FIRST WHITE COLONIES

Ohange Writer Discovers A Few Facts about the New State of New Mexico

REPORTS OF NEW MEXICO

The fact is generally overlooked that in New Mexico was the first time that the crested, of white men in the territory now embraced in the United States. Long before the settlement at Jaseautoree, or the landing of the Pilgrim on Plymouth Rock, colonists of Spanish has been established along the northern wat ers of the Rio Grande. Perhaps New Mexico's greatest misfortune was that her first settlers were so different from those of Virginia and New England, and yet nearly three centuries, the residents of New Mex ico didn't do much but enjoy his climate and enjoy the products as much as its resources were, they did not try to develop them, or interest others in them. Not until this the average American has little realization of them.

In the first week of this century in the family state ranks fifth in area; having 122,000 square miles, 76,000,000 acres, or about 1,250,000 square miles of flat land now is growing, covered with brush, while 6,000,000 acres now is watered annually by irrigation canals, and, within the two years, the area of irrigated land, will be increased to over 1,000,000 acres. There will be 3,000,000 acres in net and annual irrigated area, in New Mexico.
