The body of John B. Tardiff, 63, a repair shop owner, was found in his shop at Globe, Ariz. His clothing had caught in the machinery in such a manner that he strangled to death. Charged with killing Carl Ruehle, a retired Iowa farmer, shot and slightly wounded Mrs. Gabe Olsen, the wife of a neighbor and then turned the gun on himself and committed suicide, Ruehle's attention to the 23-year-old wife of his younger neighbor has been the subject of jest for some time. Mrs. Olsen, according to her husband, paid no attention to his advances.

The outlook is favorable for the passage of the federal aid road bill by Congress in time to help relieve unemployment in the building of highways. The amount asked, $100,000,000, which doubled by a like sum from the states, would go a long ways toward helping out things. England has started a movement of this kind.

The War Department announced that 2,000 seats, about one-fifth of the total seating capacity of the memorial amphitheater at Arlington Arlington Day had been reserved for gold star mothers or other nearest relatives of men who died in the World war. The resolution recited that it had been charged that salaries in the New York bank had been increased more than $1,000,000 a year this year.

The new revenue law to be enacted next year to take the place of the one which Congress will soon pass, will contain the chief principles of the Smoot bill providing for a uniform rate or rates for commodities. Agreement to this effect has been reached among Senate leaders of the finance bloc, representing the independent members of the senate.

Two million dollars annually is to be expended for the next few years in the United States for American railway stock, machinery, rails and supplies in connection with the expansion of the Czech Moravian railway, according to Vice Consul who is in San Francisco from the Orient.

On the morning of the explosion of the bomb in his Paris home, Myron T. Herrick, American ambassador took out an accident policy for the employes and also against damage to his residence. Under his contract he must make good to the Due de Broglie the $2,000 damage done to the house and furniture.

A bald eagle with a wing spread of seven feet, attempted to carry away a 5-year-old girl named Gliba, from the veranda of her home at Vanderhoof, B. C. Struggles of the child and her mother prevented the bird from getting away and it was finally beaten to death by Mother Semple. The girl suffered flesh wounds.

The Munich correspondent of the London Times is informed that the Germans have perfected a triple-barreled machine gun, electrically operated, weighing twenty-two pounds and capable of operation 2,000 rounds per minute in a circle. The three barrels could be operated by a gunner a half-mile distant.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES.

The Town Team of Capitan easily defeated the Town Team of Carrizozo, this being the third victory over the Carrizozo opponents and the game ended 33 to 21.

Saturday of this week the two H. S. teams and the Boys' Town team will play at Corona. The teams of Corona have had intensive practice and promise to give our teams a real test.

The Athletic Association submits the following report for the months of September and October ending the 22nd. The first seven weeks of school have been a true index of what this community can do for herself and her children. Every contribution decreased the debt on the Hall and makes it further possible to improve conditions for the younger generation. When our visions become so dimmed that we cannot see through the vista of self, we have reached the point where we are no longer of true worth to humanity.

Science Proves Immotality.

The following article is taken from a book entitled the Celestial Symbol, published more than forty years ago. In a chapter discussing comets, Halley's comet which made its return in 1911, as foretold by its discoverer more than two hundred years previous, the writer devotes some space to this heavenly visitor which makes its appearance every 76 years, then he take up the question of immortality as proved by astronomy:

The periods of a number of other comets have been calculated, and which have been verified in like manner by their return once and again. The periods of others still have been computed, but ere the actual verification of those shall take place ages must pass away. The period of the comet of 1858 has been estimated to be 2,100 years; that of 1811, to be 3,000 years, and that of 1844, 100,000 years. Others have appeared whose courses indicated longer periods still. But time affects not the energy or the law of the Sun's gravitation, and each at its appointed day will assuredly be brought back again to the point where human eyes first beheld it. "Not one shall fail."

From the foregoing examples we see what an infallible rule and guide the great solar orbit is, that it brings every planet, and satellite, and comet in its vast system forward to each particular point of its orbit at the very time appointed. Every eclipse and every transit, every conjunction and opposition, every quadrature and circulation after journeys of millions and hundreds of millions of miles, takes place at the very hour, and minute, and second when it is due. And as we contemplate this perfection of nature's laws and nature's forces, we are involuntarily moved to exclaim with devout Psalmist, "Thy word, O Lord, is settled in the heavens; they continue this day according to thine ordinances, for all are thy servants.

And with such facts as these before us, we can scarcely escape the reflection, What triumphs the human intellect has achieved! What a thing it is for immortal man, this creature of a few years' existence, to measure the distances, trace the orbits, weigh the masses, compute the velocities, and determine the periods of worlds on worlds so vast and so remote; and as we gaze on one of these mysterious visitants, the comets, whose path stems far outspans that of his brief and hasty life, and think that it will return again to verify his calculations, and to proclaim the victories of his science, not to himself, but to the generations yet to be born, the thought rushes with intuitive conviction into the mind, Surely such a being must be immortal! Shall these unconscious things remain and continue to come and go, and the reasoning mind that comprehend them, exist and fade into utter obscurity after a few fleeting days? It cannot be. Man's nature, and man's intellectual achievements, proclaim alike that he must live on, and live forever. Is it possible," asks an eloquent writer—"is it possible that it should be otherwise in the government of God? Shall the material thing, inorganic, inert, imperceptible, more enduring than the mind which discerns its order and traces its career, and detects its laws, and speculates on its constitution, be swept away as nothing before it? Shall unconscious matter last, while the mind, to which alone its functions are subservient, which interprets its mysteries, and reads in them the glorious nature of God, vanish like a passing wind? Shall the knowledge and the thoughts of men be handed down in endless succession, teaching and inspiring the souls of other times; and shall the conscious creature which called them into being be blotted ignominiously from creation? Impossible. It cannot be, that they, through the medium of whose thoughts we now gaze at the skies, witness elsewhere the excellence of their great talents, the triumphs of their sublime meditations. Surely the heavens which they deciphered, they behold with eyes unclouded by age, and minds yet yearning, but in a spirit of profounder adoration, to press forward towards the vaster disclosures of the infinitude of God."

Fort Worth Letter.

[By O. G. Whizz.]

Dear Mountaineer:—

I want tell you about a near disaster that just a day or so ago happened. We have here a man in business—an Irishman by trade—whose name is Kristopher Columbus Krauskopf, and not many days ago he desired to rid his establishment of all shelf worn goods and so he sent out circulars depicting his awful financial condition and simply and told the people through the medium of said circulars that they just had to come and buy his wares and signed the circulars at the bottom "K. K. K." and then sent them all over the city.

Well, sir you know that the Ku Klux Klan had just recently sent out a whole gob of letters and things to quite a number of our very best outlaw element and the Ku Klux scare was in full blast, and when the people began to receive those circulars signed "K. K. K." they like most all fools never looked at the top first—glanced at the bottom first and then made haste to leave, and only for the fact that somebody finally noticed that it was an innocent affair and spread the truth, Fort Worth would have been an empty town in twenty four hours. But Krauskopf had to apologize to the Klan just the same and tried to make peace by offering to send the head of the organization an addressed check on as a token of peace; which offer was gallantly accepted and a live lion was sent with feathers and all on. Now, here is where the disaster really came to a focus. The Klan officer thought Krauskopf was going to send—well you know what I mean—you know they call all the weaker sex chicken here in Fort Worth, and the disappointment was great that he went after a cold Kris and now he has disappeared.

Of course all this might not be the truth. And I know about it is what I saw, but I know Bill Parks will believe it and he is the only one I want to see this letter.

Uncle Ben Robinson, of Parsons, made one of his periodical visits to Capitan Thursday.

Fred Pilding ton, the railroad farm superintendent, was here Wednesday transacting business.

Judge George Kimbrell, of Peralta, passed through Capitan this week on his way to Carrizozo to spend a few days with friends.

C. C. Merchant was looking after legal business in district court at Carrizozo the first of the week

Prof W. J. Klopp was looking after school business in Carrizozo Wednesday.

Meshach and Amado Jiron are grand jurors in district court at Carrizozo this week.

W. J. Lawrance and nephew Claud Lawrance were in from their ranch the first of the week

Mr. Witt Sears was exhibiting a beet Thursday of his raising, which weighed 15 pounds. He then exhibited this garden product to a friend in Granbury, Texas.
