A Serious Accident.

While Albert Rhode was driving his car on the road east of Capitan a few evenings ago, the car turned over and Albert is badly bruised, but dangerously hurt. A reader of the Mountain Echo has contributed the following verses on the accident:

Albert had a little car,
It was painted white as butter;
The car, it turned a somersault,
But Albert couldn't enter.

EVERYTHING TO EAT AND WEAR

MAY MEAN MUCH TO WORLD

Aviators Believe That Flying is Bound to Have Great Influence on the Minds of Men.

Flying, in the opinion of British aviators, is going to change the character of the world's thought. It will have a broadening influence and it will bring a fresher, clearer flow of ideas into the brains of men.

A man, the flyers argue, who has seen before him at the same time the cliffs of England, the long flat fields of Holland and the smiling countryside of Belgium and France is bound to think in a different way than a man whose horizon has always been bounded by bricks and mortar, or even by hill and dale.

Traveling may have made him think nationally, but flying will make him think for more largely. He will see England and France lying close to each other, separated only by a shining strip of water. He will see the green and brown meadows of Belgium, which in its turn merges into the distant shadow of Holland, while, still further on, across the wide Scheldt he will see the distant lowlands sweep on over the rim of the world.

How will he regard petty quarrels between individuals and cliques that the birdman asks. He can't cover with his thumb from the heights a feverish city swarming with a million people. What will he think of those who live next to each other and will not speak? How mean and petty their quarrels and jealousies and hates will seem.

The true meaning of human intercourse and friendship will come home to him. He will get an almost divine outlook upon the world. In honesty, civility, and all that seem to him contemptible. Perhaps, say the aviators, this is the new view which will bring the millennium.
