Notice of Contest.

Department of the Interior,
U. S. Land Office,
Contest No. 10,344
Roswell, New Mexico,
October 29, 1921.

To David H. Bond of Sarragosa, Texas, Contestee:

You are hereby notified that Gladys Walton, who gives Corona, New Mexico, as her post office address, did on October 24, 1921, file in this office her duly corroborated application to contest and secure the cancellation of your Homestead Entry, Serial No. 036178, made September 10, 1918, for E½NW¼ W½NE¼, Section 8, Township 2 South, Range 12 East, N. M. P. Meridian, and as grounds for her contest she alleges that you have not established and maintained a residence upon said land. That you have abandoned said land for a period in excess of one year prior to date hereof. That you have not cultivated said land and that said defects still exist. That said alleged default is not due to service in the Army, Navy or Marine Corps of the United States, or in the National Guard of the several states while in the service of the United States, or any Military service rendered in connection with operations in Mexico or along the border, there or in mobilization camps elsewhere.

You are, therefore, further notified that the said allegations will be taken as confessed, and your said entry will be canceled without further right to be heard, either before this office or on appeal, if you fail to file in this office within twenty days after the FOURTH publication of this notice, as shown below, your answer, under oath, specifically responding to these allegations of contest, together with due proof that you have served a copy of your answer on the said contestant either in person or by registered mail.

You should state in your answer the name of the post office which you desire your future notices to be sent to you.

The SANDMAN STORY

DUCKS FOOL MR. FOX.

MADAM DUCK was tired of swimming, so she scrambled up the bank to look for bugs in the field by the side of the river. She was waddling slowly about, when all at once she espied a pair of bright eyes peeping at her through the tall grass. Madam Duck knew at once it was Mr. Fox, and that he was waiting for a fatty hen or anything that passed that way. She knew, too, that if she had happened up he just him she would push be on her way to his cave in the woods. "While there is life there is hope," she thought. "I will try to fool him."

Madam Duck began to limp. She spread her wings and let one drop, as though she had been wounded.

Of course Mr. Fox thought Madam Duck had not seen him, and when she limped he crawled slowly toward her.

"Some hunter had wounded that duck," he thought. "I will have to keep a sharp lookout that he does not see me. But I am thankful to him for helping me to get this fine bird, for I shall not have to hurry. She cannot get away."

Every time Madam Duck flopped her wings she made a wider space between her and Mr. Fox, but she was careful every time to let one wing drag as she limped along.

"I am sure to get her," he thought, "so why run? It is a very warm day and, besides that, the hunter may be lurking about."

But when Madam Duck reached the river bank she seemed to be able to use her wings and legs without any trouble, and before Mr. Fox knew it she was at the water's edge.

"I am not going into that water after her," thought he. "I will grab her right off and end it."

Mr. Fox leaped for Madam Duck, but his front feet caught in a trailing vine and down the bank he went, head over head, and landed in the deep mud of the river.

He struck nose first, and while he was trying to get up Madam Duck called back to him as she went:

"Oh, Reynard, thought to have me—
He thought I could not fly.
But that's the time I fooled you, sly—
Good-by, Mr. Fox, good-by!

Poor Mr. Fox crawled up the bank a sadder but a much wiser fellow, his mouth and nose filled with mud, and as he cleaned his coat and made himself tidy he thought:

"Sing your goodby song, Madam Duck, while you can, for if I ever meet you again it will be the 'Swan Song' you will sing—I promise you that."

But Madam Duck knew better than to go to the field again, and I expect she lived to a good old age, in spite of Mr. Fox's threat.

Hopi Indians.

The first knowledge of the Hopi Indians by Europeans was in July of 1540, soon after Captain General Don Francisco Vasquez de Coronado had found the famed golden Seven Cities of Cibola in the poverty-stricken pueblos of Zuni. In the summer he sent westward an exploring party headed by Don Pedro de Tovar.

Though the very name of the tribe, "Hopitu," means "peaceful people," the Spanish chronicles of their land, known as the province of Tutuyan, showed that of all southwestern Indians they have resisted encroachment most, and have, till very lately, generally refused the ministration of Christian teachers. About the time of the Spaniards' coming they transferred their habitations to the mesa tops, whereon they now live in a half dozen villages to which the women pack water up steep and rocky trails.

No Unmixed Good.

All good things are subject to abuse, and when abused become pernicious. . . . Great powers, commerce and riches—or, in other words, great national prosperity—may, in like manner, be denominated evils; for they lead to insolence and inordinate ambition, a vicious luxury, licentiousness of morals, and all those vices which corrupt a government, enslave the state and precipitate the ruin of a nation. But no wise statesman will reject the good from an apprehension of the ill. The truth is, in all human affairs there is no good, pure and unmixed. Every advantage has two sides; and wisdom consists in availing ourselves of the good, and guarding as much as possible against the bad.—Alexander Hamilton.

Good Art.

Good art always consists of two things: First, the observation of fact; secondly, the manifesting of human design and authority in the way that fact is told. Great and good art must unite the two; it cannot exist for a moment but in their unity; it consists of the two as essentially as water consists of oxygen and hydrogen, or marble of lime and carbonic acid.—Ruskin.

Valley Once Great Sea.

The Red River valley, according to Professor Parks, was near the coast of a great inland sea 3,000,000 years ago. This sea stretched from the Gulf of Mexico to the Arctic Ocean. The sand along the shallow, brackish shores of the now extinct body of water has [illegible] specimens of prehistoric animals.

To Tell How Much Tank Will Hold.

Measure the diameter and height of the tank in inches. Multiply the diameter by itself and the product by the height. Take one-third of one per cent of the total and this answer will be the number of gallons, correct to one-fifteenth. For exact result 2 per cent of the total may be added.

The First Athletes.

The Greeks were among the first to insist on gymnastics as part of the early training of the child. They acted on the principle of "a sound mind in a sound body," and thus the moral training of the young was included in the physical work carried on in the gymnasium.

Raw Vegetable Cure.

The juices of raw vegetables eliminate all kinds of poisons from the blood, and many proofs are now forthcoming of cases of rheumatism, boils, consumption, etc., having been completely cured by the raw vegetable diet.

Here is something worth trying. An exchange says: Every home should have in convenient places some means of fighting flies. Probably the most convenient is hand grenades—not the kind that you buy, but the home made ones at the cost of a few cents and a little trouble. Take twenty parts of unbleached flour, five parts of common salt and dissolve in seventy-five parts of water. When thoroughly dissolved, pour into thin bottles and cork tightly. If a fly occurs, break one or two bottles into it and the mixture will smother it out and even when it has gained considerable proportions.

To Our Readers.

This paper is being put to press this week with very little news matter in it. This is being done that the paper will come out on time, and that we can "catch up" with our work. The reason of our recent delays was caused by press breakdowns, but we fear no further trouble now from that cause, as we are now using a different press and we have very little fears of it getting out of commission.

In this connection we wish to further state to our readers that commencing next week there will be a decided change in the appearance of the paper. It will be enlarged to a 7-column, four page sheet, the two outside pages will be ready print, and will present many features which will be interesting and attractive. They will contain general news, New Mexico state news, miscellaneous matter, stories, full market reports, the various other interesting features.

The two inside pages will be devoted to home and local news, correspondence, etc. Our aim is to make the Mountaineer a first-class county paper, one that will meet the expectations of its readers and be a credit to the town and community.

Apples from New Mexico.

Mr. Witt Sears, Farm and Ranch reader, who lives at Capitan, New Mexico, has favored the editors with samples of some fruit grown in that section. Among the samples were some Northern Spy and York Delicious apples, as large, firm and well flavored as any we have ever seen. New Mexico has a large area adapted to fruit production, and in markets the New Mexican label is recognized as a mark of superior products. New Mexican fruit ships well, is of attractive size and color and equal in quality to fruit grown anywhere.—From Farm and Ranch, published at Dallas, Texas.

Only a Bottle of Vinegar.

[From the Colfax County Stockman.]

A federal prohibition officer was in the city last Saturday "looking around" for violations of the eighteenth amendment. The boys in town heard he was coming and knew he was here. He talked considerably on various subjects, inquired about the town and country and the future prospects. As the story goes, he finally drifted, accidently, onto to the subject of prohibition, its failure to prohibit, and everybody agreed with his theories. He thought he had surely run into a nest of bootleggers. Gaining their supposed confidence he inquired if it would be possible to get a "bottle" and how much. He was told he could for five dollars. The money was shelled out, the "bootlegger" left and after awhile returned, quietly telling him where he could find the bottle. He found it there, but it was only a bottle of vinegar. No arrests were made, and the officer did not linger around after his experience.

Who Would Have Thought It.

We have come to the conclusion we had better buy us some shock absorbers for the simple reason that the young and old are pulling off so many weddings unexpectedly here of late—and what do you think—Mr. Samuel Wells and Mrs. Anna Anna Julian have gone and got married—not they did'nt have a perfect fright too—but it was SO SUDDEN.

Well any way cutting out all this foolish stuff—it is needless to explain who these good people are—they have been residents of Lincoln County a mighty long time and have lots of friends and well wishers and among whom we wish to be included and it is certainly our wish that their new state of existence will be very harmonious and they will have nothing but continual joy and happiness.

They were married today at the Parsonage by the Rev. Mr. Evans, and will be absent from the town until Monday and that night they will tender a reception to their friends and acquaintances who wish to dance and enjoy refreshments and have a larping good time.

Smith-Sears.

Our people were greatly surprised this week when they learned that Miss Ellen Smith and Mr. Paine Sears had quietly slipped away and were married in Carrizozo Wednesday.

Miss Smith is one of the popular teachers in the Lincoln County High School and we can say that everybody likes her and has a good word to say for Ellen she lively and full of fun.

Mr. Sears is a very quiet, unassuming popular young man, being engaged in the Gents' furnishing business.

Well, here's to you Miss Ellen—it is our fervent wish that you and your hubby will forever be all smiles and no frown, and by all means be awful careful with the rolling pin.

Something to Think About

By F. A. WALKER.

OUR WASTEFUL HABITS

IT IS frequently remarked by close-observing Englishmen who visit America, that our people are shamefully wasteful, and fling away money without any apparent thought of the proverbial rainy day.

Whether these alien commenters have penetrated deeply into the subject is not definitely known, but judging from their oft-repeated averments, assuming at times a form of caustic criticism, there is doubtless more truth in the matter than we suspect.

It is not without a pang of regret—a rumbling of our pride, perhaps—that we Americans, who are disposed to analyze conditions with unbiased minds, reluctantly admit that our English cousins are right.

We recognize that we have many spendthrifts, constantly setting a bad example to the young, that they are extravagant and decidedly foolish.

Money is poured out like water, as though, like Topsy, "it just growed."

There is consolation, however, in the thought that these profligates come mostly from the ranks of the newly rich and thoughtless inheritors.

They have no idea of the stern realities of life, nor the long dragging years of incessant labor and self-denial that are necessary for a working or professional man to accumulate even a moderate competency for old age.

These people congregate where the music flows, where the tables are heaped with dainties. They smile and backbite, puff themselves up like frogs and spend recklessly. They fall naturally into a state which is common to their kind.

If we could follow them through their improvident courses to the end, we would find them in pitiable plights, repentant, and likely as not homeless.

The necessity of conserving time and money ought now be impressed upon all of us with considerable more stress than it has been in the recent past, and particularly upon the inconsiderate young men and women.

Let high thinking, hard work and thriftiness form the important part of our spiritual bill of fare, so that in the end we may be robust of body and soul, sound of purse, unafraid of landlords and in position in old age to accept all the vagaries of life with supreme confidence and complacency.

LYRICS OF LIFE

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

WHY NOT TELL HER SO?

Of course you love her just the same
As when at first you wed.
Perhaps with pot so hot a flame,
But still the coals are red.
The new-made flush is bright with heat
And ruddy with desire;
But time shall give the dwindling sweet—
Peace, and the cooler fire.

Of course you love her as of old.
Your love she ought to know.
Now loves burn hot, now loves burn cold,
With all the whirls that blow.
But time shall bring the steady flame,
The flame that never died;
Yea, time shall bring contented days,
The quiet fireside.

Of course you love her as it were
The year that you have shared
Have made you love her even more
Than ever you have dared.
Of course you love her just the same,
Your love has ought to bring.
Then time has brought the steady flame—
But why not tell her so?

Toredo, Ship Eater.

Although it was declared that wooden ships could be built fast enough and strong enough to outwit the submarine, they cannot be built to escape their own most deadly enemy. The shipworm, or toredo. This animal or worm eats away the wooden ship in much the same manner that maggots eat away the human body, but it is so small when it first bores itself into the wood that the closest inspection fails to show the wriggling pin holes. Once in the wood, however, it eats its way along, growing steadily, and when a quantity of these tiny worms get into a ship they take it into a veritable sponge honeycombed by tunnels.

The toredo is more common on the western coast than on this, and copper or so-called copper paint is said to be the one way to protect wooden ships from becoming infested.

THE RIGHT THING AT THE RIGHT TIME

By MARY MARSHALL DUFFEE

HOW TO SET A TABLE.

Slight not what's near through aiming at what's far.—Euripides.

IS THERE anything more unappetizing than a carelessly set table? All of us, presumably, should have a soul so far above buttons that we would not notice our food overmuch. But few of us have reached the happy state where we eat only to be nourished. Most of us are quite susceptible to dainty food and dainty service.

This being so, the economical housewife should appreciate the value of serving every meal daintily. For food that is enjoyed will be better assimilated and therefore will do its full duty of giving nourishment to those who eat it.

A nicely set table is the first requisite for the dainty service of a meal.

Spotlessness and neatness are essential to a nicely set table. No matter how simple the meal or how simple the table appointments, they should and can always be clean and neatly arranged.

At breakfast and luncheon doilies or runners can be used. If some houses runners are used over at dinner. If they are used—or if doilies are used—the table must be perfectly clean.

When a cloth is used first spread a felt or asbestos covering to protect the table and hush the sound of plates and silver. Then spread a cloth with the fold that marks the middle of it laid evenly from end to end of the table. Always fold the cloth in the same creases, and lay it neatly in a drawer until it is wanted again. Or else fold it only once lengthwise and then roll it on a wooden or pasteboard cylinder.

After the cloth is neatly laid, put on the silver. At the right of each place put the knives and spoons and at the left put the forks. At the end of the knives place a glass for water and at the end of the forks place a butter plate.

For an informal home dinner there should be a large knife next to the plate on the right for cutting meat, next to that a spoon for dessert and next to that a soup spoon. On the left there should be as many forks as will be needed—one for the meat, one for the salad and one for the dessert, or, if none is needed for dessert and there is no salad, only one fork should be placed. If oysters are served to begin with the oyster fork is placed at the right of the soup spoon. The butter spreader, unless it is large, is placed on the butter plate; if the spreader is large it is placed next on the right, to the knife for meat.

A centerpiece of some sort should be placed in the center of the table. Growing ferns or cut flowers can be used, or a little bowl full of evergreen leaves or foliage. A dish of fresh and beautiful fruit can also be used.

The napkin should either be placed at the right of the silver or else it should be folded and placed on the plate in front of each person. Of course, when clean napkins are not used every meal and the napkins are kept in rings, they should be placed at the right, or else in front of the plate, between the water glass and the butter plate.

Locating Ore Beds.

Beds of ore are stated to have been located at a distance of two and a half miles by the electrical method patented in the United States by Professor R. A. Fessenden. In the locality where the existence of valuable ores is suspected, a number of holes several miles apart are bored, then filled with water, and a Fessenden sound oscillator is immersed in one as a transmitting apparatus, the receiver submerged in each of the other holes being an Einthoven recording oscillograph. The holes may be five miles or more apart over the area being investigated. In the study of the oscillograph records, special attention is given to the relation between sounds received direct and those from echoes, and it is found possible to get a fair idea of the character of intervening masses of rock and of the position and distance of neighboring deposits of ore.

World's Greatest Soldier.

Physically, Foch is a little man, his inches are about those of Napoleon, and he has Grant's fondness for the cigar. Like Joffre, a southerner, he has frankness of speech which his old commander has never displayed. Unlike Petain his words are rarely caustic and he has made friends among all his allies. An old man, close to seventy, yet younger than Clemenceau, he was still handsome when the war began, but the strain has marked his face and only his eyes reveal an unshaken spirit.—Frank H. Simonds in Metropolitan.

Halfway Measures Don't Pay.

The man who fluctuates with the ups and downs of any enterprise rarely prospers, while the man who gives his whole heart to the proposition and sticks to it year in and year out nearly always scores a success.

WISE GUY, PARLIN

Knew Just What to Do With That Little Book.

Recital of Tragedy in the Gibbs Homestead Decided His Course of Action Without Necessity of Long Thinking.

"I heard that Mrs. Gibbs is going to leave home," was the spicy bit of gossip with which Mrs. Parlin met her husband after he had parked his little motor car in the back yard.

"No!" gasped Parlin, dramatically.

"Yes!" echo back his wife. "Until Gibbs gets the house decorated—which will be about a year from now, at the speed he is traveling on the job. And I don't blame Mrs. Gibbs. If you attempted to do what Gibbs is doing I'd leave for mother's for an indefinite period.

"The Gibbs family always called in expert decorators to do their work until this year. Now Gibbs is suffering from an attack of economy, and he figures he could do the work himself and put the saving into Victory bonds, or spare parts for his car.

"He bought a book called 'How to Do Your Own Housecleaning' for ten cents, and began to memorize the thing. The book was so full of directions and specifications that he soon became addle brained trying to figure it out.

"One chapter was devoted to painting. It explained minutely how one could figure out the surface of the walls and by multiplying the dimensions by something or other find out exactly how much paint would be needed for the job.

"Gibbs figured out that it would take 25 gallons of various colors to do the work. He ordered up a wagon load of paint and began.

"When Gibbs got through painting he found that he had 37 gallons still untouched. But as he had opened all the cans as he got them, he could not return them to the paint man in exchange for anything else.

"Gibbs lost a tidy sum on the paint job, and even more on his wall papering. He ordered enough paper to cover the side of a warehouse, and when he got through papering his living and dining rooms he had them matched all wrong and the 53 rolls left over were in tatters. He mixed 25 gallons of paste, basing his figure on the book, and had 10 buckets unused when he fell off the ladder and broke his shoulder blade."

"So Mrs. Gibbs is going to leave poor Gibbs alone with his broken shoulder."

"She will—unless he changes his mind about finishing the work. If he finishes she is likely to do anything, for she is in a desperate frame of mind."

Parlin reached into an inner pocket and drew forth a little book called "How to Do Your Own Housecleaning." He tore the book into small scraps and threw them at the cat. He didn't look at his wife, for he knew she would understand.

WITH THE LOVED "AUTOCRAT"

Life of Oliver Wendell Holmes an Inspiration to All Who Have Read His Writings.

His readers always talk of their "intimacy" with Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes; they know what kind of person he was as well as what he taught.

They know that he loved rowing and horses and great trees; that he was full of sentiment for his children; that he liked men to be strong and sanguine, and loathed the weakness of wrath; that he loathed all sham and unhealthiness; that charity and tolerance were the virtues he loved, and if one could combine them with wit it was so much to the good.

Above all, one must enjoy life and live to the utmost of one's power.

It reads something like a medical prescription, and one does not want health alone. Nevertheless, when the obvious objections are made, we need not doubt that it will benefit thousands in the future, and they will love the man who lived as he wrote.
