Eli Chandler, was in from his ranch on Eagle Creek, Friday.
Judge Aguayo held a session of probate court the first of the week.
Next Monday is the day set for the commencement of district court at this place.

Big O'Neil who was arrested for selling another man's two-year-old heifer, and who gave bonds for his appearance at the coming term of court, was landed in jail Sunday night, on account of his bondsmen withdrawing.

Good news for the taxpayers. The capital tax, from late advices from the Auditor, has been raised from one fourth of one mill to four fifths of a mill, or over three times as much as that of last year. We know the tax payers of this county will receive this joyful intelligence with open arms and pocket books also. This is only the beginning of a commencement.

Billy Lee living, near the Moore divide, found a skelton of a man in Nogal mountains two or three weeks ago all of which was very well preserved. The bone over the left eye and also the jawbone on the same side, showed that it had been dealt a terrible blow, which in all probability caused his death. Was it done by Indians or was he foully murdered by a comrade?

Fred Roth, who keeps the store on the Chisum ranch, shot and killed James Sparlock, an employe on the ranch, Friday afternoon, May 1st. From the evidence taken at the coroner's inquest, Roth was justified in doing the shooting. Sparlock was undoubtedly crazy. His actions were not those of a sane man, and he was always spoken of as being a peaceable, law-abiding citizen heretofore. Pity.

There is perhaps no city west of St. Louis that has larger stocks of goods and lower prices than El Paso. The leading clothiers and tailors are the firm of Lightbody & James. Their immense stock contains everything in all grades that a man wants to wear, either on the ranch, the railroad in the mine or the ball-room. Measuring blanks and samples of cloth sent to any address. Orders promptly filled. Satisfaction guaranteed. LIGHTBODY & JAMES, 4t.

News of the Indian outbreak reached this place Thursday afternoon late and as it spread, like an epidemic, it grew alarmingly worse. The last report we heard was to the effect that every Indian on the place was dead. This is about the sum and substance of the story as near as we can learn it: Mr. Andrew Wilson, living just off the reservation, has a piece of ground sowed in alfalfa. Two horses belonging to the Indians broke into the lot seeded in this grass and were making a first-class meal, when Mr. Wilson first noticed them. Upon the impulse of the moment he rushed into the house, got his gun and killed both of the animals. As soon as the Indians learned the fate of their horses, they built fires around Mr. Willson's house and awaited for him to make his appearance, intending to kill him on the spot. The next day Maj. Llewellyn had Mr. Wilson come to his headquarters and fix matters up, which he did, paying $150 for the animals killed. This satisfied every one interested, and no more trouble was anticipated. But that same night Blazer's barn and contents were burned. There were two buggy horses, one fine stallion, one carriage, harness etc., burned. The supposition is that the Indians set it on fire, for what reason no one knows. There was no one killed or wounded and peace and quiet once more reign.

BUTCHERY!

Eight Killed and One Wounded!
At Bonito City, Tuesday Morning, May 5th.

MARTIN NELSON, THE MURDERER, KILLED.
Full Details as to How and Where the Murder Took Place.

One of the most horrible, blood-curdling murders took place at the beautiful and quiet city of Bonito, some twenty-five miles north of this place, Tuesday morning, ever chronicled in the west wherein eight corpses, and probably nine ere this, figured as the out come of this terrible tragedy.

Martin Nelson, a young man hailing from Nebraska, has lived in this county five years or more and was a social, good-natured fellow, who would be the last one to ever suspect of committing murder, let alone a wholesale slaughter.

W. F. Mayberry, who with his family, were killed, kept a boarding house at Bonito, and Dr. Wm. F. Flynn and Martin Nelson, the murderer, boarded and roomed with him. On Monday night, the 4th inst., at an early hour, the occupants of the house went to bed, Dr. Flynn, Nelson and two of Mayberry's little boys, aged four and seventeen years, went up stairs. Nelson an Eddy Mayberry, the youngest, boy slept together in the northwest corner of the room; John Mayberry slept in the northeast corner and Dr. Flynn slept in the southwest corner of the room.

The shooting took place about three o'clock Tuesday morning, and it is supposed that Nelson was attempting to rob Dr. Flynn, as the Doctor's watch was found on Nelson's body when killed. There is not a witness living that saw this horrible affair, but from the appearance of the bodies, as seen by a reporter of the ERA, it is believed the crime was committed in the following manner.

When Nelson was rifling Dr. Flynn's clothes, he probably awoke the Doctor, when Nelson commenced to beat him over the head with a six-shooter, and upon hearing the noise Mr. Mayberry started up stairs. When Nelson saw Mayberry, Flynn had, in the meantime, got out of bed; just as Mr. M. appeared at the head of the stairs, Nelson shot Flynn, then shot Mayberry, who had just reached the landing. The corpse of John Mayberry, the 17-year-old boy was found near his bed, shot through the heart and head. Eddy Mayberry, the 4 year-old boy and Nelson's bed fellow, was found still in bed with his pants on (he had probably crawled in bed that way the night before) and nearly the whole of the top of his head blown off.

Nelson then went down stairs and procured a Winchester, and just at that moment, Peter Nelson, living across the street (but who is not related to the fiend murderer), hearing the shooting, came to the back door. When Martin Nelson and Peter met they evidently had a scuffle, as Peter Nelson's head was cut and bruised and he was shot twice. Mrs. Mayberry, who had all this time been down stairs, started out the front door when the Nelsons were fighting at the back. But she was soon followed by the man who had already taken five lives, and as he followed her out into the street, he shot her dead and kicked the body into a ditch and covered it with a board.

Returning to the house, he found Nellie Mayberry, twelve years of age, and shot her in the side; she ran to the cellar and he followed; he lit a match but probably failed to discover her. As Mr. Consbrook was leaving Huber's store Nelson shot at him, but the shot did not take effect. Mr. Consbrook called several of his neighbors and surrounded the house, supposing Nelson to be inside. But it was still dark and he had escaped.

Nelson, it was afterwards learned, went far up the creek, after his horse, in order to get out of the country. About eight o'clock Tuesday morning he appeared at the house of Mrs. Rhodemaier and

Mrs. R. was frightened nearly to death, for by that time she had heard the dreadful news, and her husband was down in town acting as guard. She let him in, and begged for mercy, but he told her he did not intend to kill her, but wanted his breakfast.

After eating he told her that he had killed the whole Mayberry family and was going down to get two or three more. He started down the hill. The guards around the Mayberry house still thought Nelson was on the inside, and when he was seen coming down the road firing his rifle and cursing, they were taken by surprise. Mr. Herman Beck was on guard and had his back to Nelson as he came down the road. Before he saw him, Nelson sent a ball crashing through Beck's back, killing him instantly.

But on he ran, firing his rifle and telling them to "hunt their holes;" "go to the brush," etc., all the time having Mayberry's house in view, intending, undoubtedly, to enter, and there fortify himself. At the corner of the house he saw Charles Berry drawing a bead on him and Nelson stopped, and turning, pulled down on Berry, but at that moment three rifle balls entered his miserable carcass and he fell, shooting as he struck the ground. He tried to regain his feet, when another ball hit him, making four in all, any one of which was fatal.

Tuesday there were eight corpses laid out and little Nellie Mayberry will probably die, if not dead at this writing. The following are the names of the dead and wounded:

W. F. Mayberry, dead; shot through the heart.
Mrs. W. F. Mayberry, dead; shot through the back and side.

John Mayberry, dead; shot through heart and head.
Eddy Mayberry, dead; head blown off.

Pete Nelson, dead; heart and side.

Dr. W. H. Flynn, dead; shot through heart and head bruised.
Herman Beck, dead; shot in back.

Martin Nelson, the murderer dead.
All were powder-burnt, with the single exception of Herman Beck, showing that the brute had stuck the weapon up against them and fired.

Isn't this dreadful? Isn't this horrible? Seven deaths, and probably eight, caused by one man! The murderers death makes nine. Words cannot express the intense excitement caused in this county.

We would like to say a few words here in behalf of the brave manner in which the citizens of Bonito acted.

Deputy Brent heard of the killing and supposed the murderer still in the house when he and posse started for the seat of war, but before he arrived, Nelson had been killed. Justice of the Peace, D. C. Taylor, as soon as the people could gather their senses, instead of appointing men to act as officers, headed a posse, gave orders, and stationed his men where they could see the house, and they, themselves, be unseen. He acted, and the guards all did, for that matter, in a brave and determined manner, intending that the murderer should never escape. Those were times that tried men's grit, and they showed themselves equal to the emergency.

WHITE OAKS—May 4th, 1885.
Tom Williams has gone to Ft. Stanton where he will engage in business.

F. O. Blood has left here and gone to Kansas. He was given a dance on Saturday evening.

H. R. Hills, ex-Superintendent of Southwestern Stage Co., has taken charge of the line between Carthage and Red Canon for the Company.

There has been somewhat of a stir lately in regard to the postmaster's office here. Mr. Bellomy's friends here desire him to be retained, as long as there appears to be no reason for his removal, other than political ones.

Messrs Klepinger and Smith, who have been in the San Andres for some weeks, have had some bad luck, having lost their horses. Mr. Klepinger walked to White Oaks last week thinking they had come in, but was not able to find them, neither did he find them on his return to camp. There have been some horses either strayed or stolen from this vicinity, Wm. Stone having lost two.

COGHLAN VINDICATED.
We noticed a dispatch in Las Vegas Optic, dated May 1st, which said that Lara who murdered Nesmith and family, was a man of just before he was hanged, implicating Pat Coghlan, of Tularosa. In his confession he said that Coghlan offered to pay him $1,000 to kill Nesmith and that another man in C's employ, named Kearney, had paid him $10 on the $1,000. Col. W. L. Rymerson, of Las Cruces, wrote J. H. Riley, who is on business in this county, the full details of the confession which vindicates Mr. Coghlan. Mr. Riley was in Lincoln Monday and kindly handed us the letter, which, out of justice to Mr. Coghlan, we publish in full.

LAS CRUCES, M. M., April 30 1885.
DEAR RILEY. Lara was hung today at half past two o'clock. At eleven in the morning quite a party were taken into the jail and Lara was brought out to pick out and identify the man supposed to be Kearney and Mr. Coghlan, they both being in the crowd. Tom Rice, Cunliffe, McDonald, Dave Woods and others were present also. I asked Lara to point out the man who paid him the ten dollars &c., and he glanced around the room and pointed out Dave Woods as the man. There was no hesitation and Lara was positive that Dave was the man who gave the ten dollars to him at the plaza of Tularosa. I then asked him to point out Mr. Coghlan and he hesitated a little, first looking around and squarely at Coghlan and then pointed out Cunliffe as the man who he said was Coghlan and who promised him (Lara) the $1,000. I asked him if he was not mistaken and said no. I asked him (Lara) if the conversation was in Spanish or English, and he replied it was in good Spanish, as he (Lara) did not understand a word of English. Some other questions were asked and answered, which showed nothing except that the fellow was lying. He is a brutal liar. I had doubts until I saw this transaction. It turned out that Lloyd told Coghlan he had a clue leading to Lara who was in Mexico and Coghlan advanced cash to Lloyd to help hunt Lara down. Everybody in the room when Lara pointed out Cunliffe were fully satisfied that the whole story told by Lara was a fabrication.

Notwithstanding all this and that the tide turned in favor of Coghlan, Lara on the scaffold stuck to his story. He said but little except that he was doing the job or done the murder for $1,000. The paper will contain his statement as well as the whole facts. This is thought best. I am satisfied nobody of any prominence put this fellow up to his story. I think the story was fixed up by some of his jail comrades. He had no more appreciation of fact that he was to die than a hog. I never saw such a brute. He related the details of the horrid deed and at one time stood grining on the platform.

Yours in haste,
W. L. RYMERSON.
This man Cunliffe, pointed out by Lara for Coghlan, is a small man, when Coghlan is a man over six feet tall, heavily built and there is as much difference in their general appearance as is possible between two men. The man pointed out for Kearney, Dave Woods, looks nothing like him, and the guilty brute thought he would save his cowardly neck by a reprieve if he should happen to point out the man he so unjustly implicated.

$100.00 REWARD.
The following described animals are estrayed or stolen: One horse, red roan; star in face; branded A on left shoulder and I R on left hip; about 14 hands high. One bay mare, white in the face; two hind feet also white; branded J on left shoulder and about 15 1/2 hands high. Fifty dollars reward is offered for any information leading to their recovery, and $50 additional for the capture of the thief or thieves.

Wm. Stone, White Oaks, N. M.

STRAYED OR STOLEN.
Strayed or stolen, from San Andres mountains, ten miles south of Ft. Stanton and Ft. Craig road, on the night of April 22nd, one bay pony, about 14 hands high, saddle marked and a little white on tip of nose also a little white on inside of right hand foot and branded N on left thigh and A on right thigh. Also one roan pony four years old, white star on forehead, branded half circle JF connected on left shoulder. ## STOCK NEWS.

Mr. Pitagor Chisum has his new residence ready for plasterers. It is a cozy little nest.

Whatever else you do don't use anything as a sire lower than a thoroughbred.—[Drovers Journal.]

Andy Mays, who used to kill bar in the White Mountains, is punching cows for the U outfit, near Seven Rivers.

Meat can be preserved in its fresh state, according to the new theory, and practice of a Philadelphia man, for any length of time.

Mr. Sam Collins returned to Seven Rivers, a few days ago, from Texas with his bride. Sam has a host of friends in Lincoln county who will be pleased to learn of his new departure.

A meeting of cowmen Tascosa, Texas, as held a few days ago, passed a resolution obligating all members to use their best endeavors to keep southern Texas cattle from coming through their ranges.

E. J. Wilcox, the stock raiser of Lincoln county, who always comes a long distance and stays a long while, is here again. He has just closed a big sale of cattle, but his clothes fit him about as well as ever.—[Optic.]

The Cattlemen's advertiser, says that the prohibition of gambling of all kinds among cowboys on duty will cause them to take more interest in their work, prevent many quarrels and discourage "camp followers."

The arrest and conviction of the Topsy Johnson gang of rustlers cost Sierra county seven thousand dollars and the Central New Mexico Stock Growers Association fifteen hundred dollars. The $3,500 bail forfeited by Weatherford helped out considerable in the county's expense.

D. E. White sold this week his interest in the Shorthorn Cattle Company of New Mexico, to Messrs. Hall, Bishop and Flood. Consideration, $55,250 cash. The herd and ranch of the Shorthorn Cattle Company, was valued in this trade at $325,000, one of the best graded herds in Mexico.—[Colorado Clipper.]

Now is the time to visit the Chisum ranch, to see it in all its glory. Everything is green and the trees are in bloom, of which there are 5 or 6 hundred different varieties of fruit trees. We stopped one night at this paradise on the plains. Mrs. Wm. Robert, the hostess, made our stay very pleasant.

Intelligence from the Indian Territory has been received that a Chicago syndicate has purchased the Bennet and Dunman cattle ranches on the Cherokee Strip. The purchase includes two lots of large range near the Pawnee agency, and 12,500 head of cattle. The consideration was $4,000,000 cash. The new firm are buying the other cattle at the range at $25 per head.

In the report of Dr. Hopkins, veterinarian of the Wyoming Association, a cause of the death of states bulls and cattle was brought out that has escaped the notice of our cowmen. It was supposed that states cattle die in larger numbers than others because the cold was more intense and the feed of a different kind. It appears that they do not die as much from this reason, however, as from the fact that those changes bring diseases common to all pilgrims on the range. The fact has now become established beyond all doubt that bulls, especially pilgrims, cannot run with the herd the whole year without serious loss. They must be taken up and fed. If they are not, disease in some shape and death will attack them. In view of this fact, we prophesy that the time is close at hand when the cowmen will see it is to their interest to not only take up their bulls for seven or eight months in the winter but also to feed them well and give them some kind of a shelter from the wind.

Bad Lands

Last year the general round-up of cattle on the Rio Grande begun in June and run through the summer months. The heat and miasma of the valley sickened all the men, and the scarcity of feed used up the horses, so that frequent vacations from the work were forced. That experience proved that the hot summer days are not fit for river work and that the task should begin sooner rather than later than May 15th, the day fixed for the start this year.—[Black Range.]

At frequent intervals during the past year and a half we have called attention to the necessity of having an ample supply of bulls on the range. We cannot hope for calves unless we supply the means of their propagation. The most productive investment made by the owners of the herds is that paid for bulls. We are especially pleased to note the recommendation made in the report of the "bull committee" to the stock association at its late session, "that hereafter five bulls to the hundred head of cows be placed on the range." In the minds of all practical men there is no doubt as to the fact of our small calf crop being due to the lack of vigorous bulls in the herds. And in this connection we wish to repeat our former utterance that to insure productiveness on the range we must use a larger per cent. of two-year-old bulls. In fact it is cheaper to pay $125 for two-year-old grades than $65 for the same class of yearlings. During these stringent times there is a disposition among all stockmen to cut off every possible expense. This is all right, but the cutting down should not be made in the way of reducing the bull supply. Keep your herd up to the fullest degree of productiveness.—[Live Stock Journal.]

Good gracious! An Ohio writer lets himself out thusly: It would seem that before the title of "Cattle Kings" should be "roughed and clinched" upon the more notable of the stockmen of the far west, there should be a little humanity demanded of them with respect to their mode of wintering stock. It is not enough that the poor brutes are lassoed and thrown down and several yards of searing done with a red-hot iron to represent letters, signs and fancy (?) markings; but in the winter this tattooed beast is tortured with cold and hunger, and forced to subsist upon the scanty herbage of the year before. It was scarcely tolerable picking in the summer, and what must it be when covered with the frost and snow of a tempest driven blizzard? "I have known my stock to drift 200 miles in one storm," said a ranchman to me one day. Drifted for what? For a miserable sustenance, that only a part found. If this barbarity is to be carried on under the sanction of this government, by leasing the public domain for such uses, then how can the laws that we have for our statute books be legal? The starvation of stock in Ohio carries with it a penalty; on the plains it gives a man place, and he is honored with the distinctive title of "Cattle King," with a throne of bones made of starved-to-death animals—or should have.

But that fellow was never out of the state of Ohio. Where cattle are turned out to roam through the winter in the west, they come out in the spring in better condition, oftentimes, than stock that are stall fed in the states. It would be well for this eastern dude to remember that stockmen of the west make a business of raising cattle, and if cattle pulled through the winter half starved they would quickly emigrate. Such fellows as the above ought to be properly doctored and turned loose with the other scrub bulls.

Absolute Quarantine.
The following telegram was received by Gov. Sheldon at Santa Fe: DENVER, April 28.—Gov. Sheldon: The Colorado State Veterinary Sanitary board has instructed me to wire you that they have absolutely quarantined against all cattle from Missouri, Illinois, Kentucky, Ohio, New York, Pennsylvania, West Virginia, New Jersey, Delaware, Connecticut, Maryland, Virginia and District of Columbia, and unless New Mexico, immediately quarantines absolutely, all the above named states, Colorado will be obliged to quarantine against New Mexico. B. M. TAYLOR, Agent U. S. Bureau of Animal Industry.

To the inspectors of cattle in and for the Territory of New Mexico. The Telegram of B. M. Taylor, agent of the United States Bureau of Animal Industry herewith published is evidence of the highest character that the states of Missouri, Illinois, Kentucky, Ohio, New York, Pennsylvania, West Virginia, New Jersey Delaware, Connecticut, Maryland, Virginia and District of Columbia are sections wherein infectious and contagious diseases of cattle prevail; and that under the laws of this territory all cattle coming from the states and districts named above should be absolutely prevented from entering New Mexico from and after this date, and I hereby direct all inspectors of cattle in the territory to refuse certificates to any and all persons who apply to them to bring cattle into New Mexico from said states and districts until further orders. Done in executive chambers at Santa Fe, the capital, this 28th day of April, 1885. L. A. SHELDON, Governor of New Mexico

OUR EXPOSITION LETTER.

Special Correspondence.
NEW ORLEANS, May 1st, 1885.
Many conventions have been held here during the progress of the Exposition, two notably in the interest of water-one to encourage its use for drinking purposes, and the other its use for navigation purposes.

The day following the adjournment of that convention, the delegates were taken on an excursion down to the Gulf, affording them, including your correspondent, an opportunity of viewing the scenery below the city. Great sugar plantations line either shore lying below high water mark, and generally protected by levees; the clusters of cottages, neat and comfortable, on every plantation, for the use of the employees, the fine residences of the owners, machinery, etc; were all objects of interest to the "visiting statesmen."

A few days ago was New Orleans day at the Exposition, when business in the city was largely suspended, and many thousands of the city people visiting the great Fair, including, (nearly as they could be counted), about twenty thousand school children; more or less, who were wild with delight at the many wonderful things they saw, and crowded the isles of the vast buildings; it was a great pleasure to watch them and witness their astonishment and hear their exclamations and childish comments.

This state could well be termed the "Prize State," as she has carried off more premiums than any other state yet, at the Exposition, where they have met in competition upon native products. Just think off 71 on cheese, 11 on butter, 29 on fruit, 14 on trees, 11 on horses, 7 on vegetables, and so on altogether 143 premiums, cast $5,223, three gold and 15 silver medals. Such figures speak in golden terms not only of Wisconsin's superiority in these lines but also in the highest terms of her commissioner, the Hon. E. D. Holton, who has spent so much of his valuable time and money to place his native state in such an enviable position before the world.

monument to their state or territory, also in having gorgeous and handsome banners painted, but such has not been the policy of Wisconsin's commissioner, he has endeavored to show up in a simple and realistic manner the genuine products of his state with few artificial embellishments, and has succeeded so admirably that his space is daily thronged with people who come to the Exposition to gain valuable information rather than to be pleased with a grand artificial display. Her corn and wheat are shown in handsome, yet plain and practical glass cases, while other grains, and field seeds are shown in jars and bags. Altogether Wisconsin's display is pronounced by many the most practical exhibit here presented.

ANECDOTES ABOUT PEOPLE.

ExAttorney General Brewster.
Let your thoughts go back a decade and recall the white, glossy beaver hats that young men wore in the spring and early summer. One of these has Mr. Brewster retained in his possession for many years, and with its nap rubbed the wrong way, it towers above his head, protecting it alike from the snow of winter and the sun of summer. In its ruffled surface I see the engaging eccentricities of one of the greatest lawyers a city famous for great lawyers has produced, and in its suggestiveness of by-gone days I see the stately courtesy of a past, but more reverential, age that distinguishes the wearer. In other respects, Mr. Brewster's attire is faultless. His clothing is of fashionable cut, and there are ruffles about his wrists and on his breast. But his hat is shockingly bad, and simply because the law of nature that I have discovered makes it mandatory that great men shall be so distinguished. If we had time to stop and chat with the eminent jurist we would find him a most winning talker. It is marvelous how, to even an entire stranger, the disfigurement of Mr. Brewster's countenance disappears beneath the charm of his conversation. I once, and only once, heard him refer to the incident that so marked him. It was during the trial of a cause in one of our courts, and an opposing attorney in the course of his speech, unfeelingly referred to Mr. Brewster's disfigurement. When the latter came to make his reply he began in about these words.

"May it please the Court and gentlemen of the jury: Many years ago a beautiful, curly-headed, fair-haired baby boy was lying in his nurse's arms. The careless girl let him fall in an open fire, and when they picked him up his face was as black as the heart of the man that has just addressed you."

And then he calmly began his legal argument, without further reference to his opponent's remark. [Philadelphia News.]

How Butler Lives and Jokes.

Butler must be a millionaire by this time. He gets a tremendous income from his blunting factory, which is practically a monopoly, and he is also interested with ex-Collector Simmons, of Boston, in some extensive quarries. The old man lives well, but very temperately. I believe he never drinks anything in the way of intoxicating liquor though he clings to his cigar with great tenacity. He likes to see other people enjoy themselves, though, he conducts his house with an open-handed liberality that is pleasant to behold. During the late campaign a lot of newspaper men went down to Lowell to call on Butler. Among them was Col. Palmer, of the Boston Globe, who doesn't imbibe anything more stirring than pipin cider. The boys were all in the dining-room with the old General, who invited them to indulge in a small drink. Col. Palmer made known his preference for cider, and Gen. Butler poured out a huge goblet of it for him. Palmer drank it with a relish and, there was a general chat of half an hour or longer, when the drinks started in again, Palmer taking his big goblet as before. He had actually swallowed half of the contents of the glass before he found that Gen. Butler had rung in brandy of the strongest kind on him. That night the temperance man of the Globe went back to Boston loaded to the guards.

Washburne at a Court Dinner.
Minister Washburne was one evening at a court dinner given by Napoleon III. It was the custom of these dinners, when the Empress rose to retire with the ladies, for the gentlemen to rise from their seats and step back from the table so that she could pass down the line between them. By this all could avoid turning their backs upon the Empress. Washburne had very tender feet. During the dinner his feet gave him a great deal of annoyance. To ease himself he had quietly slipped off his patent-leather pumps under the table. He was observed in conversation toward the close of the dinner, and was caught unaware when the Empress made the signal of departure. He was obliged to step back without having time to put on his pumps. He stood in his stocking-feet, grave, dignified and self-possessed, in the row of grinning diplomats who stood at his right and left. He betrayed none of the embarrassment that he must have felt, and was never heard to allude to the incident by any one. [San Francisco Argonaut.]

What a Woman Can Do.

"Is there anything a man can do that a woman can't do?" asked the woman's rights advocate, as she adjusted her spectacles and looked around upon the audience.

"That's it," said a bald-headed man in one of the rear seats; "that's it. Put it to 'em straight. Bring these opponents of woman suffrage right to their wits."

"You see," pursued the lady, "we are not without our friends among the male sex. Again I ask, is there anything a man can do that a woman can't do?"

"Good, good," cried the bald-headed man enthusiastically, "she can do more. A woman can do things that a man can't do. I know it."

"You hear," said a lady triumphantly, as she waved her hand, "you hear what the champion of our own down-trodden sex says; a woman can do things that a man can't do. Tell me my friend, what a woman can do?"

"She can talk a man to death, by jingo," said the bald-headed man, "and if you could hear my old woman when she gets her tongue onto me, you'd believe it, and doubt you fug-it."

A wet blanket falls over the meeting. [Boston Courier.]

The General's Narrow Escape.

"I do so like the General," said a sweet voice behind me at the opera.

"He's a dear man, isn't he?"

"Yes; you know I'm sort of related to him."

"Indeed! I never knew that. How?"

"He came very near being my father. He was the first man my mother was engaged to." [San Francisco Chronicle.]

A noteworthy incident is reported to us in connection with the prevalence of scarlet fever here. In a house in which one child had died of this disease the little one's clothes were put into a back shed to await further attention, and in the meantime they were tumbled about and played with by a pet dog. Soon afterward the dog was taken crazy and had to be killed. A cat also of the same family was affected in a similar way, and had to be killed. The animals undoubtedly contracted the disease by coming in contact with the clothing. [St. Alvens (Vt.) Messenger.]

The following notice appears in a Georgia paper: "I wish to inform the people that I will close out my bar by the last of April, and now is the time to have your jugs filled to use for snake bites. Come at once. A good lot of whiskey on hand."

Will Squirt McFie still ignore the law?

Will John R. McFie send the GOLDEN ERA land advertisements that lawfully belong to it?

A PERSON glancing over the Albuquerque Democrat, would naturally suppose from the tenor of that paper, that Albright or Aldark was the Democratic party of New Mexico.

THE state capitol of West Virginia has been removed from Wheeling to Charleston. This is a sad blow to Wheeling and she feels sore at the loss of the prize and there is talk of an injunction to restrain the state from removing the capitol. It is not likely, however, that this will be done.

THE law says that the register of the U. S. Land Office shall advertise in the paper of general circulation nearest the land. We have by far the largest circulation, in fact it has never been questioned. Is Bulletin Head McFie going to ignore the law he was appointed to enforce. McFie should and will go!

WE ARE glad that the Indian outbreak, reported last week, proved to be nothing more than a little difficulty between themselves and a single ranchman. Indian troubles at this season of the year would be felt more by all that at any other time. It would stop court and retard business all over the county.

IT APPEARS from recent reports in one of our exchanges that there is one negro member of the Massachusetts Legislature who said in a recent speech: "If a notice should be put up over the gates of hell forbidding negroes to enter, we would not be satisfied until we got in." He expressed the sentiment of a large class of persons who are not so anxious to secure their rights as they are to do something which is forbidden.

THIS is a queer old world of ours, and a man has to die before his worth is appreciated. Two autographs of Robert Burns have just been sold in London for $700. Just nine days before his death, the greatest of Scotland's poets sent the song of "Fair Maid on Devon's Banks" to the publisher, with a pleading note imploring him, "for God's sake to send him $5 by return post," to save him from being torn from his bed and thrown into prison for a small debt.

A CORRESPONDENT of the ERA made the Indian Agency at South Fork a visit a few days ago, and found everything moving along smoothly. The Indians were hard at work farming, having some 700 acres under cultivation, most of which is in corn. We were surprised when Maj. Llewellyn informed us that they raised 250,000 pounds of corn last year and that they seemed to take a deep interest in the good work they had begun. They have increased the acreage this year and the Major thinks that as they grow into the work, a few more acres can be added every year, until they become very nearly, if not wholly, self-sustaining. There is a school established at the Agency, which, on account of the building being so small, there are only twelve boys attending. There is a house now in the course of erection that will be used for educating these children, and will accommodate as many as can be systemically handled. Everything is running smoothly, however. The Major them taught when they prepared for their meals. At a tap of the bell, they assembled at the dining room; at the second, they folded their arms; third, marched in, in single file, and took their places at the table; at the fourth and last tap, they sat down. The boy at the head of the table passed a cup of coffee to the one seated next to him and it was handed on down until it reached the boy seated at the end. And the next cup stopped at the boy next the end, and so on until they were all waited on. We give this to show how well they are trained. Mr Llewellyn says they learn fast, are kind and obedient, and thinks if this principle of educating Indians had been taught years ago, they would not now be on reservations but would be an educated and law-abiding people. Fair play is a jewel, and we believe in giving honor where honor is due. Before Maj. Llewellyn took charge of the Indians at South Fork, their outbreaks were frequent and horrible, but since the Agency came under his control there has been little or no trouble from them and instead of going backward they have advanced in point of civilization. Now, Mr. Llewellyn hasn't paid us for writing this nor does he know of what we write, but in due regard that right is right, and knowing that if he had made a failure in handling these redskins, we would have felt that it was our duty to censure him, we pay him this compliment that he has so well earned.

NOTWITHSTANDING the efforts of the newspaper critics of Paris to drive Miss Van Zandt from the stage, that plucky little American woman continues to hold the operatic fort of that city, and acts every night to crowded houses. The moment she shows herself she is assailed with loud hisses by a strong clique organized by the chivalrous newspaper men for the purpose of ruining the performance. For fifteen minutes at a time she has sung on with true American grit in the uproar which made it impossible for any of her notes to reach the audience. The audiences, however, have never manifested their displeasure by going home, but, enlivened by the fun, and perhaps preferring an opera-singer that can be seen and not heard, have sat through every performance and gone away apparently happy.

LANCASTER, Pa., April 28.—The Republican postmaster of this city appointed a Democrat to the position of letter-carrier to-day, and two Republican letter-carriers who have been on the force for some time immediately resigned. The Democrat appointed had passed the civil-service examination and was capable and very intelligent. Republican leaders have remonstrated with the postmaster, but he has not withdrawn his appointment and will probably stand by it.—[N. Y. World.]

YES, the Republicans believe in civil-service reform. If there was a Republican in as President now, of course this postmaster of Lancaster would not have been so rash as to appoint a Democrat, but he thinks by appointing a Democrat it will help his case should there be a scheme to remove him. But let this be as it may, see how selfish this great Rep. party is. They not only want the offices when Republicans are in, but expect, and insist (perhaps they think they have a patent on them) on having them when Democrats are at the helm, and get mad and pout when the party in power appoints one of its own followers. The rascals must go. Fire 'em, Grover.
