AGGIE IS ONLY EIGHT, BUT HOLY SMOKE!

Bullies Boys, Slaps Girls, but Now She Is Prisoner on Dad's Ship.

New York.—Little Aggie Kelly, the temperamental eight-year-old who has been keeping the New Jersey police busy for several months, on Saturday was virtually in the "brig" of her father's coal barge.

Aggie is the youngster who was picked up in Bayonne, N. J., a few weeks ago, and won the hearts of the policemen, often because she scared so "sweet and demure," but when she took out a cigarette, lighted it and blew the smoke in a policeman's face they changed their opinions.

Aggie was next heard from in New Durham, N. J., where two boys complained that a girl had beaten them.

Blew Smoke in a Policeman's Face.

The police investigated and found it was Aggie again. She appeared at Homestead, and the girls in that vicinity immediately began to complain that a young miss slapped the face of anyone she did not happen to like. Jim Kelly is Aggie's father.

On Saturday, when she wandered off the coal barge, she was met by a gang which carried a rope. Members of the gang seized Aggie and led her off, with the expressed intention of hanging her by the neck from the first tree they saw.

They picked the spot and fixed the rope around Aggie's neck. The joke had just about reached the stage where they had to do a little explaining when they heard firm footsteps and Jim Kelly bove into sight.

The "lynchers" took one look at Jim, dropped the rope, abandoned Aggie and made a dash for safety.

The perennial loafer has some advantage, but he misses the fun of going out on strike at intervals.

Geologists who claim the earth is getting colder will be able to argue without diagrams next January.

The Maverick's Agricultural Department

The illustrated agricultural articles which appear in The Maverick from week to week are for the most part prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture and embody knowledge resulting from innumerable experiments, tests and developments, in some cases extending over many years, and accumulated data of the department, to give farmers information which only could be provided by this branch of the goverment with its highly organized staff of scientists and practical men.

No doubt our farm readers have read and enjoyed these articles during the winter, but with the coming of spring, farm information has added interest and value, and we trust that any who have heretofor overlooked one of the best departments in The Maverick will now make it a point to give it the attention it deserves by its timeliness and practical worth.

Perhaps the new airplane being built with a capacity of 20,000 pounds is part of an experiment to see if it is true that the bigger they are the harder they fall.

MAKING THEM AMERICANS

How few of us realize the importance of making over the foreigner — of implanting American ideals, ideas and common sense in place of socialistic and maybe anarchistic theories. It means a lot to every American citizen. This work and many other interesting activities of the Department of Labor are discussed in the twelfth issue of the series of beautifully illustrated booklets on Our Government which we have been distributing to representative citizens of this community.

If by any chance you have failed to receive regularly your copies of this series that has been so favorably commented upon, visit us today and from the limited supply on hand we will gladly complete your set.

MINE WAR OPENS AGAINST FRANCE

GENERAL WALKOUT ORDERED BY GERMANY IN COAL REGION.

STRIKE IN RUHR AREA

BITTER WARFARE FORCED BY NATIONALIST DEMONSTRATION.

London.—The German miners in the Ruhr have thrown down their tools, refusing to carry on the mining operations under French control, or until the mine directors and owners now under arrest are released.

Fritz Thyssen and his colleagues, the leading industrialists in the Ruhr, will be placed on trial immediately for their refusal to obey French orders.

Berlin still insists that German action is entirely passive, but an ultimatum has been delivered to the workmen in the Ruhr that they must refuse to haul coal or bring it to the surface under pain of severe penalties. At the same time Berlin is discussing the possibility of exacting indemnification for the present invasion of the Ruhr.

The Italian government, according to the Times correspondent at Rome, is exerting influence on the American as well as the British government with a view to preventing any further advance of the French into German territory, but all reports of active Italian intervention to bring about arbitration on the Ruhr question are denied by the Italian office.

Essen.—A general strike was declared by the miners' union at Essen.

This will seriously impede the plans of Belgian and French occupying authorities, but strikes were foreseen after the active protests made by employés of the Thyssen and other plants against the arrest of German mine directors and industrial leaders, though the French had expressed confident hopes that the miners would remain at work.

The railway men's general organization has notified the occupying authorities that in case of a strike it will offer objections to the French operating trains for the handling of ordinary civilian and freight traffic, but admits it is not in a position to object to the operation of trains for the transportation of troops.

A message from Chancellor Cuno to Fritz Thyssen has been made public, in which the chancellor praises Thyssen's loyalty and declares: "The more brutal the might, the stronger will be our rights and hope."

Dragged With Rope After Crime.

Waco, Texas.—Bodies identified as those of Ed Holt and Mrs. Ethel Jacobs Denecamp, were found lying side by side about 100 yards from the Springfield road as the result of a search which began when a blood and bullet riddled automobile was found in the heart of the business section. The man had been killed with a shot gun and the woman by revolver. A rope was found tied around the man's foot, and police believe his body had been dragged behind an automobile.

One Killed in Texas Feud.

Grand Saline, Tex.—J. W. Hills, 59, a bachelor was killed, and W. H. Cates, a farmer, was critically wounded here as an outgrowth of a feud of long standing. Cates started on a hunting trip, it is said, and encountered Hill on a public highway. Witnesses said the men soon were engaged in heated argument.

Arizona Murderer Weds in New York.

New York.—Louis Victory Eytinge, forger and murderer, who was released from a life sentence at the Arizona state penitentiary on pardon three weeks ago after he had made a national reputation as an advertisement and sales letter writer, and Miss Pauline L. Diver of New York, author and corporation officer, were married here. Eytinge, on his release, had announced that he would devote the rest of his life to prison reform. He had given no hint of an approaching marriage.

Hankow Urged as Capital of China.

Peking.—A recent declaration by Dr. Sun Yat-Sen that the geographical location of Peking unfits it as the capital city of a progressive nation has prompted many localities to claim the honor. Hankow, 600 miles up the Yangtze river, presses its claims on the ground that it lies in the center of a rich agricultural and manufacturing district, which probably will be improved in the near future by the extension of a railroad in Szechwan. The 1911 revolution began in Hankow.

Conference Enters Third Month.

Lausanne.—The third month of the Near East conference has begun, thus making it one of the longest diplomatic conferences on record after Versailles. Some indications of impatience and possible separation as between the English and the French have not passed into acts and there is an evidence that the disagreement over German reparations will be permitted to develop into a break between these two countries on general Near East problems.

If You Need a Medicine You Should Have the Best

Have you ever stopped to reason why it is that so many products that are extensively advertised, all at once drop out of sight and are soon forgotten? The reason is plain—the article did not fulfill the promises of the manufacturer. This applies more particularly to a medicine. A medicinal preparation that has real curative value almost sells itself, as like an endless chain system the remedy is recommended by those who have been benefited to those who are in need of it.

A prominent druggist says, "Take for example Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, a preparation I have sold for many years and never hesitate to recommend, for in almost every case it shows excellent results, as many of my customers testify. No other kidney remedy has so large a sale."

According to sworn statements and verified testimony of thousands who have used the preparation, the success of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is due to the fact, so many people claim, that it fulfills almost every wish in overcoming kidney, liver and bladder ailments, corrects urinary troubles and neutralizes the uric acid which causes rheumatism.

You may receive a sample bottle of Swamp-Root by parcel post. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., and enclose ten cents; also mention this paper. Large and medium size bottles for sale at all drug stores.—Advertisement.

NEWLY-ARRIVED LINGERIE;

SPRING STYLES ENTICING

NOW is the winter of our discontent made cheerful for us women by the colorfulness, daintiness and good style of newly-arrived underthings that delight our eyes in the shops. In all lines of apparel, color just now is the dominant style note, and underclothes are presented in lovely pastel shades, both in cotton and silk materials. Besides white, the displays are filled with garments in tones called "pink," "peach," "blossom," and "coral"—a cheerful range. Then there are two favored blues—"light" and "forget-me-not," and two much-admired orchid shades, called "orchid" and "sweet pea."

The silks used are crepe de chine, crepe meteor, radium and crepe-back satin. In cottons the novelty is French triple voile, very beautiful and very durable. For negligees and gowns especially, the pretty corduroy crepe, showing a satin stripe, must not be overlooked. For trimmings, the usual lingerie laces are supplemented by Venice-Princess, Calais and filet lace.

The envelope chemise, of which a pretty example is pictured, remains the most important item in underwear. This model shows one way in which points are exploited, four of them forming its yoke and arm's-eyes. These points are made of bands of crepe, set together with a wide insertion of lace and this insertion joins them to the body of the chemise.

So far as the shops are concerned, the holidays and winter depart together, and are immediately forgotten. All the new enticing fabrics for spring make their appearance as soon as holiday decorations are down and all eyes turn southward to see what the new season has in store. For styles are being paraded in winter resorts.

There are many interesting new fabrics, among them some very smart, loosely-woven basket weaves, like that used in the stunning suit pictured for southern resort wear. This model is fated to journey northward, its crisp smartness and charming simplicity is bound to make many conquests. One can imagine it in blue and white, brown or gray and white, or in black and white, and hardly be able to determine which is the prettiest combination. It is one of the much-heralded three-piece suits, with bodice of white crepe de chine ending a few inches below the waist line where the skirt is set on. Bands of the checked material finish the neck and peasant sleeves and make the belt.

The jacket blouse is gathered into a hip band that fastens with a large mother-of-pearl button, and long revers, faced with the white crepe de chine, finish it daintily. Whatever the color combination it is repeated in the small parasol.

Example of Envelope Chemise.

HOME MADE SWEETS AND CAKES

For the little people this is the time of year that they are allowed some freedom in the enjoyment of sweets.

Cherry Fudge and Marshmallow.—Put into a saucepan one cupful of sugar and one-half cupful of cream, stir until boiling, then add two squares of chocolate and stir until melted. Boil until the mixture makes a soft ball when dropped into cold water. Add one tablespoonful of butter, and remove from the fire. Beat for 15 minutes; pour into a buttered tin in which are one-fourth pound of diced marshmallows and one-fourth pound of minced preserved cherries. Cut in squares when cool.

White Fruit Cake.—Cream two-thirds of a cupful of butter, then add one and seven-eighths of a cupful of flour gradually, first sifting it with one-half teaspoonful of soda, then add one-half teaspoonful of lemon juice. Beat six egg whites until stiff, add one and one-fourth cupfuls of powdered sugar and combine the two mixtures; add one teaspoonful of almond extract, two-thirds of a cupful of candied cherries, one-half cupful of blanched and minced almonds, and one-half cupful of thinly-shredded citron. Bake in a deep pan one hour.

Popcorn Macaroons.—Chop fine one cupful of freshly popped corn, also one cupful of walnut meats. Beat the whites of three eggs until stiff, then add one-half pound of powdered sugar and the nuts and popcorn. Drop on baking sheets and bake in a moderate oven 20 minutes.

Corn-Flake Macaroons.—Take the whites of two eggs beaten stiff, add one cupful of sugar, one cupful each of cornflakes and coconut, two tablespoonfuls of flour, salt and vanilla. Drop by teaspoonfuls on buttered sheets and bake in a moderate oven.

Flutes.—Shape rich bread dough into bread sticks. Place on a buttered sheet, cover and let rise. Brush over with white of an egg diluted with a little water. Sprinkle with powdered sugar and nuts and bake ten minutes in a hot oven.

Scotch Cookies.—Take one-half cupful of butter, cream well, add one cupful of sugar, three beaten eggs, four tablespoonfuls of cinnamon and flour even.

Macaroni With Sausage.—Put layers of cooked macaroni and fried sausage into a baking dish. If links are used cut into half-inch pieces. Add a white sauce and bake until the dish is thoroughly heated. Serve hot.

"The wise man knows an ignorant man because he has been ignorant himself, but the ignorant man cannot recognize the wise, because he has never been wise."

HELPFUL HINTS

Try a few lemon peelings in the water for boiling the tea towels. They will be whitened and sweetened.

Leftover sandwiches may be dipped in a batter and fried like griddle cakes.

Put a piece of camphor gum away with the silver; it will keep silver from tarnishing.

Put an apple in the cooky jar and one in the cake box. If it is an apple with a flavor and fragrant it will impart it to the cake.

Stamps stuck together may be loosened by steaming them or pressing quickly, covered with a piece of paper.

During the cold weather add a handful of salt to the rinse water in washing clothes. Put the clothes pins into a dripping pan to heat and they will keep the fingers warm while hanging out clothes in freezing weather.

Always remove meat from the wrapping paper as soon as possible. Place on a plate in a cool place.

A few slices of raw potato cooked in a soup that is too salt will absorb much of the salt.

For blood stains on wool, apply at once a coating of cornstarch which will absorb all color. Dry and brush out the starch.

To restore velvet which has become flattened and creased, wrap a hot flatiron with a damp cloth and run the velvet over it. The steam will raise the pile; brush while steaming and lay away to dry.

To remove an obstinate cork, wrap the neck of the bottle with a cloth, dip in hot water. The heat will loosen the cork.

A small fire shovel (one of the cheapest) flattened, may be used to remove dishes and pies from the oven that are hard to hold with the hands.

The flavor of fried eggs is improved by the addition of a teaspoonful of flour to the fat, which also keeps the fat from spattering.

Wash the hands in soap and cold water with a spoonful of cornmeal. This removes the grime and keeps them soft.

WOMAN SO ILL COULD NOT WORK

Gained Strength, Weight and Now Doing Own Work, by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Marion, Ind.—"I was all run-down, nervous and bent over. I could hardly drag around, let alone do my work. I read some letters in the papers telling what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had done for others and I thought I would try it. Then a man told my husband about his wife and what good it had done her and wanted him to have me try it. I took one bottle and could see what it did for me in a week's time, and when I had taken three bottles I had gained both in strength and weight and was doing my own work. I took it before my last baby was born and it helped me so much. I sure am glad to recommend the Vegetable Compound to any woman who suffers from female ailments, for I know by experience what it can do. I have used Lydia E. Heiken, of the United States geological survey, Department of the Interior, was $65,210,000; the value in 1921 was $20,563,472. A marked increase was made in the production of all metals as a result of the resumption of activities early in the year at the large mines and smelting plants.

When the appropriation bill, dubbed the "Feed Bill," providing for the expenses of the Sixth Arizona State Legislature, came before the Senate, an amendment was attached for the addition of $3,000 to the total sum named in the bill as passed by the House. This additional sum, it was stated, was inserted to cover items of expense principally mileage, which was over looked and unprovided for in the original bill.

For the purpose of creating a better spirit in athletics and promoting contests in music and literary work, the Southern Arizona Inter-Scholastic Association was organized in Bisbee by educators from various southern Arizona high schools. Plans for the present year were discussed and the following permanent officers elected: Glenn D. Perkins of Tucson, president, George H. Robinson of Douglas, vice president, and H. D. Buffington of Bisbee, secretary and treasurer.

Within the next few weeks the Jerome district will see another mill in operation, according to William P. Burns, president of the Verde Mines and Milling Company, a 10-stamp gold mill already being in place on the property, located seven miles south of Jerome in the Black Canon, and only the lack of sufficient water to keep the mill in operation delaying it.

A vast natural cave said to have been explored between eighteen and twenty miles, located several miles from Fort Stanton, N. M., in the foothills of the beautiful White mountains, is believed to be the largest natural cavern in the Southwest thus far located.

According to the reports of the officials in charge, nearly a half million feet of timber was cut on the Gila national forest during the past year. The total amount cut for the year equals 1,875,000 board feet and is valued at over $9,200 on the stump.

GERMANS DEFY FRENCH

EVERYTHING EXCEPT FIGHTING INCLUDED IN ORDER PLANNED

THREATS OF IMPRISONMENT FAIL TO MAKE MINE OPERATORS DELIVER FUEL.

Essen.—German coal magnates, acting through the directors of the Ruhr coal mines, defied the French military authorities and flatly refused to deliver coal and coke to the allies as demanded by General De Goutte, the French commander-in-chief.

The Germans notified the French of their decision just after the French extended their zone of military occupation to include Dortmund. They now hold every inch of the great Ruhr coal fields and the chief industrial center of Germany.

In the main, owners said they would obey the German commission at Berlin which had ordered them not to deliver coal. The French had threatened courtmartial and imprisonment as the penalty for German refusal.

Hugo Stinnes, leading German industrialist and mine owner, has left the Rhineland and his whereabouts are unknown.

London.—The Berlin government has decided to expel all French civilians from Germany and establish practically a state of war against France, aside from fighting, according to a Berlin dispatch to the Daily Express.

The Times' Dusseldorf correspondent says that from an economic point of view the situation in the Ruhr is distinctly worse.

German determination is hardening and the irritation of the population is increasing.

Officials state that food prices have risen 50 per cent since the occupation and the requisition of hay, straw and gasoline is causing great hardship.

The Times' correspondent interviewed some of the industrial leaders who attended a recent meeting with the French, and they were emphatic in declaring that nothing would induce them to change their attitude of consider resumption of reparations deliveries while the Franco-Belgian troops were in the Ruhr.

Two trade union leaders, whom the correspondent interviewed, said they were in close communion with English trade union leaders and would refuse to work overtime for the French while there were so many unemployed in England. On the other hand, the French are equally determined to enforce their will. The correspondent quotes a French general as saying there is nothing they are not prepared to do to compel the industrialists to abandon their obstinate attitude.

Wallace Reid Is Dead at Los Angeles.

Los Angeles, Calif.—Wallace Reid, hero of romantic film plays, lost his life in fighting to overcome the drug habit, the end coming at a sanitarium in Hollywood, where he had been under treatment for more than a month. He had been unconscious for nearly two days, during all of which his wife, Dorothy Davenport, was at his bedside. The direct cause of death was congestion of the lungs and kidneys, which resulted from the actor's collapse when he endeavored to break off the use of narcotics.

Five Children Die in Blaze.

Binghampton, N. Y.—Five children, ranging in age from 2 to 10, are dead here as a result, the police say, of a quarrel between their parents which ended when the building in which they lived caught fire, trapping the youngsters within. The father, Joseph Kotalis, in an intoxicated condition, according to the authorities, was carried to the hospital suffering from burns, cuts and lacerations, while the mother, also suffering from cuts and bruises, was restrained from dashing back into the blazing building by neighbors.

Wild Riots in French Chamber.

Paris.—After what is said to have been the wildest rioting in the history of the French Parliament, during which fifty deputies engaged in a free-for-all fist fight on the floor, the Chamber of Deputies, by a vote of 311 to 143, decided to suspend the parliamentary immunity of Marcel Cachin, the Communist member. Several deputies, notably radicals, during the debate expressed disapproval of the government's action. They declared that M. Cachin was being persecuted for his opinions.

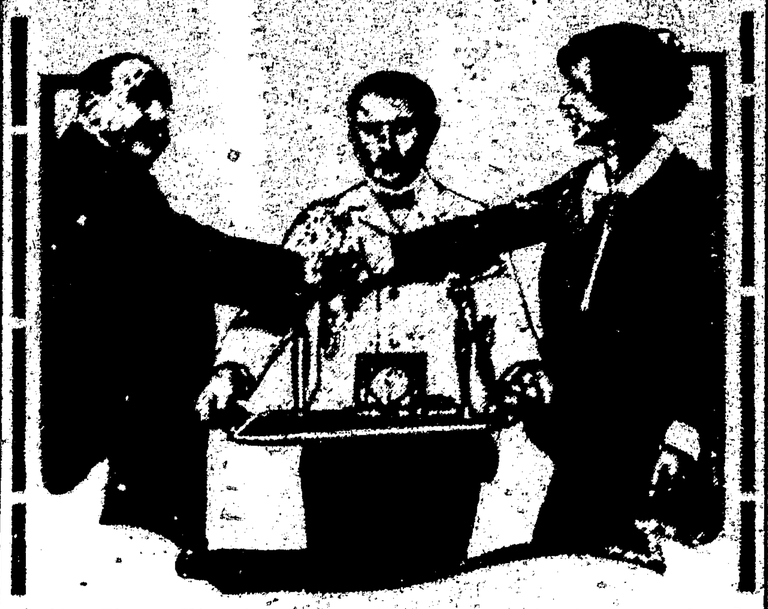
Defends Co-operative Marketing.

New York.—A defense of co-operative marketing was made at the annual dinner of the American Acceptance Council by John R. Howard, president of the American Farm Federation, who declared that the farmer's demand for governmental action in providing adequate marketing finance was a legitimate one.

Waiting Policy at Lausanne.

Lausanne.—The Orient and the Occident seem to be playing a game of waiting at the Near Eastern conference; each side appears to be seeking to wear the other out. The head of the Turkish delegation sent his secretary among the newspaper correspondents to see if anybody knew anything about an alleged statement of Lord Curzon predicting the collapse of the conference and describing the possibilities of signing peace as absolutely hopeless.

Token of Gratitude to Skipper



Miss Thelma Edwards presenting the commandant of the French liner La Savoie, Captain Henri Boisson, with a bronze clock and candlesticks for the mantle of his stateroom, the gift of the passengers on a recent Havre-New York trip of the Savoie. This was a token of gratitude for the captain's courage and seamanship in bringing his vessel safely through the terrible storms of that week.

HERRIN MINERS ARE ACQUITTED

JURY FINDS MEN NOT GUILTY AFTER TWENTY BALLOTS.

FIVE MEN ARE FREED

JUDGE REFUSES TO COMMENT ON DECISION IN HERRIN CASE.

Marion, Ill.—After nearly twenty seven hours of deliberation, a jury of Williamson county farmers delivered a verdict of not guilty in the first case resulting from the killing of twenty one nonunion workers during the Herrin riots last June.

The end of the long trial came with such unexpected suddenness that both spectators and the five defendants who were charged with the murder of Howard Hoffman, one of the victims of the outbreak, appeared dazed. As Judge D. T. Hartwell finished reading the last verdict, the only sound that broke the silence in the court was a half-smothered sob from the wife of one of the defendants.

The verdicts were read in the following order: Lova Mann, Joe Carnaghi, Peter Hillier, Burt Grace and Otis Clark. All are union miners except Hillier, who is a taxicab driver. Clark showed the most sign of emotion during the reading and slouched deeper and deeper into his chair until his name, the last one reached, was read. His wife, across the courtroom sobbed as the words "not guilty," reached her ears.

The jurors refused to discuss their verdict and melted away in the crowds that gathered in little groups about the square to discuss the verdicts. One said that fifteen or twenty ballots were taken. Another declared that they were all agreed on the innocence of four of the defendants on the first ballot, but refused to name the fifth regarding whom there was a difference of opinion. Several jurors indicated that the verdicts resulted from the alibis submitted by the defense for all of the five accused and because they considered that a "reasonable doubt" existed regarding all five defendants.

Judge Hartwell refused to comment on the decision and said it would not be proper for him to discuss the evidence. He said that the spectators had kept perfect order in the court room throughout the trial. John Schaefer, the bailiff, who had charge of the jury, said that it was the best conducted jury he had ever seen.

French Adopt Stern Policy.

Dusseldorf.—All the banking institutions in Dusseldorf, both private and state, have closed, claiming to be unable to carry on business owing to the seizure by the French of the local branch of the reichsbank, thus shutting off the supply of marks. The economic life of the city is at a standstill. The arrest of Dr. Schlutius, president of the state finance department, and Mine Director Hochstein, gave an indication that the French had resolved upon carrying out the steamer policy which they had announced several times but never put into effect.

Muscle Shoals Appropriation.

Washington.—The army appropriation bill, carrying $333,000,000 was passed by the House after the rivers and harbors bloc had put through an amendment increasing the item for waterway projects from $37,000,000 to $50,500,000 and the item for completing the Muscle Shoals dam and power project had been accepted. Completion of dam No. 2 and 3 complete power units at Muscle Shoals was agreed to by the House; $6,000,000 was appropriated for the work this year.

100,000 MEN IN RUHR

SOVIET MOBILIZES TROOPS FOR POSSIBLE WAR ON FRANCE.

MILITARY OPERATIONS ON THE RHINE ARE COMPLETED BY FRENCH.

London.—The Riga correspondent of the Times says he learned from reliable sources that the Russian soviet government has decided to mobilize the five-year conscripts with a view to assisting Germany, should Germany decide to resist French action. Another stage of the French progress in the Ruhr was reached with the announcement by the French command that military operations had been completed.

France has put nearly 100,000 troops into the Ruhr valley, taking her occupation to the extreme limits, if not beyond, of the territory authorized under the treaty, and she now is about to try the effect of force to compel the German mine owners to produce coal for France and Belgium.

All that France has actually achieved thus far, has been the fall of the mark to more than 50,000 to the pound sterling, or a drop of nearly 40,000 points within a week. The French intend to take possession of the mines tomorrow and threaten to prosecute the recalcitrant mining magnates.

The general belief in London is that this will be only the beginning of the French troubles, and that the bayonet can do everything but pick coal.

Much seems to depend on the attitude of the Ruhr miners, which still is unknown. The British government continues to observe a watchful waiting attitude.

Italy's policy is not defined. Reports that the Italian government is trying to mediate between France and Germany cannot be confirmed and it is noteworthy that Germany is delivering or offering to deliver reparations coal to Italy and that the German minister has not been withdrawn from Rome, indicating there is hope in Berlin that Italy may be detached from the Franco-Belgian policy.

On the other hand, there also is a report of possible replacement of the American troops on the Rhine by Italian troops, but this is directly opposite to Premier Mussolini's announcement of his policy at a recent cabinet council and may possibly be explained as indicative of some compromise proposals from Italy to France.

Price Tend Is Upward.

Washington.—The general level of wholesale prices in December showed no change from the November average, although the tendency was upward, the Department of Labor announced here. An increase of 11½ per cent over the level of December, 1921, was shown, however, farm products leading with an advance of 20% per cent. Of 401 commodities on which comparable data for November and December was available, 170 advanced in price last month, seventy declined and the remainder was unchanged.

Another Shooting in Bastrop Parish.

Bastrop, La.—John D. Parker, Jr., prominent citizen of Monroe, was shot and probably fatally wounded at Monroe by Carey Calhoun of Bastrop, brother of Laurie Calhoun, acting deputy sheriff of Morehouse parish, according to reports received here. The cause of the shooting was not known. It was understood here that neither Calhoun nor Parker are members of the Ku Klux Klan. Neither have figured in the open investigation.

Italy Offers to Mediate.

London.—Italy has offered to mediate between France and Germany on the reparations question, says a Central News dispatch from Rome, quoting an announcement by the Italian ministry of foreign affairs. Italy's proposals, the dispatch adds, embrace economic control of the Ruhr together with a commercial alliance with Germany. Italy is represented as anxious that such an alliance in no wise assume an anti-British character.

COMPROMISE ON BRITISH DEBT

AMBASSADOR HARVEY WILL RETURN TO LONDON IN NEAR FUTURE.

AGREEMENT IS REACHED

COMMISSIONS AGREE ON BRITISH PAYMENTS TO UNITED STATES.

Washington.—Discussions between the American and British debt commissions have been adjourned, but with an understanding that negotiations for refunding Great Britain's war debt to United States would be continued through the British embassy here.

Following the final joint session of the commissioners, an official spokesman voiced the expectation that the consultations which the British group are to have with their cabinet immediately after they reach London would pave the way for an agreement in principle in time for action by the American Congress at the present session, which ends March 3. It was agreed that otherwise a refunding arrangement could not become operative under one year.

The official spokesman declared there was not anything that should stand in the way of an understanding within the very near future. Generally speaking, he said, a plan had been shaped up, but there remained for final determination the exact interest rate and the amounts of the annual payments to be made by the British government. He said the commissions were not very far apart on these.

Mr. Baldwin and the other members of the British mission, departed for New York. It was stated that Mr. Baldwin expected to confer with the cabinet on the day of his arrival in England, and that the negotiations would be resumed through the British embassy during the week beginning Jan. 23.

Details as to the various suggestions that have been put forth during the conversations of the commissions still were withheld, but it was learned the British government regarded an interest rate of 3 per cent as fair and equitable, while the Americans presented arguments in favor of a rate somewhat higher, but at the same time well below the 4½ per cent fixed in the debt refunding law.

It was stated that from the first of the discussions the five American commissioners — Secretaries Mellon, Hughes and Hoover and Senator Smoot, Republican, Utah, and Representative Burton, Republican, Ohio—had been in full agreement as to the American viewpoint. Likewise, there was no division of opinion between the two British delegates, Mr. Baldwin and Montagu C. Norman, governor of the Bank of England.

Coincident with the adjournment of the debt discussions, it was made known that Ambassador Harvey, who was recalled from London before the arrival of the British mission in this country, would return to his post in the very near future.

Aviators Crash in Cheyenne.

Cheyenne, Wyo.—Caught in a fifty-mile gust of wind as they hovered 500 feet in the air near the Cheyenne aviation field here, P. S. Oakes, pilot, of Cleveland, Ohio, and William Acer of Cheyenne were instantly killed when their plane crashed to the ground. It was Acer's first flight. The plane enveloped the wreckage of the plane after its gasoline tank had exploded. Oakes' body was thrown twenty-five or thirty feet from the plane when it struck the ground, but the fire spread so rapidly that it enveloped his body.

Jailed for Threatening President.

Cleveland, Ohio.—A telegram addressed to President Harding, demanding $100,000, "or I will kill you," said to have been mailed by the Postal Telegraph Company, and signed "Mrs. Edward C. Fox," has been traced to Edward C. Fox, who was arrested here by detectives. Fox is held pending a hearing before federal commissioners on charges of fraudulent uses of the mails. Numerous threatening letters to high public officials have been traced to Fox, inspectors say.

Probe Follows Death of Girl.

San Diego, Calif.—While authorities continued to question several young men said to have been friendly with Miss Fritzi Mahn, beautiful 20-year-old interpreter of oriental dances, who was found dead under mysterious conditions on the beach below Torrey Pines park, additional mystery was thrown about the case by the statement she was the wife of a motion picture actor.

Five German Coal Magnates Arrested.

Dusseldorf.—Five more coal and coke magnates were arrested in the region of Bochum and Gladback, northeast of Cologne, bringing to seven the total of such prisoners held by the occupational forces. Fines of 100,000,000 marks and five years' imprisonment were prescribed as the penalties for failure to comply with the ordinance, which provides for seizure of the customs receipts, seizure and exploitation of the mine forests and collection of the coal tax.

The Case and The Girl

INTO A TRAP

SYNOPSIS.—Answering an advertisement calling for a young man willing to engage in service of danger, Matthew West, ex-service man just returned from France, whom he had been captain of engineers, meets Natalie Coolidge, writer of the advertisement, and without being instructed as to his probable duties, is engaged by her, and that same evening introduced to her friends as her fiance. That night, in the Coolidge home, West is startled by the appearance in his room of a young woman, whom he takes to be Natalie. Next morning Natalie tells West she has been troubled by some woman, apparently her double, who has been impersonating her. Percival Coolidge, Natalie's uncle and guardian, is disgruntled by West's appearance as Natalie's fiance. Natalie, Coolidge and West plan a visit of charity. Leaving West in the car, Natalie and Coolidge enter a small cottage. Before they return, West secures information which leads him to believe Coolidge is deceiving Natalie for a purpose. Natalie informs West she has been mistaken in her suspicions and that she has no further need for his services. West is astounded, but leaves. On his way out of the grounds, West hears a revolver shot, and finds Percival Coolidge dead, apparently a suicide. In the city West is visited by Sexton, an old servant of the Coolidges. Sexton tells him he has been abruptly dismissed, for no apparent reason. He thinks Coolidge was murdered.

"Where was it the three of you went on Sunday in the runabout, Captain West?" asked Sexton.

"To a house over in the factory district; some charity case that Coolidge was interested in—the widow of one of his employees, I believe.

"Did you see the people?"

"No, I didn't go in; waited outside in the car; it was no affair of mine. Why?" he asked in surprise.

"Because, sir, Miss Natalie seemed like a different person when she got back. Not in looks, or nothing like that, I don't mean, but in the way she talked and acted. Nothing suited her all the rest of the day. You know how she was to you, sir. Well she was just that snappy with all of us, even after we brought the body back to the house. And she wouldn't look at him, sir, not even after he was dressed proper and laid out."

"I hardly believe," said West thoughtfully, "you can attribute her state of mind to anything that occurred on that trip. Indeed she was in high spirits all the way home."

"I can't help that, sir," Sexton insisted blindly. "It was something that happened yesterday what set her wrong, an' if I was you, sir, I'd find out what happened in that house first of all. Could you find the place?"

"Yes, I think so. I'll look it up, although I don't have much faith in your theory." He glanced at his watch. "I'll go out there now. You come back here about five, and we will talk over any discoveries I may make."

"And what shall I do, sir?"

Both were standing, West with hand on the knob of the door. The light in his eyes hardened.

"Nothing occurs to me now, Sexton, unless you can find an excuse to return to Fairlawn, after something you have forgotten, let us say. If we can learn what Miss Natalie proposes doing it might furnish a clue."

"Very well, sir, and I am to be here at five o'clock?"

"Yes, at five; I will leave word with the doorman to show you in at once."

West picked up a taxi-cab for the trip, bidding the chauffeur to drive to a certain section of the city, and then up and down the various streets until told to stop. His conversation with Sexton had greatly strengthened his conviction that this was a murder, and he had determined to ferret out the truth if possible. Yet, thus far, there was nothing to build upon, no clue, no motive, no suspicion as to who had perpetrated the deed. He simply faced a blank wall, in which no entrance was apparent, yet there must be one, if he was only fortunate enough to stumble upon it. Deep down in his heart West was conscious that he possessed a motive in this search far more worthy than mere curiosity. That motive was Natalie Coolidge. He smiled at the thought, yet confessed it true. In spite of her curt dismissal, his memory of the girl centered about those earlier hours of their acquaintance. Something mysterious had occurred to make her change so quickly, and he was unwilling to condemn her before learning the real reason.

The chauffeur drove slowly up and down obscure streets for half an hour before West recognized familiar surroundings, and motioned for him to draw up against the curb. He had discovered the place sought, but from the street it exhibited no signs of occupancy, nor did any knocking at the front door bring response from within. He circled the building. Every door was locked, but, as he passed along the other side to regain the taxi, a man emerged from the next house, and hailed him.

"Say, what're yer snoopin' round there for? Lookin' for somebody?"

"Yes, the parties who were here Sunday. What's become of them?"

"Hobart, you mean?"

"Is that his name? I met him downtown, and he told me to come here," West explained rapidly. "We had a deal on."

"Oh, yer did, hey," leaning his arms on the fence. "Well, Jim Hobart was the last man I ever saw. That's my house, which is why I happen to know what his name was. Something queer about that fellar, I reckon, but 'tain't none o' my business. You ain't a detective, or nothin' like that, are yer?"

"Nothing at all like that," West laughed, although interested. "Why? Did you think the police might be after him?"

"Not for anything I know about, only he skipped out mighty sudden. Paid me a month's rent, and only stayed there three days. That looks sorter queer. Then Sunday that fellar what committed suicide out south—I read about it in the papers—came to see him in a car. I got a boy workin' in his factory, that's how I come to know who the guy was. The next night Hobart, an' them with him, just naturally skipped out."

"Who did he have with him here—a family?"

"A woman 'bout his age, I should say, an' a younger one. I didn't see 'em only from the window; didn't get no sight o' the girl's face at all, but could tell the way she walked she was young. They didn't have nothin' with 'em; that's all my stuff in the house there."

Feeling the uselessness of trying to learn anything more, West thanked him, and returned to the taxi.

"Back to the club," he ordered briefly, and settled into his seat to think.

The information thus gained had been small enough, yet sufficient to stimulate his belief that he was at least upon the right trail. The sudden departure of this man Hobart, and the fact that no young children were in the family, were important items to consider. Coolidge, then, had not visited this cottage to aid a widow and orphans. There had been some other object in his call. The girl must have known and understood the real purpose; that was why they both acquiesced so readily to his remaining outside in the car. It was part of their mutual plan to thus leave him in ignorance. Yet they had made a mistake in taking him along at all. This error alone gave him now an opportunity to unravel the riddle. But did it? What did he know? Merely that Coolidge had not gone to this house on an errand of charity; that the occupant called himself, temporarily, perhaps, Jim Hobart; that his family consisted of two women, undescribed except as to age; and that all three had mysteriously disappeared together. He might take it for granted that this disappearance was caused by the death of Coolidge, but they had left no trail, no inkling as to where they had gone. He might suspect this sudden vanishing had direct connection with the crime he was endeavoring to solve, but he possessed absolutely no proof, and, apparently, any further movement on his part was completely blocked.

More puzzled than ever, although now fully convinced that murder had been committed, West could do nothing but wait the reappearance of Sexton. The latter arrived promptly on time, and West told his story. His listener seemed to sense the situation clearly.

"It wasn't no mistake, your goin' out there, sir," he said confidently. "What we know now gives us something to work on anyhow, an' it's just what I thought—that trip Sunday led up to this killin', an' something happened while they was in there to stir Miss Natalie all up. Now we got to find this fellow—what did you say his name was, sir?"

"Hobart—Jim Hobart; that is, he was known by that name there."

"And did you say he has simply dropped out o' sight?"

"That's true; never left a clue behind him."

"Well, sir, I'm not quite so sure about that. You listen to me, sir. This afternoon I walked out to Fairlawn from the car line, an' come in across the fields to the house. I didn't have no good excuse for goin' back there, sir, an' was sorter afraid to meet up with Miss Natalie. She might have thought I was just spyin' 'round. But I didn't have no need for being afraid, for it seems she'd driven into town about noon, an' hadn't got back. There wasn't nobody but the servant around the place, sir. Do you remember Lizzie, the second maid—sorter foll face, an' light hair?"

West nodded, wondering what all this might be leading to.

"Well, she an' I always hit it off together, an' I talked with her quite a bit. She told me, sir, that Miss Natalie had a telephone call this morning that took her into the city. Lizzie she went to the 'phone when it rang, an' it was a man's voice. He wouldn't leave no message, but insisted on speaking to Miss Natalie. Lizzie had to call her down from upstairs."

"Did the girl overhear the conversation?"

"Not so as to make much out of it, sir. She was sorter interested, the man's voice being strange, and hung around in the hall listening, but about all she could make out was what Miss Natalie said. It seemed like he was givin' her some kind of address, which she didn't exactly understand, an' so she repeated it after him two or three times to be sure."

"What was the address?"

"288 Ray street, sir, an' then about an hour later, Miss Natalie ordered her car, an' drove into town."

"Alone?"

"Yes, sir; it was the electric she took."

West remained silent, tapping with his knife on the table. This might prove important, and he could not afford to ignore the information. While to his mind it was hardly likely Hobart had called the girl, yet the possibility remained.

"I never heard of a Ray street," he said at length, "but of course, there may be one. Oh, Charlie," he stopped a waiter passing. "Bring me up a city directory, will you?"

The man returned with the book, placing it on a chair next West, who immediately began to inspect the volume.

"Ray street," he said doubtfully, fingering the pages. "There is no such street here, Sexton. Are you sure you got that right?"

"That's what she said, sir; I made her say it over twice."

"Ray Street; wonder if it could be spelled with a W? By jove, it is—Wray! Here we have it, only five blocks long, extending from Conway to Grogan. Rather tough section I should judge. It wouldn't do any harm to take a look around there. Perhaps that is where Hobart went; he might have been the one calling Natalie. Rather a wild guess, but it will give us something to do. Are you game, Sexton?"

"Quite so, sir."

West hardly took the adventure seriously, being more influenced by curiosity than any other motive, but Sexton was deeply in earnest, in full faith they were upon the right trail. Doubtful as he was, West had neglected no precautions. The map assured him that they were invading a disorderly section of the city, where to be well-dressed would only invite suspicion, and might lead to trouble. To avoid this possibility, he had donned his most shabby suit, and wore a cap largely concealing his face. In one pocket of his jacket within easy reach lay hidden his service revolver loaded, and he had induced Sexton to accept a smaller weapon in case of emergency.

The street was not inviting, the saloon on the corner being flanked by several small factories. The brick sidewalk was in bad condition, and littered with junk of all kinds, while the roadway was entirely uncared for, and deeply rutted from heavy traffic. Half way down the block was a tannery, closed now for the night, but with its odor yet permeating the entire atmosphere. Altogether, the scene was desolate and disagreeable enough, but the street was deserted of pedestrians, the factory doors tightly closed for the night.

"Well, What Is It You Fellers Want?"

The two men pressed their way through along a narrow passage, finding less obstruction as they advanced, the second block being composed entirely of houses, largely of the tenement type, and apparently principally populated by children.

Wray street was lined with homes, usually humble enough outwardly, yet the thoroughfare was clean, and the small yards had generally an appearance of neatness; 288 was a three-story brick, on the corner, the second story evidently utilized for living purposes, and the ground floor occupied as a saloon. The upper story exhibited no signs of occupancy, the windows unwashed, and two of them boarded up. The two lingered in uncertainty opposite the house. Standing there idly, however, did not appeal to West.

"Well, let's go over," he said impatiently. "There is nothing to be learned here."

It was an ordinary bar-room and, their entrance apparently aroused no special interest. Besides the man behind the bar, a rather rough-looking foreigner, a Pole, in West's judgment, three customers were in the place, two with feet upon the rail talking with the drink dispenser, and one at a small table moodily contemplating a half emptied stein of beer. There were three other tables in the room, and the captain, with a swift glance about, drew out a chair and sat down, his action being imitated by Sexton. The bartender came forward around the end of the bar, while the man nearest shifted his position slightly so as to look them over, conversation instantly ceasing. Something indefinable in the fellow's attitude, and steady stare, gave West a feeling of hostility, which was not dispelled by the gruff greeting of the bartender.

"Well, what is it you fellers want?"

"A stein apiece, and a sandwich—you serve them, don't you?"

"Sure; ham or beef?"

"Ham."

There was no cordiality, no welcome in either manner or speech. It was plainly the proprietor of the saloon felt no enthusiasm over his unknown customers. He came back with the beer and sandwiches, pausing this time to wipe off the table, as an excuse for speech.

"You' guys live 'round here?" he asked gruffly, "Don't remember ever seein' yer in here before."

"No," returned West indifferently, looking directly into the hard face. "I'm a smoke inspector, an' we just dropped in on our way back to the office. Why?"

"Oh, nothin'; only we don't get much trade outside the neighborhood."

He walked back toward the bar, pausing an instant to whisper a word to the taller man who still stood there staring moodily at the table. What he said apparently determined action, for the fellow addressed crossed the room to where West and Sexton sat, deliberately pulled up a vacant chair and joined them.

"Bring me another, Mike," he ordered. "That is, if these gents don't object to my joining 'em awhile."

CHAPTER VIII

Trapped.

West smiled pleasantly, glad the man had taken the initiative, thus naturally opening up a way for asking certain questions. Whatever his own immediate object might be in thus scraping an acquaintance made no difference. It would doubtless develop in time, but meanwhile here was the opportunity sought to discuss the affairs of the neighborhood. Yet the subject must be approached with due caution. The very indifference of the bartender, coupled with the evident desire of this hanger-on to form an acquaintance, served to reveal the real nature of the place. Plainly enough strangers were viewed with suspicion, and this was no ordinary saloon, catering to whatever trade drifted within its doors. More than likely it was rather a thieves' hang-out, ever suspicious of the activity of the police.

Yet this fellow bore no outward semblance to the common conception of the underworld. He was well dressed, easy of manner, with an exceptionally intelligent face, blue eyes meeting West's gaze frankly, a carefully trimmed mustache, with white teeth good humoredly showing when he smiled, and threads of gray in his hair. His very appearance invited confidence and comradeship, while his outspoken words increased this impression.

"Excuse my butting in," he explained genially. "But it's d—n dull around here tonight. Nobody to talk with but a couple o' bums. You see I don't belong around here; just dropped in for a bit of business with Mike."

"I see," admitted West, puzzled, and wondering how far he dared venture. "You can get lonelier in a big city than anywhere else."

"You bet you can. You see I run a broker's office down town, an' it's pretty blame slow around a dump like this—you get me?"

"Sure; this seems to be a pretty quiet place."

"Quiet! H—l! It isn't always so quiet. I've dropped in here when it was lively enough, believe me. But tonight it's the limit. Fact is I come up for a little excitement, as much as anything else, but must have struck an off night. You're a smoke inspector, Mike says?"

West nodded.

"Know Fred Karvan, I suppose?"

"Oh, yes; friend of yours?"

"Used to be; we were kids together down on the South side. He's got a pretty soft job now; stands in strong with the City hall, they tell me. Mean to drop in and see him some of these days."

"You'll find him a mighty good fellow," asserted West, to whom the name was entirely unfamiliar.

"Well, I'm not so sure about that. He's got pretty stiff the last few years, they tell me. But then you work under him, and ought to know. Head of your department, isn't he?"

"Yes, but I only meet him in a business way, of course."

"And the ex-soldier went down as though hit with a pole-ax."

Business Woman.

My father, an old doctor, has had many strange experiences in his career. I have often heard him tell this one: He had been called to see a man who had been severely hurt in a runaway. After examining the patient's injured limb, he was summoned into the next room by the patient's wife. She wished to inquire of the doctor which would be cheaper—to set the leg or amputate!—Chicago Journal.

BIG UTILITY VALUE OF PUREBREDS

A Purebred Beef Cow Compared With a Scrub.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Based on utility value alone—apart from breeding or sales value—purebred live stock has an earning power from a third to one-half greater than scrub stock, the average superiority of purebreds for all classes of farm animals being about 40 per cent. This is the conclusion of the United States Department of Agriculture after weighing the opinions of more than 500 farmers and stockmen owning about 25,000 head of breeding stock and close to 30,000 fowls. These men are all participating in the Better Sires-Better Stock campaign, a systematic plan conducted by the Department of Agriculture and various states in improving the average quality of live stock in the country. A list of questions relating to the value of purebred live stock was sent to these participants and the answers, after thorough analysis, were used as the basis of Department Circular 235, "Utility Value of Purebred Live Stock," by D. S. Burch, which has just been issued.

Big Points of Purebreds.

Of the principal points in which purebreds excel other stock, according to the circular, the most prominent are: Superiority and uniformity in conformation and type, greater sale value, early maturity, and the economy in the conversion of feed into meat, milk, wool and work.

The comments of many of the farmers questioned indicate the value of the different points listed. Says a Virginia farmer: "My purebred stock weigh as much at fifteen months as my scrubs did at three years—a saving of 21 months in feed and labor, besides getting a better price. They are early maturing, easy keepers and good producers."

"My cows have more than doubled in milk production," says a Pennsylvanian. "Scrub and grade cows used to give me about 4,000 pounds of milk a year, while my purebreds average over 8,000 pounds."

Uniformly Good.

A breeder in Washington state makes this observation: "I find the young of purebred stock are uniformly good, while with scrub stock there usually are one or two good ones to eight or ten poor ones." A Montana ranchman says he has increased the weight per fleece on 10,000 sheep from six pounds to eleven and one-half pounds—almost 100 per cent—as a result of the use of purebred sires.

Many stockmen emphasize the greater salability of purebreds. "Buyers in this locality come to me first," is a frequent comment.

The circular contains much good advice on improvement of live stock, based upon farm experience. Copies may be obtained without cost from the Department of Agriculture, Washington.

WEATHER FORECASTS AID TO BEEKEEPERS

Predictions of Much Value in Fall and in Spring.

Instance of Importance of Service Related by New York Apiculturists Who Used Telephone to Inform Neighbors.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Beekeepers are dependent on weather conditions to prevent large winter losses, part of which occurs if they do not know when to put their bees in the cellar in the fall, or if the bees are removed from winter quarters too early in the spring. On the other hand, it is advantageous to give the bees the benefit of cleansing flights as soon as possible in the spring and as late as possible before cold weather sets in. Close attention is paid to the weather forecasts, especially in the northern states.

An instance of the way in which the weather bureau of the United States Department of Agriculture co-operates with beekeepers occurred recently in New York state. There are approximately 15,000 beekeepers there, half of whom winter their bees in cellars. When the weather map indicated the approach of severe weather, with no indications for a bee flight in sight, telegrams were sent by the state extension apiculturist to secretaries of 20 county and regional associations. These men in their turn were prepared to telephone key men who would telephone beekeepers in their own localities. In this way most of the beekeepers who winter their bees in cellars were reached.

Considering that the honey crop in New York state approximates 4,000,000 pounds a year, and that the greatest losses to the beekeepers of the state have been due to winter weather conditions, the weather bureau service is of real importance.

Advantages of Ducks.

Besides the advantage of furnishing feathers as well as eggs and meat, ducks are not usually troubled to any great extent by lice or mites and may be housed in cheaper quarters than chickens.

MAKING FRUITS ATTRACTIVE

Consumers Favor Produce With Nice Appearance, Uniform in Size and Color.

Consumers who buy either at the corner grocery or of the huckster in the cities buy by appearance. They like to get fruit that looks nice. A basket of apples may be just as fine flavored and have the same average size, but if they are mixed up of various sizes and colors the city consumer will pay considerable more money for the basket that sits beside it with uniform color and size, for it looks more attractive. A half-dozen small potatoes in a basket may cut the price down enough to have made it profitable to have thrown them away and a half-dozen big potatoes with them, rather than keep them. Uniformity is the first point to keep in mind and then quality and size come in line. The quality may be there but it doesn't appeal. Catch the eye and the sale is half made.

SHELTER FOR DAIRY HEIFERS

As Important to Get Young Animal Inside as It Is to Protect Cow Giving Milk.

It is just as important to get young dairy heifers inside when cold weather sets in, as it is the cow that is giving milk. Young animals that are to produce next spring need shelter and good feed this fall and winter if they are to be in good condition for their work next season. Iowa college dairymen say it is better to put young cows into barns when the first freeze comes and feed them a grain ration, than to try to get all the feed out of the pasture or corn field.

Adopt Hog Self-Feeders.

More than 25,000 farmers adopted the use of self-feeders for hogs in 1921, following demonstrations by extension workers, according to reports to the United States Department of Agriculture.

Work for the Stallion.

Outside of the breeding season, it is a good policy to work a stallion just the same as any other horse. Many successful horsemen follow this practice, particularly with young horses.

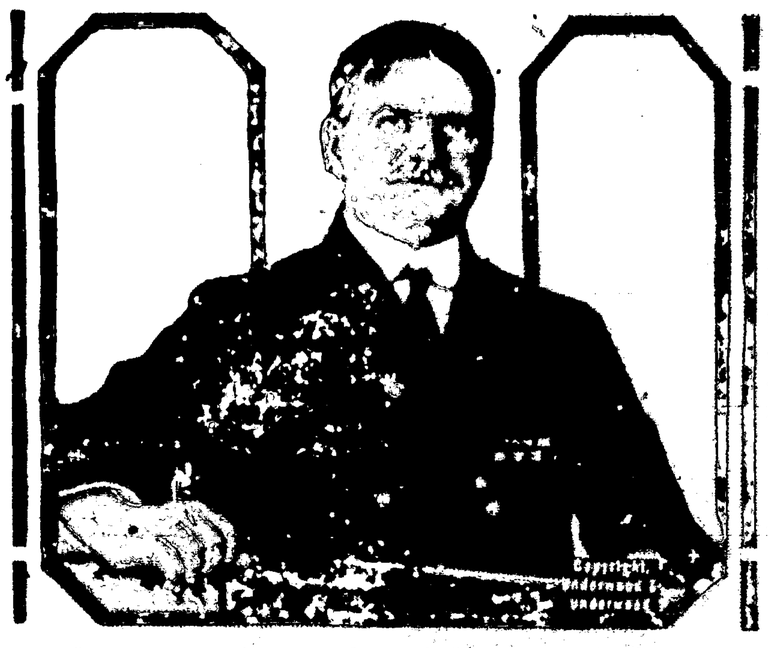
Yanks Regret Their Recall From the Rhineland

President Harding ordered General Allen to bring home the few Americans who have formed our "army of occupation" in the Rhineland, to the great regret of the soldiers themselves. This photograph might well be captioned "Taking Their Last Look at the Rhine," but it was made when the boys were getting their first look at the famous river.

Cody to Have Buffalo Bill Statue

This beautiful statue of "Buffalo Bill," the work of Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, is to be erected in Cody, Wyo., in July, 1924. The Cody memorial committee has backed the undertaking. The statue is of bronze.

Coontz "Cleared for Action"



"Cleared for action." Admiral Robert E. Coontz, chief of naval operations of the United States navy, has applied this term to his work in the big navy building in Washington. Admiral Coontz has made it an invariable rule to have no litter of papers on his desk at any time and those who know him and what he accomplishes often ask, "How do you do it?" But the admiral smilingly refuses to divulge the secret of his ability to keep his desk cleared.

THE AMERICAN LEGION

ONE OF BRAVEST LEGION MEN

Lieut. Col. Joseph Thompson, Past Commander of Pennsylvania Department, Wears Medal.

Lieut. Col. Joseph H. Thompson, onst commander of the Pennsylvania department of the American Legion and one of the strongest candidates for national commander at the Legion's last national convention, is now enrolled in the ranks of the "bravest of the brave," the wearers of the Congressional Medal of Honor.

Jos. H. Thompson

Maj. Gen. Charles H. Muir, who commanded the Twenty-eighth division, in which Colonel Thompson commanded a battalion, decorated the Pennsylvania Legion leader at Washington. Previous to the ceremony Colonel Thompson was entertained at luncheon by the Pennsylvania delegation in congress.

The citation for the Congressional medal came to Colonel Thompson as a result of an act of valor in action near Apremont, France, October 1, 1918.

Counterattacked by two regiments of Germans, Colonel Thompson, then a major of the One Hundred and Tenth infantry, encouraged his battalion in the front line by constantly braving the hazardous fire of machine guns and artillery. His courage was mainly responsible for the heavy repulse of the enemy.

Later in action, when the advance of his assaulting companies was held up by fire from a hostile machine-gun nest and all but one of the assaulting tanks were disabled, Colonel Thompson, rushed forward on foot three separate times in advance of his line, under heavy machine gun and anti-tank gun fire, and led the one remaining tank to within a few yards of the enemy machine-gun nest. The tank succeeded in reducing the nest, thereby making it possible for the infantry to advance.

CHECKS LEGION MEN'S CARDS

Miss Florence H. Meade, Supervisor of Library Bureau, Busy With Force of Twenty Girls.

These are busy days for Miss Florence H. Meade of Chicago, supervisor of the Library Bureau, who has been assigned the task of checking all American Legion membership cards which arrive at national headquarters in Indianapolis.

Florence Meade.

Directing a force of from 15 to 20 girls, Miss Meade will check and distribute more than one million cards, which oftentimes arrive at the rate of 12,000 a day. When the first battle is over, Miss Meade will tackle the follow-up work, which will last for many weeks.

During the war Miss Meade served with the Y. M. C. A. in Brest, and later with the Army of Occupation at Coblentz.

WARNING TO EX-SERVICE MEN

Soldiers Having Business With Veterans Bureau Must Deal With District Officers.

Ex-service men who have business with the United States Veterans bureau have been advised to transact their affairs with the district officers. Recently former service men have been going to Washington at the rate of 100 a week with the expectation that they could accomplish more there than they could accomplish through divisional headquarters.

In some cases the former soldiers have walked long distances in order to get to Washington. Recently one man made the trip from Baltimore to Washington on crutches.

Washington posts of the American Legion look out for the veterans who come with small means, or no means at all, but these posts are now finding their resources insufficient to take care of all the demands made on them.

A pathetic feature of the situation is that the former soldiers from outside the Washington district learn that they will have to transact their business in the district in which they live.

The American Legion, the American Red Cross and various other organizations have been trying to impress on the men who have business with the bureau that they must deal with divisional headquarters, but it seems that thousands of veterans do not understand the situation. The legion has asked the Legion executive to take up the subject.

End of Twelve-Hour Day Sought.

New York.—Elbert H. Gary, chairman of the United States Steel Corporation, has urged his board of directors to help him hasten elimination of the twelve-hour day from the steel industry, according to an article appearing in the New York Tribune. The appeal of the corporation chief is said to have been spoken from a "confidential memorandum," delivered before the board, at which time Mr. Gary, denounced the inter-church world movement's report on the steel strike of 1919.

The United Mine workers by this step, it was declared, have put themselves directly on record against radicals.

TWO ANIMALS' TAILS

MR. FOX and Mr. Coyote used to often meet when they were strolling about hunting, and it was on one of these hunting trips that their famous quarrel took place.

"I wish that you did not look so much like me," said Mr. Coyote. "Here I get blamed many times for doing things that I never do. I hear folks saying 'It must have been that old Coyote fellow,' when I know well enough it was you who did the cruel deed. Yes, Mr. Fox, I regret very much that you and I look something alike."

"I am just as much ashamed of it as you are, Mr. Coyote," said Mr. Fox, "for I could not stoop to some of the low-down tricks you do in hunting."

Mr. Coyote did not notice this remark. "I cannot understand how any one can think we two look alike," he said, "for your coat is not as handsome as mine, to my eye, and your tail"—

Mr. Fox will stand almost anything but having any one say his tail is not beautiful, so he did not wait to hear what Mr. Coyote was going to remark about his tail; he just jumped right at him. "See here, you ungainly looking creature, don't you dare mention your tail in the same breath with mine. Your fur would not be used for anything but to cover your bones, while I am chased all over the country for mine.

"And my tail, sir, I will have you know, is the pride of many a lord and lady after the hunt. My tail! Indeed you never knew what a handsome tail really was until you beheld mine."

Mr. Fox looked very fierce as he said all this and shook his handsome tail about until Mr. Coyote began to step back, for he did not really want a battle with Mr. Fox, for he had none of his relatives around to take his part.

"I don't think we look so much alike in the daytime," he said, as if to beg Mr. Fox's pardon for having mentioned the fact, "but at night time we do look about the same size and people do get us mixed.

"And all I was going to say, Mr. Fox, was that our tails are about the same size at night; no one can see that I have a black tip."

Now Mr. Fox at that time did not have the white tip to his tail that he now wears, so the woodfolk tell the story, and when he heard what Mr. Coyote said he bristled up with anger again.

"Well, I can tell you, Mr. Coyote, that this will be the last night that your tail and mine will look the least alike," said Mr. Fox; "from tonight my tail shall bear a mark that will never leave any doubt as to who is carrying it."

Mr. Fox trotted off without telling Mr. Coyote what he was going to do, but the next time they met Mr. Fox waved in the face of Mr. Coyote as he passed him a tail with a white tip. He had pulled out every dark hair till only the white showed.

"Well, I never!" exclaimed Mr. Coyote, looking after him, "but he forgets that he has really done me a favor, for his tail can be seen now, and if anyone happens to be around with a gun they will be sure to see his white-tipped tail, while mine will be lost in the darkness."

By MARY MARSHALL DUFFEE

WHEN TO TELEPHONE

It is a bad plan that admits of no modification.—Publius Syrus.

IN THESE days almost every sort of invitation comes to us over the telephone. A few years ago it would have been regarded as in bad form to ask friends to dinner in this way and a hostess would not have invited her friends to a card party over the telephone, but now in most sets and in most localities this sort of thing is permitted.

However, there are objections to the telephone invitation at any time. There is always the chance that it will not be correctly understood and little misunderstandings have been known to result from the misunderstood telephone invitation.

Then there is some difficulty in having practically no time to decide whether or not it is really possible to accept an invitation. Another tentative engagement may be pending. The busy mother sometimes has first to find out whether or not she can get some one to whom she can entrust her children when she is gone. The man has to see whether he can be sure not to have to work that night. And it is not always agreeable to have to explain these difficulties, or to say, "I will see whether I can come and will let you know in half an hour or tomorrow morning." Whereas when one has a written invitation, although the answer should be prompt and unconditional, still there is time to think the matter over.

In business the telephone often is used when it would be far better to send a written message. So it is that some concerns will not take an order for certain kinds of work unless it is written. For the written request or order is a guarantee, a pledge between the two parties concerned. If there is any disagreement concerning the nature of the order the written letter stands as a good way to settle the question, while with the telephone message there is not even the satisfaction of having a third person as witness to the transaction.

"What's in a Name?"

By MILDRED MARSHALL

Facts about your name; its history; meaning; whence it was derived; significance; your lucky day and lucky jewel

AGNES

THE Greek word agos, signifying a matter of religious awe, gave the adjective agnos, meaning sacred, pure, and it, in turn, names the tree whose twigs the Greek matrons strewed on their beds during the festival of Demeter, which the Romans called Agnus Castus.

Incidentally, the Latin word for lamb is agnus, and since this animal was used for the sacred purpose of sacrifice, Agnes comes by her heritage of purity and sanctity logically.

One of the first women to bear the name of Agnes was the gentle Roman maiden whose martyrdom named the Church of St. Agnese. It is said to have been built by Constantine on the spot where she was put to the utmost proof and retains an old mosaic, picturing her clad only in her flowing hair, being dragged along by brutal soldiers. Another ancient church covers the catacomb where she was interred, and the story goes that while her relatives and pilgrims who came to pay their homage were weeping there one day she appeared, suddenly, in radiant glory, with a lamb of spotless whiteness.

The gospel for St. Agnes' day was the parable of the ten virgins and, since she was accused of magic arts, the English superstition arose that, by watching and fasting on St. Agnes Eve, maidens could discover their fate in marriage; by praying nine times to the moon, and fasting three eves in succession, they could secure whom they would. Keats, in his exquisite poem, "The Eve of St. Agnes," refers to this superstition:

They told her how, upon St. Agnes' Eve,
Young virgins might have visions of delight,
If ceremonies due they did aright;
As supperless to bed they must retire,
And couch supine their beauties, lily white;
Nor look behind, nor sideways, require
Of Heaven with upward eyes for all that they desire.

Agnes is popular in England, Scotland and, as a royal name, in France and Germany. France calls her Agnes; Agneta is an English form; Agnese, Agnesca and Agneto are Italian. The Welsh form is Nest. The jewel assigned to Agnes is the agate, which gives courage and guards its wearer from danger. It is considered a cure for insomnia and insures pleasant dreams. Thursday is a fortunate day for Agnes and 2 a talismanic number. If she dreams of her jewel, it is sign of a journey. Her flower is the wild rose, signifying simplicity.

PATIENCE.

OF ALL the gifts for which I pray
Patience is one I seek alway.
In woe it helps us to endure,
In doubt it holds our faith secure.
When there are prizes to be won,
Or grilling tasks that must be done,
If we have Patience to abide
The buffeting of time and tide
More surely shall we reach the gates
Where the fulfilment rich awaits.

ALL FROM THE SOIL

THE fields invite, but too few accept the invitation.

It's not God's fault or the fault of the United States government if there are idle men and hungry women and children in this country. The fault lies with the uneconomic distribution of those who work.

When too many are engaged in one occupation, too few must necessarily be employed in others. If so many are working in factories that there are not enough remaining properly to till the soil, food and clothing are naturally made so expensive that those who live in the cities find it difficult or impossible to get the real necessaries of life even though they draw big pay.

Of course one must reckon with the problem of distribution in figuring the cost of the market basket—and there is a dire need of improving the system so that the "spread" in values from the farm to city table is naturally reduced. But, when it is considered that virtually everything we eat and wear comes from the soil, and when it is known that little work on a small patch of land will provide enough of the necessary goods to maintain a family of five, it is foolish to argue that God and the government are to blame for many being out of work and without food. Thousands of acres of fertile soil are lying neglected and untilled in this rich land of ours. By properly distributing our labor and by intensive methods of farming half as efficient as were found in Germany previous to the war, the United States not only could give pleasant, healthful employment to all the people able and willing to work, but could produce enough of the absolute necessities to feed all Americans and have a surplus sufficient to feed and clothe all the undernourished peoples of poverty-stricken regions throughout the world.

We in the United States are unappreciative of our blessings. While thousands live like cattle in congested sections of great cities, crying for jobs and food, God holds open the door of opportunity to healthful homes of freedom and happiness on our broad plains and among our beautiful hills.

"Mountain Cloud at Dawn" is the subject chosen this year by the emperor of Japan for the annual poetry contest. In the days of the Kyoto court, only court nobles and poets participated, but now anyone can contribute. The best poems are read to the emperor. Verse making has always been one of the national pastimes of the Japanese people. Emperor Meiji used to compose a poem every day, and his consort also left a collection of verses.

WOULDN'T PAY FOR MATCHES

Scotsman Not Likely to Expend a "Bawbee" When He Could Walk to His Hotel.

A young Scotsman, shortly after his graduation from the University of Edinburgh, came to this country to teach. Thirty years later he revisited the country of his birth. On his return to his teaching post he was regaling some of his confreres with an account of his trip.

"One morning," related the professor, "as I was strolling along a street in Edinburgh, I stopped at a tobacconist's and bought some cigars. Finding myself out of matches I asked the clerk for some.

"'Ha'pence a box,' said he.

"'What! Why, in America when a man buys a cigar he is given a small package of matches.'

"'I'm sorry, sir, but they're ha'penny a box here.'

"And, do you know," added the professor, "I had to walk back eight blocks to my hotel to get some matches."—Judge.

MINISTERS MEN OF MEDICINE

Both in England and America Clergyman Acted as Doctor in the Seventeenth Century.

Some of the medicines dispensed in the Seventeenth century were fearful and wonderful concoctions. Human skulls, bones, human fat, mummies, etc., were freely prescribed. At the deathbed of Charles II a preparation from a human skull was administered.

The education of the pharmacist at this time was largely based on his trade experience, although some knowledge of Latin was required. The apprenticeship lasted from five to six years, and at the end of that time he became a "journeyman." On assuming control of a pharmacy as a proprietor, he was required to pass a supplementary examination.

Pharmacy in America during the Seventeenth century was largely based on English usages modified by practices derived from the Indians. In Massachusetts, a great many clergymen practiced pharmacy for a means of livelihood, while preaching. Indians and old women also practiced it. The witchcraft epidemic brought the practitioners of pharmacy into suspicion as selling poisons for spells.

Cause and Effect.

The teacher was angry when Thomas appeared ten minutes late for school one morning.

"Why are you late, Tommy?" he said sharply.

"Please, sir," replied the sinner, "it was late when I started from home."

"Then why didn't you start from home earlier?"

"Please, sir, it was too late to start early."

Mrs. Carter dropped in at the office for a few minutes' chat with her husband.

"John," she remarked, "I think you had better discharge that stenographer you have now. I am sure she is trying to flirt with you ever since she has been here."

Mrs. Carter, when she said this, thought the stenographer was safely out of hearing—but she wasn't! She stepped to the door of the private office and vented her indignation:

"Madam, I'll have you know that I wouldn't flirt with your old husband for a million dollars!"

Mrs. Carter was aghast.

"Now, John," she exclaimed, "you simply must discharge that girl! She has insulted you!"—Kansas City Star.

Important Thing Overlooked.

I taught my daughter the important dates on the calendar, the figures being marked in red. It chanced that her birthday, too, was in red.

On the arrival of her baby sister she immediately wanted to know where her birthday was. But when it failed to appear in red she was stricken with awe.

She took the calendar from the wall and began to wrap it up, saying, "Daddy must take dis right back and get it fixed, 'cause dey forgot to red sister's birthday."—Exchange.

The Thrice-a-Week Edition of The New York World

The wide, wide world has become so narrowed by science that news from all around the globe is related in the curt e New York World, together with the view of nation builders, master men and leading women everywhere and particularly in the United States. No other newspaper is better equipped to give the news of the world at the time it is news than The New York World.

The Thrice-a-Week edition of The World is the greatest example of comprehensive journalism in America. It will keep you as thoroughly informed as a daily, which would cost five or six times as much. It is a델ightful newspaper published three times a week for $1 a year. This is the regular subscription price and it pays for 156 newspapers.

We offer this unequalled news paper and the Maverick together for one year for $2.00

The regular subscription price of the two papers is $2.50

In the matter of returning to normalcy, unreasonable prices are furnishing a shining example.

CANOEIST KNIFES ENRAGED MOOSE

Butts In While Animals Are Engaged in Fight and Then Has to Battle for Own Life.

Uno Park, Ontario.—The story of a canoeist's desperate fight in the water with an infuriated bull moose comes from the north. Dave Duke, a prospector known the length and breadth of the mining country, is the hero.

Duke was engaged with comrades in developing some claims and had occasion to paddle down the lake on which the party was camped. Rounding a point he came in sight of two bull moose engaged in combat. He was able to paddle quite close to the scene of battle without arousing attention, and then he sounded the coughing grunt of a moose to see what the effect would be. Both forgot their private fight and charged through the shallow water for the canoe.

Being unarmed, Duke started for open water with all speed. One of the bulls gave up the chase, but the other came driving on, bent on the destruction of the intruder. He was rapidly overtaking the canoe when Duke turned his canoe suddenly, evaded the oncoming animal, and as it surged near seized it by the long hair over the rear quarters. With the moose plunging violently to free itself Duke held fast with one hand while with the other he drew his clasp knife. He opened the blade with his teeth and plunged the full length of the blade into the animal's back several times, severing the spine. Then he righted his canoe and paddled back for help to obtain the meat.

Once a man's position in society was fixed by the number of bathrooms in his house. Now he is judged by the spare tires on the back of his car.

JILTED BRIDE MARRIES GUEST

Bridegroom Fails to Appear at Appointed Time and Another Young Man Takes His Place.

Lodz, Poland.—Bidding for a bride figured in a recent wedding at the border town of Bialystock, according to news brought here by guests returning from the nuptials.

At the hour fixed for the ceremony, the bridegroom failed to put in an appearance. The young bride, her attendants and the guests whiled away a long period of waiting with dances and conversation. Finally a message arrived from the missing principal, saying he would conclude the marriage only on condition that the dowry was increased 50 per cent.

For a time it looked as if there would be no wedding, and the guests prepared to depart. But the day was saved when one of the young men present rose to the occasion by announcing he would marry the young lady without the "bonus" demanded. His offer was accepted and the wedding took place.

GHOULS ROB VIENNA GRAVES

Take Clothing, Trinkets and Even Tresses of Women Buried in the Great Cemeteries.

Vienna.—Ghouls have become so active in the great cemeteries of Vienna, according to the press, police guards now patrol these resting places of the dead every night, accompanied by dogs.

The grave robbers are disinterring newly buried bodies and robbing them of clothing, the little jewelry souvenirs that loving families have put with dear ones to the grave, of gold-filled teeth, and even shearing the tresses of women.

The Country Editor

"Consider the editor. He wears cloth purple and fine linen, his abode is among the mansions of the rich. His wife hath her limousine, and his firstborn sporteth a racing car that can hit her up in forty flat. Lo, all the people breaketh their necks to hand him money. Nit!

"Behold, the child groweth up and graduateth. And the editor putteth into his paper a swell notice; yea, a peach of a notice. He telleth of the wisdom of the young woman, and of her exceeding comeliness. Like unto the roses of Sharon is she, and her gown is played up to beat the band. The dressmaker getteth two score and four iron men, and the editor getteth a note of thank from the S.G.G.

"The daughter goeth on a journey. The editor throweth himself on the story of the farewell party, it runneth a column solid and the fair one remembereth him from afar with a picture postal card that costeth six for a jitney.

"Behold, she returneth and the youth of the city fall down and worship. She picketh one and lo! she picketh a lemon. But the editor calleth him one of the promising young men and getteh away with it.

"Flowery and long is the wedding notice which the editor printeth. The minister getteth ten bones. The groom standeth the editor off for a twelvemouth subscription.

"All flesh is grass, and in time the wife is gathered into the silo. The minister getteth his bit. The editor printeth a death notice, two columns of obituary tributes, lodge notices, a cubit of poetry and a card of thanks. And he forgetteth to read proof on the head, and the darn thing cometh out, 'Gone to Her Last Roasting Place.'

"And all that are akin to the deceased jumpeth on the editor with exceeding great jumps. And they pull out their ads and cancel their subscriptions and they swing the hammer unto the third and fourth generations. 'Canst thou beat it?'"
