or 800 children. All got clothes and toys and food."

Applications for families, querying clothing and shoe size and wishes for toys will be out by Nov. 8 at the Ruidoso Police Department and other places to be announced later.

State National Bank will host a reception for photographer Julia Brogan from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m. on Tuesday, Nov. 9. The exhibit and event will be held at the 1710 Sudderth Branch of SNB.

Brogan has been taking photographs for over 30 years. During her travels through the United States, Mexico and Europe, she had the opportunity to capture tens of thousands of moments on film.

Unlike many photographers, she has not focused on any particular subject matter. Her moments in time include the smallest flowers and animals, people, and the grandest landscapes.

Currently working as a fourth grade teacher in Ruidoso, Brogan is also a certified paralegal. The University of Southern California awarded her the master's degree in professional writing in 1999.

Her biggest supporter (and frequent "mule" with the Nikon equipment) is her husband, Bill, "Without whom," she says, "I might still be wondering what to do in life."
