Village manager resigns

Dan O. Higgins acknowledges tensions with Village Council

Ruidoso Village Manager Dan O. Higgins resigned late Tuesday.

The move came after a closed session of the village council in which individual evaluations by councilors of the manager were discussed, and a few hours after a some times testy exchange with councilors about the staffing direction for the village building division.

When the council came back into open session, a motion was approved authorizing Mayor L. Ray Nunley and Councilor Greg Cory to negotiate with Higgins, who in April would have begun his third year as manager. The authorized negotiations apparently will focus on a settlement for the remaining portion of his four-year contract.

In a statement released Thursday, Higgins said, "My decision to resign as village manager was reached after it became apparent that the disagreement between the council and I over where the dividing line existed between their role as a legislative body and mine as a professional manager was beyond resolution.

"Through more hard work than most people will ever realize, the entire management team, including department directors, turned a broken budget into one of the state's most efficient and solvent. That and the almost total restructuring of the staff organization with no increase in overall employee numbers and forming them into a cohesive team focused on constant, innovative solutions, are among my proudest accomplishments.

"I will miss working with the best staff in the world supporting

Shaping the future

Personal fitness requires strength of will

Inside the gym are racks and stacks of equipment, shiny and metallic.

A doctor from the medical center is lifting weights in the corner. A young man with a twisted knee is progressing through a series of exercises. A trim, chiseled woman is working out with the proprietor, personal trainer Michael Widener.

This is Southwest Personal Fitness, a longstanding Ruidoso gym where only the serious survive. It's also a business with a sustainable culture - built on loyalty, personal relationships and a profit-second ethic.

"That's why it's called personal training. It is a very personal thing," Widener says.

"I know every one of these people intimately. It's not a thank you-for-shopping-at-Wal-Mart kind of thing. A lot of these people are my best friends in the whole world. It's what happens when you truly try to help people, they're truly honest with you, and you actually get somewhere. You end up with a bond. I would rather have the relationships than the money from a high-volume business.

"When I die, I can't take my money, but I can take those relationships I made along the way."

Widener, 36, was born in Abilene. By the time he was 12, he was a skinny, "runty" kid. His father, a former drill sergeant in the U.S. Army, decided to toughen him up.

"Dad exercised a lot," he says. "He took a Nautilus course on how to train someone under the age of 16. He bought a full line of Nautilus equipment, and trained me there at the house. He had me lifting weights.

"My dad taught me right. I never stopped. I took to it like a duck to water, just loved it."

Because he never stopped, and because he never resorted to artificial means such as steroids, Widener to this day sets an occasional personal best on the weights.

The family moved to Ruidoso when Michael was 15. "I had a lot of friends in Abilene and wasn't happy with Dad at the time, but I got over it," he says.

After graduating from Ruidoso High School, he attended Eastern New Mexico University in Portales, graduating with a business degree.

"OK, now what are you going to do?" his dad asked him one day.

"I don't know."
"Well, if you're not studying or you're not working, you're lifting weights. Ever thought about trying to make some money on it?"

Track bill clears hurdle

FROM REPORTS

SANTA FE - A two-year crusade to get a tax break for Ruidoso Downs Race Track was closer to reality after a bill received unanimous support from the House Business and Industry Committee Tuesday.

The proposed rate would affect tracks earning less than $14 million per year in net winnings, and would impose a 10 percent rate up to $10 million, with the standard 26 percent rate above that amount.

Net winnings is the revenue a casino takes in from slot machines, less payouts.

Ruidoso Downs, which houses Billy the Kid Casino, is the only track that currently qualifies for the proposed rate, but supporters say other tracks might qualify in the future.

Track owner R.D. Hubbard has intimated he may move his operation in order to compete with other gaming establishments, particularly the Inn of the Mountain Gods and the Casino Travel Center on Highway 70, both owned and operated by the Mescalero Apache Tribe.

The tribe is said to support Hubbard's initiative.

Sandi Aguilar, executive director of the Ruidoso Valley Chamber of Commerce, touted the legislation, saying that closing the track would devastate the local economy.

"It's a community issue," Aguilar said.

Tom Battin, chairman of the Lincoln County Commission, called the race-track a "cornerstone of our economy."

The bill goes to the Tax, Ation and Revenue Committee, chaired by Rep. Edward Sandoval, D-Albuquerque. Sandoval is the initial sponsor of the bill.

Controlled burns

The Bureau of Land Management will be conducting several prescribed burns on BLM administered lands near Fort Stanton along the Pecos River beginning the week of Feb. 15 and continuing through March, weather permitting.

Prescribed fire, conducted only under strict weather and staffing conditions, is a cost-effective way to reduce invasive and/or non-native plant species so that native plant communities can be restored to a healthier condition.

As always, firefighter and public safety is paramount. Signs to alert the public of burn operations will be posted and public access into the areas is discouraged.

Smoke may be visible intermittently for short durations from surrounding communities.

Council workshops

Ruidoso Village Council will meet at 4:30 p.m., Feb. 17, for a workshop on village goals. The session will be conducted in council chambers at Village Hall, 313 Cree Meadows Dr.

A second workshop is set for 4:30 p.m. Feb. 26, to discuss the village's financial, procurement, personnel and Information Technology policies and procedures.

Tire recycling

A tire recycling amnesty event has been scheduled for Feb. 27 and 28 at Schoolhouse Park in Ruidoso for Lincoln County and Mescalero residents, public institutions and businesses. Passenger vehicle, SUV and light truck tires will be accepted at no charge.

The event sponsored by the Lincoln County Solid Waste Authority, the Village of Ruidoso Solid Waste Department, Keep Ruidoso Beautiful and the Lincoln County Recycling Committee.

Hours will be 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Friday, Feb. 27, and 8 a.m. to 2 p.m. on Saturday, Feb. 28. No heavy equipment or large truck tires will be accepted. Tires on rims may also be dropped off.

Tire recycling is the process of recycling vehicle tires that are no longer suitable for use on vehicles due to wear or irreparable damage (such as punctures).

These tires are among the largest and most problematic sources of waste, due to the large volume produced and their durability.

Tires are not desired at landfills, due to their large volumes and 75 percent void space, which quickly consumes valuable space.

Tire stockpiles can create a great health and safety risk to Lincoln County and Mescalero residents. Tire piles promote Haunta and West Nile viruses and shelter bubonic plague carriers. Tire piles are also a major source of illegal dumping fires.

In 2008, the New Mexico Environment Department (NMED) issued, stricter regulations on discarded tire stockpiling on public or private property.

NMED inspectors have recently begun inspecting trucks transporting discarded tires and property locations with large numbers of tires. New penalties for tire regulation violations have also been imposed.

The high cost of fuel in mid-2008 also caused tire recyclers out of the El Paso area to cease buying and picking up tires from several commercial tire companies in Lincoln County.

In Lincoln County, discarded tires collected at recycling events are used in an engineered tire bale fencing project at the new GreenTree Transfer Station and Recycling Center on Highway 70, east of Ruidoso Downs.

For more information on the upcoming tire amnesty event, contact the Solid Waste Authority office at 378-4697, toll free at 1-877-548-8772, via email at lcswa@valornet.com or at www.lcswa.org.

District report cards might go unseen

House bill not a blow for transparency

In a democracy, government should do everything it can to make information readily accessible to the public. A new bill being considered by the State House of Representatives would make information about performance of local school districts much harder for the public to find.

House Bill 237, sponsored by State Rep. Andrew Barreras (D-Valencia County-Dist. 7), proposes changes to the required publication date of school districts' annual accountability report and where that report can be published.

If the bill became law, school districts could opt to publish their required annual reports in either "electronic or print media available in the county where the school district is located." If districts opted to include what the bill calls its "School District Report Card" only on a Web site, most parents and community members would never know it even exists.

And a good number of citizens in New Mexico have no access to a computer. While it is true that they could go to districts and ask for a copy, how many would actually do so? The action would, essentially, mean that parents and other citizens would never get any information at all.

The original idea behind a "district report card" was that information about how the district was progressing and what it was accomplishing would be available to the people whose children are attending classes and to the citizens who pay for that education. This would completely defeat that effort. If there are problems, no one would know.

But when legislation is proposed that seems to defeat all efforts for transparency in government, it should not be passed.

If you'd prefer to read the report card in a public newspaper where everyone can see it rather than trying to remember every year to attempt to locate a Web site, you should contact your legislator and tell him or her so.

Reprinted by permission from the Valencia County News-Bulletin.

No walls, no rules, no problem

It's a happening, a grassroots, word-of-mouth groundswell of inspiration and community right in the heart of Midtown Ruidoso.

It's Church out of Church, a Sunday morning service in the Dreamcatcher Cafe garden courtyard under the big bright sky, ruffled by the wind, warmed by cups of steaming coffee, flanked by beer signs and "Cigars" etched on one wall, with background noise supplied by, even at that hour, a steady stream of traffic on Sudderth and the occasional honking horn.

Church out of Church. It is what it is, and what it's to become. No one is quite sure where it goes from here. But that is in somebody else's hands.

It began modestly enough during last September's Golden Aspen Motorcycle Rally. I am trying to be non-judgmental when I say the idea was to take the church to the people, to take church out of its box and its rules and regulations and political trappings, to strip it of pretense and distill the meaning of "religion" to its simplest truth of finding joy - humanity, even - in Jesus and the creator.

A handful of seekers attended that day, including a couple of visiting bikers, as the service struggled to rise above the roar of Harley's. Those visiting bikers don't know how much they meant to the concept.

The music was supplied by Roadmap, a band which also has played secular gigs at Dreamcatcher. Some of the players also were in the worship band at First Baptist Church. The "pastor" was Tim Gilliland, also of First Baptist. After the service, they didn't stick around for fellowship; they had to get up the hill for their regular appointment.

Over the next few months, weather permitting, Church out of Church opened its "doors" roughly every other week. It was taking on a life of its own.

Earlier in February, the organizers, with the blessing of the cafe's Lynn and Tracy Crawford, decided to go weekly, at 9:30 a.m. Sundays. Gilliland, the pastor, even resigned from First Baptist to heed this call, to follow this course, as did several Roadmap members.

Last week, the band consisted of Julie Gilliland on keyboards, Blake Martin on lead guitar, Jaime Estes on bass, Brad Barnum on rhythm guitar, Ruth Barnum on flute and Sam Shackelford on drums. The prior Sunday, Rich Chorné was on lead guitar, and Joey Everett sometimes plays drums. The soundman is Mitch Elsey.

A number of these musicians have been heard in, shall we say, nightclubs throughout town, linking the "church" to its community - in an artistic, non-judgmental way.

It's conceivable Church out of Church will outgrow these "walls." There's even a fledgling Web site (churchoutofchurch.com). No one really wants to stop and think about it too much. Where it goes - that's in someone else's hands.

YOUR OPINION

Reporter didn't contact ENMU president

To the editor:

I READ WITH INTEREST and dismay Dianne Stallings' story about one individual's personal opinion and her concerns about the long-term plans for a proposed ENMU-Ruidoso campus near the Spencer Theater.

It should be noted that Ms. Stallings' article was published without providing me an opportunity to respond to Ms. Minter's numerous and misinformed statements, as they were presented as fact to the Lincoln County Commissioners.

Fair and balanced reporting is the cornerstone of professional journalism, one in which Ms. Stallings apparently does not embrace. As of this date (2/9/09) Ms. Stallings has never visited with me by phone, email or in person regarding this initiative.

For the record and clarification, ENMU-Ruidoso is a state publicly supported higher education institution. Our annual operational budget is approved by the New Mexico Higher Education Department and authorized by the NM legislature, with funding derived from a combination of federal, state and local sources. The state formula is based heavily on student enrollments.

Yes, we are one of the fastest-growing colleges in the state, having realized a 37 percent increase in enrollments over the past three years alone. A much smaller percentage, but important source of funding, is generated through local support from a countywide mil levy tax voted on and approved by Lincoln County residents in the early 1990s.

Capital improvements such as campus renovations and construction projects are funded separately by referendum through a combination of state and local bond issues such as those the public schools have passed over the years.

To date, a local bond issue has never been placed on a ballot for purposes of renovating or constructing ENMU-Ruidoso facilities. The existing campus structure was initially donated to ENMU, with subsequent renovations (totaling more than $3.5 million dollars) during the past 18 years, with funding provided entirely by a combination of state appropriations and/or General Obligation Bonds approved by voters statewide.

The proposed Cedars campus location is just that, a proposal. The opportunity to plan for and build a future campus will require careful planning by university personnel and expert analysis by trained professionals such as various state-certified engineers and architects.

When and if we build will depend on continued student demand, state financial support, and subsequent voter approval for local bonds to help underwrite the construction. This careful and prudent planning process allows us to thoughtfully prepare for the future expansion of your community university.

I invite area residents, including Ms. Stallings and Ms. Minter, to come visit with me about the many wonderful things happening at ENMU-Ruidoso. Our plans for the future are bold and visionary. I encourage everyone to learn more by calling me at 257-2120.

Michael R. Elrod
President, ENMU-Ruidoso

Editor's note: In point of fact, the Ruidoso News supported the Cedars campus proposal in an editorial when it became public.

The article in question concerned the public forum portion of a County Commission meeting and reported on comments made about several topics, among them the Cedars campus. As such, they were presented as individual opinions and not fact, per se.

If a counter view is not offered in that same forum, the reporter is under no obligation to make a judgment call and track down a response just because it's possible someone might take issue.

The proper response in this case is a letter to the editor, but hurling assumptions about Dianne Stallings' intent and impugning her professional integrity is both unwarranted and counter-productive.

Happy ending

To the editor:

I WOULD LIKE TO thank Todd Fuqua and the Ruidoso News for the Feb. 6 article concerning the theft of a valuable sculpture from me.

The gentleman who thought he was helping an artist get home to Santa Fe found out through the article that he had inadvertently aided the thief and immediately called Ruidoso Police on Saturday, Feb. 7. He was greeted by an attitude of indifference and told they could not give him my phone number to let me know where it was. He was told, after leaving his name and number, that a detective would call him.

As I write this, it is Tuesday (Feb. 10), and the only way he got my phone number was to contact the Ruidoso News. Because they gave him my phone number, my sculpture is going to be on its way home soon.

Thank you, Todd, and the staff of the Ruidoso News.

Crediting Coker

To the editor:

THE NUMBER OF those whose company I cherish was diminished by one on Jan. 19. In this case, one was a very big number.

In my modest capacity helping a small community resolve potable water problems, I had never been in the company of Benny Coker, former mayor of Capitan and former president of the New Mexico Rural Water Association, without learning some valuable minutiae regarding water issues in Lincoln County.

Much more importantly, I had never been in the company of Benny Coker without being informed by the example of his personal grace and authentically lived life. Nor had I ever been in his company without being rewarded by his presence. Benny Coker was a damn good man.

Recently, Nogal has made great strides in overcoming shortfalls in supplies of water. Few knew that those strides were made within the footprints of Benny who, behind the scenes, had smoothed the way to our recovery.

It was Benny Coker who arranged a meeting of our leadership with the State Engineer to resolve a longstanding impasse which had denied sufficient quantities of water to our community. It was Benny Coker who deserves credit if that success secures the longterm viability of a townsite inhabited by citizens he had never met.

It was Benny Coker who earned the warmth of their unspoken gratitude.

Benny's unassuming neighbors in Nogal, their children and grandchildren, owe thanks to the man who, unbeknownst to them, strove for and reveled in their success. Look away; he cannot be replaced. Benny was the one.

Rest well, most worthy and gentle of men.

There's a lot at stake when it comes to energy development in New Mexico: the state's crystalline blue skies, job opportunities for native people, and a sustainable future for all of those living in the land of little rain.

Yet when it comes to weighing in on the proposed Desert Rock coal-fired power plant, New Mexico's most powerful Democratic lawmakers offer little leadership. Desert Rock is a joint project of Sithe Global and the Navajo Nation; plans are for building a 1,500 megawatt coal-fired power plant in northwestern New Mexico, a region that's home to two existing coal-fired power plants and tens of thousands of oil and gas wells.

In the town of Farmington and the rural areas around it, residents already suffer from air quality problems that are reminiscent of Houston or Los Angeles.

It's probably no surprise that former Republican

Sen. Pete Domenici enthusiastically supported Desert Rock, but the positions of Democratic Sens. Jeff Bingaman and Tom Udall don't jibe with the environmental reputations both men have cultivated. Bingaman and Udall received high marks from the nonprofit League of Conservation Voters, and they've made the phrase "green jobs" a part of their vocabulary. Bingaman champions climate change legislation, and most recently, he helped create fiscal incentives for companies pursuing carbon-capture technology.

But when it comes to Desert Rock, Bingaman demurs, saying he has no control over a coal plant destined for sovereign soil. Udall, meanwhile, says he supports the project as an opportunity for economic development, though he says he hopes the power plant will employ "carbon-reducing technologies."

Meanwhile, on the Navajo Reservation, a small band of protesters continues to occupy the camp they established in December 2006, to block workers from entering the site.

Opposition continues to grow: The more she spreads information about Desert Rock, says Elouise Brown, president of the reservation's resistance group Dooda Desert Rock, the more people come out against it.

Desert Rock would be a major polluter, emitting 12.7 million metric tons of greenhouse gases each year. It would also release mercury, ozone, sulfates, nitrates, carbon monoxide and both fine and large particulate matter.

Sulfur dioxide, nitrogen oxides and particulate matter are all associated with asthma, pulmonary disease, increased rates of heart attack and stroke; elevated levels of mercury are associated with birth defects and developmental delays.

Despite the tribal government's insistence that the plant represents an economic boon - Sithe Global has promised the tribe $50 million in annual though the tribe is reportedly considering asking the federal government for financial assistance.

There could be another hitch: If the federal government implements carbon taxes, the tribe could be stuck with the bill for spending millions of dollars to revamp Desert Rock's pollution controls. And now, the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency's appeals board has decided to take a second look at scientific and legal issues opponents have raised over the plant.

As for Gov. Bill Richardson - no longer headed to Washington, D.C. - he could take this opportunity to rectify issues of environmental and economic justice within New Mexico. He campaigned for president on a platform of clean energy, and here at home he could employ his famed negotiating skills to work with the Navajo on a new economic direction, one based not on the antiquated fossil-fuel industry, but instead on alternative means of producing power.

The state's Democratic senators are also well placed to help the Navajo Nation change course. Sen. Tom Udall sits on the Committee on Environment and Public Works, while Bingaman chairs the Energy and Natural Resources Committee. Surely these three powerful Democrats - Richardson, Udall and Bingaman - can figure out ways to protect the region's public health while also fighting to end poverty on the Navajo reservation.

Of course, there are no easy answers, whether it's to address global climate change, create a sustainable energy future or to solve the long-term problems the Navajo Nation faces.

But a good start for New Mexico lawmakers would be to stop promising change on the campaign trail while refusing to face the grim realities of Desert Rock.

revenues - financing the building of Desert Rock remains hazy. The Navajo Nation must pony up between 25 and 49 percent of the plant's $4 billion price tag. The Navajo Nation is also expected to foot the bill for a transmission line sending the power to markets in Arizona and California,

The most powerful emotion

Valentine's Day is just around the corner. We know this, as we see all the beautiful little red boxes of candy and the warm Valentine's cards.

So, what is the meaning of Valentine's Day? It is without question the expression of love toward one another.

Let's look at the real meaning of love. Love is the color of the rainbow that delights our eyes. Love is the sky that stands between us and eternity. Love is the stars that light the way for men and animals at night.

Love is the moment between souls, between parent and child, and among other family members and friends.

But these are merely small examples of that which lies within you and everything in creation striving to free itself in the consciousness given by God.

It has been said that the greatest need of the human self is for love. You can have all the wealth your coffers will hold, all the fame your world can offer, all the education your schools can teach. You can have every wish fulfilled and every dream come true. But if love is not among these, you will be empty and barren.

The need to express love is so vital that your physical body is affected if you have no way of giving or receiving love.

The human conception of love, certainly in our culture, has for the most part been based on the attitude that love is a physical expression - when it is, in fact, far more than this.

Love cannot be confined within any boundaries regardless of all efforts by the human mind to imprison it. As love expresses itself, it grows, and as it grows it expands in all directions. There are no limits.

Love is the most powerful, positive emotion a person can experience, and we were all created with that basic human need. Yet, it is probably the emotion people find the most difficult to truly experience. It makes them uncomfortable, and unfortunately, some people seemingly lack the capacity to love; their actions are often destructive to others and to animals and all God's creatures - all of them vulnerable along that path of violence.

In the end, such hatred consumes the one who lashes out and renders him powerless.

God intended that you and I understand love, because it not only influences our own lives deeply but those around us. I'm not talking about some Hollywood kind of romantic love that lasts only until the next person comes along, but the real love which is a commitment bound with spiritual giving.

Love is generosity. Just as generosity is an attribute of God, so it should be a characteristic of His children - us.

God designed us to love and be loved: "Love thy neighbor as thyself." When someone expresses that feeling toward us, we experience a kind of supernatural energy. When we feel weary or discouraged, care and affection from another person perks up our spirits and gives us a physical boost.

We know that love heals and that few doctors would deny that love is a major contributing factor to good health.

So many things divide the human race. On this Valentine's occasion, let us all enjoy the day with an attitude of love. Pass it along.

extent that it could, in actuality, fool all of the people all of the time.

That is, except for the few who remain impervious to such persuasion, some of whom reside right here in Lincoln County, according to the past election returns.

The rest, regardless of race or creed, have submitted themselves hook, line and sinker into the practice of idolatry, which a certain holy book denounces as irrational, degrading, demonic, defiling, enslaving and abominable. To this, let the unbowed among us add a hearty "amen!"

Scoundrel alert

To the editor:
WELL, IT APPEARS an

Everest-sized mountain of democratically inspired "pork" has just been dumped onto America.

But, it is an economic stimulus package they say. Of course it is. Pork can certainly be a stimulus as can any infusion of capital that is taxed and spent as it moves through a circle. Maybe Republicans should now come up with their own pork pile. Of course, getting their package through Congress might be a problem.

There is, however, a negative to this, and America had better get ready. I doubt that any of the stimulus money will go to the FBI. And, boy, is that agency going to need it. Scoundrels will be coming out from under rocks in numbers to insert a sticky finger into this pie.

Are Democrats, who instigated this, going to ensure integrity? When you compare integrity with greed, guess which will be the winner.

Add to that, government bureaucracy and guess the result. Criminal investigations into all this are extremely difficult and take eons. It is going to be a mess, but maybe the solution is to just ignore all criminality and let it flow.

Some of my Democrat friends have said this package is going to take these heinous Wall Street Republican CEOs down to size. Hopefully so.

The problem is that I spent some time on Wall Street and have determined that eight out of 10 of these greedy CEOs are Democrats. Included is the biggest of them all: Warren Buffet.

Democrats will argue Democrats are smarter than Republicans, and that

New building, same bank

TODD FUQUA

Employees at First Savings Bank are preparing for the big move, again

By just about any standard, this was a pretty quick gestation period.

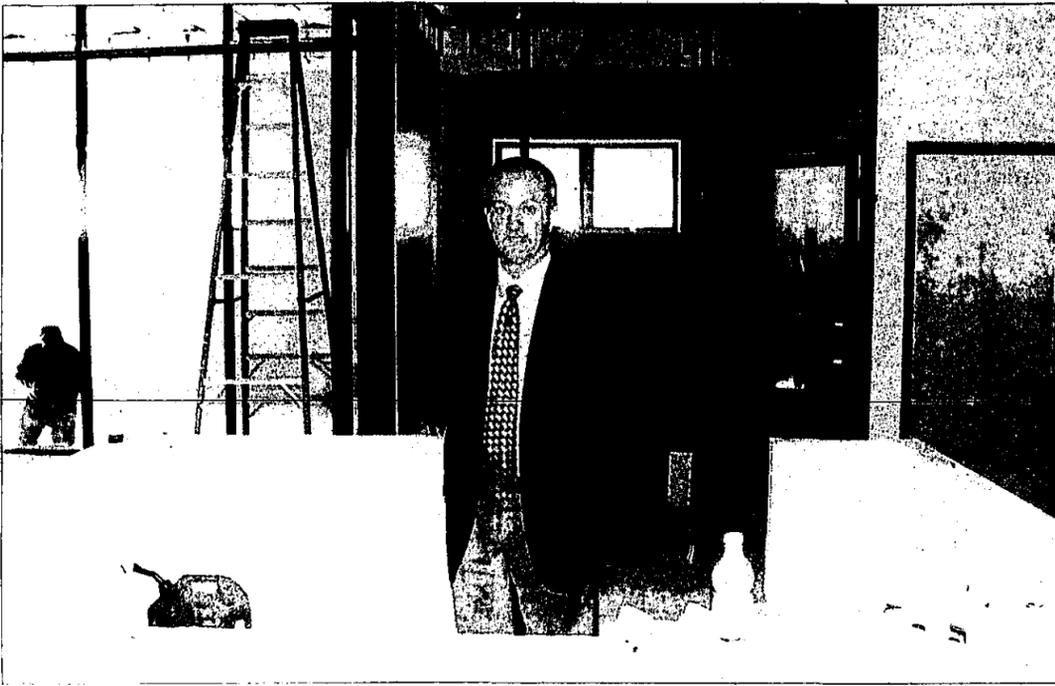

From the time staff and equipment were moved from their location at 2713 Sudderth Dr., the expected completion of a new First Savings Bank building will be about six months.

At least, that's what Branch President Daryl Lindsay is hoping for.

In the interim, Lindsay and the branch employees have been in temporary digs across the street in Mountain Annie's, doing everything they can to continue offering services to their customers while anxiously awaiting their new building's completion.

"It's been a little cramped, but it's also been a lot of fun," Lindsay said. "I've been located up front, right next to the entrance, so I've been able to get to know our customers a lot better. I've talked to just about every one of them."

As small as the current quarters are, the new building itself needs to be installed, glass panes for the offices need to be placed, and the floor needs tiling and carpeting.

Needless to say, the building will be a beehive of activity in order to get it completed in two weeks.

Lindsay said the building was built with the long-term in mind, featuring almost 2-foot-thick exterior walls and no load bearing walls inside, allowing for a complete redesign of the floor plan if needed.

"At first, I didn't want that design, I just wanted steel construction to get it up in a hurry," Lindsay said. "But then I spoke with the CFO of our branch in Lake Havasu, Ariz., where they have similar construction."

"He told us cooling costs in their hottest month, when it gets up to about 120 degrees, are usually less than $700. It's very well insulated," he added. "These buildings are not 20- or 30-year buildings. They're 100-year buildings."

ing is that much larger, featuring a centralized reception area, offices for various loan and account officers and a conference room big enough to seat up to 25 people. Taking a tour of the building as it now stands, it's a little hard to believe the office will be ready to move into in a little more than two weeks. Electrical wiring still hangs from the ceiling in some spots, the entire ceil-

SkiWi in danger of shutting down

In observance of a recent decision by the New Mexico Public Regulation Commission, SkyWi has notified the PRC of potential disconnection of services that could have a significant effect on email and phone service throughout much of the state.

SkyWi claims it no longer has the funds needed to maintain its network, and the PRC is advising SkyWi, Zianet and One Connect customers to be sure their service has been taken over by an alternate telecommunications company.

"Since the initial disconnection, the Commission has monitored this dispute closely and has taken every step necessary to protect the consumers," said NMPRC Chairman Sandy Jones. "It's now obvious that SkyWi customers must move quickly to protect themselves."

Police bust burglary operation

Arrests clear 18 separate cases

TODD FUQUA
todd@ruidosonews.com

A burglary enterprise of nine people, led by a career criminal, has been uncovered by a joint Ruidoso Police/Lincoln County Sheriff's task force in a two-month investigation.

Ruidoso Police have revealed the arrests of nine individuals, including one 17-year-old male, who were involved in a burglary ring that hit numerous homes in the area stretching back to December.

At the center of the alleged gang is 70-year-old Dennis Grimes, described as a career criminal who is facing 66 charges, including racketeering, burglary, criminal solicitation, disposing of stolen property and contributing to the delinquency of a minor.

Another man well-known to law enforcement is 39-year-old Todd Dentler, who is charged with felon in possession of a firearm, receiving stolen property, violation of probation, possession of methamphetamine, retaliation against a witness and felony aggravated battery.

Additionally, Devin Gutierrez, Beau Hirsch and Ashley Williams, all 18, and Thomas Daniel, 47, were each charged with 53 separate criminal charges.

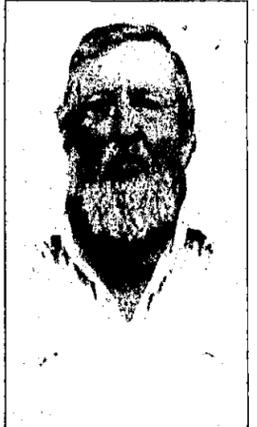

Grimes recruited these individuals as part of a small criminal empire which stole a little more than $45,000 in property from homes in Ruidoso, Alto, Lincoln County and Alamogordo.

Ruidoso Police Chief Wolfgang Born, left, and Ruidoso officer Joe Magill display mug shots of the nine individuals arrested in the wake of a task force investigation into a rash of burglaries that affected homes in the area in the past two months. Magill was a member of the task force that was made up of officers from RPD and the Lincoln County Sheriff's office.

Much of the property was taken to Truth or Consequences to be sold. About $11,000 worth of property has been returned. The arrests clear 18 separate burglary cases. Two separate cases have also been solved, but have no direct connection to Grimes' alleged organization, although Grimes is charged with buying stolen property from one of those burglaries.

Dennis Grimes, 70, is described as a career criminal, is regarded by police as the leader of a ring that committed burglaries in Lincoln County and fenced the goods as far away as T or C.

Task force members included Ruidoso officers Joe Magill, Lawrence Chavez and Aaron Frost, and Johnny Parker of the Lincoln County Sheriff's office.

Ruidoso Police Chief Wolfgang Born also gave credit to Jason and Annie Ely, from the District Attorney's office, who worked closely with the police department in securing search and arrest warrants.

"If you commit a burglary in this town, we will find you and arrest you," Born said. "This is just the beginning. We will do whatever it takes to keep this community safe."

"These guys on the task force did an excellent job," Born added. "We will do this again, if we have to, to get these crimes solved."

Village council denies variance

■ Vote upholds decision by P&Z in Camelot subdivision

DIANNE STALLINGS
dstallings@ruidosonews.com

In a 5-1 vote, Ruidoso village councilors upheld the denial of a variance by the village Planning and Zoning Commission.

Councilor James Stoddard voted against the motion by Councilor Ron Hardeman.

Lot owner Burt Johnson filed the appeal, contending he needed to intrude 2.5 feet into a 10-foot property line setback to fully use his land on Edinburgh Place in Camelot subdivision. He wanted to add another bedroom onto his two-bedroom, two-bath cabin there.

No objections

No neighbors notified objected.

"There are no buildings around us, no neighbors," he said. "The house has been there 25 years."

But Village Planning Director Bob Decker said the staff found the variance failed to meet the three tests for approval.

A variance can be granted when a lot is substandard, but this lot is a standard size and topography. The second reason is that without a variance the owner would be denied reasonable use.

A house already exists on the lot, Decker said.

Neighbors harmed

The third reason is that the action would adversely affect neighbors.

Staff contended shrinking the side yard setback could adversely affect a neighbor and Hardeman said he was inclined to agree.

Future residents of adjoining lots would have the expectation that full setbacks were in place.

"What are the setbacks for?" Mayor L. Ray Nunley asked.

Decker said for visual impact and fire safety, as well as noise and aesthetic breaching space.

Council mandates building department overhaul; Higgins balks

By DIANNE STALLINGS
dstallings@ruidosonews.com

Although the deadline to either create a full building inspection program or turn over the job to the state was postponed, Ruidoso village councilors said they want to move ahead with the directive for a multiple discipline inspector.

During Tuesday's council meeting, Councilor Angel Shaw brought up the future of the building department, which will lose its second building inspector within three months to retirement at the end of March.

"We still have an issue with Larry Hill (building official) retiring in March and the two applicants we had assumed could replace or complement Hill and Fred Knapp's retirement failed their testing," she said. "I think we're behind the curve and (building permits and inspections are) a revenue source."

Currently, the State Construction Industry Division handles plumbing, mechanical and electrical inspections for the village. Only building inspections are tackled by the village. The state originally set June 1 as the date by which village and counties must either assume all or relinquish all inspection responsibilities, but the date was moved back one year to June 2010.

By the end of the discussion Tuesday, Mayor L. Ray Nunley told then-Village Manager Dan O. Higgins, who resigned after the session, to rewrite the specifications for inspectors and readvertise within the next 30 days. Higgins said he would write the specs for an inspector certified in multiple disciplines.

Shaw said she was confused by letters sent out to some applicants that stated the two building inspector positions would not be filled, because of the economy and the decreased building of new homes.

"Have we gone back out for these (positions) since the two failed applicants?" she asked Higgins.

"I think we will," he replied. "The caution is to keep hiring to a minimum right now. We are down 77 percent in permits for new homes (compared to last year) and down 82 percent from the year before."

However, he recently learned that if one or two new inspectors were hired, they could be used by the Public Works Department for inspecting bridges and other projects until construction picks up.

"We have a fail safe in Shawn Fort, our land coordinator, who passed his tests," Higgins said. "So we have a little cushion there."

Dollars would be wasted to hire a multiple-discipline inspector in electrical, plumbing and building, and then watch him sit with nothing to do, Higgins said. "But I know we face a dilemma in that we have to be ready to go, because (construction) will pick up again. We had 31 interested, 20 filled out applications, a half dozen scheduled the tests, two took them and failed."

They have to wait six months before they can try again, he said.

"To me the letter means we are not considering any other applicants," Shaw said. "We called a halt to that hiring process, the advertising," Higgins said. "We're going to take a deep breath and take another look at it."

Councilor Greg Cory suggested the new hires work with code enforcement while waiting for building permits to pick up.

Shaw added that she spoke to the building, plumbing and electrical inspector for the city of Alamogordo, who recommended some training with code enforcement as a way to learn the relevant codes and to recognize violations.

Higgins asked if councilors wanted to hire someone as an inspector, have them come on board in code enforcement and then never pass the test or be certified to inspect "a single building."

Shaw said the council's directive was clear, to transform the building division into a full-service department. "It's not severe now, but Fred is gone and Larry will be in March," she said.

Higgins tried again to clarify his position.

"It comes down to my position as a manager trying to hire a staff and justify it in the budget we have," he said. "It should be a careful, slow process. I can't see hiring a plumbing inspector now."

Cory said Shaw, Councilor Michele Rebstock and he received calls from business owners and contractors about the drop in construction permits. But this typically isn't the time of year for much construction, he added.

Nunley said the multiple-discipline position will be readvertised.

Higgins said, "I'll look at it. I have no intention to go down to one person and he also is the land coordinator. His position also (suffers from less development) and that's why he has time."

"We're also looking at hiring back on contract one of the two retiring individuals. He can't do inspections, but could review plans and man the office, working part time while the inspector is in the field."

"But an actual employee could carry through on inspections," Shaw said.

Councilor Ron Hardeman interrupted, "I don't understand the resistance in this."

"There is no resistance," Higgins insisted. "We have 17 positions (to fill for all departments). Everybody wants to be sure we're saving money and I'm saving money as judiciously and cautiously as I can. These two positions are not that pressing right now. I do fully intend to go back out to advertise for them again in a couple of weeks. We need to hire at least one more inspector, but we just went through a whole round of people."

"Why delay when the process of testing takes time in itself?" Hardeman pressed.

Rebstock said she understands from builders she knows that if local inspectors are slammed, state inspectors will back them up.

Higgins said he won't allow the department to go too low in staffing. The long-range plan will include electric, plumbing/mechanical and two building officials.

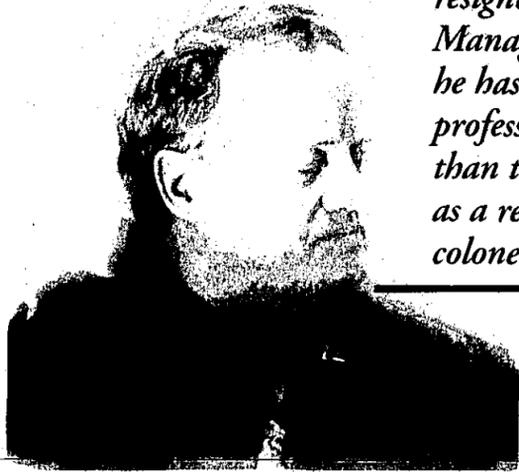

"The council's original directive was to staff the entire department with a person of more than one discipline," Shaw summarized. "We looked at salaries and approved increases. Yet here we are having to beat it over the head again. Maybe that's where I'm having problems understanding. We were clear."

She pledged to stay on top of the issue.

Higgins said only one building permit was issued in the last month. He knew the situation could change drastically, but didn't want to hire someone "to sit on his tail."

"We have a highly qualified staff and I don't want to take the first person who's minimally qualified," Higgins said. "I want to hire a good person."

Dan O. Higgins, who resigned as Village Manager Tuesday, says he has no immediate professional plans other than to return to his life as a retired Air Force colonel.

the best citizens in the world. I have no plans for the immediate future other than to return to my life as a retired Air Force colonel."

Wednesday, Deputy Manager Bill Morris was sitting in Higgins' place at a meeting of the Joint Use Board for the Regional Wastewater Treatment Plant. In a memorandum about the meeting, his title was listed as acting village manager.

Nunley, who spoke by cell phone on his way to Albuquerque Wednesday, said he was disappointed to see Higgins leave and credited the former manager with assembling a top-notch management team, an observation echoed by several councilors.

"I think he built a great management team and for the most part was on top of what was going on in the village as for our needs and infrastructure," the mayor said. "He told me he was just going to retire. I don't know exactly what his plans are, but I was disappointed. I wish him the best."

While the departure was abrupt, irritation between councilors and Higgins was obvious at times. Councilors asked to be kept better informed and complained that their directives and requests were ignored.

Higgins countered in those exchanges that he delivered the results requested and put competent staff in place to direct operations. On several occasions, he seemed genuinely confounded by councilors' statements and asked them to clarify exactly what additional information, reports or actions they sought.

Some councilors could not be reached or declined comment, but Cory said he also appreciated Higgins' outstanding effort to hire management staff.

New weather station OK'd for White Mountain complex

DIANNE STALLINGS
dstallings@ruidosonews.com

Ruidoso councilors decided it's worth $5,000 to ensure potential visitors receive accurate weather information.

And, by the way, the purchase also will be a teaching tool for students at the White Mountain school complex.

Instructor Carla Burns, who teaches chemistry, physics, astronomy and geology, explained the benefits of purchasing a WeatherBug station and becoming part of the network.

"We've been talking about a weather station for a long time," Mayor L. Ray Nunley said. "The one WeatherBug uses now for Ruidoso is not accurate, because it's out at the municipal airport on the mesa.

"We need to change that for our weather to be accurate."

Councilor Ron Harde- man agreed saying it's not enticing for visitors from El Paso in the summer when Ruidoso shows up warmer than Alamogordo or Roswell. Councilor Greg Cory agreed, saying when it's 100 degrees in El Paso, he wants people to see it's 80 degrees in Ruidoso.

Burns said she secured the money for the first weather station at the middle school, but the 14-year-old technology is outdated and the revenue source she used no longer exists. The cost of the station is more than the entire science budget, she said.

"It's a teaching tool and other schools will have access and a tie-in to the American Meteorological Society," she said, adding there will be a work station and lesson plans.

The weather station will go on top of the school building. Anyone can check the weather through the Internet and find out temperature, precipitation, wind and some forecast.

She decided not to ask for money for a motion camera, because all it would see is forest, Burns said.

A price deduction means that for $5,000, the school will receive a $6,000 setup, she said. She'll check to ensure the lower price will hold for another month to allow members of the village lodgers tax committee to consider using money from the tax for the weather station.

In other action, councilors:

• approved a project commitment for an overlay application on Paradise Canyon Road that connects Sudderth Drive to Hull Drive and Country Club

Drive, at an estimated cost of $327,096; and a second project to improve drainage at Hull and Paradise at an estimated cost of $272,800. The total cost of the two would be $599,896, with the village responsible for 25 percent or $149,974.06.

Street Director J. R. Baumann said Department of Transportation officials decided after an onsite visit to move forward on both, but it probably will be two years before money is available.

The village manager said it's possible the project could fit under the stimulus package, because Paradise already is No. 1 on the street project list.

• approved $1,000 in lodgers tax special event funding for the Carrizozo Cowboy Days Celebration 2009 from June 12 through June 14.

• scheduled a public hearing for March 10 on an ordinance amending the land use code to add a short-term residential rental overlay zone and a fee schedule appendix.

• accepted public improvements in Unit 1 and part of Unit 4 of High Ridge subdivision of Camelot.

The action begins a one-year period of maintenance before the village accepts responsibility for improvements such as water and sewer lines.

State disputes industry report on uninsured vehicles

The director of New Mexico's Motor Vehicle Division said Thursday he was surprised last week to read an insurance industry report that the state ranks at the top for uninsured vehicles in the country.

Ken Ortiz said a 29 percent rate was cited. He disagrees with that characterization.

"In fact, since the state started the 'Drive Insured' mandatory program in 2003, our rate of uninsured vehicles has dropped from 25.5 percent to 9.7 percent," Ortiz said. "My dispute with the insurance industry report stems from the methodology used. Here's how the state tracks uninsured vehicles.

"We contract with a private company to compare the complete list of registered vehicles to a database, updated monthly, from every insurance company doing business in New Mexico. There is no reliable estimate of unregistered vehicles, and these are not included in the statistic. Our number, 9.7 percent, is the actual percentage of registered vehicles that are uninsured."

While the approach may not be perfect, it's the most precise and accurate way to gauge the number of uninsured vehicles in New Mexico, he contended.

"The trade group, meanwhile, said in its press release that it measures the uninsured driver population by using a ratio of insurance claims made by individuals who were injured by uninsured drivers to claims made by individuals who were injured by insured drivers," Ortiz said. "The trade group said it uses data from nine insurance companies representing 50 percent of the private passenger auto insurance market in the United States, compared to the 600 insurance companies that report to the New Mexico MVD on a monthly basis."

A report from the American Association of Motor Vehicle Administrators on how to measure the rate of uninsured motor vehicles, stated, measuring crash statistics "may not be quite as accurate as the database method," which is used by New Mexico, Ortiz said.

Other reports state that uninsured drivers are many times more likely to be involved in an accident, which could further skew the trade industry statistics, he said.

"In other words, the trade group reporting an uninsured rate in New Mexico that is three times the actual rate could simply reflect uninsured drivers being three times more likely to be involved in an accident than insured motorists," Ortiz said.

He listed the example of the Insurance Research Council in Illinois calculated an uninsured vehicle rate of 15 percent, while the Illinois Mandatory Insurance Division contended only 4.8 percent of vehicles there lack insurance.

The State of New Mexico implemented its "Drive Insured" program in 2003, as a result of the New Mexico Financial Responsibility Act. The program identifies vehicles that don't have insurance, notifies owners by letter and then suspends registration for those who fail to purchase insurance.

MVD records show that 398,000 vehicles, 25.5 percent of the registered vehicles, were uninsured in 2003, 16.6 percent in 2004, 14.4 percent in 2005, 13.4 percent in 2006, 11.6 percent in 2007, 10.2 percent in 2008, and 9.7 percent in 2009.

TurboSonic healing at the speed of sound

Whether you're battling disease, recovering from injury, or just trying to stay fit and healthy as you age, everything comes down to the very cells of your body.

At the cellular level, your organs and tissues are clogged with toxins and waste. Fluids aren't moving freely, oxygen and nutrients aren't transferred efficiently.

Diet and exercise are important keys to staying healthy, but now there's also easy access in Ruidoso to a revolutionary technology called Whole Body Vibration.

The TurboSonic Vibration Therapy Trainer provides the first safe and effective way to excite human cells, accelerating the body's natural healing response, increasing cellular uptake of oxygen and nutrients, stimulating cellular fluid and movement and facilitating cellular waste removal.

The Ruidoso Physical Therapy Clinic has recently added the TurboSonic to its state-of-the-art therapy and fitness center.

Already patients and members of the clinic staff are reporting great results – a nagging knee pain has disappeared, chronic headaches are gone and back pain is eased.

"We're very excited about the TurboSonic machine," said clinic owner Lydia Radosevich, "and our patients are excited, too. It is helping us treat sports injuries, arthritis and joint problems, osteoporosis ... and it's especially great for people recovering from surgery because they heal faster and get more out of their physical therapy."

The TurboSonic is accessible to people of nearly any fitness level – all you do is stand or sit on a vibrating platform for about 10 minutes. The vibrations you feel are not merely mechanical – they are actually low frequency sound waves pumping through your body.

At varying frequencies and amplitudes, the vibrations wake up those sluggish cells and empower damaged cells to repair themselves.

"Each 10-minute cycle burns at least 260 calories, increases HGH (human growth hormone) by 460 percent and delivers the health benefits of 60 minutes of exercise," according to Julie Graves, general manager at Maxam Nutraceuticals, a TurboSonic distributor.

Fitness buffs get more out of their workouts with TurboSonic, and they report less muscle pain, better strength and endurance, and longer lasting conditioning.

People who can't exercise due to excessive weight or debilitating conditions can use TurboSonic to improve their health and reduce pain.

It reduces body fat and dissolves cellulite in addition to strengthening muscles and joints, improving circulation, and toning skin and organs.

Some people are even calling TurboSonic a fountain of youth because so many seniors have found their mobility and vitality restored by its sonic healing.

"Combined with our other modalities and prescribed exercise, the TurboSonic is going to make a radical improvement in our patients' lives," Radosevich said. "Our goal as physical therapists is to help people return to a pain-free, active lifestyle, no matter their age."

For a limited time, The Ruidoso Physical Therapy Clinic is offering a free 10-minute trial of the TurboSonic so that people can feel what everyone is talking about.

The TurboSonic is FDA approved and is covered by most insurance plans.

Clients who are not in physical therapy can join the fitness center at The Ruidoso Physical Therapy Clinic, where a therapist or aide is always on hand to supervise your workout.

Stop by the clinic at 439 Mechem, next to Landlocked restaurant, or call the office at 257-1800 for more information.

Keep your heart numbers in check

Heart disease is the No. 1 killer of American women. A shocking 38 million women are living with heart disease in the U.S. today. Do you know your risk of developing heart disease?

Health indicator numbers, such as body mass index (BMI), waist circumference, blood pressure, and blood cholesterol and sugar levels can help you determine your personal risk for developing heart disease. Once you know your personal numbers, you can work with your doctor to improve those in dangerous ranges and maintain the healthy ones.

BMI measures body fat in relation to height and weight. A BMI lower than 25 is within normal range and is associated with a lower risk of heart disease. Women with BMIs in the overweight (25-29.9) or obese (30 or greater) range can significantly reduce heart disease risk by losing about 10 percent of their total body weight.

Abdominal fat around the waistline may signal a higher likelihood of developing heart disease, diabetes, or stroke. Women with a waist measurement of 35 inches or more are at increased risk.

Your body naturally makes all the cholesterol you need. However, genetics and lifestyle factors—such as consuming a diet high in animal fats—may cause excess cholesterol to build up in your arteries and set the stage for a heart attack or stroke.

Your doctor can measure your total cholesterol, LDL ("bad" cholesterol), HDL ("good" cholesterol), and triglyceride levels. Ideally, a woman's total cholesterol should be less than 200 mg/dL, LDL less than 100 mg/dL, HDL 60 mg/dL or greater, and triglycerides less than 150 mg/dL. ACOG recommends that women be screened for high cholesterol every five years, beginning at age 45.

High blood pressure increases the heart's workload, puts added strain on the blood vessels, and raises the risk of a heart attack, heart failure, stroke, or kidney problems. Have your blood pressure checked annually or more often if it's elevated. Aim to keep your blood pressure lower than 120/80 mm Hg.

Elevated blood sugar may signal that you are at risk for developing—or already have—diabetes.

Diabetic women have a three-to-seven times higher risk of heart disease than nondiabetic women. ACOG recommends that women 45 and older have a fasting blood glucose test (taken after fasting for at least eight hours) every three years. Fasting blood sugar levels below 100 mg/dL are considered normal.

Healthy lifestyle habits can also help improve your numbers. Consume a diet high in fiber and low in saturated fats, cholesterol, and refined carbohydrates. Get 30 to 90 minutes of exercise on most days of the week and quit smoking.

February is Children's Dental Health Month

SANTA FE – The New Mexico Department of Health offers families advice to keep their children's teeth healthy.

Good oral health can prevent tooth decay, which is the most common chronic disease of childhood, occurring five to eight times as frequently as asthma. In New Mexico, tooth decay is common among preschool and school-age children.

"The good news is that tooth decay and other oral diseases that can affect children are preventable," said Rudy Blea, Program Director of the Department's Office of Oral Health. "The combination of dental sealants and fluoride has the potential to reduce the incidence of tooth decay in school-age children."

The Office of Oral Health provided more than 7,000 children with dental sealants or applications of topical fluoride last year through its school-based prevention program.

Dental sealants are thin plastic coatings that are applied to the grooves on the chewing surfaces of the back teeth to protect them from tooth decay.

Fluoride reduces the incidence of tooth decay and slows or reverses the progression of existing lesions (i.e., prevents cavities).

Parent Tips To Prevent Children's Dental Disease:

- Visit the dentist at least twice a year.
- Brush at least twice a day.
- Brush your tongue.
- Floss daily.
- Eat healthy foods.
- Drink water.
- Chew sugarless gum.
- Wear mouth guards when playing sports.

Get an oral health assessment for your child between ages 1-2 and every six months thereafter.

The Department of Health is promoting good oral health during Children's Dental Health Month in February. Nationally, more than half of children have experienced at least one cavity by the second grade.

By the time students finish high school, approximately 80 percent have experienced dental decay.

"No."
"How about opening up a health club or something?"

His dad, who owned the former Nob Hill Restaurant on El Paso Road, bought some equipment and bankrolled the new venture, to be called Southwest Health Club.

"This building sat here vacant for 20 years when I got it," Michael says. "It was a mess for us to clean up. It took years to get it where it is now, and it's still not where I want it."

When he married, Widener bought the business from his dad.

His certification, acquired after college, is from ACE (American Council on Exercise) and Nautilus, for which he was a master trainer until they closed that school four years ago. He also has hours toward a physical therapy license but was too busy to finish the course.

"I would like to go back and finish, maybe get a nursing certificate," he says.

Nine years ago, the business was renamed South-west Personal Fitness. It's not, Widener stresses, just another gym.

"Mine's more for serious people who really want to learn something, grab hold of it, and spend some time on changing their body — either for muscle growth, for losing weight or for bone density. Usually it's for something fairly serious."

Thus, unlike most gyms, there wasn't a big spike in business at the beginning of the year.

"I don't usually get a huge influx of New Year's resolutions. Mine's more of a serious commitment."

Achieving results requires old-fashioned work, Widener points out.

"There are no shortcuts. Crash dieting doesn't work because you'll lose weight but you'll also lose muscle and you'll lose fat at the same time. When you lose muscle, you lose part of your metabolism, so when you get off the crash diet, not only do you gain the weight back that you had before but plus a little bit more.

"It needs to be a lifestyle change, where you learn how to eat right, sleep right, work out.

People try to make more of it rocket science than it is. That's part of the gimmicks that makes us Americanized. We're constantly trying to say we have the next neat deal that will get you there easier. The truth is, there is no substitute for hard work, there is no substitute for discipline.

"That's why, if I have a [person with a] New Year's resolution, it doesn't last. If it's something that they're serious about, it'll last. When they want to do it, it makes my job easier. If you're not serious about it, you're wasting my time and I'm wasting yours."

Ann Henry was serious about it seven years ago at the age of 65.

"When she started, she came in here on a walker," Widener says. "Seven years later, I dare any 72-year-old to try and keep up with her."

Henry, a former RN who moved to Alto with her husband in 2001, herniated some discs in her back while feeding cattle on her Texas ranch. "I had pain and weakness so bad I couldn't walk across the room," she says. "I felt I was melting."

Doctors in Texas treated the pain and put her on steroids. The root cause persisted.

"After we moved up here, I was taking a course at the university one night when I was in so much pain I could hardly get out of the building," Henry recalls.

At wit's end, she tried Southwest Personal Fitness in search of a "proactive" treatment. A year later she no longer needed a walker.

"Michael has done so much for me. He gave me my life back," she says.

Widener put her on a program to strengthen the "core" in order to support the back.

"One of the things he worked on was [teaching] things you can do and things you can't do. Plus, he's a kindly, Christian man, and it's a sweet, kindly atmosphere — safe, wholesome and secure. The mental outlook helps just as much as the physical aspect."

Last year, Ann and her husband went deep sea fishing in Mexico. They're planning a trip to Honduras and Guatemala.

"Michael's a real service to the senior community," she says. "I'm in much, much better in physical shape than I was seven years ago."

"I hate it when I get started with somebody, and they're just on the verge of breaking through, just almost there, and either something happens in life where they can't continue, or, they just quit," Widener says.

"That's when it bothers me. I think, what could I have done differently to make this more interesting? That's what I don't like, when I feel I've lost someone who was almost to a point where they were fixin' to break open. So this can be a really frustrating business."

Sometimes, he's able to coax a client through past the mental challenge.

"I've gotten to the point sometimes where I didn't know what to do, I got on my knees and prayed about it. And God makes up the difference, to be quite honest. And when it's somebody you really care about, it makes all the difference in the world. To me, that's what this business is about."

Potential clients have to be honest with him — and themselves, he says.

"There's a lot of people who will look at a picture of Arnold Schwarzenegger and say, 'Yeah, I want to look like that.' But do they want to do what that man did to get there? That's usually where the difference is. There's a lot of things that play into that. Doesn't mean they're lazy. It means their true wants and their true desires are different.

"I ask a client to be honest. What do they really want? As far as making body changes with appropriate exercises, building a bunch of muscle mass, I can do that. If they want to lose weight, I can help them do that. If they just want to feel better and have an overall sense of well-being and more energy and less pain, that kind of thing, I can do that. But I really need to know what direction they want.

"A client might come and say, 'I want to do this, do that,' and I work with him for two or three weeks and they quit, because they weren't being honest. They had an idea that they wanted to be that person, but that's not really who they were. What I tell people, I can't add one day to how long you're going to live. Whatever your time is, is your time. That's in God's hands; it's not in my hands. But what I can do is improve the quality of your life while you're here. But I can only do it if you're honest with me, as to what you really want out of your life and out of your body."

The discipline required for self-improvement is also the message. That extends to his martial arts classes.

"A woman called on behalf of a friend having problem with her son. He could benefit from some martial arts. I've got a kid right now, he's having a tough time with his life, his father's in prison. He doesn't have a role model. Usually, that's all a kid like that needs. Kids want to please, if you put him in a position where, 'If you do this, I'm proud of you, or if you do this there are consequences.' They have to see both sides. If they don't see both sides, if all they ever get is 'don't do that,' they get frustrated."

After a certain point, a client might learn enough to work out on his own. One afternoon, a young man with problems stemming from a twisted knee came in for a consultation.

"I haven't personally trained him for a long time," Widener said after talking with the man. "I taught him pretty much on the things to do. When they get to the point where they don't need me to hover over them anymore, I give them a break on (the cost) and they still work out here. They have me if they need me.

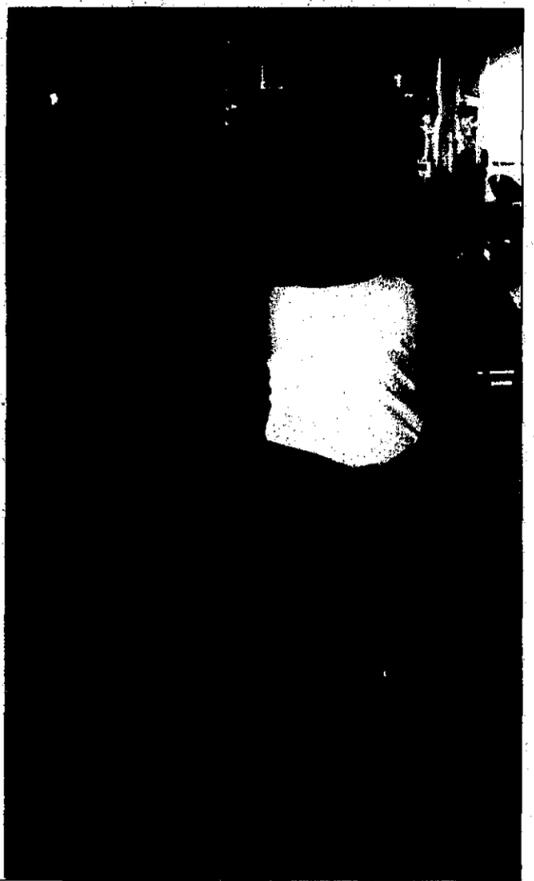

"It's a relationship. He doesn't need me, but by the same token he likes to come over and confirm things with me. He said he was feeling some twinges (in the twisted knee). I said you need to back off on the weights, until you can feel it, but no pain. In other words, you take it up to the pain, but not through the pain. He had a couple exercises out of order. I said you want to do your squats earlier in the workout, because they're a little riskier — not at the beginning because you're too cold, but not at the end, when those stabilizing muscles are too tired. So I explained that to him, a little bit of instruction."

It's all in keeping with Widener's philosophy of self-improvement.

"We do it according to what people need, not to just how much money I want to make. And the truth is, I make money because I have that approach. I'm not asking them to pay me for something they don't need to do. When people are getting what they need, not necessarily what they want, and you're keeping the pain away and they feel good, and the energy level's there, it's worth it.

"If you do it right, people will see a benefit, because it will save them money. They don't have to go to the doctor so much, because they don't hurt so much, and because you teach them how to eat and so forth, they don't get sick as much."

Across the room, another longtime client and occasional assistant, Teri Chavez, is grunting through some exercises. "A lot of women would like to look like that,"

Widener says, looking over. "You work hard or you don't look like that."

Ruidoso champions on parade

The 2008 quarter horse champions named on Tuesday by the American Quarter Horse Association is a list laden with horses and people who raced at Ruidoso Downs last summer.

Topping the champions is Stolis Winner. The son of Stoli was named world champion, champion 2-year-old and champion 2-year-old gelding.

He won the Grade 1, $625,000 Rainbow Futurity and crossed the finish line first in the Grade 1, $1.9 million All American Futurity.

His owner and breeder, Jerry Windham, was honored as champion owner and champion breeder.

G.R. Carter, Jr., his All American Futurity rider, was named the champion jockey for the fourth straight year.

Owner-breeder R.D. Hubbard, majority owner of Ruidoso Downs, had four of his horses earn championship honors.

Hubbard's primary quarter horse trainer Paul Jones was named the champion trainer for the seventh-straight year.

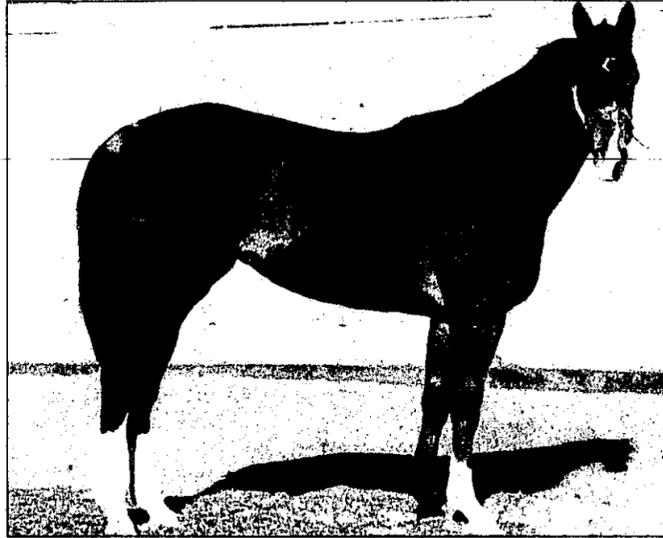

Lisa Saumell oversees Jones' New Mexico operation and is charged with the daily care of the Jones-trained horses.

Ruidoso fan favorite

Heartswideopen earned a champion title for the second-straight year after capturing the Ruidoso Derby and the Rainbow Derby for trainer Carl Draper.

She is the 2008 champion 3-year-old and 3-year-old filly.

Here is a behind-the-scene look.

R.D. Hubbard and Johnny T.L. Jones' Brenda Beautiful, the champion two-year-old filly, shown last week during her winter rest at Paul Jones' training facility in Tularosa. She will return to action this summer at Ruidoso Downs.

Two-time champion Heartswideopen raced exclusively at Ruidoso Downs in 2008. Here, Jed Vane leads her off the van when she arrived at Ruidoso Downs in April. She has been retired and is in Southern California to be bred to Walk Thru Fire.

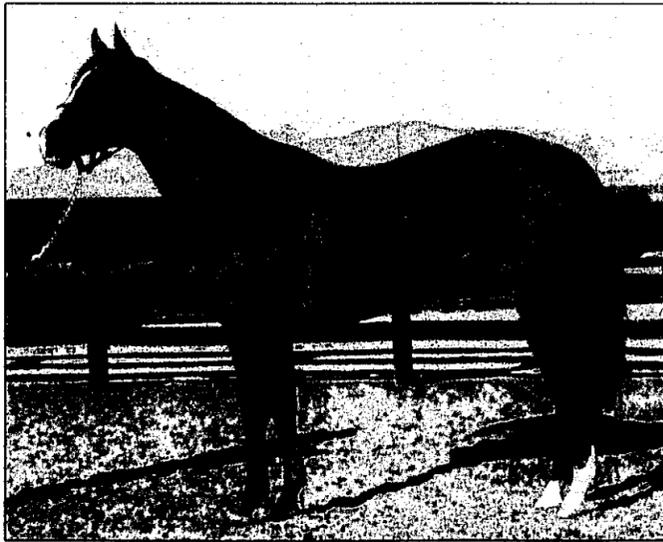

R.D. Hubbard's two-time champion Ketel Won, the 2008 champion aged stallion, checking out the scenery surrounding trainer Paul Jones' Ruidoso barn in August. He is beginning his first season at stud at JEH Stallion Station in Hondo and has already been booked to more than 60 mares.

R.D. Hubbard and Johnny T.L. Jones' My Dashing Lady, the dam of champions Noconi and Brenda Beautiful, was named champion broodmare. She is shown at Hubbard's Crystal Springs Farm in Tularosa in October. She is at the JEH Stallion Station in Pilot Point, Texas and will be bred to Brenda Beautiful's sire Feature Mr Jess.

R.D. Hubbard and Johnny T.L. Jones' Noconi, the champion 3-year-old gelding, is getting a vacation at Crystal Springs Farm in Tularosa before resuming training this spring. He won the All American Derby at Ruidoso Downs and then raced in California World champion Stolis Winner posed with owner and breeder Jerry Windham and his wife Pat, and jockey G.R. Carter, Jr., the morning after the All American Futurity. Windham was named champion owner and breeder, and Carter was honored as champion jockey. Stolis Winner is scheduled to make his 2009 debut at Ruidoso Downs this summer.

These are the days

With a population of 2 million people (ranking 36th in the U.S.), many of the towns in New Mexico (excluding Albuquerque) simply don't have the social opportunities many larger municipalities in other states afford.

For me, it took some getting used to.

A Saturday night out at Ruth's Chris Steak House, anywhere in this state, is out of the question.

A walk through the Carnegie Museum of Art is nothing more than a distant memory.

A Friday evening at an Italian trattoria for dinner and dancing is just a fantasy.

Legitimate nightclubs with hordes of people - forget about it.

OK, so those things, and some other ones, too, are not potential arenas for social intercourse in this locale.

Then what is? What are some of the strengths that this area offers?

Well, for one, it is far more close-knit than I think its citizenry realizes. I mean,

TIP OF THE WEEK

"See it through the Buyer's Eyes!"

We have customers looking for good houses in our beautiful Lincoln County area. Most are vacation or retirement oriented and don't care to purchase a house that needs a lot of work. Seems like the obvious, but we notice many homes on the market that need updating. If you want to sell, your house must be in reasonably updated condition or the price must be a bargain. - Joseph Zagone even if you don't like someone, odds are, you know them to some degree. And who knows? Maybe you'll become friends.

Especially if you have the same interests. Like local sporting events, for instance.

Before I came to Ruidoso, I have to tell you, I never once attended a soccer game, a high school basketball contest, a rodeo or any sport involving females. It was a real eye-opener. And an interesting education in the human experiment, too.

There I was, July 4, two years ago, at the Mescalero rodeo. Perched on a fence-post like I belonged there.

One of the organizers of the event asked me, "Hey Mike, how would you like to ride a bull?"

Many years ago I adopted the Sioux belief that any day is a good day to die.

That's how I summoned the nerve to scuba dive at 125 feet, barefoot water ski, parachute from insane altitudes (anything over 100 feet is just asking for trouble), paddle dugout canoes in crocodile infested waters and a myriad of other treacherous pursuits.

Why did I do it? All I can tell you is ... it made me feel alive. And I remembered exactly who I was with each and every time. So when my host at the rodeo asked if I wanted to ride a bull, I answered with a not-so-well-thought-out, "sure." I was delusional, no doubt about it.

I completely dismissed the fact that, age-wise, I'm on the final glide-path. I'm not the man I once was ... if I ever was.

"What, are you insane?" my friend exclaimed. "You've never been on a bull in your life and you're no Spring chicken. "And those are the

Brown hits 1,000

With a layup at the 5:52 mark of the second half, Christine Brown (of Ruidoso) became the 13th Beloit Women's Basketball player to score 1,000 career points to cap off a monster night on Wednesday in Flood Arena.

Carroll University 75-56 in a key MWC contest.

Brown also moved into second on the career rebound list on Wednesday night and now has 759 in her career.

A two-time All-MWC pick, Brown will close out her home career on Saturday afternoon against Ripon College.

Christine Brown, of Ruidoso, recently scored 1,000 career points for Beloit College.

nicest things I can say to you, other than it's a stupid thought."

I returned to my fence-post and remembered my place in this world.

My ticket to the grandstand of life reads, "Observer Status Only, bleacher seats."

Between rodeo events, I began to notice the crowded throng of fans in the stadium.

There were husbands and wives, some holding hands, along with their children, adolescent couples who just knew they would be together for life and interested fans intently watching the proceedings before them.

Simply put, they were just enjoying life, whether they were aware of it or not.

Ever after that, when the opportunity arose, my attention was drawn to the people viewing the contest before them.

Crowded home stands at high school football games, well-attended basketball contests and tournaments and yes, rabid fans at volleyball matches.

In these economic hard times, attending one of these events can be inexpensive, entertaining and a chance to socialize.

Recently, before a basketball game at RHS, the players publicly recognized the educators seated in the stands.

At halftime, tickets were raffled off to the attendees for a chance to shoot baskets and win money.

These are both good ideas that should be promoted.

It raises fan interest and draws people to the games. Maybe the food fare could be upgraded on certain days or nights.

Not that it's bad now, but what would happen if a specialized, simple bill of fare were offered? Something different.

These are just my initial thoughts, as you can readily determine.

I look forward to the Smokey Bear Classic basketball tournament in Capitan every year.

Yes, the competition is good ... but the food in the Library is great.

Why not offer something similar to the public at large?

Who knows, better ideas from local would-be promoters just may bring more people out for the night.

The high schools in any given area in Lincoln County are normally minutes away.

Sporting events can act as an excuse to get out for the night and mingle with people you know.

It's a strength of this area. And financially speaking, 'these are the days' to take advantage of such a worthwhile offering.

PRESIDENTS

Forty three, they number, in the march through time ... the celebrated parade of Presidents of the United States of America. Differing in physical stature and personality, possessing their own distinctive style of leadership and political agenda...each of our Presidents, however unique, has shared one common goal, to lead our country.

Each has shared in the guidance of our nation and in furthering the democratic process on which our nation was built. They gave of their ideas, their energies, and in some terrible instances their very lives.

This year on Presidents' Day, let's reflect on our history...on "God and Country"...and pray for the future of our nation as we continue to support our Commanders-in-Chief in their march through time.

RELIGION

Rights and responsibilities have parted ways

Solomon writes in Psalms 127, that children are a heritage, a gift from the Lord.

My wife and I have been blessed, gifted by the Lord with four natural-born daughters (no sons) and three adopted daughters.

We have 28 grandchildren (21 natural, two step and five adopted).

We have nine great-grandchildren with four more on the way this year. Psalms 128 says something about a "fruitful vine."

If overpopulation is a problem, I suppose we are guilty, but not as guilty as the young woman who has given birth to first six, and then eight children.

All are by embryos implanted in her uterus.

She is not married. She has not a father for the children, just a sperm donor.

She has no job for income.

At the birth of the eight, the young woman's mother is taking care of the six.

This brings us to the curious case of rights versus responsibilities.

I believe that a woman has the right to conceive and give birth to children.

With that right, comes the responsibility to care for and provide for the children.

I believe that where there is no responsibility, there should exist no right.

The only problem is this ... the exercise of the right precedes the responsibility.

There is no guarantee that the right will be exercised responsibly.

One of the problems in America today is the demand for rights to the exclusion of any required responsibility.

The pendulum has swung far to the "rights" side and far away from the "responsibility" side.

The young woman's fertility doctor has the right to practice medicine by virtue of education and licensure.

But where is his responsibility in the matter?

Did the doctor do this for money or notoriety?

I am afraid this whole scenario has demonstrated, to the absurd extreme, the philosophy in America today ... all rights, no responsibilities.

I am sure that there is no law in place to require the doctor to pay for the financial provision of these 14 children.

But there are laws in place to require that you and I pay for this fertility fiasco.

The Word of God teaches us to be responsible citizens. That means we must exercise our rights wisely.

Paul says, in I Corinthians 10:23-24, "Everything is permissible, but everything is not beneficial."

"Everything is permissible, but not everything is constructive. Nobody should seek his own good, but the good of others."

When we exercise our rights responsibly, we will have help for today and hope for tomorrow.

RUIDOSO PASTOR

Some questions won't be answered this side of the pearly gates

Q: My husband and I have been married for almost 25 years.

He's Jewish and I'm Catholic. Our kids are both being raised Catholic. My husband doesn't practice his faith while I do, and we both felt they'd be better "educated" by the parent who participates more fully in their faith.

We know another family in similar circumstances; she's Christian, he's Jewish. The mom has become concerned that her husband will never go to heaven since he doesn't accept Jesus as the Messiah. I was under the impression God has a covenant with the Jews to spend eternity in heaven. I also find it hard to imagine that my husband, who acts more "Christian-like" than many Christians I know, will not go to heaven.

To be honest, I'm not that concerned because I believe all good people will be in heaven with God. What do I say to my friend, and should I question my own belief?

enough work to do in this life to heal the sick and be, as Isaiah tells us in God's name, "a shelter from the storm." What happens after death is really none of our business. I understand that the rewards of heaven are not insignificant, and I also realize that people urging the conversion of non-Christians so they might share in that post-mortem salvation are generally well meant and lovingly sincere.

The problem is, we can't know who has the right password until we die. Testimony from our own sacred scriptures one way or the other also doesn't suffice.

The problem is more critical for Christians than for Jews, Muslims, Hindus or Buddhists, all of whom have some version of the belief that "The righteous of all nations will inherit the World to Come."

Christianity has to deal with the exclusivist truth claims of, among other sources, John 14:6: "I am the way, the truth and the life. No one can come to the Father except through me."

Even with this belief, there's still some theological wiggle room for those who want it.

An influential idea advanced by the Jesuit theologian Karl Rahner and his student Johannes Metz, is that non-Christians who live a morally decent life could be saved by the atoning death and resurrection of Jesus even if they'd never even heard of Christianity.

I'm tutored on this concept by my friend George Weigel, the biographer of Pope John Paul II. "At one level, the notion of 'anonymous Christianity' was simply the ancient Christian recognition that 'there are many whom Christ has that the Church does not have' - though all who are saved, even outside the formal boundaries of the Church, are saved through Christ," Weigel notes.

Pope Paul VI, at the end of Vatican II, said, "Since Christ died for all men, and since the ultimate vocation of man is, in fact, one, and divine, we ought to believe that the Holy Spirit in a manner known only to God offers to every man the possibility of being associated with this paschal mystery."

The only resolution will come when our souls stand before God in judgment after death.

"When we met with you, we were numb, you telling us who we needed to call and what we needed to do was so helpful. It was important to know that cremation takes place locally and he didn't leave you until we had his ashes in our hands."

LINCOLN COUNTY

Mi corazón es muy frío

Love on demand. That's my definition of Valentine's Day, a commercial holiday conveniently placed between Christmas and Easter designed to feed retailers and give people a reason to spend money.

I've been on the receiving end of a number of lovely red and white somethings: jewelry, candy, flowers and cards. All appreciated, just not necessary.

The head cowboy got to town late one year and all that was left were the cards written in Spanish. Mine said something about my corazón and forever.

He ate the chocolates on the way back to the ranch and, with no apology, told me he knew I was on a diet and he sure didn't want to contribute to any failure of that effort.

In the meantime, that same day it had snowed about 10 inches after it rained for a few hours.

The corrals were knee-deep in mud covered by a deceptively benign-looking white blanket of snow. It made a mush that sucked off your boots and hindered any kind of movement other than a determined trudge.

I was on heifer-calving duty while the head cowboy was somewhere else. The weather dictated frequent checks to make sure some new, wet, steaming baby calf wasn't born in a mud hole and chilled down before he ever got a chance at life.

Heifers by their very youth and nature are stupid, skittish and determined to be contrary in spite of what's in their best interest. When weather is bad, the calving kicks into a higher gear just because.

I cut laboring heifers out of the OB corral and penned them in warm stalls as they neared the birthing moment. That in itself was a visual as they ducked and ran and turned and did everything except go through the gate I needed them to go through.

I was in packer boots, every warm piece of clothing I owned, and looked like the Michelin man in a dance competition. Moving fast to cut off a heifer as she tried to cut back was not a pretty sight.

In all this, there was one heifer on the very far end of the corrals, a long alleyway from the barn, that decided to lie down and have her calf in the mud and snow in spite of my efforts. By the time I got to her, she was well into the business of pushing him out into a puddle of ice-cold mush.

Cowgirl Sassy & Savvy
BY JULIE CARTER

She got up the minute she saw me and came at me with definite intent to harm. I deftly jumped (OK, that may be an exaggeration) behind the gate I had just come through.

I let her run through the gate opening, preferable to running over the top of me. I quickly shut a couple gates behind her for safekeeping while I rescued the slimy newborn that was blinking and sputtering trying to get his first breaths.

The calf weighed more than he should have for a first calf and was long, wet and slippery. I lifted him up by his front end, hugging his back to me, my grip tight around his body just behind his front legs. His back legs still touched the ground and I knew all I could do was walk backwards and drag him up the alley to the barn.

In no particular order, I tugged and trudged and grunted and pulled. About 10 feet from the barn door, I went down. My foot had pulled out of my boot and my sock was fast soaking up freezing wet corral muck.

I was sitting on my frozen "corazón" with a slimy calf in my lap, trying to figure out how to get out from underneath him, get my boot and start over.

As perfect as timing could be, it was then the head cowboy came around the corner of the barn.

He first grinned and then with decidedly poor judgment, he laughed. He rescued the calf off my lap while asking, "Was this all you got done today?"

It was probably a week after the snow was gone before things thawed out at the ranch house. Valentine's Day had come and gone but there was no doubt, between the calving events, the card in Spanish and the empty chocolate box, it was destined to be one of the most memorable ones.

Julie says Happy Valentines Day to all those ranch wives working the calving pen. She can be reached for comment at jrcarter@ruidosonews.com.

County spellers compete for top honors

JULIE CARTER
jrcarter@ruidosonews.com

Students from Ruidoso, Capitan and Carrizozo competed in the 2009 Lincoln County Spelling Bee before a large crowd of parents and fellow students.

On Jan. 29, 26 participants competed in the bee held at Carrizozo High School.

Each school hosted a local spelling bee for elementary and middle school students to determine the qualifiers for the county competition.

At the county level, the competition began with a drawing of numbers to determine the order in which the students were called in the competition.

Carrizozo High School English and Journalism teacher Sarah Ball read the words to be spelled. Judges were Rosemary Shafer and Toni Rossi.

Most students successfully spelled their words in the first two rounds.

However, by the end of the third round, only five students remained in the competition, three from Capitan and one each from Ruidoso and Carrizozo.

There was a three-way tie for third place which was broken by a sixth round runoff between Ulises Guereca, Capitan; Laurel Bason, Capitan; and Josh Reynolds, Ruidoso.

Guereca, a fifth grader, emerged as the third place winner.

The final two remaining students in the competition were Natalie Barnwell, a middle school student from Capitan and Sarah Ferguson, a middle school student from Carrizozo.

The winning word in the competition was "renounce," with Sarah Ferguson successfully spelling it to win first place.

Plaques were awarded to the top three in the competition and each of the participants for the Lincoln County Spelling Bee received a certificate.

Ferguson will go on to the New Mexico State Spelling Bee to be held in Albuquerque on March 14.

The winner of the state competition will go on to Washington, D.C., for the national competition.

Scripps National Spelling Bee provided the list of words to be used in the local and county competitions.

Booklets were available to participating students to study the words which ranged in difficulty from grades three and four to grades seven and eight.

Students qualifying for the county spelling bee were:

RUIDOSO POLICE BRIEFS

Domestic battery

Ruidoso Police filed for an arrest warrant for Thomas Damon, 41, of Ruidoso after he allegedly shoved his wife in an altercation, Feb. 7.

Child endangerment

A traffic stop due to a lack of registration plate, Feb. 4, turned into a slew of charges against Frank Gonzalez, 27, and Tenya Lester, 33, both of Mescalero.

Police determined Gonzalez, who had been driving, was too drunk to drive and was driving on a revoked license with an arrest clause. He also had a bench warrant for failure to pay fines with the Lincoln County Magistrate Court. As his youngest daughter was in the vehicle without a car seat, he also was charged with child endangerment.

Lester was arrested for parties to an unlawful act and for failure to appear for a previous offense. The two were incarcerated at the Lincoln County Detention Center.

Too belligerent

Ruidoso Police arrested Wynham Runningwater, 25, of Tularosa, Feb. 8, after he was found in Midtown with an open container of beer. As police were informing him it was illegal to be drinking in public, Runningwater became loud and belligerent. He was placed under arrest for disorderly conduct and booked at the Ruidoso Police Department. According to the police report, "His family and friends decided not to bond him from Ruidoso," and he was taken to LCDC.

Phone theft

After being brought in, Feb. 5, on an outstanding warrant, Wileen Apachito, 25, of Mescalero, faced further charges of theft after it was discovered he had stolen the cellular phone he was carrying. He was later taken to LCDC.

Helping themselves

Police arrested Jack Hudgins, 19, of Ruidoso, Feb. 2, after he had broken into storage units in Alto owned by his father and took several items from them, ranging from food, dishes and tools to chainsaws and a laptop computer.

Hudgins was charged with burglary, breaking and entering and larceny and held on a $40,000 cash only bond.

Be more careful

Following an accident at the 1400 block of Sudderth Drive on Feb. 2, police found what looked like cocaine in a plastic baggy in the vehicle. Police questioned the car's owner, Heriberto Mendoza, 33, of Ruidoso, who then tried to snatch the baggy from the officer's hand. He was arrested and, while officers handcuffed him, he tried to hand his jacket to his daughter.

Police secured the jacket and found 10 more baggies in the jacket pocket. Mendoza admitted having bought the cocaine with the intent to resell it. He was charged with trafficking controlled substances and posted bond.

Slow down

A car driven by Jose Cardenas, 26, of Ruidoso, was found speeding, Feb. 9, on Sudderth Drive. After he was pulled over, officers found a "bowl" used for smoking marijuana. He was charged with speeding and possession of drug paraphernalia.

Death penalty bill passes State House

Bill would abolish capital punishment

SANTA FE — A bill sponsored by Rep. Gail Chasey (D-Bernalillo-18) which would abolish the death penalty passed the House of Representatives Wednesday by a vote of 40 to 28. HB285 would amend Section 31-18-14 NMSA 1978 to abolish the death penalty and substitute life without possibility of release or parole for a death sentence.

"The time has come to take this step," Chasey said. "As long as we continue to have the death penalty, the risk remains that we will execute innocent people. A sentence of life in prison without possibility of parole is an effective alternative.

"New Mexico spends several million dollars a year on death penalty cases, yet only one person has been executed since 1961," he added. "Better that we repeal the death penalty, substitute life without parole and offer the victims' families restitution and support in their healing process. I appreciate the support of the House in passing this bill."

The bill now heads to the Senate for review.

Underage drinking bill tabled at Legislature

SANTA FE — Late Tuesday, the House Business and Industry Committee voted 11 to 1 to table HB-78, Attorney General Gary King's bill, sponsored by Representative Luciano Varela, that would have raised the tax on sweet malt beverage alcoholic drinks to match the tax on distilled spirits.

"We are undaunted in our efforts to address underage drinking and we will use all the tools available to us to continue this fight," King said. "Yes, we expected the bill would have decreased consumption of alcopops by teens, that is the point."

Nearly a dozen liquor industry lobbyists were on hand to oppose the proposed legislation, one for every member of the committee.

The Attorney General says he was astounded by the liquor industry's influence in shooting down a proposal that could reduce illegal teen consumption of the popular malt beverages and reduce binge drinking.

One community activist testified to the House Business and Industry Committee that his experience indicated that young teen boys buy the alcopops in order to get young teen girls to come to parties and get drunk.

Concealed firearms instructors found to be in violation

ROSWELL — Two firearms instructors have been ordered to stop teaching courses for Concealed Handgun Carry License applicants. Raymond Lunsford, of Loving, and Stephen Bare, of Carlsbad, have been teaching courses in the southeast part of New Mexico that do not meet statutory requirements.

Special Investigations Division agents attended a course offered by the two on Jan. 31 and determined that their instruction did not meet minimum standards.

Based on evidence obtained by the Department of Public Safety, their course curriculum violates requirements set forth in the Concealed Handgun Carry Act and the New Mexico Administrative Code.

SID agents found that Lunsford and Bare's students were given only 3-4 hours of instruction and were not required to demonstrate firearms proficiency.

Minimum course requirements are at least 15 hours of instruction and proving firearms competency on the range. Since Nov. 1, 2008 more than 442 students have attended Mr. Lunsford and Mr. Bare's concealed carry courses.

The Department of Public Safety is examining the legitimacy of all classes taught by Mr. Bare and Mr. Lunsford and will determine what action to take regarding the Concealed Carry Licenses issued to people who have taken classes from these two instructors.

Pan-fried trout

Polly's Potpourri

by Polly E. Chavez

In Lincoln and Otero Counties, many Hispanics still practice Lenten traditions first observed by our ancestors. Preparation for Lent begins on Ash Wednesday and intensifies during Holy Week in anticipation of Easter Sunday.

We older Hispanic people reminisce of Cuaresma (Lent) food recipes and some of us still pass on this tradition to their children. The Lenten dishes, served on Ash Wednesday, Holy Thursday and Good Friday, are also served every Friday throughout the season as well.

The Hispanic Lenten menu has much diversity. A delectable dish, torrijas de huevo are egg fritters smothered in red chile and are also known as tortas. Quelites (spinach) with beans, calabacitas and other meatless dishes make the main Lenten meal.

In a Lenten dessert, capirotada (made with toasted bread), the ingredients include raisins, cheese and caramelized sugar.

Next week's recipe will be Arroz Dulce (Sweet Rice).

So are her edgy housewife/savvy attorney appearances as Eva in the '90s sitcom "Evening Shade," which co-starred Burt Reynolds, Charles Durning and Hal Holbrook. The sexy red-headed comic actress has also stolen hearts in a number of hilarious films, such as Noises Off with Michael Caine,

Valentine's dance with Al Hurricane

Singers Al Hurricane and Al Hurricane, Jr., appear at the Tays Center Saturday, Feb. 14. The show and dance start at 7:30 p.m.

This will prove to be a very fun event on Valentine's Day. It is always nice to have a dance and a band that is easy to listen to at an event that brings warm feelings to all.

Al Hurricane was born on July 10, 1936, in Dixon, N.M. His birth name is Alberto Nelson Sanchez. Hurricane was a nickname given to him by his mother because he was like a little hurricane, always knocking things over at the dinner table and objects in his path.

Hurricane has had many nicknames and names for his band over the years. They have been billed as Al Banana and his Bunch, The Night Rockers, and, most recently, as The Al Hurricane Band.

Al himself as been billed as Albert Nelson, Bert Nelson, The Little King of Rock & Roll, and ultimately as El Godfather, La Leyenda de Nuevo Mexico - The Legend of

New Mexico. He has been making music and has had his band for more than 50 years.

Al has recorded 30 albums, starting with his first in 1967, Mi Saxophone, and his latest release in 2003, Que Viva EL Godfather.

Hurricane has had several No. 1 hits in New Mexico, Colorado, Wyoming, Utah and throughout the Southwest. He also recorded under the group name "Bandido" on Discos Musart and EMI Capitol labels.

A few of the recordings with Bandido were also No. 1 Hits in Chicago and Los Angeles, as well as throughout the Southwest. Hurricane has played guitar for such legendary artists such as Fats Domino and Marvin Gaye. Hurricane's band has also backed up artists such as Chuck Berry, Jimmy Clanton and Chubby Checker

Al Hurricane, Jr., was born to Alberto Nelson Sanchez (Al Hurricane) and Nettie M. Fleming on Oct. 30, 1959 in Albuquerque. His birth name is Alberto Nelson Sanchez, Jr. Hurricane is a nickname inherited from his father.

Al, Jr., grew up in Albuquerque, throughout many parts of the city including Old Town, 19th and Marble, the West Side, Academy Acres and finally settling in the North East Heights. Eventually he joined the Al Hurricane Band. His decision to work with his dad was not a mistake. It was the beginning of a partnership that continues to this day.

During his career, Al, Jr. has acquired many nicknames such as El Joven, The Godson of New Mexico and Berb. He was only 14 years old when he recorded his first song, "El Pintor," and has been performing with his dad's band for 30 years. He has recorded and released six solo albums, starting in 1976 with El Joven and the latest release in 2006, Sin Duda, Mejor Que Nunca. His song "Flor de las Flores" was voted the No. 1 song 10 years running on 89.1 KANW-FM.

All general admission for the Al Hurricane concert and dance is subject to some nice 50 percent discounts for students, seniors, military and groups of six or more.

Advance tickets are available from the Flickinger Center Monday - Friday 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.

They may be purchased in person or by telephone (with a Visa or MasterCard). Tickets will also be available at the door the night of the performance.

The box office opens at 6:30 p.m.

ASTRONOMY

Mysteries of the Zoo

Ever since the pioneering work by American astronomer Edwin Hubble during the early decades of the 20th century, we've known that our galaxy - which we've affectionately dubbed the "Milky Way" - is only one out of numerous other galaxies in the universe.

In every direction we look into space, we see galaxies upon galaxies upon galaxies, and as a result of detailed surveys and images we know that the number of galaxies in the known universe must be somewhere in the neighborhood of a hundred billion.

The galaxies within our universe come in a variety of shapes and sizes. Some, like the Milky Way, are spiral-shaped, with several spiral "arms" wrapped around a central nucleus. Others are more oval, without any spiral arms, with some of these being almost spherical in shape. And then there are others that don't seem to have much of any structure at all, but instead are just haphazardly shaped collections of gas, dust and stars. Within all these various broad types of galaxies are various sub-groupings and sub-types, and over the years astronomers have devised a fairly elaborate classification scheme for them. Even then there are some galaxies that just don't seem to fit anywhere within the scheme.

The most comprehensive survey of the universe going on right now is the Sloan Digital Sky Survey that is being conducted from Apache Point Observatory near Sunspot, N.M. The Sloan Survey is, among other things, an effort to map the universe in several different "colors," or wavelengths of light; by analysis of how distant galaxies appear in these different colors, it is possible to construct a three-dimensional picture of the surrounding universe.

In the course of this process literally millions of galaxies are being surveyed and analyzed. One of the necessary elements of this is the classification of all these galaxies, and as one might imagine this is a time- and labor-intensive undertaking. Although in theory computer software can be written to perform these classifications, because there are so many variations in the forms that galaxies present it is actually more accurate if these are performed by human beings.

Thus was born the Galaxy Zoo. This is a program that facilitates contributions from armchair astronomers all over the world (currently numbering over 150,000), who examine galaxy images taken in the course of the Sloan Survey and who then classify them. Since each galaxy is classified by several Galaxy Zoo participants and thus (hopefully) produces a consensus, this human-run program can, and has, resulted in the classification of well over a million galaxies.

One of these Galaxy Zoo participants, a young Dutch schoolteacher named Hanny van Arkel, has recently found an object in the Sloan Survey images that has defied all attempts at classification. It appears as a green, misshapen mass near a seemingly normal spiral galaxy known as IC 2497 that's located in the constellation Leo Minor (the little lion).

This object has since become known as "Hanny's Voorwerp" ("voorwerp" being Dutch for "object").

What exactly is Hanny's Voorwerp? Numerous scientific observations have been conducted over the past several months, and it appears to be located at the same distance from us as IC 2497. It contains a significant amount of highly ionized (i.e., electrically charged) gas, although at this time it is unclear how many stars are contained within it. The spectrum of Hanny's Voorwerp suggests that it should contain a quasar (an extremely bright and energetic nucleus of an active galaxy) - but there is no such object anywhere around.

Although the consensus among astronomers is far from complete, it appears that we may be seeing a light echo. IC 2497 may have contained a quasar that, for some as-yet-unexplained reason, shut down within the fairly recent past ("recent" in this context being a few hundred thousand years). While the quasar itself is no more, the light from it is still being reflected to us by the gas in Hanny's Voorwerp, which itself may be the remains of a small galaxy that was ripped apart by tidal forces from IC 2497 sometime in the distant past.

There are plans to observe Hanny's Voorwerp with the Hubble Space Telescope within the fairly near future, and perhaps sometime after that we'll have a better handle on just what this object really is. In the meantime, it and IC 2497 are visible high overhead during the evening hours, somewhat to the north of the "head" of Leo, the lion; IC 2497 should be detectable with larger backyard telescopes, but the "Voorwerp" itself is much dimmer. Whatever it is, Hanny van Arkel's object goes to show that we still have much left to learn about this universe of ours.

Calls for Artists & Others

Call for actors

Adults and young performers are needed for the upcoming NMSU-A Theatre on the Hill's production of the new family play, The Big Dog's Club.

Auditions will be held on Saturday, Feb. 21, at 1 p.m. and on Sunday, Feb. 22, at 2 p.m., at the Rohovec Fine Arts Center on the NMSU-A Campus (2400 North Scenic Dr. in Alamogordo). Actors only need to attend one of the audition sessions. Young performers need to be 8 years old to audition.

The Big Dog's Club, a new script by Connie Breeding, NMSU-A associate professor of theatre, will be produced on April 17, 18, 24, 25 & 26 as the tenth production in the college's Theatre for Young Audiences series.

The play centers on neighborhood dogs Bowser, Rambo, Bear and Skipper, all members of The Big Dog's Club, as they attempt to keep their canine club an exclusive organization. But, when they inadvertently admit Scrappy, a cat, into the group, mayhem ensues.

The Big Dog's Club features a large cast of both male and female characters of varying ages. Previous theatre experience is not required, and you do not need to be an NMSU-A student in order to audition. For more information, call Diana at 575-439-3670.

LET'S GO! - OTERO COUNTY

Love Letters at The Lodge

Alamogordo Music Theatre, now in its 51st season, may well be the oldest musical theatre company in the Southwest.

Over the years, AMT has acquired a reputation for producing musical entertainment that goes far beyond what most people would expect to find in a community our size. Since its founding in 1958, AMT has provided us with more than 100 full-scale musical productions.

Now AMT, in partnership with The Lodge in Cloudcroft, is proud to bring back a longtime favorite - Love Letters.

Love Letters is a truly unique and imaginative theater piece. The setting puts an actor and actress at a table reading directly from their scripts. In this simple format, the play tells the story of Andrew Makepeace Ladd and Melissa Gardner, whose friendship and ill-fated romance take them from second grade through young adulthood and into middle age. As they read aloud the letters they have exchanged over a lifetime, the play creates an evocative, touching, frequently funny, but always telling pair of character studies in which what is implied is as revealing and meaningful as what is actually written down.

The characters let us all in on the ups and downs of their relationship, and the triumphs and failures of their lives. Though never married to each other, they counted on each other through those times, as good friends often do.

Love Letters will make you laugh and cry. You will see yourselves sometimes in these two people, some of our good traits, and some of our not to nice characteristics. However, the love of these two people for each other will remind us all of how precious relationships and life really are. The show features Paula (Jackson) Storms and Steve Trout with the following

Library celebrates 109th

Ermelinda Noriega Moyers, president of the Alamogordo's Woman's Club and Marie Vallejos, vice president, visit with Debbie Hayba, Alamogordo Public Library director (center), at a reception for Hayba at the Alamogordo Public Library in January hosted by Friends of the Alamogordo

Public Library. A Woman's Club organized the first Public Library in Alamogordo, which opened its doors to the public on March 1, 1900. Each year a "Birthday Party" is held to commemorate this event and The Friends of the Library invite the public to the 109th Birthday Party on Sunday, March 1, from 2 p.m. to 4 p.m., at the Alamogordo Public Library. More than 200 people celebrated last year and the Rhodes Room was so crowded that this year the Birthday Cake and punch will be served in the Rhodes Room and the "Special Events" will be in the Multipurpose Room.

Our many and talented local published authors are invited to attend to be publicly honored and recognized. For more information, contact Nola Jones, Friends of the Library Party Chairman, 437-4193. They would appreciate help in locating and inviting our local published authors of prose, poetry, plays or music.

ADVENTURE

Valentine's romance in the moonlight – in Borneo

Borneo is for lovers – lovers of warm waters, gentle currents, moonlit nights, and friendly locals – both underwater and above.

In short, your perfect Valentine's Day outdoor adventure!

FOLLOW ME TO MALAYSIAN BORNEO!

It was love at first sight when I slipped into the warm turquoise waters of Barracuda Point off Sipadan Island, a protected area in the Malaysian state of Sabah on the island of Borneo. A green turtle the size of card table lipped slowly toward me.

In the Caribbean or Mexico, turtles kedaddle as soon as a swimmer or diver moves or points at them. Not Sipadan turtles. Instead of retreating, this fellow swam even closer.

He (his large tail verified gender) glided around me, his shiny marble-like eyes never leaving my face.

That's when I fell in love.

As dive buddies joined us one by one, the turtle checked them out. Neither bubbles nor fins frightened him. While cameras and videos flashed and whirred, he cruised our group. His departure was a slow, almost bored, exit.

When five more turtles swam toward me, followed by two white tip sharks, flamboyant cuttlefish, ornate ghost pipefish, mating mandarin fish, blue-ringed octopus and frogfish in all colors and sizes, I knew Malaysian Borneo was special.

This romance may last.

SWEETHEARTS LOVE TO BE PAMPERED

When owner Clement Lee planned his Borneo Divers Mabul Resort (BDMR), he knew how to pamper swimmers, divers and sweethearts.

Fourteen reddish-brown hardwood duplex air conditioned chalets face a white coral sand beach. Each chalet displays bright yellow shutters and doors, a blue clay tile roof, a wide veranda and rails to dry wet swimsuits.

My beach-front chalet sat a few steps from both beach and swimming pool complete with bar. A few steps more led to the scuba dive center.

I went barefoot everywhere – outdoors on the putting green-like lawn surrounding the chalets and indoors on the polished red-brown hardwood floor in the alfresco reception-bar-dining-conference area.

Although tempted to forget civilization, I connected with the world via BDMR's complimentary wireless using my laptop and adaptor for Asian electrical outlets. Laptop-less guests used one of BDMR's complimentary ones.

Staying at BDMR means never having to think about where your next meal or snack is coming from. Packages include three buffet meals per day plus tea and snacks. No need to memorize mealtimes either. Aromas of garlic and ginger wafting on ocean breezes led me to the dining room long before the dinner gong sounded.

MOONLIGHT ROMANCE

One moonlit evening, we swayed in our sarongs at a moonlight poolside BBQ

At Borneo Divers Mabul Resort, swim trunks are the dress code for dinner, with footwear optional on the putting green-like lawn. Photo by Yvonne Lanelli. Your Valentine will love the luxurious beachside chalets, swimming pool with bar and other romantic amenities at Borneo Divers Mabul Resort on Mabul Island off the Malaysian coast of Borneo. buffet with live musical entertainment. The same guys who guided us on snorkels and dives in the daytime became entertainers at night, involving the international crowd – Germans, French, Malay locals, Swedes, Taiwanese, Hong Kongese, Dutch, many, many Aussies and a couple of Americans – in a multi-lingual sing-along.

Eljay, the lead instructor, sang and played his guitar augmented by the "rhythm section," plastic buckets and garbage cans, cymbals and a large plastic bottle. (Don't knock it; they sounded good!)

Surf rolled gently onto the beach. Eljay's nimble fingers caressed his guitar. I sneaked a peek at my fellow partygoers. A middle-aged Aussie couple held hands, celebrating their 25th anniversary, they shyly admitted. A younger couple smiled in the moonlight, enjoying a few days away from the responsibilities of career and young family. A German gentleman brought his attractive Italian companion a fresh drink.

Yes, Mabul's moonlight had worked its magic. Take your Valentine to Borneo and discover romance all over again!
