A Pilgrimage to Washington's Tomb.

This 22nd of February is Washington's birth-day, and is being observed all over our land. Newsworkers will have much to say about it, and this editor will contribute his mite to the occasion. In 1884 he was holding a government position in Washington, D. C. and on the 22nd of February made a pilgrimage to Washington's tomb. He was accompanied by his friend Col. R. C. Boudinot, the Cherokee half breed Indian, then a well known character, in Washington, as well as throughout the country. This article is mostly written from notes taken at the time and presents a clear record of what was to me then a short but a very interesting excursion.

We made the trip on the stern boat Mary Washington, the only boat permitted to land at Mount Vernon. Promptly at 10 a. m. the silver bell on the boat rang clear and sweet for all to get aboard, and we were soon steaming down the Potomac.

A few miles down, the river makes a slight curve, and on a bright morning like that, 22nd of February, 1884, looking back is one of the most beautiful sights to be seen in all the world—it is Washington City seen from the deck of a steam boat. It made such an impression on me at that time it stands out before my mental vision today in all its inspiring grandeur. Mr. Joaquin Miller, who had traveled the world over, and who could appreciate the beautiful as only few others could, speaking of that same scene, said that Venice or Naples seen from ships out on the sea, are not more beautiful than the National Capital as we saw it from that view point. All the unsightly places and imperfections are hidden, and Washington presents a picture glistening and gleaming in the morning sunshine that can never be forgotten. The great Capitol building, with its dome reaching heavenward, predominating the scene, the large department buildings are only a little imposing, and the tall Washington Monument, standing on the bank of the Potomac, gives proportion and symmetry to the situation.

We go on down to Alexandria and the boat rounds into shore where a cargo is unloaded. In that old town stands the church where Washington worshipped and the Masonic Lodge over which he presided. Leaving Alexandria, we went on down the wide river; soon the bell began tolling, for we were approaching Mount Vernon—all boat hellstoll when passing there. Landing we go up an incline a short distance and we stood before the tomb of Washington. In full view, behind strong bars are two marble coffins, holding the remains of George and Martha Washington, and behind a partition in the rear of the brick tomb about thirty of the Washington family lie. The vault is locked and closed forever, and the key is said to have been thrown into the Potomac. We then went on up the hill a few hundred feet, passing the old tomb where Washington's body was first placed, and then step up on the broad, high porch of Mount Vernon.

We were shown through the house by the Superintendent and many things were pointed out.

There is a suit of velvet clothes which had been worn by Washington; his sword is there, as well as many other things which have had a connection with him. Nellie Custis' Harpsicord stood in the parlor as it had done more than a hundred years before, when distinguished guests from foreign countries visited Washington at Mount Vernon. But the thing, however, of most singular interest there is the key to the French Bastille, presented by Thomas Paine to Lafayette, who brought it to America and presented it to Mount Vernon. It hangs on the parlor wall in a glass case, massive and monstrous—a hideous, a horrible thing, and has, perhaps, more blood and misery connected with it than any other piece of iron or steel that has ever been seen. In this connection the following lines from Joaquin Miller will be appropriate:

"Paine! The Prison of France!
Lafayette!
The Bastille key to our Washington,
Whose feet on the neck of tyrants set Shattered their prisons every one.

The key hangs here on his white walls high,
That all shall see, that none shall forget

What tyrants have been, and what they may be yet;
And the Potomac rolling by."

"What tyrants have been,
and what they may be yet."
These words read like prophesy.
We have lately seen what tyrants attempted and failed only because civilization rebelled against them.

There is a garret in that spacious house which Mrs. Washington, after her husband died, chose for her sitting room. There she sat by a dormer window through all the days of the two years she lived after her husband's death, looking out on the old tomb where he then lay. One bottom corner of the door shutter is cut away that her cat could come and go at will, and I thought it was the tenderest, saddest sight at Mount Vernon. It seems an eternal Sabbath there. Although crowds go there nearly every day, one can not help but feel the solemnity and sanctity that pervades the very atmosphere which surrounds him; it is a place where sadness broods and tenderest memories will forever abide.

In progressive towns people have printed on the back of their envelopes enclosing every letter they mail out setting forth the advantages of their community—advertising sure pays all right even to boosting your town and country. Every little bit helps.

Find Historic Relics.

Excavators for the Brooklyn Rapid Transit subway tunnel to Brooklyn, under Whitehall street, came upon a large number of piles which had been imbedded in the mud at that point since Revolutionary days. The site of the historic find was, at one time, that of the old Whitehall ferry, whence Gen. George Washington embarked one December day in 1783, immediately after he had bidden farewell to his officers at Franca's tavern, at Broad and Pearl streets, four blocks away. While the diggers were hoisting up the old piles they also found some old wooden masts used during the administration of Aaron Burr as water commissioner of the city. Many old relics have been dug up in this section of the city with the excavating for the new tunnel. Two blocks away the hull of an old wooden ship was found 15 feet beneath the surface of the street, a year or two ago, while further "inshore," near Broad and Front streets, huge clam shell beds were dug up, showing that at one time the shore line had been further inland.

LEGISLATIVE NEWS

Special Correspondence to the Capitan Mountaineer.

Santa Fe.—The first step toward lifting the lid on the ballot granting equal suffrage to women of New Mexico found inception in the legislature this week when a measure was introduced from the Democratic ranks extending to the women an equal franchise at all elections. It is commonly known that a strong opposition to the suffrage amendment bill will be exerted by the Spanish-American members of the Republican majority, in spite of the fact that the latter's platform contains that plank.

The bill providing for equal suffrage will doubtless appear in the House on its third reading for either passage or rejection the latter part of the week. Democratic members of the lower lower house stands perhaps without one exception strongly in favor of suffrage and upon its reappearance from committee channels, it is said the Democratic members will endeavor to place that body on record either for the adoption and passage of the bill or its rejection, the latter of which would heap much accountability on the opposition.

The Sheriffs and peace officers of the state held a meeting here the first of the week to determine what legislation they should demand from the present administration. Among the demands that were made was for an increase in the allowances for feeding prisoners, and another bill that is to be prepared will grant higher rates of pay to jailers. The fight on the mounted police will be maintained and a show down on this matter before the session of the legislature closes.

Garlic to Be Imported.

Because of the scarcity of food in Europe and the difficulty of transportation, the war board discouraged the importation of food products from Europe, hoping to save them for home consumption and to save tonnage. Garlic from Italy was included under this general prohibition until the Italian government represented that great financial loss would result, due to the vast acreage planted with garlic in Italy. The supply of this year's yield would be far too great for home consumption. Due to this, the war trade board issued a permit for the present year, with the understanding that after January, 1918, fewer acres would be planted to garlic, but would be devoted to the cultivation of other food products, which would be used for home consumption.—Italian-American News Bureau.

Bismarck's Head Sold Cheap.

An iron head of Bismarck was recently sold to the New York war savings committee for transformation into munitions. The iron chancellor's metal duplicate was appraised at $5, paid in War Savings stamps, and within two hours was on its way to a munition factory. The owner, who refused to give his name, declaring that since the war he had been so embarrassed about his possession that he hesitated to dispose of it as refuse, feeling the cynical comments of the junk collectors of his neighborhood.

Women in the ranks.

Two women fighters are in the Serbian army, Sergeant-Major Flora Sandes, a Scottish woman, and Milica Savic, a Serbian girl. Miss Sandes was severely wounded some time since, being struck by more than 50 fragments from a Bulgarian hand grenade. She received a decoration. The Serbian girl has been wounded several times. She was awarded the gold medal for valor, and was made a Knight of the French Legion of Honor.

Naturally.

"The martial bands are brave who go into battle playing to inspire the men."
"Of course. It is their business to face the music."

AWAY WITH MONEY

Japanese Idea of a Paradise of Peace.

Claim Made That Complete Abolition of "Filthy Lucre" Would Promote Equality in Public Life of Mankind—Ticket System Urged.

We will make here a suggestion which furnishes us a method to prevent the appearance of the rich, and avert the consequent result of the difference between rich and poor. The suggestion consists of the entire disuse of the money over the world, in order to give the struggle for existence a check, to make away with the difference of rich and poor, and thus to promote peace and equality in the public life of mankind.

It is through the medium of the money that wealth is accumulated, and the accumulation entails the difference of rich and poor, with its resultant struggle for existence.

This state of things is most undesirable. The end of mankind is not to be proud of individual talent or ability, but to co-enjoy the peace of the world, just as in a family, and any cause which brings about any inequality in public life must be radically eliminated. It is for this reason that we dare to suggest the disuse of the money to prevent the difference of rich and poor.

What crafty fellow ever produced the money for use in human life? Of course, nationalization of various valuables, such as gold, silver, jewels, etc., shall be implied in the disuse of the money and their ownership by individuals be prohibited. Such valuables retain their values only when they are used as a means of inequality, but will be nothing more than those pebbles on the road when equality is to be prevalent. They may have some value in giving us a good feeling on account of their elegance, then they may be used, under public ownership, for the decoration of shrines, temples, churches, halls, and many other like buildings to the common pleasure of the public at large.

Most complicated troubles may arise from the adjustment of properties after the enforcement of the disuse of the money. With the proposed suggestion mines, railroads, ships, electric and gas plants, waterworks, and many other properties essential to the common interest of a nation shall be transferred to the national ownership, not to say of the nationalization of land, and they shall be equally compensated for, as for the confiscation of money and several bonds, with a kind of registration bond newly issued for the purpose, which should have the characteristic of temporary transitional means until an improved feature makes its appearance in a new society.

In other regards individuals may be permitted to retain their own property, personal and real, and maintain their professions or occupations. Transactions shall be carried on by the exchange of kind in kind, or barter. But as barter is too inconvenient to be enforced, a ticket system may be taken for the remedy of this defect. As has been stated, our ideal disuse of the money does not admit any accumulation of wealth, and so the tickets shall be given each a certain period of time, say 10, 20, 30 years or more, during which they can be in use, and after which their circulation ceases.

When this is accomplished, there can be no more complaints, no more dissatisfactions, no more contradictions, and the world will be reorganized into a paradise of peace.—Seijiro Bawashima in Dal Nippon.

Not Too Tired to Fight.

Among the cheering anecdotes Eliza Beth Shepley Sergeant reports in an article on the present French-American offensive, none raise more sanguine hopes of allied victory than this:

Somewhat over a month ago a French general encountered an American colonel of infantry below Chateau-Thierry.

"How long have your men been on the march?" asked the general.

"Thirty-six hours."

"Then of course they are too tired to go on."

"Not at all—they'll go right on."

"Can you stop the Germans?"

"Certainly we can stop them."

It was thus that an American infantry regiment and five batteries of artillery were thrown straight across the road from Metz to Paris. The Germans not only did not advance one step farther along that road; they were immediately driven back by the Americans and their re-enforcements at Bourches, at Chateau-Thierry, and the Bois de Belleau.—Detroit News.

Latest Infant Prodigy.

The latest "infant phenomenon" hails from Philadelphia. Her name is Edith Greenberg. At the age of eight months Edith, from the confines of her cradle, mimicked the call of the quail with such conviction that the bird would answer back. At the age of two she could distinguish all the colors of the spectrum. One month later she was discovered in the act of humming Schubert's "Serenade," and at three and one-half years she could recognize 100 popular airs. Three months later Edith's favorite composers were Tschalkowsky, Wagner, Leoncavallo, Handel, Rihlstein, Liszt, Sullivan, Puccini and Beethoven. Edith could pronounce all these names with out slip.

Two Canine Heroes.

Two French war dogs, which well deserve the honor, have had their names and numbers posted up at all the French army kennels for a deed of valor. The story is that, at the time of the German offensive, the dogs' keeper stayed in the rear to the very last moment, waiting for his dogs to return with an important message. When they did come, the only way left to escape capture was by swimming the dogs, and the man could not swim, so he coupled the dogs together, and clinging on to their iron chain, was dragged across the river by them, the three escaping unhurt in spite of a rain of bullets from German rifles.

Clouds.

"The height maintained by clouds is very variable and is generally less than you might suppose," writes Jean Henri Fabre. "There are clouds that lazily trail along the ground; they are the fogs. There are others that cling to the slopes of moderately high mountains, and still others that crowd the summits. The region where they are commonly found is at a height varying from 500 to 1,500 meters. In some rarer cases instances, they rise to nearly four leagues. Beyond that, eternal serenity reigns."

Best Sugar Cement.

An interesting by-product of beet sugar is cement. The scum which collects in holding 100,000 tons of sugar beets contains about 6,000 tons of carbonate of lime. When this calcium carbonate is mixed with clay and burned, a very good cement is obtained.

Is a fine name for a Garage or most any thing else, don't you think so? Well the Liberty Garage is the old Capitan Garage thoroughly revived and everybody awake and down to work early and strictly on the job. Again about the word "Liberty" which has been what the world has been fighting for and which was so eloquently and sincerely expressed by Patrick Henry of Virginia in Revolutionary Days in which he said before the Virginia House of Delegates, "Give me Liberty or Give me Death." We are prepared to overhaul Liberty Motors the most Scientific Motor of the Age, down to your "Tin Lizzie." We also have Gasoline, oils, cup and differential greese, Ford Accessories and every thing pertaining to the Automobile.

Ten Commandments For Advertisers

By E. M. Evans in Advertiser's A. S. S. S.

1. Know the cost of your space and get a rate that earns a profit.
2. Refuse the copy of the fellow who buys a space just to "fill the paper." Country won't earn a profit. Make the space worth the rate and make the advert cents worth.
3. Space is your stock in trade. Do not swap it for anything but money, and get the cash.
4. Do not give away a half column reader to get a quarter page advertisement. Your own advertisers would not give you some goods to encourage you to buy more.
5. Do not use a dollar premium to get a dollar subscription. If people do not want the paper they won't read it and if they do not read it they are poor circulation. The highest class circulation is that made up of people who buy the paper because they want it. Get the cash in advance.
6. Be fair to the public. Do not let the heavy advertisers.

prejudice news and editorial matter. They'll respect you less and use you all the more.

7. Do not read public opinion and try to lean to it. Start something to build up the community and help the public opinion is as easily molded as willow.

8. Do not print news, editorials or advertisements that are not fit for your wife, mother or children to read.

9. Commend good work and censure the bad, where you find it. It will prove your courage and make you friends.

10. Do not try to please everybody. If you do you'll please nobody.

To the fellow that has surplus money to invest, we would suggest that he come to Capitan and erect a few good rent houses—they will find ready occupants. It will add that much more to the taxable wealth of the county which swells the school and Road Funds.

This little paragraph is to the anchorman and farmer and not for you to read unless you are overly anxious. For their benefit we will say that the Lincoln County High School is improving and there is every reason to be assured of a better school next term. This little berg of Capitan has good moral surroundings and your children will progress as well or better than in other places you have in view.

Letter From Shirley Linam

Saarsburg, Germany, Jan. 9, 1919—Dear Father and Sisters—Your letter received last night, and I was more than glad to hear from you again. I know I ought to have written to you long before this, but soon after the armistice we kept hearing that we were going home soon, but have decided there is nothing to it—they will keep us until they get good and ready to send us home. We all thought that after we came over here and went through the hell that we have gone through, we could then go home. Yes, we were in two big drives; the first one was down in the Alsace-Lorraine sector, just south of Metz. We went on that front the 5th of August. I suppose you have read in the papers of the St. Michel drive; that was the first one we were in, and it started on the 12th of September; on the 13th the Supply Co. lost three men. One was our First Lieutenant; one was from Arizona, and the other was Charlie Clayton, a cousin of Verner and Cubie. About the middle of October, we were sent to the Verdun front. There the 89th met Germany's best troops, but the Yanks were too much for much for them. On the morning of November 1st at 3 o'clock the final drive started, that is, the Supply Co. certainly were lucky. We never lost a man in that drive, but several were wounded. I don't see how they ever escaped like they did. There were teams killed right to the wagons, spokes torn out of the wagons and hole all through the beds. Then on November 11 at 11 o'clock the guns all ceased firing. Oh! it seemed like another world—couldn't hardly believe the thing was over.

On the 24th we started for Germany and went across Belgium and Luxemburg, and so here we are at Saarsburg, which is located on the banks of the Saar river. It is a beautiful place; it is a hilly country, and the hill sides are all vineyards, and the grass is just as in summer time at home. I am sending you a post card that shows a portion of the town where we are stationed; notice the window just under the line is where I am located. Notice the old town on the hill. It was built in the 10th century, and was destroyed by Napoleon in the 18th century. We have been to several places here and saw some good country. There is some good looking country, but it rains every day and we hardly know what the sun looks like. Now the news is that we will start for the sea port on the 19th. I certainly wish I could come home. It seems like we have done our part. If there is any guard duty to be done why not some of those who were never near the front do some of that. We were under shot and shell for about 95 days. I am getting along finely and hope all the same to you.

Shirley Linam.

Never be afraid to stick up for what you HONESTLY think is right, especially in boosting your town and county you'll probably encounter a few "breakers and ice burgs" along your route and you will win out and have the consolation of knowing that you have performed a public service in assisting your community out of the unprogressive era.
